The Lokal Anzeiger called upon the American press to witness British "war guilt." The paper said the American press had reduced Chamberlain's speech to the formula "The war begins," and added that if words have any meaning the American press is right.

As to the positions taken by Russia and Italy in respect to the present conflict, nothing was known officially as yet. Informed quarters pointed out that discussions between the Italian and German general staffs would determine the course of Italy's future action.

As far as Russia was concerned, these quarters expressed the belief that the Russo-German agreement of September 28 took care of all eventualities, including even rejection by France and Britain of German peace offers.

GERMAN COMMUNIQUE

Berlin, Oct. 14 (AP).—The supreme army command issued the following communication today:

"With occupation in the East of the last sectors at the Bug river, movements toward the German-Russian border separating the spheres of influence have been completed.

"In the West there was minor artillery activity. In air fights, without any losses of our own, three enemy planes were shot down by pursuit planes and anti-aircraft fire at Schleiden, Idar-ober-Stein and Mayen.

ENEMY PLANE OVER BERLIN IS FIRED UPON

Whether High Flyer Was Hit Or Dropped Bombs Not Disclosed

Radio Station Goes Dead At Same Time Shooting Startles City

[By The Associated Press]

Berlin, Oct. 14—An official announcement said an unknown airplane was fired on over Berlin tonight.

The plane was flying so high its presence was detected only by the sound of the motors.

The statement failed to say whether the machine was struck by anti-aircraft fire or whether any bombs were dropped.

City Startled By Gunfire

Before the announcement was made Berliners were startled by the sound of gunfire.

Beams of searchlights could be seen criss-crossing the sky.

Newspaper offices were flooded with telephone calls from residents who pointed out that the Berlin radio station temporarily went dead at the same time the shooting started.

At that time a police headquarters spokesman said troops at Doeberitz garrison, just west of Berlin, were engaged in anti-aircraft shooting practice.

The Berlin broadcasting station said its program had been interrupted by a technical disturbance.

Under Fire At Various Places

The official announcement said:

"An unidentified airplane, which because of its great flying height could only be detected through the sound of its motors, was put under fire Saturday night at various places in its flight."

Some sources expressed the belief the radio was shut down to eliminate it as a possible direction finder for the plane.

This was the first sign of enemy air activity here since early in the war. An air raid alarm was not sounded.

Allies' Pursuit Planes Held Superior To Nazis'

Paris, Oct. 14 (AP)—A semi-official French statement said today that Allied pursuit planes "clearly dominate" German pursuit aviation.

The statement said French-British production of warplanes was "largely counterbalancing" that of Germany, and that soon they will be producing three times as many.

In France alone, the statement said, there will be 300,000 aviation workers within a few months.

Germany's Expansion Limited

The statement added that Germany had only a limited margin to expand production as her "industrial mobilization has been completed several years and the blockade of the Allied fleet will hamper considerably any new extension."

The French asserted France and Britain will be able to build "five times as many planes as in peacetime production."

A supplementary statement published by the semi-official Havas News Agency said that the first six weeks of the war showed a "very distinct superiority of our pursuit ships."

Allied Maneuverability

German pursuit planes, Havas added, are "clearly less maneuverable, and since in battle it is maneuverability that counts, our chasers have clearly dominated the Germans."

Havas said French reconnaissance had been superior to the Germans, and that German scouting planes, "properly speaking," could not be said to have left their bases.

The relative merits of bombing planes, which thus far have not been used on the Western front, were not mentioned.

The statement added that Germany had only a limited margin to expand production.

London to Swap German For British Officials

LONDON, Oct. 14 (A. P.).—The Foreign Office announced today that arrangements had been made for the three British consular officers detained in Germany to be exchanged for three German officials in England.

The announcement added that a "complete exchange of the remaining British and German officials would take place as soon as possible."

Allies Waiting for Nazi Attack

British and French Armies Drill to Be Ready to Halt Drive on West Front

OCT 15 1939

By DREW MIDDLETON.

WITH THE BRITISH ARMY IN FRANCE, Oct. 12 (Delayed—Passed by field censor) (A. P.).—Britain's highly mechanized army in France is waiting and drilling—waiting on a possible German attack and drilling to be ready with its French allies to turn it back.

The Tommies continue to come across the channel and move up with munitions and supplies toward the front. But as announced in London the main British expeditionary force, comprising 158,000 men, is already in France.

Like their French allies, the British troopers are eager and confident as they await large-scale operations.

Horse Is Little Used.

It is hard to believe that within a short distance of these quiet, poppy strewn fields men are being killed and wounded. But the evidences of war are near—long lines of trucks with munitions and supplies crowd the roads. In the fields women, old men and boys are harvesting the crops.

British truck drivers eat their lunches like picnic parties on the side of the road.

Unlike the world war, the horse is not much in evidence. So mechanized is the British Army that in two days' riding I have not seen a horse being used for military purposes.

The clatter of French Algerian cavalrymen in one small town appeared as dated as a bow and arrow.

Both sides in this war seem to be sparring—like boxers in a fight. Neither is prepared to let his Sunday punch go until he has felt out the strength of his opponent.

There is little of the professionalism between the officers and their men which existed during the world war.

One officer explained:

"The old feeling of caste, which was deep in 1914, is gone. Men and officers seem to feel that we're all in it together."

A trip to France on a troopship is like a journey on the River Styx.

The moment the anchor goes up—the lights go out. The journey is made in a murky darkness.

Passageways are thick with smoke and the stale air breathed by thousands of men. Troops sleep huddled together in crowded cabins or talk of things far from the war. Finally at dawn cloud banks fall away and the coasts of France appear.

From the top of the blockhouse I could see the front line for perhaps a quarter of a mile on either side.

Deep ditches built to catch and hold a tank run along it. Before the tank-traps and in back was more wire. It had a fresh-from-the-factory appearance. It had a solid look.

Guns There, But Hard To See

Twenty years from now many farms will be fenced with this wire. The wire French farmers hereabouts use today was picked up from old battlefields of another war.

Here and there men were digging trenches.

There are guns along the line, but you don't see them unless you look hard. On another part of the front were anti-tank guns, dangerous-looking weapons. Their gunners were immensely proud of them.

The whole front is camouflaged. Were it not for the men digging and the occasional sentry, it would look like any country landscape marred here and there by small, irregular hills. These are the blockhouses. Even at 300 yards the wire blends into the picture.

Farther back along the roads are the heavier guns. I saw one battery in position on a French farm. The guns were six-inch Howitzers, ugly short-barreled things, squatting in the mud.

The men were drilling swiftly and silently despite the clinging mud when I was there.

A captain said: "They're good. They're itching to have something to fire at. Maybe they will before long. It's too quiet to suit me."

All Signs Point To Front

All things point toward the front. The long lines of trucks hauling food, ammunition and men. The clattering caterpillar carriers which bring guns to the front. The squad learning the intricacies of the guns by the side of a canal, while an old Frenchman fished placidly a few feet away.

Everything there is wet, clinging mud. Everywhere the troops are young, but hardlooking. Everywhere there is the same feeling:

"If Fritz comes through here we'll give him hell."

Quiet Envelops Western Front As Tommy Waits For Fritz

British Troops Amid Deceitfully Pastoral Scenes Ready For Their Baptism of Fire

On the Front Line With the British Army in France, Oct. 14 (Passed by Field Censor)—Inside the blockhouse, it was very quiet. The wind rustled the poplars just ahead and flapped a ragged towel hanging on the barbed wire.

You could hear the clump of soldier's feet in the rear and the soft chuck-chuck of a shovel biting moist earth. The Irish sergeant said:

"This is it, sir. This is where we stand."

The front line is not an exciting or inspiring place. No shells whine. No machine-guns chatter. For a month now men have been working on this line built by the French and now reinforced by the British.

Waiting For "Old Fritz"

They will not say that all things are ready, but they will say: "Here's where we stand and old Fritz will have to be damned good to push us back."

I peered out through a periscope in the blockhouse. Ahead, past the barred wire which caught the feeble glint of the sun there was nothing but grass and trees. Off to the left a cow munched solemnly. Overhead larks flew by singing bravely. Inside the reinforced concrete which can stand a heavy shell, the place smelled cleanly of oil and grease on the guns.

FINNS BREAK OFF PARLEY AT MOSCOW; ERKKO HINTS SOVIET ASKED TOO MUCH

Foreign Minister, In Broadcast To U. S., Says Finland Will Spurn Any Proposal To Help One Side At Expense Of Other

OCT 15 1939

By LYNN HEINZERLING
Associated Press Correspondent

Helsinki, Sunday, Oct. 15—Eljas J. Erkko, Foreign Minister, said in a radio broadcast to the United States early today that Finland could not accept a proposal "which would strengthen the security of one side at the expense of the other" in the present negotiations with Soviet Russia.

As he spoke, Finland's delegation to a conference with Russia was hurrying home after an unexpected decision to interrupt the Moscow conferences for a report to the Helsinki Government.

A Government spokesman earlier said the move did not mean negotiations had been broken off for good.

Solution Being Sought

Erkko said Finland was seeking a solution which would "contribute to the feeling of safety in this part of Europe where we live."

"But a solution which would strengthen security on one side at the expense of the other and which would weaken the possibilities of either to assure its vital interests and to protect its free national life or threaten the integrity of nations or its declared neutrality cannot be approved by anyone," he declared.

"This is the question that is at the present moment occupying the minds of the people in this corner of Europe."

Mutual Aid Pact Hinted

Observers interpreted his statements as intimating the Soviet Government had asked not only for territorial concessions to establish naval bases but also a mutual-assistance pact similar to those with Estonia and Latvia.

In a formal statement following Erkko's broadcast, President Kyoesti Kalio recalled the Finnish-Russian treaty and non-aggression pact of 1932 and an agreement concerning the definition of an aggressor in 1933 and asserted:

"We hope that even in the future Russia will honor these agreements, the principles of which she has referred to emphatically at several international conferences.

Relations Normal

"Russia has invited us to a conference in Moscow," Kallio continued, "this gives me a reason to note that our relations with that country have been normal on the basis of the peace we made at Dorpat in 1920. That treaty we always have honored.

[Editor's Note—In 1920, the year following the establishment of a republic by the Finnist Diet, Russia and Finland signed the Treaty of Dorpat, which established peace between them and gave Finland Pechenga, providing an outlet to the [illegible]tic Ocean.]

Mr. Kallio asserted that the Finnish people were "extremely grateful" for the invitation of the Swedish King to meet in Stockholm on Wednesday, "at a time when the great European powers are at war against each other and when the economic development and the relations of neutral countries are endangered."

OCT 15 1939

Backs Will To Defend

Foreign Minister Erkko said:

"A nation's future and fate depend in the end on its own will to defend its elementary rights and freedom against aggression.

"I cannot refrain from availing myself of this opportunity to give an expression of the sincere gratitude felt by the people of Finland to the people of the United States as a whole and to President Roosevelt, head of your state and your government, for the friendship and moral support you have shown us which we understand were intended to create circumstances on the basis of which in the present situation could be found a peaceful, moderate solution."

Erkko said the Finnish people had "taken a calm attitude toward world events, trying to concentrate our efforts toward keeping our economic rights in normal action during the present crisis."

He said Finland had taken precautionary measures "only because we wish to feel we have at least that security which we ourselves can provide under the present difficult conditions."

Referring to the Soviet discussions, the Foreign Minister asserted the Soviet had suggested the conference on questions of a "political nature."

"No ultimatum in this respect has been presented to us nor should we have given way to such a one," he added.

Cites Irony Of Fate

"It is an irony of fate that a country which . . politically not militaristic . . . has become the object of attention of the whole world without our own fault, as is unfortunately the case at the present moment.

"In these perturbing times we realize with joy we have many friends all over the world who . . . have given us support and shown their understanding for a peaceful policy and attitude toward Finland. This moral support we never shall forget."

Government spokesmen said Dr. Juho Kusti Paasikivi, head of the Finnish delegation, would give a report of the Moscow conferences on his return here.

OCT 15 1939

Reports circulating in the Finnish capital said Russia was demanding the right to establish naval bases on Finnish islands in the Gulf of Finland, concessions similar to those obtained from Latvia, Lithuania and Estonia. The government source left little doubt that the Soviet proposals made in the first Moscow sessions were more sweeping in their present form than the Finns were prepared to accept.

Demands Held Sweeping

A Government source meanwhile left little doubt that the Soviet proposals made in the first Moscow sessions were more sweeping in their present form than the Finns were prepared to accept.

The temporary termination of the talks coincided with increased activity among Finland's reservists, strengthening of the Government by Cabinet changes and a stiffened front among the northern European nations.

"Not A Surprise"

A Foreign Office spokesman said Dr. Paasikivi's return was "not a surprise." He said the move should not be interpreted as meaning the negotiations had failed "altogether," and indicated they might be resumed next week.

"When one negotiates, it takes time. When one dictates, it goes quickly," the spokesman observed.

The Government, he said, wanted to go over the subject of the talks thoroughly.

It was unlikely, the source said, that discussions would be resumed before the completion of a conference of northern nations starting in Stockholm Wednesday.

Conference Hailed

Helsingin Sanomat, Foreign Minister Errko's newspaper, said in an editorial "that Sweden should have taken the initiative in calling together such a conference proves the interest which all the rest of the northern nations have in preventing endangering Finland's membership in the northern bloc."

At least 100,000 persons, one-third of Helsinki's population, had fled from the city tonight as ferverish activities went forward in preparation for any possible national emergency. A decree ordered civilians in readiness to work directly or indirectly for the national defense. Regulations drawn up for a wartime status were put into effect.

Russo-Turk Accord Reported Concluded

By WITT HANCOCK
Associated Press Correspondent

Moscow, Oct. 14—Soviet Russia and Turkey were reliably reported tonight to have signed a pact expected to prove another link in the chain of diplomatic bargains by which Russia is extending her power from the Baltic to the Black Sea.

Unofficial but usually informed sources said that, while the pact would guarantee certain Russian rights in the Black Sea and its outlet, the Dardanelles, its terms were less sweeping than some Russians sought to obtain.

Announcement Expected

Official announcement of the accord was expected almost hourly. It was believed to clarify the relations of Turkey and Russia in the light of their ties to participants in the European war.

The Turkish Foreign Minister, Sukru Saracoglu, has been in Moscow nearly three weeks negotiating the accord with the Kremlin.

Final stages of the negotiations interrupted the talks between Russian leaders and the Finnish delegation, which held its second conference at the Kremlin tonight. The Finns, headed by Dr. Juho Kusti Paasikivi, remained there for more than two hours.

Second Parley Held

Later the Finns held another brief conference with Soviet officials, and it was announced that Dr. Paasikivi was leaving tonight for Helsinki to report on Soviet Russian proposals. Their nature was not disclosed.

Diplomatic quarters said he was expected to return to Moscow after consultations at home.

The Soviet proposals to Finland have not been disclosed, but it was believed the question of concessions on the strategic Aland Islands in the middle of the Baltic was one of the most vital under consideration.

Neutral diplomatic circles described the Finnish attitude as "firm but reasonable." The fact that Finland has the sympathy and backing of the Scandinavian states, as well as the moral lieved by observers here as undoubtedly strengthening her hand in Kremlin negotiations.

Hungarian Arrives

Hungary, meanwhile, joined the growing list of nations sending envoys to Moscow when it was announced that a Hungarian diplomatic mission had arrived for talks with Russian leaders. The purpose of the conversations was not announced.

Besides the Turkish and Finnish missions now in Moscow the Foreign Ministers or special envoys of Germany, Estonia, Latvia and Lithuania have been here in recent weeks to arrange their countries' relations with the expanding Soviet power.

Tass, Soviet official news agency, which announced the arrival of the Hungarians, said the delegation was headed by M. Dekristoffi, holding ministerial rank. The news agency said the mission arrived yesterday.

Nazis Seek Trade Help

As for Germany, well-informed Nazi circles continued to insist that it was unlikely Germany was seeking military aid from the Soviets. These quarters emphasized it was economic help that the Germans, who have a trade delegation here, want to get.

Foreign circles, however, were doubtful that Russia was in a position to supply Germany any large or varied quantities of raw materials since she is unable to fill her own needs in many commodities which Germany wants.

Russian-Lithuanian Pact Ratified At Kaunas

Kaunas, Lithuania, Oct. 14 (AP)—Parliament ratified the newly concluded Russian-Lithuanian pact today after a speech by Juozas Urbsys, Foreign Minister, in which he asserted that Russia gave assurances she would not interfere in Lithuania's internal affairs.

The Foreign Minister declared that Stalin had shown great sympathy for his neighbor nation during the negotiations in Moscow.

Under the agreement, Russia is permitted to establish military bases in Lithuanian territory, and Lithuania received her historic capital of Wilno (Vilna) in northeast Poland, now occupied by Soviet troops.

Two Russo-Finnish Talks Held

Helsinki Group Leaves Moscow Tonight—Parley Called Not Entire Failure.

MOSCOW, Oct. 14 (A. P.).—The Finnish delegation made a second visit to the Kremlin late tonight after an earlier conference with Russian officials which lasted two hours.

The delegation headed by Dr. Juho Kusti Paasikivi arrived at the Kremlin at 10 P. M. The first conference of the day ended at 7 P. M.

Today's conferences were the first since last Wednesday night when the Finnish-Russian negotiations were opened at the invitation of the Soviet Government.

Finns Are Going Home.

HELSINKI, Oct. 14 (A. P.).—A Government spokesman announced that the Finnish delegation would leave Moscow tonight, but that interruption of the talks could not mean that the discussions had failed "altogether."

The spokesman said, however, that he could not say when the delegation would return to the Russian capital to resume discussions.

"When one negotiates it takes time," he observed. "When one dictates it goes quickly."

Earlier reports that further Finnish-Russian talks had been postponed indefinitely led diplomatists to believe that Finland had been confronted with demands which she found it difficult to accept.

Suggested Terms.

While the Foreign Office maintained silence regarding the progress of the conversations, reports circulated in the capital that Russia had asked the right to establish naval bases on certain islands in the Gulf of Finland.

Foreign Minister Elias Erkko, whose radio speech to the United States early Friday morning was canceled because the German Government-controlled radio declined to relay a political program, will address the United States Sunday at 3 A. M. Helsinki time (8 P. M. Saturday Eastern standard time). Finnish spokesmen said Erkko's second speech would be relayed through Germany by telephone to Basle, Switzerland, where it will be transmitted to the United States.

There was a general belief that a week or more might elapse before the outcome of the negotiations would become known.

Signs of intense activity in the Foreign Office apparently indicated close study of reports which Dr. Juho Kusti Paasikivi, head of the Finnish delegation, was believed to have relayed from Moscow. Lights burned far into the night in the ministry.

Preparations to meet any contingency went forward meanwhile at an accelerated pace. A Government decree, ordering Finnish civilians to hold themselves ready to work directly or indirectly for the national defense, put into effect regulations previously drawn up for wartime emergencies.

Provincial elections scheduled for December 4-5 will be postponed indefinitely, usually reliable sources said. Retail liquor stores, controlled by the Finnish Government liquor monopoly, were closed yesterday for an indefinite period.

Bombproof shelters were being constructed in many vacant lots in Helsinki.

Cabinet Is Strengthened.

Every apartment house was advised to provide itself with first aid equipment, and a leader was named in each to take charge of removing the occupants to a place of safety in event of air raids.

President Kyoesti Kallio broadened the make-up of the Government by naming two members of the Swedish party to the Cabinet. Dr. J. O. Soederhjlm, Helsinki attorney, was named Minister of Justice succeeding E. E. Rautavaara, and Ernest von Born, second vice-chairman of the Diet, was named minister without portfolio.

These appointments assured the administration of the support of the Swedish party's eighteen representatives in Parliament, increasing the Government's parliamentary majority to 165 of the 196 seats.

TURK-SOVIET PACT REPORTED SIGNED

Said to Protect Russian Rights in Black Sea and Dardanelles

By WITT HANCOCK

MOSCOW, Oct. 14 (AP).—Turkey was reliably but unofficially reported today to have signed an agreement with Soviet Russia protecting Russian rights in the Black Sea and its outlet, the Dardanelles.

Announcement of the agreement, described as not as sweeping as the Moscow Government had sought to make, was expected soon, perhaps tonight.

Observers believed the accord also would define Russian-Turkish relations with respect to their roles in the European war.

While the Turkish Foreign Minister, Sukru Saracoglu, was putting the finishing touches on the pact in talks with Russian leaders, the Russian-Finnish talks which opened here on Thursday were suspended.

Dr. Juho Kusti Paasikivi, head of the Finnish delegation, was believed to be awaiting further instructions from his Government.

Tass, official news agency, published an exchange of greetings between Russia and Lithuania as a sequel to the signing last Tuesday of a mutual assistance pact. An dispatch from Kaunas said that the pact was scheduled for ratification this afternoon with the exchange of ratifications to follow tomorrow.

Premier Molotov telegraphed to Foreign Minister Juozas Urbsys his conviction that the pact "will serve to strengthen the peace of eastern Europe." The Lithuanian diplomat's message conveyed "gratitude of the Lithuanian delegation for the warm hospitality," and added:

"I would ask you particularly to convey to Stalin our gratitude for the broad understanding of the aspirations of the Lithuanian people and for having by active participation in the negotiations enhanced the mutual confidence and traditional friendship that have invariably existed between our States."

Obligations Recognized

ISTANBUL, Oct. 14 (AP).—The Turkish newspaper Yenisabah reported today it had reliable information that Turkey and Russia already had concluded a pact in their negotiations in Moscow and that it would be signed tomorrow.

Its informant asserted that the agreement had been reached without jeopardizing the mutual assistance obligations existing among Turkey, Britain and France.

Foreign Minister Sukru Saracoglu and his mission will start homeward tomorrow, it was said after three weeks of negotiations.

Meanwhile a large Turkish delegation departed for Moscow to attend the Soviet agricultural exposition, which was interpreted as a further manifestation of excellent Turkish-Soviet relations.

HUNGARIANS ADDED TO SOVIET VISITORS

Arrival of Delegation at Moscow Announced.

MOSCOW, Oct. 14 (A. P.).—The arrival of a Hungarian diplomatic mission in Moscow for talks with Russian leaders was announced today.

Tass, the official news agency, said that the Hungarian party, headed by M. Dekristoffi, holding ministerial rank, reached the Soviet capital yesterday.

The purpose of the visit was not announced.

(Hungary thus joins the growing list of nations sending missions to Moscow. The Foreign Ministers or special envoys of Germany, Estonia, Latvia, Lithuania and Turkey have visited the Russian capital in recent weeks to arrange their countries' relations with the expanding Soviet power.)

RUSSIA COVETS AALAND ISLES

They're Potential Gibraltar of the Baltic, FORTIFICATIONS ARE ISSUE

No Big Guns There Now, Though They Could Be Put In

Berne, Oct. 14—Diplomatic sources expressed doubt today that Russia could make herself impregnable in the Batlic without control of the Aaland Islands.

This belief was shared both by foreign legations in Berne and delegates to the League of Nations which, theoretically, still has the job of seeing that the Finnish-owned islands, the potential "Gibraltar of the Baltic," remain unfortified.

Junction Of Sea Lanes

The Aalands, which flank the Gulf of Finland and the route to and from Leningrad, are believed in league circles to be the main bone of contention between Russia and Finland. Some unofficial sources have expressed belief that Russia's proposals to Finland, although not officially disclosed, included surrender of small islands on the route of the Russian navy through the Gulf of Finland into the Baltic.

Voted To Join Sweden

The Aalands were united with Finland under Czarist Russia but when the Finns declareid their independence in 1917 the islanders declared their right of self-determination and in unofficial plebiscites favored reunion with Sweden. Finland would agree only to autonomy.

(With Finnish and Swedish consent, the council of the League of Nations suggested maintenance of Finnish sovereignty and took over supervision of five guarantees which were written into Finnish law.

(A convention, signed by all the Baltic powers, agreed to neutralization and demilitarization of the islands.

Last May a Finnish-Swedish plan to fortify the islands was obstructed by Russia at a council of the League. Great Britain and France, then negotiating a mutual assistance pact with Russia, backed the Soviet Union.

Essentially, Russia's argument was that the islands, if fortified, might fall into the hands of Germany through alleged German influence in the Finnish Army. (This preceded the signing of German-Russian treaties of amity and non-aggression.)

Stand Sounded Logical

Russia's stand sounded logical to Britain, France, Poland, Latvia and Estonia, all of whom feared the growth of Nazi power in the Baltic. Poland and Latvia kept out of the discussion at the League. Estonia did not even send a delegate.

The islands now are virtually defenseless as far as big guns and permanent forts are concerned, and it is generally believed here that they would be an easy prey for Russian warships.

Russia's "Natural Anxiety"

A Russian source here said that the Soviet "for the present" was interested only that the Aalands not be used as a base for operations against her.

Russia, this source said, would be vulnerable only if islands and ports of Latvia and Estonia or the Aalands were available to an enemy.

With Latvia and Estonia now tied to Russia in mutual assistance treaties, this source added, the Soviet feels a "natural anxiety" concerning the Aalands.

SCANDINAVIANS HAIL MEETING

Declare Swedish Sessions Will Show Solidarity.

FINLAND SITUATION AN ISSUE

Mutual Assistance Is Expected to Be Conference Theme.

STOCKHOLM, Oct. 14 (A. P.).—Norway, Finland and Denmark today welcomed Sweden's invitation to a conference here next Wednesday as an opportunity for a new declaration of Scandinavian solidarity.

From statesmen of all three countries came words of praise for King Gustaf's suggestion that they meet to discuss mutual problems created by the European conflict.

The Scandinavian press joined official spokesmen in acclaiming the call. The Copenhagen National Tidende declared editorially:

"A meeting of the chiefs of the northern States will show the world that four Nordic countries acknowledge their unity, and that an attack against one of them will be an attack against all."

While the specific questions to be discussed were not disclosed, informed observers were convinced that the apparent crisis which Finland faces in her relations with Soviet Russia would play an important part in the conversations.

Mutual Assistance Topic.

Dr. Halvdan Koht, Norway's Foreign Minister, said in a statement at Oslo that the meeting was called "both because of the general European situation and the special situation in connection with Finland."

In general, it was expected that the conference would deal with a program for mutual assistance in maintaining neutrality and in lessening the economic hardships created by the war.

Some diplomatic circles expressed a belief that Sweden, with her gold reserves, might grant loans to her neighbors to help defray expenses of the crisis.

These sources discounted the possibility that the four nations might join in urging a peace conference of the warring Powers, although one Swedish newspaper suggested that King Gustaf could qualify as a disinterested intermediary.

The call for the conference was issued amid growing tension and fresh military preparations to meet any eventuality arising from the Finnish-Russian conversations now under way in Moscow.

Sweden Strengthens Defenses.

Sweden was reported to have strengthened her defenses along the Finnish border, usually nomia because of the friendly relations between the two nations, by ordering about 10,000 additional troops to the upper Norland sector.

In commenting upon the forthcoming meeting, the Swedish Foreign Minister, Richard J. Sandler, recalled that the monarchs of Sweden, Norway and Denmark had met in 1914 at the call of King Gustaf to "express their states' unbroken unity under the lodestar of neutrality."

"Now the states are four," he said, "but the same intention allies them."

At the time of the 1914 conference, Finland belonged to the Russian empire, with the status of an autonomous Grand Duchy.

The Danish Foreign Minister, Peter Munch, made a similar reference to the 1914 meeting.

The Finnish Foreign Minister, Eljas Erkko, said "we are glad that the northern states keep contact in these times which are so important for us."

King Gustaf's invitation was issued directly to the Kings of Denmark and Norway, and the Pres. of Finland, all of whom accepted at once. The foreign Minister of the four countries also will participate.

German-Bulgarian Trade Pacts Signed

Negotiations At Sofia Reported Brought To Successful Conclusion

Berlin, Oct. 14 (AP)—Successful conclusion in Sofia of trade negotiations between a German delegation and the Bulgarian Government was officially announced tonight.

Purpose of the talks was to complement the existing economic treaty between the two nations.

Although no details were disclosed, the announcement said several agreements were signed guaranteeing a systematic development of barter trade under war conditions.

Belgrade Fair Opens; Regarded Peace Sign

All Balkan Countries Are Taking Part In Exposition, Which Had Been Postponed

Belgrade, Oct. 14 (AP)—An indication of increased confidence that peace will be preserved in the Balkans was seen today in the opening of the Belgrade fair with all southeastern European countries participating.

The opening, originally set for September 7, was postponed because of war conditions.

Another indication of Balkan trends was a report that Yugoslavia, with Italian backing, was endeavoring to aid in bringing about a new Bulgarian-Rumanian understanding which would be an important step toward solidifying a neutral block in southeastern Europe under Italian leadership.

NEW SWEDISH LIQUOR TAX

Increase of 40 to 80% in Retail Price Is Expected

STOCKHOLM, Sweden, Oct. 14 (AP)—The government announced today a bill to increase liquor taxes to help pay Sweden's mounting budget deficit, estimated to reach 500,000,000 crowns [the crown was quoted yesterday at 23.82 cents] up to next July 1 because of the European crisis.

The increase would be two crowns on the first liter and four crowns on the subsequent three of the maximum of four liters a Swede may buy monthly.

The wine tax would be increased to three crowns. This would mean an increase of 40 to 80 per cent in the retail price of the most popular brands of wine andliquor.

Nazi Subs Stop 3 Finnish Boats

Copenhagen, Oct. 15 (AP).—The Scandinavian Telegraph Bureau in a report from Helsinki tonight said three Finnish boats—the Margaretha, Greta and Pesamo—all loaded with woodpulp, had been stopped by a German submarine west of England. The tonnage of the ships was not given.

Germany lists woodpulp as contraband.

Funk, Jeering Blockade, Says Nazis Look to East

Aid to German Economy Seen 'Especially in Southeast'

BERLIN, Oct. 14 (AP).—Economics Minister Walther Funk tonight ridiculed the British blockade and declared the German national economy "now is turning its face to the east, especially the southeast."

In an address opening the Vienna East Fair, he said Great Britain "has suffered failure after failure and out of the enemies which were intended to be set up against Germany, friends have arisen which insure German space of living and strengthen German war potential."

Blockaded raw materials eventually can be brought to Germany by a roundabout route, he said, adding that it would not be long before German inventive genius found a way to manufacture substitutes.

Funk announced establishment of a special economic office to adjust and direct all questions of southeastern economy, especially of import and export in accordance with a uniform viewpoint—namely, war economy.

WOULD DRIVE OUT POLES AND JEWS

Forster Wants Conquered Region Cleared of Germans

BERLIN, Oct. 14 (A. P.).—Albert Forster, Nazi district leader for Danzig, in a speech at Bromberg demanded ruthless removal of all Poles and Jews from Germany's conquered provinces in Poland.

The speech was delivered on Thursday, but its text reached Berlin only today.

Herr Forster now is Adolf Hitler's deputy for the provinces of Pomorze, the former Polish corridor, and Pommerellen, German territory before the world war settlement made them Polish.

"It is our obligation ruthlessly to cleanse this land of all scoundrels, robbers, Poles and Jews," Herr Forster said. "We don't want history to charge us with having missed this historic hour. We want to profit from it in the consciousness that the Poles, if they stood in our place today, would have dealt with us even worse. . . .

"Fellow citizens, we cannot be severe enough. Let us not be soft—that would be a mistake."

He further demanded that every German in the provinces go to work with unparalleled industry.

"Every one of you must lend a hand and by your work render thanks to the Fuehrer who freed you," he said. "The Fuehrer cannot give you everything, but he gave you liberty, which is the most important."

Duels of Honor Banned 'In Adolf Hitler's Reich'

Nazis and Officers to Settle Disputes Before Committees

BERLIN, Oct. 14 (AP).—The traditional German duels to settle affairs of honor in the Nazi party and army are forbidden under an "agreement concerning honor" made public today. In future, committees will settle disputes involving army officers or members of the Nazi party or its branches.

Supreme Party Judge Walter Buch, in putting the agreement into effect, observed that comradeship formed during the World War did not permit various codes of honor among German men. Negotiations between the army and the party, Buch said, resulted in decisions that "both would settle affairs of honor jointly or in the same manner, with the exclusion of duels, which heretofore were customary, but no longer are suitable in Adolf Hitler's Reich."

Hungary Lifts Duty On Motor Trucks

BUDAPEST, Oct. 14 (A. P.).—Hungary, in an effort to motorize the nation, will permit motor trucks to be imported duty free. The recent cut in the duty on passenger cars had a tremendous influence in motorizing the country, the Ministry of Commerce asserts.

The Ministry expects $4,000,000 worth of trucks to be imported by spring.

Hungary Fears Russian Push

Red Army's Mongol Troops Already Along Frontier Not Far From Budapest.

BUDAPEST, Oct. 14 (A. P.).—The belief apparently is increasing among Hungarians that events may cause Hungary to stand against a Soviet push into eastern Europe as she stood against the Turkish advance on the Occident in the sixteenth century. While Russia's attention is directed for the moment on the Baltic Sea and the Dardanelles, Hungarians are fearful that her expansionist momentum soon may be diverted in their direction.

Soviet troops, including Mongols from Siberia, already stand on the Hungarian frontier only a few hours from Budapest—a result of the Russian march into Poland last month. Between the Russian forces in Poland and the Danube region stand the Carpathian Mountains, a great natural wall which the Russians vainly tried to cross in the world war, losing hundreds of thousands of men in the attempt.

Should Russia lay claim to Ruthenia (Carpatho-Ukraine) on the basis of its Ukrainian population—as she did with regard to the Polish Ukraine—the question would be posed for Hungary: Whether to yield and permit the Russians to cross the Carpathians or to fight.

Fight For Ruthenia.

Many Hungarians say that Hungary would fight to keep Ruthenia, which was gained in the partition of Czecho-Slovakia. Ruthenia was part of the Austro-Hungarian Empire before the constitution of Czecho-Slovakia.

To make further use of the Carpathians as a defense, many responsible Hungarians say, Hungary would march into Rumania's Transylvania in the event that Russia entered Rumanian Bessarabia. The main Carpathian range and the southern Carpathians form a V-shaped barricade half enclosing Transylvania, which Hungary lost to Rumania in the world war.

In no European country is there more apparent hatred of Sovietism than in Hungary and in no country has the aristocracy more to fear in a communist invasion—considering the probability of a settling of old scores, chiefly the suppression of the Bela Kun communist regime in Hungary.

Reign in Any Case.

Kun, captured by Russians early in the world war, was in Russia at the time of the Red revolution and, in the role of communist advance agent in Central Europe, returned to his native Hungary, where he set up a Communist Government. Hungary also is regarded as the last stronghold of feudalism in Europe.

The proximity of the Russians appears to have expedited land reform and other social measures to combat boring from within. While Hungary's actions in the face of any Russian threat would be affected by the German attitude, many Hungarians say that in any event she would resist, possibly hoping for Italian and Yugoslav aid.

The prospect is not a happy one for Hungarians, especially when they compare it with the Turkish wars. From the fifteenth to the seventeenth centuries the Hungarians battled the Turks and finally drove them back. The Hungarian view is that in holding back the Turks, Hungary saved western civilization, but exhausted her strength and so was prevented from becoming one of Europe's largest and most dominant peoples.

GAYDA COMMENTS ON BRITISH REPLY

Italian Authority Calls It a 'Dangerous No.'

ROME, Oct. 14 (A. P.).—Virginio Gayda, who often speaks Premier Mussolini's mind, today described Prime Minister Chamberlain's reply to Hitler's peace proposals and "a dangerous no."

The authoritative editor, writing in Il Giornale d'Italia, said that nevertheless "the irreparable" has not yet occurred.

"In the same speech of the British Prime Minister," he wrote, "horizons of a new and more just Europe appear faintly. War, with its devastation of human life, property and souls' could only postpone rather than hasten that which peoples anxiously await."

Signor Gayda contended that Hitler accepted Mussolini's proposal to negotiate the Polish problem and therefore "Hitler and Germany cannot be blamed for the irreparable." He said he found in Mr. Chamberlain's speech of last Thursday evidence of "determination for deliberate intransigeance." He also said that insistence on the reconstitution of Poland should be addressed to Germany, Russia and Lithuania instead of to Hitler alone.

King Leopold to Talk On Radio October 26

BRUSSELS, Oct. 14 (A. P.).—Leopold, King of the Belgians, agreed today to address the United States by radio on October 26.

The King's secretary said that the broadcast would not be connected with the frequently discussed possibility of his mediating in the European war. It was described as one of a series of lectures on the international situation in which high ranking persons of various countries will take part.

Floating Mines Menace Coast of Danish Island

KOEGE, Norway, Oct. 14 (A. P.).—Coastal engineers announced today that floating mines are becoming an increasingly serious menace along the coast of Denmark's Zealand Island.

Mines are being caught in fish nets and driven towards bays and shore pilings. Mine sweeping activity has increased and the thunder of exploding mines can be heard on shore.

Trade Union Federation Supports Democracies

International Delegates Assail Hitler's Proposals

PARIS, Oct. 14 (AP).—The International Federation of Trade Unions issued a proclamation today declaring itself "entirely on the side of the democratic nations" in the European war.

The announcement, made after a special session of delegates from Great Britain, France, Belgium and the Netherlands, denounced "Hitler's cynical proposals" for peace, "because they were based only on recognition of conquests achieved through successive aggressions against the independence of the Austrian, Czecho-Slovak and Polish peoples."

The Federation also announced "its unity of view with French and English workers who are now defending human liberties, democracy and civilization against the aggressions of totalitarian states."

Meetings were presided over by Sir Walter Citrine, the Federation's president, who is British. Swiss and Danish delegates did not attend. The Federation decided to call a special session of international union secretaries within a few weeks to deal with problems arising from the war.

BLACKOUT CRASH

4 Are Killed and 24 Injured in British Train Wreck.

LONDON, Oct. 14 (A. P.).—The first serious train wreck during Britain's wartime blackout had air raid precaution forces in action today.

At least four persons were killed and twenty-four others injured in the accident last night when the second section of the Scottish Express from London ran into the first at Bletchley station, forty-five miles north of here, in blackout darkness deepened by a heavy rain.

Rescuers worked in the rain, smoke and steam, aided only by dim blue lights, until authorities lifted the blackout restrictions in the vicinity of the wreck.

LABORITE RE-ELECTED

Woodburn Gains Commons Over Stop-war Candidate.

GLASGOW, Oct. 14 (A. P.).—Arthur Woodburn, Scottish secretary of the Labor Party, was returned to the House of Commons today in a by-election, decisively defeating a Stop the War candidate.

Returns from the Clackmannan and East Stirling constituency gave Woodburn 15,645 votes to 1,060 for Pacifist Andrew Stewart. Stewart said the people were "quite mad."

Says Britain Needs Orator To Match Hitler And Stalin

Shaw Suggests Council "To Censor And Explain To Mr. Chamberlain" Latter's Speeches

[By the Associated Press]

London, Oct. 14—George Bernard Shaw today criticized the addresses of Prime Minister Neville Chamberlain and declared wartime Britain should have a national orator to match the "very able speeches" of Hitler and Stalin.

Shaw also recommended establishment of a council of British policy whose duties would be "to censor and explain to Mr. Chamberlain any speech he might deliver in Parliament."

The 83-year-old playwright's criticism was contained in a letter read at the opening of a conference on war aims by the Fabian Society, a Socialist group.

The conference, Shaw said, should rule out of order "all meaningless words like Hitlerism, totalitarianism, aggression, security, liberty, democracy and, in general, all parliamentary language."

Shaw said Chamberlain's conclusion in speeches was that it was for Germany to make her choice and added: "We have had enough of leaving the initiative to Herr Hitler. He invariably takes it."

BOYCE SCHULZE WEDS

She Is 19-year-old Bride of Prince Hohenlohe.

PARIS, Oct. 14 (A. P.).—Miss Boyce Thompson Schulze, daughter of Mrs. Anthony J. Drexel Biddle Jr., wife of the United States Ambassador to Poland, was married today to Prince Alexander Hohenlohe of Poland.

William C. Bullitt, United States Ambassador to France, and Jules Lukasiewicz, the Polish Ambassador, were witnesses. The wedding party later was entertained at a luncheon in the United States embassy residence.

After a brief honeymoon the couple plan to go to the United States, where Prince Hohenlohe has been appointed adjutant to the military attache of the Polish embassy.

The eighteen-year-old bride, granddaughter of William Boyce Thompson, escaped from Warsaw with the Biddles during the Polish-German war, in which her husband served as a subaltern in the Fourteenth Polish Uhlans.

The son of Prince Alfred Hohenlohe and the late Princess Catherine Britton Hohenlohe of Washington, he was born in Switzerland and was an Austrian subject until he was neutralized as a Pole.

Coffee Price Hits 30-Cents-a-Cup in Budapest's Cafes

BUDAPEST, Oct. 14 (AP).—A cup of coffee now costs from 20 to 30 cents in Budapest cafes.

The price was increased following a government order which raised the price of coffee to about $3 a pound to conserve the existing supply.

Some cafes serve a cheaper coffee mixed with chicory and malt for those unable to afford the new price.

1,100 Prepare to Sail From Rotterdam to U. S.

ROTTERDAM, Oct. 14 (A. P.).—About 1,100 persons stranded here, some since the outbreak of the war, prepared to sail for New York tonight aboard the Holland-America liner Rotterdam.

Women and children were given priority in allocation of crowded accommodations.

More than 2,000 Americans have been impatiently waiting here for passage home. The liner Statendam was scheduled to sail on October 22 with 900 passengers.

U. S. to Break Panama Custom to Guard Against Sabotage

BALBOA, C. Z., Oct. 14 (AP).—In order to prevent possible sabotage by persons or organizations having anti-American feelings, United States naval vessels stationed in the Canal Zone will not be open to the public on Navy Day, Oct. 27.

The announcement was made today by Rear Admiral Frank H. Sadler, commandant of the 15th Naval District.

Ships of the Special Service Squadron stationed at the fleet air base and submarine base here, in former years have been open to the public on Navy Day.

'Seize Britain's Isles' Stirs Senate Storm

Washington, D. C., Oct. 14.—Senator Lundeen (F. L., Minn.) suggested during Senate neutrality debate today that the United States seize British possessions in the Caribbean in payment for the World War debt—and let himself in for a denunciatory barrage from Administration supporters.

In the course of a speech opposing repeal of the arms embargo, Lundeen said that if United States armed forces took over the British West Indies "there wouldn't be a shot fired" because of the European conflict.

Senator Lundeen

Suggests unique debt collection.

"They (England and France) are pretty busy on the Western Front," he observed.

The Minnesota Senator made no direct reference to Col. Charles A. Lindbergh's statement in a radio address last night that the United States, sooner or later, must "demand the freedom of this continent and its surrounding islands from the dictates of European powers," but Lindbergh's speech brought varied and emphatic comment from others.

Connally Answers Lundeen.

When Lundeen concluded, white-haired Senator Connally (Dem., Tex.) arose to speak on behalf of embargo repeal and promptly lashed out at Lundeen's proposition.

"He's opposed to war," Connally observed acidly, "but he wants us to send our Navy down to take the Bahamas by armed force—this man of peace! If we wanted these islands, the way to get them would be to negotiate for them at the conference table by peaceful means."

"It seems to me we've been sitting around the conference table for 20 years," Lundeen interjected.

Connally asked Lundeen to confirm that he had advocated taking the islands by force while England was fighting Germany.

"I'm thinking about the United States, not the position of England," the Minnesotan declared. "These are American islands, we need them for naval bases and air bases, we don't want Germany to get them, and now's the time for us to get them."

"Now that England has a knife at her throat," Connally supplemented. "Now's a lofty time for a great nation like ours to take them."

Pittman Hits Lindy Plea.

"It reminds me," put in Senator Schwellenbach (Dem., Wash.), "of what Molotoff of Russia told Latvia and Finland and the other Baltic nations—we need them, therefore, no matter what happens, we're justified in taking them."

Lindbergh's implied demand for England to get out of this hemisphere and his proposal for an embargo on sales of "offensive" weapons to warring nations brought a prompt reply from Chairman Pittman of the Senate Foreign Relations Committee. Pittman said that Lindbergh's suggestion was "most unfortunate" because "it encourages the ideology of the totalitarian governments and is subject to the construction that he approves of their brutal conquest of Democratic countries through war or threat of destruction through war."

Pittman added that the flier "sees that the present law injured Great Britain and France and that its repeal will remove such injury." He went on:

"Apparently, he can not see that the present law not only injures Great Britain and France, but gives great aid to Germany, Italy and Russia.

"He can't see that one of our domestic laws, which aids one of the belligerents, is unneutral, but he thinks that if we had no law at all then that would be unneutral."

Administration supporters generally criticized Lindbergh's suggestion that a distinction be made between offensive and defensive weapons. Majority Leader Barkley (Dem., Ky.) raised the question as to what was the difference between an offensive and defensive weapon and asserted he could not see, "to save my soul," how anyone could draw the line of demarcation.

Meanwhile, the Senate worked through its usual Saturday recess today under a leadership drive to hasten a vote. In addition to Lundeen's, there were formal speeches from Senators Frazier (Rep., N. D.), oposing repeal of the arms embargo, and from Connally, favoring repeal.

Frazier told the chamber that Great Britain and France would regard repeal of the arms embargo as a sign that the United States was on their side.

Connally told the Senate that instead of being a step toward war, repeal of the arms embargo would be "the first step toward peace."

Senator Byrnes (Dem.-S. C.) said that the chamber might be called into session at 11 A. M. next week—an hour earlier than the usual noon meeting—and might debate the bill until 6 or 7 P. M. each day. The regular quitting time is 5 P. M.

FRAZIER SAYS ALLIES AWAIT CONGRESS VOTE

Asserts They Are Stalling War Until Decision on Embargo.

SEES REPEAL AIDING THEM

Feels Nation Will Go Whole Way Into the Conflict if It Starts Selling.

WASHINGTON, Oct. 14 (A. P.).—Great Britain and France were said today by Senator Frazier, Democrat, of North Dakota, to be stalling in their war with Germany until they can find out what kind of neutrality legislation this country will adopt.

Mr. Frazier asserted in a speech in the Senate that the administration neutrality bill, providing for repeal of the arms embargo, was a step toward American involvement "in this European mixup," and that the allied prosecution of the war would be influenced directly by the decision on the law.

"Hitler has not smashed the allies," he said, "and if he is strong enough to do so there will be no war—unless the United States gives evidence of its willingness to back the allies."

Repeal of the arms embargo would furnish such evidence, he said.

"Perhaps we could take sides in this European mixup without actually sending troops across the Atlantic," he continued, "but once we yield to pro-British and pro-French pressure are we going to have any moral reason for stopping short of war?

Credits and Loans.

"If we let up on our neutrality and sell arms to the allies do we refuse to make also on our credit laws when they run short of money? Can we refuse private loans, then public loans and then the army to protect the loans?"

Mr. Frazier spoke at the opening of an unusual Saturday session held in order to hasten action. The galleries were well filled.

"If we lift the embargo," the Senator said, "it will be considered by France and Britain that we are on their side. Why change our neutrality course if we do not intend to go all the way?"

He also contended that repeal of the embargo would result in war profits harmful to the national economy, and added:

"Are we so hardened, as a nation, that we are willing to fill our banks with gold coined from the blood of human beings, like ourselves, who have been forced into war by jealous rulers crazy for power?"

Mr. Frazier suggested enactment of an embargo preventing the shipment of any supplies, including food, to belligerents. He said also that exports of materials to neutrals should be limited to normal amounts.

"Why not do this?" he demanded. "If war is wrong, why not discourage it?"

Quotes Washington.

Senator Lundeen, Farmer-Labor, of Minnesota, quoting George Washington's farewell address as a model for this country's foreign policy, told the Senate: "Washington had more sense than all the small potatoes, nubbins and two-by-fours that have been running the State Department for the last few years."

After referring to the utterances of Thomas Jefferson, Jackson and Clay, Mr. Lundeen said: "It might do the administration a little good to read Jackson more instead of banqueting him."

Turning to the question of war debts, he said that although many people refused to believe the word of Adolf Hitler, he intended to discuss the word of Britain and France.

"Perhaps they're in the same basket," he shouted.

Asserting that he didn't believe any of these foreign diplomats, the Minnesotan told the Senate that the British and French empires were the greatest on earth, yet both contended that they were unable to pay their war debts to the United States.

"They're for peace as long as they can get the pieces," he went on, "and then they're for war to get the rest."

Why, he asked, should the United States aid the European democracies or finance their wars merely because they want to hold what they've got.

Connally Closes Session.

Senator Connally, Democrat, of Texas, brought the second week of debate on neutrality to a close, saying that repeal of the embargo would be the first step toward peace.

Mr. Connally described the opposition statement that repeal would be a move toward war as an attempt to delude the country.

"Opponents of repeal constantly and sedulously have claimed that the embargo means peace," he said. "Some have accepted their claim without analysis or examination. That false assumption has been hammered into the public mind when the claim is wholly baseless and unsupported. The retention of the embargo does not mean peace. It probably means war."

Pittman Assails Plan.

WASHINGTON, Oct. 14 (A. P.).—Senator Pittman, Democrat, of Nevada, asserted in a formal statement today that Col. Charles A. Lindbergh's suggestion for the United States to sell only defensive weapons to belligerents "encourages the ideology of the totalitarian governments."

The statement charged further that Col. Lindbergh's remarks were "subject to the construction that he approves their [the totalitarian governments'] brutal conquest of democratic countries through war or threat of destruction through war."

In the course of a radio address last night Col. Lindbergh proposed, as former President Hoover had done several days before, that the present arms embargo be split to permit export of defensive weapons to belligerents, but to continue preventing export of offensive weapons.

Patriotic Beyond Doubt.

Many of the Senators involved in the current debate over the administration's proposal to repeal the embargo outright questioned the practicability of the aviator's idea because, they said, of the difficulty of defining "defensive" and "offensive."

"Col. Lindbergh is patriotic beyond a doubt," declared Mr. Pittman, "and yet Col. Lindbergh sees that the present law injures Great Britain and France, and that its repeal will remove such injury. Apparently he cannot see that the present law not only injures Great Britain and France but gives great aid to Germany, Italy and Russia.

"He can't see that one of our domestic laws, which aids one of the belligerents, is unneutral, but he thinks if we had no law at all then that would be unneutral."

Mr. Pittman said he thought it was impractical to attempt to distinguish between offensive weapons, which Col. Lindbergh urged should be embargoed, and defensive weapons which the flyer said this country should sell to other nations.

No Experience as Statesman.

"Col. Lindbergh brought glory to the United States through his courage and skill in pioneering a successful solo flight across the Atlantic," said Mr. Pittman, chairman of the Foreign Relations Committee. "We respect and admire Col. Lindbergh for his accomplishments and his high character. History does not disclose that Col. Lindbergh has had the same experience in statesmanship and military affairs as he has had in flying, although his address in its learned expressions indicates a remarkable intuition."

In addition to the embargo idea, Col. Lindbergh also urged that American shipping be kept out of belligerent waters and that credits be refused to warring countries and their agents.

Offers Long Range Policy.

At the same time he presented as a matter of long range policy the idea that the United States ultimately must demand withdrawal of Great Britain and other European Powers from the Western Hemisphere.

Senator Capper, Republican, of Kansas, said he thought Col. Lindbergh's speech was a very good one.

"I particularly approve his stand on repeal of the embargo," he said.

Senator La Follette, Progressive, of Wisconsin, an opponent of repeal of the arms embargo, said he thought Col. Lindbergh had rendered a great patriotic service in his able, courageous and frank speech to the nation on the issues involved in the momentous decision now presented to Congress and the people."

"While he made a distinction between offensive and defensive weapons which he admitted is difficult to work out and with which I cannot agree," Mr. LaFollette continued, "the whole weight of his argument supports the basic position of those who are opposed to the repeal of the arms embargo and who are determined that America shall not intervene in the European war."

Senator Vandenberg, Republican, of Michigan, noted that Col. Lindbergh appeared to be in "substantial agreement" with Mr. Hoover, who suggested this week that Congress ban the sale of offensive weapons to belligerents.

Would Forgo Bargain Counter.

"If the present embargo is to be struck down and if war munitions are to be sold on a cash basis," Mr. Vandenberg said, "it will be well to explore the humane question whether we do not wish at least to forgo an American bargain counter which sells implements of mass death for the women and children of the earth."

When Senator Clark, Democrat of Missouri, asked unanimous consent to put Col. Lindbergh's speech in the Senate record, Senator Connally, Democrat, of Texas, asked Mr. Clark whether he knew whether Lindbergh's "advisers and collaborators" in preparing it.

Senator Clark replied that he did not know whether Col. Lindbergh had any. It was his belief, he said, that Col. Lindbergh had made his own decision and was expressing his own opinion.

There was no objection to recording the speech.

Senator Pittman of Nevada, chairman of the Senate Foreign Relations Committee, a leader of administration forces in the current controversy, commented at that time that "that's piddling around with immaterialities."

Four-point Program.

Senator Borah, Republican, of Idaho, a leader of the foes of embargo repeal, said that the first thing which occurred to him was how the plan could be made feasible. Senator Nye, Republican, of North Dakota, another opponent of repeal, said that he agreed with Mr. Hoover's suggestion in principle, but that it might be difficult to draw the line between aggressive and defensive weapons.

Col. Lindbergh, in an address last night over a national radio network, recommended a four-point program:

1. An embargo on offensive weapons and munitions.
2. The unrestricted sale of purely defensive armaments.
3. The prohibition of American shipping from the belligerent countries of Europe and their danger zones.
4. The refusal of credit to belligerent nations or their agents.

Hemisphere Defense.

Turning to the question of hemisphere defense, the famous flyer said:

"This Western Hemisphere is our domain. Let there be no compromise about our right to defend or trade within this area. If it is challenged by any nation, the answer must be war. Our policy of neutrality should have this as its foundation.

"We desire the utmost friendship with the people of Canada. If their country is ever attacked, our navy will be defending their seas, our soldiers will fight on their battlefields, our flyers will die in their skies, but have they the right to draw this hemisphere into a European war simply because they prefer the Crown of England to American independence?

"Sooner or later we must demand the freedom of this continent and its surrounding islands from the dictates of European power. American history clearly indicates this need. As long as European Powers maintain their influence in our hemisphere we are likely to find ourselves in their troubles and they will lose no opportunity to involve us."

No War for Democracy.

Repeal of the arms embargo, Col. Lindbergh said, would not assist democracy in Europe "because I do not believe this is a war for democracy."

"This is a war over the balance of power in Europe—a war brought about by the desire for strength on the part of Germany and the fear of strength on the part of England and France. The more munitions the armies obtain the longer the war goes on and the more devastated Europe becomes, the less hope there is for democracy."

In advocating the sale of defensive weapons, Col. Lindbergh said that technicians would argue that they could not be separated completely from offensive arms.

Borderline Cases.

"There are certain borderline cases," he said, "but there are plenty of clear-cut examples: for instance, the bombing plane and the anti-aircraft cannon. I do not want to see American bombers dropping bombs which will kill and mutilate European children, even if they are not flown by American pilots, but I am perfectly willing to see American anti-aircraft guns shooting American shells at invading bombers over any European country."

Col. Lindbergh said that if loans were made to a belligerent "many interests will feel that it is more important for that country to win than for our own to avoid the war.

"It is unfortunate, but true, that there are interests in America who would rather lose American lives than their own dollars. We should give them no opportunity."

Lindbergh Program

Washington, Oct. 14 (AP)—Here is a comparison of Col. Charles A. Lindbergh's four-point neutrality revision program with the Administration's bill on the same subject:

1. An embargo on offensive weapons and munitions. (The bill would remove the existing embargo on all types of arms.)

2. The unrestricted sale of purely defensive armaments. (The bill would permit the sale of such weapons and also of those which Lindbergh called offensive.)

3. The prohibition of American shipping from the belligerent countries of Europe and their danger zones. (The bill includes provision for such prohibition.)

4. The refusal of credit to belligerent nations or their agents. (The bill limits credit to belligerent governments or their agents to 90 days.)

CANADIANS ANGRY AT RADIO ADDRESS OF COL. LINDBERGH

Charge Him With Hitlerism —Senators Are Wary of His Arms Plan.

TORONTO, Oct. 14 (A. P.).—Col. Charles A. Lindbergh's radio speech on the position of the United States in reference to the war in Europe was criticized today by the Toronto Daily Star in an editorial headed, "An Offensive Lindbergh Address."

The Star said "Col. Lindbergh made a speech over the radio which was presumptuous and offensive in some of its references to Canada and fortunately does not represent the attitude of the vast majority of Canada's good neighbors to the South."

"Col. Lindbergh said that sooner or later the United States would have to demand the freedom of this continent and its surrounding islands from the dictates of European Powers," the paper continued.

"In other words, Col. Lindbergh would detach Canada from its British connection and refuse it the right to determine its own position, its right to 'prefer the crown of England to American independence.'

"This is pure Hitlerian doctrine—that a stronger country should be at liberty to override the wishes of a weaker one. It is not representative of United States opinion.

"The United States has no more right to say whether Canada should go to war with Germany than Canada had to say whether the United States should go to war, long years ago, with Spain."

CANADIANS TO SAIL BEFORE CHRISTMAS

Troops to Finish Training in Mild English Climate.

OCT 15 1939

OTTAWA, Oct. 14 (Canadian Press).—Informed persons reported today that Canada's first overseas division would probably proceed to England within two months to complete training and receive service equipment.

It was said that, like the first contingent in the world war, it was probable the division of about 16,000 men would spend the winter—or a large part of it—in England.

Lack of facilities for concentrating a large body of troops in Canada under winter conditions, it was explained, makes the final training of the division impracticable in Canada.

By the time the division sails the troops will be completely equipped with the new battle dress uniform of blouse, loose fitting trousers and gaiters.

Major-Gen. A. G. L. McNaughton will command the First Overseas Division and probably the entire Canadian Overseas Force if and when other units are sent. The appointment of brigade commanders and headquarters staff will be announced later.

Air Mission Arrives in Canada

OCT 15 1939

QUEBEC, Oct. 14 (A. P.).—The eight-man British mission, headed by Lord Riverdale, arrived in Canada today to discuss plans for making the Dominion the air training center of the British Empire.

A recent announcement said a training program designed to turn out from 6,000 to 20,000 military pilots yearly would be set up in Canada. Australian and New Zealand missions are expected in Ottawa soon to participate in the discussions.

Before leaving for Ottawa, the commission issued a statement which said in part:

"One of the primary objects ... will be ... to concert measures for enabling each member of the Commonwealth to take over that party of the common task which by reason of its industrial capacity, its manpower and its geographical position, it is best suited to undertake."

Included in Lord Riverdale's group were Air Marshal Sir C. L. Courtney; J. B. Abraham Permanent Assistant Secretary of the British Air Ministry; Group Capt. A. Gray, Group Capt. L. N. Hollingmurst, Group Capt. J. M. Robb, F. R. Howard, mission secretary, and J. R. Smyth, of the Air Ministry's financial division.

San Diego Paper Calls Attention To Nazi Ships At Costa Rican Port

OCT 15 1939

San Diego, Cal., Oct. 14 (AP).—The San Diego Tribune said today that four German ships, all reported to be in the "refuge port" of Puntarenas, Costa Rica, "are objects of interest to Pacific Coast mariners, particularly in view of reports that mysterious submarines have been sighted in Central-American waters."

"A theory is advanced," the paper said, "that if the submarines are 'unwelcome strangers,' they may have been serviced by one or more of the four Nazi vessels, said to be officered largely by naval reservists."

The four vessels mentioned were the North German Lloyd motorship Weser, the Hamburg-American motorship Havelland, the steamer Eisenach and the seventy-eight-ton shark-fishing schooner Stella.

New York, Oct. 14—The American freighter Black Hawk reported today it had rescued thirty-nine survivors of the French tanker Emile Miguet, destroyed by fire off the Irish Coast Thursday. One was reported dead.

Captain Raymond Hodge wirelessed the Black Diamond Line, owners of the ship, that he would take the survivors to Boston. He gave his position as 298 miles west of Bishop Rock, England.

The President Harding of the United States Lines reported yesterday she had reached the 14,155-ton Emile Miguet to find the vessel in flames and no sign of the crew.

The line assumed then that the crew was lost, explaining it was customary for ships to notify other vessels proceeding to the scene of a catastrophe when a rescue had been made.

Captain Hodge did not explain his delay in reporting the rescue.

Loaded With Oil

The Emile Miguet, largest merchant vessel loss in the current war, left Corpus Christi, Texas, September 17 with 160,000 barrels of casinghead gasoline blended with crude oil. She presumably was bound for Havre, France.

The President Harding rescued the crew of thirty-six of the British freighter Heronspool while responding to an SOS sent out by the Emile Miguet.

The Black Hawk, a 4,988-ton vessel, left Rotterdam October 11 with eleven passengers. She plies regularly between Eastern United States ports and Rotterdam and Antwerp.

U.S. Deficit Cut Seen in War and Trade Upswing

Roosevelt Said to Expect a Little Gain This Year, Perhaps a Lot Next Year

OCT 15 1939

WASHINGTON, Oct. 14 (AP).—Long official consideration of Uncle Sam's budget has producew the opinion that the war and the business upswing are going to cut the deficit a little this year, maybe a lot next fiscal year.

President Roosevelt's annual fall "budget summation," to be issued in a few weeks, is authoritatively expected to estimate that the deficit for the fiscal year ending next June 30 will be a little less than the $3,426,343,200 he predicted last January. He won't guess on the outlook for the following fiscal year until his regular budget message to Congress in January.

The sharp business improvement of the late summer arrived too late to change this year's figures much. On the spending side, only relief could change very radically, and Cal. F. Charrington, the Work Projects Administration chief, has warned that the potential war boom is not likely to affect relief costs much for the present.

If farm prices resume the spurt they had at the outbreak of the war, they could, in time, materially reduce agricultural benefits paid out of the treasury, but benefit commitments for this year are already out.

Furthermore, there are offsets for whatever little savings may be made on the anticipated $9,095,663,200 of spending this fiscal year. The first of these is the estimated $140,000,000 extra cost involved in enlarging Army, Navy and Coast Guard personnel under the President's emergency proclamation.

However, the revenue picture is a little brighter than it was last January when this fiscal year's income was estimated at $5,669,320,000. It is known that the Treasury figured that revenue on a conservative basis, and business indices show trade has improved materially in the last few months.

Higher trade immediately improves revenues from the various manufacturing excises—gasoline, automobiles, radios, refrigerators, oil, liquor and tobacco.

Income tax revenues, however, are slow to reflect changed business conditions. Until next March, the Treasury still will be collecting income taxes based on what people earned in the calendar year 1938, a relatively poor business year. In March and June, before the current fiscal year ends, the first two installments will be collected based on 1939 income and revenue from this source may be large than was expected.

The budget improvements potential in a war boom—if it actually develops—might, however, miss together in the next fiscal year to erase or at least radically reduce the annual deficit.

Revenues during a boom would necessarily rise. Relief costs and agricultural benefits would drop—as much as $2,000,000,000 if the boom was big enough. Some costs would continue to rise, particularly those for national defense and for purchasing supplies whose prices probably would rise.

EXPORTS TAKE JUMP

OCT 15 1939

War's First Month Biggest Since January, 1938.

WASHINGTON, Oct. 14 (A. P.).—United States exports during the first month of the European war were the highest for any month since January, 1938.

Secretary of Commerce Hopkins said last night that $283,000,000 worth of American goods were shipped abroad during September. Cotton, airplanes, petroleum, chemicals, steel and tobacco were among the principal items.

The total compared with $248,148,000 in August and $243,595,000 in September, 1938.

Mr. Hopkins cautioned, however, that the September figures might not be representative of American trade during the war and said that it might be several months before the long-range effect could be determined.

U. S. Estimates Reich Imports Are Cut in Half

Department of Commerce Survey Cites Export Loss Due to War and Blockade

OCT 15 1939

WASHINGTON, Oct. 14 (AP).—Germany's normal inflow of supplies from foreign sources has been cut in half by the war, the Department of Commerce estimated today.

An analysis it prepared in response to general speculation upon the effects of the Anglo-French blockade said that the Reich has been all but isolated from countries which supplied 50.1 per cent of her import needs in the first six months of this year.

"German assertions that, unlike 1914-'18, the Reich is now 'blockade-proof,'" said a statement by the Bureau of Foreign and Domestic Commerce, "are largely based on the presumption that it will be in position to keep up normal communications with these (contiguous and neutral European) countries for the duration of the war, and that they will be able to supply Germany at least with the same quantity of foodstuffs and raw materials as in the time of peace."

German imports from those countries during the first half of 1939, however, represented only 43 per cent of total imports, the department said, while trade with other countries has been made difficult or impossible because of the war and the consequent docking of nearly the whole German merchant fleet.

Imports from countries with which Germany is now at war—that is, Great Britain, France, their dominions, colonies and territories—amounted to 19.8 per cent of the total. Included in that percentage were such essential raw materials as rubber, tin and wool, the department said. Imports from neutral oversea countries, including the United States, Spain and Portugal—from all of which Germany virtually is cut off—aggregated 30.3 per cent.

Trade with Spain and Portugal, however, may be carried on to some extent through Italy, as long as that nation remains neutral, the report said.

With the loss of imports, the department said, Germany also lost valuable markets. Her exports to the three groups of countries from January through June were divided as follows: Belligerents, 22.9 per cent; oversea neutrals, 22.9 per cent, and European neutrals, 53.5 per cent.

The department did not explain the source of minor percentages of imports and exports not included in the total figures.

No Word to Washington.

OCT 15 1939

WASHINGTON, Oct. 14 (A. P.).—The White House reiterated today that this Government has not received any official request from Germany for mediation in the European war.

"No Nazi plea is before this Government and none has been received," said Stephen Early, a presidential secretary, when the subject was brought up. President Roosevelt had said the same at his press conference yesterday.

Mr. Early also said no reply had yet been received from President Kalinin of Soviet Russia to Mr. Roosevelt's personal message expressing the hope that nothing would occur to disturb Finland's independence and upset peace in the Baltic. The text of the message to the U. S. S. R. will not be released until after Russia has acknowledged it, he said.

Refugee Parley Opens Tuesday In White House

Inter-Governmental Committee to Plan Extension of Work Became of War

OCT 15 1939

WASHINGTON, Oct. 14 (AP).—The war will bring before President Roosevelt's international conference on refugees, opening next Tuesday, the uestion of expanding the work of assisting German political exiles so as to include other peoples scattered by the conflict.

This will be discussed at the meeting to be attended here by Lord Edward Winterton, chairman of the Intergovernmental Committee for Political Refugees; Herbert Emerson, director of the committee, and Paul van Zeeland, former Premier of Belgium.

President Roosevelt, who convoked the gathering, will preside over the first session and read an address. Subsequent meetings will be held at the State Department.

The White House meeting will consider the changed conditions in the refugee work created by the war. The refugee movement from Germany already has stopped. Germany is willing to permit old women and children to leave Germany, but no young women or men, who are needed for war work. Other countries are unwilling to receive old people and children.

Seeks Homes for Jews

Consequently, the intergovernmental [illegible] took which was started by Mr. Roosevelt and Cordell Hull, Secretary of State, last year, will content itself with finding permanent settlement for the thousands of German Jews who are located temporarily in European countries.

It is estimated there are 40,000 such refugees in Great Britain, 50,000 in France and 50,000 distributed among Belgium, Holland and Switzerland. The first effort will be to remove those from the three neutral countries.

Those in Great Britain and France are in concentration camps, but the war already has alleviated their condition in some measure because many have received employment in war industries.

In addition, there are 15,000 at Shanghai. It is hoped to settle them in the Philippine Islands. The report of a special committee, which investigated the possibilities of the Philippine Island of Mindanao, will be discussed at Mr. oosevelt's meeting. It is thought the Jews may be able to counterbalance the influence of the Japanese at Davao, who form a compact group of many thousands.

Non-Jews Need Aid

The original mandate under which the inter-governmental committee was set up in London called for assistance to erman political refugees. It was not specified thta they were to be Jewish, but at least they were to be erman, and on this understanding thirty nations agreed to concert their efforts.

Now it is thought the war will require assistance to other peoples as well. There still are 100,000 Spanish Loyalist refugees in France unable to return to the Spain of General Francisco Franco. Large groups of Poles fled into Rumania and the Baltic countries. Theer also is the case of the Polish Jews now under German rule.

With Britain and France, which had been among the most stalwart aids in refugee assistance, concentrating all their efforts on war, it is believed the burden of the refugee work from now on must be carried by neutral nations, the principal one of which is the United States. The United States quota for German immigrants, however, is exhausted for some years to come.

The men meeting in the White House constitute the executive committee of the inter-governmental work. Their conclusions cannot commit the other governments making up the inter-governmental committee; they must limit themselves to recommendations.

BRITAIN PLANS $3,000,000,000 BASE IN CANADA

To Create War Supplies Reservoir Over Here, Wall Street Hears

Negotiating With American Industrialists About Factories

OCT 15 1939

[By the Associated Press]

New York, Oct. 14—Leading Wall Street financial sources said today the British Government is planning to spend up to $3,000,000,000 to create in Canada a great industrial empire capable of supplying much of Britain's needs for a long war.

Such a plant program could make Canada a key military sphere during the war, these Wall Streeters said, and with proper financing could be converted after the war into an important part of the Western Hemisphere trade economy.

Not less than $500,000,000 is available for early use in the plan, it was said.

Negotiations Under Way

The size of the program would be determined by two factors—the effectiveness of German aircraft against Great Britain's factories, and the amount of necessary material which can be imported from the United States.

Negotiations have already been begun, they said, by representatives of the British War Supplies Commission and United States industrial concerns, including General Motors and Consolidated Aircraft.

Concurrent discussions, they said, have taken place in Washington diplomatic circles and in the financial sector here, where England and France are reported to have not less than $6,000,000,000 and possibly as much as $15,000,000,000 available resources (including commercial credits which might be limited by Congressional action).

OCT 15 1939

Factories For War Materials

The conversations with industrialists, it was said, look to the establishment in Canada of new factories, owned by Canadian-chartered subsidiaries of the United States companies to produce in order of priority what Britain's war machine needs most.

Construction of the plants, according to tentative plans, would be financed, they said, by one of the methods used by Britain here during the World War, most probably by loans from the British Government, payable out of profits over a period of years, unpaid balances cancellable upon conclusion of an earlier peace.

England was represented as being fairly well stocked with supplies and war material for a period of months but as laying plans to cover needs for a period of years, in event the war should be a long one.

Decentralization Plan

In addition to large stored stocks of needed articles, England was said to have nearly completed in Great Britain a factory decentralization plan, under which all key items are manufactured in not less than three plants, geographically separated, so that destruction of one, or even two, would not interfere vitally with the flow of production.

In addition, England was said to feel satisfied with the growing efficiency of its cargo convoy system and its completed program of decentralizing and camouflaging airports. Vulnerability to air attack of docks, Larbor equipment and ships at anchor or wharved was said to be the one immediately pressing problem.

Airplanes Her Prime Need

However, there are some things England reputedly feels unable to delay longer in procuring for the future, and leading this list is airplanes.

Establishment of British controlled but to some extent United States owned aircraft factories on Canadian soil was said to be the first goal of the British War Supplies Commission.

Members of the commission now established at Ottawa are Admiral Sir Percy Addison, Maj. Gen. R. F. Locke, J. Crone, J. B. Gordon, and A. C. Boddis. Several other members will arrive shortly from London, it was said.

The commission's representatives were reported as now urging General Motors to set up on Canadian soil across the river from Detroit large new aircraft and aircraft engine factories.

Metallurgy Second On List

Second on the urgent list was said to be metallurgy, in practically all branches, especially for treatment of semi-processed iron, steel and copper.

Next in order of priority, these Wall Street sources said, would come establishment of shell casing factories, and assembly plants for putting in the charge and propellant.

Factories for manufacturing parts of, and for assembling machine guns and rifles, and for manufacturing precision instruments for artillery and aircraft, also were said to be on the urgent list.

OCT 15 1939

Expects To Buy From U. S.

From the United States, it was said, England expects to buy through its commission at Ottawa large amounts of food, cotton, tobacco, metals and fuels.

However, the Wall Street men believed open-market purchasing in volume might not be expected until January.

Canadian manufactured munitions, it was pointed out, could be shipped entirely on Canadian soil, if necessary, over the Canadian National or Canadian Pacific lines, to St. John, New Brunswick, or Halifax, Nova Scotia, only first-class all-year ports in Canada's east (Montreal and Quebec are closed usually from the end of November to the end of April). Halifax is said to have ample volume facilities for moving all freight which could be handled by British ships in convoys.

Might Use U. S. Railroads

However, in case of accident or crowding on one or both of the single-track circuitous lines from the Great Lakes and St. Lawrence industrial districts to Halifax, Canada might be able to ship as much as she liked, under bond, over United States railways. Throughout prohibition, for example, much British liquor was shipped to western Canada in sealed Canadian freight cars from Halifax across New England and New York.

It was pointed out that while Canada hasn't great fuel-supply sources, there is ample present and potential electric power in the St. Lawrence region. Utility sources here said that existing or readily completed hydro-electric plants in eastern Canada could supply up to an additional 1,000,000 kilowatt production capacity within a fairly short time. However, it was said that six or seven years might be required to create great new production plants utilizing the St. Lawrence itself, and that Niagara Falls capacity had almost reached its practical peak without producing further disastrous ice jams.

There is no technical barrier, these sources said, to almost unlimited supply of United States generated power to regions across the border from Detroit and from Niagara Falls.

U-Boat Threat Off Maine

England, it was said, thus has the funds, the fuel (in the form of electric power) and the transportation to change fundamentally Canada's economic structure as a war measure.

Some financial sources here pointed out that such a supply plan would almost certainly tempt Germany, if able, to try submarine attacks on the British convoy system only a short distance off the Maine coast, greatly increasing the neutrality problems of the country.

Post-war considerations, however, were described as even more interesting. The course on such a post-war economy, they said, would depend largely on whether the British Empire had enough capital left at the end of the war to finance the transition.

Trade Center Of Empire

Should a great wartime industrial plant in Canada be transformed by British funds into a sound peacetime plant, they said, Canada could become a mighty industrial, financial and trade center of the British Empire, a role for which it is geographically well located, both for trade and military strategy.

One conjecture was that war's effects might even lead the British Empire to bring its Government, its King and its Parliament to Canada.

On the other hand, prevailing belief in financial circles here was that such a great development would only come in Canada in event of a long, hard war; that at the end of such a war the British Empire would not have the capital with which to finance the change to efficient peacetime economy; that in consequence, it could only be financed with United States money.

White House Plans Reception For Diplomats Despite War

All Five Traditional State Dinners, However, Omitted From Winter Social Program

[By the Associated Press]

OCT 15 1939

Washington, Oct. 14—President and Mrs. Roosevelt intend to hold their usual December reception for the diplomatic corps, despite the war abroad, but have omitted all five traditional state dinners from their winter social program.

Announcement of the schedule by the White House tonight was preceded by an explanation from Mrs. Roosevelt that the President's work just now was too heavy to permit all the usual entertainments. Washington hostesses await the White House dates before making any other plans.

Those Dinners Dropped

The dinners dropped from the program include one for the diplomats and those honoring the Cabinet, the Vice-President, the Chief Justice and the Supreme Court, and the Speaker of the House. There usually are about ninety guests at each.

Sure to be pleased by the program is Vice-President Garner, whose dislike for formal attire—he calls it a "monkey suit"—is well known. He's been trying to get the dinners that he and the President give each other called off for years. One year he succeeded, but only once.

The sharp curtailment of White House functions is a different approach from that of World War times to the delicate problems involved in social entertaining during a European war.

In the Wilson Administration the diplomatic reception was canceled and two separate diplomatic dinners were given. Other White House dinners and receptions were scheduled as usual until the spring of 1917 when the army and navy reception was canceled. All White House entertaining was suspended when the United States entered the war.

This winter marks the first sharp curtailment of entertainment at the Executive Mansion since that time.

There had been speculation for some weeks that the diplomatic dinner and reception might be canceled because of the problems involved in entertaining envoys from warring countries at the same time.

Need Not Meet Face To Face

Decision to give the reception makes it possible to entertain the diplomats at a party so large that they need not meet face to face. The entire staffs of embassies and legations are invited with their wives.

Dates announced for the five White House receptions are as follows: December 14, diplomatic; January 4, judicial; January 11, congressional; January 18, officials of the Treasury, Postoffice, Interior, Agriculture, Commerce and Labor departments and Federal agencies, and February 1, army and navy.

PRESIDENT FORMS POWER COMMITTEE

OCT 15 1939

New Merged Group To Study Needs Of Nation In Peace And War

Ickes Named Chairman Of Policy-Forming And Advisory Body

[By the Associated Press]

OCT 15 1939

Washington, Oct. 14—Consolidation of two Government power committees for the purpose of developing a national power policy based on national defense and peacetime needs was announced today by President Roosevelt.

The merger involved transferring of the work of the National Defense Power Committee, of which Louis Johnson, Assistant Secretary of War, has been chairman, to the National Power Policy Committee, headed by Harold L. Ickes, Secretary of the Interior.

Members Listed

The newly constituted committee will be made up as follows:

Secretary Ickes, chairman; Louis Johnson, Leland Olds, Federal Power Commission; Jerome N. Frank, Securities Commission; John Carmody, Federal Works Administrator; Harry Slattery, Rural Electrification Administrator; David E. Lilienthal, Tennessee Valley Authority, and Paul J. Raver, Bonneville Project Administrator, as members.

Outlining his policy in letters to Ickes and Johnson, the President said in part:

OCT 15 1939

"The National Power Policy Committee shall devote itself to the development of a national power policy in the interest of national defense as well as peace-time needs. It shall consider power problems common to the several departments and agencies represented on the committee, with a view to the coordinated development of a consistent Federal power policy.

Advisory Body

"It shall deal with matters of cooperation between the public and private agencies supplying electric power. It shall advise me in matters of national power policy.

"The National Defense Power Committee has completed the major part of its work of estimating the probable power needs of the nation in peace and in war. The National Power Policy Committee should be in a position, therefore, to give its first attention to the immediate concrete steps necessary to assure the meeting of these needs."

Cattle Import Quota Allows 40,346 Head

OCT 15 1939

Commissioner Of Customs Estimates Number Permitted Under Canadian Agreement

Washington, Oct. 14 (AP)—The Commissioner of Customs announced today that an estimated 40,346 head of cattle might be brought into the United States at the reduced rate under the quota limitations of the trade agreement with Canada for the final three months of the year.

The agreement limits imports of cattle weighing 700 pounds or more, not including dairy cows, to 225,000 a year at the reduced rate and not more than 60,000 in any quarter.

A Presidential proclamation in February fixed the quota for the last eight months of the year at 142,230.

During the past two quarters, imports have totaled 101,884, leaving 40,346 for the last quarter, subject to revision.

HOLLAND KEEPS RIGID WATCH ON NEUTRALITY

SEES MOST DANGER IN HEAVY FIGHTING AROUND MAGINOT
AND SIEGFRIED LINES (560)

--

BY THOMAS F.HAWKINS

(ADVANCE)...AMSTERDAM, THE NETHERLANDS-(CORRESPONDENCE OF THE ASSOCIATED PRESS)-A SLIGHT AND BENT WOMAN OF 43, THE HOTEL MAID PATTED A PERIOD TO HER CLEANING UPON THE PILLOW, WATCHED FOR A SECOND THE CLICKING TYPEWRITER AND BROKE IN HESITANTLY TO ASK:

"WILL GORLOG (WAR) COME HOLLAND?"

THE QUESTION IN BROKEN ENGLISH MIXED WITH DUTCH IS ONE IN THE MINDS OF MANY WHO LIVE IN HOLLAND.

THE ANSWER WHICH THE NETHERLANDS GOVERNMENT IS EMPHASIZING WITH REPEATED DECLARATIONS OF NEUTRALITY, AND WITH 450,000 MEN IN ARMS TO ENFORCE THAT NEUTRALITY, IS "NO."

THE DANGERS AND DIFFICULTIES WHICH DUTCHMEN ACKNOWLEDGE ARE FLOATING MINES IN THE TREACHEROUS NORTH SEA HAMPERING COMMERCE, OPEN BORDERS IN CONTRAST TO THE SIEGFRIED AND MAGINOT FORTIFICATIONS OF GERMANY, BELGIUM AND FRANCE, AND TRESPASSING IN THE AIR BY FOREIGN WARPLANES.

THE WAITER, POURING COFFEE AT ONE OF AMSTERDAM'S POPULAR SIDEWALK CAFES, PUT IT THIS WAY:

"WE DON'T WANT TO FIGHT ANYBODY. WE WON'T FIGHT ANYBODY UNLESS WE ARE ATTACKED. BUT WE DON'T WANT FOREIGN PLANES OR SOLDIERS CROSSING OUR TERRITORY. WE WANT TO GO RIGHT ON WITH OUR TRADE AND COMMERCE AS WE DID IN THE LAST WAR--BUT IT IS DIFFICULT."

FURTHER THAN THAT NO DUTCHMAN WILL GO.

TO THE QUESTION WITH WHOM MIGHT HOLLAND FIGHT, IF WAR DOES COME, THE ANSWER IS A SHRUG OF THE SHOULDERS AND THE TERSE SENTENCE:

"WE ARE NEUTRAL."

THE NEUTRALITY IS, PERHAPS, THE STRICTEST OF ANY EUROPEAN NATION.

HOLLAND HAS NO ALLIANCE OF MILITARY CHARACTER, NOT EVEN WITH NEIGHBORING BELGIUM ALTHOUGH THE TWO GOVERNMENTS ARE IN FREQUENT CONSULTATION ON MUTUAL PROBLEMS THRUST UPON THEM BY EUROPE'S WAR.

HER NEUTRALITY AND INDEPENDENCE ARE GUARANTEED BY NO OTHER NATION.

OCT 16 1939

HOLLAND, EVEN IF INVADED, RETAINS INDEPENDENTLY THE RIGHT TO JUDGE THE CIRCUMSTANCES, TO ACCEPT OR TO REJECT ANY PROFFERED HELP FROM ANY NATION. SHE HAS REFUSED IN THE PAST A GERMAN OFFER TO GUARANTEE DUTCH TERRITORIALITY, HOLDING THAT THIS COULD NOT BE THE SUBJECT OF NEGOTIATION OR OF TREATIES WHICH, IF DENOUNCED, COULD CREATE A CRITICAL SITUATION.

WITH THE START OF THE WAR SEPT. 1, THE NETHERLANDS GOVERNMENT SIMPLY NOTIFIED ALL NATIONS OF DUTCH NEUTRALITY, ACCEPTED THEIR FAVORABLE RESPONSES, ESTABLISHED A SHARP WATCH FOR VIOLATIONS AND KEPT ON, AS NEARLY AS POSSIBLE, WITH A NORMAL NATIONAL LIFE.

THE FIRST VIOLATION OF THE FRONTIER, HOWEVER, CAME QUICKLY--THE NIGHT OF SEPT. 3, THE DAY ON WHICH BRITAIN AND FRANCE DECLARED WAR ON GERMANY. A FOREIGN PLANE CROSSED WESTERN HOLLAND. THE GOVERNMENT

SENT REMINDERS TO GREAT BRITAIN AND GERMANY. IN THE NEXT TWO WEEKS, AMSTERDAM ANTI-AIRCRAFT GUNS FIRED ON ANOTHER PLANE, A GERMAN PLANE SHOT DOWN A DUTCH PLANE, AND THE DUTCH CAPTURED A GERMAN PLANE. A NAVAL MINESWEEPER EXPLODED ON A MINE, IDENTIFIED, HOWEVER, AS DUTCH LAID, WITH THE LOSS OF 30 LIVES.

THE GOVERNMENT MADE BUT BRIEF STATEMENTS ON EACH INCIDENT AND NONE WAS PERMITTED TO BECOME THE CAUSE OF A BREACH WITH NATIONS CONCERNED. QUEEN WILHELMINA, OPENING PARLIAMENT SEPT. 19, SPOKE OF FRIENDLY RELATIONS WITH ALL POWERS AND RESTATED THE POLICY OF NEUTRALITY.

SHE DID REFER, HOWEVER, TO THE DIFFICULTIES THRUST UPON COMMERCE AND INDUSTRY BY THE WAR.

THE COST OF MOBILIZING FROM A NORMAL ARMY OF 30,000 TO ABOUT 450,000 WILL REQUIRE NEW TAXES ON INCOMES STARTING NEXT YEAR. THEY ALREADY RANGE FROM TWO TO SEVENTY PER CENT.

OCT 16 1939

FISHERMEN--AND HOLLAND HAS MANY AMONG HER 8,000,000 POPULATION--NO LONGER MAY GO BEYOND THE THREE-MILE LIMIT FOR THEIR CATCH BECAUSE OF THE DANGER OF MINES.

OCT 16 1939

PASSENGER AND FREIGHT TRANSPORT HAS BECOME SLOW, UNCERTAIN, EXPENSIVE--AND THE DUTCH ARE A TRADING, SEA-FARING NATION.

KLM AIRLINE DISCONTINUED REGULAR SERVICE TO FRANCE AND ENGLAND BECAUSE PERMISSION CANNOT BE OBTAINED TO LAND THERE. TO KEEP OPEN A ROUTE TO THE DUTCH EAST INDIES, AN ARRANGEMENT WAS MADE WITH ITALY FOR TRAIN SERVICE TO NAPLES WHENCE THE KLM LINERS START. SERVICE CONTINUES TO THE SCANDINAVIAN COUNTRIES, AT 40 TO 60 PER CENT HIGHER RATES.

HOLLAND-AMERIKA AND THE NEDERLANDS LINES PROVIDE SERVICE TO THE UNITED STATES IRREGULARLY, ALSO AT 40 TO 60 PER CENT INCREASES IN RATES. ONE REASON HAS BEEN DEMANDS OF THE CREW FOR MORE WAR-RISK PAY. BOTH THE VOLLANDAN AND NIEUW AMSTERDAM WERE HELD UP BY SUCH A DISPUTE IN SEPTEMBER, ALTHOUGH EACH LINER HAD A CAPACITY BOOKING--MOSTLY OF AMERICANS WHOSE VACATIONS WERE DISRUPTED BY THE WAR.

DESPITE THIS, THE AMSTERDAM STOCK EXCHANGE HAS DONE A THRIVING BUSINESS IN SHIPPING SHARES. DUTCH BUSINESS MEN FIGURE ON BIG PROFITS FROM SHIPPING FOR A NEUTRAL, EVEN IF THE RISK BE GREAT.

THE WAR NEXT DOOR, ASIDE FROM ITS ECONOMIC EFFECT, HAS TOUCHED THE LIVES OF DUTCH CITIZENS IN MANY WAYS.

BICYCLES ARE HARD TO RENT IN SMALL TOWNS AND EXPENSIVE TO BUY--THE ARMY TOOK OVER MANY OF THEM PAYING "GOOD PRICES." MOST DUTCHMEN OWN THEIR OWN, ANYWAY--WITH SEATS BUILT ON FOR THE KIDDIES, FREQUENTLY IN TANDEM STYLE FOR MOTHERS AND FATHERS. HOLLAND COLLECTS A TAX OF AROUND $2,000,000 ANNUALLY ON THE "WHEELS."

OCT 16 1939

ONE FAMILY OF TWO MAY BUY A POUND OF SUGAR A WEEK. ONE MUST SIGN AT THE STORE FOR SOAP. FOOD CARDS HAVE BEEN ISSUED BUT THERE IS NO RATIONING--ONLY AN ANTI-HOARDING REGULATION, THAT ONE MAY BUY ONLY A WEEK'S SUPPLY AT A TIME OF FOOD. THERE HAS BEEN SOME SAND-BAGGING OF BUILDINGS AND AN AIR RAIDS PRECAUTION CORPS HAS BEEN ORGANIZED. THE SIDEWALK CAFES ARE FILLED WITH SOLDIERS, WHO SEEM TO BE HAVING A JOLLY TIME AND NOT MINDING THE MOBILIZATION A BIT. STUDENT AND COMMUNITY GROUPS IN MANY CASES ARE DOING REGULAR JOBS OF THE SOLDIERS, WHO COLLECT THEIR PAY AS IN NORMAL TIMES.

HOTELS ARE HARD HIT--ONE WITH 250 ROOMS, NORMALLY FILLED BY TOURISTS IN SUMMER AND FALL, HAD 14 GUESTS DURING ONE WEEK IN SEPTEMBER. THE CANAL, BUS AND TAXI TOUR CONDUCTORS FEEL THE PINCH AS WELL.

A MAJOR CONCERN IS EXPRESSED IN THE DAILY QUESTION: "WHAT NEWS OF THE WESTERN FRONT?" A GREAT OFFENSIVE THERE MAY BRING THE WAR WITHIN EAR SHOT OF HOLLAND. THE DANGER OF FRONTIER INCIDENTS WOULD INCREASE, ONE DUTCHMAN EXPLAINED, ESPECIALLY IF FIGHTING LEFT THE SIEGFRIED AND MAGINOT LINES AND AN EFFORT WERE MADE TO GET AROUND THEM. SOVIET-BULGARIAN SPLIT OF RUMANIA IS REPORTED REJECTED BY SARACOGLU

Two Other Demands Declared Turned Down. Moscow Told Turkey Would Help Allies If Italy Joins Germany—Tension Mounts

OCT 16 1939

(By the Associated Press)

Istanbul, Oct. 15—Turkey has taken precautionary measures, it became known tonight, following receipt of reports of the massing of Soviet Russian troops in the Caucasus on the Turkish and Iranian (Persian) frontier.

The Turkish action was taken as the Russian-Turkish talks in Moscow, under way for several weeks, apparently reached a deadlock.

The Turkish fleet was at anchor tonight at Chanak, in the Dardanelles Straits between the Mediterranean and Black seas.

Mobilization Directors Meet

The newspaper Journal d'Orient said that a meeting of Turkish mobilization directors had been held late this week.

The newspaper Republique stated that "feverish preparations" were taking place at Izmir, in the Dardanelles, for anti-aircraft exercises. The Dardanelles, controlling the Black Sea's outlet to the Ægean and Mediterranean seas, are fortified by Turkey.

Four spies were sentenced to five years in prison near Izmir, presumably for seeking details of the powerful Dardanelles defenses.

Meanwhile, Turkish military leaders watched Bulgaria, where an estimated 450,000 men have been called up for October 20.

OCT 16 1939

Three Russ Demands Rejected

Turkey's Foreign Minister, Sukru Saracoglu, it was learned on good authority, flatly refused three Russian demands on his nation. He is head of the Turkish delegation in Moscow.

The Soviets were said to have asked Turkish recognition for the partition of Poland, formation of a neutral Balkan bloc under Russian-German sponsorship, and virtual partition of Rumania for the benefit of Russia and Bulgaria.

Saracoglu was said to have agreed only to the maintenance of Turkish neutrality in the case France and Britain should fight Russia.

Would Fight With Allies, If—

Saracoglu was reported to have made it plain Turkey would fight with the Allies if Italy joined Germany.

He flatly refused to be an accomplice to the proposed splitting up of Rumania and reminded the Kremlin chiefs that Turkey could mobilize nearly 2,000,000 men, it was said.

Russian troop concentrations which were reported in the Caucasus not only would threaten Turkey but also the rich Iraq oil fields, now one of Great Britain's main sources of supply.

Under a treaty among Turkey, Iran, Iraq and Afghanistan, a threat of aggression against one of these powers would oblige the others to consider aid.

Bessarabia Believed Next

Some political circles here said they believed the Soviets would turn their attention to recovering Bessarabia from Rumania as soon as their demands on Finland were settled. Before the World War Bessarabia, rich in oil, was a part of Russia.

Russia recently assured Rumania that she would make no demands on Rumania.

A coincidence between the calling up of the Bulgarian reservists and the return from Moscow of Colonel Boideff, chief of the Bulgarian Air Force, was noted here.

Turks On Bulgarian Frontier

It was pointed out also that Turkey, an ally of Rumania as well as of Greece and Yugoslavia in the Balkan entente, still has many troops on the Bulgarian frontier.

It was reliably reported here that Rumanian troops withdrawn from the Hungarian frontier following a recent agreement with the Budapest Government are being moved hastily to Rumania's borders with Russia.

OCT 16 1939

Soldiery Throng Streets

HELSINGFORS, Oct. 15 (AP).—Finland prepared for any eventuality tonight as its bargaining delegation to a "political-economic" conference to the Kremlin traveled homeward. Many here believed the delegation would not return to Soviet Russia.

A foreign office spokesman said the Soviet Commissariat of Foreign Affairs had explained satisfactorily why no Russian diplomat was at the Moscow station early today to say farewell to the delegation headed by Dr. Paasikivi. The spokesman said the incident "had no importance."

The government still held details of the negotiations in deepest secrecy.

Meanwhile, many army officers took quarters in hotels, and soldiers bearing rifles appeared in streets in increasing numbers. All strategic bridges and buildings were guarded. Reserves in Helsingfors and this district were being mustered and many restaurants were devoting half their space to giving them provisions. The sale of liquor in any form was banned indefinitely.

Signs are to go up in every Helsingfors apartment tomorrow telling what should be done in case flight from the city is necessary. Almost 100,000 persons already have left the city voluntarily.

"We are preparing for everything," a spokesman said, maintaining, nevertheless, there still was hope of settling Finland's differences with Russia.

Women and children left a strip of Finnish soil north of Leningrad between Lake Lagoda and the Gulf of Finland, fleeing into the interior.

It was announced that an unnamed Argentine importer had sent a contribution of 120,000 Finnish marks (about $2,400) for the benefit of the Finnish Civic Guard, an organization of 100,000 youths who are to be called for military duty in a time of emergency.

Despite these military preparations, Sulo Kolkka, chief of the press bureau of the Olympic games, said preparations were going ahead for the classic in 1940. He said forty-seven nations had accepted invitations for the games and not one had canceled its plans. "Just as we intend to hold onto our independence so we intend so long as we have got them to keep the Olympics," Kolkka declared.

Foreign Circles Expect Russ-Finn Compromise

By WITT HANCOCK
Associated Press Correspondent

Moscow, Oct. 15—Dr. Juho Kusti Paasikivi, Finnish emissary, rushed homeward by special train tonight with Soviet Russia's demands upon his Government and Moscow expected he would be back within five days with his instructions.

OCT 16 1939

Three smaller Baltic nations had preceded Finland in negotiations in the Kremlin and given up concessions extending Soviet power to the west.

But most foreign circles here expected a compromise would result from the Finnish-Russian conference by which Finland would make some concessions but refuse to go the whole way with the Soviet program.

Obdurate On Aalands

There were unofficial reports the Finns were prepared to grant certain islands in the Gulf of Finland to Soviet Russia for naval bases, but were obdurate on the question of a military alliance and the Aaland Islands, in which Sweden is interested deeply.

It was considered possible Dr. Paasikivi might not return until after the conference of the Kings of Sweden, Norway and Denmark and the President of Finland, to open Wednesday in Stockholm.

The heads of the four states were expected to give an expression of their nation's solidarity and desire for neutrality.

Spotlight Switches To Turks

Dr. Paasikivi's departure left the diplomatic spotlight concentrated upon he Turkish delegation, headed by Foreign Minister Sukru Saracoglu, which was reported to have reached—or virtually reached—an agreement on questions concerning the Black Sea and the Dardanelles as well as Turkish-Russian relations in regard to the European war.

The delegation said, however, it had no appointment at the Kremlin tonight.

Joseph Stalin was understood to have taken part in conferences yesterday with Dr. Paasikivi and Soviet Premier-Foreign Commissar Vyacheslaff Molotoff.

No Soviet Official At Station

The Finn, accompanied by the Finnish Minister to Moscow, left Moscow at 12.30 A. M. today. The envoys of all the Scandinavian states went to the train to say farewell, but there were no Soviet officials at the station except police.

A special train was used from Leningrad, since the regular Helsinki trains were not leaving until tonight.

Meanwhile, in addition to the Turkish delegation, there is a German trade delegation here still negotiating for raw materials.

Overtures To Hungary

At the same time, since Russian and Hungary have a common frontier because of the partition of Poland, the Russian press has been emphasizing the desire for friendly relations with the Hungarians.

Tass, official news agency, yesterday announced the arrival of a Hungarian mission headed by Dr. Charles Kristoffy but failed to disclose its purpose.

Foreign circles speculated upon Russian aims in the Balkans when she had consolidated her new position in the north.

Unofficial German quarters acknowledged that Germany had given up any economic or military rivalry with Soviet Russia in the Baltic, but there was a widespread belief no such free hand would be given in the Balkans.

One of the great questions for the future, observers contended, would revolve around Rumania, which has oil Germany values and land—Bessarabia—which belonged to Russia before the World War.

NAZI GUNS FELL GERMAN PLANE OVER BERLIN

Lost Airman Flying High Over City Mistaken For Enemy Raider

Pilot Bails Out To Safety As Anti-Aircraft Batteries Open Fire

OCT 16 1939

By MELVIN K. WHITELEATHER
Associated Press Correspondent

Berlin, Oct. 15—An official statement today reported Berlin's anti-aircraft batteries had brought down a lost German plane which was mistaken last night for a "foreign" raider.

The aviator, who lost his way in heavy clouds over the capital, parachuted to safety when anti-aircraft guns opened fire that roused Berliners and led to belief that the first air raid of the war was in progress.

The announcement explained it was impossible to establish the plane's exact identity because of poor visibility.

Fire Kept Up Nearly Hour

A communique of the army high command had been vague about the incident earlier. An official statement last night said that the "unidentified plane" was flying so high it could be detected only through the sound of its motors.

High-powered searchlights swept the sky and batteries girdling the capital fired for almost an hour after the alarm was given.

The German high command communique mentioned the incident, but gave no details. It did, however, leave the impression there might have been more than one plane.

"In the night of October 14-15 sounds of motors over North German territory caused our anti-aircraft to go into action in some places," said the communique. The reference to "sounds of motors" may have meant one or more planes.

No Air-Raid Alarm Sounded

There was no air-raid alarm, so Berlin's inhabitants rushed to the streets to find out what was happening when the sounds of firing and explosions became clearly audible in the center of the city.

Two Berlin radio stations suddenly broke off their broadcasts when the anti-aircraft firing was heard. Apparently they remained silent to prevent their radio signals from being used as a possible direction finder by the foreign aircraft.

Otherwise, military activity was at a minimum.

The army high command said another enemy plane—whether British or French was not stated—had been shot down October 13 near Birkenfeld, in the Baden region of western Germany.

"In the east," the communique stated, "there is nothing special to report.

"In the west, there was artillery fire designed to annoy. It was answered from our side."

ONLY ORDINARY ACTIVITY IS SEEN, HOWEVER

German Prisoners Reported Taken As Poilus Lay Ambushes

Fog And Rain Holding Up Operations — British Filter Into Lines

OCT 16 1939

By HENRY C. CASSIDY
Associated Press Correspondent

Paris, Oct. 15—The French army high command today sent out scouting forces all along the Western front to keep watch for a German offensive.

The general staff made one of its rare mentions of reconnaissance work in the morning communique, indicating that extraordinary importance was attached to it, but the scouts reported only ordinary military activity by the opposing lines.

The night communique was interpreted in military circles in Paris to mean that the French had succeeded in taking a few prisoners who might give indications concerning any German offensive that is being planned.

Ambushes Laid

The communique said ambushes laid by the French to snare German patrols "obtained sought-after results."

Fog and rain, however, held down activity all along the front. Dispatches from the frontier province of Lorraine, through which runs the Maginot Line, said the Meuse, Mouzan and Saonelle rivers had overflown their banks and flooded the countryside, hampering communications. The same situation on the southern flank, near the Swiss border, was reported in dispatches yesterday.

On the Rhine, were the French have blown up three of five railway bridges leading into Germany, all was quiet. In the sector between the Rhine and Moselle rivers there were patrol actions which have become customary and in the Saar region artillery duels were reported.

Operations Started

British troops and artillery were said to have started operations at the side of the French in the Saar area.

Of the 158,000 British who have landed in France, about 30,000 have joined the French at the front, it was reported, and more were moving up steadily.

Published French reports said the British have been taking over some patrol work for the last several days, while British guns were firing with the French.

There still was no indication, however, that the British Expeditionary Force had come into combat contact with the Germans.

Nazis Become A Joke

The passivity of the German forces became a joking matter for the French.

One report from the front said German troops in the Moselle Valley put up a sign, "Don't shoot and we won't shoot." French soldiers promptly raised their own notice, "Post no bills."

The French command nevertheless continued to take seriously the possibility of a German general offensive following the refusals of Premier Daladier and Prime Minister Chamberlain to yield to Hitler's "peace offensive."

Where Scouting Centers

French scouting centered especially in the Bien Forest, along the valley of the Lauter river at the mid-way point in the front, where the lines bend west from the Rhine toward the Moselle.

There heavily wooded hills covering the frontier for almost ten miles could serve as a screen for German troop concentrations in the Palatinate.

A general commanding one of the French armies in contact with the Germans on the Western front was quoted by a special war correspondent for Le Temps as saying: "This war is one of patience."

The general, the correspondent said, explained to him:

"We are temporizing. It is necessary for the public as well as for our soldiers to understand this. Every hour that passes works for us."

"War Only Just Begun"

The correspondent said the general, who was not named, asked him to "explain clearly to the public that war has only just begun and it is necessary to have patience, lots of patience."

The correspondent quoted the officer as saying while French mobilization was being completed contact had been made with the enemy in enemy territory and "these few weeks have been well employed.

"Losses were at a minimum. . . .

"The advance was made with very strong support of tanks and artillery. Germans have blown up everything they could and held up our progress by cutting rear guard action."

The officer said scarcely no material had been used and "we are so solidly fortified that the enemy has spent masses of men and material only to try to attack us."

"How could they drive us from the Maginot Line?" he asked, "Some offensives in our time are suicide."

French Villages Turned Into 'England' by R.A.F.

'Fully Licensed' Signs Make Cafes Look Like Pubs

WITH THE ROYAL AIR FORCE SOMEWHERE IN FRANCE, Oct. 15 (AP) (Passed by R. A. F. Censor).—Little bits of England are brightening up villages in eastern France for the Royal Air Force.

Village cafes have been turned into pubs, complete with "fully licensed" signs and dart boards. Barns have become clubs and mess halls.

One officers' mess is decorated with signs brought from rural England setting out the familiar licensing laws—ignored with pleasure here.

Aircraft men stage nightly concerts at the principal pub and resounding voices "Hang Up the Washing on the Siegfried Line" to the twang of an old banjo.

Pictures done by artists of the unit include one of Winston Churchill with a cigar in his mouth, gazing down from a well scrubbed wall. English signs adorn the tiny streets.

Among the new trees being pulled down for a new airfield are shattered stumps left twenty-five years ago when this sector was devastated in the World War.

Now and then a spade strikes something that gives a metallic ring. The digger stoops and picks up a battered helmet, pauses to examine it and then plunges his spade into the earth again—getting on with the war of today.

Soviet Delay in Naming Envoy Worries Budapest

Hungary's Press Is Silent on Mission Now in Moscow

BUDAPEST, Oct. 15 (AP).—Failure of Soviet Russia to name a new diplomatic envoy to Hungary, although Dr. Charles Kristoffy, new Hungarian Minister, has arrived in Moscow, caused a feeling of uneasiness in political circles here tonight.

(In Moscow, the Russian press emphasized the desire for friendly relations with Hungary, since the two countries have a common frontier, now that Poland has been divided. Tass, official Russian news agency, yesterday announced the arrival of a Hungarian mission, but did not disclose its purpose.)

The Hungarian press has made no mention of the arrival of the Budapest mission in Moscow, continuing its complete reserve on the restoration of diplomatic relations with the Soviet. This silence was regarded in some circles as possibly caused by the fact no Soviet envoy had been named. Hungary's traditional anti-Communist attitude also was taken to be a factor. Although Russia closed its Budapest Legation soon after Hungary signed the anti-Comintern pact and Hungary recalled its Moscow Minister, neither country went so far as to break off relations.

LINDBERGH SCORED BY PRESS IN LONDON

Hitler's Medal Has Gone to Colonel's Head, Declares The Sunday Express

ATTACKED ON RADIO TALK

Flier 'Returns Our Hospitality With Sneers,' Says Sunday Pictorial Columnist

OCT 16 1939

LONDON, Oct. 16 (AP).—Sections of the London press assailed Colonel Charles A. Lindbergh today for "apparently developing the Hitler mind" and for "puerile attempts to split our empire."

The attacks were focused on his assertion in a broadcast Friday night in Washington that "sooner or later we (in the United States) must demand the freedom of this continent and its surrounding islands from the dictates of European power."

"Hitler's medal goes to Lindbergh's head," read the headline over the following front-page editorial criticism in The Sunday Express:

"Colonel Lindbergh, honored and decorated visitor of Hitler's, fervent admirer of Nazi strength, is now apparently developing the Hitler mind.

"He declares that Canada has no right to go to war unless with the permission of the United States."

[Colonel Lindbergh on Oct. 18, 1938, in Berlin received the Order of the German Eagle, one of Germany's highest decorations.]

Peter Wilson, columnist of the Sunday Pictorial, prefaced a long, critical review of Lindbergh's career with the words:

"American troublemaker number one has been shooting off his mouth again."

Calls Colonel a 'Busybody'

"This international busybody took it upon himself to challenge Canada's entry into the fight," he stated.

Describing "the history of Lindbergh" as "an interesting if somewhat unpleasant document," he wrote of the flier's visits to Germany and Soviet Russia and said that "the gross Goering (Field Marshall Hermann Wilhelm Goering) invited him as the guest of honor to a very private luncheon party."

He recalled Lindbergh's acceptance of the German decoration in 1938 and added:

"A lot of people thought it should have been a double-cross."

Mr. Wilson then attacked the broadcast, saying:

"I imagine that millions of other 'free-born' Americans must have switched off their radios with the feeling that 'Lindbergh, the Nazi pet,' is not very well qualified to talk about democracy.

"In this country at least we shall know what to think of a man who returns our hospitality with cheap sneers at our fighting qualities and puerile attempts to split our empire."

"And knowing Americans as I do," Mr. Wilson said, "I think they will know what to do with his speech too."

[The Lindberghs left the United States in December, 1935, and arrived in England on the last day of the year. They remained there for two and one-half years and then made their home on a French island, returning to the United States last April.]

Italy to Resume Tunisia Flights

TUNIS, Tunisia, Oct. 15 (AP).—The Italian aviation company, Ala Littoria, announced today that it would resume regular service tomorrow between Italy and Tunisia, after a stoppage due to the war.

MOSLEY AGAIN CRITICAL

British Fascist Wants New Group to Decide War Issues

LONDON, Oct. 15 (AP).—Oswald Mosley, leader of the British Union of Fascists, told a meeting tonight that "the people alone" had the right to decide the issues of peace or war and said it should not be left to "a handful of parliamentarians elected four or five years ago on totally different issues."

The International Labor party's executive committee issued a statement saying that the working class movement could stop the war "without creating a peace which would represent a triumph for aggression" by a unified international demand for a peace conference of belligerents and neutrals, including the United States.

Mussolini Discusses Way To Strengthen Artillery

Holds Two-Hour Conference With Three Generals

ROME, Oct. 15 (AP).—Premier Benito Mussolini and three generals discussed today an augmenting of the efficiency of Italy's artillery. A two-hour conference was held, during which, it was announced, Il Duce gave instructions for meeting the most urgent requirements of the artillery forces.

Those who conferred with him were Gen. Alberto Pariani, Under Secretary of War and chief of staff of the army; Gen. Basso, director general of artillery, and Gen. Saracino, director of the artillery technical service.

REX ARRIVES; WAS STOPPED BY 2 CRUISERS

Italian Liner With 871 Americans Was Halted In Mediterranean

OCT 16 1939

[By the Associated Press]

New York, Oct. 15—The Italian liner Rex, stopped twice in the Mediterranean for inspection by British and French cruisers, arrived today after an otherwise uneventful crossing with 1,769 passengers including 871 Americans and 400 German citizens.

Capt. Attilio Frugone denied his ship had been stopped but the purser gave details of the examinations, adding "both the French and the British were very nice."

30.24-4079

Aboard were four Japanese army officers who had gone to Germany for the Nürnberg Nazi Congress, which was canceled. They included Gen. Hisaichi Terauchi, commander of the Japanese forces in North China in 1937-38 and War Minister in the Cabinet in 1936-37, and whose father was Premier in 1919. The four spent two days inspecting Germany's West Wall fortifications.

Singers On Board

Also aboard were Herbert Janssen, Metropolitan Opera baritone, and his wife; Karin Branzell, Metropolitan contralto, and her husband; Wladyslaw Kiepura, young brother of Jan Kiepura, Metropolitan singer and himself a tenor, come to the United States to pursue his career.

Dr. Hamilton Rice, founder of the Institute of Geographical Exploration at Harvard University, came home after spending the summer in Spain.

In Paris Both Times

He said he was in Paris the day war was declared in 1914; and that he reached Paris this year on September 3, the day the present war was declared.

"There was a marked contrast," he said. "In 1914 people sang and danced in the street—but this time the streets were blacked out and there was absolute silence."

Liner Leaves For N. Y. With 1,200 Americans

Rotterdam, Oct. 15 (AP)—The Netherlands liner Rotterdam sailed early today for New York with almost 1,200 Americans who had been stranded in Europe by war conditions.

Most of the passengers were women and children, who were given priority in obtaining ship accommodations.

The liner Staatendam is scheduled to leave October 22 with about 900 American passengers.

Belgian Police Arrest Communist Paper Editor

Act In Search For Source Of Propaganda Aimed To Demoralize Army

Brussels, Oct. 15 (AP)—Belgian police announced today the arrest of Felix Cocen, described as a member of a Communist paper editorial board.

Judicial authorities said the arrest followed searches for the source of a "disquieting" form of Communist propaganda which "seems inspired from outside Belgium and which is attempting to demoralize the army."

Reports here said several members of the French Communist Party had fled to Belgium.

11 Red Warships at Tallinn

COPENHAGEN, Oct. 15 (AP).—A dispatch from Tallinn, published by the D. N. B., German official news agency, said today that the Soviet Russian flagship of the Baltic fleet, October Revolution, had arrived at the Estonian port with ten other Red warships on an "official visit." Commander-in-Chief Tributs was on board.

Leader Appeals to Croats To End Political Killings

By The Associated Press.

ZAGREB, Yugoslavia, Oct. 15.—Vice Premier Vladimir Matchek, leader of the Croat minority, today appealed to his followers to end a wave of political assassinations that has taken at least twelve lives since the Croats received autonomy last August.

Most of the victims have been police officials. Some were Serbs and others were Croats who cooperated with the Serbs.

"It is comprehensible," M. Matchek said in his appeal, "that Croats hate the enemies who fought them during the dictatorship, but now that self-administration has been established, this can only be harmful to Croatia."

The Croat press said that the killings were inspired by "enemies of Croatia" in an attempt to prove the 5,000,000 Croats were unable to govern themselves.

As a result of the attacks on Croats who "played the Serb game," Belgrade has 200 Croat refugees who fled, fearing violence from their own people.

Royal Oak Toll Put at 786, With 414 Survivors

18 Added to List of Saved; Britain Looks to Churchill to Tell 'How' of Sinking

By The Associated Press

LONDON, Oct. 15.—An official announcement listed today 414 survivors of the 29,150-ton British battleship Royal Oak, sent to the bottom yesterday by German submarine action, and said the chances were "remote" that any of the other 786 men aboard the warship would be found alive.

The announcement said: "The secretary of the Admiralty regrets to state that the possibility of there being further survivors must now be regarded as remote." The names of eighteen additional survivors were issued with the announcement. Previously 396 of the 1,200 officers and men on the warship had been reported rescued.

The nation, eager for information on how submarines sank the Royal Oak, which herself sank four German ships during the World War Battle of Jutland, looked to Winston Churchill, First Lord of the Admiralty, for a report in the House of Commons, where he is scheduled to make his weekly report on Tuesday.

The Admiralty, meanwhile, issued a communique designed to discredit German suggestions that Great Britain's newest aircraft carrier, the Ark Royal, had been sunk or damaged.

"Since Sept. 26 German broadcasting stations have continuously claimed that H. M. S. Ark Royal has been sunk," said the communique. "In order to allay any possible doubt which might be caused by this untrue statement, the Admiralty desires once more to reaffirm the fact that H. M. S. Ark Royal has not been sunk nor has she been damaged in any way."

While charging off loss of the Royal Oak to one of the ill "fortunes of war," the Admiralty pressed its campaign against submarines, of which it declared three had been sunk on Friday.

Britain's warship construction program is on a war-time footing, and, though nine battleships are reported on the ways, the Admiralty refused to divulge any details as to the stage of construction or the possibilities of launching, in the belief that it was naval intelligence of value to the enemy.

Sir Oswald Mosley, leader of the British Union of Fascists, told a meeting tonight that "the people alone" had the right to decide the issues of peace or war and said it should not be left to "a handful of Parliamentarians, elected four or five years ago, on totally different issues."

The International Labor party's executive committee issued a statement saying that the working class movement could stop the war, "without creating a peace which would represent a triumph for aggression," by a unified international demand for a peace conference of belligerents and neutrals, including the United States.

Parliament's keen interest in British relations with Soviet Russia was reflected in questions which have been filed for discussion in Parliament this week: Whether Britain's negotiations with Russia before the war included any suggestion that the Soviet Union have military, naval or air bases in any Baltic state, and whether a broad trade agreement with the Soviet would be negotiated.

Procope Thanks United States

WASHINGTON, Oct. 15 (AP).—Hjalmar J. Procope, Finnish Minister, said tonight his country wanted to maintain friendly relations with Russia and Germany, but "will not give up her vital rights or sign any agreement incompatible with her independence, neutrality and integrity."

Expressing Finland's "great and deep gratitude" to the United States for "moral support and friendship" Procope said in a radio address that his country's "only aim is to live in peace and peaceful co-operation with other nations."

Poles' Ex-Envoy to Reich Weds, Then Joins Legion

PARIS, Oct. 15 (AP).—The former Polish Ambassador to Germany, Josef Lipski, who was married yesterday, departed today to join the Polish Legion which is to fight on the side of the British-French allies.

Lipski was married at the Polish Church here to Mme. Rosset, a Pole of French origin, who escaped from Warsaw by plane through the Scandinavian countries after the German invasion of Poland. Today the former Ambassador proceeded to a Polish Army training camp, where he registered as a private.

Norway Strengthens Border

STOCKHOLM, Sweden, Oct. 15 (AP)—Norway, one of the Scandinavian countries troubled by the rapid expansion of Soviet Russia's influence in the Baltic, was reported tonight to have ordered reinforcements sent to her northern frontier, which is only a few miles from the Russian border.

Reports from Oslo, received here as final preparations were being made for the conference Wednesday of three Kings and a President of the northern countries, said the Norwegian reinforcements would be sent tomorrow to the sector of the border adjoining Finland.

Norway's neighbor, Sweden, began sending reinforcements to her upper border last Friday. However, Norway's uppermost border actually is nearer Soviet Russia than is Sweden's frontier. Also vitally important in northern Norway is the seaport of Narvik, a railhead on the North Sea for Swedish iron exports to western markets.

Until the outbreak of the European war, Narvik was the port of call for many German ships carrying iron ore southward. Now the British naval patrol virtually has closed this route for the Germans—and at the same time has kept it open for the British.

"WHILE THE SOVIET UNION CAN THEORETICALLY SUPPLY CONSIDERABLE QUANTITIES OF MANGANESE, TIMBER AND OIL, THE REMOTENESS OF THESE RAW MATERIAL SOURCES FROM THE GERMAN FRONTIER, TOGETHER WITH THE LACK OF ADEQUATE TRANSPORTATION FACILITIES, MAY GREATLY LIMIT ITS ASSISTANCE TO GERMANY EVEN IF RUSSIA IS INCLINED TO AID."

IF GERMANY IS NO MORE SUCCESSFUL THAN IN 1914 IN BREAKING BRITAIN'S LIFELINES TO OVERSEAS COUNTRIES, THE ASSOCIATION OBSERVED, "THE ECONOMIC STAYING POWER OF THE ALLIES WOULD AGAIN APPEAR TO BE GREATER THAN THAT OF GERMANY."

PREVIOUSLY, IT HAD BEEN SAID THAT RUSSIA WAS DISCUSSING CONTROL OF THE DARDANELLES WITH TURKEY BUT ISTANBUL ADVICES LAST (SUNDAY) NIGHT FAILED TO MENTION THE DARDANELLES IN CONNECTION WITH THE MOSCOW CONVERSATIONS.

HOWEVER, MOSCOW DISPATCHES SAID THE TURKISH AND RUSSIAN OFFICIALS VIRTUALLY HAD REACHED AN AGREEMENT ON THE DARDANELLES. THERE WAS NO OFFICIAL STATEMENT IN EITHER CAPITAL.

THE TURKISH-RUSSIAN DEVELOPMENTS CAME SHORTLY AFTER FINLAND'S DELEGATION TO MOSCOW LEFT ON A SPECIAL TRAIN FOR HELSINKI WITH RUSSIA'S DEMANDS UPON ITS GOVERNMENT.

FACED WITH THE PROBLEM OF RUSSIA'S EXPANSION AND TRADE MATTERS ARISING FROM EUROPE'S WAR, THE KINGS OF NORWAY, SWEDEN, AND DENMARK AND THE PRESIDENT OF FINLAND WILL MEET WEDNESDAY FOR A CONFERENCE. THEIR FOREIGN MINISTERS ALSO WILL BE PRESENT.

THERE WERE TROOP MOVEMENTS REPORTED IN THE BALKANS THEMSELVES. IT WAS REPORTED IN ISTANBUL THAT RUMANIAN TROOPS WITHDRAWN FROM THE HUNGARIAN FRONTIER RECENTLY WERE BEING MOVED HASTILY TO RUMANIA'S

Planes Raiding Edinburgh Cause 35 Casualties on 3 Warships.

OCT 17 1939

SOUTHAMPTON'S BOW IS HIT

Four German Planes Shot Down; Edinburghers Watch Battle; Bombs Aimed at Bridge.

LONDON, Oct. 16 (A. P.).—Nazi bombers, making their first raid on the crowded shipping and industrial area about Edinburgh and the Firth of Forth, today damaged the cruiser Southampton and caused thirty-five casualties aboard her and two other warships. At least four bombers were shot down.

The communique read: "Today, October 16, between 9 A. M. and 1:30 P. M., several German aircraft reconnoitered Rosyth.

"This afternoon at about 2:30 P. M. a series of bombing raids began. These were directed at the ships lying in the Forth and were conducted by about a dozen machines.

OCT 17 '39

"All the batteries opened fire upon the raiders, and the R. A. F. fighter squadron ascended to engage them. No serious damage was done to any of his Majesty's ships. One bomb glanced off the cruiser Southampton, causing slight damage near her bow and sank the Admiral's barge and a pinnace which were moored empty alongside.

25 Casualties on Destroyer.

"This was the first hit which German aircraft have made during the war upon a British ship. There were three casualties on board the Southampton, and seven on board the cruiser Edinburgh from splinters. Another bomb fell near the destroyer Mohawk which was returning to harbor from convoy escort. This bomb burst on the water and its splinters caused twenty-five casualties to the men on the deck of the destroyer.

"Only superficial damage was caused to the vessels, which like the others, are ready for sea. On the other hand four bombers, at least, out of twelve or fourteen, were brought down, three of them by fighters of the Royal Air Force.

Air Battle Described.

"The first contact between Royal Air Force aircraft and the enemy raiders took place off May Island at the entrance to the Firth of Forth at 2:35 P. M. when two enemy aircraft were intercepted. They were driven down by our aircraft from 4,000 feet to within a few feet of the water and chased out to sea.

"Another enemy aircraft was engaged ten minutes later over Dalkeith. It fell in flames into the sea. Within a quarter of an hour a sharp combat took place off Crail, and a second raider crashed into the sea. A third German aircraft was destroyed in the pursuit.

"Two German aviators have been rescued by one of our destroyers, of whom one has since died. No civilian casualties have been reported and none occurred in the Royal Air Force."

The bombs fell close to the Firth of Forth bridge just northwest of Edinburgh. The attack, at a point 500 miles from the coast of Germany, echoed predictions of a German drive against harbors and shipping while Scottish shipyards worked at top speed to keep Britain mistress of the seas.

Raiding planes were said in unofficial advices from Edinburgh to have dashed up the Firth from the North Sea at a high altitude. Against a bright clear sky they dodged the fire of coastal batteries and headed toward the Forth bridge some thirty miles inland.

Defense firing grew heavier and pompom guns joined shore batteries in the shelling from both sides of the Firth. Many shells were seen exploding at a considerable height.

The attackers converged on objectives at a mooring near the Rosyth end of the mile long steel span.

Watchers from the south side of the Firth said the German bombers made "desperate attempts" to drop their bombs effectively.

Eyewitness Tells of Raid.

A resident of Dunfermline, north of Rosyth, said he saw about eight German planes. Other counts varied from six to twelve.

"The Germans were driven off by heavy fire, but they came back time and again to drop bombs," the proprietor of the Hawes Inn at the south end of the bridge said. "Bombs dropped near the bridge, but it was not hit, for trains went over it on [illegible]

Witnesses at South Queensferry told of a thrilling duel between Royal Air Force fighters and German bombers.

One of them asserted he saw a fighter overtaking a bomber as it sought escape in a fleecy cloud. He said he could hear a burst of fire and the bomber pitched toward the ground. None of the crew escaped by parachute.

Residents of South Queensferry, at the south end of the bridge, said several planes dived to within about 300 feet of the bridge and bombed and machine-gunned between Queensferry and the north end of the bridge. The planes were met by anti-aircraft fire.

"There were many R. A. F. planes up after them," a Dumferline merchant declared. "At one time the sky seemed full of planes. It was a real dogfight."

Stand in Doorways to Watch.

The woman manager of the Sealscraig Hotel on the south side of the Firth said the German planes appeared three times with about a half hour interval between each raid.

The residents said the first warning of the raid was the sound of gunfire. Many raced for shelter. Others stood in their doorways to watch. In several instances householders picked up pieces of anti-aircraft shrapnel while they were still warm.

David Archibald of Dunfermline, a passenger on a train which was crossing the bridge during the raid, said planes swooped down repeatedly.

Earlier in the day, the British Air Ministry reported Royal Air Force planes had made a successful reconnaissance flight over northern and central Germany last night.

The Air Ministry announcement of the flight over Germany did not say whether they encountered any resistance.

[Berlin announced today that an English and a French plane had been shot down during the night.]

Meanwhile observers expressed confidence today that the new German submarine offensive, which sent the Royal Oak and three allied merchant vessels to the bottom over the week end, would be brought under control quickly.

Advices received from Paris tonight reported that at least one of the German submarines which have sunk three French cargo ships in the last week had been sent to the bottom.

The British interpreted the Nazi submarine onslaught as Hitler's rejoinder to Great Britain's rejection of his peace gestures. They predicted, however, that the campaign would be halted more speedily than the one Germany launched at the outbreak of hostilities.

The Admiralty, meanwhile, listed 414 survivors of the warship and acknowledged that the chances were "remote" that any of the 755 other members of the crew would be found.

The three merchant ships sunk were the 9,205-ton Lochavon, British, and the 10,108-ton Bretagne and the 6,903-ton Louisiane, both of the French Line. No lives were lost in the sinking of the Lochavon, but at least fifteen were reported missing from the two other vessels. British warships landed more than 400 survivors of the three ships in English ports yesterday.

Attacked Without Warning.

The masters of all three vessels said they had been attacked without warning, the skipper of the Bretagne declaring that his first knowledge of the submarine's presence came when the wireless room, lifeboats and decks were shelled. The radio operator was wounded and seven persons were killed, a survivor said.

The Louisiane's officers said their wireless rigging and smokestack were the first targets of the submarine, which later offered food to the survivors in lifeboats. The Louisiana's first mate was killed by bursting shrapnel as he supervised the lowering of lifeboats, it was stated.

The captain of the Lochavon said that his clerk slept through the explosion that wrecked his vessel and that his absence was not noted until a checkup was made in the lifeboats.

"We went back to look for him and found him asleep in his bunk," the captain said.

The survivors of a German submarine were landed at the same time, but the official dispatches did not say when or how the submarine had been sunk.

In the first four weeks of the war, it was recalled, enemy submarines had sunk nearly 150,000 tons of British shipping before the First Lord of the Admiralty, Winston Churchill, was able to announce that the offensive had been checked.

While the navy concentrated on German undersea raiders, the nation intensified the preparations to meet possible attacks from the air. Some military men expressed a belief that the new submarine offensive would be accompanied by aerial attacks on British ports.

Battleships Building.

Naval experts said that while loss of the Royal Oak, one of Britain's fifteen capital ships, was admittedly a severe blow, it was by no means critical.

The Admiralty was silent concerning its construction program, but the Government was understood to be speeding up the building of new warships to assure the maintenance of the blockade against Germany. Nine new battleships were reported under construction. Several large merchant vessels also were being fitted out to augment the fleet.

Mr. Churchill was expected to make a statement on the sinking of the Royal Oak in his weekly report to the House of Commons tomorrow.

The survivors of a German submarine were landed at the same time, but the official dispatches did not say when or how the submarine had been sunk.

In predicting the speedy crushing of Germany's latest submarine campaign, naval experts said that Great Britain's convoy system was in full operation, and that many more vessels were engaged in the hunt for undersea raiders than in the first month of the war.

They maintained that Germany had already lost a high percentage of her submarines. Moreover, these observers said, the crews of submarines which escaped destruction in the first campaign, only to be ordered back to sea after a brief rest, must be considerably lower in morale than at the beginning of the war.

The London Daily Mail, commenting on the sinking of the Royal Oak, declared: "Our real loss is one of brave men trained in their craft."

Declaring that "command of the sea is not lightly won," the Times said: "Who would wield the weapon of sea power must be prepared to pay the price, and that price is the loss from time to time of valuable ships, such as the Courageous last month and now the Royal Oak, and their still more valuable men."

The aircraft carrier Courageous was sunk by a German submarine on September 17 with a loss of 515 men.

The Daily Mirror today sharply attacked the world war Prime Minister, David Lloyd George, who had been attempting to sound out sentiment for a peace conference. The Mirror said: "It must be jolly for the families and friends of the fine men who were lost in the Royal Oak to hear that this is only a "pause," to hear in Mr. Lloyd George's skittish phrase that this is 'a sputtering war' in which nobody means business as the business of slaughtering was understood when Mr. Lloyd George directed it in the last war."

AMSTERDAM, Oct. 16 (A. P.).—The Finnish steamship Emmi arrived at the nearby port of Muiden today with eight sailors from the Norwegian ship Gressholm, who said that their vessel was sunk by a mine on Friday while en route from Stavanger to Antwerp. Three men were missing.

LOS ANGELES, Oct. 16 (A. P.).—Customs officers here said today that the Royal Mail motorship Lochavon, sunk in the Atlantic, carried a supply of aircraft "replacement parts," rivets, nuts and bolts.

Spokesmen denied published reports that airplane engines were included in the shipment.

The Los Angeles Times said that thirty cases of parts and engines exceeding 200 tons were loaded secretly a few hours before the vessel sailed on September 11. The customs agents insisted, however, that the parts shipment amounted to less than 100 tons and that a careful search was made to determine that the neutrality embargo had not been violated. They added that the supplies could not be used on motors.

BERLIN, Oct. 16 (A. P.).—The High Command announced later today that two enemy airplanes, one French and one British, were shot down during the night in the region of Mainz and Frankfort on the Main, and that two crew members were killed and five were taken prisoner.

The announcement said a British Whitney bomber was brought down by anti-aircraft fire southeast of Gross Gerau between Frankfort and Darmstadt, with one killed and three captured.

Later in the night a French Potez 62 scouting plane met a similar fate near Germershein with one killed and two wounded prisoners taken to a hospital, the announcement said.

Meanwhile, reports of an air raid by enemy aircraft Saturday night following the firing of anti-aircraft guns protecting Berlin were explained in an official statement which said the shooting was caused by the appearance of a German airplane which had lost its way in the darkness.

Officials said the batteries on the ground were unable to make out the nationality of the plane and shot it down when it flew over forbidden areas. The pilot, however, escaped by parachute, they reported.

Four German Flyers Shot Down In Foray On Vital Firth Of Forth Area

[By the Associated Press.]

OCT 17 1939

London, Oct. 16—Scoring the first admitted bomb hit on a British warship since the European war began, German bombers today slightly damaged the cruiser Southampton in a spectacular attack on the vital Edinburgh and Firth of Forth area of Scotland.

The British Admiralty's first communique said the bombers caused thirty-five casualties on the Southampton, the cruiser Edinburgh and the destroyer Mohawk. Later it was announced that of these casualties two naval officers, Commander R. F. Jolly, of the Mohawk, and Lieut. E. J. O'Shea and thirteen men were killed. The casualties included twelve men seriously injured.

At Least Four Shot Down

A joint communique by the Air Ministry and the Admiralty said at least four of the twelve or fourteen Nazi raiders were downed by Royal Air Force fighters and anti-aircraft batteries during a fierce battle.

The first German air raiders to reach Britain, the bombers struck in dive attacks in the face of heavy fire from ship and shore batteries.

Struck Glancing Blow

The official announcement of the attack—issued some eight hours after the fight—said the Southampton, which escorted King George and Queen Elizabeth to Canada last summer, was struck a glancing blow by a bomb.

The communique said the bow of the 9,100-ton cruiser was damaged slightly by the bomb.

Bomb splinters caused three casualties aboard the Southampton, seven on the 10,000-ton Edinburgh and twenty-five on the 1,870-ton Mohawk.

It was said, however, the bombardment from the air failed to inflict serious damage to any of the warships.

Warnings Not Sounded

Air-raid warnings were not sounded in the area of the attack, across the Firth of Forth from Edinburgh. Throughout the raid trains continued to cross the high bridge between Rosyth and the south bank of the Firth, giving passengers a chilling closeup of bombs exploding huge waterspouts in the water 450 feet below.

Shortly before the aerial attack on British warships was disclosed by the Admiralty and the Air Ministry, the Admiralty had denied a German claim that the battle cruiser Repulse was damaged by the same submarine which sank the battleship Royal Oak Saturday.

2 Small Boats Sunk

Beside the slight damage to the bow of the Southampton, an empty admiral's barge and an empty pinnace moored alongside were sunk.

The British said one bomb fell near the Mohawk and burst on the water, the splinters hitting men on her deck. The Mohawk was returning to harbor from convoy escort.

The communique said the three ships were ready for the sea despite the raid.

The terse details of the communique revealed the fierceness of the air battle.

Nazis Driven Off To Sea

The first contact between British and German planes was off May Island at the entrance to the Firth of Forth when two German planes were intercepted. They were reported driven out to sea.

"Another enemy aircraft was engaged ten minutes later over Dalkeith," the communique said. "It fell in flames into the sea. Within a quarter of an hour a sharp combat took place off Crail, and a second raider crashed into the sea.

"A third German aircraft was destroyed in the pursuit."

The communique gave no details of the downing of the fourth raider it reported was destroyed.

A member of a crew of a Scotch fishing boat, however, told of seeing a German bomber shot down and of rescuing three of the four members of the plane's crew.

Saw Aerial Chase

"About 3 o'clock we were returning home when we saw a large black airplane traveling at high speed," he said. "It was being pursued by two British fighters and they made rings around it. They dived underneath it and then circled up again firing into the tail of the German machine which swept around in a circle, suddenly heeled over and flopped into the sea.

"We threw ropes to the flyers clinging to a lifebuoy and when we hauled them aboard we discovered that they were all wounded. They told us another member of the crew had gone down with the plane. They were all young chaps."

Text Of Communique

The Admiralty's communique in full read:

"Today, October 16, between 9 A. M. and 1.30 P. M., several German aircraft reconnoitered Rosyth.

"This afternoon at about 2.30 P. M. a series of bombing raids began. These were directed at the ships lying in the forth and were conducted by about a dozen machines.

"All the batteries opened fire upon the raiders, and the R. A. F. fighter squadron ascended to engage them. No serious damage was done to any of His Majesty's ships. One bomb glanced off the cruiser Southampton, causing slight damage near her bow and sank the admiral's barge and a pinnace which were moored empty alongside.

First Direct Hit Of War

"This was the first hit which German aircraft have made during the war upon a British ship. There were three casualties on board the Southampton, and seven on board the cruiser Edinburgh from splinters. Another bomb fell near the destroyer Mohawk which was returning to harbor from convoy escort. This bomb burst on the water and its splinters caused twenty-five casualties to the men on the deck of the destroyer.

"Only superficial damage was caused to the vessels, which like the others, are ready for sea. On the other hand four bombers, at least, out of twelve or fourteen, were brought down, three of them by fighters of the Royal Air Force.

"The first contact between Royal Air

Force aircraft and the enemy raiders took place off May Island at the entrance to the Firth of Forth at 2.35 P. M. when two enemy aircraft were intercepted. They were driven down by our aircraft from 4,000 feet to within a few feet of the water and chased out to sea.

Plane Falls In Flames

"Another enemy aircraft was engaged ten minutes later over Dalkeith. It fell in flames into the sea. Within a quarter of an hour a sharp combat took place off Crail, and a second raider crashed into the sea. A third German aircraft was destroyed in the pursuit.

"Two German aviators have been rescued by one of our destroyers, of whom one has since died. No civilian casualties have been reported and none occurred in the Royal Air Force.

"It is also added that the German claim issued this afternoon that the attacker of his Majesties ship Royal Oak, also attacked and badly damaged the battle cruiser Repulse, is an absurd invention.

"In view of the habit of the German wireless of making fantastic claims it must be again repeated that neither the Repulse nor any other British warship has been damaged by hostile attack except as mentioned in the statements of the Admiralty."

Germans "Desperate"

Watchers from the south side of the Firth of Forth said the German bombers made "desperate attempts to drop their bombs effectively.

A resident of Dunfermline, north of Rosyth, said he saw about eight German planes. Other counts varied from six to twelve.

"The Germans were driven off by heavy fire, but they came back time and again to drop bombs," the proprietor of the Hawes inn at the south end of the bridge, said. "The bombs caused huge waterspouts, but no damage was done.

"Other bombs dropped near the bridge, but this was not hit, either, for trains went over it soon afterward," he added.

Witnesses at South Queensferry told of a thrilling duel between Royal Air Force fighters and German bombers.

One of them asserted he saw a fighter overtaking a bomber as it sought escape in a fleecy cloud. He said he could hear a burst of fire and the bomber pitched toward the ground. None of the crew escaped by parachute.

Residents of South Queensferry, at the south end of the bridge, said several planes dived to within about 300 feet of the bridge and bombed and machine-gunned between Queensferry and the north end of the bridge. The planes were met by anti-aircraft fire.

"Sky Seemed Full"

"There were many R. A. F. planes up after them," a Dumferline merchant declared. "At one time the sky seemed full of planes. It was a real dogfight."

The woman manager of the Sealscraig Hotel on the south side of the Firth said the German planes appeared three times with about a half hour interval between each raid.

It was reported that six German airmen were taken to the naval hospital at Port Edgar.

The residents said the first warning of the raid was the sound of gunfire.

Many raced for shelter. Others stood in their doorways to watch. In several instances householders picked up pieces of anti-aircraft shrapnel while they were still warm.

All 3 Ships New

Jane's Fighting Ships, authoritative work on the world's navies, gives the Southampton a normal complement of 700, twelve 6-inch guns, eight 4-inch guns, one 3.7-inch howitzer, four 3-pounders and eighteen smaller guns, as well as six torpedo tubes. She was completed in 1937.

The new cruiser Edinburgh carried similarly heavy armament and was said to be designed to withstand 8-inch shell fire.

The Mohawk, completed in 1938, has eight 4.7-inch guns and eight smaller ones, as well as four torpedo tubes.

Attack Revealed As Survivors Reach England. Seaman Killed

Naval Battle In North Sea Off Norway Reported By Fishermen

OCT 17 1939

[By the Associated Press]

London, Tuesday, Oct. 17—Thirty-two officers and crew of the 3,677-ton Whitby steamer Sneaton, sunk in the Atlantic by a German submarine Saturday, were landed today at a south coast port.

A fireman was killed when the ship was atttacked by a German U-boat.

The ship's sinking had not been announced previously.

The crew was brought into port by the Belgian oil tanker Alexandre Andre.

Crew Mans Lifeboats

The crew pulled away in three lifeboats from the ship, which went down in twenty minutes after being attacked.

Leslie Allerston, a member of the crew, said the U-boat came near his lifeboat and the commander, who spoke good English, asked: "Have you any food?"

Allerston said: "I told him we had. He told us a British warship was going to pick us up. He then said he was sorry and wished us good luck before the submarine went off at full speed."

North Sea Naval Battle Reported By Fishermen

Bergen, Norway, Oct. 16 (AP)—Three stories by fishermen indicated today that one and possibly two warships may have been sunk in the North Sea battle Saturday, but whether they were German or British could not be ascertained.

Fishermen on the island of Nordvaagsoy, according to the newspaper Gulatidende, saw three ships engaged in conflict with a lone warship west of Olderveggen. They thought one of the trio sank but could not establish its identity through binoculars.

A Maaloy Island fisherman said he believed two warships were sunk and thought they were German.

Berlin Qualifies Early Claim That Battle Cruiser Repulse Was Disabled; Now Says Merely That She Was Hit.

OCT 17 1939

BERLIN, Oct. 16 (A. P.).—The Supreme High Command said today that the "same U-boat which sank the British battleship Royal Oak, attacked and torpedoed the battleship Repulse," amending a previous announcement that the Repulse had been put out of commission.

The later communique left open the effect of the torpedo and no further details were disclosed.

The original communique said the torpedo had "severely damaged the Repulse and put it out of commission."

The submarine was stated to have reached the safety of German waters, and a detailed report from her commander was expected soon.

Excitement in Berlin.

The report on the Repulse, on the heels of the sinking of the Royal Oak, brought a new wave of enthusiasm over Berlin, particularly in official quarters. Strangers were accosting each other on the streets with: "Have you heard?" This was usually followed with: "That'll surely get on the Britishers' nerves. Britannia no longer rules the waves."

Some officials said that a simple Iron Cross would not be enough to honor the submarine commander and predicted that he would get something better.

German news broadcasts began with a reading of the communique and then were interrupted with a recording of the German bluejackets' wartime song of "When We Sail Towards England."

At the Chancellery, one limousine after another full of generals and admirals arrived. While officials said it was nothing unusual for Hitler to confer with military leaders, the meeting at this particular moment seemed significant. A large group of enthusiastic citizens gathered in the hope that Hitler would appear on the balcony.

LONDON, Oct. 16 (A. P.).—Asked to comment on a German statement that the 32,000-ton battle cruiser Repulse had been torpedoed, an Admiralty spokesman declared that the attitude of the Admiralty was that "it would not go to the trouble denying all these reports."

[H. M. S. Repulse, commissioned in 1916 and reconstructed in 1936 at a cost of about $5,500,000, displaces 32,000 tons and has a complement of from 1,181 to 1,205 men. Heavier than the 29,150-ton Royal Oak, which was sunk on Saturday, the Repulse carries six fifteen-inch guns, twenty four-inch guns, including eight for anti-aircraft, and eight torpedo tubes among lesser armaments. She carries four aircraft with catapults.]

ever, that the attack was carried out despite heavy English defense fire.

Although a first communique said the 32,000-ton Repulse had been severely damaged and put out of commission, a corrected communique later said "the same U-boat which sank the British battleship Royal Oak torpedoed the battleship Repulse."

Thus with no further details given, the effect of the torpedo was left open. Explaining the reason for the change in wording of the communique authorities said that "torpedoed" to them was a stronger expression than merely "damaged" or "disabled."

They cautioned, however, that it did not necessarily mean the Repulse was sunk.

The report that the Repulse had been torpedoed so soon after the sinking, announced Saturday, of the 29,150-ton Royal Oak caused Nazi confidence to increase by leaps and bounds. Germany would win the war, was the confident expression.

Details Lacking

Details of both encounters were lacking as the submarine commander apparently was attempting to attack all British ships he could find before returning to his home base to make a report—and receive the Iron Cross for his achievement.

Submarines did not steal all the limelight. Anti-aircraft batteries in the region of Mainz and Frankfort-on-the-Main, the high command reported, last night brought down a British Whitney bombing plane and a French Potez 63 scouting ship. The announcement said one Frenchman and one Briton were killed and three British and two French flyers taken prisoners.

Estonian Pact Signed

While submarines were giving Germany's answer to Britain's rejection of Hitler's peace offer, diplomats at Tallinn signed an agreement with the Estonian Government for repatriation of German minorities in that country.

The pact was signed, it was pointed out, in accordance with Hitler's plan announced to the Reichstag October 6 to return people of German extraction from neighboring countries. It was estimated about 15,000 persons of German blood were living in Estonia.

Under the agreement, Estonian citizens registered as belonging to the German minority will be given three Berlin, Oct. 16—Field Marshal Hermann Wilhelm Goering's warplanes and Grand Admiral Erich Raeder's submarines pressed a lightning war against England today.

In a surprise attack German bombers appeared over the Firth of Forth in Scotland and, an official announcement said, "two British cruisers were hit by bombs of heavy size."

Another official announcement declared the British battle criuser Repulse had been torpedoed in carrying out Adolf Hitler's apparent determination to sink or disable one British warship after another until Britain gives in.

Claim 2 British Planes

The German communique said two British pursuit planes which rose to fight off the German raiders over the Firth of Forth were shot down, but admitted two of Germany's own planes had failed to return from the raid.

'You Asked For It'

Meanwhile, the German tenor of war sentiment was:

"England, you asked for it and now you are getting it."

Nazi quarters spoke as if victory was at hand and as if "the new European order" was exclusively Germany's affair.

The newspaper Deutsche Allgemeine Zeitung wrote:

"We destroyed Versailles (the treaty) not with England but without England and with our own strength, and now against England we are going to be the strong continental power."

Startling even to Germans, who normally have great faith in submarines, was what they termed the ability of the undersea craft to attack heavily armored battleships.

The Germans took the attitude that the offensive power of submarines had increased to a greater extent than the British Navy's defense power.

Poilus Are Forced Back Nearly Two Miles After Foes Attack On Four-Mile Front—Main Thrust Delivered Near Luxembourg Border

OCT 17 1939

By H. TAYLOR HENRY
Associated Press Correspondent

Paris, Oct. 16—Waves of Nazi troops in field gray today launched a long-awaited attack in force against French positions on the northern flank of the Western front, drove the French out of German territory at one point and although thrown back still held a precarious foothold on French soil for the first time since the war began.

A French communique acknowledged tonight that the Germans fought their way into the French village of Apach before they were thrown back by a French counter-attack.

Still Hold Heights Of One Village

The fighting lasted all day and as night fell the Germans apparently still were holding the heights of Schneeberg north of Apach on western slopes that reach into France.

A late communique of the French high command said merely that the Germans had withdrawn "to the north of Apach" after penetrating the village.

Although the German attack covered a front of four miles, the main force of the blow was delivered at the junction of the French-German-Luxembourg frontiers on the extreme northern flank of the Western front.

Apparently Driven Back Two Miles

Here the French established positions during the first month of the war to prevent the Germans from driving through neutral Luxembourg territory to outflank the whole French front.

Since the French had been holding advance positions some two miles inside German territory at this point, it appeared to military observers here that today's German attack obviously had driven the French back that distance.

The first real shock of the German attack hit the French on the Schneeberg heights, which form a bastion east of Apach.

Thin lines of French observation posts, guarded by land mines, were penetrated by the Germans.

Before the French were able to reorganize their defenses Nazi troops swept into French territory, occupied the first houses of the village of Apach.

OCT 1 1939

Artillery Finds Range

Immediately, however, the French said, French artillery found the range of the advancing Germans and forced them to halt on the outskirts of the little Lorraine village.

The French reformed their lines and drove the Germans back to position 400 yards north of Apach, which left the Nazis holding a line 100 yards inside French territory.

This would mean a total advance of between a mile and a quarter and a mile and a half for them during the day.

Unconfirmed reports said that in other sectors on the northern flank the French withdrew their most advanced posts to main line positions on German territory to be better prepared to repulse German attacks.

Heaviest Of War

Today's fighting undoubtedly was the heaviest on the Western front, although no figures were available immediately on the number of men involved or the number of casualties.

There was no indication whether today's Nazi drive was the beginning of a general attack or merely the strongest local action to date.

The four-mile sector along which the Germans attacked shortly after dawn today is on a narrow plateau where the French themselves made their first advance into Germany exactly seven weeks ago.

The heights of Schneeberg drop down into a deep ravine which cuts through the village of Apach itself and then extends into the Moselle river.

Returned To Heights

The Germans apparently occupied a part of the village east of the ravine, but French machine-gun fire from positions on the other side prevented their crossing the ravine and made their positions so difficult that Nazi advance patrols decided to retire to the heights, leaving the French to hold the village.

The French, obviously anticipating the German attack after more than twenty-four hours' warning given by scouts, had withdrawn their main forces to the line of the ravine, leaving only advance patrols to absorb the first shock on the heights and to send back a warning of the force of the attack.

First reports said the Germans used companies of heavy tanks in advance of infantry, which moved forward behind a rolling barrage of artillery fire reminiscent of World War days.

Patrols Active There

The sector where the action occurred had been one of the most active areas for German patrols for weeks. German artillery had pounded the French rear between Apach and Sierck until a sudden silence fell over the entire German front twenty-four hours before the attack began, giving the French commanders adequate warning that an offensive was imminent.

Heavy French guns pounded German lines for a hundred miles along the northern flank in an effort to break up reported concentrations of German troops which the French command believed meant an impending attack.

Heavy caliber railroad guns went into action for the first time along with guns of between 75 and 155 millimeter calibers.

In Four Sectors

Earlier, the Germans were reported by military observers to be concentrated in four sectors.

Following the French-German frontier south from Luxembourg to Switzerland, the first main concentration point was reported to be near the neutral grand duchy of Luxembourg in the Moselle Valley. The second abnormal German activity was reported on the wooded slopes of the Haardt Mountains, sixty-five miles southeast.

The third concentration reported was in the vicinity of Karlsruhe, where the Rhine becomes the frontier at a point where the river turns into Germany. Troops here could swing into action on either the northern or the southern flank which are hinged just west of Karlsruhe.

The fourth concentration was reported in the German Black Forest near the Swiss border.

Seize 25,000 Tons Of Goods

The French communique reporting the action on the front added that during the second week of October, 25,000 tons of goods destined for Germany had been "held up" by the French navy.

Another report of the French authorities was that at least one of the German submarines responsible for the sinking of three French cargo boats the past week had been sent to the bottom.

The French Commissariat of Information confirmed reports that three ships sunk since October 12 were the French liners Bretagne, the Louisiane and the Auxiliary Navigation Company's oil tanker Emile Miguet.

7 Lost On Bretagne

Five members of the crew and two third-class passengers were lost aboard the Bretagne when it was sunk October 14, the information office said, while aboard the Louisiane sunk the same day the only casualty was the first mate.

The information service declared the entire crew of the Emile Miguet was saved when it was sunk October 12.

"It can be said that at least one of the enemy submarines that sunk these ships is now at the bottom," the official announcement added.

TAKE STRATEGIC HEIGHTS

Thrust Comes Just East of the Luxemburg Border—French Lay Down Heavy Fire.

PARIS, Oct. 16 (A. P.).—German troops were reported to have launched an attack in force today against the northern flank of the French western front, driving the French out of German territory back into France before the Nazis were repulsed by a French counter-attack.

A French official communique said the Germans were attacking up the Moselle River valley just east of the Luxemburg frontier along a four-mile sector.

The French said they finally halted the Germans north of the French frontier post of Apach into which the Germans penetrated during the first shock which rolled the French back.

The communique indicated that the French had been thrown back about a mile and a quarter to their own frontier before they began counter-attacking.

The French admitted that the Germans occupied strategic heights at Schneeberg, whose western slopes fall away into France.

French Communique.

The text of the French High Command's night communique follows:

"This morning on a front of about four miles the Germans launched an attack supported by artillery fire immediately to the east of the Moselle.

"They occupied the heights of Schneeberg on which we had a light line of observation posts supported by land mines.

"Caught under our fire, the enemy attack came to a halt and even had to withdraw to the north of Apach in which village they had momentarily penetrated.

"During the second week of October the French Navy held up 25,000 tons of goods destined for Germany."

French Lay Down Heavy Fire.

French heavy artillery was reported earlier in the day to have opened fire on German forces massing behind the western front in apparent preparation for a general offensive.

Military dispatches said that the French guns were dropping a heavy barrage on German communication lines and troop concentration points along a 100-mile front extending from the Moselle River to the Haardt Forest. This sector, on the French extreme left, had been reported earlier today in a General Staff communique, to be the center of "great activity" within the German lines. Supplementary military advices said that a Nazi attack appeared imminent.

French dispatches said that the recent re-enforcements had increased the German strength opposite the vital northern sector of the Maginot Line to between 700,000 and 800,000 men.

Night Activity.

The French said that scouting parties, sent into No-Man's Land, had reported back that lights gleamed behind the German front throughout the night, apparently indicating that the troops, tanks and trucks were moving up to "jump off" points. The rumble of heavy wheels was clearly audible in the French front lines.

German artillery, which had previously been battering the French rear, was reported silent all day yesterday. This, French military experts point out, was customary before a general offensive in order to keep secret the position of the new gun emplacements.

[In a communique this morning the German High Command at Berlin declared: "In the west there were only minor skirmishes and artillery fire designed to annoy. On the Rhine, southwest of Rastatt, the French were forced by floods to evacuate one bunker. In the air, there was little activity of our own and enemy planes in the frontier region."]

Guns of all calibers were said to be participating in the French bombardment. The German troop concentrations were reported observed in an area extending back from the front to a depth of ten miles.

The French General Staff communique this morning reported "great activity in the enemy lines between the Moselle and the Saar"—a thirty-five-mile sector on the northeastern front. The communique also noted that patrols had been active during the night "in the region west of Wissembourg."

The German forces, the French said, were massed in the triangle formed by the German cities of Treves, Kaiserlautern and Kreuznach. Treves is on the east bank of the Moselle, about twenty-five miles from the French border, and Kaiserlautern is about sixty miles southeast of Treves, while Kreuznach is approximately sixty miles east of Traves and thirty miles north of Kaiserlautern.

Propaganda War.

Automobiles equipped with loudspeakers raced up and down on the German side of the Rhine today broadcasting Germany's desire for peace. The broadcasts included sections of Hitler's recent Reichstag speech, particularly those portions asserting that Germany has no quarrel with France.

In various sections of the front, German troops unfurled over their lines banners bearings slogans such as "Bad Luck for Those Who Refuse to Accept Hitler's Peace." The French said that their artillery answered the appearance of these banners with well-aimed salvos.

Fog and rain curtailed military activity along the entire front over the week end, although a French communique last night said that ambushes laid to snare German patrols had "obtained the sought-after results," apparently meaning the capture of prisoners.

Dispatches from the frontier province of Lorraine said that continued rain had caused the Meuse, Mouzon and Saonelle rivers to overflow, flooding the countryside and hampering communications.

Meanwhile today military advices reported that the French output of war planes would be increased five-fold by next year through steps taken by Air Minister Guy La Chambre. By that time, they said, the industry would employ 300,000 men, and the training of pilots would be stepped up to keep pace with production.

French correspondents at the front, commenting on the courage of French fliers and their "superiority" over the Germans, reported that one pilot brought his reconnaisance plane back in flames and landed safely after his observer had been riddled with bullets while floating to earth in a parachute.

In this and a similar incident where another reconnaissance plane was said to have been landed by a gravely wounded observer who took over after the pilot was killed, "valuable" photographs were reported brought home undamaged.

The French correspondents also appeared to be impressed by the youth of the French officers, which they said, was tempered by experience. Many of these men have already been through three mobilizations, and their efficiency is said to be in marked contrast to that of the troops who marched off to war in 1914.

Paris military experts said that while the German troop concentration in this sector might indicate an imminent offensive it might also be a defensive measure designed to thwart any French surprise thrust. The French were inclined to believe that if the Germans launch a heavy offensive it will come in "a very few days" or not for a long time. The next week, it was said, will probably disclose the enemy's intentions.

Whatever comes, the French declared, their troops will be ready.

Some 30,000 British soldiers were reported to have taken over sectors along the northeastern front and received their first baptism of fire. They were accompanied by mobile units of the British Broadcasting Company engaged in making records of battle noises for broadcasting.

Allied Offensive Predicted

BASEL, Switzerland, Oct. 16 (AP).—Despite the defensive impression left by some French communiques and French dispatches from the front, some neutral military observers here believed France and Britain might take the initiative in the first wide-scale offensive on the western front.

Troop concentrations on both the German and the Allied sides of the front were reported today, not only from the Moselle to the Rhine, but down along the hitherto inactive Rhine frontier. Both high commands were said to have shifted their forces farther toward the front, although there was no indication which side moved first.

One of the main concentration points on both sides was reported to be around and within the strategic Rhine-Lauter angle, where German pressure has been particularly strong in recent weeks.

In addition, a French report placed concentrations in the Bien forests between Lauterbourg and Wissembourg. Information reaching here indicated German residents last night moved out of a score of towns and villages in Baden, including the City of Karlsruhe, to make room for troops and supplies. The same activity was reported inside the Wissembourg-Lauterbourg-Seltz triangle within French territory.

Despite gray skies, low clouds and frequent drizzles of rain up the Rhine Valley, anti-aircraft guns on both sides of the upper Rhine were kept busy throughout the day firing at observation planes.

TURKS MASSING ARMED FORCES TO WARN SOVIET

Reports of Moves by Red Army in Caucasus Bring Quick Action.

ISTANBUL, Oct. 16 (A. P.).—Turkey made feverish military preparations today on the strength of reports that Soviet Russia was massing troops in the Caucasus on the borders of Turkey and Iran (Persia).

It was learned on good authority that Foreign Minister Sukru Saracoglu, now engaged in diplomatic discussions in Moscow, had refused three major Russian demands—recognition of the partition of Poland, formation of a neutral Balkan bloc under the ægis of Russia and Germany, and territorial expansion of Russia and Bulgaria at the expense of Rumania.

Foreign Minister Saracoglu was said to have pointed out to the Soviet leaders that Turkey could mobilize nearly 2,000,000 men, and to have agreed to maintain Turkish neutrality only if Great Britain and France should fight Russia. If Italy should join Germany against the allies, Turkey would side with Britain and France, Mr. Saracoglu was said to have told the Russians.

Meanwhile, the Turkish fleet was anchored in the Dardanelles, straits that control the entrance to the Black Sea. The newspaper Republique said that "feverish preparations" for anti-aircraft exercises were being made at Izmir in the Dardanelles.

The newspaper Journal D'Orient said that Turkish mobilization directors had met.

Turkish military chiefs were also reported keeping an eye on Bulgaria, which has called up 400,000 men for military duty on October 20. The return from Moscow of Col. Boidev, chief of the Bulgarian air force, was also noted here. Turkey has many men on her Bulgarian frontier.

Moscow Hints at Compromise.

MOSCOW, Oct. 16 (A. P.).—Soviet Russia's negotiations for strengthening her hand in eastern Europe struck a slower pace today, with foreign circles anticipating merely compromise agreements with Finland and Turkey and speculating on possible future Russian moves in the Balkans.

Unofficial reports said that Finland, refusing to be drawn into the Russian orbit as have Estonia, Latvia and Lithuania, would concede certain Baltic islands for Russian naval bases, but would balk at a military alliance or concessions on the strategic Aaland Islands.

Meanwhile, a Turkish mission was believed preparing to depart shortly, possibly after signing some cautious agreement respecting Russian safeguards on the passage of warships through the Dardanelles into the Black Sea.

Turkey's Foreign Minister, Sukru Saracoglu, returned to the Kremlin at 4 P. M. (8 A. M., New York time) for a conference with Joseph Stalin and Premier-Foreign Commissar Vyacheslav Molotov.

Mr. Saracoglu remained in the Kremlin for two hours, but no details were immediately available on his visit.

A Moscow radio station last night carried a denial by Tass, Russian news agency, of reports circulating in Istanbul that Russian troops were massing in the Caucasus on the Turkish and Iranian—Persian—border.

Balkan Rumors Fly.

Regarding Turkish reports of Russian demands for formation of a Russian-German sponsored neutral bloc in the Balkans and Russian and Bulgarian expansion at the expense of Rumania, it was pointed out that rumors long have circulated here that Russia intends to try to dominate the Balkans, and, now that Germany is engaged in war in the West, may demand the return of Bessarabia from Rumania, which obtained that oil-rich territory from Russia in the post-world war division.

Russia, meanwhile, was consolidating her new frontiers in Poland, which would place her in a much stronger position to play an important role in the Balkans.

The Hungarian diplomatic visit, reported by Tass, official Russian news agency, was given point by the fact that the Polish partition gives Russia a frontier with Hungary. The Russian press has been stressing a desire for friendly dealings with Hungary as a result.

A German trade delegation remained in Moscow. Unofficial German sources acknowledged that Germany had abandoned any rivalry with Russia in the northeast, but expressed belief no such free hand would be given the Soviet in the Balkans.

Ruthenians Nervous.

BUDAPEST, Oct. 16 (A. P.).—The arrival by airplane of the Hungarian Governor of Ruthenia was seen in diplomatic circles today as a reflection of this war-fearing little nation's anxiety in the face of uncertainty over Soviet Russia's aims. The Governor, Sigismund Perenyi, was believed to have flown here to confer with Govrnment officials.

One cause of concern in diplomatic quarters was fear that Russia, if she repossessed Bessarabia from Rumania, also might take Ruthenia from Hungary. Dispaches throughout the Balkans reported heavy Russian reinforcements near the Ruthenia and Slovakia frontiers.

These sources also noted Moscow still had not named a new Minister to Hungary and expressed concern over what Russia had been telling Turkish Foreign Minister Sukru Saracoglu of her plans in southeastern Europe.

As Dr. Joseph Kristoffy arrived in Moscow to assume his duties as the new Hungarian minister there, some observers here predicted the first result of renewed Russian-Hungarian relations might be some sort of trade pact. But they also were mindful of the trend of Russian negotiations with Turkey and the Baltic countries.

Trade Talks Begin.

Discussions with Slovakia to stimulate trade began here, meanwhile, and were expected to last two weeks. Tentative plans call for Hungary to exchange $4,000,000 worth of meats and fats for Slovak wood, iron, paper and cellulose. Slovakia sold Hungary $1,000,000 worth of goods in the past eight months, but imported less than $300,000 worth from Hungary.

The greatest concern in Government circles at the moment was over Ruthenia, which Hungary annexed last March in the partition of Czecho-Slovakia. About 550,000 Ruthenians—more than 5 per cent of Hungary's entire population—are Ukranians. The region almost touches Bessarabia. Fear was expressed here that if the Soviet decided to retake Bessarabia, it might go farther.

The controlled Hungarian press, which recently had avoided almost all reference to Nazis and communists, suddenly published attacks on both. The Fuggetlen Magyarorszag editorially attacked the Hungarian Nazi party, whose 39 deputies recently staged a walkout from Parliament.

Prayers Offered for Finland.

Prayers were offered in some Hungarian churches for Finland and some newspapers praised the Finns for their attitude toward Russia. One commented that "Hungary looks with real sympathy toward the north."

Correspondents of several Hungarian newspapers gave detailed descriptions of how Russians were "communizing" community after community in Russian-occupied parts of Poland.

They said that advance motorized scouts appear in villages to announce formal occupation. When the Russian troops arrive the next day, these dispatches said, red flags suddenly appear and windows of former Polish homes are filled with pictures of Lenin, Marx and Stalin.

The Hungarian press said that Sovietization of the occupied area was rapid, with peasants taking over big estates and Soviet councils being formed under military supervision.

The Fuggetlen Magyaroszag said agents declare "that Russia is not a conqueror, but a protector of exploited workers."

TURKS EXPECT MOSCOW TALKS TO FINISH SOON

Cabinet Sends New Word To Foreign Minister At Kremlin

Saracoglu Is Reported To Have Refused Three Demands Of Soviet

OCT 17 1939

[By the Associated Press]

Ankara, Oct. 16—The Turkish Cabinet was reported tonight to have sent new and final instructions to its Moscow delegation which, political circles declared, might lead to a quick conclusion of the lengthy Kremlin conversations and possibly a Russian-Turkish pact.

The Cabinet met in a special session while Turkey was said to be making "feverish" military preparations on rejorts that Russia was massing troops in the Caucasus on the borders of Turkey and Iran (Persia). These were denied in Moscow.

Sent To Foreign Chief

The new instructions were said to have been sent to Sukru Saracoglu, Turkish Foreign Minister, after the Cabinet considered his report. Saracoglu and his delegation went to Moscow nearly a month ago.

Although there was wide speculation concerning the nature and scope of the proposed new pact, it was stressed in Turkish circles that it would not affect the status quo of the Balkan Sea areas or impair in any way Turkey's agreement with Great Britain and France.

Turkey is allied with Britain and France in mutual assistance pacts in the event of Mediterranean war. A Turkish military mission now is in London for conversations with British officials.

Refused Three Demands

Reports in Istanbul say Saracoglu had refused three Russian demands—recognition of Poland's partition, formation of a neutral Balkan bloc under the supervision of Russia and Germany, and territorial expansion of Russia and Bulgaria at Rumania's expense.

According to Turkish quarters, the delay in Moscow has been due mainly to the necessity in which Ankara found itself of consulting Balkan governments as well as Britain and France regarding proposals and counter-proposals.

Neutral observers, however, said they did not entirely share Turkish optimism regarding the outcome of the talks. This skepticism was due to Turkey's precautionary military measures and the reported refusal of the three demands.

No Hint Of Results Given By Officials At Kremlin

By WITT HANCOCK
Associated Press Correspondent

Moscow, Oct. 16—The protracted diplomatic negotiations between Russia and Turkey kept up today but no inkling of conclusive results came from the Kremlin.

Sukru Saracoglu, the Turkish Foreign Minister, consulted for two hours with Russian officials. There was no official announcement on what had occurred.

The two countries had been reported reliably several days ago to have reached an agreement.

Farm Chief En Route To Moscow

The Turkish Embassy declined to state when Saracoglu would leave here, but admitted the possibility he might remain to confer with the Turkish Minister of Agriculture, Erkemen Muhliss, now en route to Moscow, ostensibly to see an agricultural exhibition in progress here.

Tass, official Soviet news agency, announced tonight that a trade agreement between Soviet Russia and the Lithuanian Republic for 1939-40 was signed here yesterday.

The agreement provided for doubling the trade between the two countries, Tass said.

Former Assistance Pact

The agreement followed by less than a week the signing of a mutual assistance pact involving Russia and Lithuania, which provided for return to Lithuania of her ancient capital, Wilno (Vilna), Poland, and the Wilno region. The Soviets were granted the right to place an undetermined number of troops in Lithuania.

As to another field of Russian diplomatic activity, it was said the Finnish envoy, Dr. Juho Kusti Paasikivi, was not expected to return here any sooner than the latter part of the week.

Diplomats here agreed the current Russian-Turkish negotiations might have a far-reaching effect upon Balkan problems in general.

At the same time wide speculation was aroused here by reports from Riga, Latvia, that Russia had demanded that Germany order her citizens to emigrate hastily from the Baltic states, over which the Soviet now holds virtual protectorates, under the threat that she would not otherwise lend the Reich any of her gold reserve.

Russia was said to want to eliminate any future German claims on the Baltic states through racial minorities. No official comment on the reports was available from the Russians while unofficial German quarters scoffed at them.

The U. S. S. R. is known to have a considerable gold reserve but its amount is a state secret. She is not only producing much gold but also was understood to have received a great deal from the former Spanish Republican Government in exchange for war supplies.

Quiet About War Moves

The Soviet press remained quiet on military operations in Poland. Daily communiques from headquarters have been dropped for some time.

Instead, the press was filled with accounts of how citizens in the Russian-occupied area welcomed Sovietization in preparation for a "plebiscite" Sunday in which the Polish Ukraine will vote to join the Soviet Ukraine while Polish White Russia joins hands with Soviet White Russia.

Norway Strengthens Frontier

Puts More Troops on Finnish Border After Strong Soviet Demands Are Reported.

OCT 17 1939

STOCKHOLM, Oct. 16 (A. P.).—Reports received here from Oslo said that Norway had ordered troops to go today to her Finnish border. At that point, Norway is close to Soviet Russia, whose demand for concessions from Finland is to be the subject of a conference of Scandinavian kings starting here Wednesday.

The Norwegian port of Narvik, an outlet for Swedish iron exports and a frequent port of call for German ships before Great Britain began her sea patrol, is in the far northern area.

Sweden re-enforced her own usually open frontier with Finland last Friday.

Kings Haakon of Norway and Christian of Denmark and President Kyosti Kallio of Finland are to meet here Wednesday with their Foreign Ministers at the invitation of King Gustav of Sweden for a discussion of the Finnish and European war questions expected to last two days.

Finns to Continue Talks.

HELSINKI, Oct. 16 (A. P.).—A Foreign Office spokesman said today a Finnish diplomatic mission would return to Moscow for further talks with Soviet Russian officials, but added, "I don't know when."

The spokesman made his prediction shortly after Dr. Juho Kusti Paasikivi, head of the mission, arrived here bearing secret proposals which Finns feared might menace their neutrality—or even their independence.

Dr. Paasikivi, greeted expectantly by a city tense with repressed excitement, went into conference with Foreign Minister Eljas Erkko less than an hour after his arrival. It was expected the Government would issue a communique commenting upon his report this evening.

Dr. Paasikivi stepped from his train at 9:50 A. M. (2:50 A. M., New York time) to be greeted by Government officials while a crowd of several thousand stood silent in the background.

The envoy remained at the Foreign Ministry about an hour, then went to the office of Prime Minister Aimo Kaarlo Cajander, where it was understood he would hold a more detailed discussion with assembled heads of the Government.

Returning to Helsinki with Dr. Paasikivi were Finland's Minister to Moscow, Baron Aarno S. Yrjo-Koshkinen, and various Foreign Office tecnical experts who accompanied the mission to the Soviet capital.

Not Before Wednesday.

It was believed unlikely that Dr. Paasikivi would return to Moscow until after the conference Wednesday at Stockholm of representatives from Sweden, Denmark, Norway and Finland.

Dr. Paasikivi's reception at the Helsinki station contrasted sharply with his departure for Moscow last week, when crowds sang the national anthem and the patriotic hymn, "Our Land Shall Never Bend Before a Foreign Tyrant."

The silence remained unbroken as Paasikivi walked to the waiting automobile between his wife and Prime Minister Cajander. The envoy's face relaxed in a faint smile as he stepped into the car to be driven to a hotel before proceeding to the Foreign Office. The lack of street demonstrations indicated that the Finns regarded the situation as the most serious crisis the republic had faced in the twenty-one years of its existence.

[Moscow sources said the mission was expected to return in five days after reporting on the progress of the talks. Foreign circles there said that they expected Finland would grant the Soviet permission to establish naval bases on certain islands in the Gulf of Finland, but reported an impasse on a military alliance and disposition of the Aaland Islands.]

Hastens Military Preparations.

Finland, meanwhile, continued to hasten preparations to meet any eventuality and back up her expressed determination to resist any pressure threatening her independence.

Organization of industrial firms was undertaken today to guarantee corporations compensation up to 75 per cent of losses resulting from war emergency conditions. The compensation would be applicable to property not covered by insurance.

All strategic bridges and buildings were guarded heavily, and uniformed men appeared in streets of principal cities in increasing numbers. Reserves were being mustered in Helsinki and the surrounding district. Many restaurants were devoting half of their facilities to feeding the troops.

Signs were distributed to every Helsinki apartment house telling occupants what to do in case flight from the city should be necessary.

SOVIET PLANS DETAILS ARE KEPT SECRET

Spokesman Says Russ Demands "Present Serious Questions"

Believes Solution Can Be Found, But Defense Work Continues

By LYNN HEINZERLING
[Associated Press Correspondent]

Helsinki, Finland, Oct. 16—The Finnish Government today studied undisclosed Soviet Russian proposals brought back by its mission to Moscow, and a spokesman said later "we remain calm and believe a solution can be found."

There was no evidence of slackening in defense measures, however, and it was announced more air-raid drills were planned shortly. These steps were described by the Government as a precaution against possible violation of "our independence and neutrality."

Solution Expected

"The Russian demands present serious questions," the spokesman said, "but a practical solution can be found, in our opinion, if both sides show good will. We are trying so far as possible to understand the proposals made by the Soviet and find a way to a peaceful solution."

The return to Moscow of Dr. Juho Kusti Paasikivi, head of the Finnish mission, had not been expected for several days. Meanwhile, Government observers described the negotiations as presenting the most serious crisis in the history of the republic.

"We are not trying to drag out negotiations or gain time, but we are studying the questions and that takes time," a Foreign Office spokesman declared.

Holds Long Parley

Dr. Paasikivi first held a conference with Foreign Minister Eljas Erkko and then a longer meeting with President Kyosti Kallio and other Government representatives after he returned this morning. Technical experts who accompanied Paasikivi to the Kremlin conferences were present at the meetings.

Paasikivi, who appeared stern-faced in a meeting with newspaper men, declined to comment on the conferences, confining his remarks to Moscow's "fine weather" and his visit to the agricultural show.

Talks "Very Pleasant"

He said Joseph Stalin and his Commissar of Foreign Affairs, Vyacheslaff Molotoff, were active in the negotiations, adding that the conversations were "very pleasant."

The Cabinet planned another session tomorrow on the proposals.

Bearing what many Finns believed were demands which might jeopardize the neutrality or even the independence of their country, Dr. Paasikivi was greeted by a crowd of serious-faced and silent admirers at the station.

To Leave For Stockholm

It was announced the Helsinki delegation to the meeting of the northern states at Stockholm Wednesday would leave by special plane. Included in the delegation will be President Kallio, Foreign Minister Erkko and Dr. Aaro Pashaslahti, director of the political branch of the Foreign Office. Finland, Denmark and Norway were invited to the conference to express "solidarity" of the Scandinavian countries.

A Government spokesman expressed no concern at a report that fifteen Russian warships were anchored at Tallinn, Estonian harbor a few miles across the Gulf of Finland from Helsinki.

The spokesman said it was "in accordance with the Soviet agreement with Estonia."

RUMANIA RALLIES POLITICAL FORCES

Plans Nation-Wide Mobilization As Country Observes Carol's 46th Birthday

Students, Youth Groups And Scouts Joined To Supervise Own Military Training

[By the Associated Press]

Bucharest, Oct. 16—A nation-wide "political mobilization" under the Front of National Rebirth was announced today after a meeting of Government officials.

The announcement was made by Premier Argetoianu during the country-wide observance of King Carol's forty-sixth birthday. The decision was represented as Carol's wish.

Local committees will be appointed to create a strong party organization in every village and town. The aim is to create an effective instrument to control further all dissident political elements.

In recent weeks numerous executions of pro-Nazi Iron Guard members have taken place, especially since the assassination of Premier Calinescu. Police during the day continued to arrest members intending, apparently, definitely to eliminate the Iron Guard as an organization.

Beginning Tuesday the newspaper Romania will become the official organ in these extended operations of the Front of National Rebirth, the country's official and only legal political party.

Emphasize Nation's Unity

Rumania celebrated the King's birthday with patriotic demonstrations, concerts and torchlight parades designed to emphasize the nation's unity. The Front of National Rebirth played the leading role.

Although the tension and anxiety which developed when Soviet troops first appeared on the Bessarabian border has decreased considerably, Rumanian troops still were posted on the Bulgarian and Hungarian frontiers.

A University Front will include all students and youth organizations, including the Boy Scouts. This organization will supervise the military training of all such groups. The Iron Guard has been particularly active among students.

Interest here centers on the anticipated meeting of the Turkish Foreign Minister, Shukru Saracoglu, and the Rumanian Foreign Minister, Grigore Gafencu, when the former returns from Moscow. It was reported that M. Gafencu also might go to Sofia, Bulgaria, for discussions in efforts to insure peace and neutrality for the Balkan States.

Rumanians Gaily Observe Carol's 46th Birthday

BUCHAREST, Oct. 16 (A. P.).—Rumania was in a festive holiday spirit today in celebration of the forty-sixth birthday anniversary of King Carol.

Favored by excellent weather, the capital's populace thronged the gaily decorated streets and public squares where orchestras played through the day-long festivities.

High military, civilian and diplomatic figures attended a service at the Bucharest Cathedral, where prayers were said for King and country. At noon, King Carol was host at a palace luncheon and spoke of the achievements of his reign.

Celebrations were staged in all sections of the country. At the frontier, soldiers assembled to hear messages from the Government.

HUNGARIAN COUP REPORTED FOILED

140 of Outlawed Pro-Nazi Group Said to Be Held.

BUDAPEST, Oct. 16 (A. P.).—Hungarian Nazis today reported police had arrested 140 members of the outlawed Hungarist "Death Legion" to head off a coup against the Government.

Though there was no confirmation from official sources, Nazis said the mass arrests occurred Saturday with the seizure of large quantities of guns and ammunition.

Plans for the coup, Nazis said, included the assassination of seventeen members of Parliament.

One leader of the legion, a pro-Nazi group which is at bitter odds with other branches of the Hungarian Nazis, was said to have been captured in a Budapest air raid shelter. Five other leaders were reported to have escaped into Austria. Rifles, hand grenades and machine-guns were said to be included in the war supplies seized by police.

Nazis declared that the dissident Death Legion had plotted to kill several Nazi leaders, among them Kalman Hubay, successor to Ferenc Szalasi, the "Hungarian Hitler" who is serving a three-year prison sentence for "incitement against the constitution."

BELGRADE, Oct. 16 (A. P.).—Two German customs officers stationed on the Yugoslav side of the border with Germany were arrested today on a charge of spying on Yugoslavia's frontier military establishments.

PLOT INCLUDED DEATH FOR 17 IN PARLIAMENT

140 Members Of Outlawed 'Death Legion' Arrested. Arms Seized

Perenyi's Arrival Seen As Reflection Of Anxiety Over Soviets' Aims

[By the Associated Press]

Budapest, Oct. 16—A projected putsch by Hungarian Nazi extremists, which was said to include the assassination of seventeen members of Parliament, today was reported crushed with the arrest of 140 members of the outlawed Hungarianist "Death Legion."

Reliable informants said the Legion's program included not only acting against the Government, but a purge of the badly split Hungarian Nazi movement's more moderate leaders. News of the plot and its outcome was given first by Nazis of the latter classification and a number of Deputies later said they had confirmed the reports.

May Outlaw All Nazi Groups

They said those marked for death included Kalman Hubay, whom the Hungarian Nazis chose to succeed Ference Szalasi, "Hungarian Hitler," after the latter was sentenced to three years in jail.

Although there was no immediate confirmation from official sources, Nazis said the projected putsch was crushed Saturday by the arrests and seizure of a large number of rifles, machine guns and hand grenades which the group allegedly had assembled in its plan to overthrow the Government and install a Nazi regime.

The chief of the secret police conferred with the Minister of Interior several times during the day.

Foreign sources said they believed that as a result of the incident the Government would outlaw all Nazi groups. There are fifty Nazis in Parliament.

Similar To Coup In Rumania

The alleged plot was said to be similar in some respects to the recent abortive coup of the pro-Nazi Iron Guard in Rumania which resulted in the assassination of Premier Armand Calinescu.

Nazi sources said 200 persons so far had been linked to the plot, with police hunting for those still at large. Five leaders were said to have fled into Austria.

Officials said they regarded the "Death Legion" as the most pro-German of the Hungarian Nazi factions, the other elements having turned more nationalistic and some showing rather anti-German tendencies.

Perenyi Arrives By Plane

Division among Hungarian Nazis widened last week as many adherents among Hungary's half millon Germans became alarmed that Adolf Hitler's repatriation program might mean their removal to the Reich.

Reports of the alleged plot came as Sigismund Perenyi, Hungarian Governor of Ruthenia, arrived here by plane in what diplomatic circles regarded as a reflection of Hungary's anxiety over Soviet Russia's aims.

These sources expressed fear that if Russia repossessed Bessarabia from Rumania she might also take Ruthenia from Hungary. Rumania acquired Besssarabia from Russia after the World War and Hungary annexed Ruthena last March in the partition of Czecho-Slovakia.

Historically, Bessarabia was a part of the principality of Moldavia, which united with Wallachia to form Rumania in 1895.

Lithuanians Move Today Into Regained Territory

March Into Vilna Scheduled for Tomorrow

BERLIN, Oct. 16 (AP).—A. D. N. B. (German news agency) dispatch from Kaunas (Kovno), Lithuania, said today that Lithuanian troops would march tomorrow into the former Polish territory newly acquired under the Russian-Lithuanian pact.

The march into Lithuania's former capital, Vilna (Wilno) was scheduled for Wednesday, the dispatch said, adding that exchange of ratification documents of the pact took place at noon.

(Vilna, seized and added to Poland in 1920, became Russian territory recently in the Russian-German division of Poland. The city then was returned to Lithuania as a part of the Russian-Lithuanian pact.)

Trade Pact Signed

MOSCOW, Oct. 16 (AP).—Tass (Soviet news agency) announced tonight a trade agreement between Soviet Russia and the Lithuanian republic was signed here yesterday. The agreement, covering 1939 and 1940, provided for doubling trade between the two countries, Tass said.

(The trade agreement followed by less than a week the signing of the mutual assistance pact between Russia and Lithuania which provided for return to Lithuania of the Vilna region and granted Russia the right to place an undetermined number of troops in Lithuania.)

EMIGRATING TO REICH

Shipload of Germans Leaves Estonia Thursday.

TALLINN, Oct. 16 (A. P.).—The first shipload of German emigrants to leave Estonia under the Reich's resettlement program was expected to leave Thursday.

A mixed commission reached an agreement that all property would be registered to the special account of the German legation, but that any transfer abroad must not injure the Estonian balance payments or economic life.

The emigrants' cash and deposits were estimated at 5,000,000 kroons (about $1,250,000). Total capital investments were estimated as high as $200,000,000.

Nazis' Use of 'Cluster' Torpedoes Indicated; Theory Found to Fit the Royal Oak Sinking

By The Associated Press.

LONDON, Oct. 16—Private naval students today offered a theory that the heavy casualties in the sinking of the battleship Royal Oak resulted from use of a "cluster" torpedo technique by the Nazi submarine.

Observers further suggested the loss of 786 men, the latest official estimates, was influenced by darkness with nearly two-thirds of the crew below in sleeping hammocks.

A system of firing torpedoes in clusters like slugs from a shotgun is entirely plausible from a naval viewpoint, experts said. Many present-day submarines are capable of simultaneous discharges which would send three or four torpedoes into a warship at vital spots.

[The official British announcement on Saturday of the sinking of the Royal Oak said it was believed she was the victim of "U-boat action." German reports said the battleship was torpedoed but gave no further details. Neither stated the time of the sinking.]

The "cluster" torpedo theory was cited as accounting for the speed with which the Royal Oak apparently sank. On New Year's Day, 1915, when the relatively old British battleship Formidable was sunk by a German submarine under cover of darkness, she took two and one-half hours before going down.

In the sinking of the Royal Oak, naval experts said they believed the attacking submarine manoeuvred herself directly in the path of the battleship between the customary screen of anti-submarine craft. The attacker's presence could not be detected in the darkness if she was half-submerged. The bulk of the battleship makes a silhouette discernible as far as 600 yards, the experts said.

Violent renewal of Germany's under-sea attacks after a lull in this type of warfare was regarded in one sense as a natural development.

An accepted theory of submarine warfare is to have one-third of a fleet's submarine at their fighting points, one-third at home being refitted, refueled and overhauled and one-third changing stations.

Germany had most of her submarines at battle stations when the war started and this, some authorities said, accounted for the heavy losses in the first few weeks. After the first six weeks these craft were due for reconditioning.

If Germany followed this one-third system, she would now be in a new attacking phase, they said.

English Are Equipping French Trawlers To Act As Submarine Chasers

London, Oct. 16 (AP)—Today, in what was described as "a remote harbor on the British coast," reporters were allowed to see gray painted trawlers flying the French tricolors, tied up alongside British warships, while being equipped for action as submarine chasers. A French naval commander is in charge of the trawlers, which are manned by French sailors.

From the masthead of each trawler floats the "Flamme de Guerre," a long, narrow red, white and blue pennant. The French sailors, fraternizing with British tars ashore, said they were looking forward eagerly to the hunt.

Berlin Offers Evidence Poland Used English Poison Gas

Berlin, Oct. 16 (AP)—An official announcement tonight said Germany has found "additional substantiation" of German charges that the Poles used poison gas "delivered by England."

In each case, it was charged, poison gas in gombs and liquid form came from a munitions dump at Oxhoeft, near Gdynia, which was Poland's only port.

A store of several thousand mustard gas bombs, the statement said, was found at Mlawa.

French and British Seek Supplies in Argentina

BUENOS AIRES, Oct. 16 (A. P.).—British and French military missions arrived today to survey the possibility of purchasing war supplies in Argentina.

South Africa Starts Fund To Fight Nazi Radio 'Lies'

Smuts Approves $1,000,000 Drive on Propaganda

JOHANNESBURG, Union of South Africa, Oct. 16 (AP).—A subscription fund has been started, with the approval of Prime Minister Gen. J. C. Smuts, to raise about $1,000,000 for the announced purpose of countering German propaganda.

A manifesto said the subscription, called the "Union Unity Fund," would, among other things, be used to prevent "the real issue before the country from becoming clouded by racial animosities."

The statement said that "lies" from the German wireless station at Zeesen, although "fantastic to thinking people," were believed in some of the more remote districts.

(The Union of South Africa voted to break off relations with Germany on Sept. 5. The government announced shortly afterward that it felt one of Germany's war aims was to regain former German colonies in South Africa, and the neutrality in the fact of that situation would be "dishonorable." German southwest Africa was surrendered to the forces of the Union of South Africa on July 9, 1915, at Khorab, and is now administered by the union under a mandate from the League of Nations. It has an area of 317,725 square miles and a population of 0,505, about 9,632 whom are rman-speaking.)

Australia Speeds Arming

Rising War Material Output Held Nearly Self-Sufficient

MELBOURNE, Australia, Oct. 16 (AP).—Australian arms and munitions production, now at capacity to aid the Allied war effort, already is virtually independent of outside supply sources, Commonwealth Treasurer R. G. Casey declared today.

Plane production at the end of this year would be sufficient to equip one complete squadron every three weeks, Casey said. Rapidly expanding armaments production would exceed Australia's defense needs and enable assistance to be given to other parts of the empire, he added.

Nazi-Dutch Trade Talks Seen

BERLIN, Oct. 16 (AP).—Authoritative sources said tonight a Netherlands trade delegation was expected here soon to determine to what extent the economic relations between the two countries may be maintained under war conditions.

FRENCH ATHLETES CALLED TO COLORS

Borotra and Brugnon Are in Artillery Service.

PARIS, Oct. 16 (A. P.).—Jean Borotra, the "Bounding Basque" of France's best Davis cup teams, is delivering a different type of cannon-ball drive these days. As the commander of an artillery battery at the front, he is using a real cannon instead of a tennis racket.

Another member of the famous "Four Musketeers," Jacques Brugnon, also is an artillery captain in another part of the line.

These are only two of the French sports celebrities who exchanged their sweatshirts for khaki when the war broke out.

Georges Carpentier, who will be remembered for having lasted four rounds with Jack Dempsey in Jersey City eighteen years ago, has left his Paris bar to become an aviation sergeant. Georges has kept in perfect physical condition since his retirement from the ring, despite a life of ease made possible by the profits from his bar—a rendezvous for cafe society off the Champs Elysees.

Marcel Thil, who held the world middleweight champion of the international boxing union, is using the husky forearm which battered his ring opponents silly to good advantage in an artillery factory in Champagne.

In appearance, the man from Marne looks as if he already has been through a war. His cauliflowered ears, flattened nose and scarred face bear mute witness to approximately 100 bouts which he has fought since he began his ring career in 1925 at the age of 21.

It is not suprising to see Thil in war service. It always has been his proud boast that he never dodged a fight. Canadian-American Lou Brouillard and some other Yankees who lost to him in France probably wish he hadn't kept his word so faithfully.

Georges Speicher and his sponsor in sport, Andre Leducq, parked their bicycles and marched off with the infantry, Leducq to become a machine-gunner. Both have won celebrated tour de France, the marathon through the provinces which is probably the most famous bicycle race in the world and rivals all other sports in the affections of French fans.

Jules Ladoumegue, France's "wonder runner" who broke Paavo Nurmi's mile record and hung up five other world marks, has become an infantry liaison sergeant in Lorraine. One paper, recalling his prowess as a runner, observed that, with him in the job, the rapidity of liaisons would be "brilliantly [illegible]."

GAS MASKS IN SCHOOL

Paris Children Carry Them Along With Books

PARIS, Oct. 16 (A. P.).—French children went back to school today with gas masks added to their traditional bags of pencils, paper and books. Classes began this morning in many cities and towns after a delay from the normal October 1 reopening because of the war.

Enrollments in Paris high schools, however, were limited to the number their 500 air-raid shelters could accommodate.

Italian Schools Reopen

ROME, Oct. 16 (A. P.).—The reopening of schools for 5,000,000 Italian children today coincided with ceremonies increasing their number in Fascist youth organizations. Virginio Gayda, authoritative editor, made the induction of a new quota of children into youth training and the promotion of others who had been in it before an occasion to defend the system against criticism that it is too military.

"Beyond the Alps," Gayda wrote in the newspaper La Voce d'Italia, "they will continue to talk about the warrior nation which, because of the tender age of those bearing arms, discourages the pure sentiments of the democracies which, while formerly proud of their professional patriotism, today suddenly are armed and at war.

"They will continue to ignore that this comprehensive school prepares not for war, but only for sure defense."

—BEHIND THE NEWS—

OCT 17 1939

[By the Associated Press]

The smaller armies of lesser countries are commanded by career soldiers from military schools.

The gigantic army of the world's largest country is commanded by a man who learned his soldiering when he was thrown into it on the battlefield. Until then he had been a mine-boy, shepherd, farm-laborer, factory-hand, revolutionist and many-times political prisoner. He is Marshal Klementi Efremovich Voroshiloff, Soviet War Commissar.

Prepared For Attack

Russia's present dominant position on the Continent of Europe is due in no small measure to him. Convinced that Red Russia could expect, at any time, a war at the hands of a capitalist power or group of powers, Voroshiloff organized a general staff, mechanized the forces, built a large air fleet, encouraged such novel military ideas as "parachute infantry."

Well-built, powerful-looking astride his horse, easy to talk to, cheerful, and handsome in Russian eyes, 'Klim' has come a long way.

Earned Nickel A Day

Born in 1881 into the family of a railway watchman, Voroshiloff went to work at 7, earning a nickel a day in a mine. At 10, he turned shepherd and farm-laborer. At 18, he organized and led a foundry strike, was blacklisted by the police, found himself unable to get another job. At 22, he joined the Lenin-led (Bolshevik) wing of the Russian Social-Democratic Labor party.

Series Of Arrests

His life became a series of arrests, exiles, escapes and resumptions of revolutionary activity. The Russian Revolution of 1917 turned him into a military man.

Generally considered the ablest commander to emerge from the civil wars that followed the revolution, Voroshiloff was promoted to increasingly important posts, finally becoming People's Commissar for Military and Naval Affairs in 1925.

Mussolini Smiles but Remains Silent at Ceremony

ROME, Oct. 16 (AP).—Thirty thousand Romans and Fascist youths cheered a brief appearance today of Premier Benito Mussolini, who smilingly acknowledged their salutes but offered no word of greeting. The occasion was the reopening of schools for 5,000,000 Italian children.

Mussolini, wearing the black Fascist uniform and accompanied by high Fascist officials, was given a salute of machine-gun fire as he left the velvet-draped platform at Borghese Gardens, where he stood for fifteen minutes. The only speaker was Lieut. Gen. Achille Starace, secretary of the Fascist party, who recounted the growth of Fascist Youth organizations.

Il Duce Wildly Cheered By Crowd of 30,000

ROME, Oct. 16 (A. P.).—Premier Mussolini was wildly acclaimed by a crowd of 30,000 when he made a brief appearance today at a manifestation of Fascist youth in the broad Piazza di Siena.

He repeatedly acknowledged the salutes of the throngs shouting his name, but departed after fifteen minutes at ceremonies marking the start of a new school year. He did not address the assemblage.

A TWO-ENGINED PLANE, PRESUMED BY OBSERVERS TO BE A GERMAN BOMBER, WAS SEEN FLYING LOW BETWEEN EDINBURGH AND TORBURNIE

UCT 17 1939

WAS SEEN FLYING LOW BETWEEN EDINBURGH AND TORBURNIE, A SMALL TOWN WEST OF THE CITY. MACHINE-GUN FIRE GREETED IT AND, AS THE PLANE TURNED NORTH TOWARD THE FIRTH OF FORTH, AN ANTI-AIRCRAFT SHELL BURST NEAR ITS TAIL.

ONE REPORT SAID THREE ENEMY PLANES HAD FLOWN UP THE FIRTH OF FORTH, THE GREAT BAY WHICH DENTS THE EAST COAST OF SCOTLAND. EDINBURGH IS ABOUT 300 AIR MILES FROM GERMANY.

SHELL FRAGMENTS WERE PICKED UP IN EDINBURGH STREETS AFTER THE FIRING CEASED. NO AIR RAID ALARM SOUNDED FOR THE CITY.

OBSERVERS SAID THAT DURING THE FIRST BURST OF FIRE NO PLANES WERE VISIBLE. THEN FIRING CEASED AND THREE ROYAL AIR FORCE PLANES STREAKED ACROSS THE SKY AT LOW ALTITUDE. WHEN THEY HAD VANISHED, THE ANTI-AIRCRAFT GUNS REOPENED FIRE.

BUT THE PRESS IS QUICK TO SCOLD OFFICIALDOM ON ANYTHING CONSIDERED LIKELY TO HURT BUSINESS UNDULY. GERMANS HAVE SAID THERE WERE SOME 15,000 GERMANS IN ESTONIA.

THE AGREEMENT, DIENST AUS DEUTSCHLAND SAID, PROVIDED THAT ALL ESTONIAN NATIONALS WHO REGISTERED WITH THE MINISTRY OF CULTURE AS BELONGING TO THE GERMAN MINORITY WOULD BE PERMITTED TO CANCEL THEIR ESTONIAN CITIZENSHIP AND LEAVE THE COUNTRY WITHIN THREE MONTHS.

WIVES, HUSBANDS, CHILDREN AND PARENTS OF SUCH REGISTERED GERMAN-ESTONIANS WOULD HAVE THE SAME PRIVILEGE.

MONEY IN EXCESS OF 50 KROONS WILL BE DEPOSITED TO THE REPATRIATED PERSON'S CREDIT AND TRANSFERRED AS SOON AS PRACTICABLE INTO GERMAN MARKS.

THE WAR TODAY

BY DEWITT MACKENZIE 16/10/39

OCT 17 1939

THE EUROPEAN UPHEAVAL HAS PRODUCED TWO IMPORTANT DEVELOPMENTS OVER THE WEEK-END.

THE FIRST IS THE RATHER SENSATIONAL SPURT OF THE GERMAN SUBMARINE CAMPAIGN, WHICH MAY SIGNAL A FRESH U-BOAT OFFENSIVE TO TRY AT ONE AND THE SAME TIME TO BREAK THE BRITISH NAVAL BLOCKADE AND TO CUT OFF ENGLAND'S OWN FOOD SUPPLIES BY DESTRUCTION OF MERCHANT SHIPPING.

THE OTHER IS THE SLOWING DOWN, AT LEAST TEMPORARILY, OF THE RUSSIAN DRIVE FOR DOMINATION OF EASTERN EUROPE AND THE BALKANS. THIS HAS BEEN DUE TO THE RESOLUTE RESISTANCE OF FINLAND ON THE NORTH AND TURKEY ON THE SOUTH TO WHAT ARE REPORTED AS SWEEPING SOVIET DEMANDS.

BOTH FINLAND AND TURKEY REPRESENT POWERFUL STRATEGIC POINTS IN THE SOVIET SCHEME FOR OVERLORDSHIP OF THE VAST TERRITORY REACHING FROM THE BALTIC TO THE EASTERN MEDITERRANEAN.

DOMINATION OF FINLAND WOULD GIVE RUSSIA CONTROL OF THE OCT 17 1939 BALTIC AREA AND PROVIDE A POWERFUL POSITION FOR EITHER DEFENSIVE OR OFFENSIVE MEASURES IN RELATION TO WESTERN EUROPE.

CONTROL OF TURKEY, AND CONSEQUENTLY OF THE ALL-IMPORTANT DARDANELLES WHICH ARE THE GATEWAY TO THE BLACK SEA, WOULD MAKE RUSSIA PRETTY WELL MASTER OF THE EASTERN END OF THE MEDITERRANEAN-- A VIGOROUS CHALLENGE TO BRITAIN, FRANCE, ITALY AND GERMANY.

DIPLOMATIC QUARTERS IN MOSCOW BELIEVED TURKEY MIGHT SIGN A CAUTIOUS AGREEMENT, ACCEDING TO RUSSIA'S DEMANDS THAT BELLIGERENT WARSHIPS BE PREVENTED FROM PASSING THROUGH THE DARDANELLES. THIS IS AIMED AT THE ANGLO-FRENCH ALLIES, AND WOULD CUT THEM OFF FROM RUMANIA.

BEYOND THAT, HOWEVER, AUTHORITATIVE QUARTERS IN ISTANBUL SAID TURKEY HAD REFUSED TO RECOGNIZE THE PARTITION OF POLAND, THE CREATION OF A RUSSO-GERMAN NEUTRAL BLOC IN THE BALKANS, AND EXPANSION OF RUSSIA AND BULGARIA BY TAKING TERRITORY FROM RUMANIA.

TURKEY ALSO IS SAID TO HAVE ANNOUNCED THAT SHE WOULD JOIN THE ANGLO-FRENCH ALLIES IF ITALY SHOULD SIDE WITH GERMANY.

THE POINT OF THIS IS THAT TURKEY'S WHOLE INCLINATION IS TO PLAY WITH ENGLAND AND FRANCE. SHE IS AFRAID OF THE SPREAD OF SOVIET INFLUENCE IN THE BALKANS, AFRAID OF GERMANY AND PERHAPS MORE AFRAID OF WHAT SHE REGARDS AS ITALIAN AMBITION FOR TERRITORIAL EXPANSION IN ASIA MINOR.

MEANTIME RUSSIA WAS REPORTED TO BE MASSING TROOPS ON THE BORDERS OF TURKEY AND PERSIA (A REPORT WHICH THE SOVIET HAS DENIED), AND THE SITUATION WAS DELICATE.

WHAT DEMANDS RUSSIA HAS MADE ON LITTLE FINLAND REMAIN A SECRET, BUT FINLAND IS SAID TO FEAR DEMANDS WHICH WILL TRESPASS ON HER SOVEREIGNTY. THE FINNS ARE RESISTING ANY CLAIMS WHICH WOULD TEND TO MAKE HER A VIRTUAL SOVIET PROTECTORATE AS IN THE CASES OF LATVIA, ESTONIA AND LITHUANIA.

THE SINKING OF THE GREAT BRITISH BATTLE CRUISER ROYAL OAK BY A GERMAN SUBMARINE, WITH THE DROWNING OF CLOSE TO 800 MEN, AND THE DESTRUCTION OF THREE MERCHANT SHIPS, WAS FOLLOWED THIS MORNING BY ANOTHER SENSATIONAL REPORT. OCT 17 1939

THE GERMAN SUPREME COMMAND ANNOUNCED THAT THE SAME SUBMARINE WHICH SUNK THE ROYAL OAK HAD REGISTERED A TORPEDO HIT ON BRITISH BATTLESHIP REPULSE, PUTTING HER OUT OF ACTION. THE REPULSE IS A BIGGER SHIP THAN THE GREAT ROYAL OAK.

WHILE THE SINKING OF THE ANCIENT ROYAL OAK IN ITSELF DOESN'T SERIOUSLY THREATEN THE BRITISH BLOCKADE, THE FACT THAT THE GERMANS HAVE TORPEDOES POWERFUL ENOUGH TO SINK A BATTLESHIP MUST CAUSE CONCERN TO THE BRITISH ADMIRALTY. THAT WOULD APPEAR TO REPRESENT

30.24-4077. 30.24-4099

A NEW DEVELOPMENT IN NAVAL WARFARE.

THE SINKING OF FURTHER MERCHANT SHIPPING, COUPLED WITH THE EXPECTATION OF GERMAN AIRRAIDS ON SHIPS IN ENGLISH PORTS, IS A MATTER OF EQUAL CONCERN.

BRITAIN HERSELF IS DEPENDENT ON IMPORTS FOR 75 PERCENT OF HER FOODSTUFFS. SHOULD THESE SUPPLIES BE CUT OFF, AS THE GERMANS ARE TRYING TO DO, SHE WOULD BE IN A DESPERATE WAY.

SCAPA FLOW BOMBED; BATTLESHIP DAMAGED

Iron Duke Was Anchored in Orkney Harbor, Where Royal Oak Was Sunk Saturday —Four German Planes Shot Down.

LONDON, Oct. 17 (A.P.).—The British Admiralty disclosed tonight that the Germans had made two air attacks in a day on the Orkney Islands, location of the Scapa Flow naval base.

The first raid was made at 10:30 A. M. (4:30 A. M., New York time). The second took place between 12:30 P. M. and 2:30 P. M.

The British reported that, in the first raid, one German plane had been shot down and another probably damaged. In the second attack the Nazi raiders lost one plane, hit by a shore anti-aircraft battery.

OCT 18 1939

Two More Planes Shot Down.

Tonight it was officially announced that two German planes observed off the northeast coast of Britain today had been shot down by the Royal Air Force.

The announcement, issued by the Air Ministry read:

"Subsequent to reports of enemy activity on the east coast today two enemy aircraft were later observed on the northeast coast and were attacked by Royal Air Force fighters.

"Both were shot down by our fighters and fell into the sea. The crew of one were rescued. Our aircraft returned safely."

In the first attack the German bombers damaged the British naval training ship Iron Duke, it was announced by the Government, which also disclosed that the battleship Royal Oak had been sunk in the same harbor by a German submarine on Saturday.

In the second raid no damage was done, according to the British Admiralty. Two formations of raiders—six planes in one and four in the other—participated in the second attack.

OCT 18 1939

British Steamship Escapes Bombs.

The Royal Mail steamship Stola, which plies between Scapa Flow and Thurso, a port in north Scotland, reported that she was attacked by German planes this morning. Bombs fell around the vessel, but she was not hit.

The Admiralty communique regarding the second raid said:

"A second air attack was carried out over the Orkneys from approximately 12:30 P. M. to 2:30 P. M. today by two formations of six and four aircraft respectively.

"No damage was done and no casualties were sustained. One German aircraft was reported to have been destroyed."

Lord Chatfield, Minister for Defense Co-ordination, told the House of Lords that about four enemy planes participated in the first raid on the Orkney Island naval base, where German crews scuttled the German fleet after the world war.

Two bombs fell near the Iron Duke, a 21,250-ton battleship built in 1912, which had served as Admiral Jellicoe's flagship in the world war and was turned into a training ship under the 1930 London naval treaty. The Iron Duke was damaged today, but there were no casualties aboard her.

This raid on Scapa Flow, the Government spokesmen said, occurred at 10:30 A. M. One German plane was shot down in flames and another probably was damaged, Lord Chatfield said.

[In Berlin officials said that a second attack on British warships in Scapa Flow had been made today at 10:30 A. M., this time by planes. "After a week or ten days of this uninterrupted attacking, Britain will see what is left of her fleet," one highly placed person said tonight.]

Plane Driven Out to Sea.

Meanwhile a German plane was chased out to sea off the Yorkshire coast, while air raid warnings were sounded over a broad eastern coastal area, the Air Ministry announced.

"Immediate action was taken by our fighter and anti-aircraft defenses" after enemy air reconnaissance activity was spotted along the coast, the announcement said. "No bombs have been dropped on any of these districts."

The air raid alarms were sounded along a 350-mile stretch of English and Scottish coasts, the nearest point to London being twenty miles. All clear signals were sounded within an hour.

OCT 18 1939

Prime Minister Chamberlain made a statement in the House of Commons identical with Lord Chatfield's, and Winston Churchill, First Lord of the Admiralty, also told of developing warfare at sea.

Lord Chatfield said it was still a matter of conjecture how the submarine penetrated the defenses of Scapa Flow Harbor Saturday to attack the Royal Oak. He said the entry must be considered a remarkable exploit of professional skill and daring.

A board of inquiry is now sitting at Scapa Flow.

Lord Chatfield said it appeared that the submarine fired two starboard torpedoes at the Royal Oak, of which only one hit, striking the bow. The muffled explosion was first attributed to internal causes and the ship's store of inflammables was flooded on the basis of the first conjecture.

He added that about twenty minutes later the submarine fired three or four torpedoes and these, striking in quick succession, caused the warship to capsize and sink.

Anchorage Is Searched.

The Royal Oak, he said, was lying at the extreme end of the harbor and, therefore, many officers and men drowned before a rescue could be organized.

"As it is, it does not affect the margin of security in heavy vessels, which remains ample," he added. "An intensive search of the anchorage has yielded no results yet. All necessary measures are being taken to increase the protection which in the last war proved effectual."

The German air raid today was the second in two days on British naval centers. In yesterday's raid at the Firth of Forth near Edinburgh, Scotland, sixteen lives were lost, forty-six men were injured and four to seven German warplanes were reported unofficially to have been brought down.

Many Submarines Destroyed.

Both Mr. Churchill and Lord Chatfield followed their accounts of German victories against British seapower with assertions that Great Britain had gained striking successes against the German submarine fleet. They estimated that from one-fourth to one-third of that fleet had been destroyed since the beginning of the war.

Mr. Churchill added that "nothing like this rate of destruction was obtained at any moment in the last war."

In the first six weeks of the war, he said, "we may estimate that thirteen U-boats have been sunk, five seriously damaged and possibly sunk and several others damaged." He added that these figures are probably an understatement.

OCT 18 1939

He also announced that four submarines, including two of the large ocean-going type, were destroyed last Friday, the day before the Royal Oak was sunk.

Before today only the bare fact that the Royal Oak had been sunk, "believed by U-boat action," had been disclosed, with the casualty lists showing only 416 saved out of approximately 1,200 men aboard.

Dealing with the campaign against submarines, Mr. Churchill said that in addition to those mentioned, "two-thirds of the German U-boats which were operating have suffered attack from depth charges."

He said that the French Navy also had been active, but he did not give any figures on its results.

He said about sixty German submarines were ready for action at the outbreak of the war.

Continuing, Mr. Chamberlain said:

"The British mercantile marine of 21,000,000 tons has experienced a loss of 156,000 tons by U-boat action, to which may be added 18,000 tons through mines or accidents—total 174,000 tons.

"During the same period we have captured from the enemy 29,000 tons and have been refreshed by the arrival of new ships amounting to 104,000 tons.

"It will be seen, therefore, that while our mercantile marine remains practically unaffected by the U-boat warfare, losses have been inflicted upon the enemy which, if continued, would certainly not be endured."

Scapa Flow, the naval base off the northern tip of Scotland and the scene of the scuttling of the German fleet on June 21, 1919, was a main base of the British fleet during the world war, but it was temporarily abandoned by battleships and battle cruisers in the early part of that war because of the menace of German submarine attack.

The capital ships were taken around the west coast of Scotland because the anti-submarine defenses of the anchorage were considered inadequate. It had been generally assumed in Great Britain in recent months that the Admiralty had strengthened the defenses of Scapa Flow to minimize the danger of a new German attack.

OCT 18 1939

Air Raid Alarms Sent.

The alarms that were sounded today along the English and Scottish coasts were given by alert air raid precautions men on their toes after the failure to sound an alarm at Edinburgh yesterday.

The alarm began about 11 A. M. and in most instances all clear signals were given within an hour.

At Felixstone, in the important Harwich Harbor area, sixty miles northeast of London, a warning sounded at 1:30 P. M., with the all clear signal about thirty minutes later.

Places where air raid warnings were sounded included the following: Scunthorpe, Ipswich, Grimsby, Chatham, Newcastle, Sunderland, North and South Shields, Ramsgate, Southend, Cleethorpes, Driffield and Chelmsford.

The places nearest to London were Southend, on the north bank of the Thames estuary, and Chatham, key naval base on the south coast of the estuary, about twenty miles from the capital.

Warnings along the Firth of Forth included one at the mining center of Boness and at Dunfermline, north of the naval base of Rosyth, which was the center of the attack yesterday. Warning signals were sounded also at Hall and Bridlington.

The Air Ministry announced unidentified aircraft were reported near Hull and Grimsby shortly before 11 A. M. The communique said that precautionary measures were taken and an air raid warning given. No enemy aircraft were identified there, the Ministry said.

Dunfermline officials were indignant again today because they were, they said, nearly ten minutes late in being given the warning signal in comparison with other nearby towns.

The Government undertook a rigid inquiry into the failure of air raid lookouts to forewarn the civilian population yesterday—a failure which brought sharp comment from the press.

Some excitement was caused in the Kings Cross area of northern London, when a whistle sounded. Employees of some factories in the neighborhood were told that it was an air raid warning. No one seemed to know whether it was a genuine alarm, but several hundred persons went into shelter.

OCT 18 1939

Southampton Is Hit.

The Admiralty reported that the bombers had slightly damaged the 9,100-ton cruiser Southampton yesterday at the Firth of Forth and sunk an admiral's barge and a pinnace moored alongside.

The Admiralty said that the Southampton, the first British warship admittedly struck by German air raiders since the start of hostilities, was "ready for sea." The hit, it was said, was a glancing blow on the bow, scored by a dive bomber. Two other war vessels, the cruiser Edinburgh and the destroyer Mohawk, were showered with bomb splinters but were reported undamaged.

The Royal Air Force fighters, which drove the German planes into the fire of fleet and shore anti-aircraft batteries and later pursued them out to sea, suffered no casualties, the Admiralty said.

The Nazi bombers failed to hit the famous $15,000,000 bridge across the Firth of Forth, although bombs dropped near the structure, sending geysers of water spouting high into the air.

The destruction of the bridge might have bottled up the war vessels moored in the Firth, observers said.

Throughout the raid, railroad trains continued to cross the high span between Rosyth and the south bank of the Firth, giving the passengers a thrilling glimpse of the air battle raging overhead.

British Press Comment.

British press comment termed "reassuring" the manner in which the raid had been met.

"That all raids on Great Britain will have results as unimportant," the Daily Telegraph said, "is too much to be hoped, but at least there is reassuring evidence of the fallibility of the bomber and the strength of our defenses."

The Daily Express descried the "first test" as a victory for Great Britain's defenses, and added: "Now we must make ready to drop ten bombs on German military objectives for every one that drops in Britain."

The Times said that "the abortive raid on the Firth of Forth may be the precursor" of a German air offensive.

OCT 18 1939

Failure To Give Warning.

Criticizing the failure of the air raid watchmen to sound warnings, the Edinburgh Evening News, saying that pieces of shells fell in many parts of the city, declared: "We have an expensive and comprehensive air raid precautionary service. It was not operated by those in authority who have warned our housewives against light showing through chinks in blinds at night and have filled our houses with warning literature, to say nothing of broadcast lectures.

"And yet this daring raid took place and the public were left guessing whether it was a sham fight or the real thing."

The News added: "This war has produced many muddles and blunders, but none so extraordinary as that in the first air raid over Britain not even an air raid warden blew his whistle."

AIR-RAID ALARMS

OCT 18 1939

[By the Associated Press]

London, Oct. 17—Air-raid warning signals were sounded today at the Firth of Forth in Scotland, scene of yesterday's German warplane raid, and also at Southend, Hull and other points on England's east coast.

The Firth of Forth warning was given at Boness, Scotland, a coal mining area. It came at 11.12 A. M. and was followed by an "all clear" signal at 11.30.

The Southend warning was given at 1.33 P. M. Southend is about fifty miles east of the center of London.

Earlier Warnings Given

Earlier in the day raid warnings were sounded at Hull, Grimsby and Bridlington on the east coast of Yorkshire.

The alert action of the civil defenses was in sharp contrast with yesterday's sensational and deadly engagement of British air and coastal forces in Scotland with German planes, during which warning devices were silent.

Hull A Key Port

Hull, a city of about 300,000, is the key port of England's fishing fleets and has 186 acres of vital dockyards. Grimsby, fifteen miles southeast of Hull, has about 100,000 population, and Bridlington, twenty-six miles northeast, about 15,000.

OCT 18 1939

The Air Ministry, meanwhile, announced that a number of British planes made successful daylight reconnaissance flights over western and northwestern Germany yesterday and that one aircraft had not returned.

The casualty toll of yesterday's air raid on the Rosyth naval base was announced officially today as fifteen dead and twelve seriously injured. This superseded a communique last night listing the casualties at thirty-five, including eight slightly injured.

These were casualties among naval personnel, the only civilian wounded being an Edinburgh man struck by a stray bullet.

"Too Costly For Success"

Asserting that at least four of twelve or fourteen Nazi bombers had been shot down during the attack at Rosyth, British military observers said the German percentage of loss had proved too costly to make the raid a success.

The London Star estimated that seven bombers were brought down, rather than "at least four," as the Government announced.

At the same time, the Government undertook a rigid inquiry into the failure of air-raid lookouts to forewarn the civilian population, a failure which brought sharp comment from the British press.

"Public Left Guessing"

The Edinburgh Evening News, saying pieces of shells fell in many parts of the city, declared, "We have an expensive and comprehensive air-raid precautionary service. It was not operated by those in authority who have warned our housewives against light showing through chinks in blinds at night and have filled our houses with warning literature, to say nothing of broadcast lectures.

"And yet, this daring raid took place and the public were left guessing whether it was a sham fight or the real thing."

The News said, "This war has produced many muddles and blunders, but none so extraordinary as that in the first air raid over Britain. Not even an air-raid warden blew his whistle."

GERMANS REPEAT ATTACK ON BASE AT SCAPA FLOW, DAMAGING TRAINING SHIP

London Reports Four Of Enemy Aircraft Shot Down—Berlin Claims 'Battleship' Was Bombed With Loss Of Only One Flyer

OCT 18 1939

LONDON—German air raiders struck three times yesterday at northeastern Britain, with Scapa Flow, home of the British fleet, as their objective. The Admiralty reports that in the first attack four German planes damaged the training ship Iron Duke with the loss of one plane; in the second, ten planes inflicted no damage, but one was shot down; in the third, two planes were encountered at sea and both shot down by Royal Air Force flyers.

Churchill corroborates the sinking of the battleship Royal Oak, notifying Commons a submarine torpedoed her at Scapa Flow Saturday with a loss of over 800 lives, and expressing his bewilderment over the Germans' feat.

BERLIN—The official German account says a British battleship was bombed and a British warplane shot down with the loss of only one German plane.

One of the four planes was said by the British to have been shot down in this first attack, and another damaged.

The second attack was from 12.30 to 2.30, and was by "two formations of six and four aircraft," the Admiralty said.

No damage was done, and one German plane destroyed, the Admiralty reported.

2 Planes Shot Down

Of the third attack an official announcement said: "Subsequent to reports of enemy activity on the east coast today two enemy aircraft were later observed on the northeast coast and were attacked by Royal Air Force fighters. Both were shot down by our fighters and fell into the sea."

The Admiralty said there were no casualties in either raid.

German aviation also was active against merchant shipping.

The Admiralty said that during the morning the steamer St. Ola was attacked here near the Scapa Flow area of the Orkney Islands and bombs dropped about her but that none took effect.

OCT 18 1939

Trawler Escapes

German airplanes also were reported to have dropped bombs near a Belgian trawler between the mainland of Scotland and the Orkneys. The trawler was not hit, reports from the area said.

Air-raid alarms sounded over a broad coastal area shortly after the Scapa Flow attack. A communique said one German plane was chased out to sea off the Yorkshire coast, but added that no bombs were dropped in any of the districts over which the German scouting flights were made.

Warnings were sounded as far north as the Firth of Forth area around Edinburgh and as close to London as the Chatham naval base, only twenty miles down the Thames. Cities and towns where alarms were given included Grimsby, Southend, Felixstowe, Bridlington, Ipswich, Cleethorpes, Driffield and Chelmsford.

Warnings Given Quickly

The air-raid warnings today apparently were given quickly by a protection corps, on its toes in the wake of criticism over failure to sound a warning at Edinburgh during the Firth of Forth raid. Prime Minister Chamberlain explained the Edinburgh situation by saying that the fighting there was localized and a warning would have caused "inconvenience over a wide area."

At Grimsby a middle-aged man collapsed and died during the warning today. A wedding party was caught inside a church and stayed until the all-clear signal. The bridegroom is a member of the Royal Air Force.

Hull police had arranged for an air-raid rehearsal which turned into the real thing.

On the sea lanes the sinking of the 5,186-ton French steamer Vermont by a submarine was disclosed when forty-three members of the crew picked up by a British warship were landed at a south England port. Two seamen were lost and four of the survivors were injured.

"We were told by the German captain that he was sorry he could not accommodate us in the submarine," one survivor related in telling of the attack on the ship. "He wished us luck."

OCT 18 1939

London

[By the Associated Press]

London, Oct. 17—German warplanes struck thrice today at the Scapa Flow lair of Britain's fleet, hitting and damaging the training ship Iron Duke, and ranged over the east coast of England and Scotland in widespread scouting raids.

Four German planes were reported shot down, bringing their losses to eight in two days.

The attacks followed yesterday's raid on the Edinburgh and Firth of Forth area, in which three British naval vessels were slightly damaged, sixteen sailors and officers killed and forty-five injured.

They came as the Government disclosed that the heavily defended Scapa Flow harbor was the scene of the U-boat sinking Saturday of the battleship Royal Oak, with 786 men lost.

Training Ship Struck

In the first attack today, at 10.30 A. M., four German planes damaged the training ship Iron Duke, Admiral Jellicoe's flagship in the World War. Scapa Flow was the scene of one of the most dramatic incidents in naval history when the German high seas fleet was scuttled there June 21, 1919, by German sailors who opened the seacocks rather than let the British have the surrendered ships intact.

British Raider Seen Flying Toward Emden—Firing Follows

WINSCHOTEN, The Netherlands, Oct. 17 (AP).—Villagers along Dollart Bay today heard heavy firing from the direction of Emden, and reported they saw a British bomber flying toward that German port.

The firing was heard very distinctly at Karel, Coenraad-Polder and Drieborg. It is only about three miles across the neck of Dollart Bay from

The Netherlands coast to Germany.

Observers expressed belief that Emden had been raided from the air.

Artillery fire was first heard about 7 A. M. and again at 11 A. M., when it became so heavy that it rattled windows in Netherlands villages.

Observers saw columns of white smoke rising from the vicinity of Emden but it was not known whether any damage had been done.

The government announced that Netherlands planes were fired on by German anti-aircraft guns near Emden shortly after the attempted British raid.

The government communique said:

"This morning there was shooting from the direction of Emden by anti-aircraft guns on Netherlands planes which flew along the border. The planes were not hit. The Netherlands Government is making a protest at Berlin."

House Painter Is Hit In Edinburgh Raid

LONDON, Oct. 17 (A. P.).—The wounding of an Edinburgh civilian by a stray bullet during the German air raid yesterday was related today by a companion in an account approved for publication.

The wounded man, Joseph MacLusky, was engaged in painting a house with Francis Flynn when the bombers suddenly appeared.

"I was at the top of some stairs and MacLusky was at the bottom step when we heard the sound of aircraft and a big German plane went past the house lower than the church steeple opposite," Flynn said.

"Just then my pal said, 'something has hit me,' and the next minute he crumpled up.

"I went down the stairs and saw blood coming from his waistcoat. He had been wounded in the stomach. So far as I could see, a bullet must have passed me to hit him."

jured, that eleven ratings were seriously injured and thirty-one slightly injured.

The damage to H. M. S. Southampton and H. M. S. Edinburgh was slight and both vessels are ready for sea. The damage to H. M. S. Mohawk is superficial. The enemy were at once engaged by our fighter squadrons and by anti-aircraft fire. Four enemy bombers were brought down, of which one was shot down by gunfire. In addition, a number of other enemy aircraft were heavily engaged and some of these may not have been able to reach home.

As the attack was local and appeared to be developing only on a small scale, and as our defenses were fully ready, it was not considered appropriate in this particular instance to issue an air-raid warning which would have caused dislocation and inconvenience over a wide area.

The responsibility for issuing air-raid warnings must be left to the competent authorities, but the circumstances in which warnings should be issued will be carefully reviewed in the light of the experience gained.

At 10:30 A. M. today an air raid took place on Scapa Flow. The attack was made by about four machines. Two bombs fell very near H. M. S. Iron Duke and the London, Oct. 17 (AP)—The Air Ministry related today that among the most surprised men in the Nazi air raid on the Firth of Forth yesterday were two British officers who happened to be flying an unarmed, two-seater, civil type plane.

The British officers were said to have seen a large plane diving near them and thought that the pilot was being playful. So they dived too. Suddenly the Britons recognized the identity of the bigger plane.

The ministry said a burst of fire from the raiders sent the British airmen back home.

LONDON, Oct. 17—The text of identical statements made today by Lord Chatfield, Minister for Coordination of Defense, and Prime Minister Neville Chamberlain follows:

The House will wish to have an account of the series of air raids which took place in the Firth of Forth area yesterday afternoon in the light of the information now available.

The air raid was carried out by twelve or possibly more aircraft in waves of two or three at a time. Two civilians were slightly injured by shell fragments. Damage to civilian property was negligible. Naval casualties were caused on H. M. S. Southampton, Edinburgh and Mohawk.

H. M. S. Iron Duke is an old battleship, which, it will be recollected, was demilitarized under the London Naval Treaty of 1930 and had all her armor removed. She has since been used for depot and training purposes.

One aircraft was shot down in flames by the fire of either ship or shore guns and another probably damaged.

LONDON, Oct. 17 (British Official Wireless)—An Admiralty communiqué says:

The second air attack was carried out over the Orkneys from approximately 12:30 P. M. to 2:30 P. M. today by two formations of six and four aircraft respectively. No damage was done and no casualties were sustained. One German aircraft was reported to have been destroyed.

The Air Ministry announced tonight:

The observer corps reported enemy air reconnoissance activity along the East coast during the morning and afternoon. Air-raid warnings were issued to some districts on the Lincolnshire, East Anglian and Kent coasts. Immediate action was taken by fighter and anti-aircraft defenses. No bombs have been dropped on any of these districts. One enemy aircraft was intercepted on the Yorkshire coast and pursued to sea.

A later Air Ministry announcement said:

Subsequent to the report of enemy activity on the East coast this afternoon, two enemy aircraft were later observed on the Northeast coast and were attacked by R. A. F. fighters. By The Associated Press.

BERLIN, Oct. 17—The German Supreme Command issued the following Communiqué today:

In the course of the day yesterday, French troops evacuated the greatest part of German territory they hitherto had occupied in front of our fortifications, and retreated to and across the border.

British naval forces yesterday were again successfully attacked. Two British warships lying in the Firth of Forth sustained bomb hits of the heaviest caliber.

This success was obtained despite the heaviest defense of the enemy by anti-aircraft fire and pursuit planes.

During the patrolling of German air regions yesterday five enemy planes, among which were two British, were shot down.

According to the report of a German submarine commander, the torpedoing of the British battleship Royal Oak and the battle cruiser Repulse occurred in Scapa Flow Bay.

Mercantile marine warfare in the North Sea and the Baltic yielded effective results last week. According to English sources, between Oct. 13 and 15 alone seven steamers totaling 54,396 tons were sunk in the Atlantic. Among them was the largest French tanker, Emile Miguet.

D. N. B., official German news agency, issued the following communiqué tonight:

On Oct. 17, German air force units advanced to Scapa Flow. Vessels of the British Battle Fleet lying in the harbor were attacked with success. Among others, a battleship was struck by bombs of heavy and medium caliber.

In the air battle which followed one enemy pursuit plane was shot down by our bombers. Despite the heavy enemy anti-aircraft fire, all German planes, with the exception of one machine, managed to return undamaged to their home harbors.

British Report On Sinking of The Royal Oak

Churchill and Chatfield Reveal How Battleship Was Lost at Scapa Flow

OCT 18 1939

LONDON, Oct. 17 (AP).—The text of the report by Winston Churchill, First Lord of the Admiralty, and Lord Chatfield on the sinking of the Royal Oak follows:

The battleship Royal Oak was sunk at anchor by a U-boat in Scapa Flow approximately at 1:30 a. m. [7:30 Eastern standard time] on the 14th instant. It still is a matter of conjecture how the U-boat penetrated the defenses of the harbor.

When we consider that during the whole course of the last war this anchorage was found to be immune from such attacks, on account of the obstacles imposed by the currents and the net barrages, this entry of a U-boat must be considered as a remarkable exploit of professional skill and daring.

A board of inquiry is now sitting at Scapa Flow to report upon all that occurred, and anything that I say must be subject to revision in the light of their conclusions. It appears probable that the U-boat fired a salvo of torpedoes at the Royal Oak, of which only one hit the bow. This muffled explosion was, at the time, attributed to internal causes, and what is called the inflammable store, where the kerosene and other such materials are kept, was flooded.

Twenty minutes later the U-boat fired three or four torpedoes, and these, striking in quick succession, caused the ship to capsize and sink. She was lying at the extreme end of the harbor and therefore many officers and men were drowned before a rescue could be organized from other vessels. The lists of survivors have already been made public, and I deeply regret to inform the House that upward of eight hundred officers and men have lost their lives.

The Admiralty immediately announced the loss of this fine ship.

Serious as this loss is, it does not affect the margin of security in heavy vessels, which remains ample.

Meanwhile, an intensive search of the anchorage has not yet yielded any results. It is clear, however, that after a certain time, the harbor can be pronounced clear, as any U-boat would have to rise to the surface for air or perish. All necessary measures are being taken to increase the precautions which, in the late war, proved effectual. For the rest, I must await the report of the board which is now examining the events in full technical detail.

Toward the end of last week the U-boat warfare, which had for a fortnight been mainly directed upon neutrals, became again intensified. Four ships, including two French ships, were sunk upon the western approaches during Saturday and Sunday, and three others were attacked but made their escape. The British ships sunk aggregated 13,000 tons. On the other hand, it should not be supposed that all the losses are upon one side. The Admiralty has hitherto refrained from giving the figures of the slaughter of U-boats which has been proceeding and is still proceeding with increasing severity. On Friday last, for instance, four U-boats were certainly destroyed, including two of the largest and latest ocean-going U-boats in the German Navy.

Nothing like this rate of destruction was attained at any moment in the last war. During the last week for which I can give figures, that is to say, to the end of the sixth week of the war, seven U-boats were sunk. If we look back over the whole period of six weeks since the war began, we may estimate that thirteen U-boats have been sunk, that five have been seriously damaged and possibly sunk, and several others damaged.

These figures are probably an understatement. Besides this, two-thirds of the U-boats which have been out raiding have suffered attack from depth charges. The French Navy, which is powerful and in the highest state of efficiency, has also been active and has certainly taken its toll, but it is not for me to give figures upon this subject. We believe, therefore, that out of about sixty U-boats ready for action at the beginning of the war, about one-third have already been sunk or seriously damaged, and of the largest and latest ocean-going U-boats, the proportion is at least one-fifth.

We actually hold survivors from the crews of three vessels of this highest class. We must thus take stock of the general position reached in the first six weeks of the U-boat war against British commerce. Something from a third to a quarter of the total U-boat fleet of Germany has been destroyed and the gaps made in the skilled officers and crews cannot be speedily replaced.

On the other hand, the British mercantile marine of 21,000,000 tons has experienced a loss of 136,000 tons by U-boat action, to which may be added 18,000 tons through mines or accidents—total 174,000 tons. During the same period we have captured from the enemy 29,000 tons and have been refreshed by the arrival of new ships amounting to 104,000 tons.

It will be seen, therefore, that while our mercantile marine remains practically unaffected by the U-boat warfare, losses have been inflicted upon the enemy which, if continued, could certainly not be endured.

I cannot close my examination of the first phase of this severe sea struggle without inviting the House to realize the intensity of the effort and devotion which has been required from all the ever-increasing hunting craft, and from those engaged upon convoy, not only in narrow waters but amid the storms of the ocean, and the constancy of the merchant officers and seamen who face all the hazards with buoyant and confident determination.

Hitler Blamed by Henderson

British Envoy Says Goering Favored Peaceful Solution, but Fuehrer Decided on War.

LONDON, Oct. 17 (A. P.).—Nevile Henderson's final report as Ambassador to Berlin, made public tonight in an official white paper, said that he believed Marshal Goering "would have preferred a peaceful solution," but that "it was Hitler's decision which alone counted."

Sir Nevile added that he believed Joachim von Ribbentrop, Foreign Minister and former Ambassador to London, was regarded by Hitler as "a second Bismarck, a conviction which Ribbentrop probably shared to the full."

Supplementing the extensive blue book issued on September 21, tonight's white paper gave Sir Nevile's impressions of the influences which he said led Hitler to war.

On this point Sir Nevile wrote:

"Of the two alternatives the most attractive from the point of view of his growing personal ambitions and those of the clique nearest to him was war.

OCT 18 1939

Sought to Teach Poles Lesson.

"It is scarcely credible that he would have acted as he did if bloody war, rather than a bloodless victory, had not seemed a fairer prospect for him. He had always meant to teach the Poles a lesson for what he regarded as their base ingratitude in refusing the general demands which he had made to them in March."

"One of Hitler's greatest drawbacks," said Sir Nevile, "is that except for two official visits to Italy he has never traveled abroad. For his knowledge of British mentality he consequently relied on Ribbentrop. . . . If report be true Ribbentrop gave him consistently false counsels in regard to England."

"Even the most absolute dictator is susceptible to the influence of his surroundings," Sir Nevile continued. "Nevertheless Hitler's decisions, his calculations and his opportunisms were his own.

Makes Decisions Alone.

"As Goering once said to me, 'When a decision has to be taken none of us count more than the stones on which we are standing; it is the Fuehrer alone who decides.'

"If anything did count, it was the opinion of his military advisers. . . . The army grudged him even a week between the 25th of August and the 1st of September which his last attempt to secure British neutrality or at least good will had cost it.

Yet even so the advice of his soldiers was probably merely cover for the prosecution of Hitler's own plans. His impatience and precipitate action on that last day of August can scarcely have been other than premeditated.

"The Russian pact appeared to give him the advantage which he was seeking and thereafter there was no time to lose if mud were not to be added to Poland's allies."

White Paper on India.

Meanwhile a British white paper on "India and the war" stated today that a definition of Great Britain's war aims can come only at a later stage of the conflict and that the Government has not defined "with any ultimate precision" its war goal.

The Marquess of Linlithgow, Viceroy of India, who wrote the paper, added that much would depend on the circumstances in which the war comes to an end, saying that "the experience of all history shows in these circumstances the unwisdom and impracticality of a precise definition of war aims at so early a stage."

He said he had held a conference with fifty-two Indian leaders, including Mohandas K. Gandhi and the president and members of the congress working committee, and that "I am authorized now by his Majesty's Government to say that at the end of the war they will be very willing to enter into consultation" looking toward formation of a Federal Government of India.

The Viceroy added that it was his hope "that in the grave juncture we face, India will go forward as a united country in support of a common cause."

French Communique

Paris, Oct. 17 (AP)—The French general staff issued the following communique today:

Late yesterday afternoon the Germans launched a second attack, supported also by strong artillery, in the region east of the Saar on a front of about thirty kilometers.

OCT 18 1939

Our light elements of observation fell back while fighting conforming to their mission. Our fire stopped the enemy at the line foreseen.

In anticipation of this resumption of the offensive by the Germans, the French command decided more than fifteen days ago to bring back to new positions the French divisions which had taken the offensive in German territory to relieve the Polish armies indirectly.

All necessary movements were terminated October 3. Since then we have left in contact only light elements of observation and some fractions of support.

FORMER ENVOY REPORTS ON HIS STAY IN BERLIN

OCT 18 1939

Feels Ex-Corporal Wanted To Show His Prowess As Generalissimo

Finds Führer Mixture Of "Calculation And Arrogant Impulse"

OCT 18 1939

[By the Associated Press]

London, Oct. 17—Britain made public tonight the "final report" of Sir Nevile Henderson on his Ambassadorship to Berlin in which he recounted in picturesque phrases the last days of peace, the "tragedy" of Adolf Hitler and sidelights on "yes men" around the Nazi leader.

The 12,000 word white paper stressed repeatedly that Hitler alone made the decision to go to war, Sir Nevile writing that "though he spoke of his artistic tastes and his longing to satisfy them, I derived the impression that the corporal of the last war was even more anxious to prove what he could do as a conquering generalissimo in the field."

OCT 18 1939

Terms Hitler Strange Mixture

Of Hitler's personality, he asserted, "geniuses are strange creatures and Herr Hitler, among other paradoxes, is a mixture of long-headed calculation and violent and arrogant impulse provoked by resentment."

Referring to the "bombshell" of the German non-aggression pact with Soviet Russia, Sir Nevile said:

"It is to be devoutly hoped that it may prove as pyrrhic as are most diplomatic victories."

"I have some reason to believe—though I can not confirm it—that the order for the Germany Army to advance into Poland was actually issued for the night of August 25-26," the former Ambassador asserted, and added that his flying trip to Hitler's chalet at Berchtesgaden "may after all have postponed the disaster for a week."

Letter May Have Caused Delay

Sir Nevile continued that it might well have been Prime Minister Chamberlain's letter which gave Hitler "one last hesitation" and caused him to countermand the orders to his army to march.

"But it was not the horrors of war which determined him," he asserted. "His hesitation was due rather to one final effort to detach Britain from Poland."

Recounting with colorful descriptive touches some of the exchanges detailed in the blue book published September 21, Sir Nevile said Hitler was "friendly and reasonable" on August 28 but was "far less reasonable" on the following day.

"I was therefore somewhat disappointed," Sir Nevile wrote.

OCT 18 1939

Occasions Solemn

"I would mention incidentally," he added, that on both occasions "nothing was left undone to enhance the solemnity of the occasion.

"A considerable but quite expressionless crowd was waiting outside the chancellery and a guard of honor awaited me in the courtyard of the main entrance.

"In view of what has been reported to the contrary, I desire to bear witness here to the fact that throughout the whole of these anxious weeks neither I nor my staff received anything but the utmost courtesy and civility from all Germans, except on one occasion"—his final interview with German Foreign Minister Joachim von Ribbentrop whom he described as showing 'intense hostility.'

Anything More To Say?

"He kept leaping from his chair in a state of great excitement and asking if I had anything more to say," Sir Nevile recounted.

"I kept replying that I had, and if my own attitude was no less unfriendly than his own, I cannot but say in all sincerity that I had every justification for it.

"When I told him that I would not fail to report his comments and remarks to my Government he calmed down a little and said that they were his own and that it was for Herr Hitler to decide."

Henderson said he believed Hitler had come to consider von Ribbentrop "a second Bismarck" and that the Nazi Foreign Minister "probably shared" the opinion.

"Only Two Solutions"

"There were in fact for Herr Hitler only two solutions," he declared.

"The use of force or the achievement of his aims by the display of force.

"'If you wish to obtain your objective by force, you must be strong; if you wish to obtain them by negotiation, you must be stronger still.' That was a remark which he (Hitler) made to a foreign statesman who visited him this year, and it expresses in the concisest form the Hitler technique."

Denies Hitler Was Bluffing

Sir Nevile declared Hitler was not bluffing before the Munich conference last year or in September of this year:

"Up to the middle of August this year the fear of a war on two fronts, with Russia hostile or at least unfriendly, might possibly have deterred him and his military advisers from action against Poland," the diplomat said.

OCT 18 1939

A bloodless victory would have brought additional prestige, Sir Nevile went on, "but it would only have been to start again once the world had recovered from the shock and even his own people were beginning to be tired of these repeated crises.

Says Germans Long For Peace

"Millions of Germans had begun to long for a more peaceful existence. Guns instead of butter were becoming more and more unpopular except with the younger generation and Hitler may well have wondered what might happen to his Nazi revolution if its momentum were allowed to stop.

"Moreover, the financial and economic position of Germany was such that things could scarcely continue as they were without some form of explosion, internal or external.

"Of the two alternatives the more attractive from the point of view of his growing personal ambitions and those of the clique nearest to him was war.

"It is scarcely credible that he would have acted as he did if bloody war, rather than a bloodless victory, had not seemed a fairer prospect for him.

Meant To Teach Lesson

"He had always meant to teach the Poles a lesson for what he regarded as their base ingratitude in refusing the 'generous' demands which he had made to them in March."

Sir Nevile said that "one of Hitler's greatest drawbacks is that except for two official visits to Italy he has never traveled abroad. For his knowledge of British mentality he consequently relied on von Ribbentrop. . . . If report be true von Ribbentrop gave him consistently false counsels in regard to England. . . .

"Even the most absolute dictator is susceptible to the influence of his surroundings. Nevertheless, Hitler's decisions, his calculations and his opportunisms were his own.

"As Goering once said to me, 'When a decision has to be taken none of us can count more than the stones on which we are standing; it is the Führer alone who decides.'

Army Grudged Week

"If anything did count it was the opinion of his military advisers. . . . The army grudged him even a week between the twenty-fifth of August and first of September which his last attempt to secure British neutrality or at least good will had cost it.

"Yet even so the advice of his soldiers was probably merely cover for the prosecution of Hitler's own plans. His impatience and precipitate action on that last day of August can scarcely have been other than premeditated.

Onslaught of 60,000 Reich Troops Stopped by Heavy Gunfire.

FIGHTING ON 20-MILE FRONT

Maginot Line Artillery Shells Onrushing Germans After Two Successful Thrusts.

PARIS, Oct. 17 (A. P.).—A smashing German offensive along a twenty-mile sector east of the Saar River has broken down, the French reported today, in the face of devastating Maginot Line fire.

At least six German divisions were known to have taken part in the offensive yesterday in two attacks, one of which carried 100 yards into French territory, military dispatches said.

Allied army authorities estimated the strength of each division to be at least 10,000 men.

Whole Front Now Stationary.

"Our fire stopped the enemy," the French General Staff announced after explaining advanced French outposts had been drawn back to prepare defensive positions in the face of the advancing Germans.

Tonight's French communique read:

"Local activity on the whole front, which since this morning remains stationary, in spite of sharp infantry engagements at certain points."

Military advices said that the German army threw a full division of more than 10,000 men into its first assault yesterday morning on a four-mile sector in the Moselle River valley. This thrust pushed forward a mile and a half, then across the border 100 yards into the French village of Apach, near the Luxemburg border.

Halted by Curtain of Fire.

Blocked by a curtain of French artillery and machine-gun fire, the Germans halted north of Apach.

The second attack, said French dispatches, put five German divisions into action yesterday afternoon on a twenty-mile sector east of the Saar River. There the German advance was said to have been stopped on "the line foreseen," still within German territory and well in advance of the main Maginot Line.

This was described as the largest and most bitterly fought action of the war on the western front thus far.

The Nazis drove hard across No-Mans-Land in the Saar attack in the wake of an artillery barrage without the protection of tanks.

French artillery fire shattered the German drive, causing heavy losses, dispatches said.

With their first line of observation gone, however, the French command kept forces alert along the main line watching for a new assault.

This morning French military dispatches stated the Germans had failed at least for the moment to pursue their attacks.

Reports Situation In Hand.

[At Berlin today the German Supreme Command declared in a communique: "In the course of the day yesterday French troops evacuated the greatest part of German territory they had hitherto occupied in front of our fortifications, and retreated to and across the border."

[According to the Associated Press, however, this development was not regarded in Berlin as important news. The Germans have claimed that the French had merely entered two or three little "fingers" of German territory, and their evacuation caused satisfaction but no particular jubilation.

[During the fighting on the western front, the communique added, five enemy planes were shot down, among them two British craft.]

French confidence that the situation was well in hand was reflected in a War Ministry announcement that soldiers in the class of 1909 would be released from the army starting Friday and the class of 1910 would be released immediately afterward.

Dispatches also stated some of the older officers in the army would be released.

In anticipation of the German thrust, a war communique added, the French command had decided more than fifteen days ago to order back to new positions the divisions which had earlier penetrated into German territory. This movement, it was said, terminated on October 3.

"Since then," the communique said, "we have left in contact only light elements of observation and some fractions of support."

Near the Luxemburg border, after penetrating to the French village of Apach yesterday, Nazi infantry and tanks were reported clinging to hard won positions on the heights of Schneeburg.

Suddenly Unrolling Battle.

French informants said that the German thrust at Apach yesterday apparently was aimed to carry past the village and turn west toward the Moselle River below Luxemburg in an attempt to strike at the weakest part of the Maginot Line.

The French did not mention their casualties in the suddenly unrolling battle, which forced their lines back from a mile to a mile and a half in the pocket formed by the junction of the German, French and Luxemburg borders.

The Germans employed heavy tanks and airplanes in large numbers as well as infantry, it was reported, in sweeping past the French outposts along the Moselle and driving up that valley in the direction of Sierck. The outer fortifications of the Maginot Line are some six or seven miles south of Sierck in the vicinity of Thionville.

French advices indicated that Apach is considered a vital point, situated as it is on their flank.

While the Germans attacked in the corner near the Luxemburg border, heavy French guns sent shells screaming across the line all along the 100-mile front between the Moselle and the Rhine in an attempt to break up Nazi troop concentrations.

Railroad Guns in Action.

Railroad artillery of large caliber was reported to have participated for the first time in the heavy bombardment.

Some military informants said that the attacks on the flank might be a feinting prelude to other German thrusts intended to drive the French artillery from positions commanding Germany's rich Saarland mining area. There were indications that French strategy was based on the hope that the Germans might be enticed into an assault on the Maginot Line. Semi-official statements admitted that it would be a "waiting war" on the part of French and British troops.

The allies, these statements said, would attempt to cause the Germans to leave their own Siegfried Line in the hope of gaining an immediate victory before the pinch of the British blockade is felt at home.

The French press treated the new German offensive cautiously, many newspapers apparently believing that it was merely a mask for a big push elsewhere.

Meanwhile, Premier Daladier summoned his Cabinet to meet with President Lebrun on Thursday for a review of the war.

German infantry attacks on the northwestern end of the front near the Moselle river and east of the Saar, in no way affected the concentration movement, according to advices received here.

OCT 18 1939

This concentration was on the western slope of the Vosges mountains. The French have been quietly matching the movement with their own reinforcements.

Nazi Attacks Believed Part Of Larger Drive

OCT 18 1939

Basel, Switzerland, Oct. 17 (AP)—Military observers here expressed the belief tonight that the current German attacks on the Western front are only feints in preparation for a larger drive against the Wissembourg-Lauterbourg-Rhine triangle at the middle of the French-German frontier.

For the third successive day and night the Germans continued a concentration of troops and offensive material at Karlsruhe and other points around the strategic Lauterbourg sector.

BY ROY PORTER

PARIS, OCT 17-(AP)-THE FRENCH GENERAL STAFF REPORTED TONIGHT THERE WERE "SHARP INFANTRY ENGAGEMENTS AT CERTAIN POINTS" AND "LOCAL ACTIVITY ON THE WHOLE (WESTERN) FRONT," ALTHOUGH THE FIGHTING FAILED TO BRING ANY CHANGE IN POSITIONS.

OCT 18 1939

THE COMMUNIQUE ADDED THAT "A GERMAN MERCHANT SHIP HAS BEEN CAP-TURED BY OUR ATLANTIC PATROL," BUT GAVE NO DETAILS.

REFERENCE TO INFANTRY FIGHTING WAS TAKEN BY MILITARY OBSERVERS TO MEAN THAT SMALL GROUPS OF BOTH FRENCH AND GERMAN TROOPS WERE CONTINUING ACTIVITY OF PURELY LOCALIZED CHARACTER FOLLOWING THE FRENCH REPULSE OF TWO GERMAN ATTACKS YESTERDAY.

PREMIER DALADIER AND GEN. MAURICE GUSTAVE GAMELIN CONFERRED AT THE WAR MINISTRY DURING THE AFTERNOON.

THE GENERAL STAFF'S ASSERTION THAT THE FRONT REMAINED WITHOUT CHANGE WOULD ESTABLISH THE GERMAN LINES AT THE SAME PLACE WHERE FIGHTING ENDED LATE MONDAY.

THESE POSITIONS WERE KNOWN IN AT LEAST ONE SECTOR WHERE THE FRENCH

SAID THE GERMANS WERE FORCED TO RETIRE NORTH OF THE LORRAINE VILLAGE OF APACH AFTER PENETRATING INTO FRENCH TERRITORY FOR THE FIRST TIME IN THE WAR.

OCT 18 1939

MILITARY AUTHORITIES ESTIMATED SIX NAZI DIVISIONS OF AT LEAST 10,000 MEN EACH TOOK PART IN THE TWO ATTACKS BETWEEN THE MOSELLE AND RHINE RIVERS WHICH SHOVED FRENCH ADVANCE POSTS OFF GERMAN SOIL AT SOME POINTS.

FIRE FROM THE MAGINOT LINE FORTS SHATTERED THE GERMAN ATTACKS "ON THE LINE FORESEEN," THE FRENCH REPORTED. GENERAL STAFF AUTHORITIES SAID THE LONG-CONSIDERED WAR PLAN WAS TO MAIN OUTPOSTS ON GERMAN SOIL.WITH SMALL FORCES WHILE MASSING HEAVY CONCENTRATIONS IN THE MAJOR DEFENSES OF THE FRONTIER.

THE FIRST NAZI THRUST CARRIED ACROSX THE BORDER ABOUT 100 YARDS INTO THE FRENCH VILLAGE OF APACH NEAR LUXEMBOURG.

A SECOND ATTACK EXTENDED ALONG A 20-MILE SECTOR EAST OF THE SAAR RIVER, REGAINING GROUND LOST TO THE FRENCH IN THE EARLY STAGES OF THE WAR.

OCT 18 1939

AUTHORITIES SAID THE FIGHTING WAS THE BITTEREST OF THE WAR.

THE GERMANS USED THE OLD WORLD WAR TECHNIQUE IN THEIR ATTACK, WITH ARTILLERY BARRAGES PREPARING THE GROUND AND THEN INFANTRY RUNNING ACROSS THE SHELL-POCKED GROUND IN THE WAKE OF THE SHELL FIRE.

FRENCH MILITARY COMMENTATORS SAID ROUGH TERRITORY, PARTICULARLY IN THE SECTOR NEAR THE LUXEMBOURG BORDER, MADE IMPOSSIBLE THE EFFECTIVE USE OF TANKS AND MOTORIZED UNITS. THE AREA IS WOODED, ROCKY AND PITTED WITT NARROW RAVINES.

THE EXACT SITUATION OF THE NEW LINES WAS NOT CLARIFIED, ALTHOUGH THE FRENCH DISPATCHES REPORTED ARTILLERY AND MACHINEGUN FIRE HAD DEFINITELY STOPPED THE ATTACKS.

THE FRENCH CLAIMED TO HAVE EXACTED A HEAVY TOLL AMONG THE GERMAN FORCES AS WAVES OF NAZI INFANTRY STRUCK OUT IN THE TWILIGHT YESTERDAY ACROSS NO-MAN'S-LAND.

FRENCH ADVANCE GUARDS SENT ROCKETS HISSING SKYWARD TO WARN THE MAIN LINE OF DEFENSE TO THE REAR OF THE ATTACK. THEN THE FRENCH ARTILLERY OPENED FIRE ON ADVANCING REICHSWEHR DIVISIONS WHILE THE FRENCH ALLIED ADVANCE GUARDS SLOWLY RETIRED. FIRE FROM THE SECOND LINE OF DEFENSE OVER THE HEADS OF THE ADVANCE GUARD ACTUALLY HALTED THE ATTACK, FRENCH REPORTS DECLARED.

OCT 18 1939

THE FRENCH SEIZED THE OCCASION TO POINT OUT THE EFFECTIVENESS OF THE GENERAL STAFF'S STRATEGY IN ESTABLISHING A DOUBLE DEFENSIVE LINE TO ACT AS A BUFFER AGAINST GERMAN ATTACKS AND AT THE SAME TIME ESTABLISH A SPRINGBOARD FOR A POSSIBLE FRENCH COUNTER-ATTACK LATER.

SUCH STRATEGY WAS FIRST LAID DOWN BY GENERAL HENRI J.E.GOURAUD DURING THE CLOSING PHASES OF THE WORLD WAR. ITS SUCCESS LED FRENCH COMMANDERS TO ADOPT SIMILAR TACTICS WITH MODIFICATIONS.

Crew That Sank Royal Oak Are Decorated —Pictures of Scottish Damage Claimed.

OCT 18 1939

BERLIN, Oct. 17 (A. P.).—Commander Prien and the crew of his submarine which sank the British battleship Royal Oak on Saturday and claimed to have torpedoed the battle cruiser Repulse received Iron Crosses today for their exploits.

It was announced that they had arrived at an unnamed harbor and that Grand Admiral Erich Raeder hurried there to extend the congratulations of the Reich.

Adolf Hitler also elevated Commodore Doe.tz, commander of the German submarine fleet, to the rank of Rear Admiral.

Escaped Mines and Nets.

DNB, the official German news agency, quoted Commander Prien as saying that he had succeeded in entering the Bay of Scapa Flow, off the north coast of Scotland, where the Royal Oak and Repulse were lying at anchor.

The submarine succeeded in hitting both, DNB said, and managed to escape, despite mines and anti-submarine nets.

OCT 18 1939

[The British Admiralty has acknowledged the sinking of the Royal Oak, but has denied the Repulse was struck.]

Authorized sources announced that Winston Churchill, First Lord of the British Admiralty, would "in such form as the German Supreme High Command thinks desirable."

be made acquainted with photographs of bombing activity in the Firth of Forth taken yesterday by German flyers.

First Lord Is Taunted.

These sources tauntingly asked whether Mr. Churchill would dare deny the extent of the damage inflicted in the light of the documentary proof said to be in German possession.

The Supreme High Command stuck to its version that two British warships in the Firth of Forth had been hit by heaviest caliber bombs. Officials ridiculed British versions that splinters were the sole result of German bombing activity.

A further cause for jubilation was given by the High Command's announcement that seven steamships totaling 54,396 gross tons had been sunk within three days in the North and Baltic seas.

"England wanted war—now she's got it," was an expression frequently heard in the Berlin streets.

Below the Surface

The morning newspapers here devoted practically their entire front pages to the attacks on the British fleet, giving the readers detailed descriptions of the warships reported sunk or put out of commission by torpedoes and aerial bombs.

The newspaper Deutsche Allgemeine Zeitung printed a cartoon showing Prime Minister Chamberlain and the First Lord of the Admiralty with the aircraft carriers Courageous and Ark Royal and the battleship Royal Oak sinking in the background. In the cartoon Mr. Churchill was made to say: "If a few more warships sink we shall also control the North Sea below the surface."

Hitler's newspaper, the Voelkischer Beobachter, declared in a headline today: "German Torpedoes Destroy Churchill's Lies."

The Boersen Zeitung headlined its report, "England's Naval Supremacy Tottering."

NAZI STRATEGY

[By the Associated Press]

Berlin, Oct. 17—News of the bombing of the British naval base at Rosyth, Scotland, today brought the enthusiasm of the German people to new heights.

"England wanted war—now she's got it," was an expression frequently heard on Berlin streets.

Word of the Firth of Forth raid by power-diving planes came on the same day as the announcement that the British battle cruiser Repulse had been torpedoed and two days after the sinking of the battleship Royal Oak.

On Western Front

During fighting along the Western front yesterday, the high command said, five enemy planes, among which were two British craft, were shot down.

Lightning attacks on the British Navy apparently have become the Nazi strategy against the nation which is generally described here as Germany's "chief enemy."

Field Marshal Hermann Wilhelm Goering's air force has joined Grand Admiral Erich Raeder's submarines in these operations.

An official army announcement said the airmen dropped bombs on two British cruisers at Rosyth and shot down two pursuit planes which roared up to give battle. The Germans gave their losses as "two planes missing."

"Victory For Defenses"

(The British, asserting that at least four of the twelve or fourteen bombers had been shot down, claimed a victory for Scottish coast defenses. The Admiralty announced that the cruiser Southampton was slightly damaged and the cruiser Edinburg and the destroyer Mohawk showered with bomb splinters, but undamaged.

(Two British officers and thirteen men were killed and twenty others wounded—twelve seriously.)

Members of the submarine crew credited with sinking the Royal Oak were hailed as national heroes. Gifts were showered on them from all parts of the country. Word of the acclaim was transmitted by German broadcasting stations to the submarine still "somewhere in the North Sea."

Due To Be Decorated

The commander, subordinate officers and the crew, it was learned, will receive the highest war decorations. Either the crew will come to Berlin to be presented to Adolf Hitler or the Führer will meet them at Wilhelmshaven.

It also was planned to have the commander receive foreign newspapermen to tell the story of his triumph.

The morning newspapers devoted practically their entire front pages to the attacks on the British fleet, giving readers detailed descriptions of the warships reported sunk or put out of commission by torpedoes and aerial bombs.

Leaders Lampooned

Deutsche Allgemeine Zeitung printed a cartoon showing British Prime Minister Chamberlain and First Lord of the Admiralty Winston Churchill with the aircraft carriers Courageous and Ark Royal and the battleship Royal Oak sinking in the background.

In the cartoon Churchill was made to say: "If a few more warships sink, we shall also control the North Sea below the surface."

(The Courageous was torpedoed September 17. Eleven days later German radio stations announced that the Ark Royal also had been bombed and sunk, but on October 1 Capt. Alan G. Kirk, United States naval attache at London, attended religious services aboard the plane carrier.)

Hitler's newspaper, the Voelkischer Beobachter, in a headline said, "German Torpedoes Destroy Churchill's Lies."

The Boersen Zeitung headlined its report, "England's Naval Supremacy Tottering."

The official German news agency, DNB, described the planes which attacked the warships at Rosyth, as of "the greatest attacking power and fighting ability."

DNB said the bombing units started from their respective bases early yesterday morning and crossed the North Sea within the shortest time, despite their heavy bomb loads.

Attack Photographed

This report added that the attack so thoroughly surprised the British that the first bombers were able to discharge their cargoes practically undisturbed by enemy fire. Numerous hits were scored, DNB said, and all of them were photographed. "Several" warships were said to have been considerably damaged.

After the attack, according to DNB, the German planes followed the Scottish coast and flew over Edinburgh at low altitudes. Two British pursuit planes, which attempted to engage the Germans, were shot down, the report concluded.

News of the air attack on Scapa Flow came while the public was still celebrating yesterday's air raid on the Firth of Forth and Saturday's submarine assault at Scapa Flow, which resulted in the sinking of the battleship Royal Oak and the reported torpedoing of the battle cruiser Repulse. The announcement of today's air attack issued by the official news agency D. N. B. said:

"On Oct. 17 German air force units advanced to Scapa Flow. Vessels of the British battle fleet lying in the harbor were attacked with success. Among others a battleship was struck by bombs of heavy and medium caliber.

"In the air battle which followed one enemy pursuit plane was shot down by our bombers. Despite the heavy enemy anti-aircraft fire, all German planes, with the exception of one machine, managed to return undamaged to their home harbors."

"England no longer is mistress of the seas,' newspaper headlines said. "England's prestige is hard hit" and "Germany has taught England it no longer is an island," others read.

The German press reflected the official view that the lightning campaign against the British fleet was Germany's reply to the refusal of the Allies to heed Fuehrer Adolf Hitler's peace gestures. "After a week or ten days of this uninterrupted attacking, Britain will see what is left of her fleet," said one highly placed official.

The Nazi drive has concentrated on Britain's strongest arm, her fleet, as officials stressed what they termed Britain's inability to cope with German submarines and planes, pointing out that only two German submarines succeeded in entering Scapa Flow during the World War. One slipped through in November, 1914 and another in November, 1918, but both were sunk in the closely guarded bay which is a base for British warships operating in the North Sea.

Iron crosses were awarded today to Commander Prien and the crew of his submarine which returned to an unnamed German base after sinking the battleship Royal Oak and reporting they had torpedoed the battle cruiser Repulse, both in Scapa Flow. (Britain denied the Repulse had been hit, and said the Royal Oak was sent to the bottom early Saturday morning by torpedoes fired in rapid succession. Loss of life was placed at 786.)

Commodore Doenitz, commander of Germany's submarine fleet, was raised by Hitler to the rank of rear admiral for the exploits of his submarines against British warships. Grand Admiral Erich Raeder hastened to the port where the Scapa Flow raiders landed to extend the Reich's congratulations.

The successful raid on Scapa Flow by Comdr. Prien and his submarine had special significance for Germans, as it was there that the German fleet was interned after the World War. On June 21, 1919, the German crews scuttled their warships on command of Admiral Reuter when he learned the fleet was to be turned over to Britain. Prien issued a statement tonight, saying his first thought when he had penetrated Scapa Flow was to "do something in honor of Admiral Reuter."

Germans found further cause for rejoicing in a high command announcement that "five enemy planes, among which were two British," had been shot down and that French troops had withdrawn from the "greater part of German territory" on the western front.

Officials said the French withdrawal meant little in a military sense, as they had occupied only small areas between the German Limes and French Maginot fortifications. Germans were warned not to take the action as meaning that France was weakening in her resolve to prosecute the war.

Jubilant Germans Confident Foe Is Helpless to Parry Series of Lightning Blows

BERLIN, Oct. 17.—German raids on the important British naval base at Scapa Flow—by warplane today and by submarine Saturday—were described by German officialdom tonight as part of a lightning campaign to break British resistance.

Netherland Patrol at Border Endangered by Nazi Guns—Protest Sent to Berlin

OCT 18 1939

THE HAGUE, the Netherlands, Oct. 17 (AP)—Northeastern Netherlands got a taste of war today when British bombers attempted to attack Emden, important German mine sweeping base, and when German anti-aircraft guns fired on Netherland planes but did not hit them.

From 7 A. M. to 11:30 A. M., heavy firing was heard along Dollart Bay in Groningen Province. Witnesses said they saw clouds of white smoke made by bursting shells and could distinguish the British insignia on the planes. The number mentioned varied from four to forty. The firing was so intense that windows were shaken in villages along the Netherlands coast.

The Mayor of Emden told the Amsterdam newspaper Da Telegraaf that British planes had attempted to approach the German port but had been driven off.

The German port of Emden, shortly after reports came from the frontier areas of an attempted British air raid on Emden. The government announced it was protesting to Berlin.

The announcement, which said the planes were not hit, followed reports from villages in the northeastern Netherlands that heavy firing had been heard around Emden, which is three miles across Dollart Bay from Holland's province of Groningen. Villagers along the bay said they saw a plane that appeared to be British flying toward Emden.

Informed sources said the Netherlands planes were fired upon when they flew in the vicinity of Emden at 11:15 a. m. Artillery fire from the direction of Emden was heard first at about 7 a. m. and again at 11. It became so heavy at the latter hour that windows in Netherlands villages rattled.

The government communique said: "This morning at 11:15 a. m. there was shooting from the direction of Emden by anti-aircraft guns on Netherlands planes which flew along the border. The planes were not hit. The Netherlands government is making a protest at Berlin."

Unmarried soldiers at present get 3 guilders ($1.50) a week, and married soldiers 15 guilders ($7.50).

Finn Reports Seizure By Nazis Of Steamer Bound For Baltimore

OCT 18 1939

Copenhagen, Oct. 17 (AP)—The captain of the Finnish steamer Asturias reported today from Stettin, Germany, that his ship was halted in the Baltic last Wednesday while en route from Mariehamn, Finnish port in the Aaland Islands, to Baltimore with a cargo of wood pulp. The 3,100-ton vessel was held at Stettin.

Finns Delay Reply to Russia

HELSINGFORS, Oct. 17 (AP).—Finland looked to the conference of northern neutral powers in Stockholm tomorrow for support and guidance in her critical negotiations with Soviet Russia.

A government spokesman said it was almost certain Dr. Juho Kusti Paasikivi, chief Finnish negotiator, would not return to Moscow before Friday night, after the return of President Kallio from the conference in Sweden.

Foreign Minister Eljas Erkko and Prime Minister Aimo K. Cajander discussed the Russian proposals today with Paasikivi. A spokesman said no reply to Russia had been agreed upon and the meeting in Stockholm might "influence further proceedings."

Government officials said a number of men and women residents of several islands in the Gulf of Finland, including Hogland, who had been removed for a week, had been permitted to return because their services were needed for agricultural purposes. The islands have been frequently reported as probable objects of Russian demands for use as naval bases.

Blast Off Norway Just "Nerves"

KRISTIANSAND, Norway, Oct. 17 (AP).—Investigation of reports of a fire and explosion at sea led observers today to attribute the incident to "overwrought nerves" after a Coast Guard ship failed to find any evidence of a stricken ship or survivors.

OCT 18 1939

Coast residents at Augland said a series of explosions and a fire last night indicated that a tanker might have been sunk at sea, but no wreckage, oil or indication of a wreck was found today.

Tanker Picks Up Crew of 21 From England-bound Craft.

OCT 18 1939

LONDON, Oct. 17 (A. P.).—Forty-three survivors of the crew of the 5,186-ton French steamship Vermont were landed today at a south England port by a British warship which rescued them in the Atlantic.

Two seamen were lost in the sinking of the vessel and four of the survivors were injured. The survivors said that a submarine sank their ship.

[The French Line, owners of the freighter Vermont, said that the vessel had left France several days ago for New Orleans, after having landed a general cargo, including twenty airplanes. Her sinking was the third loss for the French Line since last Friday, and the sixth since the start of the war.

Formerly named the Easterly, the Vermont was built at Sunderland, England, in 1919. She was 399 feet long, had a beam of 52 feet and a depth of 28.]

One of the survivors said: "We were told by the German captain that he was sorry he could not accommodate us in the submarine. He wished us good luck."

Norwegian Ship Sunk.

BERGEN, Norway, Oct. 17 (A. P.).—Its owners reported today the Norwegian steamship Lorentz W. Hansen, a vessel of 1,918 tons, was torpedoed and sunk with a cargo of wood bound from Canada to England. The owners were notified that the crew of twenty-one was saved by a tanker at a point two days out in the Atlantic.

At Oslo it was said that the Norwegian steamship Kongsdal had reported rescuing the crew. The Hansen sailed from Charlottetown, P. E. I., for England, by way of Chatham, N. B., on September 28.

The Norwegian-American Line was advised by radio today that its liner Stavangerfjord was preparing to sail from Kirkwall, England, for Bergen.

The ship, which has about 200 passengers aboard, had been held by the British for eight days.

Finnish Freighter Seized.

HELSINKI, Oct. 17 (A. P.).—Halting of two Finnish freighters which presumably now are being held in a German harbor was reported to their owners today.

Reports said the steamship Scandinavia was stopped October 13 in the Gulf of Bothnia near the Aaland Islands while carrying lumber from the Finnish port of Kemi consigned to Holland.

The sailing ship Tarmo was stopped October 8 south of Gotland also with a cargo of lumber.

The Maritime Register said today that it had confirmed unofficial reports of a month ago that the 1,594-ton freighter Bramden had been destroyed, possibly by a torpedo, off the English coast with a loss of three lives. Thirteen survivors of the sinking, September 16, reached England, the Register said.

LISBON, Oct. 17 (A. P.).—A violent explosion in the engine room of the 6,367-ton Norwegian tanker Sysla injured seven members of the crew today, two seriously.

A resulting fire was extinguished by harbor tugs.

The ship anchored here September 12 and reported that she was waiting for instructions to proceed on the voyage.

U. S. Ship Reports Picking Up 300

WASHINGTON, Oct. 17 (AP)—The Maritime Commission received a message tonight from the master of the vessel Independence Hall that she had picked up 300 survivors of the steamship City of Mandalay.

The Independence Hall, bound from Bordeaux, France, to New York, reported she was 500 miles west of France. The message contained no details of the rescue.

The Independence Hall is owned by the Maritime Commission and operated by the American France Line.

The City of Mandalay, British craft of 7,028 tons, is listed in the Maritime Register as operated by the Ellerman Lines, Ltd., out of Glasgow, Scotland.

Paris Anti-Aircraft Guns May Fire Without Notice

Warning Follows Opposition to City's Siren Alarms

OCT 18 1939

PARIS, Oct. 17 (AP).—Coincident with the German air raid on Scotland police warned Parisians today that anti-aircraft batteries may start firing on enemy planes without advance notice.

After five uneventful raid alarms in the first month of the war, one of the biggest problems of authorities has been to get people to seek safety in bomb-proof shelters.

In previous air raid alarms the Parisians have slept on if the warning siren came at night or rushed into the street and gazed skyward if in the daytime.

Unpopularity of the alarms has been reflected in successive relaxations of the system. At first the sirens sounded any time an enemy plane crossed the frontier, although it might not be Paris-bound. This gave at least a half hour to take cover. Then the time was reduced to fifteen minutes.

The latest communique warns there may be no advance notice of a raid. Authorities said the new system was designed to reduce the number of warnings which disrupt the routine of the city.

Finland on the Alert.

HELSINKI, Oct. 17 (A. P.).—The Finnish Government authorities studied the questions raised in the negotiations with Soviet Russia today, but no definite change in the situation was expected until after the Thursday Stockholm conference of Scandinavian Kings and the President of Finland.

Dr. Juho Kusti Paasikivi, Finnish Minister to Sweden and chief negotiator with the Soviet Union, was constantly at the call of the Government heads and was expected to remain here at least until the next week end.

President Kyoesti Kallio and Foreign Minister Eljas Erkko prepared to fly to Stockholm tomorrow for the conference with other northern neutral nations to discuss their mutual problems.

Early tomorrow all the principal choruses in Helsinki will gather outside the President's home to sing farewell hymns before his departure.

Meanwhile thousands of women continued to sew and knit for reservists called for duty.

Black paper was being tacked on windows in preparation for new blackout exercises, while guards still paced before public buildings.

MOSCOW IS EAGER FOR BRITISH TRADE

Ready to Resume Deal With London at Once.

OCT 18 1939

LONDON, Oct. 17 (A. P.).—It was said tonight in Soviet diplomatic circles that Russia had indicated to Great Britain her willingness to resume negotiations for further extension of trade relations between the two countries.

It was understood that Ambassador Ivan Maisky had made plain Russia's attitude in his conversations with the British Foreign Secretary, Lord Halifax, yesterday, but that no definite date for resumption of economic negotiations had been proposed by the British.

Soviet sources hinted that Moscow would welcome a trade envoy from Great Britain.

Last Wednesday Great Britain agreed to barter rubber and tin for Soviet timber. Although the amounts were not disclosed, it was said they would be about the same as normal peace-time transactions.

Timber, which might be used as cellulose in the making of munitions, is on the list of contraband articles Germany is seeking to bar from England.

Turkish Envoy Going Home

No Pact Announced and No More Talks as He Prepares to Quit Moscow.

OCT 18 1939

MOSCOW, Oct. 17 (A. P.).—The protracted negotiations between Soviet Russia and Turkey came to at least a temporary halt today with the announced intention of the Turkish Foreign Minister Sukru Saracoglu, to leave Moscow tonight.

Mr. Saracoglu has been in Moscow for nearly a month discussing problems in connection with the Black Sea and its outlet, the Dardanelles.

Turkish officials said that he would hold no further talks either with Stalin or the Premier—Foreign Commissar Vyacheslav Molotov, before his departure.

There was no indication of what the next move would be in the negotiations with Turkey. Mr. Saracoglu was expected to confer shortly with Rumanian leaders.

It was considered significant that in concluding recent pacts with Baltic States, the Russians always announced them before the departure of visiting envoys.

Coincident with the announcement of Mr. Saracoglu's leaving was the appearance of an article in the Government newspaper Izvestia which declared that Great Britain and France could not establish an effective sea blockade against Germany because of the economic aid the Reich would receive from Russia and Italy. The article, signed by I. Vanov, reflected support of Adolf Hitler's "peace campaign" and hinted that Russia was prepared to give Germany economic assistance on a large scale.

Vanov's article in Izvestia said that Italy, as a neutral, could import commodities Germany needs and then export them to the Reich. It also recalled that Russia is pledged to supply Germany with raw materials under recent agreements.

Britain and France, Vanov argued, could make the blockade more effective only by "infringing upon the trade rights of neutral States, which inevitably would lead to new international complications."

OCT 18 1939

There was wide speculation over the nature and scope of such a pact, but it was stressed that the pact would not affect the status of the Balkans or Black Sea or impair Turkey's commitments to Britain and France.

Competent quarters insisted that Turkey never would subscribe to any combination refuting pledges to her Balkan allies or the Western powers. Turkey has mutual assistance pacts with Britain and France, effective in case of a Mediterranean war, and is a member of the Balkan Entente.

OCT 18 1939

Neutral observers noted Istanbul reports of Turkish military precautions and the asserted refusal of Saracoglu to accede to Russian demands, were not completely optimistic of the result of the Moscow conferences. It was reported in Istanbul Sunday night that Saracoglu had refused to recognize the partition of Poland or agree to the formation of a Russian-supervised Balkan neutrality bloc or any Russian expansion at the expense of Rumania.

TURKEY CALLS HALT TO TALKS WITH RUSSIANS

Holds Demands Contrary To Security—May Sign With Britain

OCT 18 1939

[By the Associated Press]

Istanbul, Turkey, Oct. 17—Prime Minister Refik Saydam, in an official communique tonight, said the negotiations with Soviet Russia had failed because the Soviet demands were contrary to Turkish security.

It was reported reliably that a definite agreement with Britain will be signed in Ankara this week, probably Thursday or Friday.

The official communique said the Prime Minister, in a statement to a Parliamentary group of the Republican People's Party, declared the Soviet Government had suggested to Turkey proposals entirely different from those previously agreed upon.

Demands Incompatible

The Prime Minister said the Soviet demands were incompatible with the Turkish policy regarding the Dardanelles, proved incompatible with Turkey's engagements which the Soviet Government knew had been assumed toward Britain and France, were contrary to Turkish security and the guarantees offered did not compensate for the obligations which Turkey was asked to undertake.

He said, however, that although it had been impossible this time to conclude an agreement with Soviet Russia, relations between the two countries were still friendly.

Cabinet Meets

The communique was issued from Ankara, the Turkish capital. Following its issuance the Cabinet met with President Inonu, the president of the National Assembly, Abdul Halik Renda, and the chief of the general staff, Field Marshal Feczi Tchakmak.

Definite terms of the Turkish-British pact were not announced. Turkey has signed a pact with France, however, providing for mutual assistance in event of war in the Mediterranean. A similar agreement with Britain has not yet been signed.

Russians Give Turkish Envoy Rousing Send-Off

OCT 18 1939

LEWIS HANCOCK
Associated Press Correspondent

Moscow, Wednesday, Oct. 18—Foreign Minister Sukru Saracoglu of Turkey left for home early today to the blaring of bands and well wishes of high Soviet officials, who turned to a series of diplomatic consultations with Germany.

Vladimir Potemkin, Vice-Commissar of Foreign Affairs, headed Soviet officials bidding farewell to Saracoglu at the flag-bedecked station in an imposing send-off which contrasted sharply to the departure Saturday night of a Finnish delegation. Not a Kremlin official was there to see the Finns off.

Saracoglu had been here almost a month negotiating with Soviet officials and there were reports that efforts to reach a Soviet-Turkish agreement had bogged down temporarily.

Blunt Refusal Reported

There was one unconfirmed report here that the Turkish mission had refused point blank a Soviet demand that Russian warships be the only one permitted to enter the Black Sea, "Russia's back door," through the Turkish-owned Dardanelles.

But if the Soviet officials were discouraged by the failure of the negotiations thus far, they failed to show it at tonight's send-off. The event rivaled in magnitude the departure of Joachim von Ribbentrop, German Foreign Minister, on his second visit to Moscow to conclude a non-aggres-

TURKEY'S FOREIGN MINISTER SUKRU SARACOGLU PACKED UP TO LEAVE FOR HOME AT MIDNIGHT AFTER NEARLY A MONTH OF NEGOTIATIONS.

THERE WERE WIDESPREAD UNOFFICIAL REPORTS THAT THE SOVIET-TURKISH NEGOTIATIONS HAD BOGGED DOWN TEMPORARILY. SOURCES CLOSE TO THE MOSCOW GOVERNMENT SAID, HOWEVER, THERE HAD BEEN NO BREAKDOWN BUT THEY REMAINED SILENT AS TO THE EXACT STATUS OF THE NEGOTIATIONS.

A COMMUNIQUE BY TASS, OFFICIAL SOVIET NEWS AGENCY, ONLY SAID THAT SARACOGLU'S STAY IN MOSCOW HAD "PROVIDED THE OCCASION FOR A COMPREHENSIVE EXCHANGE OF VIEWS" REGARDING THEIR RELATIONS, AND THAT THE EXCHANGE IN A "CORDIAL ATMOSPHERE" AGAIN HAD CONFIRMED THEIR "INVARIABLE FRIENDLY RELATIONS."

THE COMMUNIQUE SAID THE CONCLUSION HAD BEEN REACHED THAT IT WAS DESIRABLE "TO MAINTAIN CONTACT ALSO IN THE FUTURE FOR JOINT DISCUSSION OF QUESTIONS OF INTEREST TO THE SOVIET UNION AND THE TURKISH REPUBLIC."

SARACOGLU OSTENSIBLY WAS RETURNING TO TELL HIS GOVERNMENT OF THE SOVIET PROPOSALS AND ALSO TO DISCUSS BALKAN MATTERS WITH FOREIGN MINISTER GRIGORE GAFENCU OF RUMANIA.

Soviet and Turkish flags decorated the station and there was a guard of honor of 200, including the band.

Huge spotlights played upon the station and the band played the Turkish anthem and "The Internationale." There was a pouring rain before the train left, but that didn't seem to dampen the ardor of the occasion.

British Envoy There

Besides the Soviet officials, there was an impressive turnout from the British and French embassies, including Sir William Seeds, British Ambassador. A number of envoys of the Balkan states also were present, but the German Embassy was not.

With the Soviet-Turkish negotiations halted, for the present at least, the Moscow Government opened negotiations with Germany on repatriation of German minorities in the Baltic states and former Polish territory.

A German delegation headed by a foreign office official flew here from Berlin to begin the consultations on Adolf Hitler's broad plans to bring back all Germans living abroad. Hitler announced his repatriation program October 6 and negotiations with Baltic states are underway.

Germany now has two missions in Moscow. A second delegation has been here several days conferring with Soviet trade experts on problems in connection with the German-Russian trade and credit agreement announced August 20.

OCT 18 1939

Vanov said the present scope of the "war on the seas" made it vital for the Soviet Union to strengthen its sea defenses.

He added that British and French warships would be unable to penetrate into the Baltic to thrust at Germany from that direction.

ISTANBUL, OCT 17-(AP)-PRIME MINISTER REFIK SAYDAM ANNOUNCED TONIGHT THAT THE THREE-WEEKS NEGOTIATIONS IN MOSCOW HAD PROVED FRUITLESS BECAUSE SOVIET RUSSIA'S DEMANDS WERE CONTRARY TO TURKISH POLICY REGARDING THE DARDANELLES. OCT 18 1939

THE PRIME MINISTER'S REPORT TO A PARLIAMENTARY GROUP OF THE REPUBLICAN PEOPLES PARTY, WAS MADE PUBLIC IN AN OFFICIAL COMMUNIQUE AS FOREIGN MINISTER SUKRU SARACOGLU LEFT MOSCOW WITHOUT SIGNING A PACT FOR CLOSER RELATIONS WITH THE SOVIET.

THE PRIME MINISTER DECLARED A TREATY HAD PROVED IMPOSSIBLE NOW BECAUSE RUSSIA'S DEMANDS WERE INCOMPATIBLE WITH TURKISH POLICY REGARDING THE DARDANELLES, WERE CONTRARY TO TURKISH SECURITY, DID NOT COMPENSATE TURKEY FOR THE OBLIGATIONS SHE WAS ASKED TO ASSUME, AND WERE INCOMPATIBLE WITH TURKEY'S AGREEMENTS WITH FRANCE AND ENGLAND.

HE EMPHASIZED, HOWEVER, THAT RELATIONS BETWEEN TURKEY AND

SOVIET RUSSIA REMAINED FRIENDLY. DISPATCHES FROM MOSCOW TONIGHT TELLING OF THE HEARTY SENDOFF GIVEN THE DEPARTING TURKISH FOREIGN MINISTER BY BANDS, FLAGS AND THE FAREWELLS OF SOVIET OFFICIALS BORE OUT THIS IMPRESSION.

ALTHOUGH DEMANDS OF THE SOVIET, PRESSING EXPANSION OF HER INFLUENCE IN NORTHEASTERN AND SOUTHEASTERN EUROPE SINCE THE GERMAN INVASION OF POLAND, WERE NOT ANNOUNCED, IT HAS BEEN WIDELY REPORTED THT SHE SOUGHT AN AGREEMENT TO BAR ALL FOREIGN WARSHIPS FROM PASSAGE THROUGH THE DARDANELLES EXCEPT HER OWN.

TURKEY CONTROLS THE DARDANELLES, THE ONLY WATER PASSAGE FROM THE MEDITERRANEAN TO THE BLACK SEA AND THE "BACKDOOR" TO RUMANIA.

IT WAS REPORTED ON GOOD AUTHORITY HERE SUNDAY THAT FOREIGN MINISTER SARACOGLU HAD REFUSED THREE OTHER RUSSIAN PROPOSALS--RECOGNITION OF THE PARTITION OF POLAND, FORMATION OF A NEUTRAL BLOC IN THE BALKANS UNDER GERMAN-RUSSIAN INFLUENCE, AND RUSSIAN AND BULGARIAN TERRITORIAL EXPANSION AT THE EXPENSE OF RUMANIA.

GREAT INTEREST ATTACHED TO THE MOSCOW NEGOTIATIONS BECAUSE BRITAIN AND FRANCE HAVE GIVEN PLEDGES TO DEFEND THE INDEPENDENCE OF RUMANIA.

OCT 18 1939

THE DARDANELLES, THE MOST EFFECTIVE ROUTE FOR THEIR GIVING AID TO RUMANIA, WOULD HAVE BEEN CLOSED TO THEM HAD TURKEY CONSENTED TO THE REPORTED SOVIET PROPOSALS.

THE FRENCH AND BRITISH ALSO HAVE AGREEMENTS WITH TURKEY, ANNOUNCED MAY 12, TO FIGHT TOGETHER IN EVENT OF WAR IN THE MEDITERRANEAN.

THE AGREEMENT WITH FRANCE, IN WHICH TURKEY ALSO SECURED THE 10,000-SQUARE-MILE AREA OF THE HATAY REPUBLIC, A FORMER PART OF FRANCE'S SYRIAN MANDATE, WAS SIGNED JUNE 23, BUT THE AGREEMENT WITH LONDON WAS NEVER SIGNED FORMALLY.

BUT A TURKISH MILITARY MISSION HAS BEEN IN LONDON AWAITING OUTCOME OF THEMOSCOW TALKS. IT WAS RELIABLY REPORTED THAT THE BRITISH PACT WOULD BE SIGNED THIS WEEK, PROBABLY THURSDAY OR FRIDAY.

TURKISH OFFICIALS HAVE SAID FROM THE TIME OF THE INITIATION OF THE TALKS IN MOSCOW THAT THEY SAW NO INCONSISTENCY WITH THEIR AGREEMENTS WITH BRITAIN AND FRANCE AND A PACT WITH RUSSIA, WITH WHOM TURKEY HAS CONSISTENTLY MAINTAINED CLOSE RELATIONS.

THE PRIME MINISTER'S STATEMENT INDICATED, HOWEVER, THAT TURKEY WAS NOT PREPARED TO GO AS FAR AS RUSSIA WISHED.

SURVIVOR SAYS ATHENIA BORE LOAD OF GUNS

Illinois Man's Affidavit Is Placed in State Department Files.

HE QUOTES CHIEF OFFICER

OCT 18 1939

Asserts the Torpedoed Ship Was Later to Have Been a Raider.

WASHINGTON, Oct. 17 (A. P.).—An affidavit saying that the British liner Athenia, sunk on September 3 en route to New York, carried coast defense guns for Canada and was to be outfitted as a raider after completing its trip has been filed at the State Department by Gustav A. Anderson of Evanston, Ill., operator of a travel bureau. He was a passenger on the Athenia.

The affidavit was drawn on the basis of questions by three Congressmen: Francis H. Case, Republican, of South Dakota; Overton Brooks, Democrat, of Louisiana, and Walter M. Pierce, Democrat, of Oregon. Mr. Anderson grew up in Mr. Pierce's Congressional district.

Mr. Anderson's statements were said to be based on information from Chief Officer Copeland of the Athenia that there were plenty of guns on the ship for coast defense at Halifax and Quebec.

Secretary Hull said at his press conference today that Mr. Anderson's affidavit was the first intimation he had had that there were guns aboard the Athenia.

Highlights From It.

The affidavit said:

"Congressman Case: Have you any knowledge whether the Athenia carried guns or ammunition on that trip?

"Anderson: There were no guns in sight outside.

"Congressman Brooks: Were there any guns inside that you know of?

"Anderson: I believe there was. I talked to the chief officer and I asked him, 'are there guns here?' He said they were in the hold and there were plenty on board.

"Congressman Pierce: What did he say they were for?

"Anderson: He said they were to be used for coast defense for Halifax and Quebec.

"Pierce: Did he say she was fitted out as a raider?

"Anderson: He said they were to outfit the Athenia as a raider for her return trip.

"Brooks: Did you see any guns?

"Anderson: I was looking down the hold and talking with one of the seamen loading cargo. I asked, 'What's that, the guns?' and he said 'yes.'

"Brooks: What did you have reference to?

"Anderson: The stuff down in the hold. There was a canvas or burlap covering it.

"Pierce: Could you form any idea as to the size of the guns?

'A Huge Pile.'

"Anderson: I could not form any idea as to size. But the guns under the burlap formed a huge pile.

"Pierce: Had you any knowledge as to whether the Germans knew the Athenia had guns?

"Anderson: No. But there was a rumor to that effect.

"Brooks: Did you see any indication that the Athenia was equipped to carry guns?

"Anderson: She was re-enforced with heavy beams and braces.

"Brooks: Did you discuss the reasons with Officer Copeland for these braces and beams?

"Anderson: Everybody knew it. Everybody on board knew it. Some time last year after the Munich conference she was fitted out as a raider."

OCT 18 1939

Mr. Anderson recounted vividly his experiences when the ship was torpedoed. He got off in a lifeboat carrying fifty persons. He was rescued by the Swedish boat Southern Cross.

His affidavit is one of several score already obtained by the State Department from passengers aboard the Athenia. The department in seeking to ascertain the responsibility for the sinking, in which twenty-eight Americans lost their lives. An official said today that he did not know whether any other passenger had given testimony concerning guns.

The Maritime Commission thanked today Miss Helen Crosby of Washington, a psychology student at Swarthmore College, for helping in the rescue of 220 passengers of the Athenia by the commission's freighter City of Flint.

Chairman Emory S. Land wrote to Miss Crosby the commission's appreciation "of the assistance rendered by you, a passenger, to the captain of the Maritime Commission ship City of Flint in preparation for, and during the time that, the survivors of the S. S. Athenia were on board the City of Flint."

"Your voluntary assistance in the listing and checking of the names and addresses of the survivors of the S. S. Athenia greatly facilitated their care and management on board the City of Flint. The dissemination of news as to their location and condition to their friends and relatives, and expedited that ultimate debarkation at Halifax," Mr. Land said.

Capt. J. A. Gainard of the City of Flint suggested to the commission that it thank Miss Crosby for her conspicuous help as an organizer.

Interviewed by the Washington Post by telephone in her college dormitory room at Swarthmore, Pa., Miss Crosby suggested that Capt. Gainard should receive a few hearty plaudits.

"He didn't sleep a wink through it all," she said. "He's a wonderful man. If I ever have to go through another experience like that—and I hope I don't—I hope it's on Capt. Gainard's ship."

Soviet President, in Reply, Says'TendentiousReports' Cloud Purpose of Parley

OCT 18 1939

WASHINGTON, Oct. 17 (AP).—President Mikhail I. Kalinin of the Soviet Union has informed President Roosevelt that present negotiations between the Soviet and Finnish governments are being conducted in conformity with principles which recognized the state independence of Finland.

The White House made public a dispatch to President Roosevelt from the Soviet President, replying to a note in which the American Chief Executive on last Wednesday called attention to the "long-standing and deep friendship which exists between the United States and Finland."

Text of Roosevelt's Note

President Roosevelt's note, on Oct. 11, to President Kalinin, follows:

"The President of the United States sends his greetings to President Kalinin with the following personal message:

"'While the United States is taking no part in existing controversies in Europe, the President wishes to call attention to the long-standing and deep friendship which exists between the United States and Finland. He feels that he can call this to the attention of President Kalinin because of their joint efforts a number of years ago which resulted in the resumption of friendly relations between the Soviet Union and the United States.

"'Such being the case the President expresses the earnest hope that the Soviet Union will make no demands on Finland which are inconsistent with the maintenance and development of amicable and peaceful relations between the two countries, and the independence of each.

"'The President feels sure that President Kalinin and the government of the Soviet Union will understand the friendly spirit in which this message is sent, and extends to President Kalinin an expression of his highest consideration.

"'FRANKLIN D. ROOSEVELT'."

Kalinin's Reply

President Kalinin replied to President Roosevelt on Oct. 16 as follows:

"Mr. President: I thank you for your greetings and for the friendly sentiments expressed in your message transmitted to me on Oct. 12.

"I consider it appropriate to remind you, Mr. President, that the state independence of the Finnish Republic was recognized by the free will of the Soviet government on Dec. 31, 1916, and that the sovereignty of Finland was guaranteed to it by the peace treaty of Oct. 14, 1920, between the Russian Socialist Federated Soviet Republic and Finland. By the above-mentioned acts of the Soviet government the basic principles of the reciprocal relations between the Soviet Union and Finland were defined. The present negotiations between the Soviet government and the government of Finland are also being conducted in conformity with these principles.

"Despite the tendentious versions which are being disseminated by circles evidently not interested in European peace, the sole aim of the negotiations referred to above is the consolidation of the reciprocal relations between the Soviet Union and Finland and a strengthening of friendly co-operation between both countries in the cause of guaranteeing the security of the Soviet Union and Finland. I beg you, Mr. President, to accept the expression of my deep respect.

EXPECTS 20,000,000 FLEEING FROM WAR

Roosevelt Makes Prediction At Conference Held At White House

Urges Intergovernmental Group Leaders Survey New Lands For Refugees

OCT 18 1939

[By the Associated Press]

Washington, Oct. 17—Predicting that 10,000,000 to 20,000,000 persons may become refugees as a result of the war, President Roosevelt proposed today a new, gigantic program of resettling homeless masses in the earth's "vacant spaces."

At a White House meeting of leaders of the intergovernmental committee on political refugees, he declared that the United States and other neutrals must press the task of building "new refuges for the tired, for the poor, for the huddled masses yearning to be free."

Praising the work which the committee has done in trying to find new homes for Jews and others who became refugees before the war began, he added that "this ghastly war" would complicate the task enormously.

Asks Scientific Study

He asked that the committee study cientifically the "geographical and economic problem of resettling several million people in new areas of the earth's surface."

"We have been working, up to now, on too small a scale," he said, "and we have failed to apply modern engineering to our task. We know already that there are many comparatively vacant spaces on the earth's surface where, from the point of view of climate and natural resources, European settlers can live permanently.

Cites Possibilities

"The possible field of new settlements covers many portions of the African, American and Australasian portions of the globe."

In referring to the work hitherto done on the refugee problem, the President said, "I am glad to be able to announce today that active steps have been taken to begin actual settlement, made possible by the generous attitude of the Dominican Government and the Government of the Philippine Commonwealth."

This recalled that members of a Presidential committee on refugees had found, after a survey, that the island of Mindanao in the Philippines would be a suitable haven for some 10,000 refugees, and the Dominican Republic for 25,000. If 10,000 persons are sent to Mindanao, they probably will be selected from among 15,000 German Jews concentrated temporarily at Shanghai.

OCT 18 1939

Should Be Ready, He Says

"We hope, and we trust," the Chief Executive declared, "that existing wars will terminate quickly; and if that is our hope, there is all the more reason for all of us to make ready beginning today, for the solution of problem of the refugee.

"The quicker we begin the undertaking and the quicker we bring it to a reasonable decision, the quicker will we be able to say that we can contribute something to the establishment of world peace.

"Gentlemen, that is a challenge to the intergovernmental committee—it is a duty because of the pressure of need—it is an opportunity because it gives a chance to take part in the building of new communities for those who need them. Out of the dregs of present disaster we can distill some real achievements in human progress."

Refers To War

The President said of the war now raging in Europe:

"The war will come to an end some day, and those of us who are realists know that in its wake the world will face a refugee problem of different character and of infinitely greater magnitude.

"Nearly every big war leaves behind it vast numbers of human beings whose roots have been literally torn up. Inevitably, there are great numbers of individuals who have lost all family ties—individuals who find no home to return to, no occupation to resume—individuals who for many different reasons must seek to rebuild their lives under new environments."

OCT 18 1939

Executive Committee

The group which met at the White House was the executive committee of the intergovernmental committee. Present were Lord Winterton, committee chairman; Sir Herbert Emerson, secretary, and diplomatic representatives of France, Argentina, Brazil and The Netherlands.

A memorandum urging that Palestine be given first consideration as a place for further settlement of Jews was laid before the committee by the American Emergency Committee on Palestine Affairs and the United Palestine Appeal.

The organizations said that Palestine could absorb 2,800,000 settlers, and that American Jews would be ready to finance a settlement program.

Roosevelt's Plea on Refugees

OCT 18 1939

WASHINGTON, Oct. 17 (AP).—President Roosevelt's statement to the Intergovernmental Refugee Committee follows:

I am glad to welcome to the White House Lord Winterton, the chairman; Sir Herbert Emerson, the director; Mr. Myron Taylor, the vice-chairman of the Intergovernmental Committee representing the United States of America, the heads of missions of the Argentine republic, Brazil, France and the Netherlands; and Mr. James G. McDonald, the chairman of my advisory committee on political refugees.

I extend through you to the thirty-two governments participating in the Intergovernmental Committee and to the private refugee organizations my appreciation for the assistance which has been given to refugees in the period since the meeting at Evian. I hope the work will be carried on with redoubled vigor and with more positive results.

In March, 1938, it became clear to the world that a point had been reached where private agencies alone could no longer deal with the masses of unfortunate people who had been driven from their homes. These men, women and children were beating at the gate of any nation which seemed to offer them a haven.

Members of Many Races

Most of these fellow human beings belonged to the Jewish race, though many thousands of them belonged to other races and other creeds. The flight from their countries of origin meant chaos for them and great difficulties for other nations which, for other reasons—chiefly economic—had erected barriers against immigration. Many portions of the world which in earlier years provided areas for immigration, had found it necessary to close the doors.

Therefore, a year and a half ago I took the initiative by asking thirty-two governments to cooperate with the government of the United States in seeking a long-range solution of the refugee problem. Because the United States through more than three centuries has been built in great measure by people whose dreams of other lands had been thwarted, it seemed appropriate for us to make possible the meeting at Evian, which was attended by Mr. Myron C. Taylor as my personal representative.

That meeting made permanent the present Intergovernmental Committee, and since that time this Intergovernmental Committee has greatly helped in the settling of many refugees, in providing temporary refuge for thousands of others and in making important studies toward opening up new places of final settlement in many parts of the world.

I am glad to be able to announce today that active steps have been taken to begin actual settlement, made possible by the generous attitude of the Dominican government and the government of the Philippine Commonwealth. This is, I hope, the forerunner of many other similar projects in other nations.

Furthermore, I am glad to note the establishment of a distinguished Anglo-American group of the co-ordinating foundation, which with the help of your committee will investigate the suitability of other places of settlement for immigrants.

OCT 18 1939

Interrupted by War

Things were going well, although I must confess slowly, up to the outbreak of the war in Europe. Today we must recognize that the regular and planned course of refugee work has been of necessity seriously interrupted. The war means two things:

First, the current work must not be abandoned; it must be redirected. We have with us the problem of helping those individuals and families who are at this moment in countries of refuge and who for the sake of the world and themselves can best be placed in permanent domiciles during the actual course of the war without confusing their lot with the lot of those who in increasing numbers will suffer as a result of the war itself.

That I may call the short range program, and it presents a problem of comparatively small magnitude. In a moment you will see why I say "comparatively small magnitude." At this moment there are probably not more than two or three hundred thousand refugees who are in dire need and who must as quickly as possible be given opportunity to settle in other countries where they can make permanent homes.

This is by no means an insoluble task, but it means hard work for all of us from now on—and not only hard work but a conscientious effort to clear the decks of an old problem—an existing problem, before the world as a whole is confronted with the new problem involving infinitely more human beings, which will confront us when the present war is over. This last is not a cheerful prospect, but it will be the almost inevitable result of present conflicts.

That is why I specifically urge that this intergovernmental committee redouble its efforts. I realize, of course, that Great Britain and France, engaged as they are in a major war, can be asked by those nations which are neutral to do little more than to give a continuance of their sympathy and interest in these days which are so difficult for them. That means that upon the neutral nations there lies an obligation to humanity to carry on the work.

I have suggested that the current task is small in comparison with the future task. The war will come to an end some day; and those of us who are realists know that in its wake the world will face a refugee problem of different character and of infinitely greater magnitude.

Nearly every great war leaves behind it vast numbers of human beings whose roots have been literally torn up. Inevitably there are great numbers of individuals who have lost all family ties—individuals who find no home to return to, no occupation to resume—individuals who for many different reasons must seek to rebuild their lives under new environments.

Every war leaves behind it tens of thousands of families who for very many different reasons are compelled to start life anew in other lands.

Economic considerations may affect thousands of families and individuals.

All we can do is to estimate on the reasonable doctrine of chances, that when this ghastly war ends there may be not one million, but ten million or twenty million men, women and children belonging to many races and many religions, living in many countries and possibly on several continents, who will enter into the wide picture—the problem of the human refugee.

OCT 18 1939

Second Great Task

I ask, therefore, that as the second great task that lies before this committee, it start at this time a serious and probably a fairly expansive effort to survey and study definitely and scientifically this geographical and economic problem of resettling several million people in new areas of the earth's surface.

We have been working, up to now, on too small a scale, and we have failed to apply modern engineering to our task. We know already that there are many comparatively vacant spaces on the earth's surface where, from the point of view of climate and natural resources, European settlers can live permanently.

Some of these lands have no means of access; some of them require irrigation; most of them require soil and health surveys; all of them present in the process of settlement, economic problems which must be tied in with the economy of existing settled areas.

The possible field of new settlements covers many portions of the African, American and Australasian portions of the globe. It covers millions of square miles situated in comparatively young republics and in colonial possessions or dominions of older nations.

Most of these territories which are inherently susceptible of colonization by those who perforce seek new homes cannot be developed without at least two or three years of engineering and economic studies. It is neither wise nor fair to send any colonists to them until the engineering and economic surveys have resulted in practical and definite plans.

Contribution to World Peace

We hope and trust that existing wars will terminate quickly, and if that is our hope there is all the more reason for all of us to make ready, beginning today, for the solution of the problem of the refugee. The quicker we begin the undertaking and the quicker we bring it to a reasonable decision, the quicker will we be able to say that we can contribute something to the establishment of world peace.

Gentlemen, that is a challenge to the intergovernmental committee—it is a duty because of the pressure of need; it is an opportunity because it gives a chance to take part in the building of new communities for those who need them. Out of the dregs of present disaster we can distill some real achievements in human progress.

This problem involves no one race group—no one religious faith. It is the problem of all groups and all faiths. It is not enough to indulge in horrified humanitarianism, empty resolutions, golden rhetoric and pious words. We must face it actively if the democratic principle based on respect and human dignity is to survive—if world order, which rests on security of the individual, is to be restored.

Remembering the words written on the Statue of Liberty, let us lift a lamp beside new golden doors and build new refuges for the tired, for the poor, for the huddled masses yearning to be free.

WASHINGTON, OCT. 17-(AP)-AN INTERNATIONAL CONFERENCE AT THE WHITE HOUSE TOOK UP TODAY A GERMAN JEWISH REFUGEE PROBLEM MADE URGENT BY WAR AND COMPLICATED BY THE PLIGHT OF THOUSANDS OF OTHER EUROPEANS SEEKING NEW HOMES.

THE EXECUTIVE COMMITTEE OF THE INTER-GOVERNMENTAL COMMITTEE ON POLITICAL REFUGEES CAME HERE AT THE INVITATION OF PRESIDENT ROOSEVELT, WHO WAS CHOSEN TO PRESIDE AT THE MEETING.

LORD WINTERTON, COMMITTEE CHAIRMAN, AND SIR HERBERT EMERSON, SECRETARY, WERE HERE FROM LONDON. PAUL VAN ZEELAND, FORMER PREMIER OF BELGIUM, ATTENDED IN HIS CAPACITY AS PRESIDENT OF THE COORDINATING FOUNDATION, A CORPORATION WORKING WITH THE INTER-GOVERNMENTAL COMMITTEE FOR THE MASS SETTLEMENT OF JEWISH REFUGEES.

THE EXECUTIVE COMMITTEE OF THE INTER-GOVERNMENTAL GROUP IS COMPOSED OF REPRESENTATIVES OF SIX NATIONS---UNITED STATES, GREAT BRITAIN, FRANCE, ARGENTINA, BRAZIL, AND THE NETHERLANDS. THE INTER-GOVERNMENTAL COMMITTEE REPRESENTS 32 NATIONS, AND WAS FORMED ON THE INITIATIVE OF PRESIDENT ROOSEVELT AND SECRETARY HULL.

THE AMERICAN DELEGATE IS MYRON C. TAYLOR, FORMER HEAD OF THE UNITED STATES STEEL CORPORATION, WHO IS VICE-CHAIRMAN OF THE INTER-GOVERNMENTAL COMMITTEE. HE WELCOMED WINTERTON AND EMERSON ON THEIR ARRIVAL IN NEW YORK AND CAME TO WASHINGTON WITH THEM.

OCT 18 1939

THE EXECUTIVE COMMITTEE HAD BEFORE IT THE FOLLOWING SPECIAL PROBLEMS RAISED BY THE WAR:

1. BRITAIN AND FRANCE, AMONG THE PRINCIPAL AIDS IN THE REFUGEE WORK, ARE CENTERING ALL THEIR EFFORTS ON THE WAR.

2. GERMANY, WHICH HAD AGREED TO AN ORDERLY EMIGRATION OF 175,000 JEWS A YEAR, INTENDS TO KEEP THE MEN AND YOUNG WOMEN FOR WAR WORK AND TO LET OUT ONLY OLD WOMEN AND CHILDREN. BUT OTHER NATIONS DO NOT WANT OLD WOMEN AND CHILDREN.

3. GERMANY NEEDS ALL HER FOREIGN CURRENCY FOR WAR PURCHASES AND CANNOT GIVE EMIGRATING JEWS ANY FOREIGN MONEY. ALSO, HER STEAMSHIP LINES, WHICH CARRIED JEWS TO OTHER COUNTRIES WITHOUT THE NECESSITY FOR PURCHASING STEAMSHIP TICKETS IN FOREIGN CURRENCY, ARE SHUT DOWN.

30.24-4113

4. OTHER PEOPLES BESIDES THE GERMAN JEWS NOW ARE REFUGEES. AMONG THEM ARE MORE THAN 100,000 SPANIARDS WHO HAVE GONE TO FRANCE, THOUSANDS OF POLES DRIVEN INTO RUMANIA AND THE BALTIC STATES, AND NEARLY 2,000,000 POLISH JEWS UNDER GERMAN DOMINATION. THE CONFERENCE EXPECTED TO DECIDE WHETHER TO ENLARGE THE WORK OF THE INTER-GOVERNMENTAL COMMITTEE TO INCLUDE OTHER PEOPLES, ALTHOUGH ITS ORIGINAL MANDATE SPECIFIED ONLY GERMAN POLITICAL REFUGEES.

5. BRITAIN, FRANCE, BELGIUM, THE NETHERLANDS AND SWITZERLAND HAVE 140,000 GERMAN JEWS WHO WERE RECEIVED AS TEMPORARY RESIDENTS. THE INTER-GOVERNMENTAL COMMITTEE WILL SEEK TO FIND PERMANENT SETTLEMENTS FOR THEM OVERSEAS.

REPORTS OF INVESTIGATING COMMITTEES ON LIKELY SPOTS FOR MASS SETTLEMENT WERE PREPARED FOR THE CONFERENCE. ONE OF THE MOST PROMISING IS THAT ON THE ISLAND OF MINDANAO IN THE PHILIPPINES WHERE IT IS THOUGHT AT LEAST 10,000 JEWS CAN BE SETTLED. IF SO, THEY PROBABLY WILL BE TAKEN FROM THE 15,000 GERMAN JEWS CONCENTRATED TEMPORARILY AT SHANGHAI.

OCT 18 1939

THE RECOMMENDATIONS OF THE MEETING HERE ARE NOT BINDING ON THE INTER-GOVERNMENTAL COMMITTEE. THEY MUST BE REFERRED TO THE LARGER COMMITTEE WHOSE MEMBERS WILL TAKE THEM UP WITH THEIR RESPECTIVE GOVERNMENTS.

New French Decree Calls For Meatless Mondays

OCT 18 1939

Steak Is Banned on Tuesdays Also to Save Beef for Army

PARIS, Oct. 17 (AP).—The Frenchman's taste for beefsteak in preference to veal, pork or mutton led Minister of Agriculture Henri Queuille to decree today the closing of all butcher shops in France on Monday and no sale of steak on Tuesdays.

The reason for his action was the oversupply of veal, pork and mutton, he said. By closing the shops, he stopped the sale of beef generally, although pork, veal and mutton chops may be cooked in delicatessens.

OCT 18 1939

The army also has a fondness for beef, which is better suited for refrigeration and transportation than other French meats.

Beef and Mutton To Be Sent Overseas Within 16 Months

BUENOS AIRES, Oct. 17 (AP).—One of the largest individual transactions in the history of the Argentine packing industry was disclosed today when the government announced Argentina had sold 200,000 tons of meat to Great Britain and France.

The meat, 170,000 tons of chilled and frozen beef and 30,000 tons of frozen mutton, will be forwarded within sixteen months. It was estimated nearly 600,000 head of cattle would be involved in the order.

Roberto M. Ortiz, President of Argentina, in a statement at Tandil, where he is resting, said it had been agreed with Britain and France to sell war supplies of beef and mutton outside the ordinary import quotas allotted by both countries to the Argentine.

The announcement ended bitterly contested negotiations which began more than two months ago and once were broken off by the British.

President Raczkiewicz was ordered to take a complete rest westerday by his doctors.

Hungary Bans Nazi Writings

Pushes Roundup Of Plot Suspects; Public Kept Completely In Dark

OCT 18 1939

[By the Associated Press]

Budapest, Oct. 17—The Hungarian Government clamped down on Nazi pamphleteers today, ordering the confiscation of a long list of publications it termed "incitive"—including a pamphlet on Adolf Hitler's Danzig speech.

The Government said the pamphlets had been put on sale without submission to the censor.

Among those banned were Reflect, Brethern, In Fire and in Blood, Hungarian Justice, English Politician, Justice in Palace and Hovel, and a book of verse.

Calm Follows Roundup

The country remained calm following yesterday's jailing of 140 members of the outlawed Nazi "Death Legion," who, it was charged, planned to overthrow the Government and assassinate 17 of their opponents and the more moderate Nazi leaders.

While the secret police sought others connected with the alleged plot, all news of it was kept from the general public. No mention of it was made on the radio, and not one of Hungary's thirty-five newspapers was permitted to print even the bare announcement of the arrests. Only one paper carried a report of the pamphlet confiscation order.

At Kistarsca they took their places with several hundred Hungarian Nazis already there and also with a number of Jews sent there for political offenses. Other alleged plotters were in the Budapest jail reserved for vagrants and prisoners on trial.

Secret police continued to seize Nazi pamphlets which, it was said, showed the influence of German propaganda. The pamphlets attacked the Government for the sympathetic reception accorded Polish refugees.

Reich Revives A War Song, but Britain's Is New

Nazis 'Sail Against England' as in '14; London Ditty Called 'Run, Adolf, Run'

BERLIN, Oct. 17 (AP).—A German sailors' song of the last war, "When We Sail Against England," was being popularized again and played over the radio today after each news broadcast. From the beginning of the Polish campaign on Sept. 1 until today, the "March of Germans in Poland" had been played similarly.

The sailors' song was written by the German author and national poet, Hermann Loens, who fell in the World War at Reims on Sept. 26, 1914. The words of the song, in free translation, follow:

Today a song we'll sing.
We'll drink the cool, sweet wine
And let our glasses clink
For orders came to part.

CHORUS

Give me your hand, your dear, white hand.
Farewell, my sweetest love.
Farewell, my sweet, farewell.
Farewell, for we sail; farewell, for we sail,
For we sail against England.

Our flag, see it wave from the mast.
Of Germany's strength it speaks.
We want to halt at last
The Englishman's sneering laugh.

Should tidings come of my fall,
Of my sleep in ocean's floods,
Don't weep over me at all,
For the Fatherland flowed my blood.

BIG MIGRATION REPORTED

100,000 Polish Refugees Said to Be on Way to Vilna

GENEVA, Switzerland, Oct. 17 (AP)—International Red Cross officials received a report today that 100,000 Polish refugees from regions occupied by Russia were making their way to Vilna, now under Lithuanian rule.

Malcolm Davis, under-secretary of the General Red Cross League, has been asked to go to Vilna and ascertain what help might be needed. Mr. Davis is now visiting the Scandinavian countries.

Ernest J. Swift, chief of the European delegation of the American Red Cross, and Wayne C. Taylor, member of the delegation, left last night for a two weeks' mission to Rumania, Hungary and Yugoslavia. Mr. Swift will then return to America, while Mr. Taylor and James T. Nicholson, another member of the delegation, will set up a liaison office in Geneva.

Polish Jews Pour Into Russia

MOSCOW, Oct. 17 (AP).—An increasing flood of Jewish refugees from German-occupied Polish territory into Soviet Russia's new holdings was reported today. Meanwhile, some tattered remnants of the Polish army were understood to be still fighting a guerilla campaign, lurking in the woods and marshes of eastern Poland and donning the uniforms of Soviet soldiers killed from ambush.

There were numerous unofficial reports of the stream of Jewish refugees from the German side of the new boundary, estimated already to total 500,000 to 1,000,000. For example, the population of Bialystok, on the Russian side of the line, normally 100,000, was said to be nearly doubled. Vilna (Wilno), which Russia gave back to Lithuania, was also said to be jammed with refugee Jews.

Russians here said the Red army was receiving the Jews cordially and providing work for them. The native population, however, was said to be fearful of Nazi spies among the refugees and to be receiving them with suspicion. The future status of the wanderers remained unsettled.

Federal Status For India To Be Post-War Item

Viceroy Says in White Paper England Will Be Ready Then To Discuss Issue

LONDON, Oct. 17 (AP).—At the end of the present European war, the British government "will be very willing to enter into consultation" looking toward formation of a federal government of India, a British White Paper on "India and the War," written by the Marquess of Linlithgow, Viceroy of India, stated today.

He said he had discussed with fifty-two Indian leaders, including Mohandas K. Gandhi and the president and members of the National Congress working committee, "the objectives of his majesty's government in the war," Britain's intentions "as to the ultimate status envisaged for India, so far as the British Commonwealth is concerned," and how India could aid in the prosecution of the war.

The White Paper said a definition of Britain's war aims could come only at a later stage of the conflict, and that the British government had not yet defined "with any ultimate precision" its war goal. It added that much would depend on the circumstances in which the war came to an end, saying: "The experience of all history shows in these circumstances the unwisdom and impracticality of a precise definition (of war aims) at so early a stage."

"At this grave moment in the destinies of nations, my prayer to all parties would be not to dissociate themselves from a common effort, but to lend their co-operation and their assistance in the prosecution of war," Linlithgow said.

The Viceroy concluded it was his hope "that in the grave juncture we face, India will go forward as a united country in support of a common cause."

Bucharest, Oct.17--AP-Information from Moscow that Sukru Saracoglu, Turkish foreign minister, had left Russia's capital without signing any agreement between Turkey and Russia was received with apprehension tonight in Rumanian political and diplomatic circles.

Officials awaited further details before commenting on the development.

It was believed here that Saracoglu might stop at the Blact Sea port of Constanza on his way home for a conference with Grigore Gafencu, Rumanian foreign minister.

The newspaper L'Independence Roumaine, which often reflects opinions of the officials, drew a parallel between the Rumanian and Finnish position in an editorial headed "Independence, neutrality, integrity."

The nespaper said "Finland is ready to reach an agreement with Moscow if these three points are respected. This attitude conforms with the aspirations of all neutral states. We don't doubt that Moscow will understand." ####

VATICAN OFFICIALS DECLINED ANY FORECAST ON WHAT THE POPE MIGHT SAY.

MONSIGNOR ANTONIO BACCI, SECRETARY OF BRIEFS, IS UNDERSTOOD TO HAVE READY A TENTATIVE DRAFT OF THE LATIN TEXT FOR THE POPE. VATICAN OFFICIALS SAID, HOWEVER, THAT LAST MINUTE CHANGES STILL WERE POSSIBLE.

OCT 18 1939

THE TEXT WAS EXPECTED TO BE SUBMITTED TO THE PONTIFF FOR HIS FINAL APPROVAL WHEN HE RETURNS FROM HIS SUMMER VILLA AT CASTEL GANDOLFO WITHIN THE NEXT FEW DAYS.

GOLD TELEPHONES SET ASIDE FOR THE POPE'S PERSONAL USE WERE INSTALLED TODAY IN HIS NEWLY DECORATED APARTMENT IN VATICAN CITY.

VATICAN OFFICIALS PREDICTED THE ENCYCLICAL WOULD BE LENGTHY, PROBABLY EXCEEDING 8,000 WORDS. DUE TO INTERNATIONAL DEVELOPMENTS. IT HAS BEEN REVISED TWICE SINCE IT FIRST WAS PREPARED LAST JUNE.

AUTHORITATIVE SOURCES SAID THE POPE UNDOUBTEDLY WOULD EXHORT ALL CHRISTIANS AND ESPECIALLY CATHOLICS TO COMBAT THE FORCES OF DESTRUCTION THROUGH PENITENCE, PRAYER AND ADHERENCE TO MORAL LIFE.

"IT IS NOTHING NEW UNDER THE SUN," L'OSSERVATORE COMMENTED. "AS IT WAS IN SPAIN SO IT IS IN POLAND. THIS WAS THE REASON IN SPAIN THAT PRIESTS, GATHERED IN CHURCHES WITH THE FAITHFUL IN SUPREME PRAYER, WERE CONDEMNED TO BE MASSACRED." OCT 18 1939

"OTHERWISE, WHY SHOULD HE BE SO ANXIOUS FOR ACCEPTANCE OF HIS SO-CALLED PEACE PROPOSALS. HITLER IS NOT ONLY A MADMAN, BUT A MADMAN IN DESPAIR.

"THE SOVIET RUSSIAN-GERMAN PACT MAY BE HISTORICALLY SIGNIFICANT, BUT FOR HITLER IT WAS THE BEGINNING OF THE END. HITLER FINDS HIMSELF DEPENDENT ON STALIN AND IS HIS PRISONER."

EMPHASIZING THE IMPORTANCE OF THIS MEETING BETWEEN KINGS HAAKON OF NORWAY, CHRISTIAN OF DENMARK, GUSTAF OF SWEDEN AND PRESIDENT KYOESTI KALLIO OF FINLAND WAS THE SITUATION IN FINLAND, WHERE RESIDENTS WERE LEAVING CITIES AND TROOPS WERE HELD IN READINESS IN THE FACE OF SOVIET RUSSIAN DEMANDS, AS YET UNPUBLISHED.

DESPITE THE URGENCY OF FINLAND'S PLIGHT, HOWEVER, OFFICIAL QUARTERS HERE WERE DISCOURAGING THE IDEA THAT TOMORROW'S MEETING HAD ANY MILITARY SIGNIFICANCE. IT ASSERTED THAT THE HEADS OF THE FOUR NORTHERN COUNTRIES AND THEIR FOREIGN MINISTERS WERE GATHERING TO DISCUSS NEUTRALITY PROBLEMS ARISING FROM THE WAR, BUT THAT THE DELIBERATIONS WOULD BE DOMINATED BY "THE LODESTAR OF NEUTRALITY."

ON THE EVE OF THE CONFERENCE THE SWEDISH NATIONAL LEAGUE OF YOUTH SUBMITTED TO KING GUSTAF A PETITION URGING HIM TO INVITE THE HEADS OF THE GREAT POWERS TO "TAKE THE INITIATIVE" WHICH COULD BRING THOSE AT WAR TO A CONFERENCE TABLE.

THE LEAGUE OF YOUTH IS ONE OF THE SMALLEST POLITICAL PARTIES IN SWEDEN, BUT LATELY HAS BEEN INCREASING IN STRENGTH. IT IS ULTRA-CONSERVATIVE.

EMPHASIZING THE UNMILITARY CHARACTER OF TOMORROW'S CONFERENCE, THERE WAS COMPLETE LACK OF MILITARY POMP AND DISPLAY IN THE WELCOMING CEREMONY PLANNED FOR THE VISITORS.

KING GUSTAF WILL GO TO THE AIRPORT EARLY TOMORROW TO MEET PRESIDENT KALLIO, THEN TO THE RAILWAY STATION TO MEET KINGS CHRISTIAN AND HAAKON. IN THE EVENING THE THREE KINGS AND PRESIDENT KALLIO WILL ATTEND A SPECIAL SERVICE IN THE STORKYRAN--ROYAL CHURCH--AND AT 9:45 MASSED CHOIRS WILL MARCH TO THE FESTIVELY ILLUMINATED PALACE TO WRITE THE CITY'S WELCOME IN SONG.

ALTHOUGH THERE WILL BE NO MILITARY PARADE, THE THOUGHT OF THE WAR'S MENACE TO ALL NOTHERN COUNTRIES--NOT ONLY TO FINLAND--WAS CONSTANTLY IN THE BACKGROUND.

UNOFFICIALLY, HOWEVER, SUCH SUGGESTIONS WERE VOICED BY THE NEWSPAPERS AFTONBLADET IN STOCKHOLM AND AFTENPOSTEN IN OSLO.

IN THE ABSENCE OF ANY DEFINITE DESCRIPTION OF MOSCOW'S DEMANDS ON FINLAND RESPONSIBLE COMMENTATORS HERE WERE VENTURING NO PREDICTIONS AS WHAT SWEDEN WOULD DO IN CASE FINLAND HAD TO FIGHT. MANY PERSONS REMEMBERED, HOWEVER, THAT DURING FINLAND'S FIGHT FOR INDEPENDENCE IN 1918, WHEN SWEDEN WAS OFFICIALLY NEUTRAL, MANY SWEDES WENT TO FINLAND TO HELP FIGHT AGAINST THE BOLSHEVISTS.

A RENEWED EFFORT TO BREAK THE ENGLISH BLOCKADE WHICH IS CALCULATED TO FORCE GERMANY'S CAPITULATION.

WITH IT MAY BE EXPECTED FURTHER BLOWS AT BRITISH MERCHANT SHIPPING, WITH THE IDEA OF CUTTING OFF VITAL FOOD SUPPLIES FROM ENGLAND.

THE HUNGER-DUEL BETWEEN GERMANY AND BRITAIN WOULD SEEM TO BE ON IN EARNEST.

APROPOS OF THESE DEVELOPMENTS, MY MAIL BRINGS FROM A MEMBER OF THE EDITORIAL STAFF OF THE BIRMINGHAM (ALA.) NEWS AN INQUIRY OF SUCH FAR-REACHING IMPORTANCE THAT I AM GOING TO REPEAT IT HERE FOR DISCUSSION.

"CAN BRITAIN'S BLOCKADE," IT READS, "BE SUFFICIENTLY EFFECTIVE TO STARVE HITLER OUT IN THE END?"

WHILE WE ARE ABOUT IT LET'S ADD ANOTHER QUERY HERE:

"CAN GERMAN U-BOATS AND BOMBING PLANES SINK ENOUGH MERCHANT SHIPPING TO STARVE ENGLAND OUT, DESPITE THE BRITISH NAVY?

THAT'S AN EQUALLY LEGITIMATE QUESTION. BOTH ENGLAND AND GERMANY SUFFERED PRIVATION IN THE LAST WAR.

OCT 19 1939

I WENT INTO THE REICH WITH THE BRITISH ARMY OF OCCUPATION AND NEVER SHALL FORGET THE HUNGRY LOOK IN THE EYES OF THE UNDERFED CHILDREN, AND GROWN-UPS AS WELL. MANY OF THE LITTLE ONES WERE SUFFERING FROM RICKETS AND OTHER MALADIES BECAUSE OF LACK OF FATS.

AND I WAS IN ENGLAND WHEN FOLK WERE GOING WITHOUT SUFFICIENT FOOD IN ORDER THAT THE TROOPS AT THE FRONT MIGHT BE WELL FED. THERE WAS AN UNHAPPY TIME WHEN THERE WERE SUPPLIES FOR ONLY ABOUT SIX WEEKS IN THE COUNTRY, AT THE HEIGHT OF THE GERMAN SUBMARINE CAMPAIGN. THOSE WERE THE DAYS WHEN MANY GOOD SHIPS LADEN WITH FOODSTUFFS WERE GOING TO THE BOTTOM.

THE ANSWERS TO OUR TWO INQUIRIES ARE DEPENDENT ON SEVERAL MIGHTY "IFS." HOWEVER, AN ANALYSIS DEVELOPS SOME INTERESTING POINTS.

LET'S LOOK AT GERMANY FIRST. NAZIDOM IS DEPENDENT ON IMPORTS FOR ABOUT A FIFTH OF HER FOOD IN NORMAL TIMES. THIS FIGURE PRESUMABLY INCREASES CONSIDERABLY DURING WAR.

ALSO THE REICH LACKS MANY VITAL WAR MATERIALS, SUCH AS THE OIL WHICH IS ALL-IMPORTANT IN THESE DAYS OF MECHANIZED WARFARE, MANGANESE, COPPER, NICKEL, IRON, RUBBER, COTTON AND A LONG STRING OF OTHERS.

IF WE LEAVE RUSSIA OUT OF THE PICTURE FOR THE MOMENT, THE POSITION OF GERMANY NOW AS REGARDS SUPPLIES ISN'T UNLIKE WHAT IT WAS IN THE WORLD WAR. THE REICH THEN HAD A CALL ON ABOUT THE SAME AMOUNT OF FOOD-STUFFS AND WAR MATERIALS FROM EASTERN EUROPE AND THE BALKANS. ABOUT THE SAME NEUTRALS WERE AVAILABLE FOR TRADE, INCLUDING SWEDEN, WHICH FURNISHES THE GREAT BULK OF GERMANY'S IRON ORE.

AND YET THE BRITISH BLOCKADE STARVED GERMANY OUT.

WHY? WELL, BECAUSE THE SOURCES NAMED COULDN'T FILL THE REQUIREMENTS. RUSSIA, WHICH WAS ON THE ALLIED SIDE, WAS KNOCKED OUT BY THE RED REVOLUTION BEFORE THE END OF THE WAR.

OCT 19 1939

LOOKING AT IT FROM THIS VIEWPOINT--AND STILL LEAVING RUSSIA OUT--MANY ECONOMIC EXPERTS GIVE BRITAIN AN EXCELLENT CHANCE OF SQUEEZING GERMANY--IF THE BLOCKADE CAN BE MAINTAINED. THIS POSSIBILITY IS STRENGTHENED BY GERMANY'S BAD ECONOMIC POSITION.

BUT NOW WE HAVE TO CONSIDER RUSSIA. SHOULD THE SOVIET LAY ITSELF OUT TO PROVIDE GERMANY WITH ALL SUPPLIES POSSIBLE, REGARDLESS OF PAYMENT, THEN THE REICH MIGHT BE ABLE TO CARRY ON INDEFINITELY, IRRESPECTIVE OF THE BLOCKADE.

HOWEVER, WE DON'T KNOW WHAT RUSSIA IS GOING TO DO. MANY OBSERVERS BELIEVE SHE MAY PROVIDE SUPPLIES FOR A WHILE AND THEN CUT THEM OUT.

HAVING IN MIND TO SMASH GERMANY IN THE LONG RUN SO TO EXTEND SOVIET INFLUENCE WESTWARD. WE SHALL HAVE TO WAIT TO SEE HOW THIS VERY IMPORTANT "IF" COMES OUT.

NOW ABOUT ENGLAND. THIS DOLL-GARDEN COUNTRY IS FAR MORE DEPENDENT ON THE OUTSIDE WORLD THAN IS GERMANY. SEVENTY-FIVE PERCENT OF ALL JOHN BULL EATS COMES FROM ABROAD.

ENGLISH EXISTENCE DEPENDS ON THE KING'S NAVY KEEPING THE SEAS OPEN FOR HER SHIPPING.

LIKE GERMANY, ENGLAND ALREADY HAS TIGHTENED ITS BELT. THE LITTLE MAN, RESPONDING TO THE SLOGAN "DIG FOR VICTORY," IS BUSY GROBBING IN THE SOIL OF A TINY GARDEN PLOT WHICH ONE DAY WILL PRODUCE A HANDFUL OF THIS AND A MOUTHFUL OF THAT.

GOOD LAND ISN'T EASY TO COME BY IN ENGLAND. AN ESTIMATED HALF-MILLION ACRES ARE UNDER THE PICTURESQUE HEDGES WHICH SURROUND THE FIELDS AND GARDENS. HUNDREDS OF THOUSANDS OF ACRES ARE PRESERVED IN THE GREAT ESTATES. THE LITTLE MAN GETS HIS SHOVELFUL OF SOIL WHERE HE CAN FIND IT AND TILLS IT PATIENTLY AND PATRIOTICALLY.

THUS FAR BRITAIN CLAIMS TO HAVE SWEPT GERMAN SHIPS FROM THE OCEAN AND TO HAVE THE SUBMARINE MENACE WELL IN HAND. BUT THE OTHER DAY CAME THE ASTONISHING SINKING OF THE BIG ROYAL OAK.

WAS THE DESTRUCTION OF THIS FORTRESS A FLUKE, OR WAS IT DUE TO THE DEVELOPMENT OF SOME NEW TECHNIQUE OR EVEN A DIFFERENT TYPE OF TORPEDO? DOES IT PRESAGE FURTHER SIMILAR DEPREDATIONS? CERTAINLY IT IS SOMETHING TO CAUSE THE BRITISH ADMIRALTY MUCH CONCERN.

THEN WE STILL HAVE TO LEARN THE EFFICACY OF BOMBING PLANES AGAINST WARSHIPS. THAT HASN'T BEEN DECISIVELY DETERMINED YET IN COMBAT.

BUT WHAT IS MOST TO BE FEARED FROM THE BRITISH STANDPOINT IS MASS BOMBINGS BY GREAT NUMBERS OF PLANES AGAINST MERCHANT SHIPPING TIED UP IN ENGLISH SEAPORTS.

THE NAVY MAY BE ABLE TO PROTECT VESSELS AT SEA, BUT WHAT SAVES IT IN HARBOR? ANTI-AIRCRAFT GUNS AND DEFENDING PLANES? THERE AGAIN WE MUST WAIT FOR THE TEST.

MEANTIME THOSE SHIPS AT THE DOCKS ARE THE DINNER-PAILS OF ENGLAND.

With the British Expeditionary Force in France, Oct.15-AP-(Delayed)-General Lord Gort, commander-in-chief of the British Army, believes that men and not macines will win the war.

The General entertained the war cofrespondents, British, Dominion and American, at a luncheon today. Despite his reputation as a man of action --he has won the Victoria Cross and various other decorations--his short speech was easy and able.

Like any general he told nothing of importance but, he was obviously proud of ~~kxi~~ his men, certain they would be "true to their colors" and able to fight as bravely and ably as any others.

"We hear a great deal about machines and armies today are fully mechanized" he said, "But man is now and always will be master of the machine. I am sure we will have the men as well as the machines."

I spoke to him briefly after the luncheon and couldn't get over the feeling I was talking to a successful wheat buyer in Minneapolis or a ~~kx~~ tobacco merchant in Durham. Even the fact that the aide who introduced me was the Earl of Munster did not change things. There was no reason. The Earl of Munster looks and acts like a very nice Yale boy who is sure that all ~~kxxi~~ this is awfully bad form but who likes it anyway.

The General quoted the remark that war was "long stretches of boredom amd moments of intense fear" and then laughingly asked the correspondents not to go too hard on him. He appealed to them for cooperationa as "collaborators telling the people at home what we are doing in this war for liberty."

Gort is about five feet 11 inches tall and weighs about 185 pounds. He has a handshake like a blacksmith and blond hair and a "guards" mustache. His eyes are bright blue. If a movie director were seeking the perfect type for a british general he would go not further than the present commander-in-chief.

President Invokes Neutrality Act Section to Keep Out Belligerent Undersea Craft.

OCT 19 1939

WASHINGTON, Oct. 18 (A. P.).—President Roosevelt barred American ports and territorial waters today to belligerent submarines.

The President proclaimed Section 8 of the existing neutrality act and thus made it unlawful for submarines of nations at war—both commercial undersea vessels and those which are ships of war, to enter United States ports or territorial waters unless forced to do so by "force majeure."

"Force majeure" was defined as meaning "an act of God" such as a storm.

Mr. Roosevelt said he proclaimed the section because he found this would "serve to maintain peace between the United States and foreign States, to protect the commercial interests of the United States and its citizens, and to promote the security of the United States."

Roosevelt Submarine Order

OCT 19 1939

WASHINGTON, Oct. 18 (AP).—The text of President Roosevelt's proclamation today closing United States ports to submarines of nations at war follows:

Whereas Section 8 of the joint resolution approved Aug. 31, 1935, as amended by the joint resolution approved May 1, 1937 (50 Stat. 127); U. S. C., Sup. IV; Title 22, Sec. 245E), provides:

"Whenever, during any war in which the United States is neutral, the President shall find that special restrictions placed on the use of the ports and territorial waters of the United States by the submarines or armed merchant vessels of a foreign state, will serve to maintain peace between the United States and foreign states, or to protect the commercial interests of the United States and its citizens, or to promote the security of the United States, and shall make proclamation thereof, it shall thereafter be unlawful for any such submarine or armed merchant vessel to enter a port or the territorial waters of the United States or to depart therefrom, except under such conditions and subject to such limitations as the President may prescribe. Whenever, in his judgment, the conditions which have caused him to issue his proclamation have ceased to exist, he shall revoke his proclamation and the provisions of this section shall thereupon cease to apply."

Lists Belligerents

Whereas there exists a state of war between Germany and France; oland; and the United Kingdom, India, Australia, Canada, New Zealand, and the Union of South Africa;

Whereas the United States of America is neutral in such war;

Now, therefore, I, Franklin D. Roosevelt, President of the United States of America, acting under and by virtue of the authority vested in me by the foregoing provision of Section 8 of the joint resolution approved Aug. 31, 1935, as amended by the joint resolution approved May 1, 1937, do by this proclamation find that special restrictions placed on the use of the ports and territorial waters of the United States, exclusive of the Canal Zone, by the submarines of a foreign belligerent state, both commercial submarines and submarines which are ships of war, will serve to maintain peace between the United States and foreign states, to protect the commercial interests of the United States and its citizens, and to promote the security of the United States;

And I do further declare and proclaim thta it shall hereafter be unlawful for any submarine of France, Germany, Poland or the United Kingdom, India, Australia, Canada, New Zealand or the Union of South Africa to enter the ports or territorial waters of the United States, exclusive of the Canal Zone, except submarines of the said belligerent states which are forced into such ports or territorial waters of the United States by force majeure, and in such cases of force majeure, only when such submarines enter ports or territorial waters of the United States while running on the surface with conning tower and superstructure above water and flying the flags of the foreign belligerent states of which they are vessels. Such submarines may depart from ports or territorial waters of the United States only while running on the surface with conning tower and superstructure above water and flying the flags of the foreign belligerent states of which they are vessels.

To Punish Violators

And I do hereby enjoin upon all officers of the United States, charged with the execution of the laws thereof, the utmost diligence in preventing violations of the said joint resolution, and this my proclamation issued thereunder, and in bringing to trial and punishment any offenders against the same.

This proclamation shall continue in full force and effect unless and until modified, revoked or otherwise terminated, pursuant to law.

In witness whereof, I have hereunto ste my hand and caused the seal of the United States of America to be affixed.

Done at the City of Washington this eighteenth day of October, in the year of Our Lord nineteen hundred and thirty-nine, and of the independence of the United States of America the one hundred and sixty-fourth.

ROOSEVELT BACKS BALTIC CONFERENCE AS SESSIONS OPEN

President Cables Gustav as Danes, Norse and Finns Meet With Swedes.

OCT 19 1939

WASHINGTON, Oct. 18 (A. P.).—President Roosevelt advised King Gustav of Sweden today that "this Government joins with the governments of the other American republics in expressing its support of the principles of neutrality and order under law for which the nations represented at the Stockholm Conference have, throughout their history, taken a consistent stand."

The President told the King of Sweden that the conference, called when tension between Russia and Finland threatened to lead to war, "will be followed with deep interest by the Government and people of the United States."

Similar messages were sent by the governments of the twenty other American republics. The action was regarded as one of the first fruits of the recent Panama Conference, at which the American republics pledged themselves to adopt a common neutrality position.

Text of Roosevelt Cable.

President Roosevelt's message marked his second attempt in a week to aid in preserving peace between Russia and Finland. His first was a message to President Kalinin of Russia, to which he received a reply yesterday.

The text of Mr. Roosevelt's cablegram to the King of Sweden follows:

"The conference of the Nordic States convened by your Majesty in Stockholm will be followed with deep interest by the Government and people of the United States.

"Under the circumstances which exist, this Government joins with the governments of the other American republics in expressing its support of the principles of neutrality and order under law for which the nations represented at the Stockholm conference have, throughout their history, taken a consistent stand.

OCT 19 1939

Finnish Cable Made Public.

Later the White House made public a cablegram from President Kyoesti Kallio of Finland to President Roosevelt which states that Mr. Roosevelt's "personal valuable assistance and interest in Finland's fate and difficult problems will never be forgotten in this country."

The telegram was delivered by Hjalmar J. Procope, the Finnish Minister. In it President Kallio, in the name of his people, expressed to the President and the American people. "the sincere gratitude felt by the people of Finland for the sympathy and moral support you and the people of the United States have shown us."

Apparently the message was in recognition of President Roosevelt's note a week ago to President Kalinin of Russia regarding Finland.

OCT 19 1939

Stockholm Meeting Opens.

STOCKHOLM, Oct. 18 (A. P.).—The Kings of the three Scandinavian States and the President of Finland opened their conference today on problems which face the northern neutral countries as the result of the European war.

The visiting heads of State—King Haakon of Norway, King Christian of Denmark and President Kyoesti Kallio of Finland—were welcomed in brief ceremonies devoid of military display in harmony with the peace policy long associated with the Scandinavian nations.

King Gustav, Sweden's eighty-one-year-old monarch, at whose instance the conference was called, presided at the meeting, which was attended by the Foreign Ministers of the four States.

Gustav himself and members of his Cabinet were at the Bromma airport to meet President Kallio and the Finnish Foreign Minister, Eljas Errko. There were so few military uniforms at the airport that they could be counted—five officers among the welcoming group and two steel-helmeted soldiers.

Gustav Hastens to Station.

The same emphasis on the non-military character of the conference was evident at the railroad station when the train carrying King Haakon and King Christian arrived a short time later.

King Gustav, who had taken President Kallio to the royal castle, returned to meet his royal visitors and embraced them as they stepped from the train.

The formal opening session of the conference was held in a reception room of the capitol. After a half hour's discussion the Foreign Ministers adjourned to the Foreign Office to continue deliberations.

How to preserve the neutrality of their nations while maintaining normal trade relations was the question facing the monarchs of Sweden, Norway and Denmark—just as it was during the world war.

To that problem was added the situation of Finland, which existed during the first part of the world war only as a grand duchy of the Russian Empire and which now is engaged in negotiations with Soviet Russia, which the Finns fear may threaten their independence.

General Peace Move Urged.

An appeal to the northern States and their Ministers to widen the scope of the conference and make it a starting point for a general European peace move was published in Stockholm afternoon papers. It was in the form of a full page advertisement signed by "Representatives of Swedish Industry and Trade."

The reaffirmation of the northern States' neutrality and earnest desire to remain at peace is good, the appeal said, "but not enough."

"They must also watch for every opportunity to promote peaceful contacts between belligerent Powers before it is too late," the appeal continued.

"In this hour the influence of the northern States is not small.

"We appeal to the heads of the four States and their ministers to broaden the demonstration of the northern countries' desire for peace and to discuss all possibilities of bringing about negotiations which might result in averting world disaster."

This appeal followed a petition couched in similar language addressed to King Gustav yesterday by the Swedish National League of Youth.

Swedes insisted that their own country was not in danger and ever, no encouragement was given to this idea.

The Gothenburg Trade and Shipping Journal said it was "quite impossible that the four governments should attempt a peace proposal. Platonic demonstrations of that nature are not appropriate for small neutral States whose combined strength does not impress any great power."

Most people seemed to feel that the most to be expected from the conference would be a reaffirmation of the northern States' desire to maintain their neutrality and an expression of their cultural and economic solidarity.

Choirs Give Peoples' Welcome.

Many Swedes said it was too much to expect that any definite stand would be taken regarding possible aid to Finland. They recalled that the combined population of the four northern countries is scarcely 17,000,000 as compared with Russia's 170,000,000 and Germany's 90,000,000.

The complete lack of pomp and military display accompanying the welcoming ceremonies emphasized the unmilitary character of the conference.

This evening the three Kings and President Kallio will attend a special service of the Storkyran—Royal Church—and later massed choirs will march to the festively illuminated palace to deliver the city's welcome in song.

While Sweden generally appeared confident that she would be able to maintain her own neutrality, precautionary measures were taken for an exodus of Stockholm's children in the event of an emergency. The measures were similar to those already announced in Copenhagen.

Dispatches from Copenhagen disclosed that a war insurance bill to cover damage to Danish property would go before Parliament today.

The proposed bill provides a fund of 700 million kronnen (about $140,000,000) to be raised by assessments of 5 per cent of the amount of fire insurance carried on involved properties.

Solidarity.

COPENHAGEN, Oct. 18 (A. P.).—As the Government heads of Denmark, Sweden, Norway and Finland began their conference at Stockholm today, the press of the three other capitals emphasized North European solidarity.

People eagerly bought papers in the beflagged cities to read such comments as this in the Copenhagen Berlingske Tidende:

"Northern people are not bound together by perishable pacts which often, once signed, seem to lose their effectiveness. Events have shown that they, by nature, are more closely knit together than treaties could make them. Whatever is about to happen will not shake this solidarity."

In Oslo the conservative Morgenblad said: "Scandinavia's border is identical with Finland's eastern border. Infringement on Finland must have grave consequences also for Norway and Sweden."

Oslo's Conservative Tidenstegn said: "The world's eyes are directed toward Stockholm today, for none are better fitted for the intiative for peace than are the Scandinavian States, and the world expects that the voice of sense and peace shall get a last chance."

Finland Seeks Support.

HELSINKI, Finland, Oct. 18 (A. P.).—With the Finnish national anthems ringing in their ears, President Kallio and Foreign Minister Eljas Erkko departed by plane for the Stockholm conference.

The Finnish Government hoped to find in the conference support and guidance in the critical negotiations with Soviet Russia.

A Government spokesman said that Dr. Juho Kusti Paasikivi, principal Finnish negotiator with Russia, would probably not return to Moscow before Friday night, after the Stockholm meeting.

Prime Minister Aimo K. Cajander, Foreign Minister Erkko and Dr. Paasikivi discussed the Russian proposals yesterday. The spokesman said that no reply to Russia had been agreed upon and that the Stockholm deliberations might "influence further proceedings."

Tension relaxed among the Finnish citizenry for the first time in two weeks.

The ministers of Norway, Denmark, Sweden and Great Britain along with Prime Minister Cajander and other Finnish officials, bade farewell to President Kallio and Dr. Erkko at the airport.

OCT 19 1939

Optimism in Moscow.

MOSCOW, Oct. 18 (A. P.).—Soviet Russia turned today from negotiations with Turkey to preparations for a resumption of talks with Finland within the next few days.

A more optimistic attitude toward Russo-Finnish relations was apparent in foreign circles. There was growing hope for a peaceful settlement of any issues between the two countries.

With the Russo-Turkish talks halted and at least temporarily snagged and negotiations with Finland in a state of suspense, the Kremlin opened conversations with a German delegation on the repatriation of German minorities in the Baltic States and former Polish territory. A separate German delegation is here conferring with Soviet trade experts to broaden commercial relations under the trade and credit agreement announced on August 20.

OCT 19 1939

Railroad Conference.

BERLIN, Oct. 18.—A railway conference was being set up between Germany, Russia and the Baltic States today to reorganize transportation facilities in Eastern Europe, the semi-official commentary, Dienst aus Deutschland, reported.

Economic negotiations with Moscow for increases in Russo-German trade emphasized the importance of the railway conference.

Berlin to Hold Aloof.

BERLIN, Oct. 18 (A. P.).—Germany will not move a finger to influence Russia's relations with the Nordic and Baltic States one way or another, authoritative sources said today.

They said it was up to these States to make their own arrangements as best they can, just as Germany has made her terms with Russia.

German sources vigorously deny that Germans have a moral or other responsibility for the fate of the Nordic or Baltic States.

Germany's relations with these States, they point out, have always been correct, normal and decent, but the Nordic States themselves always insisted this relationship must not go beyond that point. In other words, the Germans say, these States themselves never wanted the relationship to be intimate.

Deny Any Resentments.

German officialdom, therefore, fails to see why now some foreign voices are raised asking why Germany does not prevent Russia from imposing terms upon these States. Germany does not see any unjustified demand by the Soviets in the offing, authorized sources say.

These sources say that Germany's action is uninfluenced by any "resentments," yet in the same breath they point out how Finland declined to enter a non-aggression pact with Germany some months ago.

They also contend that the Baltic and Nordic States owe a great deal to Germany and her culture, yet they have carefully avoided giving Germany credit.

A study of League of Nations discussions and votes, they further remind inquirers, also shows that these northern neighbors of Germany often acted "peculiarly" toward Germany.

Hence, if these States insisted upon keeping a proper distance in their relationship with Germany heretofore, the Reich sees no reason—so these commentators say—to become their sponsor at present.

Mass Demonstration Of North Europe Solidarity Greets Rulers

Press Urges Mediation Move As Norse Kings And Kallio Confer

OCT 19 1939

[By the Associated Press]

Stockholm, Oct. 18—A great throng of Swedes, upward of 100,000 strong, gathered in front of the Royal Palace and nearby streets and squares tonight in a mass demonstration of solidarity of the northern countries.

Cheers greeted the Kings of Denmark, Norway and Sweden when they appeared on the balcony with Finland's President Kyoesti Kallio, meeting here to discuss the preservation of their neutrality and normal trade in the European war.

Cheers For Kallio And Finland

Long after the serenading by massed choirs, which marched up with patriotic organizations carrying 700 banners, cries of "Kallio! Kallio!" continued.

Cheers for Finland resounded through Stockholm's streets. The crowd intoned the national anthems of the four northern countries and waved handkerchiefs in greeting.

The most impressive moment came just before the close of the demonstration when the multitude sang the full-throated old Lutheran hymn, "A Mighty Fortress is Our God."

Press Urges Peace Move

As the conference of the three kings and the President of the four countries got underway today Stockholm papers carried an appeal to the northern states to make the meeting a starting point for a general European peace move.

The conferees also were greeted by a message from the twenty-one American republics, including the United States, expressing support of the principles of neutrality.

17 Faint During Excitement

During the demonstration the kings of Denmark, Norway and Sweden stood arm in arm with Finland's President at a moment when his country was in the midst of a crisis growing out of Russian demands.

So great was the crush that seventeen persons fainted and had to be taken away in ambulances.

After cheering Kallio many in the great crowd paused at churches on the way home to pray for his country—and their own.

There was no official reaction to the appeal for a peace move that was published in the Stockholm newspapers.

The appeal signed by "representatives of Swedish industry and trade" said the reaffirmation of the northern states' neutrality and earnest desire for peace was good, "but not enough."

"They must also watch for every opportunity to promote peaceful contacts between belligerent powers before it is too late," the appeal added. "In this hour the influence of the northern states is not small."

No Official Hint Of Mediation

There was no official indication, however, that the northern countries would attempt any mediation in their discussions of problems facing them because of the war.

King Gustaf of Sweden, initiator of the conference, King Haakon of Norway, King Christian of Denmark, President Kallio and their Foreign Ministers opened the conference in the Royal Palace.

Later the states' heads had a separate talk in the palace while the Foreign Ministers and their aides continued the conversations at the foreign office.

The first day's conferences were described tonight as having produced a "rather more optimistic attitude" in high political quarters of the northern European states.

Devoid Of Military Display

Sweden's venerable 81-year-old monarch welcomed the Kings of Norway and Denmark at the railroad station after previously greeting President Kallio at the airport.

The welcoming ceremonies were devoid of military display.

The reply of the Soviet's President Michael Kalinin to President Roosevelt saying that Russia respects Finland's independence was credited with achieving some relaxation of the tension in the northern countries, existing since Finnish-Russian talks began.

Russian demands upon Finland, however, still remained a closely guarded secret.

Chief Issue Before Conferees

The principal question facing the conferees was how to preserve neutrality while maintaining normal trade relations. To that problem was added the situation of Finland whose negotiations with the Soviet, the Finns fear, may threaten their independence.

The Kings and Finnish President attended special services tonight in Storkyrkan—the Royal church adjoining the palace—where Archbishop Eidem asked God to give the northern heads of state "strength to wage the struggle against the forces of evil presently rampant in the world."

Later they appeared on a balcony of the Royal Palace to receive the ovation of a great crowd led by a choir of hundreds of musicians. The choir sang the national anthems of Norway, Sweden, Denmark, Poland and Iceland.

Gustaf Host At Banquet

Inside the palace King Gustaf was host to seventy guests at a state banquet. Roses from his own garden decorated the table.

The Foreign Ministers will resume their deliberations tomorrow.

Kallio planned to return to Helsinki by plane tomorrow afternoon and Thursday night the Norwegian and Danish sovereigns will depart by train.

Finns Hold Patriotic Rally

HELSINGFORS, Oct. 18 (AP).—Thousands of Finns, with their capital city partly emptied and guarded against possible air attack, staged tonight a mass demonstration for Pan-Scandinavian solidarity.

OCT 19 1939

A giant chorus led a crowd which packed the great Helsinki Square in singing patriotic song to the accompaniment of a military band. Tumultuous cheering of "Long Live Finland" followed singing of the national anthem.

German officials in Helsingfors were preparing volunteer transportation for German citizens to the Reich if a forced exodus should become necessary in the future. The legation established an information department in the German Chamber of Commerce, where instructions were given to Germans regarding transportation and removal of property. An official advisory letter also was sent to each local German.

Norway Bolsters Defenses

OSLO, Norway, Oct. 18 (AP).—Defense Minister Christian F. Monsen announced today that "certain steps have been taken to increase and strengthen the neutrality defenses of northern Norway," both naval and military. The minister did not elaborate.

Holland to Fortify West Indies Islands

THE HAGUE, Oct. 18 (A. P.).—The Netherlands Government asked Parliament today for 2,000,000 guilders (about $1,000,000) to provide anti-aircraft defenses for the Netherlands West Indies Islands of Curacao and Aruba.

Dozen Planes Said to Have Attacked Warships.

AMSTERDAM, Oct. 18 (A. P.).—Residents of Schiermoonikoog Island, off the north coast of the Netherlands, today reported a fight between unidentified planes and warships some distance outside Netherlands territorial waters.

Witnesses said six warships were attacked by twelve planes about 11 A. M. (5 A. M. New York time).

The nationality of the participating craft could not be determined because of the distance from shore. It also was impossible to learn the outcome of the fight.

Schiermoonikoog is ten miles from the German-Netherlands boundary.

Says Finland Is Determined To Maintain Her Neutrality

Commander Of Nation's Eastern Forces Says Country Hopes For Peace, But Is Building Defenses

OCT 19 1939

By LYNN HEINZERLING
Associated Press Correspondent

Viipuri, Finland, Oct. 18—The slender, graying man who commands Finland's eastern military forces sat at a desk in his peacetime headquarters high in medieval Viborg Castle today and told of his nation's determination to maintain her neutrality, come what may.

Calmly, Lieut. Gen. Harald Oehquist explained that Finns were taking advantage of every minute to strengthen their defenses, but at the same time all hoped peace would come out of the current troubled times.

"The morale is very high among Finnish troops, which have been augmented to defend our neutrality in the Karelian Isthmus," he said.

Is Natural Route

The isthmus, between the Gulf of Finland and Lake Ladoga, is half Finnish and half Soviet Russian, and would be the natural route for any southeast attacking force.

"The nearer one gets to the border, the more thoroughly ready is the Finnish soldier for the test," the general asserted. "If there were nervous persons on the isthmus they've all left now in a voluntary exodus.

Strengthened Defenses

"Civil and military authorities and the population stand hand in hand, but are ready for peace and are hopeful that it will be retained."

General Oehquist recalled that Finland began last summer to strengthen her defenses, observing that "everyone knows defenses can never be strong enough."

Some of his troops, whose strength he did not mention, harvested the sugar beets and potatoes of those farmers who left when signs of trouble showed.

The voluntary departure of the civilians has not been completed, he said, and added that some frontier villages still were occupied by virtually their normal populations.

Even in the immediate border vicinity some members of women's organizations of civic guards and village telephone operators were carrying on.

Grain And Cows Removed

At certain border points, General Oehquist said, grain and cows have been removed. He emphasized that there had been no border incidents and no shooting.

In Viipuri, residents said about fifty per cent. of the city's 75,000 population had left.

The general is of Swedish descent. He received his training at the Swedish Military Academy and in the German army against Russia in the World War.

NAZI DRIVE EXPECTED ON CENTER OF FRONT

OCT 19 1939

Think Previous Bitter Attack Was Planned to Mask Bigger Offensive—Nazi Casualties Are Put at 5000.

PARIS, Oct. 18 (A. P.).—Sharp fighting accompanying a German offensive along the northern part of the western front since Monday already has cost the Nazis more than 5,000 casualties, French sources estimated today.

The French said their own losses were slight as their troops fell back to previously prepared positions and met the advancing Germans with heavy blasts of artillery fire.

The fighting has been centered in the region just across the Moselle river from Luxembourg, and in the sector between Saarbruecken and Pirmasens further east.

Raiding parties from both sides fought a series of localized engagements during the night, the general staff reported in its morning communique. These actions were described as "ambushes and trench raids."

The general staff also noted "intense movement" of troops and materials by both highway and railway behind the German lines.

Tonight's communique read:

"On the front, no change on the whole.

"Great activity of the scouting units, notably between the Moselle and the Saar."

[Swiss observers reported from Basle German troop concentrations, indicating that an even bigger push was coming.]

French reports said that their troops had voluntarily abandoned positions on German soil near the Borg Forest and Perl, leaving only advance lookouts on Schneeberg Heights close to the border.

When the German advance reached that point, they said, these lookouts reported back to artillery units, which already had calculated the range and cut loose at once with their guns.

Out to Save Saar Industries.

The German offensive along a twenty-mile front east of the Saar River appeared to have been designed to break the French grip on the rich Saarland industrial region, vital to Nazi war industries. There was no official statement as to whether the French still claimed to dominate the Saar Valley. Semi-official reports, however, which said the French still were fighting on German soil in this area, indicated they had not greatly relaxed their grip.

The exact line of the new French positions, which were established some time ago in expectation that Germany would launch an offensive after mopping up in Poland, was not disclosed.

French Tanks Ready.

Behind their new line of defense, the French have drawn up heavy tanks in large numbers. French military men believe these monsters, designed for use in counter-attacks and liaison work, are the most powerful weapons of their kind in the world.

Observers expected that the French, having withdrawn to apparently strong positions, would content themselves with waging a defensive campaign attempting to inflict as many losses as possible upon the Germans while keeping the war off French soil.

Winter weather was expected within a few weeks to thwart any

Reports of French advances in the early weeks of the war indicated they had penetrated as far as seven miles into German territory, cleaning out scattered Nazi pill-boxes and mine fields. Before retreating, it was said, they laid out mines of their own to impede German operations.

French Tanks Ready.

Behind their new line of defense, the French have drawn up heavy tanks in large numbers. French military men believe these monsters, designed for use in counter-attacks and liaison work, are the most powerful weapons of their kind in the world.

They carry crews of at least four men each, and their armament includes machine-guns and small caliber cannons. Heavily armored and equipped with radio, the tanks have a maximum speed of about twenty-five miles an hour.

Observers expected that the French, having withdrawn to apparently strong positions, would content themselves with waging a defensive campaign attempting to inflict as many losses as possible upon the Germans while keeping the war off French soil.

Winter weather was expected within a few weeks to thwart any German offensive ambitions on the western front, while the naval blockade was relied upon to undermine German morale during the months of enforced inactivity ahead.

Berlin's Official Statement.

BERLIN, Oct. 18 (A. P.).—The German High Command announced today the French were continuing to retreat from German soil and said that ten enemy planes had been shot down in the last two days.

OCT 19 1939

Capture of "numerous prisoners" was reported as German troops occupied positions from which the French were said to have retired yesterday between the Moselle river and the Palatinate forest.

Seven enemy planes, of which two were British, were shot down over German territory by anti-aircraft fire and pursuit planes.

The communique said. Three other British planes were reported downed "in an air fight over British territory."

The communique also acknowledged that one German fighting plane had been brought down by anti-aircraft fire during the raid on the British naval base at Scapa Flow yesterday. The raid, it was added, resulted on a bomb hit on "an older English battleship" (the Iron Duke).

Great Activity Behind Lines.

BASLE, Switzerland, Oct. 18 (A. P.).—Rear areas on both sides of the western front seethed with activity today in the wake of German thrusts which Swiss observers believed were intended to divert attention from preparations for a bigger push.

These observers said that the offensive, when it comes, probably will be directed against the Wissemburg - Lauterbourg - Rhine triangle near the middle of the German-French frontier.

For the third successive day and night, it was reported, the Germans continued to concentrate troops and offensive material at Karlsruhe and other points in the strategic Lauterbourg sector. The concentration movement was said to have been in no way affected by assaults which the Germans have been making on the northeastern end of the front, near the Moselle River and east of the Saar.

The French, dispatches indicated, have been matching the German concentration with their own re-enforcements.

Early last evening French long range artillery shelled highways in the German rear for an hour in an apparent attempt to disrupt the concentration. German guns were silent during the bombardment.

A few French patrols which tried to cross the Lauter River were said to have been stopped short by German machine gun emplacements, which have been strengthened all along the Wissembourg-Lauterbourg line.

Pontoons Moved Up.

The Germans were reported to have assembled large numbers of tanks in the first line of the Siegfried fortifications near the Lauter River. These would be of no use for offensive purposes, however, the Swiss said, until infantry and engineers succeeded in crossing the Lauter and spanning the rain-swollen stream with pontoon bridges.

In this connection the French noted that pontoons from Austrian factories which recently passed through Baden were reported to have been sent further north.

Dispatches received here said the French had withdrawn from positions along the banks of the Lauter to a ridge a mile south of the frontier, where a railroad links Wissembourg and Lauterbourg. Many anti-tank guns were reported in position along this line.

The southern end of the front along the Rhine remained quiet meanwhile, and there was nothing to indicate that either the French or Germans planned any immediate offensive activity in this sector. Troops on both sides of the Rhine north of Basle, however, were reported far more wary than at the beginning of the war, when they frequently swam in the stream and shouted across at one another.

BRITISH FEAR U-BOAT MORE

OCT 19 1939

Military Experts Say It Is Deadlier Than Planes.

AIR RAID DAMAGE BELITTLED

But Submarine's Penetration of Scapa Flow Causes Alarm.

LONDON, Oct. 18 (A. P.).—British military experts today rated the submarine torpedo a more deadly weapon than Germany's air force.

The loss of at least eight German planes in raids on two British naval bases in the last two days was declared to be out of all proportion to the amount of damage inflicted on British warships.

But there was no attempt to conceal the concern caused by an enemy U-boat's exploit in penetrating the defenses of the famous Scapa Flow naval base last Saturday and sinking the battleship Royal Oak with a salvo of torpedoes.

The London Times called the sinking of the Royal Oak at anchorage "a disturbing incident, providing grave matter for investigation by the Naval Court of Inquiry which is now sitting."

The London Daily Express bluntly told its 2,500,000 readers: "The Scapa Flow affair is a disgrace. This disaster is inexcusable."

The Express added that Winston Churchill, First Lord of the Admiralty, "cannot be blamed for it," explaining that "the naval defense plans must have been laid down years ago. These plans should now be revised with energy and dispatch. And, thank God, Churchill is the man to make a good job of it."

Virtually the entire British press continued to criticize the authorities for failing to sound an air raid alarm during the Nazi raid over Edinburgh and the Firth of Forth on Monday. The Express declared: "The Government's explanation is totally inadequate."

Iron Duke Slightly Damaged.

Official communiques declared that the German bombers in a series of raids yesterday failed to do any important damage to the Scapa Flow base in the Orkney Islands. One bomb slightly damaged the old battleship Iron Duke, which has been used as a training vessel, it was said officially, and four enemy plaines were brought down during the raids on Scapa Flow and the eastern coasts of Scotland and England yesterday.

The Air Ministry announced that not more than half the fourteen German planes which raided the Firth of Forth on Monday were believed to have returned to their bases.

A previous communique said that at least four enemy planes were brought down.

Civilians Watch the Show.

During the raids in the Orkneys yesterday, sirens were sounded six times at Kirkwall and two bombs fell on civilian property, but no casualties were reported.

One bomb fell behind an air raid warden's house at Castlewell on the island of Flotta, and another on the island of Hoy, about 200 yards from a residence.

Ignoring the danger, many civilians stood outside their homes to watch the raiding planes. Wardens had a difficult time chasing children indoors.

Naval observers, studying the results of the raids so far this week, concluded that the defense still held the edge in the battle of planes versus warships. In yesterday's raids, it was noted that the planes were forced to remain at high altitudes by heavy fire from anti-aircraft batteries, thus making accurate bombing virtually impossible.

BRITISH CLAIM GOOD START IN AERIAL WAR

Chamberlain Cites "Resounding Success" In Tests With Raiders

OCT 19 1939

Says English Destroyed 8 Invading Nazi Planes, Lost None Of Own

[By the Associated Press]

London, Oct. 18—Britain asserted tonight that her home anti-aircraft guns had achieved "resounding success" in their first tests against raiding German warplanes.

With pride and gratification in his voice, Prime Minister Neville Chamberlain told the House of Commons that "we have at least the satisfaction of knowing that we have made a good beginning" in the war against Germany.

German planes, apparently on a scouting mission, approached Britain's Scapa Flow naval base again today, but did not drop any bombs, the Air Ministry announced.

810 Lost With Royal Oak

Two raids were carried out yesterday by Nazi planes over the Orkney Islands, site of the Scapa Flow base where the battleship Royal Oak was sunk by a submarine Saturday.

The Admiralty announced in revised figures that 810 officers and men had been lost with the Royal Oak. There were 424 survivors—57 officers and 367 enlisted men.

It was disclosed that Rear Admiral H. E. C. Blagrove, newly appointed admiral-superintendent of the Chatham dockyard, went down with the ship. He had been appointed to the Chatham post October 2. During the World War he served on the battleship Queen Elizabeth.

Chamberlain outlined these points in his seventh weekly review of the war:

1—We know that in the air battles, which during the last two days have for the first time been fought over our coasts, we have destroyed eight enemy aircraft without losing a single machine of our own.

25 Per Cent. Loss For Nazis

This, he said, represented more than a twenty-five per cent. loss for the attacking force.

2—That despite German "propaganda," the "vast bulk of comment of nearly all shades of political color in neutral countries has shown appreciation of the attitude of the Allied governments."

3—That "the British expeditionary force has now finally taken over their allotted sector of the French lines and all divisions are in position" with "complete" understanding between the British and French high commands.

4—That British shipping lost to submarine attacks during the week ended October 17 represented "only about one-half of one per cent. of the total number of sailings."

Laborites Raise Complaints

Chamberlain asserted the German Government had not answered issues he raised last week in refusing a peace with Adolf Hitler that recognized Nazi "conquests," and, he continued, "there is, therefore, nothing that I can add to my statement last week."

Labor oppositionists expressed dissatisfaction with Britain's wartime economic organization and their leader, Clement R. Attlee, suggested a full-time Economics Minister should be added to the War Cabinet. Laborite Emanuel Shinwell asserted "intelligent direction of our economic policy could do more to win and shorten the war than any other weapon."

Sir John Simon's Reply

Sir John Simon, Chancellor of the Exchequer, said that the present setup provided for coordination between governmental departments through the Treasury and that the addition of another minister "would not be an improvement."

Atlee's demand for the appointment of a full-time Economics Minister was the same as that he voiced in Commons October 10 after the appointment of Lord Stamp as economics adviser to the Government was announced. He spoke very briefly today.

Urges Trade Expansion

Shinwell declared the Government should make every effort to develop trade with Russia, southeastern Europe and South America, and added:

"It might be that at the end of the war, the real war, the economic war would begin and that for it Germany might be better equipped than ourselves."

Chamberlain spoke of "fantastic" claims by Germany of the effect of her air and submarine raids and declared:

"It is not true that the Hood or the Repulse or any other capital ship has suffered the least damage. The same is true of the Ark Royal."

Truth And Communiques

He said the Government had "not hesitated to publish the full extent of any losses sustained," and that it was far more important the world should "believe implicitly in the truth of our communiques" than that "we should reap the short-lived advantages which distortions of the truths may bring."

Warning that "it would be unwise to assume that we shall always be as successful as we have been in these first exchanges," he said "there are many surprises in war and they cannot all be pleasant."

OCT 19 1939

DEFENSE AGAINST BOMBERS PRAISED BY CHAMBERLAIN

He Says British Have Shot Down More Than 25 P. C. of Raiding Planes

OCT 19 1939

LONDON, Oct. 18 (A. P.).—Britain has "made a good beginning" in the war against Germany, Prime Minister Chamberlain declared in the House of Commons today in a speech minimizing British losses and saying Germany had lost more than a fourth of the planes which have raided the British Isles.

He paid tribute in his brief weekly war report to the work of defense forces in fighting off the first German air attacks on the country. In these first air battles "fought over our own coasts, we have destroyed eight enemy aircraft without losing a single machine of our own," Mr. Chamberlain said.

He added that several more German bombers might have "failed to reach home and said the casualties "thus certainly exceeded 25 per cent of the attacking force and may have been higher."

Admits Severe Naval Losses.

The British Navy "has sustained severe losses, both in officers and men," Mr. Chamberlain said, referring to the sinking of the battleship Royal Oak on Saturday and casualties inflicted by German air raiders on the Firth of Forth Monday.

Sixteen men were killed in the Monday raid and 810 went down with the Royal Oak when a submarine torpedoed her in Scapa Flow, the British naval base in the Orkney Islands off the north Scottish coast.

Attacks on British fleet bases were "fully expected," the Prime Minister said.

"The extent of the enemy's disappointment at the failure of these attacks to inflict serious injury on our ships may be measured by the fantastic nature of the claims which they have felt obliged to invent."

[Germany reported that the battle cruiser Repulse also had been torpedoed in the Scapa Flow raid, and has hinted that the battleship Hood and aircraft carrier Ark Royal also have been attacked successfully.]

Mr. Chamberlain specifically denied that any damage had been inflicted on the warships Hood, Repulse or Ark Royal.

His statement was made soon after Adolf Hitler in Berlin had bestowed special honors on the submarine commander who torpedoed the Royal Oak and laid claim to having damaged the Repulse.

Sees Good Beginning Made.

"There are many surprises in war and they cannot all be pleasant," Mr. Chamberlain said, "but we have at least the satisfaction of knowing that we have made a good beginning."

He contended that despite German propaganda efforts the allies held a preponderance of sympathy in neutral countries.

Britain intends, he said, to do her best "to mitigate" the inconveniences which war inevitably brings for all non-belligerent countries."

The Prime Minister said that since his last rejection of German peace proposals as too vague "there has been no indication from Berlin of the views of the German Government upon the issues" and continued:

"German propaganda organs have used all possible ingenuity so to twist foreign comment as to make it somewhat less unfavorable to their own point of view.

Claims Heavy Toll of U-Boats.

"I should doubt whether this effort has had any success outside Germany itself, for it is difficult to conceal the fact that the vast bulk of comment of nearly all shades of political color in neutral countries has shown a full appreciation of the attitude of the allied governments (Britain and France)."

Mr. Chamberlain said a heavy toll of German submarines had been taken since the war began and pointed out that losses by British ships entering and leaving port during the week ending yesterday represented only about one-half of one per cent of the total number sailing.

On the western front he said the British Expeditionary Force "has now finally taken over their allotted sector of the French line and all divisions are in position." He spoke of "complete" understanding between the French and British High Commands and gave as evidence "the fact that our expeditionary force is under the command of the French Commander in Chief (Gen. Maurice Gustave Gamelin)."

Denies Injury to Repulse or Hood.

The Prime Minister spoke of "fantastic" claims by Germany of successful attacks on British war vessels and declared:

"It is not true that the Hood or Repulse or any other capital ship has suffered the least damage. The same is true of the Ark Royal."

The Hood and Repulse are battle cruisers and the Ark Royal is an aircraft carrier.

Hails Unity of Allied Commands.

"The fact that our expeditionary force is under the command of the French commander-in-chief and that unity of command has thus been achieved at so early a stage of the war is one proof of this accord," Mr. Chamberlain said. "Another is to be found in an agreement by which French troops are serving under the orders of the British commander-in-chief in France (Lord Gort)."

Mr. Chamberlain declared that the Government had "not hesitated to publish the full extent of any losses sustained" and expressed the conviction that "imaginary" British losses broadcast by Germany would prove false.

It was far more important, he said, that the world should "believe implicitly in the truth of our communiques" than that "we should reap the short-lived advantages which distortions of the truths may bring."

"In these early days we must not indulge in foolish boasts," he went on. "Attacks so far made upon our coasts have been few and on a small scale and it would be unwise to assume that we shall always be as successful as we have been in these first exchanges."

Attlee Asks an Explanation.

"We have at least the satisfaction of knowing that we have made a good beginning," Mr. Chamberlain concluded.

Major Clement R. Attlee, leader of the Labor opposition, said the House "ought to have an explanation" of why the German air raid Monday apparently was unknown until the planes were over Rosyth, Scotland, their target. He said this impression tended to a lack of confidence in air raid warnings.

Major Attlee also expressed the opposition's dissatisfaction with the country's organization for war and said there should be a full-time Economics Minister in the war Cabinet.

Commons Hears Chamberlain Call British Ready in France

OCT 19 1939

Asserts 'All Divisions Are in Position' on Western Front; Calls Attack on U-Boats a Success, Issues New Warning on False Nazi Claims

LONDON, Oct. 18 (AP).—The text of Prime Minister Neville Chamberlain's weekly statement in the House of Commons today follows:

The statement which I made in the House on Oct. 12 was chiefly concerned with the attitude of His Majesty's Government to the speech of the German Chancellor on Oct. 6. Apart from the comment which has appeared in the German newspapers, there has been no indication from Berlin of the views of the German government upon the issues which I sought to define.

There is, therefore, nothing that I can add to my statement last week. Meanwhile, opinion in other countries has had an opportunity of finding expression, and German propaganda organs have used all possible ingenuity so to twist foreign comment as to make it somewhat less unfavorable to their own point of view.

I should doubt whether this effort has had any success outside Germany itself, for it is difficult to conceal the fact that the vast bulk of comment of nearly all shades of political color in neutral countries has shown appreciation of the attitude of the Allied governments.

The Fundamental Issues

It seems evident that the inconveniences which war inevitably brings for all non-belligerent countries and which, for their part, His Majesty's Government intend to do their best to mitigate, have not obscured the fundamental issues at stake, the determination of which must affect for good or ill the moral and material welfare of the neutral peoples no less than that of the belligerents.

The honorable members are already familiar, from statements made in this house and official communiques, with the main events of the war by land and sea and in the air. On the western front the British Expeditionary Force has now finally taken over their allotted sector of the French line and all divisions are in position.

We are proud to know that our men are thus standing to arms beside the soldiers of France, for whose patriotism, determination and magnificent fighting qualities we have so deep an admiration.

The understanding between the French and British higher commands is complete. The fact that our expeditionary force is under the command of the French commander in chief and that unity of command had thus been achieved at so early a stage of the war is one proof of this accord.

Another is to be found in an agreement by which French troops are serving under orders of the British commander in chief in France.

The War at Sea

Since I last spoke about the progress of the war at sea, activity has been unremitting both in attack and defense. I am sure that the whole nation is grateful to the Royal Navy for their untiring efforts to ward off enemy attack and to remove the menace of the submarine so that the steady flow of trade to and from our shores may remain unbroken.

In carrying out their task the navy has, during this week, sustained severe losses both in officers and men, and the House will desire to pay their tribute to the memory of all who have given their lives in the defense of their country, whether on sea, on land or in the air.

The success achieved against U-boats has already been referred to by my right honorable friend [Winston Churchill] in his statement yesterday. A heavy toll has been taken of the U-boats since the war began. The failure of this form of attack to interfere with our trade may be judged when I inform the House that it is estimated that the losses sustained by British shipping entering and leaving our ports during the week ending Oct. 17 represented only about one-half of 1 per cent of the total number of sailings.

Attacks by enemy aircraft on our fleet bases have begun. This is a new feature of the war, but one which was fully expected. The extent of the enemy's disappointment at the failure of these attacks to inflict any serious injury upon our ships may be measured by the fantastic nature of the claims which they have felt obliged to invent.

The Hood; the Ark Royal

It is not true—and I must repeat it once again, though by now the news grows stale through repetition—that the Hood, or the Repulse, or any other capital ship has suffered the least damage. The same is true of the Ark Royal.

The people of this country are resolute enough to bear bad news, and the government have not hesitated to publish the full extent of any losses they have sustained. Those imaginary losses which the German broadcasts have described with such unblushing impudence may serve for a time to raise their spirits, but in the end their falsity will be demonstrated and the consequent disappointment will be only the more depressing.

We on our side have no intention of claiming successes of which we are not convinced. It is far more important that the world should be able to believe implicitly in the truth of the communiques we issue than that we should reap the short-lived advantages which distortions of the truth may bring. We know that in the air battles which, during the last two days, have for the first time been fought over our own coasts we have destroyed eight enemy aircraft without losing a single machine of our own. We believe that several more German bombers may have failed to reach home. The total number of aircraft taking part in the raids did not exceed thirty.

The German Toll

The casualties which we have inflicted upon the enemy have thus certainly exceeded 25 per cent of the attacking force and may have been higher. These results are a splendid tribute to the courage and determination of the officers and men of the Royal Air Force, and the House will be glad to know that the Auxiliary Air Force have won a first and resounding success by bringing down three out of the four German aircraft destroyed in the raid on Rosyth. We may, indeed, be encouraged by the knowledge that our defenses have proved so successful in these first tests of their strength and that our fighter aircraft have been shown to possess the excellence of quality for which we had hoped.

In these early days we must not, of course, indulge in foolish boasts. The attacks so far made upon our coasts have been few and on a small scale, and it would be unwise to assume that we shall always be as successful as we have been in these first exchanges. There are many surprises in war and they cannot be all pleasant. But we have at least the satisfaction of knowing that we have made a good beginning.

BRITISH TANKS ARE TERRIFYING

American Tells of Riding at Fifty Miles an Hour.

BANGS OVER 4-FOOT DITCH

OCT 19 1939

'You Ought to Feel Her Hit a Wall,' the Driver Grins.

By DREW MIDDLETON.

WITH THE BRITISH ARMY IN FRANCE, Oct. 18 (A. P.).—When Britain bids for a "break through" on the western front, the vast number of tanks that have clattered and banged their way to the lines will lead the attack. They are the iron cavalry of the modern army.

Built by Britain's best engineers and manned by soldiers of a famous cavalry regiment, the blunt-nosed machines of the squadron I visited were pointed toward the front, ready to lead the infantry waves into battle when ordered.

The squadron was on the alert, forbidden to go more than half a mile from its billets.

Swift and Terrible.

I rode in a tank along the frontier, a tank vastly different from the lumbering beasts of a quarter of a century ago.

Alongside the heavy machines the British launched against the Germans at Cambrai in 1916, these tanks are tiny, but their speed and effectiveness have been doubled or tripled.

Hammering over the ground still pocked by the shells of the world war, I saw how effective the new tanks were. Each mounts machine-guns and a rifle, and is equipped to throw smoke bombs out of trigger mortars to screen its advance.

The turret swivels so that the gunner can spray his bullets in a deadly rain over the enemy positions.

A speed of fifty miles an hour can be made on open roads, and thirty-five miles an hour across a plowed field. The powerful engine does three miles on a gallon of gasoline.

Terrifying Experience.

From his turret, the pilot commands the tank, talking to the rest of the crew by telephone—because the clamor is like a thousand boiler factories all going full blast. He can communicate with other tanks by two-way radio.

Inside, the tank is as self-contained as a submarine. I climbed down into one and was lost in a maze of machinery and dials. Riding at full speed made me feel like a character in an H. G. Wells story.

By poking my head through the open turret, I got away from the terrific oily smell and the banging noise of the caterpillar treads and could watch the green countryside whiz past.

The driver turned the machine, and we moved onto a field churned by the heavy artillery of the world war. In the distance were ridges which tanks took in that war after Winston Churchill and Gen. Ironside had convinced the high command of their usefulness.

It is a terrifying experience to ride in a tank at full speed across broken country, over ditches and through brush, across roads and furrows.

But the Driver Grins.

I squinted through the telescopic sight, padded against the jolts, and saw the gun range in the glass that may frame grim sights before the tank's course is run.

We suddenly came upon a ditch about four feet deep. The four and a quarter tons of steel, machinery, guns, men and ammunition groaned, heaved and was across. My back ached.

I looked at the driver, who grinned and bellowed: "You ought to feel her hit a wall."

Built to stop rifle and machine-gun fire, the tank looks stanch and secure from the outside. Inside, with the iron six inches from your face, you can't help wondering what it would be like if an anti-tank gun scored a hit, or if she caught fire and the inside became a hell of flames and exploding ammunition.

I recalled what Lord Gort, the British Commander-in-Chief, told the American correspondents at luncheon yesterday: "Man is still master of the machine and the best men will win the war."

It is a long distance from this tiny seat in a heaving machine to the galloping lines of saber-brandishing horsemen that once composed the British cavalry.

Behind The War—

A Wedding

OCT 19 1939

[By the Associated Press]

London, Oct. 18—A Government White Paper hinted today that the marriage of Germany's then War Minister, Marshal Werner von Blomberg, to his stenographer on January 12, 1938, started a chain of events which precipitated the present war.

Sir Nevile Henderson, in another account of his Ambassadorship in Berlin, told Foreign Secretary Lord Halifax:

"In my report on the events of 1938, I drew your Lordship's attention to the far-reaching and unfortunate results of the Blomberg marriage.

Prelude To Disaster

"I am more than ever convinced of the major disaster which that—in itself—minor incident involved, owing to the consequent elimination from Herr Hitler's entourage of the more moderate of his advisers, such as Field Marshal von Blomberg himself, Baron von Neurath, Generals Fritsch, Beck and others."

Von Blomberg's marriage to Erika Gruhn, a carpenter's daughter, was witnessed by both Hitler and Col. Gen. Hermann Wilhelm Goering.

Col. Gen. Werner von Fritsch, then commander in chief of the Reichswehr, was said to have acted as the spokesman for the Officers Corps in protesting to Hitler that the marriage was socially "impossible."

15 Ousted By Hitler

The result was that Hitler assumed personal command of the armed forces and ousted von Blomberg, von Fritsch and thirteen other high-ranking officers in a general shakeup of the socially conscious corps.

Von Fritsch was killed September 23 in the siege of Warsaw, a siege which Sir Nevile now intimates might never have occurred had it not been for the von Blomberg affair.

Gen. Ludwig Beck resigned last October because he refused to see eye to eye with Hitler, it was reported, on the Austrian and Czecho-Slovak occupations.

Baron Konstantin von Neurath lost control of the German foreign policy at the time of the general army reorganization and eventually was relegated to the position of "protector" of Bohemia and Moravia, in former Czecho-Slovakia.

Sir Nevile's report added that after the von Blomberg denouement of February last year "Herr Hitler became more and more shut off from external influences and a law unto himself."

Hitler decided upon war without consulting any advisers, Sir Nevile said, observing, "the tragedy of any dictator is that as he goes on, his entourage steadily and inexorably deteriorates. For lack of freedom of utterance he loses his services of the best men.

"All Opposition Intolerable"

"All opposition becomes intolerable to him. All those, therefore, bold enough to express opinions contrary to his views are shed one by one, and he is, in the end, surrounded by mere yes men. . . ."

He commented that "Herr Hitler and National Socialism are the products of the defeat of a great nation in war and its reaction against the confusion and distress which followed. . . . It would be idle to deny the great achievements of the man who restored to the German nation its self-respect an dits disciplined orderliness.

"The tyrannical methods which were employed within Germany itself to obtain this result were detestable, but were Germany's own concern."

Of the Polish invasion, Sir Nevile said:

"Millions of Germans had begun to long for a more peaceful existence. Guns instead of butter were becoming more and more unpopular, except with the younger generation, and Hitler may well have wondered what might happen to his Nazi revolution if its momentum were allowed to stop.

"Moreover, the financial and economic position of Germany was such that things could scarcely continue as they were without some form of explosion, internal or external.

"Of the two alternatives, the most attractive from the point of view of his growing personal ambitions and those of the clique nearest to him was war.

"It is scarcely credible that he would have acted as he did if bloody war, rather than a bloodless victory, had not seemed a fairer prospect for him."

U.S. Steamer Rescues 300. War's Destruction Now Brought To 79 Craft

[By the Associated Press]

New York, Oct. 18—Through the air and under sea, Germany continued her lightning thrusts against Allied war craft and merchantmen today. Two more ships were sunk off the French coast.

The sinking of the 3,509-ton British freighter City of Mandalay and the 10,183-ton British passenger liner Yorkshire, about 500 miles off the coast of France, brought Great Britain's total loss of ships to forty.

U. S. Ship Rescues 300

The American steamship Independence Hall, bound for the United States, rescued 300 survivors of the two stricken ships, and notified the United States Maritime Commission she was returning them to Bordeaux, France. It gave no other details of the rescue and no indication of the possible loss of life.

The latest sinkings brought the total destruction, since the beginning of the war, to 79 ships, with a total tonnage of 368,360. The French have lost at least 6 vessels, the Germans 9 and neutrals 24, including 17 Scandinavian ships.

1,618 Lives Lost

Known loss of life mounted to 1,618 with a revised announcement by the British Admiralty that 810 officers and men had been lost in the sinking last week of the battleship Royal Oak by a submarine at Scapa Flow, British naval base.

LONDON—Operators of the steamer City of Mandalay said in an account passed for publication in London that their only information on the vessel was that she had been attacked and sunk in the Atlantic.

In Hongkong, agents for the steamer said she left there bound for the United Kingdom by way of Le Havre with a normal crew of ninety men and twelve passengers, which is the license limit for this type of cargo ship. The agents said they were uninformed of any extraordinary passenger additions en route.

12 Unidentified Planes Bomb Ships Near Emden

Amsterdam, Oct. 18 (AP)—A brisk battle in which twelve unidentified warplanes attacked six warships off the Netherlands island of Schiermoonikoog was reported today.

Residents of the island, in the North Sea near the German coast, said they saw the attack, but were unable to distinguish the nationality of the participants. It was not known, consequently, whether the vessels were British or German.

The mystery deepened because neither Great Britain nor Germany announced action in that vicinity.

Near Port Of Emden

The scene of battle was not far from the German port of Emden, which British planes attempted to raid yesterday.

Villagers who saw today's fight said they could not tell whether any planes were shot down or whether the warships were damaged. The action took place some distance from the island.

The attack was made about 11 A. M. (5 A. M., E. S. T.).

Schiermoonikoog lies about ten miles from the Netherlands' German boundary.

Physicians Mobilized To Meet Rescue Ship

Cork, Ireland, Thursday, Oct. 19 (AP)—Physicians and nurses were mobilized today to meet the American freighter Independence Hall which was expected here later in the day with 300 survivors of two British ships sunk in the Atlantic yesterday.

The survivors include 223 from the steamer Yorkshire and 77 from the City of Mandalay.

No information was available here as to how many of the survivors were injured.

Boat With Foodstuffs From South America Breaks Up Off English Coast

OCT 19 1939

London, Oct. 18 (AP)—The 5,594-ton Blue Star cargo boat Ionic successfully dodged submarines on a voyage across the Atlantic from South America only to run aground and break her back today off the western coast of England.

The vessel ran on a sand bank in a thick fog. The four passengers, eleven officers and forty men aboard were rescued and landed in a British port.

Destroyers stood by while salvage crews tonight tried to save some of the Ionic's cargo of foodstuffs.

NAZI SCOUTS FLY NEAR SCAPA FLOW

OCT 19 1939

LONDON, Oct. 18 (A. P.).—German airplanes, apparently on a scouting mission, approached Britain's great naval base at Scapa Flow today, but did not drop any bombs, the Air Ministry announced.

The Ministry said that the planes came from the direction of Kirkwall and Duncansbay Head.

The former is one of the Orkney Islands north of Scapa Flow; the latter is on the Scottish coast to the south.

Earlier, the British Press Association had announced that air raid warning sirens had sounded in Kirkwall and that the all-clear signal had been given an hour later.

PARIS, Oct. 18 (A. P.).—An air raid warning sounded this morning in Lille, industrial city of northeastern France.

Warning sirens screamed at 11:45 A. M. (5:45 A. M. Eastern standard time) and the all clear signal followed at 12:25.

No details of what caused the warning were received here immediately.

A similar alarm was sounded at noon in Amiens, in the same general region as Lille. The "end alert" signal was sounded half an hour later.

Say 60 Neutral Ships in Harbor Were Alarmed

BERGEN, Norway, Oct. 18 (AP).—Passengers aboard the Norwegian-American liner Stavangerfjord, which arrived today from Kirkwall, said that they witnessed the German bombing plane attack yesterday on British warships in the great naval base at Scapa Flow. Kirkwall, one of the examination stations to which the British Navy takes neutral vessels for search, is in the Orkney Islands just north of Scapa Flow.

The passengers said the appearance of the Germans was sudden and caused considerable alarm when they flew over some sixty neutral ships in Kirkwall Harbor. They said they saw several explosions around the warships.

Admiral Blagrove Lost In Sinking of Royal Oak

Chatham Dockyard Chief Was Among 810 Who Went Down

LONDON, Oct. 18 (AP).—Rear Admiral H. E. C. Blagrove, newly appointed Admiral-Superintendent of the Chatham Dockyard, it was disclosed today, went down with the battleship Royal Oak when she was torpedoed by a German submarine in Scapa Flow Saturday. Blagrove, fifty-two years old, had been appointed to the Chatham post Oct. 2. He served during the World War on the battleship Queen Elizabeth.

Revised figures issued by the Admiralty showed there were 810 men lost and 424 survivors. The figures were based on "latest information at the Admiralty" and showed twenty-four officers and 786 men had gone down with the first-line battleship. Survivors included fifty-seven officers and 367 men.

These totals exceeded slightly the previous estimates. They showed a tota. of 1,234 were on the ship instead of the outside figure of 1,200 estimated when the sinking was announced.

676 BLACKOUT DEATHS

Traffic Accidents Doubled in Britain in September.

LONDON, Oct. 18 (A. P.).—Britain's traffic deaths for the first month of the nightly wartime blackout were 676 more than normal. The official figures showed 554 killed on the nation's roads in September, 1938; 1,130 in September, 1939.

There were no fatalities in September from air raids—the menace which the rigid blackout of illumination is designed to reduce. Air raids thus far have cost sixteen lives—all in October, all naval men and all in daylight.

Capt. David Euan Wallace, Minister of Transport, announcing "with regret" the September traffic fatalities, however, told the House of Commons that "the blackout must remain an essential part of our defense measures."

"Any beneficial effect which a relaxation would have on road accidents has to be set against the increased exposure to the risk of heavy casualties from air raids."

Henry VIII's Playfield Plowed Up for Corn

LONDON, Oct. 18 (A. P.).—The British Ministry of Agriculture disclosed today that land which had been in grass since Napoleon's day was being plowed up as part of Britain's grow-more-food campaign.

The Ministry cited the case of Bushey Park, a royal preserve which once was the playground of King Henry VIII and his courtiers.

"Probably the last time this land grew corn," the Ministry said, "was in Napoleon's day, when Britain at another time in her history had to use her resources to the full."

Athenia Affidavit Called Tommyrot

GLASGOW, Oct. 18 (A. P.).—Norman Donaldson of the Donaldson Line, owners of the sunken Athenia, today characterized as "tommyrot and absolute nonsense" an American affidavit charging that the liner carried arms and was to have been outfitted as a raider.

"We gave details of the cargo after the sinking," said Donaldson. "The Athenia, of course, set out when the world was still at peace."

Gustav A. Anderson of Evanston, Ill., a passenger on the Athenia when she was sunk September 8, said in the affidavit, furnished yesterday to the United States State Department, that the chief officer told him there was "plenty" of guns aboard, destined for Canada, and that the ship was to be outfitted as a raider on her return trip.

LONDON, Oct. 18 (A. P.).—The luck of Donald McBain, 21 years old, of Edinburgh, failed him.

Frenchman Stamped Traitor For Pro-Nazi Propaganda Broadcast

Paris, Oct. 18 (AP)—Paul Ferdonnet, identified by civil and military authorities heretofore as being one of two Frenchmen broadcasting pro-German propaganda from a Stuttgart station, was accused of being a traitor in military charges filed today.

Gen. Pierre Hering, Military Governor of Paris, sent an order to the Third Military Tribunal charging Ferdonnet with action "harmful to the security of the state" and demanding the opening of an investigation.

Premier Daladier, taking cognizance of the nightly broadcasts in French from the German station, referred to the "traitors of Stuttgart" in his radio broadcast to the nation on October 10. Ferdonnet has written a book on Czecho-Slovakia with a pro-German twist.

FRANCE GUARDS HER WOUNDED

OCT 19 1939

Medical Science Gives the Poilu Every Chance.

AVOIDS UNNECESSARY RISK

Provides Latest Methods for War Hospital Care.

OCT 18

PARIS (A. P.).—France, playing a cautious game on the western front, is taking no unnecessary risks with her soldiers. The aim of the French High Command is to keep casualties down to the absolute minimum.

That's Break No. 1 for the poilu. Break No. 2 is that, if he does get clipped, he stands a much better chance of pulling through than ever before, according to expert medical opinion.

France expects to save a far greater proportion of her war wounded this time. There are six reasons for the hope: Improvements in surgery, blood transfusion, transportation of the wounded, equipment of hospitals, methods for conquering infections and the sanitary organization at the front.

Anti-Tetanus Injections.

French soldiers reportedly are getting anti-tetanus injections just like typhoid or smallpox vaccinations—simply as a precautionary measure. This is a safeguard in case a soldier is hit by that dread foe of the army surgeon, gangrene. Before now no one had dreamed of anti-tetanus until after a man had been shot up.

A "remarkable new disinfectant" holds out the hope of victory over another grave wartime affliction—streptococci infection—according to experts.

One of the greatest medical advances, however, has been in the ability to distinguish among various stages of shock. The diagnosis is complex and so important that a man's life may depend on it.

Should a surgeon operate now or later? He is more nearly certain today, thanks to research developments.

Amputation Less Hazardous.

Amputation—that radical remedy of last resort—is less hazardous now because surgeons have learned much about it in the past twenty years. Surgeons know more, too, about dealing with severed arteries.

Blood transfusions are facilitated by a new method of storing human blood. Paris hospitals are collecting different types of blood and sending it to the front. Mixed with a special solution and kept at a low temperature, the blood can be preserved for from two weeks to months. The new process obviates the frantic search for the correct type of blood as an individual lies between life and death.

Hospital in Fortress.

Many of the wounded, in fact, never ride in an ambulance, since emergency hospitals complete with operating rooms are built right into underground fortresses of the Maginot Line.

These hospitals, as well as those behind the lines, are equipped as never before for such wartime functions as extracting bullets, mending fractures and general patching up. The comfortable underground barracks with all requisite facilities should mean less disease.

War still is hell. But the French High Command, digging in for a long siege, is doing its utmost to make hell as palatable as possible to the poilu.

Tells How He Sank Royal Oak

OCT 19 1939

Commander Says But One Person Saw U-boat Enter or Leave Scapa Flow.

BERLIN, Oct. 18 (A. P.).—A blond, thirty-one-year-old submarine commander, Guenther Prien, declared today that except for one solitary person, driving a motor car, "nobody saw our U-boat enter or leave Scapa Flow" in the raid which sank the British battleship Royal Oak on Saturday and cost 810 lives.

Commander Prien talked with foreign newspaper men after he had been decorated by Adolf Hitler and received the plaudits of cheering Berlin crowds on the way to the Chancellery with his submarine crew. From a band around his neck he proudly wore the highest order of the Iron Cross.

With him were thirty-seven other officers and men from the submarine, which landed yesterday. Each of the young men, all around 20 years old, wore simple Iron Crosses pinned to their sailor blouses.

In strident tones Commander Prien asserted that he had entered Scapa Flow, Great Britain's naval base in the Orkney Islands off northern Scotland, on a night when the Northern Lights were the strongest he had seen in fifteen years at sea.

"The British ships could not be seen distinctly, but we could determine the location by dimmed lanterns at the anchoring buoys," he said.

Repeats Story of Hitting Repulse.

Commander Prien reiterated the German claim that his submarine badly damaged the 32,000-ton battle cruiser Repulse at the same time it sank the Royal Oak—a claim which the British Admiralty has declared an "absurd invention."

"The Repulse was easy to make out because she and the Renown alone have two funnels," Commander Prien said. "The Repulse was partly covered by the Royal Oak. Nevertheless, her two aforeship gun towers protruded.

"So I first aimed in their direction, then sent a second torpedo into the very heart of the Royal Oak. I saw distinctly how water first spurted high before the Repulse and then was followed by high red flames.

"On the Royal Oak water and fire rose even higher, both hits being followed by detonations, and by parts of the costly ships hurtling into the air.

One Man in a Car.

"The whole thing was over in thirty seconds. After that, only a dark cloud of smoke was visible. The Royal Oak had disappeared, while the Repulse listed heavily forward.

[The official British account said that twenty minutes elapsed between the firing of the first and second torpedoes.]

"Immediately thereafter the British got busy with searchlights and their destroyers loosed water bombs.

"Only one man in a car apparently had seen us. He turned abruptly and drove off at full speed, and evidently reported us. We could see him so well because he navigated quite close to the shore."

HITLER GIVES PRIEN HIGHEST OF DECORATIONS

Members Of Crew Witness Ceremony In Führer's Private Study

Commander, Telling Of Raid, Said It Was Over In 30 Seconds

[By the Associated Press]

Berlin, Oct. 18—Commander Guenther Prien, the man who squirmed through a British mine field at Scapa Flow with a submarine and sank the battleship Royal Oak, was a hero today as Berlin celebrated his doughty exploit.

The 31-year-old submarine commander received from Adolf Hitler Germany's highest war decoration, the Grand Cross of the Iron Cross. The thirty-odd members of his crew, who yesterday were presented Iron Crosses by Grand Admiral Erich Raeder, saw the ceremony in the Führer's private study.

At a press conference in the Propaganda Ministry, where he met foreign correspondents, Prien told of his raid last Saturday and asserted "it was all over in thirty-seconds."

Set Off Two Torpedoes

"We set off two torpedoes," he related. "The Royal Oak disappeared and the Repulse listed sharply forward."

[Associated Press Editor's Note—The British repeatedly have denied that the Repulse, a battle cruiser, was damaged.]

Prien stuck steadfastly to the German contention that the Repulse was damaged seriously. He saw it all, the submarine commander said, through his periscope before he headed for the open sea, successfully making a second perilous journey through the mine fields.

The Repulse story was emphasized by the Reich's press chief, Otto Dietrich, who told correspondents, "here's a man who can prove that Churchill (British First Lord of the Admiralty) is withholding some of the truth."

Wanted To Sink Battleship

Prien, fifteen years a sailor, said his ambition was to sink a British battleship. But they do not come out on the high seas, he complained, so he found it necessary to penetrate the harbor.

He said there was no trouble identifying the vessels silhouetted against the sky brightened by northern lights.

Prien declared he recognized the Repulse because of its two stacks and that the only other British ships of its class with two funnels is the cruiser Renown (sister ship of the Repulse), which Prien said he knew was attached to a British flotilla lying elsewhere.

He disclosed nothing of the accurate background of the information about the enemy which seemed to form the basis for the attack. Neither did he throw any light on the suggestion that the Germans somehow obtained the plan of how the complicated mine fields and submarine nets were laid at Scapa Flow.

Tells Of Entering Base

He told how he entered the formidable naval base in the Orkney Islands off northern Scotland.

"The British ships could not be seen distinctly but we could determine the location by dimmed lanterns at the anchoring buoys," he recounted.

"The Repulse was partly covered by the Royal Oak. Nevertheless her two aforeship gun towers protruded.

"So I first aimed in their direction, then sent a second torpedo into the very heart of the Royal Oak. I saw distinctly how water first spurted high before the Repulse and then was followed by high red flames.

All Over In 30 Seconds

"On the Royal Oak water and fire rose even higher, both hits being followed by detonations and by parts of the costly ships hurtling into the air.

"The whole thing was over in 30 seconds. After that only a dark cloud of smoke was visible. The Royal Oak had disappeared, while the Repulse listed heavily forward.

"Immediately thereafter the British got busy with searchlights and their destroyers loosed water bombs.

"Only one man in a car apparently had seen us. He turned abruptly and drove off at full speed and evidently reported us. We could see him so well because we navigated quite close to the shore."

Hitler Greets Each Man

Hitler shook hands heartily with each man from the submarine and thanked them in the name of the German nation. He said the achievement "strengthened the entire German nation in the imperturbable trust in victory."

The feat, he added, was the "proudest" which a submarine could accomplish.

Wherever the heroes appeared—at the Chancellery, on the Wilhelmstrasse, during a drive through the city and in a vaudeville house where they were guests—they were cheered lustily.

Periodic broadcasts saw to it that the population knew from half hour to half hour where they could be seen.

French Prisoners Taken

The buoyant spirit of the capital, despite the rainy day, was enhanced by the high command's assertion that numerous French prisoners were taken when Germans reoccupied small stretches recently held by the French on the Western Front.

Berlin also noted with satisfaction that the submarine's deed was not isolated, but apparently a part of an offensive on the British fleet and naval bases, conducted jointly by German submarines and the Nazi air force.

The high command announced that ten enemy planes had been shot down over German lines in the west.

The success of the submarine attack at Scapa Flow started many people in Germany to discussing how torpedoes could be successful when the Royal Oak and Repulse both had special devices against submarine thrusts.

Exploded By New Method

One current explanation was that torpedoes are exploded by a new method, not by striking a ship laterally, but by magnetic currents operative when a torpedo is directly underneath a ship.

Much discussion concerned the effectiveness of German bombs.

The Cologne newspaper Koelnische Zeitung contributed some interesting observations, saying a 100-pound bomb is large enough to destroy a submarine. For annihilating a destroyer it said "a bomb of threefold this weight would be necessary."

"For a light cruiser," it continued, "a 660-pound bomb can spell destruction. For a heavy cruiser presumably 1,100-pound bombs would be most suitable. For destroying large battleships, even heavier bombs are being held in readiness."

No Interest In Stockholm Meeting

Authorized sources were quick to let the world know that Germany was disinterested in the Stockholm meeting of the heads of the northern states.

"We placed our relations with the Soviet Union on a satisfactory basis," so the comment ran, "so let the Nordic and Baltic states do likewise.

"They always maintained correct, normal and decent relations with Germany but on the other hand made a point of keeping up a certain reserve.

"Then why should we inflict ourselves upon them by attempting to break through this reserve?"

One point settled with Russia was that of letting German groups in the Soviet Union "come home into the Reich."

Informed sources stated that at present only repatriation of Germans in Volhynia, a section of the Ukraine, was contemplated.

Nazis Warn of Further Raids

Jubilant Press Declares Air and U-boat Thrusts at Britain Will Go On.

OCT 19 1939

BERLIN, Oct. 18 (A. P.).—The German press declared today that Great Britain would continue to be the objective of German attacks by plane and submarine. Rejoicing over the accomplishments of submarines and the air force in inflicting losses upon Germany's "chief enemy" dominated the newspapers.

The Deutsche Allgemeine Zeitung, commenting on the fact that a submarine had gone straight into the "lion's den"—the British naval base at Scapa Flow—declared that the spirit of Otto Weddigen, a world war submarine hero, animated the present-day crews of the undersea boats.

"And in this spirit of attack," the newspaper said, "England will be given no rest. . . . Exactly as in Poland, the German war leadership knows how to strike upon military objects."

Two German submarines penetrated Scapa Flow in the world war, but both of these were sunk.

The British battleship Royal Oak was torpedoed and sunk last Saturday at Scapa Flow, where the German fleet was scuttled in surrender at the end of the world war, and yesterday German bombing planes attacked our British warships there. A brief announcement by the official German news agency, D. N. B., said that one warship had been struck by heavy and medium-weight bombs, that a British warplane had been shot down and that one German plane failed to return from the raid.

[In London it was declared that the loss of eight German warplanes in the raids of Monday and yesterday was out of all proportion to the slight damage done.]

Butter Ration Increased.

For their exploit, Commander Prien and the crew of the U-boat that sank the Royal Oak were awarded Iron Crosses yesterday on their arrival at an unnamed German base. The Commander said his first thought after penetrating the Scapa Flow base was to "do something in honor of Admiral Reuter"—Admiral Ludwig von Reuter, commander of the High Seas Fleet, by whose order the seacocks were opened to sink the fleet on June 21, 1919.

Commander Prien expressed amazement that his submarine had been able to pass the British submarine traps.

Already Great Britain has been deprived of "her leading position" as the first naval Power of the world, the Deutsche Allgemeine Zeitung said, this role having fallen to the United States.

Striking a similar note, Adolf Hitler's newspaper, the Voelkischer Beobachter, said: "The tireless navy and air force are at work to strike England at its most vulnerable spots. In the outside world justified doubts had already been expressed as to whether it was permissable to talk about the domination of the seas by Britain.

"The fact that Germany has taken the initiative and that the British fleet again and again is suffering heavy losses is creating a deep impression."

The Morgenpost, comparing the surrender of the German fleet in 1919 with the German triumph of 1939, said: "History has compensated Germany for one of the crudest injustices inflicted upon a nation."

The German communique said: "Yesterday French troops between the Moselle River and the Palatinate Forest gave up further points along the border on German soil which were occupied by our advancing troops. Numerous prisoners were taken.

"The German air force yesterday continued operations against naval ports on the English east coast. In the Bay of Scapa Flow, according to reports presently available, bombs of heavy and medium caliber hit, among other warships, an older English battleship.

"During the air fight, an English pursuit plane was shot down by German planes. One German fighting plane was brought down by English anti-aircraft artillery.

"On Oct. 16 and Oct. 17, the opponents lost ten planes, over German territory by anti-aircraft artillery, five planes of which one was English; by pursuit planes, one French and one English; and in an air fight over English territory, three English planes."

Meanwhile the German press declared that Britain would continue to be the objective of German attacks by plane and submarine. Already Britain has been deprived of "her leading position," as the first naval power of the world, the "Deutsche Allgemeine Zeitung" said, this role having fallen to the United States.

Allied Accord Is Forecast

[By the Associated Press]

Istanbul, Oct. 18—Gen. Maxime Weygand, commander in chief of French forces in the eastern Mediterranean, arrived today, giving support to reports that Turkey would sign mutual assistance pacts with Britain and France within a day or two.

Reports were current that the 72-year-old World War hero and former commander of the French army would sign on behalf of his Government and then confer with Turkish army chiefs regarding the common military defense plans.

Competent circles said they believed the British-Turkish pact would be signed at the same time.

Von Papen To Leave

Franz Von Papen, former German Chancellor and now German Ambassador to Turkey, arrived here from Ankara en route to Berlin where he was said to have been summoned by his Government.

[Associated Press Editor's Note—Von Papen, Ambassador to Austria just before that country was absorbed by Germany, was sent to Turkey by Adolf Hitler to woo the Turkish Government from the British-French front.]

Turkey coupled her diplomatic activity with intensified military measures. A number of heavy-duty trucks and other large vehicles were requisitioned. Chauffeurs and mechanics not yet connected with army reserve units were urged to join.

Additional military measures included complete blackout drills at Smyrna and environs and placing of mobilized troops on the Bulgarian and Russian Caucasus frontiers.

Preparing For Emergency

The new precautions were considered in foreign circles as evidence that Turkey was working steadily toward a condition of complete preparedness for any emergency.

General Weygand came at a moment when the Turkish-Soviet Russian negotiations were broken off. Foreign Minister Sukru Saracoglu was en route from Moscow where he spent almost a month of inconclusive dickering.

Accompanying the elderly French soldier were a number of military experts.

A Turkish mission continued consultations with British army heads in London.

At the start of the Turkish-Russian conversations, Turkish officials said the prospective pact with Moscow would not be consistent with their country's commitments to France and Britain.

Contrary To Policy

Last night, however, Prime Minister Refik Saydam issued a communique saying Russia's proposals had proved contrary to Turkish policy in the Dardanelles, Turkish-owned gateway to the Black Sea. Some reports said Kremlin officials demanded that only Russian warships be permitted to pass.

Saydam said the Soviet proposals were contrary to Turkish security, failed to compensate her for obligations she would assume and were incompatible with her British and French commitments.

The Turkish press unanimously approved the government's firm attitude in rejecting the proposals "without hesitation." It lauded what it termed the "Turkish determination not to enter any combination depriving this country of her right to rule the Dardanelles."

Indication that the Soviets made a strong effort to extend their influence to the Dardanelles was a lengthy press review of Turkey's position in the situation there as based on international law resulting from the Montreaux convention.

Montreaux Convention

The Montreaux convention, signed in 1936, provided that the Dardanelles be closed to warships of belligerent nations unless they are serving under League of Nations' mandate or helping a victim of aggression under a mutual assistance pact concluded within the League's framework and to which Turkey is a party.

Turkey and France signed a mutual assistance agreement June 23 to help each other "in case of an act of aggression which might lead to war in the Mediterranean." Embodied in that declaration was the prediction that it would be followed by a "definite accord of long duration carrying reciprocal engagements in the interests of their national security."

A similar British-Turkish agreement was announced May 12 but has not yet been formalized.

FRENCH ARMY MEN ARRIVE AS TURKEY ENDS SOVIET TALKS

OCT 19 1939

Firm Stand Pleases London —Saracoglu Gets Warm Moscow Sendoff.

ISTANBUL, Oct. 18 (A. P.).—Gen. Maxime Weygand, seventy-two-year-old Commander-in-Chief of French forces in the eastern Mediterranean, accompanied by several military experts, arrived here today as precautionary military measures were intensified in Turkey.

The arrival of the French officers followed Prime Minister Refik Saydam's assertion that Russian demands made to a Turkish delegation in Moscow were contrary to Turkish policy in the Dardanelles.

Numerous large motor vehicles, particularly heavy duty trucks, were being requisitioned. Chauffeurs and mechanics who do not belong to any army reserve units were urged to join motorized units.

Reporting to a parliamentary group of the Republican Peoples party, Saydam declared at Ankara last night that three weeks of discussion in Moscow had proved fruitless.

The Prime Minister said that the Russian proposals were contrary to Turkish security, failed to compensate her for obligations she was asked to assume and were incompatible with Turkey's previous commitments to Great Britain and France.

He added, however, that despite the breakdown of negotiations, relations between Turkey and Russia remained friendly. Tending to confirm this was the fact that the Russian ambassador remained friendly.

To Sign With Britain.

Meanwhile, it was reported that the formal signing of a Turkish pact with Great Britain might be expected this week—possibly on Thursday or Friday. This agreement would bind Turkey and Great Britain to fight together in the event of a war in the Mediterranean.

There is a similar agreement with France, whereby Turkey obtained the 10,000-square-mile area of the Hatay republic, formerly a part of France's Syrian mandate. This pact was signed on June 23. The preliminary exchange of Anglo-Turkish pledges was made on May 12.

A Turkish military mission has been in London awaiting the outcome of the Moscow talks.

Franz von Papen, former German Chancellor and now German Ambassador to Turkey, arrived here today on his way to Berlin, whither it was said he had been summoned by his Government. He planned to leave tonight by train.

Von Papen, who was Adolf Hitler's Ambassador to Austria just before the annexation of that country, was sent to Turkey with the mission of wooing the Ankara Government away from the British-French front. He was military attache in Washington during the first part of the world war.

Reported Demands.

Saydam's announcement did not disclose the nature of the Russian demands to which he referred. It was widely reported here, however, that the Soviet sought an agreement to bar all foreign warships save her own from passage through the Dardanelles, the entrance to the Black Sea.

It was also reported on good authority that Foreign Minister Saracoglu had rejected three other Russian proposals—recognition of the partitionment of Poland, formation of a neutral bloc in the Balkans under Russo-German influence and Russian and Bulgarian expansion at the expense of Rumania.

At the time the talks in Moscow were initiated, Turkish officials said they saw no inconsistency in their commitments to France and Great Britain on the one hand and a pact with Russia—with whom Turkey has maintained consistently close relations—on the other.

Saydam's announcement was made public in an official communique from Ankara. Following its issuance the Cabinet met with President Ismet Inonu; the President of the National Assembly, Abdul Halik Renda, and Field Marshal Fezi Tchakmak, chief of the general staff.

OCT 19 1939

Fervent Send-Off.

MOSCOW, Oct. 18 (A. P.).—A Russian disappointment over the status of the talks with Saracoglu was belied by the fervor of his send-off.

After three weeks here the Turkish Foreign Minister left for home shortly after midnight today. Bands blared and Soviet officials expressed formal best wishes for Turkey.

Huge spotlights played on the scene as the band rendered the Turkish anthem and "The Internationale." A large guard of honor was drawn up. Even a pouring rain failed to dampen the ardor of the occasion.

One report, which could not be confirmed, was that the Turks had refused pointblank the Soviet demand that Russian warships be the only ones permitted to enter the Black Sea through the Dardanelles.

Allies Are Satisfied.

Tass, the official news agency, commented that Saracoglu's visit had "provided the occasion for a comprehensive exchange of views" and said that the exchange took place in a "cordial atmosphere." It added that the conferees had decided it was desirable "to maintain contact also in the future for joint discussion of questions of interest to the Sovet Union and the Turkish republic."

French and British leaders who had remained in close contact with the Turks during the long parley here, appeared satisfied at the turn of events. It was reported that the British and French desired no rupture between the Russians and Turks. The allies were said to fear that an open break might drive Russia into closer co-operation with Germany.

They would be happy, it was said, if Russia, the Balkans, Turkey and Italy remained neutral in the European war. The British and French expressed confidence that they could deal with the Reich.

Turks' Stand Pleases London.

LONDON, Oct. 18 (A. P.).—British "satisfaction" with the statement of Turkey's Prime Minister on that country's discussions with Soviet Russia was described today by a diplomatic correspondent of Reuters, the British news agency.

"It is clear from the statement," he wrote, "that the Soviet Government endeavored to persuade Turkey's Foreign Minister Saracoglu that Turkey as guardian of the Straits (Dardanelles) should close them to all Powers, although by the treaty of Montreux she had agreed to allow a passage of naval tonnage equal to the strength of the Russian fleet in the Black Sea.

"It is not known what compensation was offered to Turkey to violate her signature to the treaty, but the Turkish Government has set a striking example in her determination to uphold what is one of the chief war aims of the Allies, namely the respect of undertakings freely entered into."

LONDON-OCT-18

THE BRITISH-TURKISH COMMITMENTS WERE EXPECTED TO BE FORMALIZED SHORTLY, PUTTING INTO EFFECT MILITARY, FINANCIAL AND ECONOMIC AGREEMENTS ALREADY REPORTED TO DEAR PRELIMINARY APPROVAL.

THE NEWS CHRONICLE SAID THE TREATIES WITH TURKEY WOULD PROVICE:

1--AUTOMATIC MUTUAL ASSISTANCE IN THE EASTERN MEDITERRANEAN.

2--TURKISH ASSISTANCE IN THE EVENT THE WESTERN POWERS WERE CALLED UPON TO EXECUTE THEIR GUARANTEES TO RUMANIA AND GREECE.

3--DIPLOMATIC CONSULTATIONS ON BALKAN QUESTIONS.

failure to reach an agreement with Turkey, turned her attention northward again tonight, sending troops into Estonia and preparing for a resumption of talks with Finland.

The Moscow press said troops leaving for Estonia were taking numerous Soviet books and films and even Linotype machines. They are marching in to implement the mutual-assistance pact by which Estonia conceded three bases on her soil to Russia.

Independence Pledged

Soviet officials have insisted the independence of Estonia, Latvia and Lithuania will be respected, although these three segments of the old Russian Empire now are virtually Soviet protectorates.

Pravda, Communist party organ, in a dispatch from Leningrad, said the "commanders used every free minute for political talks" prior to departure for Estonia.

Unofficial British circles were said to regard the inconclusive result of Russian-Turkish talks as greatly strengthening Britain's stand against Germany.

Turkish Delegation Arrives

That Turkey and the Soviet are maintaining close relations was shown, however, by the arrival of Muhliss Erkemen, Turkish Minister of Agriculture, to pay a visit to the All-Union Agricultural Exhibition. He was accompanied by two members of the Turkish Parliament and a woman writer, and was met at the station by Assistant Agriculture Commissar Vassin; Vladimir N. Barkoff, chief of protocol of the foreign office; Turkish Ambassador Ali Haidar Aktai and his staff, and other officials.

Russo-Latvian Trade Pact

Tass, official news agency, also announced a trade agreement between Russia and Latvia, second of the small Baltic states to sign a mutual assistance pact with her big neighbor.

The agreement, said Tass, provides for a three-fold increase in trade between the two countries. Soviet waterways to Murmansk, the Arctic port, and to Black Sea ports are made available for commerce of Latvia, while a large extension of transit of Soviet goods to Latvian ports is allowed.

Soviet Press Attacks France

The Russian press bitterly attacked the French Government for continuing the war against Germany and for France's treatment of the French Communist party.

Tass announced that a German commission which arrived yesterday would negotiate for removal from western Ukraine and western White Russia (parts of eastern Poland occupied by the Russian armies) of Germans desiring to migrate to Germany.

Earlier reports said the Germans were here to negotiate the repatriation of Germans in Russia proper, in keeping with Reichsführer Hitler's new policy of bringing Europe's German minorities home to the Reich.

RUSSIAN TROOPS ENTERING ESTONIA

OCT 19 1939

Soviet Implements Terms of Recent Treaty.

MOSCOW, Oct. 18 (A. P.).—Russia began today to send troops into Estonia, implementing terms of the mutual assistance pact which gave the Soviets three bases in the tiny Baltic State.

Reports in the Moscow press prior to the march of troops into Estonia said they were taking Soviet books and films and even typesetting machines, presumably for printing Soviet propaganda.

Estonian Phones Silent.

COPENHAGEN, Oct. 18 (A. P.).—Estonia halted normal telephonic communication today — the day scheduled for the entrance of the first units of the Russian Army.

Copenhagen telephone officials said they were able to reach the Tallinn exchange, which then made the decision whether the calls should be relayed. Press calls were refused and apparently only Government calls were accepted.

Cables and radio messages were being relayed to Tallinn receiving offices, but it was undetermined whether they were reaching addresses.

BRITISH HEAR REICH GETS RUSSIAN GOLD

OCT 19 1939

Government Thinks Report Has Foundation.

LONDON, Oct. 18 (A. P.).—A British Government spokesman gave official support today to reports that Russia has been sending gold to Germany.

Sir Alfred Knox, Conservative, asked in the House of Commons whether the Government's attention had been drawn "to the fact that a consignment, said to be a first consignment of seventeen and one-half tons of gold, had been transferred by the Soviet Government to Germany."

R. A. Butler, Foreign Affairs Under-Secretary, replied:

"Yes, sir. The Foreign Secretary has reason to believe that this report is not without foundation."

The British press has printed repeated reports that Germany was receiving Russian gold under a deal by which she ordered withdrawal of Germans from the Baltic Sea.

The 17½ tons of gold mentioned in the House of Commons would be worth about $17,024,000 at the United States Treasury price of $35 an ounce or $15,923,040 at the Bank of England's price of 168 shillings—$33.85—an ounce.

Gold stocks of the Netherlands Bank have increased about 8,000,000 guilders—$4,200,000—during the last month, and the Amsterdam newspaper Die Telegraaf said that the increase had been caused by gold shipments from "an eastern country."

The paper added that it was known that Russian gold was being sent to Germany and that, therefore, it was assumed Berlin was sending the gold to Amsterdam to establish credit.

Rumania In Suspense Over Soviet's Designs

Bucharest, Oct. 18 (AP)—The breakdown of Turkish-Soviet negotiations left vitally interested Rumania in suspense and anxiety today with undiminished fears that Soviet Russia might attempt to regain Bessarabia, which Rumania gained after the World War.

Official circles insisted the Moscow negotiations merely were suspended and would continue in Moscow and Ankara.

OCT 19 1939

Some diplomatic observers said the lack of definite results at Moscow was a strong indication of powerful German influence with the Soviets. This view was predicted on the assumption that Germany exerted pressure to bring new Soviet demands on Turkey, forcing the stalemate.

History Repeats Itself

There was no word concerning Foreign Minister Grigore Gafencu's previously announced plan for conferring with Foreign Minister Sukru Saracoglu of Turkey on his way back from Moscow. Nor was there confirmation of reports Gafencu might go to Moscow or Sofia for discussions involving Rumanian interests in Bessarabia, the Black Sea and the mouth of the Danube.

These three geographical objectives, along with the Dardanelles, were major prizes for which the Ottoman and Russian empires fought for more than 200 years before the World War. Again they have become prizes in a diplomatic tug-of-war between their successors—republican Turkey and Soviet Russia.

Rumania remained hopeful that negotiations would result in a clarificatiin of Soviet ambitions, including a definite assurance about Bessarabia.

While Russia in recent years has not demanded Bessarabia, she has refused to assure Rumania she had no designs on the province.

HUNGARIAN NAZIS SPLIT BY STRIFE

Party Newspapers Join in Public Dissension.

OCT 19 1939

BUDAPEST, Oct. 18 (A. P.).—A war of words between rival Nazi groups broke out today in the rigidly censored Hungarian press, which meanwhile ignored the week end arrest of 140 members of the outlawed Legion of Death, alleged to have plotted a putsch.

The leading Nazi morning paper Magyarsag, blaming petty jealousies for the dissension among Hungarian Nazis, called on the party to continue its fight.

First admissions in the Nazi press of the collapse of the movement came from the Magyar Jusag, mouthpiece of the National Front, a milder Nazi faction. The paper said that the Nazi leaders, who a few months ago could assemble 30,000 people four times weekly, now found few followers and no recruits.

The Magyarsag, edited by Kalman Hubay, Hungary's "Little Fuehrer," accused the National Front" of placing its own interests above the party's," but declared the Nazi movement would not die out.

The secret police continued to take stern measures against Nazi extremists accused of plotting against the Government.

Several Legion of Death members were sent to the Kistarcsa concentration camp. The police also seized Nazi pamphlets which they said showed the influence of German propaganda. Virtually all the high leaders of the Legion of Death are believed to have escaped to Vienna.

Assert "Death Legion" Planned To Kill Political Opponents

OCT 19 1939

[By the Associated Press]

Budapest, Oct. 18—The Government announced tonight that 110 persons had been arrested in a pro-Nazi "Death Legion" plot to form a Hungarist workers' state by violence.

An official statement confirmed earlier private reports which said the aim of the Death Legion was to overthrow the Government and assassinate numerous political opponents.

Oath To "Hungarian Hitler"

The statement said investigation had shown those involved were former members of the dissolved Hungarist party who had taken an oath of allegiance to Ferenc Szalasi, the "Hungarian Hitler" who is now serving a three-year jail term.

The Government said "subterranean activities" of the group were uncovered in the probe which began with investigation of its printing and distribution of pamphlets of "vile and inciting contents."

Many of those arrested have been sent to concentration camp at Kistarcsa, but many of the high leaders of the legion escaped to Vienna.

Rival Nazi Groups Row

Dissension within the rival Nazi groups, split by Adolf Hitler's agreements with Soviet Russia broke out, meanwhile in the Hungarian press, with the leading Nazi morning paper, the Magyarsag, blaming petty jealousies.

The Magyar Jusag, mouthpiece of the national front, a mild Nazi faction, said the Nazi movement, which a few months ago could assemble 30,000 people four times weekly, had slumped badly.

BALKAN DRIVE OF NAZIS FAILS

OCT 19 1939

Strenuous Trade Parleys Bring No Advantage.

FLOW OF SUPPLIES UNCHANGED

Object Was to Close Out Allies by Buying Up Bulk of Exports.

BUDAPEST, Oct. 18 (A. P.).—The little nations of southeastern Europe are maintaining their independent spirit by refusing to favor any belligerent country economically, a survey indicated today.

A striking instance of this independence was seen in the failure of a German trade mission to obtain any great increase in vitally needed war materials from this section which she considers one of her natural trade areas.

Experts from Berlin spent more than a month in the capitals of Hungary, Rumania, Bulgaria and Yugoslavia. They sought oil for the Nazi war machines and food for Nazi soldiers, and it was no secret that they also hoped to close this area as much as possible to Great Britain and France by purchasing the bulk of all the supplies the little nations could export.

Strenuous Negotiations.

The net result of the mission's strenuous negotiations is that Germany is to get no more goods, regardless of her needs, than she did in peacetime.

This is the way things turned out in the little nations:

Yugoslavia — A new agreement leaves the old trade volume unchanged but provides that Germany must greatly increase her shipments to settle large clearing house deficits or run the risk of losing her Yugoslav contracts. Statistics just issued show that Yugoslav exports to Germany dropped from $23,000,000 in the first eight months of 1938 to $1,000,000 in a similar period this year.

Bulgaria — The prices Germany must pay for all goods are raised by a new agreement which provides for payments to be made largely in oil and the rest in gold.

Rumania—The export of oil—the greatest need of Germany's mechanized army—is left unchanged by the new trade pact, but regardless of the agreement, statistics from the oil-producing areas of Rumania indicate a decline in shipments to Germany because of difficulties of paying for transportation.

OCT 19 1939

Turkey Won't Budge.

Hungary—Because of her new common frontier with Germany, Hungary was counted on to ship the Reich vast quantities of fats, which are scarce in many parts of Germany. But when the German experts came to Budapest, the question of payments was raised, for Germany already owes Hungary $16,000,000. The German mission found the Hungarian attitude to be that trade increases were no good if the profit was a paper one.

Turkey—Several weeks ago, when a German trade agreement expired, Turkey served notice that she would not negotiate a new one.

Germany's trade in the Balkans is handicapped by transportation problems in addition to the points mentioned. Because of a scarcity of railroad cars, goods bound for Germany are piling up in depots all over southeastern Europe. Germany is reported to be trans-shipping barges from the Rhine to the Danube in efforts to speed up the flow of goods, particularly oil deliveries from Rumania, but the freezing of the Danube this winter will hamper the use of that route.

Meanwhile Italy has been quietly working to increase her commercial influence in this section, and the buyers of England and France have been getting almost anything they asked by offering payment in gold. The net result has been that the half-billion-dollar annual southeastern European exports have continued to flow out about the same as before—slightly less than 45 per cent to Germany, and the rest scattered among other nations.

Pope Says God's Foes Advance

Receives Envoy and Calls Lithuania Northern Vanguard of Catholicism.

OCT 19 1939

CASTEL GANDOLFO, Oct. 18 (A. P.).—Pope Pius said today that the enemies of God were casting their sinister shadow over Europe in a more threatening way every day.

The Pope expressed his concern in a public address to the new Lithuanian Minister to the Holy See, Stanislau Girdvainis, whose country recently came under the influence of Soviet Russia.

The pontiff said that the Lithuanians showed their intention of remaining the northern vanguard of Catholicism even if sacrifice becomes the necessary price for affirmation of the realization of such an ideal.

He said that he would not let his action, "always directed toward the salvation of souls, become involved in purely temporal controversies and territorial competitions between States."

Sees New Danger.

But the duties of his office as Supreme Pastor did not permit him to close his eyes, he said, "when precisely for the salvation of souls arise new, incommensurable dangers—when on the face of Europe, Christian in all its fundamental lineaments, the sinister shadow of thoughts and deeds of enemies of God casts itself closer and more threateningly every day."

"In such circumstances more than in any other period of its history the preservation, care and if necessary the defense of the Christian patrimony acquires for the future destinies of Europe and the prosperity of all its peoples, large or small, a decisive importance.

"The State which with noble mind recognizes liberty, which is suitable to the expansion and practice of the doctrine of Christ, prepares in that way for itself reserves of spiritual force on which it may count with all security when turbid difficult hours come. Wherever full liberty is left to the evangelistic doctrine, Christian sentiment will penetrate not only the souls of citizens but also the manifold diverse activities of public life.

Resuming Relations.

"And the more Christian justice, fraternity and charity animate and guide individuals and groups, the more is established in the hearts of nations and among them a spiritual atmosphere which makes more easily possible a solution of the many problems which today seem or are really insolvable."

Girdvainis is the first Minister from Lithuania to the Holy See since a dispute seven years ago over administration of church property which left the two States with only nominal diplomatic relations.

Pope Asserts "Enemies Of God" Cast Sinister Shadow On Europe

Declares That "Care And If Necessary The Defense" Of Christianity Have Decisive Importance

OCT 19 1939

[By The Associated Press]

Rome, Oct. 18—Pope Pius declared today that "the care and if necessary the defense" of Christianity had decisive importance in a Europe over which "enemies of God" are casting a "sinister shadow."

Calling Christianity the bulwark of civilization, the Pope expressed his concern in a public address to the new Lithuanian Minister to the Holy See, Stanislau Girdvainis.

The Pope said Lithuanians, whose nation recently came under strong Soviet influence, had indicated their intention of remaining the "northern vanguard of Catholicism" even if "sacrifice becomes the necessary price for affirmation of the realization of such an ideal."

Apart From Temporal Disputes

"Always directed toward the salvation of souls," the Pope's actions, he said, could not "become involved in purely temporal controversies and territorial competitions between States."

As "supreme pastor," however, he said he could not close his eyes "when precisely for the salvation of souls arise new, incommensurable dangers—when on the face of Europe, Christian in all its fundamental lineaments, the sinister shadow of thoughts and deeds of enemies of God casts itself close and more threateningly every day.

"In such circumstances more than in any other period of its history the preservation, care and, if necessary, the defense of the Christian patrimony acquires for the future destinies of Europe and the prosperity of all its peoples, large or small, a decisive importance," he said.

Prepares Reserves Of Force

"The state which with noble mind recognizes liberty, which is suitable to the expansion and practice of the doctrine of Christ, prepares in that way for itself reserves of spiritual force on which it may count with all security when turbid difficult hours come.

"Wherever full liberty is left to the evangelistic doctrine, Christian sentiment will penetrate not only the souls of the citizens but also the manifold diverse activities of public life."

Presentation of Girdvainis' credentials marked the resumption of normal diplomatic relations which were interrupted by a dispute seven years ago over administration of church property. Since then only nominal relations have been maintained by Lithuania with the Holy See.

Text of the Pope's Address

OCT 19 1939

By The Associated Press.

CASTEL GANDOLFO, Italy, Oct. 18—The text of Pope Pius's declaration, after expressing happiness at seeing the Lithuanian Minister to the Holy See present his credentials "after a period of interruption," follows:

While dramatic changes are taking place in the political structure of Europe and in the state of mind of nations toward one another, the Lithuanian people come to the center of Christianity to affirm their resolute attachment to the duties and aims which their national will to live and religious tradition assign to them.

The Catholic people, always present in our paternal love and pastoral solicitude, see in the act which is taking place today a happy token for the future—a sign that relations of the Lithuanian Government with the Holy See are entering a new phase during which questions still pending concerning relations of the church and state may soon find in a spirit of wisdom and equity a harmonious solution favorable to free development of religious life in the nation.

"Outpost of Catholicism"

"A northern outpost of Catholicism"—thus have you designated, Mr. Minister, the country of which you are a son and, in such high rank, a servant. These words springing from your lips arise from the very heart of your people traditionally devoted to the Holy See; they are for Lithuania the title of honor. In them vibrates the tone of the will which decides always to remain intimately and show itself externally by its deeds worthy of this title and role which it expresses, even if sacrifice become a necessary price for affirmation and realization of such an ideal.

Conscious of the duties proper to our office as supreme pastor, we will not, without its being requested of us, let our action, always directed toward the salvatiton of souls, become involved in purely temporal controversies of territorial competitions between States. But the very duty of this office does not permit us to close our eyes when the new incommensurable dangers arise precisely for the salvation of souls; when over the face of Europe, Christian in all its fundamental lineaments, a sinister shadow of thought and work of the enemies of God is cast more menacingly closer every day. In such circumstances more than in any period, its history of preservation and cultivation and, if necessary, defense of Christian heritage acquires a decisive importance for the future destinies of Europe and prosperity to each of its peoples, large or small.

"Spiritual Reserves"

The state which with noble loftiness of views recognizes a liberty suitable to expansion and practice of the doctrine of Christ thus lays up for itself reserves of spiritual force on which it may count with complete assurance when troubled and difficult hours come. Wherever full freedom is left to evangelical doctrine, Christian sentiment will penetrate not only the soul of citizens but manifold and diverse activities of public life. And the more Christian justice, fraternity and charity animate and guide individuals and groups, the more also is established in the hearts of nations and, among them, a spiritual atmosphere making possible, even easy, the solution of many problems which today appear or really are insolvable.

If in the midst of present events Christian nations are particularly entitled to our solicitude and our pastoral vigilance, our sons and daughters of Lithuania can understand how close we are to them. We are united with them also by our unshakable assurance of their fidelity and confidence in God, whose all-powerful aid can open new roads toward progress and prosperity to a pacified Europe devoted to a sense of justice, fraternity and its Christian vocation.

Animated by this hope, we address to the Lithuanian nation, the governors and the governed, our heartfelt salutation, and on all its children, especially on Your Excellency, we implore from the bottom of our hearts the most abundant Divine favors.

Gandhi Is Disappointed In White Paper, Forecast

OCT 19 1939

Sees 'No Democracy for India if Britain Can Prevent It'

WARDHA, India, Oct. 18 (AP).—Mohandas K. Gandhi described as "profoundly disappointing" today the White Paper in which India's Viceroy forecast British willingness to discuss dominion status for India after the war.

He said the declaration "shows clearly that there will be no democracy for India if Britain can prevent it."

"It would have been better if the British government had declined to make any declaration whatsoever," said the frail little exponent of nationalism for India's millions.

The White Paper was issued yesterday by the Viceroy, the Marquess of Linlithgow.

"The Viceroy's long statement simply shows that the old policy to divide and rule is to continue," Gandhi said. "So far as I can see Congress (the Nationalist political party) will be no party to it, nor can the India of Congress conception be a partner with Britain in her war with Hitler."

Egypt Acts to Aid Britain

Farouk's Emergency Powers Ratified and "All Assistance" Promised

CAIRO, Oct. 18 (AP).—The Egyptian Parliament has ratified emergency powers for King Farouk's government to implement wartime support for Great Britain, as required by the 1396 British-Egyptian Treaty.

Egypt severed diplomatic relations with Germany at the outset of the European war and adjusted its administration to an emergency basis by declaring what amounted to martial law.

OCT 19 1939

Article VII of the 1936 treaty provided that the Egyptian King would supply Britain "all facilities and assistance in his power, including the use of his ports, airdromes and means of communication," in event of war or the menace of war.

The corps plans to operate twenty ambulances, a staff car, repair truck and mobile kitchen. Other members of the committee include John F. Hasey of Bridgewater, Mass., and Steel Powers of Atlanta, Ga.

FORD BARS RUSSIANS

40 Engineers Deprived of Access to Plant.

DETROIT, Oct. 18 (A. P.).—An official of the Ford Motor Company disclosed today that approximately forty Russian engineers who have been studying American production methods in the Ford plant for several years had been informed by the management that they no longer will be permitted free access to the plant.

Russian engineers first appeared at the Ford plant shortly after the Russian Government began purchase of automobile parts in America eleven years ago.

"About forty engineers were assigned to the Ford plant, and while the personnel of the group changed from time to time, the number remained at about that level through the years," the Ford official said.

"These men never were employed by the Ford Company. They never were on the pay roll. They had the status of visitors who were allowed to watch the various manufacturing processes."

Later Norval Marlett, chief investigator for the company's personnel department, declared that the engineers had "local Communist party connections and abused their privileges."

WASHINGTON, Oct. 18 (AP).—Evalyn Walsh McLean, owner of the Hope diamond, put on a Red Cross uniform today and opened her famous home, Friendship, to a group of Red Cross workers.

She set up a blackboard and work tables on the sunporch, a room where Presidents, Cabinet members and diplomats often have been entertained. The occasion was the opening of a Red Cross instruction course in the preparation of a new surgical dressing.

MISSIONS HERE AUTHORIZED TO BUY SHIPS

English Want 3,000 And Ally 2,750—Cash On The Line

Over 1,300 Craft Contracted For Prior To Hostilities

[By the Associated Press]

New York, Oct. 18—The French and British governments are ready to place additional orders for 5,750 American-made warplanes—cash on the line—if and when Congress repeals the arms embargo.

A French mission now in Washington is authorized to contract for 2,750 planes, and a British mission, now in Canada, for 3,000 planes in United States factories.

With engines and accessories the total cost would approximate $350,000,000.

Deliveries Before War

More than 1,300 warplanes were contracted for with American plants by the two countries prior to the outbreak of the war. Less than half had been delivered when the Neutrality Act went into effect.

Several neutral countries, including Belgium and Sweden, are anxious to obtain American warplanes. Sweden has a contract with one factory for pursuit planes. A Belgian mission is en route to the United States to discuss the purchase of aircraft.

Representatives of the French Government want to buy 3,000 airplane engines here, though whether those would be in addition to the engines fitted to the warplanes they hope to buy could not be learned.

Considered On Merits

Favoring the acquisition of up-to-date warplanes by France and Great Britain if the embargo is lifted was a decision reached by a joint army and navy board within the last week that each export application would be considered on its merits, regardless of the "age" of the type of aircraft involved.

Heretofore, no type less than a year old could be shipped. All exports, of course, are still contingent on deliveries of planes ordered by the American armed services.

The French are anxious to buy three types of American planes—pursuits, observation ships and two-engined bombers. The British want reconnaissance planes, single-engine attack planes and two-engine medium-weight bombers.

Want Persuit Planes

France has inquired exhaustively into the posibility of buying additional hundreds of Curtiss pursuits. Two hundred of these machines, capable of "more than 300 miles an hour" top speed, were delivered prior to the start of the war. Censored dispatches, plus private advices from Paris, relate that the planes have performed exceptionally well against faster but less maneuverable German pursuits.

A tentative order for more, contingent on erasure of the embargo, has been placed. One report, unverified, said it was for 530 of the craft.

Britain is understood to want to purchase more Lockheed "Hudson" bombers. Some of these warplanes, delivered prior to the war, are being used on submarine patrol duty.

Invited To Canada

American aircraft manufacturing circles hear the British will invite United States factories to establish branches in Canada if the embargo is not lifted. Tooling and raw materials for warplane manufacture would be imported from this country under that plan.

If the embargo is lifted, however, no American-owned plants are expected to manufacture in Canada. For one thing, it would require large capital expenditures for a part-time product with the resultant financial risk, and for another, it would involve special training for a large army of factory workers.

Twenty American plants now produce military airplanes of one type or another. Some larger ones manufacture several different types. It has been estimated that as high as thirty-five plants could be utilized for warplane making, if training planes are included in the category.

Silent On Purchases

Neither the French nor the British mission has spoken for publication about prospective purchases for fear that anything said would lay them open to a charge of spreading propaganda while the revision of the Neutrality Act is under debate in Congress.

American manufacturers for weeks have been silent on all mention of foreign orders. They do not want to incur the displeasure of official Washington and jeopardize their thriving business with the army and navy. Moreover, contracts with European belligerents signed before the war specified secrecy.

Parley Decides On Aid to Jews in Neutral Europe

60,000 German Refugees Get Priority; Settlement Abroad To Be Speeded

By The Associated Press

WASHINGTON, Oct. 18.—The executive committee considering German-Jewish refugee settlement agreed today to give priority to the 60,000 German Jews who have gone to neutral European countries, principally Belgium, Holland and Switzerland.

British and French representatives told the committee they agreed to that priority although they themselves had many thousands of Jews there temporarily. They said they considered their own problem less urgent.

The committee agreed to go ahead immediately with permanent mass settlements of German Jews in the Philippines and the Dominican Republic, starting with token settlements from the neutral countries. Methods of transportation and settlement will be left to private organizations in the United States.

The meeting was presided over by Lord Winterton, chairman of the Intergovernmental Committee on Political Refugees, and attended by Sir Herbert Emerson, secretary of the committee; Myron C. Taylor, American vice-chairman, and the Ambassadors of France, Brazil and Argentina, and the Netherlands Minister. The Swiss Minister appeared before the committee to describe the situation of German Jews in Switzerland.

The committee later adjourned until Oct. 26. Meanwhile, the nations represented—Great Britain, France, Holland, Argentina and Brazil—will study President Roosevelt's suggestion for a survey of portions of the globe where European war refugees may be settled.

Mr. Roosevelt, who invited the nations to come here to study the problem, told the committee yesterday:

"The possible field of new settlements covers many portions of the Africa, American and Australian portions of the globe. It covers millions of square miles situated in comparatively young republics and in colonial possessions or dominions of older nations. . . . Most of these territories which are inherently susceptible of colonization by those who perforce seek new homes cannot be developed without at least two or three years of engineering and economic studies."

Delegates considered the President's suggestion too far-reaching for them to decide without reference to their governments.

Many thousands of German Jews have taken temporary refuge in Britain and France. Britain has given the majority of the Jewish refugees there work permits and they are engaged in war materials manufacturing and other work. France shortly will take the same step.

The big problem, Sir Herbert said, is in the neutral countries of Belgium, Holland and Switzerland, where it is estimated some 60,000 German Jews have fled temporarily. The small neutrals have been assisted by financial contributions from the United States, Britain and France. Money from the last two nations has been cut off by the war.

Holt Accuses Roosevelt

WASHINGTON, Oct. 18 (AP).—In an all-day speech, brimming with elaborate sarcasm and imitations of President Roosevelt's oratorical mannerisms, Senator Rush D. Holt, Democrat, of West Virginia, accused the President today of having pledged American assistance to Great Britain and France before their war with Germany began. He spoke in opposition to repealing the arms embargo.

Senator Holt asserted that the Roosevelt administration "never had been neutral, never will be and never intended to be."

Imitating the Roosevelt inflection, he said the President announced in 1936 that he hated war, in 1937 that aggressors must be quarantined, and last January that they must be stopped by "methods short of war."

American foreign policy had been patterned to suit British needs, he said, and early this year British statesmen were saying openly that in case of war the United States would help England.

"They knew," he said, "but the Senate of the United States did not know."

America was rife with British propaganda, he said, asserting that future historians might find that the recent American visit of King George and Queen Elizabeth, "was not just to look at the grandeurs of the American continent." He attributed hidden motives, too, to the visits of Lord Beaverbrook British publisher, and Anthony Eden, now a member of the British Cabinet.

One British method, he said, was to hold "little tete a tetes" with Americans at dinners—"in other words to mix oysters with propaganda."

"The British propaganda is smooth," he said. "It is over the dinner table and the card table. It's slick."

Jefferson Saw American Need Of Neutral Zone

Wanted Mid-Atlantic Set as 'Line of Demarcation' to Keep War Off Continent

WASHINGTON, Oct. 18 (AP).—The idea of a wide "safety belt" around the Americas, in which belligerent actions would be taboo, may have sounded new when the twenty-one American republics proclaimed it recently at the Panama conference on neutrality, but officials disclose that it goes back to Thomas Jefferson's day.

John Quincy Adams quoted Jefferson as saying in 1805: "We ought to assume as a principle that the neutrality of our territory should extend to the Gulf Stream, which is a natural boundary, and within which we ought not to suffer any hostility to be committed."

The United States Navy was then small and weak, and both Jefferson and Adams agreed that it could not enforce that principle. But Jefferson said it was advisable to squint at it" and "accustom the nations of Europe to the idea that we should claim it in future."

Jefferson returned to the attack in 1812 and enormously enlarged his proposed sphere of neutrality. He said: "When our strength will permit us to give the law of our hemisphere it should be that the meridan of the mid-Atlantic should be the line of demarcation between war and peace, on this side of which no act of hostilities should be committed, and the lion and lamb lie down in peace together."

Although Jefferson's words fell on deaf ears in Europe, the idea did not die in the Americas. When the World War came, Peru, Chile, Argentina and Ecuador suggested a neutrality zone around the Americas, or similar measures.

The United States was not then, however, in the mood of today.

Now, however, the American republics are "squinting at" the idea in earnest. They have as yet no intention of taking naval action to enforce the zone, and mere hope European nations will refrain from hostile acts that might call for further steps. But even if the belligerents refuse to recognize such a zone, this will not prevent the Americas from insisting on it.

BY TAYLOR HENRY.

PARIS, OCT. 18--(AP)--FRENCH MILITARY OBSERVERS REPORTED TONIGHT THAT GERMAN TROOPS HAD MADE CONTACT WITH THE FRENCH MAIN NEW LINE OF RESISTANCE AT ALL POINTS OF THE 100-MILE-LONG NORTHERN FLANK OF THE WESTERN FRONT.

THE GERMANS WERE REPORTED BY THE FRENCH TO BE RUSHING UP REINFORCEMENTS TO SUPPORT UNITS WHICH HAD GAINED A TOEHOLD IN FRENCH TERRITORY ON THE EXTREME NORTHERN FLANK.

A SEMI-OFFICIAL EXPLANATION OF THE GERMAN ADVANCE OF THE PAST TWO DAYS FROM FRENCH GENERAL HEADQUARTERS PRESIDED OVER BY GENERAL MAURICE GUSTAVE GAMELIN, COMMANDER-IN-CHIEF OF THE ALLIED FORCES, SAID OPERATIONS DURING THE PAST FEW DAYS HAD BEEN CARRIED OUT JUST AS THE FRENCH HIGH COMMAND HAD PLANNED.

OCT 19 1939

RANKING FRENCH STAFF OFFICERS SAID THE FRENCH TROOPS NEVER LOST THE INITIATIVE TO THE GERMANS ALTHOUGH THEY TECHNICALLY WERE "WITHDRAWING."

AT MANY POINTS, THESE OFFICERS EXPLAINED, FRENCH TROOPS WHICH PREVIOUSLY HAD WITHDRAWN TO NEW ADVANCE POSITIONS IN GERMAN TERRITORY HELD WITHOUT YIELDING AN INCH TO THE FIELD GRAY CLAD NAZIS.

AT OTHER POINTS THEY FELL BACK BEFORE THE GERMAN ADVANCE ACCORDING TO THE FRENCH GENERAL STAFF'S PLAN.

THE FRENCH, WHO ORIGINALLY SAID THEIR ADVANCE INTO GERMANY WAS TO GAIN EXTENDED COVER FOR THE MAGINOT LINE, SAID TONIGHT THEIR MAIN LINES NOW HAD BEEN WITHDRAWN TO A POINT MORE EASILY SUPPORTED SINCE IT WAS CLOSER TO THE WINTER BASES IN THE MAGINOT LINE.

TONIGHT'S OFFICIAL FRENCH COMMUNIQUE REPORTED MERELY "quiet activity" on sometimes BOTH SIDES WERE SEEKING FOR WEAK PLACES IN EACH OTHER'S LINES BETWEEN THE MOSELLE AND SAAR RIVERS.

OCT 19 1939

THE MORNING COMMUNIQUE SAID THE GERMANS WERE USING RAILROADS AS WELL AS TRUCK AND CARS TO POUR THOUSANDS OF NEW TROOPS INTO THE FIGHTING ZONE.

1939

THE GERMAN TROOPS HURLED FAST TO THE STRIP ALONG THE FRENCH FRONTIER NORTHEAST OF THE VILLAGE OF APACH WHICH THEY TOOK BY SHOCK ATTACK IN FORCE ON MONDAY. THE STRIP WAS DESCRIBED AS PROBABLY NO WIDER THAN FIFTY YARDS ON A FOUR-MILE FRONT EAST FROM THE LUXEMBOURG FRONTIER.

MILITARY OBSERVERS SAID THAT WHILE THE GERMANS AWAITED THE ARRIVAL OF REINFORCEMENTS THEY CONSOLIDATED THEIR POSITIONS TAKEN IN MONDAY'S OFFENSIVE, STRINGING BARBED WIRE, DIGGING HASTY TRENCHES AND CONSTRUCTING IMPROVISED TANK TRAPS.

THE FRENCH INSISTED THE GERMAN TROOPS HAD BEEN UNABLE TO PENETRATE THEIR MAIN LINE OF RESISTANCE WHICH WAS STILL ON GERMAN SOIL EXCEPT FOR THE SECTOR JUST EAST OF APACH.

OCT 1939

SINCE THE GERMANS WERE REPORTED TO HAVE CLEANED OUT FRENCH ADVANCE POSTS, THEY WERE NOW SAID TO BE TRYING TO LOCATE THE FRENCH MAIN LINE, WHILE THE FRENCH WERE EQUALLY INTERESTED IN PROBING GERMAN LINES TO FIND THE EXACT EXTENT OF THE ADVANCE.

TONIGHT'S COMMUNIQUE SAID THERE WAS "NO CHANGE" ON THE ENTIRE WESTERN FRONT, BUT "GREAT ACTIVITY" OF SCOUTING UNITS NOTABLY BETWEEN THE MOSELLE AND THE SAAR RIVERS. #

PARIS, OCT.18-(AP)-THIS MORNING'S GENERAL STAFF COMMUNIQUE FOLLOWS:

DREW MIDDLETON NIGHT-LEAD-
WITH THE BRITISH EXPEDITIONARY FORCE IN FRANCE, OCT 17-DELAYED--PASSED BY FIELD CENSOR--(AP)--THE NEW BRITISH FIELD ARMY, MOVING INTO FRONT LINE POSITIONS BESIDE ITS FRENCH ALLIES, TODAY IS COMPOSED OF HIGHLY MOBILE FORCES ORGANIZED PRIMARILY FOR DEFENSIVE WARFARE AGAINST GERMAN FOES WHO APPARENTLY OUTNUMBER THEM. ALONG A FRONT WHICH RUNS IN SIGHT OF RIDGES, HILLS AND TOWNS WHERE THEIR FATHERS DIED, LIES THE NEW BRITISH ARMY, COMMITTED TO THE ANCIENT BRITISH MILITARY MAXIM "STAND FAST".

A WEEK'S TOUR OF ARTILLERY, TANK AND AIRDROMES HAS REVEALED LITTLE THAT IS SPECTACULAR, BUT MUCH THAT INDICATES REALISTIC PREPARATION TO REPULSE A STRONG ATTACK--AN ATTACK THAT MAY COME AT ANY HOUR DURING THE NEXT THREE WEEKS.

OCT 1939

TOOLS AND PERSONNEL ARE FIT TO ATTACK AS WELL AS DEFEND. BUT THERE IS EVIDENCE IN ALL THE OFFICERS FROM GENERAL LORD GORT DOWN, OF A DESIRE TO CONSERVE MEN AND MACHINES AND TO STICK TO THE DEFENSIVE TACTICS WHICH WON WATERLOO AND COLONIAL SKIRMISHES. THIS DOESN'T MEAN THAT THE BRITISH PLAN WILL MOVE ALONG ARCHAIC LINES. FAR FROM IT. EVERYTHING HAS BEEN PLANNED WITH AN EYE TO MASTER MODERN AND INTRICATE DEFENSES. THE GUNS ALONG THE FRONT CAN BE DIRECTED AGAINST TANKS AND AIRCRAFT AS WELL AS MEN AND PRECAUTIONS AGAINST SCARES HAVE BEEN ELABORATELY INSTALLED AND CAREFULLY WATCHED.

THE CHIER SURPRISE TO OBSERVERS IS THE ABSENCE OF MASSES OF MEN. THE FRONT LINE IS STRONGLY GARRISONED, BUT THE TROOPS ARE ALMOST INVISIBLE. A LARGE PERCENTAGE OF THEM ARE EMPLOYED IN COMMUNICTIONS AND IN ARTILLERY WELL BACK OF THE LINE.

HOW WELL THE BRITISH ARMY, OFFICIALLY PLACED AT 158,000 MEN, COMPARES WITH THE OPPOSING GERMAN FORCES, NO ONE KNOWS. THE GERMAN

STRENGTH IN 1917 WAS 64 DIVISIONS. NEUTRAL OBSERVERS THOUGHT THAT LAST SUMMER THE GERMANS MUSTERED BETWEEN 55 AND 60--25 DIVISIONS OR A QUARTER OF A MILLION MEN AND THAT MAY BE ON THIS FRONT.

THE BRITISH BELIEVE THREE FACTORS WILL WORK IN THEIR FAVOR: WINTER, WHICH TURNS EVEN THE BEST TERRAIN OF NORTHWESTERN EUROPE INTO TREACHEROUS BOGS, THE WIDESPREAD BELIEF THAT THE GERMAN ARMY IS POLTICALLY COMMITTED TO THE WASTING POLICY OF HEADLONG AND CONSTANT ATTACK AND LASTLY, GERMANY'S FAILING ECONOMICS.

EVERY EFFORT IS MADE TO SHOW CORRESPONDENTS HOW WELL THE BRITISH TROOPS ARE FED, WITH INSPIRED COMPARISION OF THEIR THEIR FOOD AND THE GERMAN ARMY RATION. WHETHER OR NOT FOOD IS SCARCE AND POOR IN GERMANY, THE BELIEF THAT IT IS, IS HEARTENING TO THE BRITISH.

THE BRITISH ARE HOLDING A SHORT LINE WITH AN APPARENTLY NUMERICAL INFERIOR FORCE, BUT IN FIRING POWER, RECONNAISSANCE AND ARTILLERY, E ARE BELIEVED TO EQUAL OR BETTER THE ENEMY.

ITS MOBILITY IS ATTESTED BY THE MILLIONS OF POUNDS SPENT ON TANKS ARMOURED CARS, TRUCKS AND VANS OF ALL SIZES, AND THEORETICALLY CAPABLE OF DEALING A DECISIVE BLOW AS IT IS OF WITHSTANDING A SMASHING ATTACK.

THE FRONT IS WIDELY TRAPPED FOR TANKS AND WITH ALL SORTS OF OBSTACLES. BLOCKHOUSES ARE CONSTRUCTED ALONG THE FRONTIER LIKE A LONE OF BUFFALOS WALLOWING IN THE MUD AND ARE, OF COURSE, TANKPROOF.

THE BREN GUN IS THE PRESENT PRIDE OF THE ARMY. ITS FIRE POWER, USED IN ENFILADING ADVANCING INFANTRY AND ITS MOBILITY, ARE PROUDLY POINTED OUT BY OFFICERS. BRENS ARE BROUGHT TO THE FRONT ON FAST CATERPILLAR BREN GUN CARRIERS AND AMMUNITION IS MOVED IN THE SAME WAY. MEN AND MATERIAL APPARENTLY COULDN'T BE BETTER. THE LITTLE FELLOWS IN THE ANTI-CRAFT BATTERIES ARE COCKY AND CONFIDENT.

THE DUKE OF WINDSOR HAS ARRIVED AT GENERAL HEADQUARTERS AND THE DUKE OF GLOUCESTER WAS SEEN BY CORRESPONDENTS WITH THE BRITISH FORCES.

VAALS, THE NETHERLANDS, OCT. 18-(AP)-LITTLE CHILDREN RODE SCOOTERS AT THE FRONTIER BARRIERS TODAY IN THIS NEUTRAL CORNER OF WESTERN EUROPE, WHERE THE NETHERLANDS, GERMANY AND BELGIUM NUDGE ONE ANOTHER WJRILY.

SO CAREFULLY NEUTRAL IS VAALS THAT NOT NETHERLANDS SOLDIER WAS IN SIGHT ON THE STREET THAT LEADS TO THE FRONTIER POSTS.

ACROSS THE BORDER, NOT 50 YARDS FROM WHERE THE CHILDREN WERE PLAYING, A TALL FLAGPOLE SPORTED A BIG RED FLAG WITH A BLACK SWASTIKA.

FROM THE OBSERVATION TOWER OF A MINIATURE MOUNTAIN BACK OF VAALS, HIGHEST POINT IN HOLLAND, I SAW METHODICAL GERMAN LABOR CORPS MEMBERS WORKING, BUCKET-BRIGADE FASHION, TO FINISH A BREATH-TAKING SPAN OF FORTIFICATIONS; BUT THE TELESCOPE ON THE TOWER FAILED TO PICK UP MORE THAN A HALF-DOZEN GERMAN SOLDIERS DOTTING THE LANDSCAPE.

I DROVE ALONG NEARLY 100 MILES OF THE NETHERLANDS-GERMAN FRONTIER BEFORE REACHING THIS CURIOUSLY HILLY PART OF THE COUNTRY. FROM NIJMEGEN TO SITTARD THE ROAD RUNS NORTH FOR 72 MILES WITHIN WALKING DISTANCE OF THE GERMAN FRONTIER.

IT IS A FLAT, WINDING ROAD, SHADED BY ARCHES OF STATELY TREES AND SKIRTING THE SLUGGISH RIVER MAAS. NOW THE ROOTS OF THOSE TREES ARE SPREAD AROUND FRESH-LAID MINES ON BOTH SIDES OF THE ROAD, AND THERE ARE DOZENS OF PONDEROUS BARRICADES, LACED WITH BARBED WIRE AND FLANKED BY STEEL ANTI-TANK SPIKES.

DUTCH SOLDIERS ARE FEW ON THIS FRONTIER ROAD, BUT THE MOBILIZED NETHERLANDS ARMY IS ON THE JOB, FOR ALL THE QUIET APPEARANCE OF THE COUNTRYSIDE.

PACKED INTO THE SOUTHEASTERN CORNER OF THE NETHERLANDS, JUST ACROSS THE MAAS RIVER BRIDGE WEST OF ROERMOND AND WELL BEHIND THE ACTUAL FRONTIER IS A TREMENDOUS FORCE OF ARMED, BLOND GIANTS.

IF WAR COMES TO THIS COUNTRY, IT WILL BE THEIR JOB TO FIGHT WITH THEIR BACKS TO THE "WATER LINE," WHILE ENGINEERS LOOSE THE SHALLOW FLOOD WATERS WHICH WILL MAKE AN ISLAND OF WESTERN HOLLAND WITH ITS POPULOUS CITIES AND THE BULK OF ITS ARMY.

FROM ROERMOND TO EINDHOVEN, IN SOUTH CENTRAL NETHERLANDS, EVERY VILLAGE IS LITERALLY OVERFLOWING WITH TROOPS. IN BETWEEN, THE RAILWAY LINES WERE LOADED WITH GUNS AND EQUIPMENT.

BUT HERE IN VAALS ONE CAN SIT IN A RESTAURANT AND WATCH THE GERMAN HAUSFRAUS WALK PLACIDLY THROUGH THE FRONTIER BARRIERS WITH EMPTY MARKET BASKETS AND RETURN WITH THEM JAMMED WITH NETHERLANDS FOODSTUFFS.

FROM THE OBSERVATION TOWER ON THE MOUNTAIN TOP, 10 CENTS PLACED IN THE SLOT OF THE TELESCOPE WILL PERMIT A VIEW OF THE GERMAN SIEGFRIED LINE, WITH ITS RIBBONS OF CONICAL TANK BLOCKS AND ITS HILLSIDE FORTS. THERE ARE NO SOLDIERS HERE TO PREVENT LOOKING.

LONDON, OCT. 18-(AP)-THE HOUSE OF COMMONS WAS ADVISED BY ONE OF ITS MEMBERS TODAY TO BE WARY OF BUYING AMERICAN MUNITIONS BECAUSE OF "EXTREMELY DISASTROUS RESULTS" WITH PRODUCTS FROM "A COUNTRY MORE USED TO ACCIDENTS OF ONE KIND OR ANOTHER THAN ALMOST ANY OTHER."

THE ADVICE WAS GIVEN BY IAN CAMPBELL HANNAH, OF WOLVERHAMPTON. HE WAS PROFESSOR OF CHURCH HISTORY AT OBERLIN COLLEGE FROM 1915 TO 1925.

"ONE CAN NOT HELP VIEWING WITH A CERTAIN ANXIETY ALL THIS EFFORT TO MOBILIZE OUR FOREIGN SECURITIES ESPECIALLY THOSE IN THE CURRENCY OF THE U.S.A., TO BUY MUNITIONS WHICH IN MANY CASES COULD AS WELL BE MADE IN THIS COUNTRY," HE SAID.

"I DO NOT WANT TO SAY ANYTHING WHATEVER AGAINST AMERICAN MANUFACTURERS. I HAVE LIVED IN THAT COUNTRY FOR A CONSIDERABLE

TIME AND HAVE THE GREATEST POSSIBLE RESPECT FOR AMERICAN INDUSTRY. BUT MEN WHO HAVE SERVED IN OUR ARMIES OVERSEAS HAVE COMPLAINED TO ME TIME AND AGAIN THAT AMERICAN MUNITIONS HAVE FREQUENTLY TURNED OUT TO BE NOT EXACTLY WHAT WE WANTED.

"SHELLS HAVE GONE OFF IN GUNS AND VARIOUS DEFECTS OF THAT KIND HAVE BEEN REVEALED WITH EXTREMELY DISASTROUS RESULTS.

"WE ALL REALIZE THAT AMERICA IS A COUNTRY MORE USED TO ACCIDENTS OF ONE KIND OR ANOTHER THAN ALMOST ANY OTHER COUNTRY.

"WE NEED NOT GO TO BETHLEHEM OR PITTSBURGH UNTIL WE HAVE CAREFULLY INVESTIGATED THE RESOURCES OF OUR OWN COUNTRY."

LATER OFFICIAL MILITARY CIRCLES IN LONDON RIDICULED THE SUGGESTION THAT MUNITIONS MADE IN THE UNITED STATES HAD BEEN UNSATISFACTORY AND SAID HANNAH'S EXPERIENCE AS A CHURCH HISTORY PROFESSOR AND HIS RESIDENCE IN THE UNITED STATES HARDLY QUALIFIED HIM TO CRITICIZE AMERICAN MUNITIONS WHICH WERE EMPLOYED BY HIS MAJESTY'S FORCES WITH CONSIDERABLE SUCCESS AND WITHOUT SERIOUS DEFECT BEING REVEALED."

WASHINGTON, OCT. 18-(AP)-IN A DRAMATIC MOVE INITIATED BY ARGENTINA, THE 21 AMERICAN REPUBLICS APPLIED THE WEIGHT OF THEIR MORAL INFLUENCE TODAY IN SUPPORT OF THE NORSE BLOC'S EFFORTS TO PRESERVE PEACE IN THE BALTIC.

SECRETARY HULL REFUSED, AT HIS PRESS CONFERENCE, TO SAY WHAT WAS MEANT BY THE PHRASE "UNDER THE CIRCUMSTANCES WHICH EXIST," BUT THIS WAS RELIABLY INTERPRETED TO MEAN THE TENSION BETWEEN RUSSIA AND FINLAND. RUSSIA, HAVING SUCCEEDED IN OBTAINING CONCESSIONS FROM ESTONIA, LATVIA AND LITHUANIA WHICH REDUCED THOSE NATIONS TO THE STATUS OF VIRTUAL PROTECTORATES, TURNED HER ATTENTION TO FINLAND AND MADE PROPOSALS WHICH STILL REMAIN A SECRET. CONCERN WAS FELT IN THE SCANDINAVIAN COUNTRIES, AND THE STOCKHOLM CONFERENCE FOLLOWED.

IT WAS LEARNED HERE THAT THE INITIATIVE FOR TODAY'S MOVE BY THE AMERICAN REPUBLICS WAS TAKEN BY ARGENTINA. THE UNITED STATES HEARTILY CONCURRED IN THE STEP.

THE WAR TODAY

BY DEWITT MACKENZIE

THE GERMAN ADVANCE ALONG A TWENTY-MILE FRONT IN THE SAAR REGION, AND THE SPECTACULAR IF NOT VERY DESTRUCTIVE NAZI BOMBING RAIDS ON THE GREAT BRITISH NAVAL BASE AT SCAPA FLOW, WOULD SEEM TO EMPHASIZE THAT HERR HITLER HAS COME TO THE END OF THE PASSIVE RESISTANCE WHICH HE HAS BEEN OFFERING THE ALLIES IN LARGE MEASURE WHILE HE HAS BEEN DICKERING FOR PEACE.

HOWEVER, THERE WERE ASPECTS OF YESTERDAY'S OPERATIONS WHICH GIVES ONE TO WONDER. THEY WERE LEGITIMATE MEASURES OF OFFENSIVE, BUT BOTH ON LAND AND ON SEA THEY LACKED THE MIGHTY PUNCH WHICH WE HAVE BEEN LED BY BERLIN TO EXPECT.

THEN TOO THEY WEREN'T LACKING THOSE MARKS OF NOBLESS OBLIGE WHICH HAVE PERSISTED DURING HERR HITLER'S "PEACE OFFENSIVE." IT IS HARD TO ESCAPE THE IMPRESSION THAT THE GERMAN ATTACKS WERE CALCULATED TO BE BOTH USEFUL AND IMPRESSIVE, WITHOUT AROUSING AN UNQUENCHABLE ANGER ON THE ALLIED SIDE.

A PARIS DISPATCH SAYS THIS MORNING THAT THE NAZI FUEHRER IS FAR FROM FINISHED WITH HIS PEACE EFFORTS. THAT MAY BE THE ANSWER--JUST MAY BE--TO OUR PUZZLE.

OCT 1939

THE GERMAN ATTACK IN THE SAAR THEATRE WAS CARRIED OUT ON SUCH LARGE SCALE AS TO PERMIT IT TO BE DESIGNATED AS AN "OFFENSIVE." HOWEVER, WHILE THERE APPEARS TO HAVE BEEN A HEAVY ARTILLERY DUEL, THE ATTACK DIDN'T INVOLVE HARD INFANTRY FIGHTING. IT WAS NOT A GREAT BATTLE.

INDEED, ACCORDING TO THE ACCOUNTS OF BOTH SIDES, THE OPERATION CONSISTED MAINLY OF THE GERMAN REOCCUPATION OF TERRITORY WHICH THE FRENCH HAD SEIZED EARLY IN THE WAR BUT RECENTLY ABANDONED.

THE FRENCH EXPLANATION IS THAT THEY ORIGINALLY TOOK THIS AREA IN ORDER TO "RELIEVE THE POLISH ARMIES INDIRECTLY", BY TRYING TO DRAW GERMAN TROOPS FROM THE POLISH FRONT TO MEET THE FRENCH ASSAULT. HOWEVER, IN PREPARATION FOR THE GERMAN OFFENSIVE WHICH WAS FORESEEN, THE FRENCH TWO WEEKS AGO DECIDED TO FALL BACK TO OTHER POSITIONS, THE POLES HAVING PASSED BEYOND THE NEED OF AID.

THE GERMAN COMMUNIQUE IN VERY QUIET TERMS ACKNOWLEDGES THAT THE "FRENCH TROOPS EVACUATED THE GREATEST PART OF THE GERMAN TERRITORY THEY HAD HITHERTO OCCUPIED IN FRONT OF OUR FORTIFICATIONS, AND RETREATED TO AND ACROSS THE BORDER." THERE WAS NO EFFORT ON THE NAZI PART TO MAKE A GREAT VICTORY OUT OF THE MOVEMENT, OR TO CROW OVER THEIR SUCCESS, DESPITE THE UNDOUBTED VALUE OF THE ADVANCE FROM THE PROPAGANDA STANDPOINT.

WHAT HAS HAPPENED THUS FAR IN THE SAAR FIGHTING IS THAT THE POSITION HAS BEEN RESTORED IN LARGE DEGREE TO WHAT IT WAS WHEN THE WAR STARTED. THE POSITIONS WHICH THE FRENCH WERE OCCUPYING ON GERMAN SOIL WERE IN THE INHOSPITABLE NO-MAN'S LAND BETWEEN THE GERMAN WESTWALL AND THE FRENCH MAGINOT LINE. NO-MAN'S LAND IS ITSELF AGAIN.

BEYOND THIS, THE MOVEMENT MAY SIGNIFY PREPARATIONS ON THE PART OF THE GERMANS FOR A MAJOR OFFENSIVE IN THIS REGION. IF THE NAZIS ARE CONTEMPLATING A BIG DRIVE THEY WILL HAVE TO GET IT STARTED SOON, FOR THE WINTER WEATHER IS CLOSING IN AND WILL RENDER MILITARY OPERATIONS EXTREMELY DIFFICULT. THE PRESENT ATTITUDE OF THE ALLIED FORCES

APPEARS TO BE DEFENSIVE -- LEAVING IT UP TO THE GERMANS.

THE GERMAN AIRRAIDS OVER THE SCAPA FLOW NAVAL BASE, IN THE ORKNEY ISLANDS JUST NORTH OF SCOTLAND, WERE CARRIED OUT BY JUST A FEW PLANES AND NOT BY THE HUGE WAVES OF BOMBERS WITH WHICH THE NAZI MILITARY AUTHORITIES HAVE BEEN THREATENING THE ALLIES. IT WOULD APPEAR THAT APART FROM SOME DAMAGE TO THE ANCIENT NAVAL TRAINING SHIP IRON DUKE THE RAIDS HAD LITTLE MATERIAL EFFECT.

WHAT THE MORAL EFFECT MAY HAVE BEEN DOESN'T APPEAR, BUT THE APPEARANCE OF RAIDERS MORE THAN ONCE OVER NAVAL BASES CERTAINLY IS SOMETHING TO CAUSE THE BRITISH AUTHORITIES AT LEAST TO CHECK UP ON THEIR DEFENSES.

ONE STILL WONDERS, HOWEVER, WHY THE RAIDS DIDN'T REPRESENT A MUCH MORE VIGOROUS EFFORT ON THE PART OF THE GERMANS. IT WOULD ALMOST SEEM THAT THE NAZIS WERE PULLING RABBITS OUT OF THE HAT TO ASTOUND THE WORLD, WITHOUT INTENDING TO DO MUCH MORE THAN THAT. HAD THEY EMPLOYED THE MUCH ADVERTISED WAVES OF PLANES IN GREAT NUMBERS THE STORY MIGHT HAVE BEEN A VERY DIFFERENT ONE.

Generals Present at Signing.

Signature of the treaty took place in the presence of Gen. Maxime Weygand, Commander-in-Chief of French forces in the eastern Mediterranean, and Lieut.-Gen. Archibald P. Wavell, British middle east commander.

The pact contained the same terms as had been agreed on the end of last month before Foreign Minister Sukru Saracoglu went to Moscow for the negotiations which finally ended in failure this week.

Any pressure which Russia may have brought on Turkey to alter her relations with the two Western Powers therefore was fruitless.

The treaty contains economic as well as military clauses.

Copies were signed for Turkey by Premier Refik Saydam and Marshal Fevzi Tchakmak; for France by Rene Massigli, Ambassador to Ankara, and Gen. Weygand; and for Britain by Ambassador Sir Hughe M. Knatchbull-Hugessen and Lieut.-Gen. Wavell.

Ratification by the Turkish Parliament was expected almost immediately.

Pact Holds for Fifteen Years.

LONDON, Oct. 19 (A. P.).—The pact signed today by Great Britain France and Turkey for mutual assistance in the eastern Mediterranean will be in force "for a minimum period of fifteen years," Prime Minister Chamberlain announced today to a cheering House of Commons.

Mr. Chamberlain, who said that the text of the treaty would be an area in which Turkey is involved.

2. The Turkish Government agree to come to the assistance of his Majesty's Government and the French Government.

A. In the event of an act of aggression by a European Power leading to war in the Mediterranean area in which the United Kingdom and France are involved and

B. If the United Kingdom and France are engaged in hostilities in virtue of either of their guaranties to Greece and Rumania of April 13, 1939.

3. Immediate consultation between the three high contracting parties, with a view to such common action as might be considered effective, is provided for in the event of

A. Aggression by a European Power against another European State in the maintenance of whose independence or neutrality one of the three Governments had undertaken to assist, and

B. Aggression by a European Power which, while directed against another European State, constituted, in the opinion of one of the three Governments, a menace to its own security.

4. The treaty has been concluded for a period of fifteen years.

5. A protocol is included providing that the obligations of this treaty cannot compel Turkey to action having as its effect or involving as its consequence hostilities with the U. S. S. R.

No Temporary Arrangement.

Noting that fifteen years marked the "minimum period" of the life of the [illegible] Mr. Chamberlain said:

"It is therefore no temporary arrangement to meet a pressing emergency, but is a solid testimony of the determination of the three governments concerned to pursue a long term policy of collaboration."

posals which were made to them could not be reconciled with the points which had already been argued between Turkey on the one hand, and Great Britain and France on the other," continued Mr. Chamberlain.

"Nevertheless, it has been announced both from Moscow and Ankara that Turkey's relations with the Soviet Government continue as in the past to rest on a foundation of friendship."

Announcement of the agreement with Turkey, foe of the Allies in the world war and guardian of the vital Dardenelles, followed close on the suspension of negotiations between Turkey and Russia—talks apparently designed to draw Turkey closer to her big Eastern neighbor.

Not Motivated by Present War.

The pact was not motivated by the present war among Great Britain, France and Germany. It was negotiated as a sequel to temporary agreements reached earlier this year under which Turkey, Great Britain and France promised to assist each other in the event of aggression leading to war in the Mediterranean area.

These agreements and the pact to which they looked forward formed a part of the program to build a British-French [illegible] after Germany's occupation of Czecho-Slovakia, of Memel and Italy's seizure of Albania in April.

At about the same time, Great Britain and France gave guaranties to Greece and Rumania to assist them against possible threats to their independence and made the mutual assistance pact with Poland which led to war with Germany.

A mutual assistance pact with Russia also was envisaged by Great Britain and France, but negotiations ended abruptly with the agreement between Russia and Germany.

Hailed as Diplomatic Victory.

Completion of the British and French pact with Turkey apparently was held in abeyance by the outbreak of war and the negotiations begun a few weeks ago between Turkey and Russia.

British sources said they suspected the latter were aimed at detaching Turkey from the western Powers and thus indirectly assisting Germany. Turkey's refusal to agree to Russia's proposals, therefore, was interpreted here as a striking diplomatic victory by the ANKARA, Oct. 19 (A.P.).—Turkey, key Power of the eastern Mediterranean, signed a mutual assistance pact with Great Britain and France here today at 6:15 P.M. (11:15 A. M., New York time).

The treaty was the outcome of British-Turkish and French-Turkish undertakings earlier this year to assist each other "in the event of an act of aggression leading to war in the Mediterranean area."

It contained a clause permitting Turkey to remain neutral in event of a war [illegible] France, Great Britain and Russia.

Indications were that Turkey would not be involved in the British-French war against Germany, unless its scope were extended, but Ankara is obligated to aid France and Great Britain if they go to war in fulfillment of their guaranties of the inde-made available tomorrow, disclosed that "agreement on the terms of the treaty was reached some three weeks ago," but that signature was delayed because the Turkish Government hoped for "a parallel treaty with Soviet Russia."

Foreign Office Summary.

A Foreign Office summary of the treaty follows:

1. His Majesty's Government in the United Kingdom and the French Government undertake to come to the assistance of Turkey.

A. If an act of aggression is committed against Turkey by a European Power and British and French over Russia, in the first instance, but mainly over Germany.

The signing of the pact tonight was arranged to coincide with the visit to Ankara by two high British and French military officers—Lieut.-Gen. Archibald P. Wavell, commander of the British forces in the Middle East, and Gen. Maxime Weygand, commander of the French eastern forces. They were there to discuss with Turkish military leaders detailed military phases of the three-Power treaty.

Dardanelles Proved Barrier.

Turkey, credited with being a strong military Power, occupies a strategic geographical position and her neutrality or assistance will be of great importance to British and French seapower, it was pointed out.

The water route to eastern Europe by way of the Dardanelles and the Black Sea is the route Great Britain would have to take, if she were called on to back up her guaranty to Rumania.

Guarded by Turkish forts, the Dardanelles was the graveyard of a British-French attempt to establish contact with Russia by way of the Black Sea during the world war. There the Allies lost 130,000 men killed, wounded and missing in a land and sea campaign. Turkish mines and guns defending the straits sent three battleships to the bottom in one day. Winston Churchill, then as now First Lord of the Admiralty, planned the attack and became a temporary political victim of its failure.

In some quarters it was regarded as a Nazi failure to draw Turkey, the "Watchdog of the Dardanelles," away from the Anglo-French Front, and as an event that might prove decisive in the war.

Although these informants considered it also a defeat for the Soviet Union, they contrasted the expressions of continued friendliness between Turkey and Russia with what they interpreted as signs of a cooling off in relations between Germany and Turkey.

Germany's Ambassador to Turkey, Franz von Papen, was described in the press as having brought intense pressure to bear on Turkey to wean her away from the Western Powers. Ambassador Von Papen's departure from Ankara for Berlin yesterday, on what was said to have been a summons from his Government, was reported gleefully by the British press.

In some diplomatic quarters it was suggested that Russia, merely as a formality to satisfy Germany, may have made last minute demands on Turkey to abandon Great Britain and France.

Turkish Action Praised.

The London News Chronicle said today that the agreement to be signed by Britain, France and Turkey would provide: 1. Automatic mutual assistance in the Eastern Mediterranean; 2. Turkish assistance in the event the Western Powers should be called upon to fulfill their guaranties to Rumania and Greece; and 3. Diplomatic consultations on Balkan questions.

Great Britain and France are already pledged to help Rumania and Greece defend their independence.

Reports that the Turkish Foreign Minister Sukru Saracoglu had refused Russian demands that Turkey abandon the Western Powers brought a chorus of praise here for Turkish "loyalty."

"Give your admiration to a people that stanchly keep their word and honor their signature," commented the Daily Telegraph. "Rejoice that we have the good will of men who are stout foes and true friends.

"This is a triumph for Britain."

The Daily Mail commented:

"In a world where the honoring of international obligations has become a thing of some rarity, Turkey's stand is a matter for congratulation."

The newspaper added that Turkey, "while unable to comply with the full Soviet demands, reaffirms her friendship with the U. S. S. R., and it is to Britain's interest as well as Turkey's that that friendship should continue."

Military Preparations in Turkey.

ISTANBUL, Oct. 19 (A. P.).—An intensification of Turkey's military preparations was noted by diplomatic observers today, who said it tended to confirm their belief that the allies have already promised extensive help from Asia and Africa in the event of an emergency.

It was generally expected that Gen. Weygand, commander-in-chief of French forces in the eastern Mediterranean, who arrived here yesterday, would sign for his Government before the end of the week a pact embodying these promises.

Turkey and France already have an agreement to aid each other in the event of war in the Mediterranean, signed on June 23. A similar agreement with Great Britain was announced on May 12, but has not yet been put in treaty form.

Gen. Weygand, who was accompanied here by several French military experts, was expected to work out with the Turkish General Staff a joint plan of military procedure in the event of war in this area.

Meanwhile Turkey supplemented her military preparations with orders for blackout drills in several cities, requisitioned heavy duty trucks and urged the enlistment of mechanics and chauffeurs not yet with the armed forces.

Strong Turkish military forces have already been assembled along the Russian and Bulgarian frontiers.

The Turkish press followed up the breakdown of the Russo-Turkish negotiations with a lengthy review of Turkey's position in the Dardanelles, based on international law resulting from the Montreaux convention in 1936. The Montreaux convention provided that the Dardanelles be closed to the warships of belligerent nations unless they were serving under League of Nations mandate or helping a victim of aggression under a mutual assistance pact which was concluded within the league's farmework and to which Turkey was a party.

Reaction in Berlin.

BERLIN, Oct. 19 (A. P.).—Authoritative German informants expressed the belief today that the Turkish Government, as a group of realists, will yet decide that Turkey's paramount interest lies in establishing the best of relations with Soviet Russia.

These persons professed not to be worried over the breaking off of the Moscow talks between Turkey and Russia. They expressed confidence that Turkey will never embark upon an active policy against Germany.

"Should this expectation not be fulfilled," one commentator said cryptically but menacingly, "naturally, corresponding reaction would become manifest here."

German sources argued that Turkey's relationship with the Soviet Union is purely a Turkish affair, but at the same time von Papen considered the situation important enough to inform his Government that he was coming to Berlin to report personally. The initiative for this "routine visit," the sources said, came from von Papen alone.

Von Papen Sees Friendship.

SOFIA, Bulgaria, Oct. 19 (A. P.). Franz von Papen, German Ambassador to Turkey, said today that Germany and Turkey would "remain good friends," although a Turkish-British-French mutual aid pact had been concluded in Ankara.

Von Papen, one of Adolf Hitler's outstanding diplomatic troubleshooters, who is en route to Berlin from Ankara, conferred here with the German Minister to Bulgaria. He said he would remain in Berlin a week.

It was understood that Von Papen had been sent to Turkey to prevent that country's alliance with Great Britain and France.

Rumania Wants Pact Too.

BUCHAREST, Oct. 19 (A. P.).—A Rumanian foreign trade mission left for Ankara today to negotiate a trade pact with Turkey.

The mission planned to continue on to Cairo later to arrange a pact with Egypt.

TURKEY HOPES TO KEEP STATUS AS IT IS NOW

Signs 15-Year Mutual Assistance Accord With World War Foes

[By the Associated Press]

Ankara, Oct. 19—Turkey formally lined up tonight with Great Britain and France, her World War enemies, in a fifteen-year mutual assistance pact to preserve the present territorial and political status in the eastern Mediterranean and the Balkans.

The treaty provided that the three powers come to the aid of one another in case of aggression leading to war in those two areas. Turkey therefore would not become involved in the British-French war with Germany unless it spreads to the eastern Mediterranean area.

Neutrality Russia Fights

A clause likewise permits Turkey to remain neutral in the event of war among Britain, France and Soviet Russia. This was interpreted to mean any war with Russia which did not upset the present situation in the eastern Mediterranean or the Balkans.

The treaty, which included economic as well as military clauses, was signed for Turkey by Premier Refik Saydam and Marshal Feczi Tchakmak; for France by Rene Massigli, Ambassador to Ankara, and Gen. Maxime Weygand, commander-in-chief of French forces in the eastern Mediterranean, and for Britain by Ambassador Sir Hughe M. Knatchbull-Hugessen and Lieut. Gen. Archibald P. Wavell, British Middle East commander.

Its provisions include:

British-French assistance to Turkey if an act of aggression is committed against Turkey by a European power, and in the event of an act of aggression by a European power leading to war in the Mediterranean area in which Turkey is involved.

Turkish assistance to Britain and France if they become involved in any war in the eastern Mediterranean resulting from an act of aggression by a European power and in the event the western powers become engaged in hostilities in carrying out their independence guarantees to Greece and Rumania.

Immediate tri-power consultation "with a view to such common action as might be considered effective" in case of aggression by a European power against another whose assistance one of the contracting parties has undertaken, and in the event of any aggression against another European state which one of the signatories considered "a menace to its own security."

Nazis Barred From Black Sea

Diplomats said these terms secured the strategic Turkish-owned Dardanelles, gateway to the Black Sea, for France and Britain should Germany attempt to push into the Balkans.

As to Germany's position in the light of the new pact, Franz von Papen, German Ambassador to Ankara, said Germany and Turkey would "remain good friends" despite its conclusion.

Von Papen, Adolf Hitler's ace trouble shooter who had been sent to Ankara to attempt to wean Turkey away from the British-French front, made this comment at Sofia, Bulgaria, as he journeyed to Berlin to report to the Führer on the turn of events. He indicated he intended to return to Ankara in a week.

Tension Quickens

Tension quickened in southeastern Europe when the word of the signing of the treaty spread.

In Bulgaria, the country most desirous of a change in the present Balkan lineup, the Cabinet of Premier George Kiosseivanoff resigned, and King Boris 3d set about establishing a new government of national concentration.

The Cabinet crisis came as Bulgaria was moving more troops to the Turkish and Rumanian frontiers and was calling nearly half a million more men to arms.

Moscow Talks Broke Down

The Ankara pact followed the breakdown of Moscow negotiations at which Turkish Foreign Minister Sukru Saracoglu was spokesman for Turkey and her partners in the Balkan entente—Rumania, Greece and Yugoslavia.

May Set Off Balkan War

ANKARA, Oct. 18 (AP).—Diplomats attached tremendous importance to the formalization of Turkish, British and French relations which took place here today. They said the new tri-power pact would either solidify the present neutrality of the Balkans or—if any attempt was made to change boundaries there—touch off a war which would spread rapidly over all southeastern Europe.

These sources said a general explosion might result from any one of the following moves:

A Russian march into Bessarabia, which Rumania obtained from Russia after the World War;

A Bulgarian attempt to enforce territorial demands on Rumania or Greece;

A move by Germany, Italy or Hungary—or any other nation—to make a thrust into the Balkans.

Specifically, the pact provides it "cannot compel Turkey to action having as its effect or involving as its consequence entry into armed conflict with the U. S. S. R."

Britain and France, the treaty stipulates, must go to the assistance of Turkey:

1—"If an act of aggression is committed against Turkey by a European power, or

2—"In the event of an act of aggression by a European power leading to war in the Mediterranean area in which Turkey is involved."

Turkey agrees to go to the assistance of the Western Allies:

1—"In the event of an act of aggression by a European power leading to war in the Mediterranean area" in which Britain and France are involved, or

2—"If the United Kingdom and France are engaged in hostilities in virtue of either of their guarantees to Greece and Romania of April 13, 1939."

Those treaties were to help Greece and Romania against "aggression" threatening their independence.

They were given when Britain and France had sought to build a "front" of nations friendly to them after German absorption of Czecho-

Turks, Allies in Pact; Slap at Berlin, Reds

By EDWIN STOUT.

London, Oct. 19 (AP).—British and French diplomacy tonight won Turkey—watchdog of the Dardanelles and their World War enemy—to a 15-year pact of mutual assistance. A cheering Parliament heard Prime Minister Chamberlain announce that the pact had been signed at Ankara by French, British and Turkish representatives. He declared the instrument cemented a "long term policy of collaboration" and was not merely "a temporary arrangement to meet a pressing emergency."

The treaty—considered a severe blow to Germany and Soviet Russia, and the Allies' first great diplomatic victory of the war—provides for military aid against aggression in the Mediterranean. It became effective upon signature at Ankara tonight.

Under its terms, Turkey is not obligated to go to war against Russia, but she is obligated to go to the aid of France and Britain if they must go to war to maintain their pledges to support the independence of Greece and Romania.

Slovakia and Italian occupation of Albania.

The House of Commons was in expectant mood today as Chamberlain asked permission to interrupt a minor argument on war prices and profiteering.

The members knew the pact was to be signed.

They knew the diplomatic and strategic store the Government set by it as the key to the Balkan bloc.

They remembered the disastrous attempt to smash open the Dardanelles gateway to Southeastern Europe in the World War—an attempt that cost 130,000 casualties. In that attempt they sought to get aid to their ally, Russia.

Agreed on 3 Weeks Ago.

After reminding the House of his announcement last May 12 that Britain and Turkey had agreed to conclude a long term mutual assistance pact, Chamberlain said the terms of the treaty itself were agreed on three weeks ago.

"But signature was postponed," he said, "as it was hoped by the Turkish Government that the visit of the Turkish Minister of Foreign Affairs to Moscow might result in the conclusion between Turkey and the U.S.S.R. of a parallel treaty."

Then he told of the "temporary suspension" of the Turkish-Russian talks last Tuesday because Turkey "felt that certain of the proposals which were made to them" could not be reconciled with points Great Britain, France and Turkey already had agreed on.

He stressed that Turkey and Russia continued friends.

House Cheers News.

The Turkish Government, Chamberlain read from his statement, had decided not to wait any longer. He looked up.

"I am glad to announce to the House," said the Prime Minister, "that the treaty was signed at Angora (Ankara) half an hour ago."

He smiled exultantly, looking around the chamber. The House thundered a cheer.

After Chamberlain concluded with praise of Turkey as a country "for the qualities and character of whose people we have the highest regard and admiration," opposition leaders jumped to their feet to applaud the government's diplomatic victory.

ANKARA PACT TERMED CURB UPON MOSCOW

Agreement Is Expected To Restrict Soviet Aims In Balkans

Alliance Described As Russia's First Defeat On Diplomatic Front

By WATT HANCOCK
Associated Press Correspondent

Moscow, Oct. 19—Signing of a mutual assistance pact between Turkey and the Allies was interpreted by foreign observers tonight as a curb upon any possible Russian plan to extend military aid to Germany and a restriction of Russian aims in the Balkans.

No official reaction to the development was available here, but foreign circles saw the alliance as Russia's first defeat in her fast-moving series of diplomatic "victories" over neighboring States.

Still Close To Russia

Nevertheless close cooperation with Germany apparently remained the present touchstone of Russian policy.

It was announced that the Presidium of the Supreme Soviet had ratified the German-Russian treaty of friendship concluded September 28 and the supplementary protocol of October 4 in which their frontiers in Poland were settled.

Proceeding with her Baltic program, Russia sent her troops through Estonia today to occupy military bases. Dispatches from Tallinn published by Tass, official Soviet news agency, said the troops were being received "in a friendly manner." A Russian-Estonian pact signed Sept. 28 granted to the Soviet Union the right to establish naval bases on the islands of Oesel and Dagoe and at the mainland port of Baltiski (Baltic Port).

The newspaper Pravda in a New York dispatch on the United States' neutrality controversy termed President Roosevelt and those favoring amendment of the Embargo Act the "military party" and those opposing amendment the "peace party."

To Salvage Polish River Boats

A dispatch from sovietized Poland said fifty-two Polish river boats sunk or damaged by a Soviet river fleet would be salvaged and "put into full military readiness."

Provincial newspapers reported continued arrests of scores of food speculators and hoarders were being sentenced to from one to eight years in prison.

The arrest of fourteeen former Polish officers, including a relative of the Polish hero, Marshal Joseph Pilsudski, in Lwow on counter-revolutionary charges, was reported by the army newspaper Red Star.

Convents As "Arsenals"

The newspaper said former Polish officers and capitalists were hiding in convents which had been "converted into arsenals, where counter-revolution is being planned."

Many commodities are difficult to obtain in Moscow, since foodstuffs are being requisitioned for the army and shipped into the newly acquired territory. Reports which could not be confirmed said some of this food was finding its way to Germany.

Tass, official news agency, made public an exchange of cordial telegrams between the Turkish Foreign Minister, Sukru Saracoglu, returning from unsuccessful negotiations here, and Vyacheslaff Molotoff, Foreign Affairs Commissar.

Mr. Saracoglu expressed his "hearfelt thanks for cordial reception and hospitality," and said he had noted the "mutual confidence characterizing the traditional relations between our two countries."

Mr. Molotoff said he was happy to note that "the exchange of views which took place in Moscow again reaffirmed the friendly relations."

The appointment of M. Pozdnyakoff as Minister to Lithuania was announced.

Russ "Highly Disappointed"

Soviet Russia was represented by these authoritative persons as being "highly disappointed" at the outcome in Ankara today.

Adolf Hitler's immediate reaction was formally to ratify the friendship treaty with Russia signed at Moscow September 28 and subsequent agreements of October 4, made with Soviet Russia concerning Poland and the boundaries of their "spheres of influence" in that country.

German and Russian solidarity seemed firmer than ever.

Annexes Corridor

It also was announced that Germany formally had annexed Pomeerllen (the Polish Corridor) and Polish Upper Silesia.

Believe Accord Involves Interests Of Russia And Italy Also Expect Fascists And Communists Will Have To Work Together

By MELVIN K. WHITELEATHER
Associated Press Correspondent

Berlin, Oct. 19—Authoritative quarters took a grave view today of Turkey's signature of a mutual assistance pact with Britain and France, asserting they feared it might cause the outbreak of general war in which as Italy's and Russia's interests were directly involved.

These quarters looked to Italy to react as a Mediterranean power, and said the fact Turkey had turned her back on Russia and had faced toward the Mediterranean was sufficient cause to bring Italy and Russia to work together as the Nazis and Soviets already are doing.

Informed Nazi quarters said frankly they could not understand why Turkey had acted "against her best interests," and expressed belief the situation might prove similar to the Polish one.

In that case the Polish Foreign Minister, Jozef Beck, angered Germany by seeking English aid last spring, Nazis said, and concluding a mutual-assistance pact with Britain and France.

"England cannot help Turkey any more than she helped Poland," they said.

"God Help The Peasants"

One source said: "God held the Angolian peasants. There are no trees there for them to hide behind when the bombers come. There were trees in Poland."

Authoritative Nazis, however, professed to see no immediate threat to Germany's strategic military position in the new and unexpected development.

The entire tendency was to emphasize that Italy is the power most directly affected and that it now is up to Premier Mussolini.

Officials, meanwhile, awaited a report from the German Ambassador, Franz von Papen, who is arriving tomorrow from Ankara.

Nazi efforts to consolidate Germany's position in extreme southeastern Europe by enlisting Turkey's support in Moscow-Berlin cooperation appeared to have been shattered by the signing.

Nazis said the pact might endanger neutrality of the Balkans.

"It can be assumed with certainty," one commentator observed, "that other members of the Balkan entente (Greece, Yugoslavia and Rumania) will view the Turkish action as a renunciation of that policy of neutrality to which the Balkan states are disposed."

Earlier, with official comment on the pact lacking, informed quarters gave indications that it was an unwelcome turn.

Red Accord Unshakable

But it was being said that the understanding with Russia, now that the Führer had decided to approve formally the recent pacts with her, is complete and unshakable.

There was no indication that the Turkish agreement in any way altered the Russian-German decision to reorganize eastern Europe to their liking without outside influence.

Meanwhile, Germany's general staff was announcing that "the first phase" of the war in the West was finished with French withdrawal from the last kilometer of German soil.

The high commond went out of its way to emphasize that the German Army stopped short at the French boundary, indicating the Reich still hopes that France will be persuaded that the war is unnecessary.

No Important Fighting

It said there had not been a single action of any size in the west—that with one exception only small detachments, fewer than 200 soldiers, were used on either side.

This contradicted sharply reports from the Allies.

The communique said "British troops until now have been nowhere in evidence in the first line on the Western front"—a point the newspapers emphasized in headlines and Germans with smiles in conversation.

An authorized officer asserted: "We know pretty well where the British are, for French soldiers using placards have indicated to our men where they lie."

Only One Man Killed

Only one man was killed along the front of more than one hundred miles where the Rhine forms the border between France and Germany, the communique said, and he died from a splinter from an anti-aircraft shell. This is the section just north of the Swiss frontier.

Along the remainder of the front—from Luxembourg to west of Karlsruhe—the high command said the German losses until October 17 amounted to 196 killed, 356 wounded and 114 missing.

Nazis suggested some of the missing might be found as they were believed lost in the thick of the Warndt forest, which the French now have left, or Saarbrücken.

Sixty Enemy Planes Lost

Enemy planes shot down on this front were placed at sixty—forty-eight French and twelve British. The Germans, according to the communique, lost eleven planes.

The high command said French withdrawal from small strips of territory protruding into France, which the Germany army had left barren for strategical reasons, was completed yesterday.

Thus, it said, "the first phase of the war, provoked by French initiative, is now terminated."

What the next phase might be was not indicated, but it said "contact with the enemy has been broken in several places because our troops did not cross the French frontier."

Not Aiming At France

Nazis have held since the beginning of the war that they did not intend to strike against France.

Informed sources said the fact that the German troops did not try to push into France did not mean Germany was contemplating a new peace offensive.

Dienst aus Deutschland, well-connected commentary, only today said:

"Hitler's Reichstag speech contained everything that could be said by Germany regarding readiness for peace, on what this readiness was based and what the Reich's programatic aims are."

Usually Small Forces

An authorized officer said that the only appearance of a slightly heavier force than one company in fighting on the Western front came in an action that had purely local significance.

"My French colleagues who make up the daily French war communiques," this officer asserted, "must have had many private laughs."

At least temporary new Eastern frontiers were published today with notice of formal annexation of Pomorze, Pommerellen and Polish Upper Silesia.

The exact borders still were left somewhat vague and in certain places they extend beyond Germany's 1914 line.

30.24-4141

Two New Districts

Two new administrative districts were created—West Prussia and Posen—with a statthalter, or governor, for each.

Upper Silesia was added to the German province of Silesia.

There was some debate as to whether a small strip of Silesian territory on the old border—of which Czenstochau is the center and which did not belong to Germany before 1914—eventually would be included in Germany.

What disposition will be made of the remainder of Poland up to the new Russian frontier apparently will depend on the outcome of the war.

Danzig To Be Seat

Danzig will be the seat of the new West Prussian administrative district.

Incidental to today's developments, German exporters had been advised to be cautious about shipments to Turkey because the German-Turkish clearing agreement had expired.

This happened sometime ago and Turkey agreed to continue paying for German goods according to the old accord until a new one could be concluded.

Half of Turkey's exports come to Germany.

Major Clement R. Attlee welcomed the announcement on behalf of the Labor party.

He said he hoped the friendship with Turkey might long endure and "be strengthened and grow greater."

The acting Liberal leader, Sir Percy Harris, congratulated the Government on the successful conclusion of "what must have been difficult and delicate negotiations."

Bares "Gentlemen's Agreement"

In recounting to the House the progress of the British-French-Turkish negotiations, Chamberlain touched on a "gentlemen's agreement" which the three powers have had since May 12.

"Pending the conclusion of this agreement," he continued, "his Majesty's Government and the Turkish Government declared that in certain circumstances they were prepared to cooperate effectively and to lend each other all aid and assistance in their power.

"It was subsequently decided, as the result of conversations between his Majesty's Government, the Turkish Government and the French Government that this long-term agreement should be in the form of a tripartite treaty between Great Britain, France and Turkey.

"Though the negotiations which have been proceeding since I made the statement May 12 may have been protracted, they have never shown any material difference in views and they have been throughout conducted in an atmosphere of mutual trust and confidence."

Message To Turkish Premier

As soon as formal signing of the treaty had been announced, Chamberlain sent a personal telegram of congratulation and good wishes to Refik Saydam, Turkish Prime Minister.

"I welcome this additional proof of the resolve of our three countries to collaborate in furthering our common interests and I look forward to the continuance of this cooperation in pursuing the policy laid down in the treaty we have just signed," Chamberlain's message said.

HITLER ANNEXES 3 POLISH AREAS

Pomorze, Pommerellen and Upper Silesia Included.

ONCE BELONGED TO REICH

But Fate of Central Section Is Left Undetermined.

BERLIN, Oct. 19 (A. P.).—Adolf Hitler announced today the formal annexation of Pomorze, Pommerellen and Polish Upper Silesia, conquered Polish provinces, to his expanding Reich.

Two new administrative districts were created by the decree, signed on October 8, but published today. These are West Prussia and Posen.

For each district or gau one Reichsstatthalter or governor, will be appointed by der Fuehrer.

The seat of the West Prussian governor will be Danzig, the one-time free city which Hitler incorporated in Germany on September 1, when his armies marched into Poland.

The city of Posen will be the capital of the district of that name.

Were Cut From Reich.

The annexation returns to Germany the parts of Poland which belonged to the Reich before the world war and were detached by the Versailles Treaty in creation of the Polish Republic.

[The territory comprises about 23,000 square miles, less than one third of the part of Poland which Germany took in dividing the conquered nation with Russia. The annexation decree left undetermined the eventual fate of some 50,000 square miles of central Poland which has been occupied by Germany up to the new Soviet frontier.]

The City of Danzig and surrounding territory, which before the German invasion was a free city under League of Nations control, previously had been annexed by Hitler.

East Prussia Augmented.

The province of East Prussia is to be augmented by a small section of Poland centering around Zichenau, formerly known as Zielun.

Inhabitants of the annexed regions will become German citizens, if they can qualify under the Reich's strict anti-Semitic racial laws. Local laws of the regions will continue in force where they do not conflict with German laws.

Hitler's decree is to become effective on November 1.

West Prussia will be sub-divided into the departments of Danzig, Marienwerder and Bromberg. Posen will consist of the departments of Hohensalza, Posen and Kalisch. Former Polish Upper Silesia becomes the department of Kattowitz of the province of Silesia.

PRO-NAZI CABINET QUITS IN BULGARIA

Government More Friendly to Soviet Is Due.

SOFIA, Oct. 19 (A. P.).—Premier Kiosseivanov and his Cabinet, who had pursued a mildly pro-German policy, resigned today as Bulgaria swung toward closer co-operation with Soviet Russia.

It was considered probable that Stephan Mihailoff, Deputy regarded as friendly to Moscow, would be designated by King Boris III to form a new Cabinet.

Mr. Kiosseivanov, a close friend of the King, had been Premier and Foreign Minister since his Cabinet was reconstructed November 14, 1938. Under his guidance Bulgaria has won the right to rearm, denied by world war treaties, and has signed friendship treaties with Yugoslavia and Turkey.

Partition of Poland and Russia's emergence to new dominance in southeast Europe has changed the Balkan picture, however.

Kiosseivanoff presented the resignations of the ministers to King Boris III.

The resignation opens the way for formation of a Government with a more definite policy in the face of the present tense situation in Southeastern Europe, disturbed by the re-emergence of Soviet Russia, Bulgaria's friend, as an active factor in Balkan affairs.

The Cabinet crisis came as Bulgarian troops stood guard along the frontiers with Turkey and Rumania, both of which have received pledges of military aid from the British-French bloc. It was indicated that new troops might be called to the colors, giving Bulgaria nearly 500,000 men under arms.

Rumanian Citizenship Made Easier By Decree

Proposed Legislation Taken As Sign Country Wants To Remain Friendly With Neighbors

Bucharest, Oct. 19 (AP)—A new decree facilitating citizenship, introduced today by Minister of Justice Victor Iamandi, was viewed in diplomatic quarters as another evidence of Rumania's eagerness to remain friendly with her neighbors, particularly Hungary.

Under the decree registration for citizenship was set up from October 27 to February 1, 1940. It was said hundreds of thousands of minority nationalities, especially Jews, Hungarians and Germans in Transylvania and Jews and Russians in Bessarabia would be favorably affected by the decree.

Hungary to Hold Air Defense Test

BUDAPEST, Oct. 19 (A. P.).—Hungary's 150 planes will take to the air next week in mock raids to test air defenses of all cities with populations of more than 5,000.

Plans announced for the first national air defense week, starting Monday, called for blackouts, public lectures and school instructions.

The residents will use cellars for refugees because Hungary has no air raid shelters.

REPARATION OF GERMANS

Berlin, Oct. 19 (AP)—Plans for the repatriation of German nationals from Baltic States were approaching realization today. An official announcement disclosed that the first three ships carrying between 1,500 and 2,000 Germans, were due tomorrow at Gotenhaven—Germany's new name for the former Polish port of Gdynia.

Chamberlain on the Accord

By The Associated Press.

LONDON, Oct. 19—The text of Prime Minister Chamberlain's statement to the House of Commons on the new British-French-Turkish treaty follows:

The House will remember that I made a statement in this House on May 12 to the effect that His Majesty's Government in the United Kingdom and the Turkish Government had agreed to conclude a definite long-term agreement of a reciprocal character in the interests of their national security.

Pending the conclusion of this agreement, His Majesty's Government and the Turkish Government declared that in certain circumstances they were prepared to cooperate effectively and to lend each other all aid and assistance in their power. It was subsequently decided, as the result of conversations between His Majesty's Government, the Turkish Government and the French Government, that this long-term agreement should be in the form of a tripartite treaty between Great Britain, France and Turkey.

No Difference in Views

Though the negotiations which have been proceeding since I made the statement on May 12 have been protracted, they have never shown any material difference in views and they have throughout been conducted in an atmosphere of mutual trust and confidence.

Agreement on the terms of the treaty was reached some three weeks ago, but signature was postponed, with the concurrence of His Majesty's Government and of the French Government, as it was hoped by the Turkish Government that the visit of the Turkish Minister of Foreign Affairs to Moscow might result in the conclusion between Turkey and the U. S. S. R. of a parallel treaty.

The negotiations which M. Saracoglu [Shukru Saracoglu, the Turkish Foreign Minister] has been conducting at Moscow have now been temporarily suspended as the Turkish Government felt that certain of the proposals which were made to them could not be reconciled with points which had already been agreed between Turkey on the one hand and Great Britain and France on the other. Nevertheless, it has been announced both from Moscow and Angora that Turkey's relations with the Soviet Government continue as in the past to rest on a foundation of friendship.

Signature Announced

Meanwhile, the Turkish Government have decided not to defer any longer the signature of the Anglo-Franco-Turkish treaty, and I am glad to be able to announce to the House that the treaty was signed at Angora [illegible] an hour ago. The full text of the treaty will be made available tomorrow.

I would call attention to the fact that the treaty is valid for a minimum period of fifteen years. It is, therefore, no temporary arrangement to meet a pressing emergency, but is a solid testimony of the three governments concerned to pursue a long-term policy of collaboration.

I am sure that it will give the House great satisfaction to learn that our negotiations have been brought to this successful conclusion and that the seal has been set on our close and cordial relations with a country for the qualities and character of whose people we have the highest regard and admiration.

Berlin Declares Nazi Armies Halted at French Frontier After Forcing Last of Invading Troops Out of Germany

Pointed Statement Is Taken to Emphasize Lack of Enmity to France.

CALLS FIRST WAR PHASE ENDED

Meanwhile Paris Reports Nazis Pump Rhine Floodwaters Out of Their Positions

BERLIN, Oct. 19 (A. P.).—The Army High Command announced today that the first phase of the war on the western front had ended with the complete withdrawal of French troops from German soil, and underlined the assertion that the German forces had stopped at the French frontier.

Germany thus took a new tack to let France know that she had no quarrel with her. The Nazis were described as believing that reserve in pursuing the western campaign would speak louder now than any new peace offer.

Operations on the western front to date were minimized throughout the High Command's communique.

German tactics from the beginning of the war have been to make a sharp distinction between France and Great Britain.

[French dispatches declared that the Germans had crossed over onto French soil at one spot near the Luxemburg border, and after referring to drenching rains which had slowed up all operations on the western front, said that German troops in the Siegfried Line were working with pumps to combat flood waters from the Rhine. They said that the flood was also licking at lower sections of the Maginot Line, but that the main French fortifications were on higher ground.]

No New Peace Proffer.

Meanwhile, Dienst Aus Deutschland, a commentary which has close relations with the Foreign Office, said once again today that Germany did not intend to make any new peace offers now.

"Hitler's Reichstag speech contained everything that could be said by Germany regarding readiness for peace, on what this readiness was based and what the Reich's programme for peace," it said.

Germany was said to believe that it was now up to the enemy or to neutrals to make the next move toward truce.

Bad weather may cause Germany to intensify her war at sea, military experts said today, explaining that the rainy autumn season, a handicap to large scale land action, is particularly favorable for submarine warfare.

The scope of German aerial activity also may widen, since the Nazi air force, schooled in blind flying, is trained for bad weather.

The High Command said that the French troops left German soil after short but bitter fighting.

This action, the communique said, had pushed the French rear guard across the border between the Saar River and the Hornbach-Bitche Road.

In other sectors of the western front, the communique said, there was only local artillery and patrol activity.

Contact with the enemy in several places was broken, it was added, because German troops did not cross the border in following up the French withdrawal.

The whole tone of the communique tended to minimize the scope of the war to date—in size of engagements, in territory involved and in casualties—and to emphasize in effect that the front lines were now the peace-time boundaries.

What war there has been on the western front was attributed to French initiative, and Germany's unwillingness to take the initiative on land herself was inferred from the statement that contact had been broken with the enemy in several places because the French withdrew into France beyond the border.

In emphasizing the "purely local" nature of the fighting, the High Command said that, save in one instance, only small detachments, "mostly weaker than one company," were in conflict. The war strength of a German company is about 200 men.

The communique gave the German losses in the west, from the beginning up to last Tuesday, as 196 dead, 356 wounded and 114 missing. It listed prisoners taken at twenty-five French officers and 664 non-commissioned officers and men.

Eleven airplanes were lost on the western front, it said, while a total of sixty enemy planes were shot down—forty-eight French and twelve British.

The communique listed the following areas occupied by the French border between the Luxemburg border and Saarlautern; second, 'the Warndt' woods, which extend into France southwest of Saarbruecken, and, third, the likewise protruding region southeast of Saarbruecken between [illegible] River and the Palatinate.

In the last named regions, from which Nazi troops had withdrawn, the communique said, the French advanced onto German soil a distance of only two or three miles and with "heavy losses."

"At no other points did the French even come close to the West Wall," the communique added, "with the exception of regions where the West Wall, as was the case at Saarbruecken, runs along the immediate neighborhood of the border."

French Have Gone Back.

PARIS, Oct. 19 (A. P.).—The official French communique issued at 10:15 o'clock tonight said:

"During the day there were numerous patrols on either side, more especially in the region east of the Moselle.

"Our artillery was particularly active in the same district.

"It is now confirmed by information gathered that the Germans launched an attack in force on October 16 on a front of about four miles to the east of the Moselle and

French Retire On 22-Mi. Line

By H. TAYLOR HENRY.

Paris, Oct. 19 (AP).—The French High Command tonight announced that its forces had withdrawn for distances as much as six miles along a 22-mile section of the Western Front's northern flank.

A French communique, reviewing Monday's German attack in force, indicated that the French now were almost back on their own frontier, since the best estimates of the French advance into Germany during the first month of the war placed them no farther than seven miles on German soil at any one point.

French Losses "Light."

The French said their losses were "very light" in the prearranged withdrawal to a line still "far in advance" of the permanent Maginot fortifications.

One unit officer and 50 men, however, were outflanked by the advancing Germans [illegible] off. Whether they died on the spot or were taken prisoner was not disclosed, the communique saying merely that the unit had "defended itself gallantly."

The only activity reported today was described as that of numerous patrols and artillery fire, particularly on the extreme northern flank of the front just east of the Luxemburg border.

Behind the lines, the British and French air ministries conferred at length "somewhere in France" yesterday to discuss the war in the air.

Council's Third Meeting.

A brief announcement connected this meeting with two previous sessions of the Allied Supreme War Council. The first was held Sept. 12 in France, the second Sept. 22 in England.

British Air Minister Sir Kingsley Wood and French Air Minister Guy la Chambre attended the conference, at which it was announced the air chiefs engaged in "a wide exchange of views which resulted in complete agreement."

On the Western Front heavy rains forced rivers out of their banks. French observers said German troops in the Westwall were working pumps to combat the flood waters of the Rhine. They said the main Maginot line forts were on higher ground.

of eighteen miles to the east of the Saar. These attacks fell short.

"The cavalry units with some infantry support which had been left alone to keep contact with the withdrawal of the bulk of the divisions which had conducted the offensive at the beginning of September, withdrew in accordance with orders received at the very beginning of the artillery preparation.

"This movement was successfully effected over the whole front on a depth at certain points which amounted to almost six miles.

"The units involved took a stand as had been planned on a line organized beforehand far in advance of our system of permanent fortifications and only suffered very light losses.

"However, one of these detachments, consisting of an officer and fifty rank and file, was outflanked by the enemy and defended itself gallantly.

"After some fluctuations, the battle front has at present stabilized itself on the line which had been planned.

"We took prisoners at different points."

Call Germans Repulsed.

The General Staff reported earlier that German infantry units, supported by artillery fire, had been thrown back at several points on the western front.

This localized action, according to the regular morning communique from the War Ministry, was the only activity during a "quiet" night. Drenching rains slowed up operations on both sides and grounded the air forces.

French observers reported that German troops in the Siegfried Line were working [illegible] pumps to combat flood waters from the Rhine.

Thousands of German re-enforcements were reported moving up in support of units which won the toehold on French soil.

To observers it appeared that the Allies intended to fight a defensive war at least through the winter, while awaiting a clarification on the diplomatic front, particularly with regard to Russia's intentions.

$791,000,000 for Air Force.

Meanwhile today Premier Daladier met with his ministers to review the achievements of the French armies, the Russo-Finnish tension, the Stockholm solidarity conference of Sweden, Norway, Denmark and Finland, and the suspended Russo-Turkish negotiations.

At the Elysee Palace President Lebrun announced afterward that M. Daladier gave a complete account of the diplomatic and military situation.

France appropriated 34,421,000,000 francs (about $791,000,000) today for air force equipment.

By special decree published in the Official Journal, the Air Ministry will receive 6,601,000,000 francs as credit for immediate expenditure under the 1939 extraordinary armament budget, plus 27,820,000,000 in supplementary credits.

The new credits for the air force were the major part of a total of 34,553,000,000 francs (about $794,000,000) which was opened up as ordinary and extraordinary credits.

Traitor of Stuttgart.

The supplementary air force appropriation was in addition to the regular budget figures voted by Parliament last December. Previously the air force had been given 8,500,000,000 francs (approximately $323,000,000). This figure, however, was later raised by an undetermined amount through appropriations from the National Defense Fund.

A series of decrees signed for the war-time organizations of domestic affairs permitted members of municipal and provincial councils who have been mobilized to delegate their powers to other members of local governing bodies.

Paul Ferdonnet, a writer, identified by the French authorities as one of two Frenchmen broadcasting German propaganda from a Stuttgart station, has been formally charged with conduct "harmful to the security of the State." Premier Daladier referred to these broadcasters in his radio speech to the nation on October 10, when he called them the "traitors of Stuttgart."

Air Ministries of Allies Announce a Conference

Meeting Disclosed as France Increases Warplane Funds

PARIS, Oct. 19 (AP).—The British and French Air Ministries disclosed tonight that they had held long conferences "somewhere in France" today to discuss warfare in the air. The announcement, issued in Paris, connected the air survey with two previous sessions of the Allied Supreme War Council. The first was held on Sept. 12 in France, the second on Sept. 22 in England.

The French announcement merely said that British Air Secretary Sir Kingsley Wood was the guest of French Air Minister Guy la Chambre for "a wide exchange of views which resulted in complete agreement."

The Day's Communiques

German

By The Associated Press.

BERLIN, Oct. 19—The German High Command today issued the following communiqué:

Between the Saar and the Hornbach-Bitche road we pushed the enemy's rear guard across the French frontier in a short but bitter encounter. In other sectors of the Western Front there was nothing but local artillery and patrol activity.

Contact with the enemy has been broken in several places because our troops did not cross the French frontier. The first phase of the war, provoked by French initiative, is now terminated and it is possible to give the following summary of events on the Western Front since the beginning of the war:

With the beginning of operations in Poland our border fortifications in the West also were occupied with strong forces. Sept. 9 the French opened hostilities and crossed the German border with advance troops at several places between Luxembourg and the Rhine west of Karlsruhe. From the very beginning at no point on the West Front has there been serious fighting.

The purely local fighting took place in a flat stretch near the French border in front of our Westwall. With one single exception, on either side only small detachments, mostly weaker than one company, participated in these encounters. The following were occupied by the French during September:

First, several villages lying near the French border between the Luxembourg border and Saarlautern; second, "The Warndt" Woods, which extends into France southwest of Saarbruecken; and third, the likewise protruding region southeastward of Saarbruecken between the Saar River and the Palatinate Forest.

Only in the last two named regions which were evacuated by us was the enemy able, with heavy losses, to penetrate into German soil to depths of between three to five kilometers [about two to three miles].

There is no enemy in the entire other German region in front of the Westwall. At no other point did French forces even come close to the Westwall with the exception of the regions where the Westwall, as was the case at Saarbruecken, runs along the immediate neighborhood of the border.

As with infantry actions, artillery fire also was light. It was limited except for support of minor actions to a mere nuisance fire against points in front of our fortifications; in one single case one bunker in the neighborhood of Saarbruecken was shot at with eighty shells of medium caliber without any success.

Along the upper Rhine from Karlsruhe to Basle, nearly peacelike quiet has reigned since the outbreak of the war. This minor gain of territory which from the [illegible] was described as a full success and effective support of the Poles, has been voluntarily abandoned by the enemy between the Luxembourg border and Warndt Mountain as well as between the Saar River and the Palatinate Forest.

Thereupon, the enemy, energetically pressed by our troops, retreated to and beyond the French border.

War in the air on the Western Front hitherto did not go beyond reconnoitering activity and use of pursuit planes and anti-aircraft on both sides.

Bombing raids did not occur. Because of effective German defense by pursuit planes and anti-aircraft, sixty enemy planes, among which twelve were British, were brought down since the war's beginning on the Western Front.

Airplane losses of the enemy within Germany and in the vicinity of the German coast are not contained in these figures.

The total losses on the German side caused by action on the Western Front from the outbreak of war until Oct. 17, inclusive, amount to 196 killed 356 wounded, 114 missing, as well as eleven airplanes.

Up till Oct. 18, twenty-five French officers, 664 noncommissioned officers and soldiers were taken prisoners.

Only one man was wounded, and he by a splinter of an occasionally bursting anti-aircraft shell, along the 170-kilometer-long [about 105-mile] front on the upper Rhine.

British troops until now have been nowhere in evidence in the first line of the Western Front.

Text of French Communique

PARIS, Oct. 19 (AP).—The official French communique issued tonight said:

"During the day there were numerous patrols on either side, more especially in the region east of the Moselle. Our artillery was particularly active in the same district.

"It is now confirmed by information gathered that the Germans launched an attack in force on Oct. 16 on a front of about four miles to the east of the Moselle and of eighteen miles to the east of the Saar. These attacks fell short.

"The cavalry units with some infantry support which had been left alone to keep cnotact with the withdrawal of the bulk of the divisions which had conducted the offensive at the beginning of September, withdrew in accordance with orders received at the very beginning of the artillery preparation. This movement was successfully effected over the whole front on a depth at certain points which amounted to almost six miles.

"The units involved took a stand as had been planned on a line organized beforehand far in advance of our system of permanent fortifications and only suffered very light losses. However, one of these detachments, consisting of an officer and fifty rank and file, was outflanked by the enemy and defended itself gallantly.

"After some fluctuations, the battlefront has at present stabilized itself on the line which had been planned. We took prisoners at different points."

The morning communique said: "All quiet on the whole front during the night. Very rainy weather. Enemy infantry units supported by artillery fire have been repulsed at several points on the front."

Only 1 German Hurt On Entire Rhine Front

BERLIN, Oct. 19 (AP).—Since the war began, only one German soldier has been wounded on the lower western front of more than 100 miles where the Rhine forms the border between France and Germany, according to the communique issued by the German high command today.

He was hit, it explained, by a splinter of an anti-aircraft shell.

IMPLIES U-BOAT WAS ON SURFACE

Story of Royal Oak Sinking So Interpreted by Nazis.

BERLIN, Oct. 19 (A. P.).—Guenther Prien, the thirty-one-year-old submarine commander who sank the British battleship Royal Oak at Scapa Flow was understood by Germans today to have implied clearly that his submarine entered and left the formidable British naval base on the surface.

After telling yesterday how he had entered the base and made the attack, Commander Prien added: "Through my strong binoculars I saw the effect of my torpedoes, after I had already turned the boat's heading out of the bay."

Submarine experts said that this statement left but one interpretation—that the commander must have been on the conning tower, in other words, that his submarine was on the surface. Had the boat been submerged, they said, he would have been able to use binocular's but could have seen only through the periscope.

Also, the commander's statement that a motorist saw the submarine entering Scapa Flow was taken by the experts as further support of their view.

They added that it was only by entering on the surface that it was possible for the medium-sized submarine to avoid the mines defending the naval base.

Neutrals Warned By Germany

Berlin, Friday, Oct. 20 (AP)—Germany has warned neutral nations that they run the risk of having sunk any ships [illegible] by British or French warships, Dienst Aus Deutschland, authoritative commentary close to the Foreign Office, said today.

The commentary said Germany had called the attention of neutral powers to the fact that it is not permissible for neural ships to travel in the convoy of hostile warships.

Dienst said Germany had told the neutrals that submarines are "running the risk of being sunk according to internationally recognized laws of warfare."

British Planes Over Germany

Two Nazi Airmen Drift Ashore in England After Being Shot Down in North Sea.

LONDON, Oct. 19 (A. P.).—The Air Ministry announced today that a successful reconnaissance flight was made over northwestern Germany last night, adding: "The aircraft taking part reached their objectives and have all returned safely."

The Ministry also announced that two German airmen shot down over the North Sea on Tuesday had drifted ashore in a collapsible boat near Whitby, and reported that their two companions in a Nazi bomber had been killed.

The Ministry added: "One of the survivors is wounded in the leg and both are in an exhausted condition."

On Tuesday German bombers raided the British naval base at Scapa Flow damaging the warship Iron Duke and engaging in a battle with the British defense forces.

Air Minister Visits France.

WITH THE ROYAL AIR FORCE IN FRANCE, Oct. 19 (A. P.).—Sir Kingsley Wood, Britain's Air Minister, today visited squadrons of his fighting force, congratulated pilots who had flown over Germany.

He said that he had found "cheerfulness, good spirits and a belief in the cause for which they are fighting."

Sir Kingsley's car was halted at the roadside for a 20 minutes' air raid warning as he was driving off to lunch. The French took the warning as a matter of course.

The little man who has the reputation for getting things done, covered a lot of ground. He reviewed the guard of honor in the square of a sleepy French village, then astonished a staid farmer's wife by driving into the farmhouse to enquire about billets.

The farmer's wife said "Minister Anglais" had told her to take good care of his boys.

He dashed about the airdrome, looked over reconnaissance planes and inspected dugouts and anti-aircraft guns. He chuckled over a slogan chalked up in a dugout which he told the press was "naughty."

At another airdrome, which was blanketed in heavy mist, the Secretary of State for air looked over some of Britain's big bombers and talked to the men who flew them. He shook hands, laughed and chatted, and patted big awkward youngsters on the back.

German Air Claims.

BERLIN, Oct. 19 (A. P.).—The German High Command today issued a communique in which the following assertions appeared as part of a summary of the war thus far:

"War in the air on the western front has thus far not gone beyond reconnoitering activity and the use of pursuit planes on both sides.

"Bombing raids did not occur.

"Because of effective German defense by pursuit planes and anti-aircraft, sixty enemy planes of which twelve were British, were brought down since the war's beginning on the western front.

"Airplane losses of the enemy within Germany and in the vicinity of the German coast are not contained in these figures."

PAPER ASSAILS BLACKOUT TOLL

Rothermere Organ Deplores Loss of 1130 Lives.

RADIO ALSO IS CRITICIZED

B. B. C. Attacked for Imposed Gloom and Graveyard Voices.

LONDON, Oct. 10 (A. P.).—The London Evening News, in which Lord Rothermere's family has a large interest, published an editorial today criticizing the Government in connection with the loss of 1,130 lives during the first month of Great Britain's war time blackout.

"In the first month of the blackout 1,1300 men, women and children met their deaths on the roads of Great Britain—twice as many as in September last year—and the darkness killed an uncounted number of others," the editorial said.

"That toll, if it continues for a year, will be heavier than Hitler's figure for the deaths in the German Army during the whole Polish campaign.

'Imposed Gloom' Over Air.

"Such a tragic list of casualties spread from end to end of the kingdom and bringing sorrow to every kind of home will force people to new doubts about the mental and physical darkness in which they are waging a war for freedom."

The article also criticized what it termed "imposed gloom" and "graveyard voice" over the radio.

"They imposed gloom on a B. B. C. (British Broadcasting Corporation) which was already not conspicuously heartening," the editorial said.

"The announcers and graveyard voices intoned brief scraps of news at deadly and monotonous intervals—intoned the mas though predicting without hope the end of the world. Our cinemas were closed. Our trains were without lights.

A World of Blackness.

"We walked through midnight streets, sat in silence on the seats of blackened trains, entered our curtained homes, listened to the lament of the wireless and then heard that we could have no fish for dinner because the bureaucrats had scattered Billingsgate (the widely known seafood market) more disastrously than a bomb could have done.

"In the Ministry of Information the devoted 999 (employees) made the mental darkness more profound. Their voices rallying us for war were muffled, hesitant and incoherent.

"A little of the darkness has now been lifted, but too much of it still clings chokingly around us; and the deaths in the blackout have a grim significance which even officialdom cannot ignore."

Royal Brothers Visit Front

Dukes of Windsor and Gloucester Tour British Lines in France.

WITH THE BRITISH EXPEDITIONARY FORCE IN FRANCE, Oct. 18 (Delayed) (A. P.) (Passed by Field Censor).—The Duke of Windsor and the Duke of Gloucester, his younger brother, toured the front lines today accompanied by Lord Gort, the British Commander-in-Chief.

The royal brothers looked into pill boxes, watched breastworks being erected and jumped into trenches on their tour.

Guards hold the British front lines. In London the word "guards" immediately brings to mind towering bearskins and bright red coats.

The guards' precision gives them the unreality of toy soldiers, but in France guards mean huge men digging trenches in wet clay with a captain who is a cousin of the King of England lending a hand.

In London, guards protect the person of the sovereign. They are regiments with full romp and ceremony the capital of the empire can muster. They are towering six-footers who stroll in Hyde Park of an evening in peacetime answering scores of questions from American tourists.

But in France, guards are strictly business.

Wearing Battle Dress.

Big men crouch in pillboxes nursing machine guns and wearing battle dress—the new style resembling khaki overalls.

They dig deep trenches in French pastures, march with shovels over their shoulders with the precision of trooping the color on the king's birthday.

They have a snap and dash even in battle dress. They mount guard in the dark streets of French towns as smartly as they do in London.

Their blockhouses are models of neatness. Te sergeant who left half a loaf of bread on top of a gasoline tin got a bawling out from the major.

Populated Centers Avoided.

Civil guards and police lined highways over which the Russians traveled. The troops were said to have been forbidden to communicate with the inhabitants and every effort was made to prevent accidental contacts.

The Estonian press and the national radio maintained silence on details of the troop movement. Sales of alcoholic beverages was prohibited in the areas occupied by the Russians.

The Soviet troops were reported moving along two routes, chosen to avoid thickly populated centers in Estonia.

The Soviet troops were said to be picked men, selected for their dependability. Most of the force was reported to consist of armored units and motorized infantry.

Telephone communication between Helsinki and Tallin, the Estonian capital, was strictly limited. Only messages to the Foreign Office, Defense Ministry or Foreign Legations were permitted.

Soldiers as Propagandists.

MOSCOW, Oct. 19 (A. P.).—Picked Russian troops, well versed in communist ideology, proceeded on schedule through Estonia today to occupy military bases granted by the little Baltic nation to her huge Eastern neighbor.

Dispatches to Tass, the official Russian news agency, from Tallinn said that the soldiers were received in a friendly manner when they started their march yesterday.

Soviet newspapers reported that movie films, literature and linotype machines were being taken along with the army of occupation, as well as the best military machinery, to impress the Estonians with the efficiency of the Red Army.

Greeted at Frontier.

The Russo-Estonian pact, concluded on September 28, gave Russia the right to establish naval bases on the islands of Oesel and Dagoe and the mainland port of Paldiski.

Soviet units took two routes, the Riga and Narva highways, and were met at frontier gateways by representatives of the Estonian general staff.

The first Red forces crossed the border after an exchange of salutes and bands played the Estonian national hymn and the Internationale.

Soviet Forces Enter Estonia

18 Warships at Tallinn as Russian Troops March In Bearing Propaganda.

HELSINKI, Oct. 19 (A. P.).—Russian troops and naval forces swiftly took possession today of military bases granted them in Estonia, with their exact movements cloaked in censorship.

As Soviet soldiers marched into Estonia from two border points and twenty-one Russian warships appeared in Estonian ports, the little country's new Prime Minister, Juri Uluots, announced that national defenses will be strengthened.

Soviet authorities said that the appearance of the extraordinary number of warships, in addition to several submarines and troopships, was necessary when transporting troops and provisions to new bases. Observers said that eighteen warships were in Tallinn harbor, which is less than 100 sea miles from Helsinki, Finland's capital.

Care Taken to Bar Clashes.

Some Russian troops sped across the country in troop trains which stopped at few stations in their trip to the new military bases.

No disorders were reported. Only small groups of Estonians gathered to watch the marching soldiers and military trains.

Soviet camera men were busy photographing the entrance of the troops. Other camera men were barred.

Prime Minister Uluots outlined his Government's new program in a speech to Parliament. He promised various social reforms, including more authority for provincial Estonian governments and an increase in the general wage scale.

Extraordinary precautions were taken against disorders in transporting the Soviet troops.

Incidents in European Conflict

LONDON, Oct. 19 (AP)—The Air Ministry announced tonight that a German balloon had landed in Scotland with the message, "Warning! Danger! Death!" and was being subjected to expert analysis. The announcement follows:

"A German balloon has reached Britain balloon headquarters for expert examination. The balloon landed in a field of stubble at Cruden, near Cruden Bay, Aberdeenshire, and was found by a farmer, Peter Knowles.

"Attached to the balloon was a long wire cable, which became entangled with the Grampian Electricity Supply Company's overhead cables. It cut off the local electricity supply for ten minutes and the electric current caused the balloon to burst.

"Police found attached to the balloon a waterproof envelope with a typewritten message in German, 'Warning! Danger! Death! Do not touch the wire or rope if lying over an electric cable! Do not smoke or light a fire near the balloon, there is danger of explosion!'

"The finder was asked to inform an address in Germany. A reward was offered. Farmer Knowles is still thinking over this final point."

Nazis Report a General Swam the Vistula River

Feat Credited to Von Reichenau in Polish Campaign

BERLIN, Oct. 19 (AP).—One of Germany's military leaders, Col. Gen. Walther von Reichenau, was so anxious to cross the Vistula River during the Polish war that he swam.

The incident was revealed in the daily war records of German troops from Saxony which were made public today.

It was recorded that on Sept. 13 the German advance was held up at Annapol, on the Vistula, by Polish destruction of a bridge. Engineers were throwing a pontoon bridge across as they observed three men swimming toward the Polish side and pulling a small raft.

Their clothing was on the raft, which they pulled ashore as they landed. The red insignia of a German general was on one uniform.

It was learned later the uniform belonged to Reichenau.

Pilsudski Kin Is Arrested By Russians as a Plotter

Poles Reported Using Convents to Plan Counter-Revolt

MOSCOW, Oct. 19 (AP).—An unidentified relative of the late Polish dictator, Marshal Joseph Pilsudski, has been arrested by Soviet Russian authorities at Lwow (Lemberg) as a counter-revolutionary, the army newspaper, "Red Star," reported today. Former Polish officers, including [illegible] of Pilsudski, were seized despite disguises, the newspaper said.

The report asserted many former Polish officers and capitalists in the territory taken over by the Soviet Union were hiding in convents which had been "converted into arsenals where counter-revolution is being planned." Twelve machine-guns and numerous bombs were found in one convent, the dispatch stated.

NORDIC NATIONS TO STAY NEUTRAL, WORK FOR PEACE

No Mention Made of Help for Finland as Talks End in Stockholm.

STOCKHOLM, Oct. 19 (A. P.).—Finland's President and the Kings of Sweden, Norway and Denmark agreed today "that collaboration [illegible] to complete neutrality."

The northern Government heads also reaffirmed their willingness "to act for the cause of reconciliation" in the European war, in an official communique issued on the results of their two-day conference ending this afternoon.

No specific mention of any support for Finland in her negotiations with Soviet Russia was made in the communiques.

It read in part:

"The northern governments recall their willingness to act for the cause of reconciliation . . . they will with deepest satisfaction greet every sign of any possibility for an understanding between belligerent Powers . . ."

Express Appreciation to U. S.

As the conference ended, the three kings and Finland's Chief Executive expressed appreciation of the support given by President Roosevelt and Latin American States.

The communique said that the governments would continue to collaborate and will follow "their policies which were successfully followed in 1914-1918."

Finland's dangerous situation, due to demands from Russia in line with the latter's Baltic expansion, formed the theme of the broadcast by President Kyosti Kallio of Finland.

"A powerful neighbor has put forward for solution questions of a very serious character, and Finland feels grateful for the diplomatic support received from others in this connection," he said.

[President Roosevelt sent a personal message to President Kalinin of the Soviet Union expressing hope that [illegible]ds on Finland would not endanger peace of Finland's independence.]

"I trust that God will hold his protecting hand over the peace-loving people of Finland and hope that our neighbor in the east will respect our integrity and freedom and refrain from making demands which are inacceptable."

The Words of Three Kings.

King Gustav of Sweden, in speaking of the results of the conference, told his radio audience:

"The meeting has confirmed the similarity of the policies of the four Nordic countries. We will cooperate to live as free nations, safeguard our rights and establish peace."

"We have again ascertained our common interests," said King Christian of Denmark, in comparing the conference with the Malmoe meeting of 1914, in which Norway, Sweden and Denmark expressed their common neutrality policies.

King Haakon of Norway declared:

"We have discussed collaboration, both spiritual and material and believe our co-operation has found a new firm basis, so that we can look forward to the future with a hope that we will meet all difficulties."

Communique Is Promised.

A hint of developments came late in the day, when it was announced that a communique on the conference, scheduled for release at 3:30 P. M. (9:30 A. M. New York time) would be delayed until evening, to make certain changes in the text.

Immediately after the meeting, President Kallio and Foreign Minister Eljas Erkko of Finland left for the airport, where a special plane was waiting to take them back to Helsinki.

In high political quarters, an "optimistic" attitude was held on the outcome of the conference called by eighty-one-year-old King Gustav, although there was no indication of any specific action by the four countries.

Observers were struck by the spectacle last night of President Kallio standing arm in arm with the three kings on a balcony of the Royal Palace.

Crowds Pray at Churches.

A great throng of Stockholm citizens, estimated by police to exceed 100,000, gathered to cheer. The crowd shouted repeatedly, "Kallio, Kallio," in a tribute to Finland.

Cheering for the Kings, too, the crowd broke up [illegible] "A Mighty Fortress Is Our God." En route home many of the enthusiastic but thoughtful citizens paused at churches to pray for Finland—and for their own country.

Although optimism regarding the Finnish question was enocuraged in official quarters, nothing had yet been disclosed as to the exact nature of Russia's demands.

Military Pact Proposal Rumored.

HELSINKI, Oct. 19 (A. P.).—Hint of a Soviet Russian proposal for a military assistance pact with Finland was seen today by many observers studying the statement made by President Michael Kalinin of the Soviet Union to President Roosevelt.

While watching the Stockholm conference of Finland, Sweden, Norway and Denmark these observers pointed to the final paragraph of Kalinin's reply to American inquiries concerning Russian aims.

It said that the sole aim of negotiations with Finland was "consolidation of the reciprocal relations between the Soviet Union and Finland and a strengthening of friendly co-operation between both countries in the cause of guaranteeing the security of the Soviet Union and Finland."

The belief was expressed that Dr. Juho Kustil Paasikivi, the Finnish Envoy who came home to report on preliminary conferences with Russia, would not return to Moscow before tomorrow.

In the meantime, it was learned definitely, after a series of contradictory reports, that residents of southwestern Finland were voluntarily leaving a large area near the Russian border. Several thousands were reported to have gone to the district of Heinola, fifty miles north of Helsinki, and other thousands to the Province of Savo.

Strengthening Defenses.

Although those from the southeast and from Viipuri and Helsinki were encouraged by the Government to stay away from their homes, officials said they saw no obstacle to continued residence on islands in the Gulf of Finland. In Viipuri, Lieut.-Gen. Harald Oehquist, commander of Finland's eastern military forces, said the Fihns were taking advantage of every minute to strengthen their defenses, although hoping peace would continue.

Troops have been augmented, he said, on the Karelian isthmus, the half-Russian, half-Finnish strip between the Gulf of Finland and Lake Ladoga. Connecting with Leningrad, it would be a natural route for any southeastern attack on Finland.

German officials in Helsinki were reported preparing to volunteer to transport German citizens back to the fatherland if a general exodus should become necessary. (The repatriation of Germans from other Baltic countries already is under way. A Berlin announcement said that three ships carrying 1,500 to 2,000 Germans were due tomorrow at Gotenhafen [illegible] Polish port of Gdynia.)

Get Report on Estonia.

Extraordinary precautions against disorders as Soviet Russian troops began marching into Estonia were reported today when first accounts of the movement penetrated a wall of official silence and censorship.

Civic guards and police, these accounts said, lined highways over which the Russians traveled en route to military bases the Soviet was granted recently under a mutual assistance pact with her little Baltic neighbor. The troops were said to have been forbidden to communicate with the inhabitants and every effort was made to prevent accidental contacts.

The Estonian press and the national radio maintained silence on details of the troop movement. Sales of alcoholic beverages was prohibited in the areas occupied by the Russians.

The Soviet troops were reported moving along two routes, one column from Leningrad and another over the military road from Pskow. Both the routes, it was said, were chosen to avoid thickly populated centers in Estonia. The movement began early yesterday.

Bands struck up first the Estonian national anthem, then the Internationale and the march was on.

[Dispatches from Copenhagen said the Russians were "enthusiastically welcomed by the Estonians."]

The Soviet troops were said to be picked men, selected for their dependability. Most of the force was reported to consist of armored units and motorized infantry.

Telephone communication between Helsinki and Tallin, the Estonian capital, was strictly limited. Only messages to the Foreign Office, Defense Ministry or Foreign Legations were permitted.

New Soviet-Latvian Treaty.

MOSCOW, Oct. 19 (A. P.).—Soviet Russia's growing influence in the Baltic was extended today by a new trade agreement with Latvia, one of three little northern States already linked with their powerful neighbor by mutual assistance pacts.

Tass, Soviet official news agency, which announced signing of the agrement, said that it provided for a three-fold increase in trade between the two countries.

Russian [illegible] the Arctic port of Murmansk and to Black Sea ports were made available to Latvian commerce, Tass said, while a large extension of Soviet shipments to Latvian ports was authorized.

Russian negotiations with Finland remained in a state of suspension pending the return, possibly this week end, of a Finnish mission.

Balkan Conference Urged.

BUDAPEST, Oct. 19 (A. P.).—A conference of the neutral nations of southeastern Europe similar to the Stockholm conference of northern neutrals was suggested today by newspapers in several Balkan countries.

The [illegible] was announced here, in Belgrade and in Bucharest that the six small Powers in this corner of Europe—Hungary, Rumania, Yugoslavia, Greece, Turkey and Bulgaria—have interests in common as much as the northern countries.

Belgrade newspapers suggested that Italy might be interested in such a plan.

FINLAND HAILS DECLARATION OF SOLIDARITY

Russ Demands To Be Discussed Today In Light Of Stockholm Parley

Soviet Forces Swiftly Take Over Military Bases In Estonia

[By the Associated Press]

Helsinki, Oct. 19—Finland's capital received with satisfaction tonight the Stockholm declaration by the heads of the four Nordic states of their close solidarity in preserving their neutrality.

Official comment was lacking on this move and also on the failure of the declaration to mention the Finnish-Russian negotiations. One authoritative source said, however, this latter point was without significance since the statement in its references to neutrality and independence covered the principles of the Moscow negotiations.

Back To Moscow Tomorrow

A Government spokesman said Juhu Kusti Paasikivi, head of the Finnish delegation dealing with Soviet officials, probably would not leave for further conferences in Moscow until Saturday night.

Foreign Minister Eljas Erkko, who remained in Stockholm to continue discussions with the Foreign Ministers of Norway, Denmark and Sweden, was expected to fly back to Helsinki tomorrow.

Government circles were pleased by the enthusiastic reception given President Kyoesti Kallio in the Swedish capital. This was taken as further indication of cooperation among the northern states in presenting a common front to the world.

Finnish Government officials will hold another session tomorrow to discuss the Russian negotiations in the light of the Stockholm conference.

One hundred miles across the Baltic in Estonia, meanwhile, Soviet troops and naval forces swiftly took possession of military bases granted them in Estonia, but their exact movements were shrouded in censorship.

Russian soldiers marched into Estonia from two border points and twenty-one Soviet warships lay in Estonian ports along with a number of submarines and troop ships. Eighteen of the war ships were reported in Tallinn harbor.

Soviet officials said the presence of so many ships was necessary for transporting troops and provisions to the new bases.

Estonia To Tighten Defenses

No disorders were reported. Only small groups of Estonians gathered to watch the marching soldiers and passing military trains.

In a speech to Parliament, Estonion Prime Minister Juri Uluots announced the little country's national defenses would be strengthened. He also promised various social reforms, including more authority for provincial Estonian governments and an increase in the general wage scale.

Nordic Rulers Thank Americas For Support

Stockholm, Oct. 19 (AP)—One of the last acts of the conference of rulers of North European nations was to express thanks to the United States and other American republics for their messages of moral support. This gratitude was expressed in broadcasts by King Gustaf of Sweden, King Christian of Denmark, King Haakon of Norway and President Kyoesti Kallio of Finland.

BY WADE WERNER

STOCKHOLM, OCT. 19-(AP)-A CONFERENCE OF NORTHERN NEUTRAL COUNTRIES HELD IN THE SHADOW OF THE RUSSIAN-FINNISH CRISIS ENDED TODAY WITHOUT DEFINITELY PROMISING FINLAND ANY MATERIAL AID.

A JOINT COMMUNIQUE ISSUED AFTER THE TWO-DAY MEETING OF THE KINGS OF NORWAY, SWEDEN, AND DENMARK AND THE PRESIDENT OF FINLAND STRESSED THEIR UNITY BUT CONTAINED NO SPECIFIC MENTION OF THE FINNISH PROBLEM.

OCT 20 1939

OFFICIAL QUARTERS EMPHASIZED THE CONFERENCE HAD NO MILITARY CHARACTER.

"OUR STRENGTH IS NOT IN SHIPS OR RUNS OR PLANES," A SPOKESMAN FOR ONE PARTICIPATING COUNTRY SAID. "WE HURL NO CHALLENGE IN DIRECTION OF ANY POWER. OUR STRENGTH IS IN OUR TRADITION, IN OUR VALUE TO THE COMMUNITY OF NATIONS AND OUR APPEAL TO REASON."

INDICATIONS OF THIS MORAL STRENGTH WERE SEEN IN THE MESSAGES OF SUPPORT RECEIVED FROM PRESIDENT ROOSEVELT AND OTHER AMERICAN REPUBLICS.

KING GUSTAF OF SWEDEN, IN A REPLY TO ROOSEVELT AND THE LATIN AMERICAN PRESIDENTS' MESSAGE, CABLED HIS "WARM AND SINCERE APPRECIATION" OF THEIR "VALUABLE SUPPORT OF OUR EFFORTS TO CONTINUE OUR NEUTRAL POLICY BASED ON INTERNATIONAL LAW."

AS KALLIO HURRIED TO AN AIRPORT IN THE COMPANY OF KING GUSTAF FOR HIS RETURN TRIP TO HELSINKI, EVEN THE EXACT NATURE OF RUSSIAN DEMANDS ON THE TINY BALTIC COUNTRY REMAINED A SECRET.

THE CAUTIOUSLY WORDED APPEAL FOR A EUROPEAN PEACE IN THE COMMUNIQUE ECHOED THE SENTIMENTS EXPRESSED EARLIER BY KING GUSTAF, WHO VOICED HOPE THE NORTHERN COUNTRIES WOULD BE GIVEN AN OPPORTUNTY TO "COOPERATE FOR THE REESTABLISHMENT OF PEACE AND FOR THE REMOVAL OF GRAVE DIFFERENCES WHICH PRESENTLY SEPARATE BELLIGERENT STATES."

IN DISCUSSING THE MESSAGES RECEIVED FROM PRESIDENT ROOSEVELT AND OTHER AMERICAN REPUBLICS, THE CONFERENCE COMMUNIQUE DECLARED:

"THESE MESSAGES ARE HIGHLY APPRECIATED IN NORTHERN COUNTRIES. STATES REPRESENTED AT THE MEETING HAVE IN THESE MESSAGES FOUND VALUABLE SUPPORT IN THEIR EFFORTS TO FURTHER PEACE AND INTER-NATIONAL JUSTICE."

KALLIO'S BROADCAST AT THE END OF THE CONFERENCE DEALT WITH THE RUSSIAN-FINNISH NEGOTIATIONS ONLY IN THE MOST GENERAL FORM.

"I TRUST THAT GOD WILL HOLD HIS PROTECTING HAND OVER THE PEACE-LOVING PEOPLE OF FINLAND AND HOPE THAT OUR NEIGHBOR IN THE EAST (RUSSIA) WILL RESPECT OUR INTEGRITY AND FREEDOM AND REFRAIN FROM MAKING DEMANDS WHICH ARE INACCEPTABLE," KALLIO SAID SOLEMNLY.

(ADVICES FROM HELSINKI SAID KALLIO ARRIVED HOME SAFELY.)

HULL EXPLAINS SUBMARINE BAN

Says It Was Prompted by Intensification of War.

SEES LIMIT AS THREE MILES

Now Studying Related Question of Armed Merchantmen.

OCT 20 1939

WASHINGTON, Oct. 19 (A. P.)--Secretary Hull said today that President Roosevelt had barred submarines of belligerent nations from American ports because war-like conditions appeared to be developing on an increasing scale.

Mr. Roosevelt, by putting into effect a provision of the neutrality law, prohibited such vessels from using American ports or territorial waters except when unforeseen circumstances, such as storms, force them to shelter.

The Secretary of State said that he was giving attention to the related question of armed belligerent merchantmen, but he did not indicate what action might be taken.

He said he considered the territorial waters referred to in the President's proclamation as the three-mile limit. There has been no indication from Latin American nations that they were taking identical action, he added. The question was discussed at the recent Inter-American conference. That conference decided to leave the matter up to individual countries.

Informed persons said they did not believe such craft would be barred. They pointed to the recent agreement by the United States and twenty other American republics which said that belligerent armed merchant vessels should not be considered as warships under certain conditions.

President Roosevelt's proclamation yesterday which related solely to submarines said that only "force majeure" would permit an exception to the prohibition. That phrase would apply to storms and unforeseen damage.

International law experts said that it also would apply to a submarine fleeing from an enemy warship. They said that situation also was a type of "force majeure" because it was something above the ability of the commander of the submarine to prevent.

OCT 20 1939

Likewise, if a submarine were damaged by shellfire from an enemy cruiser, it could take refuge in American ports, they said. They emphasized, however, that the submarine in all cases would have to depart within twenty-four hours or be interned.

AUSTIN DECLARES VICTORY OF ALLIES NECESSARY TO U. S.

Borah Asks Vermont Man What He Means by 'Winning'

OCT 20 1939

WASHINGTON, Oct. 19 (A. P.).—Senator Austin, Republican, of Vermont, declared today that a Franco-British victory in the European war was "necessary to promote the peace and the security of the United States."

And then under the verbal pounding of critical colleagues he gave this definition of an Allied victory:

"I mean," he said, "the stopping of aggression, the stopping of penetration of our country with the ideas that undermine our Government, the stopping of events that might lead to occupation of Canada, the islands off our coast and of Latin America by totalitarian nations engaged in efforts to dominate the world."

Mr. Austin made his assertion in reply to an argument by Senator McCarran, Democrat, of Nevada, during debate on the neutrality bill. Mr. McCarran said proponents of the administration measure who wished to take sides in the European conflict had lost sight of efforts to keep the United States neutral.

He recalled that Senator Austin had announced that he was supporting the legislation because he believed it would aid Great Britain and France in their war with Germany.

"I have no apologies to make for my stand," Mr. Austin said. "I think it is necessary to promote the peace and security of the United States that the Allies win and the quicker they win the quicker we will have security."

OCT 20 1939

Questioned by Borah.

Senator Borah demanded that Mr. Austin define what he meant by "winning."

"It might be winning if we could arrive at a just peace without any more conflict," Mr. Austin replied.

When Mr. Borah asked whether Mr. Austin meant the kind of winning that would satisfy the United States or the kind that would satisfy Great Britain and France, Senator Austin gave his definition.

Senator McCarran said he thought that "once we lay down the bars and open the door (by repealing the embargo) we must go the full way." Mr. Austin replied, however, that he believed this Government was capable of repealing the embargo as a sort of adjunct to its national defense without losing its ability to keep out of the war.

Senator Barkley, Democrat, of Kentucky, asserted earlier in the debate that Senator Borah engaged in a "fantastic resort to the imagination" when he told the Senate recently that repeal of the arms embargo might be followed by Nazi-inspired attacks on American arms factories.

Twits Borah on Prophecy.

Arguing for the adoption of the administration's neutrality legislation, the Senate Democratic leader twitted Mr. Borah, an opponent of the measure, for his prophecy last summer that there would be no war in Europe. Mr. Barkley obviously was referring to Mr. Borah's statement to a White House meeting last July when legislative leaders agreed to postpone action on neutrality legislation in the last session of Congress.

"The able Senator from Idaho, for whom we all entertain the deepest affection and respect, told us the other day in his eloquent and unquestionably sincere address to the Senate that if we lift the embargo and permit even foreign vessels to come here and obtain arms intended for one of the belligerents, Hitler will come or send his agents here to destroy the factories in which arms are being manufactured," Mr. Barkley said. "This seems to me to be a fantastic resort to the imagination."

The Kentuckian said that such an act on the part of a foreign government would be punishable by domestic laws, adding: "It would be as logical to say they would destroy our wheat fields or poison our livestock because bread and meat might find their way to England and France."

"This prophecy of the Senator is based on no sound foundation," he went on. "It has not been long since I heard the Senator from Idaho vehemently prophesy that there would be no war in Europe this year.

"Much as I admire and respect the intellect and the character of the Senator from Idaho, I am afraid he will be compelled to reestablish my faith in him as an infallible prophet before I can accept his prediction that Hitler or any other belligerent will blow up our factories and destroy our industries because they produce articles which both his enemies and he can obtain if they will come for them and take them away."

Mr. Borah declared in a Senate speech opposing repeal of the arms embargo that "the spy, the dynamite and the air bomb will have standing invitations to visit the munitions plants" if the sale of arms to belligerents were permitted. He contended that Germany would strike at the source of munitions destined for Great Britain as well as attempting to sink them in transit.

McCarran Challenges the Press.

Senator McCarran began the fourteenth day of debate on the neutrality question with a plea to the press to correct what he described as an error in popular thinking brought about by "fallacious propaganda."

"This propaganda has become so insidious and so far-flung that the fellow on the street now believes it—that you can't have an embargo on the sale of arms and the cash and carry, too," Mr. McCarran declared.

"Press of America, where do you stand?" Mr. McCarran shouted, turning his eyes toward the press gallery. "You who mold public opinion, arise to the situation, because the situation is yours, and clarify this error."

The Nevada Senator said he per- general idea that cash and carry general idea that cash and carry s worth while as regards other than those things that destroy human lives."

New Ship Rules Agreed On.

Final agreement to permit American vessels to carry all goods other than armaments to some ports of belligerents was reached today by a group of Democrats on the Foreign Relations Committee.

In general, the amendments approved by the group would permit shipping to those ports in the Pacific and Indian oceans, the Bay of Bengal and the Arabian Sea. Surface vessels also could operate to all ports in the South Atlantic which are situated south of 30 degrees north latitude provided they did not carry armaments to belligerents. The line 30 degrees north latitude runs through New Orleans.

American aircraft could operate to all ports in the Western Hemisphere. They could visit Bermuda and Newfoundland—stopping points which would be barred to surface vessels.

Shipping to any section could be prohibited if the President proclaimed a "combat area" around certain ports. Different combat areas could be designated for surface vessels and aircraft. Senator Pittman, chairman of the Foreign Relations Committee, explained that "submarines might make an area dangerous to surface vessels while there would be no danger at all to aircraft.."

Travel Provisions Unchanged.

Mr. Pittman said that nothing in the new amendments would relax provisions of the administration neutrality bill forbidding American vessels and travelers from going to belligerent countries in Europe.

An amendment was approved to prohibit credits to any individual or company in a belligerent nation purchasing armaments in this country. The Democratic committeemen previously had decided to eliminate a provision permitting belligerent governments to obtain credits up to ninety days on armament purchases.

Senate leaders agreed informally to wind up the wide-open debate on the neutrality bill this week and begin consideration of amendments on Monday.

Senator Barkley and Senator Nye, Republican, of North Dakota, one of the leaders opposing the administration legislation, reported that this would be the procedure.

Meanwhile, seven opposition Senators, meeting in the office of Senator Johnson, Republican, of California, discussed the possibility of offering united resistance to the proposed relaxation of shipping control provisions in the "cash and carry" section of the bill.

Says House Will Keep Embargo.

ST. LOUIS, Oct. 19 (A. P.).—Representative Hamilton Fish of New York, ranking Republican member of the House Foreign Affairs Committee, predicted today in an interview that repeal of the arms embargo would be defeated in the House by a majority of twenty votes.

Mr. Fish, who said he expected to lead the fight against repeal in the House, qualified the prediction by saying it might depend on a mounting public opinion "against the unmoral, un-Christian and vicious system of selling arms for blood-stained dollars."

PLAY OFFENDS GERMANY

Envoy Complains to Hull on 'Margin for Error'

WASHINGTON, Oct. 19 (AP)—Dr. Hans Thomsen, German Chargé d'Affaires, complained to Secretary Hull today that an anti-Nazi play which opened here this week was derogatory to Germany.

The play is "Margin for Error" by Clare Boothe. The villain is a German [illegible] and the hero a Jewish policeman.

At the German Embassy it was stated that Dr. Thomsen's letter was not a formal diplomatic protest.

The first secretary of the embassy, Herbert von Strempel, told reporters that "we recognize that your government is not responsible for the statements of playwrights; we simply wish to draw the State Department's notice to the character of this play."

THE CHIEF OF THE DELEGATION, ANDREJS BERZINS, PRESIDENT OF LATVIA'S DEVELOPMENT BUREAU, EXPLAINED THAT THE "WAR IN WESTERN EUROPE MAKES DIFFICULT LATVIAN COMMUNICATION WITH MANY MARKETS, THEREFORE ENLARGEMENT OF OUR ECONOMIC RELATIONS WITH A COUNTRY ALWAYS IMPORTANT IN OUR FOREIGN TRADE IS ONLY LOGICAL IN THE PRESENT CIRCUMSTANCES.

"THE AGREEMENT ASSURES A SUPPLY OF IMPORTANT RAW MATERIALS WHICH SATISFY COMPLETELY LATVIAN DEMANDS AND MAKES IT POSSIBLE ALSO FOR US TO SELL MORE LATVIAN GOODS IN THE SOVIET MARKET, ASSURING NORMAL EXPORT OF THE PRODUCTION OF OUR AGRICULTURE AND INDUSTRY."

THE COMMERCIAL DELEGATION HAD BEEN IN MOSCOW SINCE OCT. 10.

WITH THE BRITISH EXPEDITIONARY FORCE IN FRANCE, OCT. 19-(PASSED BY FIELD CENSOR)-(AP)-SOME OF BRITAIN'S ROYAL AIR FORCE PILOTS--MOST OF THEM YOUTHS OF COLLEGE AGE AND ONE A CANADIAN--TOLD ME TODAY ABOUT THEIR FLIGHTS ACROSS THE GERMAN LINES THROUGH HEAVY FIRE TO SPOT THE ENEMY'S MOVEMENTS AND TAKE PHOTOGRAPHS OF THE TERRAIN.

"IT'S SOMETHING OF A JOB," ONE OBSERVED MODESTLY, DESCRIBING GERMAN ANTI-AIRCRAFT SHELLS SCATTERING WHITE MUSHROOMS OF SMOKE AROUND HIS PLANE.

HE WAS A YOUNG SLIM FELLOW WHO LOOKED AS IF HE OUGHT TO HAVE BEEN AT ETON FIELD INSTEAD OF FLYING ONE OF BRITAIN'S BIG BOMBERS ABOVE THE WESTERN FRONT.

"THREE OF US--ALL ENGLISHMEN--WENT OVER," HE SAID. "WE WENT UP UNDER PERFECT WEATHER CONDITIONS AND FLEW OVER THE LINES INTO GERMANY. WE WENT INTO A DIRTY BIT AND WERE FORCED LOWER. THIS WAS FINE FOR TAKING PICTURES, BUT ALSO FINE FOR THE GERMAN ANTI-AIRCRAFT GUNS.

"ALL HELL STARTED TO BREAK LOOSE AROUND OUR PLANE. SHE WAS JUMPING AROUND FROM THE CONCUSSION OF EXPLODING SHELLS. WE HAD AN AWFUL TIME KEEPING HER TRIM.

"WE HAD JUST ABOUT SUCCEEDED WHEN THEIR FIGHTERS HIT US. THEY CAME DOWN ON OUR TAIL AND OPENED FIRE ABOUT FOUR WING LENGTHS AWAY. THEY WERE MESSERSCHMIDTS AND I NEVER STOPPED TO COUNT THEM. ALL I KNEW WAS THE SKY SEEMED FULL OF THEM. WE DOVE DOWN TO GET AWAY AND IT WORKED. WE LOST THEM, TURNED AND HEADED BACK AND DIDN'T WASTE ANY TIME.

"WE DIDN'T HAVE ANY PICTURES, BUT WE WENT BACK A COUPLE OF DAYS LATER AND GOT THEM."

ANOTHER FLYER, A BIG SERGEANT WHO HAD BEEN IN THE AIR FORCE SINCE 1925, FOUND IT DOWNRIGHT BORING, HE SAID. SPEAKING WITH A THICK SCOTTISH ACCENT, HE RELATED:

"WE WENT OVER IN THE DAYTIME TO TAKE PICTURES. THE WEATHER WAS TERRIBLE AND WE COULDN'T SEE A THING. WE WENT DOWN LOWER AND IT WAS STILL BAD. ANTI-AIRCRAFT GUNS OPENED FIRE AT US AND MADE THE OLD GIRL WOBBLE LIKE A DISH OF JELLY."

I ASKED HIM IF HE HAD DROPPED ANY PAMPHLETS.

"I'M AN OLD HAND AT THAT," HE SAID. "I DROPPED THEM ON THE NORTH-WEST FRONTIER OF INDIA TEN YEARS AGO. BUT IT DIDN'T DO A DAMN BIT OF GOOD."

HE SAID THAT ON ANOTHER FLIGHT HE HAD GONE AT NIGHT, FLYING ABOUT THE SAME DISTANCE, AND THAT THE GERMAN SEARCHLIGHTS WERE INEFFECTIVE BEYOND 8,000 FEET.

"I COULD SEE RIVERS, BRIDGES AND FACTORIES CLEAR AS DAY," HE SAID.

ANOTHER YOUNGSTER TOLD OF A FLIGHT IN WHICH HIS BOMBER, WITHOUT FIGHTER AIRCRAFT ATTENDING, GOT A DOZEN PICTURES OF ROADS AND RAIL-

ROADS UNDER CONSTANT FIRE FROM GERMAN ANTI-AIRCRAFT GUNS. HIS ACCENT SOUNDED FAINTLY NON-BRITISH.

"I'M A CANADIAN," HE SAID, GRINNING. "BUT I WAS OVER HERE WHEN THE WAR STARTED AND BEING A CANADIAN FROM WINNIPEG, I OFFERED SERVICE. IT IS FINE TO BE WITH MEN FROM ALL OVER THE EMPIRE--CANADIANS, AUSTRALIANS, NEW ZEALANDERS, SOUTH-AFRICANS COMBINED WITH BRITISHERS --MAKES US FEEL SO MUCH BETTER. WASHINGTON, OCT. 19-(AP)-SUBMARINES OF BELLIGERENT NATIONS HAVE BEEN PROHIBITED FROM ENTERING AMERICAN PORTS OR TERRITORIAL WATERS EXCEPT WHEN UNFORESEEN CIRCUMSTANCES, SUCH AS STORMS, FORCE THEM TO TAKE SHELTER.

PRESIDENT ROOSEVELT PROCLAIMED THE BAN LAST NIGHT BY PUTTING INTO EFFECT A PROVISION OF THE NEUTRALITY LAW. ARMED MERCHANT VESSELS OF WARRING NATIONS STILL MAY ENTER AMERICAN PORTS AND WATERS.

MR. ROOSEVELT SAID THAT THE BAN WOULD SERVE TO MAINTAIN PEACE AND PROMOTE AMERICAN SECURITY. SUBMARINES FORCED TO ENTER AMERICAN WATERS, HE SAID, SHOULD DO SO WITH THEIR CONNING TOWERS AND SUPERSTRUCTURES ABOVE WATER AND WITH THEIR FLAGS FLYING.

EXPERTS EXPLAINED THAT THE PROCLAMATION WOULD PERMIT THE ENTRANCE OF BELLIGERENT SUBMARINES DURING VIOLENT STORMS, WHEN THEIR MACHINERY WAS DAMAGED, OR WHEN THEY SUFFERED LOSS OF FUEL OR PROVISIONS. IN SUCH CASES, THE VESSEL SHOULD NOT REMAIN IN AN AMERICAN PORT FOR MORE THAN 24 HOURS.

THE COMMANDER OF A SUBMARINE VIOLATING THE PROCLAMATION COULD BE TRIED UNDER THE NEUTRALITY LAW AND IF CONVICTED COULD BE SENTENCED TO FIVE YEARS IN PRISON AND A FINE OF $10,000. THE PROCLAMATION DID NOT SPECIFY WHAT WOULD BE DONE WITH AN OFFENDING SUBMARINE, BUT EXPERTS SAID THAT IT COULD BE INTERNED.

AMERICAN TERRITORIAL WATERS ARE DEFINED AS THOSE WITHIN THREE MILES OF SHORE. HENCE, ANY BELLIGERENT SUBMARINE FORCED TO TAKE SHELTER MUST RISE TO THE SURFACE WHEN IT ENTERS THE THREE-MILE LIMIT.

THE WHITE HOUSE AND OTHER SOURCES HAVE MADE PUBLIC SEVERAL REPORTS IN RECENT WEEKS OF FOREIGN SUBMARINES SIGHTED OFF THE AMERICAN COASTS. THEIR NATIONALITY WAS NOT DISCLOSED, NOR WAS IT MADE CLEAR WHETHER THEY WERE CONSIDERED TO BE WITHIN THE TERRITORIAL WATERS OF THIS COUNTRY.

WASHINGTON, OCT. 19-(AP)-FOR A BRIEF, FRANK INTERIM, THE SENATE'S NEUTRALITY DEBATE GOT DOWN TODAY TO WHAT MANY SENATORS CONSIDER THE ESSENTIAL QUESTION INVOLVED IN REPEALING THE ARMS EMBARGO--AND A POINT THAT HAS BEEN LARGELY AVOIDED IN NEARLY THREE WEEKS' DISCUSSION.

OCT 20 1939

THIS WAS THE ARGUMENT THAT THE BAN ON ARMS SHIPMENTS TO BELLIGERENTS SHOULD BE LIFTED TO HELP GREAT BRITAIN AND FRANCE WIN THE WAR AND THEREBY ELIMINATE ANY DANGER OF GERMAN AGGRESSION AGAINST THE WESTERN HEMISPHERE.

A REPUBLICAN SUPPORTER OF PRESIDENT ROOSEVELT ON THE NEUTRALITY ISSUE, SENATOR AUSTIN (R-VT), RAISED THAT QUESTION TODAY, AND IN DOING SO SET THE SENATE OFF TO A SHORT, EXCITED FLURRY OF

GIVE-AND-TAKE DEBATE.

WHILE SENATOR MCCARRAN (D-NEV) WAS ASSERTING THAT THE SUPPORTERS OF THE ADMINISTRATION BILL HAD LOST SIGHT OF THE OBJECTIVE OF NEUTRALITY AND INSTEAD WISHED TO TAKE SIDES, AUSTIN INTERRUPTED TO OBSERVE THAT "I THINK IT IS NECESSARY TO PROMOTE THE PEACE AND THE SECURITY OF THE UNITED STATES THAT THE ALLIES WIN."

SENATOR BORAH (R-IDAHO) WAS ON HIS FEET AT ONCE DEMANDING A DEFINITION OF THE WORD "WIN." AUSTIN REPLIED THAT "WINNING" MEANT STOPPING AGGRESSION AND HALTING EVENTS THAT MIGHT LEAD TO THE OCCUPATION OF CANADA OR NEARBY ISLANDS BY "TOTALITARIAN NATIONS ENGAGED IN EFFORTS TO DOMINATE THE WORLD."

AT THAT POINT SENATOR VANDENBERG (R-MICH) INQUIRED WHETHER AUSTIN'S ARGUMENT WOULD NOT LOGICALLY CALL FOR ACTIVE AMERICAN PARTICIPATION IN THE WAR IF LIFTING THE EMBARGO FAILED TO PRODUCE AN ALLIED VICTORY WITHIN A SHORT TIME.

BUT MCCARRAN WAS ANXIOUS TO GET ON WITH HIS SET ADDRESS AND TERMINATED THE EXCHANGE, WHILE BORAH, SMILING FAINTLY, REMARKED THAT HE DID NOT YET UNDERSTAND WHAT AUSTIN MEANT BY HIS USE OF THE WORD "WIN." MCCARRAN STATED HIS AGREEMENT WITH VANDENBERG.

THE FLURRY OF DEBATE FOLLOWED THE PERFECTION OF A SERIES OF AMENDMENTS BY DEMOCRATIC SUPPORTERS OF THE BILL, WHICH SENATOR PITTMAN (D-NEV) SAID VIRTUALLY REDUCED THE ISSUES BEFORE THE SENATE TO THE ONE QUESTION, WHETHER THE EMBARGO SHOULD BE REPEALED.

THE CHANGES RELAX THE RESTRICTIONS WHICH THE BILL, IN ITS ORIGINAL FORM, WOULD HAVE PLACED UPON THE OPERATIONS OF AMERICAN SHIPPING.

STOCKHOLM, OCT. 19-(AP)-FOLLOWING IS THE TEXT OF THE COMMUNIQUE ISSUED AT CONCLUSION OF THE CONFERENCE OF [illegible] NEUTRAL NATIONS TODAY: (ABOUT 500)

THE KINGS OF DENMARK AND ICELAND, NORWAY AND SWEDEN TOGETHER WITH THE PRESIDENT OF FINLAND HAVE TOGETHER WITH THEIR FOREIGN SECRETARIES BEEN UNITED AT A MEETING IN STOCKHOLM ON OCT. 18-19.

AT THE MEETING THEY DISCUSSED FIRST THE GENERAL POSITION SEEN

IN THE POINT OF VIEW OF EACH COUNTRY. DIFFICULTIES WHICH UNDER PRESENT SERIOUS INTERNATIONAL RELATIONS CAN ARISE THROUGH MAINTENANCE OF THE RIGHT TO DECIDE THEIR OWN NEUTRAL POSITION, AS CLAIMED BY THESE COUNTRIES, AND WHICH THEY HAVE CONFIRMED AT THE OUTBREAK OF THE WAR THROUGH THEIR DECLARATIONS OF NEUTRALITY WERE FIRST DISCUSSED.

THE GOVERNMENTS AGREE THEY WILL, THROUGH CLOSE COLLABORATION, ADHERE TO COMPLETE NEUTRALITY. THEY ARE GOING TO LET THEIR ATTITUDE BE DECIDED BY THEIR EFFORTS TO MAINTAIN A NEUTRAL POSITION IN COMPLETE FREEDOM.

THEY CLAIM THAT THIS STAND WHICH HAS BEEN BUILT ON PEACEFUL RELATIONS WITH OTHER POWERS SHOULD BE RESPECTED FROM ALL SIDES.

IN REMEMBRANCE OF THE DECLARATION WHICH WAS ISSUED BY THE NORTHERN KINGS AT THEIR MEETING IN OSLO IN 1917--SAYING THAT HOWEVER LONG THE WAR IS GOING TO LAST AND WHICH SHAPE IT MIGHT TAKE, THE FRIENDLY AND CONFIDENTIAL RELATIONS BETWEEN THESE KINGDOMS SHOULD BE MAINTAINED--THE PRESENT MEETING AGREED THAT DENMARK, ICELAND, NORWAY, FINLAND AND SWEDEN UNDER PRESENT CONDITIONS OF WAR WILL FOLLOW THAT LINE OF THEIR POLITICS WHICH WAS SUCCESSFULLY FOLLOWED IN 1914-1918.

THE MEETING FURTHER DISCUSSED DIFFICULTIES WHICH HAVE HIT TRADE SHIPPING OF NEUTRAL COUNTRIES IN CONSEQUENCE OF MEASURES OF BELLIGERENT STATES. THEY DECIDED TO REMAIN IN COLLABORATION AND MAINTAIN THE TENETS OF THE COPENHAGEN COMMUNIQUE SEPT. 19 ON THE MAINTENANCE OF TRADITIONAL TRADE CONNECTIONS ON ALL SIDES AND MUTUAL SUPPORT IN ORDER TO SECURE NECESSITIES OF POPULATIONS.

THEY AGREE TO CONTINUED COLLABORATION WITH THE OSLO GROUP AND WITH NEUTRAL STATES IN ORDER TO MAINTAIN COMMON INTERESTS.

ON OCCASION OF THE MEETING, THE KING OF SWEDEN RECEIVED MESSAGES OF SYMPATHY FROM CHIEFS OF STATE IN NEUTRAL STATES IN THE AMERICAS. THESE MESSAGES ARE HIGHLY APPRECIATED IN NORTHERN COUNTRIES. STATES REPRESENTED AT THE MEETING HAVE IN THESE MESSAGES FOUND VALUABLE SUPPORT IN THEIR EFFORTS TO FURTHER PEACE AND INTERNATIONAL JUSTICE.

THE NORTHERN GOVERNMENTS RECALL THEIR WILLINGNESS TO ACT FOR THE CAUSE OF RECONCILIATION WHICH WAS EXPRESSED AT THE OUTBREAK OF THE WAR THROUGH THEIR CHIEFS OF STATES IN ADHERENCE TO THE PEACE APPEAL OF KING LEOPOLD. THIS WILLINGNESS EXISTS UNCHANGED. THEY WILL WITH DEEPEST SATISFACTION GREET EVERY SIGN OF ANY POSSIBILITY FOR AN UNDERSTANDING BETWEEN BELLIGERENT POWERS AND CONDITIONS FOR NEUTRAL CONTRIBUTION TOWARDS ATTAINMENT OF PEACE AND SECURITY OF ALL NATIONS.

BY THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

TURKEY, WHICH SIDED WITH GERMANY IN THE WORLD WAR, HAS A TRAINED ARMY OF 1,000,000 BACKED BY A LARGE FORCE OF RESERVES. THE RESERVE FORCE INCLUDES WOMEN.

THE WAR TODAY

BY DEWITT MACKENZIE

TURKEY'S MILITANT REJECTION OF RUSSIA'S DEMANDS, WHICH OBSERVERS GENERALLY REGARD AS CALCULATED TO GIVE THE SOVIET CONTROL OF SOUTHEASTERN EUROPE, IS LIKELY TO HAVE A VITAL BEARING ON THE TREND OF THE WAR.

IT'S BEEN LONG SINCE THE TURK GOT REALLY TOUGH, BUT HE CERTAINLY GAVE A STRIKING DISPLAY OF OLD-TIME INDEPENDENCE IN DEFYING THE MIGHT OF MOSCOW.

THIS DEVELOPMENT MARKS AT LEAST A TEMPORARY SWING OF VAST IMPORTANCE TOWARD THE SIDE OF THE ANGLO-FRENCH ALLIES.

Oct 20 1939

BY THE SAME TOKEN IT IS REGARDED IN LONDON AND PARIS AS A BAD BLOW TO THE NAZIS.

IT MEANS THAT THE ONRUSHING FLOOD OF SOVIET INFLUENCE HAS STRUCK A BARRIER IN THE LOWER BALKANS.

IT MAY EASILY PRESAGE THE RISE OF TURKEY AGAIN TO A COMMANDING POSITION IN THE BALKANS AND NEAR EAST--A TURKEY WHICH ONCE COULD CALL THE BALKAN PENINSULA A POSSESSION, AND WAS PRETTY MUCH LORD OF ALL IT SURVEYED.

THAT RATHER DEPENDS ON THE BREAK OF LUCK. THE TURKEY WHICH PLAYED AND LOST WITH IMPERIAL GERMANY IN THE WORLD WAR IS MAKING A BIG NEW GAMBLE.

WHAT HAS HAPPENED (TO CONFINE THE THING TO THUMB-NAIL) IS THAT TURKEY, HAVING REJECTED THE SOVIET PROPOSALS, IS REPORTED TO BE ABOUT TO FORMALIZE PACTS WITH ENGLAND AND FRANCE FOR MUTUAL AID IN EVENT OF WAR IN THE EASTERN MEDITERRANEAN.

PROVISIONS OF THE AGREEMENT ARE SAID UNOFFICIALLY TO INCLUDE TURKISH ASSISTANCE IF THE ANGLO-FRENCH ALLIES ARE CALLED UPON TO FULFILL THEIR GUARANTEES TO PROTECT RUMANIA AND GREECE FROM AGGRESSION.

ON TOP OF THAT TURKEY INTENSIFIED HER PRECAUTIONARY MILITARY MEASURES. SIMULTANEOUSLY THERE ARRIVED IN TURKEY GENERAL MAXIME WEYGAND, COMMANDER-IN-CHIEF OF THE FRENCH FORCES IN THE EASTERN MEDITERRANEAN ZONE, AND LIEUT.GENERAL ARCHIBALD WAVELL, COMMANDER OF THE BRITISH LAND FORCES IN THE MIDDLE EAST. THEY WERE ACCOMPANIED BY OTHER MILITARY EXPERTS.

IT WAS SAID THE COMMANDERS WOULD PARTICIPATE IN THE SIGNING OF THE PROJECTED PACT. ALSO THERE WOULD BE MILITARY CONSULTATIONS. THE ATMOSPHERE WAS ALMOST THAT OF TURKEY HAVING ENTERED THE ALLIED CAMP.

Oct 20 1939

THE IMPORTANCE OF THIS LIES IN THE FACT THAT TURKEY IS ONE OF THE MOST VITAL SPOTS STRATEGICALLY ON THE GLOBE. THE COUNTRY STANDS ASTRIDE THE DARDANELLES AND IS INTERNATIONALLY ACKNOWLEDGED GATE-KEEPER OF THESE FAMOUS STRAITS WHICH CONNECT THE MEDITERRANEAN WITH THE OTHERWISE LAND-LOCKED BLACK SEA. AND TURKEY NOT ONLY IS GATE-KEEPER BUT MASTER HERE SO LONG AS IT IS ABLE TO DEFEND ITS

30.24 - 4155

30.24-4155

POSITION.

NOW IT IS AN AXIOM THAT HE WHO CONTROLS THE DARDANELLES--OVER WHICH NNNLON HAVE FOUGHT FOR CENTURIES--ALSO CONTROLS THE EASTERN MEDITERRANEAN AND THE LANDS UPON IT. NO WONDER THEN THAT TURKEY HAS BEEN EAGERLY SOUGHT AFTER IN RECENT MONTHS BY GERMANY, ENGLAND, FRANCE AND RUSSIA.

THE GREAT TURKISH DICTATOR, KEMAL ATATURK, WHO DIED A YEAR AGO AFTER PERFORMING THE MIRACLE OF PUTTING HIS DECADENT COUNTRY SQUARELY ON ITS FEET IN SIXTEEN BRIEF YEARS, HAD LAID DOWN A POLICY OF "TURKEY FOR THE TURKS," FRIENDSHIP WITH ALL THE ALLIANCES WITH NONE.

HOWEVER, I WAS TOLD IN ISTANBUL AT THE TIME OF HIS DEATH THAT HE WAS ANTI-GERMAN AT HEART, REGARDED RUSSIA WITH INDIFFERENCE, FEARED ITALY BECAUSE OF HER SUPPOSED AMBITIONS TO EXPAND INTO ASIA MINOR, DISLIKED FRENCH POLICIES WHICH HE REGARDED AS TOO CHANGEABLE, AND IN THE LONG RUN PINNED HIS FAITH TO ENGLAND.

THIS WAS REFLECTED IN A REMARK MADE TWO YEARS AGO BY DR.TEVFIK RUSTA ARAS, THEN FOREIGN MINISTER, WHO SAID IN EFFECT: "BRITAIN MAY HAVE LOST A BATTLE OR TWO, BUT SHE NEVER LOST A VITAL WAR. WE STAY WITH HER."

THAT BRINGS US UP TO THE BEGINNING OF THE WAR. WHEN RUSSIA ASTONISHED THE WORLD BY SHAKING HANDS WITH HER BITTER ENEMY, GERMANY, TURKEY TOOK A HEADER INTO THE CYCLONE CELLAR TO GET A CHANCE TO FIND WHERE THE WIND WAS COMING FROM.

WHEN THE SWEEPING RUSSIAN PROPOSALS WERE LAID DOWN BEFORE THE TURKS, HOWEVER, THE FIGHTING SPIRIT OF THE FAMOUS ATATURK TOOK CHARGE WITH THE RESULT THAT THE DEMANDS WERE REJECTED.

AUTHORITATIVE QUARTERS IN TURKEY SAID THE DEMANDS INCLUDED RECOGNITION OF THE PARTITION OF POLAND, FORMATION OF A NEUTRAL BALKAN BLOC UNDER RUSSO-GERMAN AUSPICES AND TERRITORIAL EXPANSION OF RUSSIA AND BULGARIA AT THE EXPENSE OF RUMANIA. THE RUSSIANS ALSO WERE REPORTED TO WANT THE DARDANELLES CLOSED TO THE ANGLO-FRENCH ALLIES.

THE RUMANIAN SCHEME AND THE PASSAGE OF THE DARDANELLES NATURALLY WENT HAND IN HAND. THE ONLY WAY ENGLAND AND FRANCE COULD GET MATERIAL AID TO RUMANIA WOULD BE VIA THE BLACK SEA ON WHICH THAT BALKAN COUNTRY LIES.

THE IDEA OF A RUSSO-GERMAN SPONSORED BALKAN BLOC ALSO COULDN'T HELP IRKING TURKEY, WHICH NOT ONLY WANTS THE BALKANS TO RUN THEIR OWN AFFAIRS, BUT HAS HERSELF BEEN TAKING AN INCREASING LEADERSHIP AMONG HER NEIGHBORS.

THE UPSHOT OF THE BREAKDOWN OF THE RUSSO-TURKISH NEGOTIATIONS WOULD APPEAR TO BE THAT THE TURKS ARE REASSERTING THEMSELVES. IF THEY HAVE MADE A SHREWD CHOICE OF POLICY, THEIR INFLUENCE IS LIKELY TO SPREAD RAPIDLY, FOR THAT PART OF THE WORLD IS LOOKING FOR LEADERSHIP.

TURKEY'S RELATIONS WITH HER NEIGHBORS ARE REGARDED AS GOOD. NOT ONLY IS SHE LEADER IN THE BALKAN ENTENTE--TURKEY, YUGOSLAVIA, GREECE AND RUMANIA--BUT IS DOMINANT IN A PACT WITH IRAN, IRAQ AND AFGHANISTAN.

French Say Turkish Pact Is a Blow to Germany

Hail Treaty as Giving Them Control of Reich's Back Door

PARIS, Oct. 19 (AP).—French spokesmen said tonight that the new French-British-Turkish treaty gave the Allies control of Germany's back door—the Dardanelles—in case the war should spread to the Balkans.

The pact was hailed by the French as an outstanding diplomatic victory. Commentators here said it was a diplomatic defeat for Germany which might have military repercussions. Germany had hoped, these observers said, to use the traditional Russo-Turkish friendship as a means of obtaining a free hand in the Balkans.

Premiere Edouard Daladier outlined the pact at a three-hour Cabinet meeting which was held today with President Albert Lebrun presiding. The diplomatic and military situation was reviewed in detail at the meeting.

Sirens Sound in Edinburgh Area—False Alarm Is Given in South of England—Lack of Reprisals Is Criticized.

EDINBURGH, Oct. 20 (A. P.).—Two air raid warnings were sounded and precautionary measures were taken against the threat of German planes over the important Firth of Forth today, but the Air Ministry said that no bombs had been reported dropped.

An air raid warning also was given in the south of England later in the day, but within eight minutes the all-clear signal was sounded.

The British Press Association said it was believed that the warning in the south of England had been given in error. Only one or two sirens sounded and they were heard over a small area. No aircraft were seen.

Text of Air Communique.

The communique for the second bombing menace in the Edinburgh area in five days and the fourth menace to Scotland, including two at Scapa Flow, read:

"Precautionary measures were taken when unidentified aircraft appeared over the Firth of Forth this morning and air raid warnings were sounded at about 11 A. M. (5 A. M. New York time) over the district. No bombs were reported to have been dropped and the 'all clear' was given within an hour.

"A second air raid warning was sounded shortly afterward. A further bulletin will be issued in due course."

The later communique said that "a number of aircraft believed to be German attempted to make reconnaissances in the Firth of Forth area during the morning and early afternoon."

Alarm Extended to Dundee.

The planes disappeared before contact by Royal Air Force fighters, which took off to intercept them, the communique said, adding that the first alarm was extended to Dundee, about forty miles north of Edinburgh.

"No raid developed" during the second alarm, the communique said.

German bombers on Monday at the Firth of Forth scored their first admitted aerial hit of the war on a British warship, slightly damaging the cruiser Southampton.

The phrase "precautionary measures," in the first of today's communiques clearly referred to the defending British aircraft which went aloft.

The warnings were fairly general over a broad area of southeastern Scotland. Four rapid bursts of anti-aircraft fire were heard in Edinburgh before the air raid sirens were sounded.

Edinburgh People Calm.

A third warning was given in one section, it was understood to remedy the fact that in this particular part of the countryside a mechanical fault had led to premature sounding of an all-clear signal.

Edinburgh people took the alarm calmly, despite their experience of Monday, and defending aircraft stood by over the $15,000,000 Firth of Forth Bridge.

Some residents who had the impression that the Germans were flying at a great altitude because of the tactics of the defenders lingered in the streets to see if there would be any exchange of fire such as occurred on Monday.

The Nazi invaders flew so high and defending aircraft apparently took up the pursuit so rapidly that no bombs were dropped in populated centers.

Gunfire was heard and civilians saw British aircraft before air-raid sirens were sounded. Within thirty minutes, however, an all-clear signal was given in part of the area which had been put on the alert and by noon the alarm had been lifted throughout the area.

A region about fifty miles broad was involved in the first alarm, but the invaders' objectives were believed to have been the same as on Monday.

Guns Heard Before Sirens

The Air Ministry formally announced that the first air raid warning was sounded early this morning in the Firth of Forth district where Monday, German bombers scored their first admitted aerial hit of the war on a British warship, slightly damaging the cruiser Southampton.

The Nazi invaders flew at extremely high altitudes and defending aircraft apparently took up the pursuit so rapidly that no bombs were dropped in populated centers.

Gunfire was heard and civilians saw British aircraft before air raid sirens were sounded.

Alarm Lifted By Noon

By noon the alarm had been lifted throughout the region.

A region about 50 miles broad was involved in the first [illegible], but the invaders' objectives were believed to have been the same as during the spectacular attack on the Edinburgh and Firth of Forth area Monday.

(German warplanes struck twice also on Tuesday at the Scapa Flow base of Britain's fleet, in the Orkney Islands off the Northern Scottish coast, damaging the training ship Iron Duke, and ranged over the east coast of England and Scotland in widespread scouting raids.)

WAR IN THE AIR

[By the Associated Press]

Edinburgh, Scotland, Oct. 20—Three air raid alarms were sounded in quick succession in part of Scotland today as British warplanes and anti-aircraft guns fought off a German air attack.

The first alarm sent the populace of southeast Scotland racing for cover in the early morning.

The all clear signal had ended the first before the second warning, which lasted only ten minutes and also had been lifted before the sirens sent civilians into air-raid shelters for the third time. A half hour later, all

BRITAIN AVOIDS RUSSIAN CLASH

Diplomats Note London Is Keeping Off Bear's Toes.

BOTH IN POLAND AND TURKEY

New Ankara Pact and Stand by Butler on Warsaw Cited.

Robert Bunnelle

LONDON, Oct. 20 (A. P.).—Diplomats noted with keen interest today fresh indications that Great Britain was carefully avoiding stepping on the toes of Russia, despite the latter's close ties with Germany.

They pointed to the protocol to the British-French-Turkish mutual aid pact signed yesterday which frees Turkey from any obligation to fight Russia and to the statement of Foreign Under-Secretary Butler that Great Britain's military pact with Poland did not apply to any Russian aggression.

Mr. Butler told the House of Commons yesterday, in reply to a question as to whether the pact was intended to cover the case of aggression by Powers other than Germany.

"No, sir. During the negotiations which led up to the signature of the agreement, it was understood between the Polish Government and his Majesty's Government that the agreement should only cover the case of aggression by Germany; and the Polish Government confirm that this is so."

Not a European Power.

Diplomats emphasized, in discussions of the newly signed Turkish pact, that it avoided any attempt to "stir up trouble between Russia and Turkey."

The treaty, operative for fifteen years, provided for mutual military aid against aggression or war in the Mediterranean by any European Power. Russia, in diplomatic language, is not a European Power.

British sources asserted that Great Britain had this in mind, even before Turkey began talks with Russia, which recently reached an impasse.

Mr. Butler's statement recalled an editorial in the authoritative Times of London on September 30, which asserted that Great Britain's relations with Joseph Stalin would be decided "by events" and made the point that the [illegible] of the Russo-German [illegible] in Poland restricted the Russian share, so that the Soviet in the main took over only White Russians and Ukrainians. The editorial was interpreted then as foretelling a willingness not to insist on the restoration in every respect of the Poland of 1939.

Nazis Are Held Stymied.

In diplomatic quarters it was said that the treaty with Turkey might tend to bring the Balkan States more closely together and lessen tension between them. These sources said that Great Britain always had favored any steps to enable the Balkans to get together in their common interest.

Great Britain counted Germany twice a loser—stymied both by the treaty with Turkey and by bad weather on the Western front.

Responsible British comment argued that the treaty signed at Ankara had blocked penetration of German influence in the Balkans, particularly Rumania.

"In a nutshell, if Germany attacks Rumania or Greece, Turkey will be in on our side," the News Chronicle put it.

See Protection for Palestine.

Among the strategical and practical advantages expected by British diplomatic circles were:

1. Increased protection for British interests in Egypt and Palestine;
2. The maintenance of Turkey's role as guardian of the Dardanelles, strategic gateway to the Black Sea.
3. A pacifying effect on the Balkan situation.
4. Strengthening of Finland and other northern countries in negotiations with Russia because of Turkey's success in "standing up" to the Soviet.

Lack of Reprisals Criticized.

LONDON, Oct. 20 (A. P.).—The Weekly Spectator sounded today a note of criticism at the lack of air attacks on German military objectives by British planes.

"Policy has muzzled them," the Spectator said.

"What is impossible to understand is the policy that turns our airmen into an express postal service"—a reference to leaflet raids over Germany.

"Why are they not allowed to attack military objectives?"

High British military authorities said today that one of the most significant developments of last week was the operation of British anti-aircraft guns in the raids at the Firth of Forth and Scapa Flow by German bombers.

They asserted that shooting down of eight or thirty or forty attacking war planes by comparatively green gunners was indicative of the accuracy of the British aircraft defense batteries. They added that it is expected the standard of firing of anti-aircraft gunners will improve immeasurably with practice.

Inspection by Royalty.

Meanwhile King George and Queen Elizabeth made a two-hour tour of balloon barrage sites in London today, the British Press Association said in a dispatch passed for publication.

The King and Queen gazed into the sky, tracing the balloon cable up to the balloon. The King wore the uniform of Marshal of the Royal Air Force.

At another site their Majesties saw a defense balloon on the ground being refilled with gas. Next they visited the central cook house for the area. The male cooks told the Queen the dish on the fire was braized steak. She asked to see it and pronounced it very good.

The King and Queen also saw a balloon moored in a football ground. Here an officer discussed with his Majesty the difficulties of lowering these balloons in bad weather. "It is just like playing and landing a big fish, sir," the officer explained, and the King nodded.

The royal couple saw a balloon in a narrow square and his Majesty complimented the personnel on the skill in handling the balloon in such a restricted area.

High officers of the balloon command explained to the King the experiments carried out by the R. A. F. to determine how enemy aircraft attempting to get through the balloon barrage might fare. The King was told that important developments have recently taken place in the technic of making the barrage more effective.

Lack of Air Attacks Noted

LONDON, Oct. 20 (AP).—The weekly "Spectator" today sounded a note of criticism at the lack of air attacks on German military objectives by British planes.

"Policy has muzzled them," "The Spectator" said.

"What is impossible to understand is the policy that turns our airmen into an express postal service"—a reference to leaflet raids over Germany.

"Why are they not allowed to attack military objectives?" the paper asked.

Britain to Send More Troops.

LONDON, Oct. 20 (A. P.).—Prominent British military authorities indicated today that the allies were "digging in for the winter" on the theory that every passing day of comparative quiet on the western front was in their favor.

Among the points brought out at a British War Office conference were:

That the flow of British troops to France is continuing and may increase shortly.

That the British regard the fact that British and French troops are now under the united command of Generalissimo Maurice Gustave Gamelin as a big step toward waging effective war.

And, that the allies have not ruled out the possibility of an attack by Germany through Belgium and the Netherlands and have their forces and strategy attuned to take care of such a contingency if it should arise.

THESE QUARTERS SAID ONE OF THE MOST SIGNIFICANT DEVELOPMENTS OF THE PAST WEEK WAS THE OPERATION OF BRITISH ANTI-AIRCRAFT GUNS IN THE RAIDS AT THE FIRTH OF FORTH AND SCAPA FLOW BY GERMAN BOMBERS.

THEY ASSERTED THAT SHOOTING DOWN OF EIGHT OF 30 OR 40 ATTACKING WARPLANES BY COMPARATIVELY "GREEN" GUNNERS WAS INDICATIVE OF THE ACCURACY OF THE BRITISH AIRCRAFT DEFENSE BATTERIES.

OTHER POINTS BROUGHT OUT AT A BRITISH WAR OFFICE CONFERENCE WERE:

THAT THE FLOW OF BRITISH TROOPS TO FRANCE IS CONTINUING AND MAY INCREASE SHORTLY.

THAT THE STANDARD OF FIRING OF ANTI-AIRCRAFT GUNNERS IS EXPECTED TO IMPROVE "IMMEASURABLY" WITH PRACTICE.

English Open Letters.

LONDON, Oct. 20 (A. P.).—The Ministry of Economic Warfare said today that mails of neutral nations, including the United States, passing through British contraband control bases were searched for contraband and then "forwarded to their destinations."

The Ministry made its statement when asked about reports in Washington that American mail intended for Germany had been seized, censored, then returned to America by the British.

"In no case has it been (the mails) been returned to their country of origin unless there has been a special request from the dispatching office," the Ministry declared.

The British Ministry asserted that examination of mails was "fully authorized under international law," and added that "letters may, for instance, contain money, which is absolutely contraband, or essential commodities may be packed in a large number of parcels."

Allied "Waiting Wall" Buttressed By British

London, Oct. 20 (AP)—On the western front today, Britain buttressed the Allied "waiting wall" with fresh troops and counted as a gain every day of mud and every delay of a possible wide-scale German offensive.

British military authorities disclosed that the flow of troops which put 158,000 British soldiers on French soil in the first five weeks of the war had been continued.

Allied armies gradually being strengthened were described as digging in for the winter in the blockade by land and sea to starve Germany out.

Approach Of Winter Hailed

Reviewing the minor "experimental" actions of the week, one authority declared:

"We are one week nearer winter. Each week makes the chance of German large-scale operations that much less."

He added that "if we ever expect to win this war" the military resources of the whole empire must be developed. He disclosed that ministers from the dominions would map such developments at a London conference.

Rail Wages Boosted

On the home front a national tribunal awarded railway workers the 50 shillings (about $10) a week minimum they asked in a strike which was threatened just before the war broke out but which was called off.

The award is subject to acceptance by the workers and employers. It would involve wage increases totaling nearly £1,000,000 (about $4,000,000).

About 350,000 Lancashire cotton workers were granted 2½ per cent. wage increase under agreements reached at Manchester.

The Board of Education started school children gathering acorns and beech nuts to feed pigs. A memorandum sent to 10,000 rural schools said acorns were more nourishing than oats and beans.

TREATY REACTION

[By the Associated Press]

London, Oct. 20—Great Britain counted Germany twice a loser today—stymied both by the signing of a British-French mutual assistance pact with Turkey and by bad weather on the Western Front.

Responsible British comment argued that the treaty signed at Ankara last night and blocked penetration of German influence in the Balkans, particularly Rumania.

The Pact In A Nutshell

"In a nutshell, if Germany attacks Rumania or Greece, Turkey will be in on our side," the News Chronicle put it.

Military observers declared that continuing heavy rains on the Western Front, meanwhile, greatly lessened the chances of succes for any sudden German offensive.

The Treaty's Terms

In diplomatic circles, far-reaching implications were read into the Turkish treaty. By the pact, operative for fifteen years, Britain and France must help Turkey if she is the victim of aggression by "A European Power" or if aggression by a European Power leads "to war in the Mediterranean area in which Turkey is involved."

In return, Turkey must help the Western Allies if the act of aggression by a "European Power" leads to war in the Mediterranean area or if the United Kingdom and France become engaged in hostilities through their guarantees to Greece and Rumania.

Russia Outside Pact

Turkey, however, cannot be compelled to honor any pledges that would involve her in war with Russia, and the Allies would not be called on to fight Russia if she attacked Turkey. In diplomatic language, Russia is not a European power.

Diplomatic observers assumed, however, that there was no likelihood of a Soviet attack. A Turkish-Russian non-aggression pact has existed since 1925.

Four Advantages Seen

Members of Parliament, who loudly cheered Prime Minister Chamberlain's announcement of the pact, acclaimed it as a comeback for British diplomacy after the Russian-German non-aggression pact.

Among the advantages expected by British diplomatic circles were:

1. Increased protection for British interests in Egypt and Palestine.
2. The maintenance of Turkey's role as guardian of the Dardanelles, strategic gateway to the Black Sea.
3. A pacifying effect on the Balkan situation.

Blames Ribbentrop

4. Strengthening of Finland and other northern countries in negotiations with Russia because of Turkey's success in "standing up" to the Soviet.

The London Times attributed the [illegible] suspension of the Turkish-Russian talks to "clumsy intervention" by German Foreign Minister Joachim von Ribbentrop.

"Ribbentrop's diplomacy," the Times said, "has become as erratic as it has always been mischievous, and his latest effort has only resulted in what is regarded even in Italian political circles as 'a diplomatic victory for the Allies.'"

British Believe Reich Hid Losses in Poland

Considered Much Heavier Than Listed by Nazi Sources

LONDON, Oct. 20 (AP).—The British Foreign Office announced today that a "reliable neutral source" had informed it that "there was every reason to believe that German losses in men and material during the Polish campaign were much heavier than appeared from official German sources."

[Adolf Hitler announced in his Reichstag speech of Oct. 6 that German casualties in Poland were 10,527 killed, [illegible] wounded and 3,404 missing.]

The Foreign Office announcement added:

"It is said that tanks and mechanized vehicles in particular suffered severely, and of those which survived, a large number are in need of repair and will not be fit for service again for some months.

"According to the same source, the Polish air force acquitted itself with quite remarkable courage. Pilots whose planes were disabled hardly ever attempted to escape by parachute, but deliberately crashed into one of the German machines attacking them so that both might be destroyed together."

LONDON RIDICULES LINDBERGH IN DITTY

Audience Cheers as Song at Show Lampoons Speech

LONDON, Oct. 20 (Canadian Press).—The audience interrupted a performance at the Gate Theatre last night to cheer a song lampooning Colonel Charles Lindbergh and others.

One verse of the song, which was aimed at various prominent persons, went like this:

Then there's Colonel Lindbergh,
Who made a pretty speech.
He's somewhere in America,
We're glad he's out of reach.

Lord Marley Criticizes Lindbergh for Address

Colonel 'NotQualified' toSpeak on Embargo, Briton Says

TROY, Oct. 20 (AP).—Lord Marley deputy speaker of the British House of Lords, said today that Col. Charles A. Lindbergh was "not qualified" to make political comments of international questions growing out of the European war.

Addressing the annual convention of the New York State Teachers' Association, eastern zone, he asserted that Col. Lindbergh "may have contributed much to the science of aviation, but that doesn't necessarily qualify him as an expert or even a near-expert on international questions."

In a recent radio address, Col. Lindbergh urged retention of an embargo on "offensive weapons."

Lord Marley declared that Col. Lindbergh's public announcement of German airfleet superiority over Russia was one of many factors which helped break down the "peace front" then being launched in Europe.

Pointing out that he had arrived in Moscow on a diplomatic mission a day after Col. Lindbergh's nine-day tour of Russia, Lord Marley said that the flyer passed most of his time "seeing theaters and art galleries," and, therefore, "did not have much time to study Russian aviation."

Lord Marley suggested that the Untied States stay out of the war and "maintain a philosophic calm."

"United States will make its great contribution when the war is over," he explained. "When the European nations are exhausted, the United States can step in and exert all its energies to achieving a just peace."

French Shell German Road

Artillery Seeks to Break Up Concentration of Nazis on Western Front.

PARIS, Oct. 20 (A. P.).—French artillery today shelled the German road from Perl to Sehndorf, just across the frontier near Luxemburg, in an effort to break up troop concentrations at the point where the Germans spilled over onto French soil earlier in the week.

Tonight's communique said:

"Patrol and reconnaissance activity between the Moselle and the Saar. We made a few prisoners. Local artillery activity in the same region. All quiet generally on the front east of the Saar."

The latest military information said that troop action was slow because of heavy rains and German reorganization of the lines which they seized when the French went on the defensive and withdrew from territory in front of the Siegfried Line. The general staff reported that last night had been quiet as rain continued on the western front and only patrols were active.

In announcing a prearranged withdrawal along a twenty-two-mile northern sector of the front for distances up to six miles, the French high command said that its losses were light and that the line was "far in advance" of the permanent Maginot fortifications. One officer and fifty men, outflanked in a German maneuver which began on Thursday, all were either killed or captured, military [illegible] related.

Diplomatic Activity.

They said the patrol, operating in a muddy advance area, became cut off from its own lines, but the enemy finally broke through and captured those not already killed. A communique said that the lost French patrol defended itself bravely.

On the diplomatic side the French press hailed the new Anglo-French pact with Turkey. Gen. Maxine Weygand, commander-in-chief of French forces in the Eastern Mediterranean, and Lieut.-Gen. Archibald P. Wavell, British Middle East commander, are conferring with Turkish military men in Ankara on implementing the pact.

Leon Blum, former Premier and Socialist leader, who declined to participate in the war Cabinet of Premier Daladier, again called for the return of the Parliament and criticized the French censorship, which, he said, had been suppressing his articles on the subject of recalling Parliament. Other French leaders who have opposed any recall have pointed out that at least 200 Deputies are mobilized and that the Communist members either are under arrest or in hiding.

Breton Party Dissolved.

M. Blum, in an article in Le Populaire, said that he had been warned to avoid topics likely to cause a domestic political fight, but that he refused to obey.

By official decree [illegible] Sarraut, Minister of the Interior, dissolved the national Breton party, which officials long have held responsible for terrorist acts against the Government in northwestern France. The party headquarters at Rennes was closed.

The last incident laid to the Breton autonomists was a bombing in Quimper prefecture on February 27.

TERROR TALES TOLD BY U-BOAT SURVIVORS

300 From Two British Ships Landed By U. S. Freighter

Some In Serious Condition From Hours In Cold Seas

[By the Associated Press]

Bordeaux, France, Octfl 20—Tales of terror and suffering were told tonight by many of the 300 survivors from two British steamers sunk by a submarine Tuesday in the Atlantic about 500 miles off the Spanish coast.

Those who could manage it sang "God Save the King" and "My Country 'Tis of Thee" as Capt. D. J. McKenzie brought the rescue ship, the American freighter Independence Hall, into port.

Some of the survivors were barefoot. Many of them had suffered heavily from exposure. Long rows of ambulances were drawn up and a corps of nurses was waiting when the small freighter steamed into the harbor.

67 Estimated Lost

A revised estimate was that sixty-one persons lost their lives in the sinking six or seven in the sinking half an hour later of the City of Mandalay.

Scores of the survivors were carried off the ship on stretchers and taken to hospitals.

An American steward on the Independence Hall himself collapsed from overwork when the ship reached port and he ealso was hospitalized.

All those rescued were English and East Indians en route to England. A number were i na serious condition from hours in the cold seas in lifebelts.

Many children were among them, and a few English soldiers.

Sub Appears During Rescue

About sixty passengers aboard the Independence Hall themselves got a bad case of jitters when a submarine appeared near the freighter as it was engaged in the rescue of survivors from the City of Mandalay at dusk Tuesday, they related tonight.

Some of those rescued said that the City of Mandalay and the Yorkshire were grouped with nineteen other ships bein[illegible] warships, but became separated from the convoy after one day out from Gibraltar.

A submarine described by British passengers as German first struck at the 10,000-ton Yorkshire after following it all day. That was between 3 and 4 P. M.

A half hour later the submarine struck at the 7,000-ton City of Mandalay.

More Than 300 Passengers

The number of passengers aboard the two was over 300.

The Independence Hall got an S O S about 4 P. M. Tuesday from the Yorkshire and shortly afterward another from the City of Mandalay.

Putting as much speed as possible on the freighter, Captain McKenzie's crew reached the City of Mandalay first, about forty minutes later.

Two of the Mandalay's lifeboats were awash, with scores of people floating in the heavy seas girded in lifebelts.

Found Ship Breaking In Two

By the time the freighter reached it the City of Mandalay was breaking in two. Rescue work took two hours because of the tremendous seas.

Tons of oil were thrown on the water.

A 4-year-old baby in a life belt was rescued, but its mother died.

As the sixty Independence Hall passengers did what they could to help and watched the terrorizing scene, a submarine believed the same as that which sank the English boats, suddenly emerged from the sea near the rescue freighter.

Both survivors and passengers aboard the rescue ship screamed their fright, the passengers said, but the submarine merely signaled, "How many have you saved?" It remained alongside a short time and then dived once more into the sea.

Sank In Nine Minutes

The weary crew of the Independence Hall then set out for the Yorkshire, but was unable to reach that spot until 10 o'clock Tuesday night.

The Yorkshire had sunk in nine minutes after it was torpedoed, the survivors said. Those rescued were in lifeboats. The victims long since had disappeared beneath the waves.

Brilliant moonlight aided the crew of the Independence Hall. The freighter, its accommodations already crowded with its own sixty passengers, took aboard approximately 300 more and then turned toward Bordeaux.

Women took turns sleeping in available cabins which the regular passengers deserted for the emergency. Many of them slept on floors. Bundled in blankets, the men slept on the open deck and in the carpenter shop. Others, less hardy, slept in the heat of the engine room.

PRECISE OFFICIAL FIGURES ON THE NUMBER OF SURVIVORS FROM THE SUNKEN SHIPS, THE CITY OF MANDALAY AND THE YORKSHIRE, WERE LACKING AS WELL AS THE NUMBER OF VICTIMS. ESTIMATES OF THOSE LOST RANGED FROM 16 TO 60.

Hitler Hears Papen on Pact

Fuehrer's Envoy Arrives in Berlin to Report on Allied-Turkish Treaty.

BERLIN, Oct. 20 (A. P.).—Adolf Hitler heard a report on the French-British-Turkish pact tonight from the lips of his ace diplomatic trouble-shooter, Franz von Papen, while leading Nazis insisted Turkey no longer could be considered neutral.

Ambassador von Papen, who was sent to Turkey last spring to further Nazi relations with Germany's world war ally, arrived today from Ankara, where the treaty was signed yesterday.

Meanwhile, Nazi officials professed to see a loophole in the pact—Turkey's reservation against being drawn into a war with Russia.

Dressmakers War On War

Paris, Oct. 20 (AP).—Parisian dressmakers declared war on war today, the first [illegible] time collection of models [illegible] on parade in gray and gold salons thronged with spectators.

This opening was the first concrete result of the dressmakers' efforts to combat war conditions that threatened to destroy their business and crush their initiative.

Blum Critizes Censorship

PARIS, Oct. 20 (AP).—The French high command's communique tonight said: "Patrol and reconnaissance activity between the Moselle and the Saar. We made a few prisoners. Local artillery activity in the same region. All quiet generally on the front east of the Saar."

The morning communique had said: "All quiet during the night. Rainy weather. Patrol activity on both sides at many [illegible]."

Former Premier Leon Blum, the Socialist party's leader who declined to join the "war cabinet" of Premier Edouard Daladier, called again today for the return of Parliament, and criticized the French censorship, which, he said, had been suppressing his newspaper articles on the subject. Other French leaders, who have opposed convening Parliament, have pointed out that at least 200 Deputies have been mobilized and that, in addition, the sia—but asserted the Turks had chosen a dangerous route.

No Berlin morning newspaper mentioned signature of the Anglo-Turkish mutual assistance pact, but authoritative quarters said Germany viewed the agreement with "critical eyes" in the fear it might hold the spark for a general war. However, they were quick to point out Turkish-Russian conversations for a similar pact were still considered open.

On a whole, the Nazi political world appeared stunned by the treaty.

German circles looked for repercussions in the Balkan countries. But how far Balkan neutrality would be affected was not yet clear, they said. The opinion was expressed here that the Balkans would see in Turkey's action a renunciation of desire to safeguard neutrality.

Can't Explain Action.

Germany was represented as utterly at a loss to explain the action of the Turkish Government. They called the pact contrary to Turkey's best interests.

Britain, informed persons asserted, would be unable to help Turkey under the new pact "even if she wanted to." They referred to the fate of Poland which also had been given a British guaranty.

"England cannot help Turkey any more than she helped Poland," they declared, one adding: "God help the Angolian peasants. There are no trees to hide behind when the bombers come. There were trees in Poland."

These Nazis, however, professed to see no immediate threat to Germany's strategic military position, despite the fact that the new treaty was interpreted as practically giving Germany's "chief enemy"—Britain—control of the Dardanelles.

It was learned that no official reaction would be forthcoming until after the return of the German Ambassador to Turkey, Franz von Papen, expected today.

BERLIN CALLS 3 ENVOYS FOR PACT REPORTS

Sorting Friends And Foes In Europe Overshadows War

[By the Associated Press]

Berlin, Oct. 20—Indications that Germany is prepared to continue fighting if her enemies are so inclined came tonight from authoritative quarters here.

DNB, official German news agency, said "England and France have rejected the Führer's outstretched hand. They threw down the gauntlet and Germany has picked it up."

It was said authoritatively that the Reich contemplated no concession to France.

NEUTRALS WARNED AGAINST CONVOYS

Germans Threaten to Sink Ships Escorted by Allies.

BERLIN, Oct. 20 (A. P.).—In the continuation of the war at sea, neutral vessels were warned by Germany today that they would risk being sunk if escorted by British or French warships.

Dienst aus Deutchsland, an authoritative commentary, disclosed that Germany had informed neutral countries that "according to internationally recognized laws of warfare" it was not permissible for their ships to travel in the convoy of belligerent vessels.

GERMAN COMMUNIQUE

Berlin, Oct. 20 (AP)—The German high command today issued the following communique:

"Quiet returned on the west after the conclusion of fights in the border region southeast of Saarbrücken.

"Except for local artillery and scouting troops' activity, no special occurences along the entire front."

Reich to Give Credits To Firms Hit by War

Action Is Taken to Prevent Many Bankruptcies

BERLIN, Oct. 20 (AP).—The German government instituted today a system of special short-term credits for businesses throughout the Reich which have been hard hit by the war. The purpose is to prevent bankruptcies and sharp disruptions of the national economy.

The plan was announced by Minister of Economics Walther Funk at the Vienna Fair. Funk pointed out that the totalitarian economy and rationing system had dealt a hard blow to many businesses.

He said textile producers were particularly hard hit, because of the restrictions on buying of textile products. Firms which are unable to shift immediately to war-time production are pinched, he said, while producers of luxuries also suffer.

Funk said credits would be made available to such firms to tide them over the emergency.

Furnaces Warm Nazi Pride

BERLIN, Oct. 20 (AP).—Great pride was expressed today in official circles here over the blowing of two blast furnaces at the Hermann Goering Iron Works at Linz. The works were founded two years ago with the intention of making them Germany's and Europe's largest.

See Rome Clinging to Neutrality.

ROME, Oct. 20 (A. P.).—Diplomatic quarters today interpreted an outward calmness in Rome toward the British-French-Turkish mutual assistance pact as further evidence of Italy's determination to remain outside the European war.

This calm contrasted sharply with violent attacks last summer when the pact was in the formative stage.

The treaty made Turkey a potential enemy in event of Italian military aid to Germany and it was suggested in some circles that Britain might take advantage of the situation to promote better relations between Italy and Turkey.

Diplomatic circles doubted that the development would throw Russians and Italians into each other's arms on terms similar to those between the Russians and Germans.

Italians were inclined rather to regard the treaty as a natural result of the collapse of Soviet negotiations with the Turks at Moscow. Neutral diplomats expressed the opinion that Italy would prefer to see any Russian expansion in the Balkans checked, since Premier Mussolini considers the Balkans within his sphere of influence.

Only in dispatches from abroad did newspapers indicate possible annoyance. Il Messaggero reported from Ankara that political circles there considered that Turkey had undertaken too much in agreeing to join the allies in war if Greece and Rumania called on Britain and France for aid.

Furthermore, Il Messaggero raised the question of whether the French and British would be able to aid Turkey more than they aided Poland.

In any event, they doubted that Italy would make any move, since she apparently was eager to keep the war out of the Mediterranean and had proclaimed a policy of no initiatives.

Indicative of apparent Italian indifference was the attitude of the press.

Italy Now Calm Over Turkey's Pact With Allies

Diplomats See Attitude as Indication of Continued Peace in Mediterranean

ROME, Oct. 20 (AP).—Italy received calmly today the news of the signing of the British-French-Turkish mutual assistance treaty, and the calm was interpreted by diplomats as a new indication of continued peace in the Mediterranean area.

This calm contrasted sharply with the violent attacks on the pact which were published last summer when it was first proposed. Fascists then condemned the prospective agreement as part of a French-British "encirclement" polic and as anti-Italian in effect. One newspaper at that time described the Turks as "traitors by nature."

The serenity with which Rome accepted the fact of the treaty—which makes Turkey a potential enemy if Italy should extend military aid to Germany—was taken by diplomats as further assurance that Italy was determined to stay aloof from the present war.

Some diplomatic quarters considered it possible that Great Britain might utilize the situation to promote better relations between Italy and Turkey. It was suggested that the two countries might be persuaded to exchange assurances of neighborly intentions and eliminate suspicions which have bred tension in the past.

In the absence of official or other comment on the treaty, foreign circles considered significant the wide publicity given to a French interpretation of the Italian attitude. According to this French view, Italy was favorably impressed by the failure this week of the Turkish-Russian conversations, because of her desire to see the status quo preserved in the Balkans. Rome was represented as envisioning the possibility of Italian-Turkish co-operation in maintaining the neutrality of southeastern Europe, for which Fascist diplomacy has striven vigorously since the war began.

Jewish Refugees' Home Is Sought In Ethiopia

Committee From Vienna Reaches Rome To Negotiate With Italian Government

Rome, Oct. 20 (AP)—A Jewish refugee committee with headquarters in Vienna arrived today to negotiate with the Italian Government for settlement of 30,000 homeless Jews in Ethiopia.

The committee, which was asserted to be officially recognized by Germany, said it hoped to arrange for an agricultural colony south of Lake Tana, together with an industrial community dedicated to the manufacture of finished goods from local products.

Italian authorities, who previously permitted the committee to visit Ethiopia and study the possibilities, now are considering the plan.

An American group was reported ready to finance the project with a $50,000,000 loan.

[By the Associated Press]

Bucharest, Oct. 20—Rumanian officials said tonight that the British-French-Turkish mutual-assistance treaty offers Rumania a guarantee against perils which have caused grave concern here in recent weeks.

They forecast a lessening of tension in the Balkans as a result of the treaty.

Soviet Russia, they said, apparently has no present intention of attacking Bessarabia, and they added that Bulgaria's efforts in behalf of the province of Dobruja (possessed by Bulgaria before the World War) would be limited to diplomatic action.

Titulescu Reports

Nicolas Titulescu, former Foreign Minister, who has returned to Rumania after three years' banishment, is understood to have presented to King Carol a report asserting that recent developments prove the wisdom of the foreign policy Titulescu followed before falling from power and concluding also that good relations with Soviet Russia are still possible.

It was learned authoritatively that Rumania shortly will add soy beans to her list of unexportable products.

This is expected to cause new unpleasantness with Germany since soy beans hitherto have been grown here only for export to Germany. Rumania will extract nitroglycerine from the beans for her own munitions needs.

Issue Complicated

Belief was expressed among neutral observers that the issue was being complicated further by strong diplomatic pressure from Berlin, Moscow, London and even Rome.

There was some belief that King Boris was sparring for time to see what positive effect the breakdown of Turkish-Russian negotiations would have on the Balkans.

Political quarters, whether extreme Left or extreme Right, were agreed on one thing—that Bulgaria's territorial claims on Rumania and Greece may be pushed or abandoned according to the leanings of the new Cabinet.

Bulgarian King Seeks To Form New Cabinet

[By the Associated Press]

Sofia, Oct. 20—Conferring in secret with representatives of every shade of political opinion in Bulgaria, King Boris II tonight continued his effort to form a new Cabinet whose nature may have an important bearing on the issue of war or peace for the Balkans.

Up to a late hour tonight, there was no indication that the monarch had been successful in his quest for a successor to the Government of Premier George Kiosseivanoff, which resigned yesterday.

Observers predicted the palace conferences would continue over the week end, with no announcement until Monday.

DELAY ON LITHUANIA

Kaunas, Lithuania, Oct. 20 (AP)—It was reported authoritatively today that the additional protocol of the Russian-Lithuanian pact, which details new boundaries, was not signed at Moscow yesterday as scheduled.

No reason was given. The belief was expressed that it would be signed tomorrow.

The additional protocol fixes frontiers of Wilno and surrounding territory, restored to Lithuania by Russia after having been a part of Poland. This return of the old Lithuanian capital was a consideration in signature of the Russian-Lithuanian mutual assistance pact.

TENSION IN BALKANS

[By the Associated Press]

Budapest, Oct. 20—Diplomatic circles of Southeastern Europe today saw the possibility of sharper cleavage between the "Status Quo" and "Revisionist" countries as a result of the British-French pact with Turkey, and predicted that "days of great tension are ahead."

At the same time fears that the pact might bring war to this area caused increased agitation in the press of many nations for what one paper called "some kind of Balkan Danubian federation of states to relieve tension and pressure."

How Nations Are Split

In Greece, Rumania and Yugoslavia the Turkish agreement with the Allies was seen as a bulwark against territorial demands of other countries.

In Hungary and Bulgaria, which are not forgetting their desire for return of such "lost territories" as Transylvania and Dobroja—lost to Rumania in the World War—there was unfavorable reaction to the clause allying Turkey with France and Britain if war should result over Greek or Rumanian guarantees.

Sofia dispatches attributed yesterday's Bulgarian Cabinet resignation directly to the need of a new national policy as a result of the Turkish action.

The Bulgarian press expressed the belief that that country's revisionist dreams were severely set back.

Hungarian papers, under strict Government control, devoted most of their columns to the treaty reactions of the entire world—except Hungary.

tions with Moscow, once interrupted, would not be concluded at the new conference.

The Cabinet went into session within an hour after Foreign Minister Eljas Erkko returned from the Stockholm meeting.

Newspapers generally voiced satisfaction with the outcome of the Stockholm meeting. The Huvudstadsbladet said that the conference had drawn the northern countries "together into one intimate family." Several papers continued to praise President Roosevelt and the American republics for their moral support in the present Finnish crisis.

In the only announcement on the nature of Russo-Finnish negotiations, President Kyoesti Kallio said that Russia had presented "questions of a very serious nature" for settlement.

Finns Ready to Fight.

A tour of certain eastern sectors of Finland, meanwhile, left no doubt for this correspondent that the Finns are ready, if necessary, to fight to defend their independence. The rocky forests of eastern Finland are filled with sturdy soldiers, laughing at cold October winds and actually hoping for snow.

At one city, twenty-four railroad cars marked with red crosses have been standing on a siding for days. Elsewhere, red crosses were painted on the roofs of houses, apparently intended for hospitals or medical supply depots.

On narrow roads winding among war, the army has taken over. In one farmhouse a peasant woman was working over her kitchen fireplace while a commanding officer was studying maps in the parlor, now his bedroom workroom. Other officers were at work in other rooms of the house.

Down the road about a mile were army tents in a woods. Inside straw had been thrown on the bare ground. Soldiers were sitting inside smoking and chatting. It was cold, but several said that they hoped that it would snow, and snow hard, because that would make any necessary defense easier.

Many Finnish soldiers are working eight hours a day on farms of residents, who voluntarily have left the area. In some eastern cities and villages more than half the civilian population has left.

FINLAND ALERT

[By the Associated Press]

Helsinki, Oct. 20—Finnish officials were called into conference today to discuss impending renewal of negotiations with Soviet Russia.

The background of the meeting, preparatory to the return to Moscow of Dr. Juhu Kusti Paasikivi, head of the Finnish delegation dealing with Soviet authorities, was the declaration at Stockholm of solidarity among the heads of the four Nordic states in preserving their neutrality.

Common Front Pleases

Finns were pleased by the Stockholm conference and by the reception given their President, Kyoesti Kallio, in the Swedish capital, regarding both as reaffirmation of a common front among the northern states.

It was believed Paasikivi, who returned here after a first series of conferences in Moscow, would leave again for the Russian capital tomorrow night.

A tour of "certain eastern sections" of Finland, meanwhile, left little doubt that the Finns are ready, if necessary, to fight to defend their independence.

Paasikivi To Submit Counter-Proposals To Soviet Russia

New Offers Expected To Reflect Will Of United Scandinavia

By LYNN HEINZERLING
Associated Press Correspondent

Helsinki, Oct. 20 — "Morally strengthened" after the Stockholm conference of the four Nordic states, Finland will send her former Premier, Dr. Juho Kusti Paasikivi, back to Moscow tomorrow for renewed negotiations expected to last not more than two or three days.

Paasikivi will leave at 11.20 P. M. with Finland's counter proposals to the Soviet Government, which were expected to reflect the will of the northern countries to steer clear of any entangling alliances and to protect their neutrality and independence at any cost.

Additional Envoy Likely

The fact that an additional delegate may accompany Paasiviki was viewed in some circles as significant, but authoritative sources indicated the discussion would not be concluded at the forthcoming meeting.

The same Government spokesman who said Paasiviki would stay no more than two or three days—because of the "character of the discussions"—declared that another delegate might be added to the party "to give it more authority."

He would not elaborate, but said the new member would not be Eljas Erkko, Foreign Minister. Erkko returned from the Stockholm conference after a last-minute meeting with Foreign Ministers of the other northern states—Sweden, Norway and Denmark—and spent the afternoon drafting instructions for Paasikivi.

Cabinet Summoned

He summoned the Cabinet into session within an hour after his return.

A Foreign Office spokesman said he knew nothing about reports the Russians were dissatisfied with the delay in the negotiations.

The spokesman said the situation was "not very much changed, but after the Stockholm conference we feel morally strengthened." He added that "support of President Roosevelt and other American countries was very much appreciated."

Asked if a possible additional delegate to the Moscow conference might be a member of the Government, the spokesman said: "I don't know about that." On the last trip a military and an economic expert accompanied Paasikivi.

Talks Not Mentioned

The fact that the Finnish-Russian negotiations were not directly mentioned in a communique issued after the Stockholm conference was considered of little importance here, where it was explained that to single out the Finnish difficulties might seem to detract from the united front of the northern nations.

Finland, with thousands of her citizens removed from the larger cities and frontier villages, remained in a state of military preparedness. Thousands of soldiers were concentrated on Finland's natural "Maginot Line" on the eastern frontier, which is made up of deep forests and acres of forbidding boulders, lakes and rivers.

ported today by the newspaper Aftenposten to have disclosed that "all details of the Russian-Finnish situation were laid openly before the Stockholm meeting."

"I am much satisfied with the position which the highest representatives of the Scandinavian countries took unanimously on the basis of this situation," Erkko was quoted.

NORDIC QUESTION

[By the Associated Press]

Stockholm, Oct. 20—Rumors of German demands led diplomatic observers to express belief today that the northern countries would be dangerously optimistic if they assumed that Adolf Hitler would let Soviet Russia issue all the invitations in the Baltic.

A sour itticism in Stockholm just now, in the Wake of the conference of rulers of Sweden, Norway, Denmark and Finland, was: "We shall soon know whether we Swedes are Germans or Russians."

Demands Unmentioned

The conference ended yesterday with a joint statement of the four nations' unity, but no specific mention was made of the Russian demands on Finland which prompted Sweden's King Gustaf to call the meeting.

Indications were that the struggle to preserve northern neutrality and national integrity had just begun.

The rumors of possible German demands on Norway, Denmark and Sweden were not confirmed, but aloofness of official Berlin to the fate of Finland led to speculation.

German Interest

The Swedes, Danes and Norwegians, as well as Finns, remember that Finland's independence was won in 1918 with the help of German troops, and that German governments, including that of Hitler, have looked with almost parental pride on Finland.

If Hitler now should give Russia free hand in Finland, they wondered how much restraint he himself might exercise toward other northern countries.

Reserve Movements

Great stress was laid on the non-military nature of the Stockholm conference. Indeed, it is doubtful if Stockholm's streets have often seen so few military uniforms as during the past two days.

An afternoon paper, however, carried more than two pages of advertisements for air-raid shelters, gas masks and similar equipment; and soon after Kings Haakon of Norway and Christian of Denmark left for home, reserve troops en route to posts of duty gathered in the same railway station.

Saracoglu Back in Turkey.

ISTANBUL, Oct. 20 (A. P.).—Foreign Minister Sukru Saracoglu returned today to Turkey from his fruitless negotiations in Moscow.

The negotiations, he said, "left the door open for further conversations in the undetermined future."

En route to Ankara to report to the Cabinet he conferred with Ambassador Stoica of Rumania, who left immediately for Bucharest to report to his Government.

Mr. Saracoglu was understood to have given the Rumanian an ample report on the Moscow negotiations, in which Rumania was intensely interested.

The Foreign Minister returned aboard a Russian cruiser. He was acclaimed by a crowd of spectators who cheered Great Britain and France, who signed a mutual assistance pact with Turkey yesterday, but did not mention Soviet Russia.

M. Saracoglu in an interview asserted the new pact was of enormous importance to Europe, a benefit to Turkey and did not impair Russian-Turkish friendship.

"I am convinced," he said, "it will not have the slightest detrimental effect on the old and sincere Turkish-Soviet friendship. The Turkish-Soviet negotiations left the door open for further conversations in the undetermined future."

A slight earthquake which did no damage, but caused panic in some sections of the city coincided with his arrival.

Warns on Anti-Soviet Bloc.

MOSCOW, Oct. 20 (AP)—The British-French-Turkish treaty was all but ignored today by the Moscow press, which limited comment to a warning against any attempt "to make a bloc against Soviet Russia" or to exclude her from settlement of important European problems.

In an article on the twentieth anniversary of the [illegible] against the White (anti-Bolshevist) Russians, the Communist party newspaper Pravda said that recent treaties between Russia and Germany on one hand and Russia and the Baltic States on the other had greatly strengthened Russia's position in world affairs.

HELSINKI, Oct. 20 (A. P.).—Dr. Juho Kusti Paasikivi, former Premier of Finland, will leave for Moscow late tomorrow night with Helsinki's counter-proposals to the Soviet Government.

It was expected in diplomatic circles that these would reflect the decisions reached at this week's Stockholm conference of neutral Nordic countries—to avoid entangling alliances and protect their neutrality and independence.

A Government spokesman said that another delegate may be added to Dr. Paasikivi's party, "to give it more authority." This was viewed as significant in some circles, but it was expected that the conversa-

PLANS FOR POWER NEEDS

Canada Surveys Resources for Expanded War Production

OTTAWA, Oct. 20 (Canadian Press)—Four times as much electric power as there was in 1914 is available in Canada now but the government is taking no chances that a shortage will develop as industry swings over to munitions production.

Although there is a comfortable surplus of power being generated at the moment, a special survey is being made of hydro-electric power sources where more could be obtained most quickly. This survey includes both the possible increase of capacity of certain existing power plants and the construction of new generating developments.

In 1914, Canada was generating 1,951,000 horsepower of electric energy. Production in 1938 was 8,190,000 horsepower, of which 2,463,000 was installed since 1930. Total waterpower resources of the country, developed and undeveloped, are estimated at 43,700,000 horsepower.

OTTAWA, Oct. 20 (Canadian Press)—The National Defense Department announced tonight that "since the outbreak of the war no ship carrying passengers, cargo, or both, which has sailed from Canadian ports for various destinations overseas, has been sunk by enemy action."

The announcement said that this was proof that, up to the present time, the protective measures put into operation by the Canadian naval forces in conjunction with other Empire countries had been successful.

Points To Neutrality Act Language As Ground For Distinction

Says Territorial Waters Vary According To Purposes

[By The Associated Press]

Hyde Park, N. Y., Oct. 20—President Roosevelt drew a sharp line of demarcation today between undersea and surface ships of belligerent nations, asserting at a press conference that they were as dissimilar as apples and pears.

He turned aside in that manner a question about the possibility of extending to surface vessels of the nations at war in Europe the restrictions he imposed, by a proclamation issued under the neutrality law, on the use of American ports and territorial waters by their submarines.

Some persons received the impression, however, that since he placed the two types of ships in different categories he invited the interpretation that he would not put them in the same classification under the Neutrality Act.

Hint At Curb On Germany

Reporters sought to lead the President to a discussion of the idea that restrictions on submarines involved German naval operations primarily, whereas restrictions on surface vessels would affect the Allies more than Germany.

They started out by inquiring on what basis he had differentiated between submarines and surface warships.

Mr. Roosevelt replied that there simply was a difference under the language of the Neutrality Act. The act gives him power to order submarines or armed merchant vessels or both to stay out of American harbors or territorial waters.

"Is there any possibility of similar restrictions (like those on submarines) being put on surface ships?" he was asked.

Says Limits Vary

The President said he did not think the two were analagous, telling the newsmen they were trying to add apples and pears, which were entirely different things.

Mr. Roosevelt, who arrived from Washington by special train this morning to spend the week end at his family home, devoted much of the press conference to a discussion of the limits of the territorial waters of the United States. He said they varied with circumstances.

Those limits, he added, might range from three to hundreds of miles off the coast.

The old three-mile limit of international law, he said, applied to submarines of belligerents, whereas in the case of rum runners in the prohibition era the limit was some 150 miles.

In the latter instance, Mr. Roosevelt asserted, the governing factor was the distance small boats could travel for liquor to supply ships hovering off the coast.

The limit of the neutrality patrol, he asserted, was roughly within the safety zone established by the twenty-one American republics at the recent Panama conference.

Then he added that the territorial water limits went as far as necessary for national safety and were in accordance with specific cases involving safety and neutrality.

Thus he altered to some extent a definition given at a recent press conference, at which he said territorial waters extended as far as American interests required.

Enforced By Three Services

Enforcement of the ban on submarines, he indicated, was up to the commanders of naval and Coast Guard ships and army planes. He said he believed the army, navy and Coast Guard had received copies of his proclamation setting forth the restrictions.

Replying to a question again, he said he had observed no indications that the other nations which participated in the Panama conference would bar submarines of warring countries from their harbors and coastal waters.

The Chief Executive spent part of a clear, sunny afternoon driving around the countryside, glowing with autumn colorings, on his estate. He looked at some of the prospective Christmas trees he hopes to market in December and dropped in at his cottage retreat on a hilltop overlooking the picturesque Hudson Valley.

The President said he had no plans to receive any official visitors over the week end and that he probably would provide little news.

EMBARGO AND SHIPS

[By the Associated Press]

Washington, Oct. 20—Senate opponents gave notice today of a series of fresh amendments to the Administration neutrality bill, despite their expected acquiescence to proposed changes in shipping regulations.

Both sides predicted that general debate would end tomorrow, with amendments being considered next week.

Senator Hiram Johnson (Rep., Cal.) had the floor today for a major opposition speech, having taken copious notes on yesterday's address by Senator Alben Barkley (Dem., Ky.) in favor of repealing the arms embargo.

Opposes Ban On Submarines

Senator B. C. Clark (Dem., Mo.), a repeal opponent, expressed dissatisfaction with President Roosevelt's action in banning belligerent submarines from American waters, and said that he would propose an amendment to the neutrality bill extending the prohibition to armed merchantmen.

"I'm going to insist that armed merchant vessels be treated as belligerent warships," said Clark. "The only excuse Germany gave for waging unrestricted warfare in the last war was that arming of merchant ships makes them belligerent warships."

Sees Merchant Submarines

Clark expressed the belief that the President might have barred submarines to prevent any incidents on this side of the ocean in event the arms embargo is repealed and foreign ships begin taking munitions back to Europe.

He said he expected to raise the question that there was nothing in the bill which would prevent Germany from contracting in this country for construction of unarmed submarines to take oil and other war supplies back under the "cash-and-carry" sections.

Opposition Senators withheld comment on the shipping amendments agreed on yesterday by Foreign Relations Committee Democrats. Indications were that they would find little fault with them.

Under the proposed changes the ban on American vessels carrying any cargoes to belligerents would be relaxed to permit continuance of trade, except in armaments, with possessions of warring nations in the Pacific and the South Atlantic.

These amendments, along with one forbidding arms sales on credit to private firms or individuals in belligAdd - Bahia Blanca - Oct 20

Gillette Plans Amendment

Besides the amendments to be offered by Clark, Senator Guy M. Gillette (Dem., Iowa) said that he would propose forbidding belligerent governments from calling in old securities from their ctizens and marketing them in the United States. New credits are barred in the bill, but old ones may be extended.

Gillette said he thought that the amendment agreed on by committee Democrats forbidding credits on arms sales to private citizens of warring nations had strengthened the bill. He added that he was "almost certain" he would support it.

Minton Backs Austin

During yesterday's debate, Senator Warren R. Austin of Vermont, assistant Republican leader, who is supporting embargo repeal, argued that it was necessary to help Great Britain and France win the war and thus eliminate danger of German aggression in this Hemisphere.

Agreeing with part of this contention, Senator Sherman Minton (Dem., Ind.), another bill supporter, told reporters: "We have a choice between two evils. We can take one course and help Hitler or the other and help Great Britain and France."

BORAH WANTS ALL TALK PUBLISHED

Angered by Assertion He Prophesied No War.

WASHINGTON, Oct. 20 (A. P.).—Senator Borah, Republican, of Idaho, exercised over statements that he had predicted no war in Europe this year, asked today that all details of a discussion of neutrality he had with President Roosevelt be made public.

He interrupted the debate on the neutrality bill to refer to a remark yesterday by Senator Barkley, Democrat, of Kentucky. Mr. Barkley said that he had heard Mr. Borah vehemently prophesy that there would be no war in Europe during 1939.

Senator Barkley referred to a White House conference between President Roosevelt and Senate leaders late in the last session when the Senate Foreign Relations Committee voted to take no action on neutrality legislation.

Recalling that he was not in the Senate Chamber when Mr. Barkley made his remark yesterday, Borah turned toward Mr. Barkley and said:

"I wish the Senator would state when it was I said this, and just what was said. In the interest of the facts I think everything that was said should be made public."

Mr. Barkley replied that the Borah forecast was during the White House conference and that Mr. Barkley could not review statements of President Roosevelt. The Democratic leader said that his comment resulted from press statements after the White House session.

Mr. Barkley said that Mr. Roosevelt had said that his information from Europe was that war might be near, requiring revision of the neutrality act. Mr. Borah, Mr. Barkley continued, replied that his own information from Europe indicated there would be no war before Congress met again.

"My remark resulted from a statement by the President," Mr. Borah said. "I think if all the facts were known, that the prophet was as well off as the [illegible]."

Mr. Borah here referred to Mr. Barkley's comment yesterday that Mr. Borah will be compelled to reestablish my faith in him as an infallible prophet."

Mr. Borah observed that the dispute was not an important matter but that he would be pleased to have the entire conversation stated, with a full report on the interview or whatever it was.

BRITISH EVOKE ANGER OF U. S.

Mail En Route to Germany Taken Off Ships.

WASHINGTON MAY PROTEST

Censorship Is Explained Away as Search for Contraband.

WASHINGTON, Oct. 20 (A. P.).—Secretary Hull said today that the State Department was considering whether to make representations to Great Britain over the seizure of American mail en route to Germany. Mr. Hull said that the department had just received reports that in some instances ships carrying American mail addressed to Germany had been stopped by the British, the mail censored and returned to this country.

Earlier, post office officials said that they were routing all mail to Germany by way of Italy in the hope of escaping the British blockade. Returned mail also will be sent to Italy for reshipment. The department said that it hoped that the change would permit letters to reach Germany.

Wartime Experiences.

State Department officials recalled that British seizures of American mail became the subject of an exchange of notes between the United States and Britain during the world war. After some seizures had been reported, Secretary of State Lansing, on January 4, 1916, addressed a note to London in which he said that this Government would not admit the right of British authorities to seize neutral vessels, bring them into British ports and remove or censor mails carried by them.

He received a joint promise from Britain and France that they would refrain on the high seas from seizing and confiscating "genuine correspondence, meaning letters or dispatches from private citizens to private citizens and would "ensure their speediest possible transmission as soon as the sincerity of their character shall have been ascertained."

Later, in 1916, Mr. Lansing considered that the British and French were violating their promise and proposed that the extent and exercise of belligerent rights to detain, inspect or seize mail should be submitted immediately to arbitration or to a joint commission of inquiry. The day the United States entered the war in 1917 Secretary Lansing informed the allies that this Government reserved all rights to press claims for unjustified losses or delays resulting to American citizens through detention of money orders, drafts, checks, notes and so forth contained in seized mails.

Diplomatic Mail From Abroad Upset by War

Negotiations Under Way to Have Pouches Flown by Clipper Without Couriers

WASHINGTON, Oct. 20 (AP).—Fighting in Europe has caused an upheaval in the American diplomatic courier and pouch system, by which envoys communicate with each other and with the State Department.

Ambassador William C. Bullitt in Paris, whose embassy controls the courier service in Europe, is making use of trans-Atlantic planes to bring the official mail pouch to the United States. Two couriers have already come here by air.

Negotiations are being carried on with several European nations to permit the United States to use the clipper planes to carry pouches to Europe without the necessity of sending personal couriers along.

The American diplomatic couriers who carry secret documents from one embassy or legation to another are having to overcome slower train schedules and canceled sailings. Formerly, they journeyed between European capitals each week; now, one trip is made every two weeks.

During the World War and postwar period, the courier and pouch services had to be concentrated in London. The couriers increased to about thirty. Particular use was made of American Army sergeants who had been wounded and were not fit for fighting but were able to travel.

United States Gets Warning.

WASHINGTON, Oct. 20 (A. P.).—The German warning against French or British convoys for neutral ships, including those of the United States, was delivered to the United States Government several weeks ago.

Officials said today that was one of the cautions intended by the Berlin Government when it advised Washington that American vessels should avoid "suspicious behavior" when sailing near France and England. "Suspicious behavior" was interpreted here as meaning traveling under convoy, zigzagging or sailing without lights.

American ships, officials here explained, have been moving in accordance with the principles set forth in the German warning. They are not accepting convoy; they are not zigzagging; at night they sail with lights ablaze and their American flag illuminated by special floodlights.

Several weeks prior to the warning, President Roosevelt said that the idea of providing convoys for American ships had been rejected.

Barbour Asserts We Must Help Dominion Prepare Herself Against Attack.

WASHINGTON, Oct. 20 (A. P.).—Senator Brown, Democrat, of Michigan, accused Col. Charles A. Lindbergh today of having encouraged "the spirit of nationalistic imperialism that has cursed the world for centuries and which is the potent poison that has killed peace."

During debate on the administration's neutrality bill, which he supports, Mr. Brown brought up for discussion a radio address in which Col. Lindbergh said that "sooner or later we must demand the freedom of this continent and its surrounding islands from the dictates of European Powers."

Col. Lindbergh also opposed the outright repeal of the arms embargo provided in the neutrality measure.

"I challenge the statements of Col. Lindbergh," Senator Brown said. "He speaks with no authority whatsoever but his own. He does not represent the views of any considerable part of the American people.

"His argument as to the right of the United States to deny Canada control of its affairs . . . and his unasked advice that the connection with Great Britain be cut is not only a gratuitous insult to a sister nation. It is based on a wholly erroneous concept of our continental American policy."

Senator Brown spoke after Senator Hiram Johnson, Republican, of California, had contended that it was "idiotic" to believe that Chancellor Hitler could conquer Europe and threaten the United States.

Ellender Denounces Hitler.

Another speaker, Senator Ellender, Democrat, of Louisiana, supported the neutrality legislation and told the Senate that he could visualize no peace in Europe "as long as this insatiable brute Hitler is permitted to rule over Germany."

Senator Barbour, Republican, of New Jersey, said that the United States must defend Canada under the terms of the Monroe Doctrine but could not help her prepare against attack under the existing neutrality law. Senator Brown asserted it was inevitable that the people of Canada, Great Britain and Germany would believe that Col. Lindbergh spoke for a considerable section of the American people.

Declaring that such a belief would be erroneous, the Senator said that it was "utter folly" to contend that Canada is under any obligation to the United States "to refrain from aiding her mother country in any manner she may see fit." He continued:

"Col. Lindbergh says we must protect our sister American nations from foreign invasions both for their welfare and for our own. With his proposition that we must protect our sister American nations for our own welfare I am in complete accord as to the present time. . . .

"But we leave entirely to the Canadian Government and its people the question of what is for their welfare. . . . A little contemplation shows the absurdity of the position of Col. Lindbergh.

"Suppose Canada, as is the fact, does send an army abroad and does permit the establishment of a naval base for Great Britain here, what are we going to do about it? We can not say to her, 'if you send an army to Europe or permit the establishment of a British base upon your soil we will not help you in the event of foreign invasion.'"

Stresses Protection of U. S.

"We cannot do this because our purpose in preventing foreign invasion of Canada is a protection to ourselves and not to Canada. Surely we are not by force going to prevent Canada from sending an army. . . .

"Our only course is the obvious and logical one. Let the Government of Canada do as she wishes and let the question of our aid in repelling a foreign invasion of Canada be decided by us on the basis I have outlined—when the occasion arises."

Mr. Barbour spoke after Senator Johnson, 73-year-old veteran of the League of Nations fight twenty years ago, had labelled as an "idiotic assumption" the argument for repeal of the arms embargo that Hitler could conquer Europe and "we will be next."

Repeal, Senator Johnson said, would be the "first false step" and would "place us in the shadow, walking down the bloody path of war."

Senator Ellender, Democrat, of Louisiana, advocate of repeal, answered those who contend that that action would offend Germany by saying:

"What do we owe this mad dictator, this insatiable despoiler of men and nations, this violator of treaties, that we must tread on tiptoe to spare him displeasure?

"Since when has it become necessary that we should consult with Hitler or with any foreign Power before considering the wishes of our own people?"

Barbour Would Help Canada.

Mr. Ellender declared that Hitler had "pointed the finger of scorn in our direction and intimated that we attend to our own business."

After reiterating support for the administration's "cash and carry neutrality program," Senator Barbour said that the existing law would not permit the United States to help Canada prepare for an attack.

"We all know that an attack on Canada would violate the Monroe Doctrine, the keystone of our foreign policy, and force us into war," Mr. Barbour said. "Yet we all but invite attack, and certainly make it possible, by our present ostrich-like attitude which we are now proposing to correct."

Under the present act, Mr. Barbour said, this country "can sell planes or any other war weapons to atheistic communistic Russia" for her own use or resale to Germany, while similar sales were barred to Canada, "with whom we have lived at peace for more than 100 years with an unfortified 3,000-mile border between us."

The argument of administration supporters favoring repeal, reduced to its simplest terms, Senator Johnson told his colleagues, was "that if we don't stop Hitler now he will conquer Europe and we will be next."

"What an idiotic assumption!" he declared. "And yet earnest and honest men repeat it. If we were not afflicted with a war psychology we would not listen to this reason for repeal of the arms embargo for one-quarter of a second.

Hitler Not a Napoleon.

"Hitler will never conquer Europe. It has never been done by any one yet. Countless efforts have been made to establish hegemony by force and none have succeeded. The closest approach to any was by Napoleon, and to compare Hitler to Napoleon is absurd.

Senator Johnson said that to repeal the embargo to aid England and France was to gamble with the possibility that his country would be involved in the European war.

"Such stakes are involved in the gamble that I decline to be a part of it," he declared. "If those Senators wish to give military or other help to the Allies to win the war, and if that is their motive, then the lifting of the embargo is an act of intervention.

"It is a mere gamble to change our law so as to help one side, defeat the other and yet escape the consequences of war. The gamble may be successful, but it is very speculative, and I will not gamble with American lives."

Senator Johnson said he thought the United States had little to fear no matter who won the European war. The physical exhaustion of Europe, he argued, will leave the participants without man power or material to launch aggressive campaigns.

"Hitler could never attack this country successfully," he said. "He would leave behind him revolt everywhere, a resurgent nationalism would likely overcome him and a guerrilla warfare would be rife. There would ever be behind him the 'bear who walks like a man.'

"And if by that time we have not dissipated our resources we could stand upon our own shores with our airplanes and carriers and a vastly superior navy and laugh at his efforts. I hope we have heard the last of the argument—'we'll be next.'"

"Our paramount national interest is in staying out of war and preserving our form of government, our economy and our standard of living. War would destroy them. In truth we can't afford another war unless it is absolutely forced upon us."

Shakes Fist for Emphasis.

With regard to the "cash and carry" sections of the administration legislation, Senator Johnson congratulated Democratic sponsors of the bill for offering amendments which would strip credits from the measure.

The veteran Senator started his address in slow, quiet tones. As he progressed, his voice rose to a shout. He frequently shook his fist for emphasis.

The Senate chamber was well filled and members gave Mr. Johnson their undivided attention.

To them he said at one point, his voice trembling:

"Ah, you members who glibly talk about another foreign war. Don't you realize what another war will be?

"I am so old now that I have but one thought—that is to serve the United States of America.

"I speak to you solemnly. I speak with all the emphasis I can command because I believe that we are on the brink of a precipice and that if we obey the commands that are issued to us—if we obey the commands of Britain and France—we are liable to be forced over the precipice."

In conclusion Senator Johnson lifted his voice and said:

"I will stand here until doom's day—even if alone—to fight for what is right. Stand up, America, for your rights."

Complete Isolation 'Impossible.'

Senator Barbour said that Russia "has its secret agents and propagandists and spies in our midst right now."

"Complete isolation" of the United States is impossible, he contended, because of its dependence on foreign supplies of "silk, rubber coffee, tea, cocoa, manganese, tin, nickel, wood pulp, antimony cork and many other products in daily use."

Mr. Barbour disputed previous arguments that the "cash-and-carry program would invite war by antagonizing Germany."

"It is literally the cash-and-carry principle of the modern grocery store applied to international trade," he said. "The ships are the market basket. The seas are the highways. Our goods remain on our shelves until purchasers come for them, pay for them, and take them away. We make no deliveries except across the counter.

"To say this will get us into war is as senseless as to say that a grocer who sells for cash to the customers who can come to his store will incur the undying enmity of other would-be customers who, unable to reach his place of business because of bad roads, have to trade in some other town."

Expects No Early Peace.

Saying that he could see "no early peace for Europe, Senator Ellender remarked of Hitler:

"In fact, I can visualize no peace for our neighbors across the seas as long as this insatiable brute is permitted to rule over Germany. . . .

"The American people as a whole have a high regard for the German people as such, but they despise their leadership.

"The American people do not want dictator neighbors to the north of them—in fact anywhere near their border. They prefer as their neighbors a people who believe in and cherish freedom."

Senator Ellender argued that there was no reason to ban the sale of armaments to belligerents while permitting the sale of other goods.

"I can not see the necessity or the reason or the wisdom of throttling our munitions manufacturers as is done under the law now in force," he declared. "Let us all realize and understand that these same munitions manufacturers . . . can and will furnish the means to save us and our children and our cherished possessions from destruction, provided we do not now strangle them into impotency."

British Tempt Nazis To Hear Propaganda By Naming Prisoners

New York, Oct. 20 (AP)—The British are trying out a new idea to get their propaganda over in Germany—tempting the Germans to tune in on a radio broadcast of news items favorable to the Allies by sandwiching in the names of German prisoners of war.

The Columbia Broadcasting System, describing the new persuasive method today, said the German language is spoken throughout the daily broadcast from 10.15 to 10.30 P. M., Berlin time.

The broadcasts originate in the studios of the British Broadcasting Corporation. Twenty names are read daily. Ten names are repeated from yesterday's list, and ten new ones are added.

Columbia said the program was beamed toward Germany from powerful short-wave transmitters in Daventry, England. The actual reading of the names takes only about half a minute; the rest of the time is given over to the reading of the news items.

War May Give U. S. Coal And Iron Outlet Abroad

Belgium and Greece Reported About to Enter Market

WASHINGTON, Oct. 20 (AP).—Two European neutrals, the Commerce Department said today, may turn to the United States for iron and coal as a result of the war.

Previous Commerce Department statements on war-time trade diversion had emphasized the possibility of drumming up new trade in South America rather than Europe.

K. L. Rankin, American Commercial Attache at Brussels, was quoted by the department as saying that Belgium "may shortly be in the market for American pig iron" because Belgium steel plants were finding it difficult to get iron ore from their regular sources of supply in France.

G. L. Jones, American Attache at Athens, reported that Greece, cut off from normal German and English coal supplies, was facing an acute shortage, and the United States probably would be able to get a large percentage of this coal business.

France About To Make Major War Purchase

First Such Deal Will Involve Trucks—Other Negotiations Now Pending

New York, Oct. 20 (AP)—Maurice Garreau-Dombasle, commercial counselor to the French Embassy and in charge of French war purchases in the United States, today said France is about to make the first major purchases of necessary supplies here since the European war began.

A contract has been signed, or is about to be signed, he said in answer to an inquiry, with the Studebaker Company for an undisclosed number of automobile trucks.

Similar negotiations are proceeding with other United States automobile manufacturers and other businessmen.

It would be contrary to policy to make more definite disclosures at this time, Garreau-Dombasle said.

U. S. Supplying Red Cross Aid

WASHINGTON, Oct. 20 (AP).—Surgical dressings and clothing made by women volunteers throughout the country are being assembled here for European Red Cross societies which have requested aid. Red Cross headquarters said today that ninety-nine cases of gauze bandages had been shipped to the French Red Cross. The next shipments will contain surgical dressings and clothing for Polish refugees in Bulgaria and Rumania.

Proposal to Ban Sailings To Canada Draws Protest

3 New England Senators Fight Neutrality Bill Provision

WASHINGTON, Oct. 20 (AP).—Three New England Senators said today they would seek modification of restrictions in the neutrality bill banning shipping between Eastern ports and Canada.

They were Senator Styles Bridges, Republican, of New Hampshire, reported in favor of the neutrality bill, and Wallace A. White jr., Republican, of Maine, and Henry Cabot Lodge jr., Republican, of Massachusetts, listed as opponents of the measure.

They expressed opposition to an amendment proposed by Chairman Key Pittman, Democrat, of Nevada, of the Foreign Relations Committee, permitting American vessels to carry cargoes to belligerent ports in the Pacific and south Atlantic, but prohibiting shipments to the maritime provinces.

Senator Theodore F. Green, Democrat, of Rhode Island, a member of the Foreign Relations Committee, said Senator Pittman believed the ban on intercoastal shipping between Canada and Boston and New York was "a necessary sacrifice."

He added that Democratic members of the committee in drafting the amendment had considered the potential dangers from submarines in the Bay of Fundy "grave enough" to warrant the restriction.

The most vigorous protests came from A. [illegible] Sharpe, president of the Eastern Steamship Lines, which operates between New York, Boston and Canadian provinces.

He wrote New England Senators that his line's ships operated more than sixty miles northwest of trans-Atlantic lanes after they left Long Island, Block Island, Vineyard and Nantucket Sounds.

China and Cuba Alone Willing to Sell Ores to U.S.

Other Countries Holding Chromium and Tungsten for Deals With Belligerents

WASHINGTON, Oct. 20 (AP).—China and Cuba were the only foreign countries which offered today to sell the United States chromium and tungsten ore to stock the Army and Navy.

East and South Africa, the Philippines, Turkey and New Caledonia, all major chromium sources, spurned the bid invitation of the United States, apparently because they believed they could get better prices from countries which are at war. Other producers which failed to bid included Chile, Argentina, Bolivia and the Malay States.

The two metals are important in the manufacture of steel alloys, essential to mechanized warfare.

Yesterday when the government opened bids on manganese ore, another important steel alloy, Russia was the principal foreign bidder, but hinged its offer with conditions termed "impossible" by American trade sources.

The United States Chrome Mines, Inc., of San Francisco, offered 51,000 tons of chromium ore at a price of about $1,785,000 from mines in the United States. The only other chromium bid was from Alaskan mines by Dorothea Reddy Moroney, of San Francisco, who offered to sell varying amounts up to 45,000 tons at $1,575,000.

The Wah Chang Trading Corporation, of New York, offered to sell 425 tons of Chinese tungsten at $21.88 a unit (each unit represents one-hundredth of a ton), or 150 tons of tungsten mined in this country at $24.50 a unit. China has been the most important United States source of tungsten in the past.

From Cuba the Pan-American Tungsten Corporation offered 425 tons at $23.50 a unit, and from domestic mines the Metal and Ore Corporation, of New York, offered up to 425 tons at $21 a unit.

Today's bids and yesterday's manganese offers were conducted under a $100,000,000 authorization of the last Congress to stock up the Army and Navy on "critical" war materials which are normally obtained from foreign countries and therefore might be difficult to obtain if this country were at war.

Lower War-Risk Rates on Cargo In Effect Today

American and Private British Underwriters Moved by Government Action

American and private British marine insurance underwriters announced yesterday that they will put into effect today a lower schedule of war-risk rates on cargo shipments, following disclosure yesterday that the British Government War-Risk Office is extending its operations to world-wide voyages at rates substantially below those quoted by private companies.

The new schedule by American underwriters calls for a rate of ¾ per cent for each $100 cargo valuation on shipments on belligerent vessels plying to or from North America, Pacific coasts, South America, Pacific coasts south of Buenaventura. This compared with a rate of 1 per cent previously.

All other voyages between North America and South America take a rate of 1 per cent, against 3 per cent previously. Cargoes on board belligerent vessels going to and from Canada, West Indies, South America, Central America and Hawaiian Islands will carry a rate of ¾ per cent, compared with 1 per cent.

Shipments on board belligerent flag ships moving to and from East of Suez, not east of Singapore, via Cape, will command a rate of 1½ per cent, against 3 per cent; via Panama, 1¼ per cent, against 2, and via trans-Pacific, 1¼, against 1 per cent.

The rate on shipments aboard belligerent flag vessels plying to and from the Far East (east of Singapore and including Australasia) is 1½ per cent via Cape, against 3 previously; via Panama 1¼, against 2, and via trans-Pacific, 1½, against 1 per cent.

The new open market rates announced by the Institute of London Underwriters follow:

North, Central and South America (Atlantic and Pacific ports) to or from East and Far East, via the Cape, 25 shillings for each £100 for Allied flags, 20 shillings for neutral flags and 20 shillings for United States flag to and from the United States.

East and Far East, via Panama, 25 shillings for Allied flags, 20 shillings for neutral and 10 shillings for United States vessels. Africa from the Mediterranean, 25 shillings for Allied flags, 20 shillings for neutral and 20 shillings for United States.

East and Far East to or from Straits Settlement, India and Persian Gulf, 20 shillings for all flags. North America (Atlantic and Pacific, including Newfoundland) to or from South America (Atlantic and Pacific ports), 15 shillings for Allied flags, 10 shillings for neutral flags and 5 shillings for United States flag to and from United States).

LINER TO BE MET BY AMBULANCES

President Harding To Dock In New York Today With 73 Injured

26 Persons To Require Immediate Hospitalization As Result Of Hurricane

[By the Associated Press]

New York, Oct. 20—Three fleets of ambulances were assembled today to meet the American liner President Harding when she arrives here tomorrow with the largest storm casualty list to reach this port in many years—seventy-three injured, of whom at least twenty will have to be taken off on stretchers.

The Harding, carrying 597 passengers—about 150 more than her normal capacity—fought a long and savage struggle Tuesday night and Wednesday morning with a hufricane. She lost a cabin waiter, Paul Johnson, overboard. Her starboard rail and a lifeboat were swept away.

Gets Medical Supplies

As one message of distress followed another, appealing for splints and opiates for the injured, a Coast Guard cutter finally was able to push through the raging seas close enough to transfer medical supplies by shooting a line aboard the vessel.

Among those reported hurt, although apparently not seriously, was Paul Van Zeeland, the former Belgian Premier.

The United States Lines, announcing this afternoon its arrangements for meeting the extraordinary emergency of the Harding's arrival, said fifteen passengers and eleven members of the crew would require immediate hospitalization.

The city of New York will have six ambulances at the pier; the line will provide eight and the Staten Island Marine Hospital an additional number. A squad of physicians and nurses will be on hand.

OCT 21 1939

Rescued Crew Aboard

Among those aboard the Harding are thirty-six members of the crew of the British freighter Heronspool, rescued from the sea last week after their vessel went down off Ireland under torpedo fire.

The Harding left Le Verdon last Wednesday. The storm struck her full force about 300 miles south of St. John's, Newfoundland.

She might have been able to avoid the worst of it, meteorologists here said, had not the war's disruption of international exchange of weather information made it impossible to anticipate the storm's course.

WITH THE BRITISH EXPEDITIONARY FORCE IN FRANCE, OCT.20-(AP)-(PASSED BY FIELD CENSOR)-PELTING RAIN, DRUMMING A STEADY TATTOO ON BRITISH BATTLE POSITIONS IN FRANCE, HAS BROUGHT THE IMPLACABLE FOE OF ANY ATTACKING ARMY--MAJOR MUD--TO THE SCENE.

BRITISH TOMMIES AND OFFICERS, HOLDING A LINE IN VILLAGES AND VALLEYS THROUGH WHICH WERE FOUGHT SOME OF THE WORLD WAR'S BITTEREST BATTLES, SAW FRESH BARRIERS TO GERMANY'S HIGHLY MECHANIZED ARMY IN THE MUD WHICH WOULD CLING TO TANKS AND ARMORED CARS.

THIS FRONT HAS BEEN ALERT SINCE THE BRITISH "TOOK OVER" FROM THE FRENCH POILUS. BUT WITH THE RAIN TURNING THE COUNTRYSIDE INTO A DISMAL SWAMP, THE LIKELIHOOD OF ATTACK APPEARED TO GROW LESS AND LESS EVERY DAY.

THERE WAS NO RELAXING OF VIGILANCE AGAINST ANY GERMAN DRIVE, HOWEVER.

THE FIRST GERMAN ATTACK IN 1914 HURLED 26 DIVISIONS ADVANCE AGAINST THE BRITISH. THEN, BRITISH, FRENCH AND BELGIAN ARMIES WENT OUT AGAINST THEM. THIS TIME, ENTRENCHED IN FORTIFICATIONS WHICH ARE HARD TO SEE AND HARDER TO TAKE, THE SAME FOREES WILL RECEIVE THEM.

THERE IS NOTHING GLAMOROUS ABOUT THE FRONT ON NIGHTS LIKE RECENT ONES.

HULKING YORKSHIREMEN AND DIMINUTIVE SCOTS WALK SENTRY SWATHED IN PONCHOS TOPPED BY CAMOUFLAGED "STEEL HELMETS." INSIDE DUGOUTS, OFFICERS SEARCH THE DRIPPING HORIZON WITH GLASSES AND BACK OF THE LINES GUN CREWS WRAP THEIR "GIRLS" IN COVERINGS AND SCAN THE HIGH SKY ANXIOUSLY.

SCANNING THE SOGGY TERRAIN AHEAD OF THE FRONT LINE YOU FIND IT HARD TO BELIEVE ANY TANK COULD ADVANCE OVER SUCH GROUND, OR ANY INFANTRY MARCH.

WORKS ONCE THEY WILL TRY IT AGAIN."

"IT WON'T SUCCEED AGAINST US ON THIS SORT OF GROUND," HE SAID. "IT IS MY OPINION THEIR WHOLE ATTACK WILL PILE UP BEHIND MIRED MOTORIZED AND MECHANIZED FORCES."

THE BRITISH FRONT HAS BEEN CONSOLIDATED AND THE ROYAL ARMY

SERVICE CORPS IS IRONING OUT DIFFICULTIES OF BRINGING UP SUPPLIES OF AMMUNITION AND FOOD TO THE FRONT.

THE SITUATION, WHICH WAS NOT ENTIRELY SATISFACTORY A WEEK AGO, SEEMS TO HAVE IMPROVED GREATLY. IF THE GERMANS STRIKE, THEY WILL STRIKE AGAINST A HEAVILY ENTRENCHED AND FORTIFIED ENEMY.

UNLESS THEY MOVE FAST, AND WITHIN A WEEK, THIS FRONT MAY BE IMPOSSIBLE TO ATTACK UNTIL SPRING EXCEPT BY INFANTRY UNSUPPORTED BY TANKS.

PARIS, OCT.20-(AP)-SMALL PATROLS OF FRENCH AND GERMAN ADVANCE GUARDS WERE REPORTED TONIGHT TO HAVE SKIRMISHED IN NO-MAN'S-LAND ON THE WESTERN FRONT AS THE TWO ARMIES JOCKEYED FOR POSSESSION OF ISOLATED HEIGHTS AND SMALL WOODED AREAS TO STRENGTHEN THEIR NEW LINES.

MILITARY DISPATCHES FROM THE FRONT INDICATED THAT THE NO-MAN'S-LAND ABOUT A MILE WIDE SEPARATING THE NEW POSITIONS OF THE TWO FORCES LAY WHOLLY IN GERMAN TERRITORY.

THE FRENCH LINE, MARKING THE MORE OR LESS ACTIVE FRONT, APPARENTLY FOLLOWED ALMOST EXACTLY ALONG THE FRONTIER TO WHICH THE FRENCH WITHDREW BEFORE A GERMAN ATTACK THE FIRST OF THE WEEK.

THE OUTPOST ACTIVITY WAS SAID TO HAVE BEEN CONFINED MOSTLY TO THE TWO AREAS WHERE THE GERMANS ATTACKED IN FORCE JUST EAST OF THE MOSELLE RIVER AND BETWEEN SAARBRUECKEN AND ZWEIBRUECKEN IN THE CENTER OF THE NORTHERN FLANK.

A FRENCH DISCLOSURE THAT A UNIT OF ONE OFFICER AND 50 MEN WAS LOST DURING A DAWN PATROL INDICATED TO MILITARY OBSERVERS THE SERIOUSNESS OF THE EFFORT BEING MADE BY BOTH SIDES TO COVER THEIR NEW POSITIONS.

THE PATROLS WERE OPERATING IN A COLD, HEAVY RAIN WHICH HAS FALLEN GENERALLY ON NORTHERN AND EASTERN FRANCE FOR FOUR DAYS.

30.24-4169

BEHIND THE LINES, HOWEVER, THE POILUS IN REST BILLETS PLAYED SOCCER AND WORKED AT BUILDING THEATERS WHERE ENTERTAINMENTS WILL BE GIVEN FOR MEN OUT OF THE FRONT LINES.

MEANWHILE, FRENCH ARTILLERY SHELLED THE GERMAN ROAD FROM PERL TO SEMMDORF, JUST ACROSS THE FRONTIER NEAR LUXEMBOURG, IN AN EFFORT TO BREAK UP REPORTED TROOP CONCENTRATIONS AT THE POINT WHERE THE GERMANS GAINED A TOE-HOLD ON FRENCH SOIL EARLIER IN THE WEEK.

BERLIN, OCT. 20-(AP)-AUTHORIZED GERMAN SOURCES POINTED TODAY TO THE PROTOCOL TO THE FRENCH-ENGLISH-TURKISH MUTUAL AID TREATY WHICH PROVIDES THAT TURKEY CANNOT BE FORCED TO FIGHT RUSSIA AS A "JOKER"

WHICH WILL PREVENT TURKEY FROM GIVING THE ALLIES THE HELP THEY EXPECT.

ALTHOUGH THESE SOURCES DID NOT AMPLIFY THEIR STATEMENT IT WAS EVIDENT THEY ASSUMED THAT RUSSIA AND GERMANY WOULD CONTINUE TO WORK IN CLOSE COLLABORATION IN INTERNATIONAL AFFAIRS.

OTHER WAR NEWS WAS OVERSHADOWED BY THE ALLIES' DIPLOMATIC MANEUVERING.

A HIGH COMMAND COMMUNIQUE REPORTED ONLY "LOCAL ARTILLERY AND SCOUTING TROOPS ACTIVITY" ON THE WESTERN FRONT.

CORRESPONDENTS WERE INFORMED THAT "ALL MATTERS IN POLAND ARE IN A STATE OF FLUX DESPITE THE CREATION OF WEST PRUSSIA AND POSEN" AND THEREFORE NO DELINIATION OF BOUNDARIES COULD BE ANNOUNCED.

THE NEW SITUATION IN THE MEDITERRANEAN WAS VIEWED WITH GRAVEST APPREHENSION IN INFORMED CIRCLES, INASMUCH AS ITALIAN AND SOVIET RUSSIAN INTERESTS WERE REGARDED AS DIRECTLY INVOLVED.

THESE QUARTERS LOOKED TO ITALY TO REACT, AS A MEDITERRANEAN POWER, AND EXPRESS THE OPINION THAT THE TREATY WAS SUFFICIENT CAUSE TO BRING ABOUT ITALIAN-RUSSIAN COOPERATION SIMILAR TO THAT BETWEEN RUSSIA AND GERMANY.

HITLER'S IMMEDIATE REACTION APPEARED TO HAVE BEEN FORMAL RATIFICATION OF THE GERMAN FRIENDSHIP TREATY WITH RUSSIA, SIGNED AT MOSCOW SEPT. 28, AND SUBSEQUENT AGREED OF SEPT. 4 CONCERNING POLAND AND THE RUSSIAN AND GERMAN SPHERES OF INFLUENCE IN POLAND.

IT WAS RECALLED THAT THE ALLIES IN THE WORLD WAR WERE UNABLE TO FORCE THE DARDANELLES FOR A CONTACT WITH RUSSIA IN THE FACE OF A COMBINED DEFENSE BY GERMAN AND TURKISH FORCES. THE FAILURE OF THIS ACTION, MILITARY SOURCES SAID, GREATLY CONTRIBUTED TOWARD IMPERIAL RUSSIA'S DOWNFALL, SINCE THAT COUNTRY WAS CUT OFF FROM ALL SUPPLIES FROM THE ALLIES.

BERLIN, OCT. 20-(AP)-NAZIS TONIGHT DECLARED TURKEY BECAME "BRITAIN'S STOOGE" WHEN SHE SIGNED A MUTUAL AID PACT WITH THE ALLIES AND COULD NO LONGER BE REGARDED AS A NEUTRAL.

ADOLF HITLER RECEIVED A PERSONAL REPORT ON THE TRI-POWER PACT FROM HIS ACE TROUBLE SHOOTER, FRANZ VON PAPEN, GERMAN AMBASSADOR TO TURKEY.

VON PAPEN ARRIVED IN BERLIN TODAY AFTER A HURRIED TRIP FROM ANKARA.

HE WAS EXPECTED TO RETURN TO HIS POST WITHIN A FEW DAYS.

ALTHOUGH GERMAN POLITICAL LEADERS PROFESSED TO SEE A LOOPHOLE IN THE PACT IN TURKEY'S RESERVATION AGAINST BEING DRAWN INTO WAR AGAINST RUSSIA, ATTACKS ON THE AGREEMENT WERE CAUSTIC.

THE GOVERNMENT MEANWHILE OPENED A SYSTEM OF SPECIAL SHORT-TERM CREDITS FOR BUSINESSES THROUGHOUT THE REICH WHICH HAVE BEEN HARD HIT BY THE WAR TO PREVENT BANKRUPTCIES AND SHARP DISRUPTIONS IN NATIONAL ECONOMY.

NAZI OFFICIALS ASSERTED TURKEY HAD CHOSEN A "DANGEROUS ROUTE" IN SIGNING THE TREATY WITH GREAT BRITAIN AND FRANCE.

BRITAIN AND FRANCE "WANT TO STIR UNREST IN THE BALKANS," AND "BRING TRKEY INTO A DANGEROUS CHAI

OCT 21 1939

"BRING TURKEY INTO A DANGEROUS CHAIN," THEY SAID.

DIENST AUS DEUTSCHLAND, INFORMED NEWS COMMENTARY, SAID:

"LOUD APPLAUSE IN THE ENGLISH AND FRENCH PRESS DEEPENED GERMANY'S SUSPICION THAT TURKEY'S MUTUAL ASSISTANCE PACT WITH THE WESTERN POWERS WAS NOT INTENDED AS A PEACE MOVE."

TURKEY'S RESERVATION IN THE PACT THAT HER OBLIGATIONS TO BRITAIN AND FRANCE SHOULD NOT BRING HER IN CONFLICT WITH RUSSIA WAS THE BIGGEST KERNEL OF COMFORT NAZIS ACKNOWLEDGED FINDING IN THE TREATY.

NAZIS POINTED OUT, HOWEVER, THAT THIS "LOOPHOLE" WOULD NOT NECESSARILY PREVENT TURKEY FROM CLOSING HER EYES IF BRITAIN DESIRED TO OCCUPY THE DARDANELLES--SOMETHING GERMANY SHOULD NOT LIKE TO SEE.

(A. Invoice) BERLIN, OCT. 21-(AP)-CAN FRANZ VON PAPEN, CRAFTIEST GERMAN DIPLOMAT OF THE OLD AND DYING SCHOOL, BRING TURKEY BACK TO NEUTRALITY DESPITE THE BRITISH-FRENCH-TURKISH PACT?

AN

THIS WAS THE QUESTION UPPERMOST IN POLITICAL CIRCLES OF BERLIN AS THE GERMAN AMBASSADOR TO ANKARA RETURNED TO REPORT TO ADOLF HITLER ON THE TURKISH SITUATION WHICH RAN COUNTER TO ALL GERMAN PROGNOSTICATIONS.

ANOTHER QUESTION RAISED WAS

OCT 21 1939

WILL HITLER HOLD VON PAPEN RESPONSIBLE FOR COMMISSAR OF FOREIGN AFFAIRS-PREMIER VYACHESLAFF MOLOTOFF'S FAILURE TO DRAW TURKEY DEFINITELY TO RUSSIA'S SIDE, AND HENCE

Add-Berlin-Oct 20

A SHORT WHILE EARLIER, NAZIS HAD DECLARED TURKEY BECAME "BRITAIN'S STOOGE" WHEN SHE SIGNED A MUTUAL AID PACT WITH THE ALLIES AND COULD NO LONGER BE REGARDED AS A NEUTRAL.

SPOKESMEN IN HIGH PLACES AND DNB CAUTIONED THE WORLD AGAINST ASSUMING THAT GERMANY WAS MAKING CONCILIATORY GESTURES TOWARD FRANCE ON THE MEAGER BASIS THAT THE WAR COMMUNIQUE ON THURSDAY SAID THE GERMAN WEST ARMY FAILED TO STEP ACROSS THE FRENCH FRONTIER AT THE MOMENT

CONDITIONS SEEMED AUSPICIOUS BECAUSE OF THE WITHDRAWAL OF FRENCH TROOPS.

IT WAS SAID THE NEUTRAL AND ENEMY PRESS INTERPRETED THE GERMAN HESITATION TO LAUNCH AN IMPRESSIVE OFFENSIVE AS AN INDICATION THE REICH STILL HOPED FOR A DEAL WITH FRANCE BUT THE COMMENTATORS AND DNB WARNED THAT THE HIGH COMMAND WAS NOT WEAKENING.

GERMANY'S, AND,

WILL HITLER POLITELY DISMISS THE NAZI AND PERSUADED VON HINDENBURG TO TURN THE CHANCELLORSHIP OVER TO THE THEN YOUTHFUL NAZI FUEHRER IN JANUARY, 1933?

VON PAPEN, ONCE THE CATHOLIC CENTRIST PARTY POLITICIAN, IS PERHAPS THE LAST OF A SCHOOL OF GERMAN DIPLOMATS WHO WITH CHARMING, ENGAGING MANNERS MANAGED TO SAY NOTHING TO COMMIT THEMSELVES.

MODERN GERMAN DIPLOMACY IS BLUNTER, MORE DIRECT AND LESS GIVEN TO "BEATING ABOUT THE BUSH." FOREIGN MINISTER JOACHIM VON RIBBENTROP IS THE OUTSTANDING EXAMPLE OF THIS METHOD OF NEGOTIATING WITH FOREIGN NATIONS.

VON PAPEN'S MOST POWERFUL FRIEND UNDOUBTEDLY WAS THE

30.24-4173

30.24-4173

LATE VON HINDENBURG. WHEN HE WAS COMPELLED TO YIELD TO THE FORWARD-STORMING NAZIS AFTER HAVING BEEN CHANCELLOR UNDER VON HINDENBURG IN 1932, GERMANY'S LATE SOLDIER-PRESIDENT HANDED

HANDED HIM AS A FAREWELL GIFT AN AUTOGRAPHED PHOTOGRAPH OF HIMSELF UPON WHICH HE WROTE THE FIRST LINES OF GERMANY'S FAMOUS SOLDIER SONG PLAYED AT FUNERALS AND MEMORIAL DAYS:

"ICH HATT EINEN KAMERADEN." (ONCE I HAD A COMRADE.)

VON PAPEN'S BRILLIANT CAREER WAS PARTLY DUE TO HIS EXCELLENT COMMAND OF THE GERMAN, FRENCH AND ENGLISH LANGUAGES AND HIS POLISH MANNERS

WITH THE SAAR VALLEY AS HIS HOME AND A WIFE WHO BELONGED TO THE FAMOUS BOCH-GALHAU FAMILY OF INDUSTRIAL BARONS HAVING CONNECTIONS WITH BELGIUM, LUXEMBOURG AND FRANCE, HE KNEW THE FRENCH MENTALITY AS FEW OTHER GERMANS.

A LONG STAY IN THE UNITED STATES GAVE THIS ALMOST 60-YEAR OLD SCION OF A WEALTHY WESTPHALIAN LANDED FAMILY AN INSIGHT INTO THE ANGLO-SAXON MENTALITY, EVEN THOUGH THERE IS A CLOUD OVER HIS WASHINGTON PERFORMANCE AS A GERMAN

MILITARY ATTACHE.

VON PAPEN AND NAVAL ATTACHE CAPT. RICHARD BOY-ED WAS IDENTIFIED IN THE AMERICAN MIND WITH DOCUMENTS FOUND BY THE BRITISH ON THE PERSON OF JAMES F.J. ARCHIBALD, AN AMERICAN NEWSPAPER CORRESPONDENT DURING THE WORLD WAR.

ARRESTED IN FALMOUTH, ENGLAND, IN 1915, SIR ARCHIBALD HAD IN HIS POSSESSION [redacted] A COLLECTION OF PAPERS [redacted] SIGNED "PAPEN" [redacted] ONE OF WHICH REFERRED TO "THOSE SUB IDIOTIC YANKEES."

AT SECRETARY OF STATE ROBERT LANSING'S OCT 21 1939 REQUEST, VON PAPEN AND BOY-ED WERE RECALLED "ON ACCOUNT OF WHAT THIS GOVERNMENT CONSIDERS IMPROPER ACTIVITIES IN MILITARY AND NAVAL MATTERS."

IN APRIL, 1916, AFTER VON PAPEN WAS RECALLED TO GERMANY, HE WAS INDICTED BY A [redacted] FEDERAL GRAND JURY IN NEW YORK IN CONNECTION WITH AN OCT 21 1939 CONSPIRACY TO BLOW UP THE WELLAND CANAL IN CANADA. THE CHARGE WAS DROPPED A MONTH LATER AND THERE NEVER WAS ANY LEGAL PROOF OF THE CHARGES AGAINST VON PAPEN. THERE WAS GENERAL ACCEPTANCE OF HIS STATEMENT MADE ON HIS DEPARTURE THAT HE HAD CONFINED HIS ACTIVITIES TO HIS REGULAR DUTIES.

VON PAPEN'S TALENTS SEEM TO LIE ESPECIALLY IN THE DIRECTION OF "FIXING" THINGS. IT WAS HE WHO ESTABLISHED CONTACTS BETWEEN GERMANY'S RHENISH-WESTPHALIAN INDUSTRIAL BARONS AND HITLER IN 1932, THEREBY EASING THE POSSIBILITY OF THE NAZI MOVEMENT DYING FOR WANT OF FUNDS. IT WAS

30.24-4175

VON PAPEN HAD PERSUADED VON HINDENBURG THAT HITLER MUST BE GIVEN A CHANCE TO GOVERN THE COUNTRY.

HINDENBURG, HOWEVER, MADE HITLER AGREE TO TAKE VON PAPEN INTO THE CABINET AS VICE CHANCELLOR. AS SUCH, WHEN RADICALS IN THE NAZI MOVEMENT THREATENED TO GET THE UPPER HAND IN THE SPRING OF 1934, HE DELIVERED A SPEECH AT MARBURG UNIVERSITY ON JUNE 17, SHARPLY CRITICIZING CERTAIN NAZI TENDENCIES.

THE PURGE WHICH FOLLOWED ON JUNE 30 WAS A DIRECT RESULT OF THIS SPEECH, BUT VON PAPEN HIMSELF NEARLY LOST HIS LIFE. HIS SECRETARIES WERE ARRESTED, HIS CHIEF AIDE SHOT TO DEATH AND HE AND HIS FAMILY HELD VIRTUAL PRISONERS FOR SEVERAL DAYS IN THEIR BERLIN HOME.

OCT 21 1939

SOON AFTERWARD, HE WAS REMOVED FROM THE CABINET ON THE GROUNDS HE HAD A MORE IMPORTANT WORK TO PERFORM IN AUSTRIA.

VON HINDENBURG'S LAST OFFICIAL SIGNATURE BEFORE HIS DEATH AUG. 1, 1934, WAS FOR THE APPOINTMENT OF VON PAPEN AS EXTRAORDINARY AMBASSADOR TO AUSTRIA, WHERE CHANCELLOR ENGELBERT DOLLFUSS HAD BEEN SLAIN BY AUSTRIAN NAZIS.

HIS DIFFICULT TASK WAS THAT OF [redacted] RESTABLISHING BETTER RELATIONS WITH THE REICH DESPITE AUSTRIA'S ANGER OVER THE DEATH OF DOLLFUSS. HE HANDLED THE SITUATION WITH SUCH DIPLOMATIC SKILL THAT HE PERSUADED KURT VON SCHUSCHNIGG TO COME WITH HIM TO BERCHTESGADEN TO MEET HITLER. (CH)

THIS MEETING [redacted] THE DOWNFALL OF THE AUSTRIAN REGIME AND LED TO THE "ANSCHLUSS" AND SCHUSCHNIGG'S ARREST IN MARCH, 1938.

VON PAPEN WAS REWARDED [redacted] OCT 21 1939 HITLER PRESENTED HIM WITH A GOLD-RIMMED MEMBERSHIP BUTTON OF THE NAZI PARTY, REGARDED AS THE HIGHEST DECORATION TO ANY GERMAN.

VON PAPEN ONCE AGAIN WENT INTO RETIREMENT, AS HE HAD FREQUENTLY DONE BEFORE. DURING SUCH INTERVALS HE USUALLY DEVOTED HIMSELF [redacted] TO SUCH DUTIES AS PRESIDENT OF GERMANY'S "HERRENKLUB", AN ORGNIZATION OF GERMAN ARISTOCRATS.

A NEW FIELD TO CONQUER CAME WHEN HITLER APPOINTED HIM AMBASSADOR TO TURKEY APRIL 18, 1939. HE GOT UNDER WAY TOO LATE TO PREVENT TURKEY'S SIGNING OF A PRELIMINARY PACT

OF ALLIANCE WITH BRITAIN IN MAY.

SOME SAID HE WAITED TOO LONG IN BERLIN BEFORE HURRYING TO ANKARA, WHILE OTHERS ASSERTED VON RIBBENTROP HAD NOT EXPECTED TURKEY WOULD ALIGN WITH BRITAIN AGAINST HER FORMER WAR ALLY AND HAD DELAYED VON PAPEN'S APPOINTMENT. IN ANY EVENT, VON PAPEN APPEARS TO HAVE STAVED OFF THE ANGLO-FRENCH-TURKISH PACT FOR A WHILE.

WASHINGTON, OCT. 20-(AP)-A BARRAGE OF SHORT SPEECHES FROM BOTH SIDES CARRIED THE SENATE'S GENERAL NEUTRALITY DEBATE TOWARD ITS CLOSE TODAY WITH SENATOR BROWN (D-MICH) ASSERTING THAT COL. CHARLES A.LINDBERGH OFFERED CANADA A "GRATUITOUS INSULT" IN A RECENT RADIO SPEECH.

THE MICHIGAN SENATOR, SUPPORTING THE ADMINISTRATION MOVE TO REPEAL THE EMBARGO ON ARMS SHIPMENTS TO BELLIGERENTS, REFERRED TO AN ADDRESS IN WHICH THE FAMOUS FLIER CALLED FOR RETENTION OF AN EMBARGO ON "OFFENSIVE WEAPONS" AND VIRTUALLY DEMANDED THAT CANADA CUT HER LINK TO BRITAIN.

ASSERTING THAT IF CANADA SHOULD BE ATTACKED FROM ABROAD, THE UNITED STATES WOULD HAVE TO DEFEND THAT COUNTRY, LINDBERGH SIMULTANEOUSLY QUESTIONED THE DOMINION'S "RIGHT TO DRAW US INTO A EUROPEAN WAR SIMPLY BECAUSE THEY PREFER THE CROWN OF ENGLAND TO AMERICAN INDEPENDENCE."

BROWN CHARGED THAT LINDBERGH WAS TRYING TO DENY CANADA THE CONTROL OF HER OWN AFFAIRS AND THUS WAS ENCOURAGING "THE SPIRIT OF NATIONALISTIC IMPERIALISM THAT HAS CURSED THE WORLD FOR CENTURIES AND WHICH IS THE POTENT POISON THAT HAS KILLED PEACE."

HE CHALLENGED LINDBERGH'S STATEMENTS AND HIS AUTHORITY TO MAKE THEM. THE FLIER, HE CONTINUED, SPEAKS ON NO ONE'S AUTHORITY WHATSOEVER BUT HIS OWN, AND "DOES NOT REPRESENT THE VIEWS OF ANY CONSIDERABLE PART OF THE AMERICAN PEOPLE." HE ADDED:

"HIS ARGUMENT AS TO THE RIGHT OF THE UNITED STATES TO DENY CANADA CONTROL OF ITS OWN AFFAIRS X X X AND HIS UNASKED ADVICE THAT THE CONNECTION WITH GREAT BRITAIN BE CUT IS NOT ONLY A GRATUITOUS INSULT TO A SISTER NATION, IT IS BASED ON A WHOLLY ERRONEOUS CONCEPT OF OUR CONTINENTAL POLICY."

THE PURPOSE OF REPEAL, HE CONTINUED, WAS TO HELP THE ALLIES AND "HAMSTRING" GERMANY. AS SUCH, HE SAID, THE ACTION WOULD BE UNNEUTRAL AND INVOLVE A SERIOUS POSSIBILITY THAT AMERICA WOULD BE DRAWN INTO THE WAR.

THE REPEALISTS, HE SAID, WERE "GAMBLING" THAT THEY COULD HELP ONE SIDE AND YET ESCAPE WAR.

"THE GAMBLE MAY BE SUCCESSFUL, BUT IT IS VERY SPECULATIVE, AND I WILL NOT GAMBLE WITH AMERICAN LIVES," HE SAID.

SM514PESNM

WASHN-1ST ADD NIGHT LEAD NEUTRALITY XXX HE SAID.

AMERICA, HE CONTINUED, HAS LITTLE TO FEAR, NO MATTER WHO SHOULD WIN THE WAR, BECAUSE THE CONFLICT WOULD LEAVE THE EUROPEAN NATIONS PHYSICALLY EXHAUSTED.

"HITLER COULD NEVER ATTACK OUR COUNTRY SUCCESSFULLY," HE SAID. "HE WOULD LEAVE BEHIND HIM REVOLT EVERYWHERE, A RESURGENT NATIONALISM WOULD LIKELY OVERCOME HIM, AND A GUERRILLA WARFARE WOULD BE RIFE. THERE WOULD EVER BE BEHIND HIM THE 'BEAR WHO WALKS LIKE A MAN.'

SENATOR ELLENDER (D-LA) FOLLOWED THE CALIFORNIAN WITH AN APPEAL FOR LIFTING THE EMBARGO AND A REPLY TO THE ARGUMENT THAT TO DO SO WOULD OFFEND GERMANY.

"WHAT DO WE OWE THIS MAD DICTATOR, THIS INSATIABLE DESPOILER OF MEN AND NATIONS, THIS VIOLATOR OF TREATIES, THAT WE MUST TREAD ON TIPTOE TO SPARE HIM DISPLEASURE?" HE DEMANDED.

SENATOR BARBOUR (R-NJ) ARGUED FOR ABOLISHING THE EMBARGO ON THE GROUND THAT WHILE THE UNITED STATES, UNDER THE MONROE DOCTRINE, MUST DEFEND CANADA IF THE LATTER SHOULD BE ATTACKED, THE PRESENT LAW PREVENTS THIS COUNTRY FROM HELPING CANADA ARM ITSELF TO RESIST AGGRESSION.

"WE INVITE ATTACK, AND CERTAINLY MAKE IT POSSIBLE, BY OUR PRESENT OSTRICH-LIKE ATTITUDE," HE ASSERTED.

WASHINGTON,OCT. 20-(AP)-SENATOR JOHNSON (R-CALIF) LABELLED AS "AN IDIOTIC ASSUMPTION" TODAY WHAT HE DECLARED TO BE THE MAIN ARGUMENT FOR REPEAL OF THE ARMS EMBARGO THAT HITLER COULD CONQUER EUROPE AND "WE WILL BE NEXT."

THE 73-YEAR-OLD VETERAN OF THE LEAGUE OF NATIONS FIGHT OF 20 YEARS AGO TOOK THE SENATE FLOOR TO START OFF THE 15TH DAY OF SENATE ON THE ADMINISTRATION'S PROGRAM OF NEUTRALITY REVISION WHICH HAS AS ITS PRINCIPAL POINT THE REMOVAL OF THE EMBARGO ON ARMS.

JOHNSON, HIS WHITE HAIR SHAKING IN EMPHASIS, CALLED THAT

PROPOSED ACTION, WHICH IT IS ADMITTED BY MANY WOULD GIVE ENGLAND AND FRANCE AN ADVANTAGE OVER GERMANY IN AMERICAN ARMS MARKETS, THE "FIRST FALSE STEP."

IT "WILL PLACE US IN THE SHADOW, WALKING DOWN THE BLOODY PATH OF WAR," HE SAID.

THE ARGUMENT OF ADMINISTRATION SUPPORTERS FAVORING REPEAL, REDUCED TO ITS SIMPLEST TERMS, HE TOLD HIS COLLEAGUES, WAS "THAT IF WE DON'T STOP HITLER NOW HE WILL CONQUER EUROPE AND WE WILL BE NEXT."

"WHAT AN IDIOTIC ASSUMPTION!" HE DECLARED. "AND YET EARNEST AND HONEST MEN REPEAT IT. IF WE WERE NOT AFFLICTED WITH A WAR PSYCHOLOGY WE WOULD NOT LISTEN TO THIS REASON FOR REPEAL OF THE ARMS EMBARGO FOR ONE QUARTER OF A SECOND.

"HITLER WILL NEVER CONQUER EUROPE. IT HAS NEVER BEEN DONE BY ANYONE YET. COUNTLESS EFFORTS HAVE BEEN MADE TO ESTABLISH HEGEMONY BY FORCE AND NONE HAVE SUCCEEDED. THE CLOSEST APPROACH TO ANY WAS BY NAPOLEON, AND TO COMPARE HITLER TO NAPOLEON IS ABSURD."

"IT IS A MERE GAMBLE TO CHANGE OUR LAW SO AS TO HELP ONE SIDE DEFEAT THE OTHER AND YET ESCAPE THE CONSEQUENCES OF WAR. THE GAMBLE MAY BE SUCCESSFUL, BUT IT IS VERY SPECULATIVE, AND I WILL NOT GAMBLE WITH AMERICAN LIVES."

JOHNSON SAID HE THOUGHT THE UNITED STATES HAD LITTLE TO FEAR NO MATTER WHO WON THE EUROPEAN WAR. THE PHYSICAL EXHAUSTION OF EUROPE, HE ARGUED, WILL LEAVE THE PARTICIPANTS WITHOUT MANPOWER OR MATERIAL TO LAUNCH AGGRESSIVE CAMPAIGNS.

A164WX

OCT 21 1939

"HITLER COULD NEVER ATTACK THIS COUNTRY SUCCESSFULLY," HE SAID. "HE WOULD LEAVE BEHIND HIM REVOLT EVERYWHERE, A RESURGENT NATIONALISM WOULD LIKELY OVERCOME HIM, AND A GUERILLA WARFARE WOULD BE RIFE. THERE WOULD EVER BE BEHIND HIM THE 'BEAR WHO WALKS LIKE A MAN.'

"AND IF BY THAT TIME WE HAVE NOT DISSIPATED OUR RESOURCES WE COULD STAND UPON OUR OWN SHORES WITH OUR AIRPLANES AND CARRIERS AND A VASTLY SUPERIOR NAVY, AND LAUGH AT HIS EFFORTS. I HOPE WE HAVE HEARD THE LAST OF THE ARGUMENT--'WE'LL BE NEXT.'"

"OUR PARAMOUNT NATIONAL INTEREST IS IN STAYING OUT OF WAR AND PRESERVING OUR FORM OF GOVERNMENT, OUR ECONOMY AND OUR STANDARD OF LIVING. WAR WOULD DESTROY THEM. IN TRUTH WE CAN'T AFFORD ANOTHER WAR UNLESS IT IS ABSOLUTELY FORCED UPON US."

WITH REGARD TO THE "CASH AND CARRY" SECTIONS OF THE ADMINISTRATION LEGISLATION, JOHNSON CONGRATULATED DEMOCRATIC SPONSORS OF THE BILL FOR OFFERING AMENDMENTS WHICH WOULD STRIP CREDITS FROM THE MEASURE.

THE VETERAN SENATOR STARTED HIS ADDRESS IN SLOW, QUIET TONES. AS HE PROGRESSED, HIS VOICE ROSE TO A SHOUT. HE FREQUENTLY SHOOK HIS FIST FOR EMPHASIS.

THE SENATE CHAMBER WAS WELL-FILLED, AND MEMBERS GAVE JOHNSON THEIR UNDIVIDED ATTENTION.

TO THEM HE SAID AT ONE POINT, HIS VOICE TREMBLING:

"AH, YOU MEMBERS WHO GLIBLY TALK ABOUT ANOTHER FOREIGN WAR. DON'T YOU REALIZE WHAT ANOTHER WAR WILL BE?

"I AM SO OLD NOW THAT I HAVE BUT ONE THOUGHT -- THAT IS TO SERVE THE UNITED STATES OF AMERICA.

"I SPEAK TO YOU SOLEMNLY. I SPEAK WITH ALL THE EMPHASIS I CAN COMMAND, BECAUSE I BELIEVE THAT WE ARE ON THE BRINK OF A PRECIPICE AND THAT IF WE OBEY THE COMMANDS THAT ARE ISSUED TO US --IF WE OBEY THE COMMANDS OF BRITAIN AND FRANCE--WE ARE LIABLE TO BE FORCED OVER THE PRECIPICE."

JOHNSON SAID THAT TO REPEAL THE EMBARGO TO AID ENGLAND AND FRANCE WAS TO GAMBLE WITH THE POSSIBILITY THAT THIS COUNTRY WOULD BE IN-VOLVED IN THE EUROPEAN WAR.

"SUCH STAKES ARE INVOLVED IN THE GAMBLE THAT I DECLINE TO BE A PART OF IT," HE DECLARED. "IF THOSE SENATORS WISH TO GIVE MILITARY OR OTHER HELP TO THE ALLIES TO WIN THE WAR, AND IF THAT IS THEIR MOTIVE, THEN THE LIFTING OF THE EMBARGO IS AN ACT OF INTERVENTION.

WASHINGTON, OCT. 20-(AP)-UNITED STATES POSTAL OFFICIALS FORMALLY CALLED THE STATE DEPARTMENT'S ATTENTION TODAY TO GREAT BRITAIN'S ACTION IN STOPPING AMERICAN MAIL ADDRESSED TO GERMANY.

SECRETARY HULL BEGAN CONSIDERING WHETHER TO MAKE REPRESENTATIONS TO BRITAIN. QUERIED BY REPORTERS, HE SAID THAT THE GOVERNMENT WOULD RESERVE ALL ITS RIGHTS UNDER INTERNATIONAL LAW AND THAT HE WOULD GIVE THE QUESTION WHATEVER ATTENTION IT CALLED FOR.

POSTAL OFFICIALS SAID YESTERDAY THAT THE BRITISH, IN SEARCHING SHIPS FOR CONTRABAND, HAD TAKEN AMERICAN MAIL, CENSORED IT AND THEN SENT IT BACK TO THIS COUNTRY.

IT WAS ANNOUNCED HERE THAT MAIL TO GERMANY WOULD, IN FUTURE, BE ROUTED THROUGH ITALY TO AVOID INTERFERENCE BY BRITAIN. CONSEQUENTLY ANY CONTROVERSY ON THE SUBJECT MAY BE AVOIDED IN THE FUTURE.

TODAY'S INCIDENT RECALLED AN EXCHANGE OF NOTES BETWEEN THE UNITED STATES AND BRITAIN AND FRANCE DURING THE WORLD WAR. SECRETARY LANSING TOLD THE BRITISH IN JANUARY, 1916, THAT HE DID NOT ADMIT THEIR RIGHT TO REMOVE OR CENSOR MAILS CARRIED BY NEUTRAL VESSELS. THEREUPON, BRITAIN AND FRANCE PROMISED TO REFRAIN FROM SEIZING AND CONFISCATING "GENUINE CORRESPONDENCE."

THE CONTROVERSY WAS RENEWED LATER IN THE YEAR, HOWEVER, WHEN LANSING RECEIVED REPORTS THAT AMERICAN MAILS WERE AGAIN BEING SEIZED. HE ADMITTED BRITAIN MIGHT INTERCEPT AT SEA ALL MAIL COMING OUT OF AND GOING INTO EFFECTIVELY BLOCKADED ENEMY PORTS. HE ALSO ADMITTED THAT PARCEL POST MIGHT BE CONSIDERED MERCHANDISE AND TREATED AS SUCH UNDER THE RULES OF CONTRABAND. BUT HE POINTED OUT THAT THE TRADITIONAL POLICY OF THE UNITED STATES WAS TO PERMIT MAILS TO GO EVEN TO ENEMIES OF THIS COUNTRY.

FINALLY, HE PROPOSED THAT THE ISSUE SHOULD BE SUBMITTED TO ARBITRATION. HIS PROPOSAL WAS NOT ACCEPTED.

ON THE VERY DAY THE UNITED STATES ENTERED THE WORLD WAR LANSING DISPATCHED HIS LAST BLAST, TELLING THE ALLIES THE UNITED STATES RESERVED THE RIGHT TO PRESS CLAIMS FOR UNJUSTIFIED LOSSES SUFFERED AMERICAN CITIZENS BECAUSE OF DETENTION OF MONEY ORDERS, CHECKS, DRAFTS OR NOTES IN SEIZED MAILS.

WASHINGTON, OCT. 20-(AP)-POSTOFFICE OFFICIALS SAID TODAY THAT THEY WERE ROUTING MAIL ADDRESSED TO GERMANY BY WAY OF ITALY IN THE HOPE OF ESCAPING THE BRITISH BLOCKADE.

IN THE PAST MAIL FOR GERMANY HAS BEEN SENT BY WAY OF HOLLAND AND IN SOME INSTANCES SHIPS CARRYING IT HAVE BEEN STOPPED BY THE BRITISH, THE MAIL CENSORED, AND THEN RETURNED TO THIS COUNTRY. THE RETURNED MAIL, AS WELL AS OTHER MAIL FOR GERMANY, WILL NOW BE SENT TO ITALY FOR RESHIPMENT TO GERMANY.

OFFICIALS DECLINED TO EXPRESS ANY VIEW AS TO WHETHER THE NEW ROUTING WOULD RESULT IN THE MAIL REACHING GERMANY. THEY MERELY SAID THEY WERE HOPEFUL.

WAR TRADE (THIS DUPLICATION)

BY H.R.RAGSDALE

WASHINGTON, OCT. 20-(AP)-THE UNITED STATES MANUFACTURER WHO EXPECTS TO GET RICH OVERNIGHT SUPPLYING A SOUTH AMERICAN MARKET YIELDED UP BY A WARRING EUROPE HAS BEEN SWIGGING BANANA OIL.

A PROSPECTIVE MARKET LIES SOUTH OF THE RIO GRANDE ALL RIGHT. THE NEEDS EXIST, TO A LESSER DEGREE NOW THAN PROBABLY WILL BE TRUE IN THE FUTURE. BUT BOTH GOVERNMENTAL AND PRIVATE AGENCIES ARE BEGINNING TO WARN BUSINESS MEN TO GO SLOWLY ABOUT ANY EXPANSION DESIGNED TO PRODUCE GOODS FOR THE SOUTH AMERICAN TRADE.

CERTAIN LIMITATIONS STAND IN THE WAY. ONE IS THE OBVIOUS FACT THAT IF THE SOUTH AMERICAN COUNTRIES ARE UNABLE TO BUY FROM EUROPE IN PEACETIME QUANTITIES, THEY ALSO ARE UNABLE TO SELL TO THAT CONTINENT. THEIR SOURCE OF INCOME IS BEING CHOPPED. ONLY TO A SMALL DEGREE CAN THE UNITED STATES TAKE THE COMMODITIES THAT SOUTH AMERICA HAS BEEN SELLING TO EUROPE.

FOR INSTANCE, GERMANY, WHOSE SOUTH AMERICAN TRADE HAS BEEN GROWING STEADILY DURING THE LAST YEAR OR SO, TOOK ALMOST TWICE AS MUCH IN RAW MATERIALS AS IT SOLD IN MANUFACTURED PRODUCTS. ONE OF

30.24-4183

THE COMMODITIES GERMANY TOOK WAS BRAZILIAN COTTON. WITH MILLIONS OF BALES STORED IN SOUTHERN WAREHOUSES, THE UNITED STATES WOULD NOT BE IN A POSITION TO BUY MUCH SOUTH AMERICAN COTTON.

ONE BIG ITEM OF THE ARGENTINE AND URUGUAYAN TRADE WITH ENGLAND IS FROZEN BEEF. CATTLE PRODUCERS IN THE UNITED STATES RAISED A HOWL A FEW MONTHS AGO AT THE THOUGHT OF THE NAVY BUYING CANNED ARGENTINE BEEF. THERE IS NO CERTAIN ASSURANCE THAT A SIMILAR DIN WOULD NOT BE HEARD AGAINST IMPORTS OF BEEF THROUGH REGULAR TRADE CHANNELS.

UNLIKE THE GERMAN TRADE, HOWEVER, THE SALES TO ENGLAND AND FRANCE MAY CONTINUE FROM SOUTH AMERICA, THROUGH HAZARDOUS SHIPPING LANES, GUARDED BY WARSHIPS.

HOWEVER OPEN WARSHIPS MAY KEEP THESE LANES, TRADE EXPERTS SAY THAT SOUTH AMERICA WILL BE ABLE TO BUY MUCH LESS IN THOSE COUNTRIES THAN IT DID IN PEACETIME. A NATION WHOSE INDUSTRIES ARE GEARED TO A WAR EMERGENCY IS IN NO BETTER SHAPE TO HANDLE EXPORT TRADE THAN TONY Bob PASTOR WOULD HAVE BEEN TO PEDDLE PEANUTS DURING THE SIXTH ROUND OF HIS FIGHT WITH JOE LOUIS.

ASWX

THIS SHOULD HELP OPEN SOUTH AMERICAN MARKETS TO THE UNITED STATES, JUST AS WILL THE FACT THAT ITALY, RUSSIA, BELGIUM AND OTHER EUROPEAN NATIONS, HOWEVER NEUTRAL THEY MAY OR MAY NOT BE, WILL HAVE MORE DIFFICULTY GETTING GOODS TO AND FROM SOUTH AMERICA THROUGH A MINE-STUDDED, SUBMARINE-PATROLLED ATLANTIC.

YET, THE EXPERTS SAY THAT THE EXTENT OF THAT TRADE WITH SOUTH AMERICA RESTS LARGELY ON THE QUESTIONS OF HOW MUCH THE UNITED STATES IS WILLING TO BUY, HOW MUCH MONEY CAN BE LOANED TO SOUTH AMERICAN COUNTRIES, HOW MUCH CREDIT CAN BE EXTENDED.

THE EXPERTS DO FORESEE A WIDER USE IN THIS COUNTRY OF SOUTH AMERICAN OIL, MINERAL PRODUCTS, HIDES, AND PERHAPS WOOL IF THE WAR CONTINUES. THE UNITED STATES ALREADY BUYS ALL THE COFFEE AND BANANAS IT NEEDS.

SEVERAL OTHER THINGS STAND IN THE WAY OF A QUICK EXPANSION OF THE SOUTH AMERICAN MARKET. MUCH OF THE MACHINERY SOLD BY GERMANY TO EQUIP SOUTH AMERICAN PLANTS DIFFERS WIDELY FROM THAT BUILT IN THE UNITED STATES.

MANY MANUFACTURERS, TOO, HAVE FAILED TO CONSIDER THE TRANSPORTATION FACILITIES OF SOUTH AMERICAN COUNTRIES. THEY SHIP IN BULKY PACKAGES WHICH HAVE TO BE BROKEN INTO SMALLER LOTS FOR TRANSSHIPMENT INTO THE INTERIOR, OFTEN HAVE TO BE BROUGHT DOWN TO PACK MULE SIZE. THE GERMANS TOOK THIS INTO CONSIDERATION AND PACKAGED ACCORDINGLY.

OCT 21 1939

GENERALLY, THOUGH, THE EXPERTS COME BACK TO ONE MAIN THEME: THE SOUTH AMERICAN MARKET IS OPENING UP. THE WILL TO BUY IS STRONG, BUT THE CASH IS WEAK.

BY THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

MODERN TURKEY, NEW PARTNER OF BRITAIN AND FRANCE IN A MUTUAL ASSISTANCE PACT, IS AN ASIATIC LAND WHOSE HEART BEAT IS ATTUNED TO THE WEST.

OCT 21 1939

WITH ONE FOOT IN EUROPE AND THE OTHER IN ASIA, SHE FORMS A LAND BRIDGE LEADING TO THREE COAEUROP

BRIDGE LEADING TO THREE CONTINENTS--EUROPE, ASIA AND AFRICA.

ONLY THREE PER CENT OF HER 294,000 SQUARE MILES LIE IN EUROPE, BUT IT IS IN THAT DIRECTION THAT HER 16,000,000 INHABITANTS HAVE LOOKED DURING THE 16 YEARS SINCE SHE EMERGED AS A REPUBLIC FROM THE RUINS OF THE OLD OTTOMAN EMPIRE.

UNDER THE LATE KAMAL ATATURK THIS OLDEST OF NATIONS AND YOUNGEST OF REPUBLICS BEGAN SHAKING OFF OLD CUSTOMS AND ADOPTING THOSE OF EUROPE.

TURKEY'S WHOLE SOCIAL AND ECONOMIC STRUCTURE HAS BEEN MADE OVER WITH A SPEED COMPARABLE ONLY TO THE CHANGES WHICH HAVE BEEN MADE IN SOVIET RUSSIA.

HER PLANTS PRODUCE TEXTILES, PAPER, CELLULOSE AND SUGAR. STEEL PRODUCTION IS BEING STEPPED UP AND COAL MINES MODERNIZED.

ON THE MILITARY SIDE, SHE HAS A TRAINED ARMY OF 1,000,000 BACKED BY A LARGE FORCE OF RESERVES, INCLUDING UNITS OF WOMEN. AN AIR FORCE, WHOSE GOAL IS 1,000 PLANES, IS BEING DEVELOPED.

AS THE OWNER OF THE DARDANELLES, GATEWAY TO THE BLACK SEA AND ONE OF THE MOST STRATEGIC WATERWAYS OF THE EASTERN HEMISPHERE, TURKEY HAS BEEN THE OBJECT OF ARDENT WOOING OF LATE BY EUROPE'S RIVAL CAMPS.

THE DARDANELLES, THE SEA OF MARMORA AND THE STRAIT OF THE BOSPHORUS FORM A 172-MILE LONG BOTTLENECK WHICH SPLITS WESTERN TURKEY AND JOINS TWO OF EUROPE'S BUSIEST WATERS, THE BLACK SEA AND THE MEDITERRANEAN.

A100

THE SOUTHERN DOOR TO THIS IMPORTANT WATERWAY IS THE STRAIT OF THE DARDANELLES, 35 MILES OF WINDING WATERS NARROWING FROM FOUR MILES TO SLIGHTLY MORE THAN A HALF A MILE ACROSS.

THE NORTHERN DOOR IS THE 17-MILE STRAIT OF THE BOSPHORUS, RANGING FROM ONE AND A HALF MILE TO A THIRD OF A MILE WIDE.

IN BETWEEN IS THE SEA OF MARMORA, ABOUT THE SIZE OF LAKE CHAMPLAIN.

THE IMPORTANCE OF THIS ANCIENT SEA OUTLET IS REFLECTED IN THE FACT THAT IT HAS BEEN THE OBJECT OF CONTINUAL WARFARE FOR ITS CONTROL SINCE AGAMEMNON 1,200 YEARS BEFORE CHRIST LED HIS GREEKS AGAINST THE WALLS OF TROY NEAR THE DARDANELLES' SOUTHERN SHORE.

ONE OF THE WORLD WAR'S GREATEST CAMPAIGNS WAS FOUGHT HERE. THE ALLIES BATTLED FOR NINE MONTHS AND SUFFERED 130,000 CASUALTIES IN A FUTILE EFFORT TO DISLODGE THE TURKS, THEN ALLIED WITH GERMANY, TO OPEN UP COMMUNICATIONS WITH RUMANIA AND RUSSIA.

FOLLOWING THE WORLD WAR THE DARDANELLES WERE NEUTRALIZED BY TREATY IN 1920. BUT IN 1936 TURKEY RECEIVED PERMISSION TO REFORTIFY THEM.

EXCEPT FOR THE 16 YEARS IN WHICH THEY WERE DEMILITARIZED, TURKEY HAS BEEN IN CONTROL OF THE DARDANELLES SINCE 1453.

BY DEWITT MACKENZIE

THE SIGNING OF THE MOMENTOUS ANGLO-FRENCH-TURKISH MUTUAL AID PACT IS HAILED IN THE ALLIED CAPITALS AS A GREAT VICTORY OVER GERMANY, BEING CALCULATED TO ASSURE THEM DOMINATION IN THE VITAL EASTERN MEDITERRANEAN AREA.

BERLIN NATURALLY DECLINES TO SUBSCRIBE TO THIS VIEW, BUT THE GERMAN POLITICAL WORLD IS CALLED STUNNED.

NEUTRAL OBSERVERS GENERALLY AGREE THAT THE PACT ON THE FACE OF IT REPRESENTS A POWERFUL ALLIED GAIN, BUT THE AGREEMENT IS SO FAR REACHING THAT THE FULL IMPLICATIONS MUST AWAIT DEVELOPMENTS.

THE EFFECT ON ITALY IS BEING CLOSELY WATCHED. THE ITALIAN PRESS HAS ADOPTED AN ATTITUDE OF INDIFFERENCE, PENDING A CHANCE TO STUDY THE SITUATION.

30.24-4185

THAT THERE CAN BE NO REAL INDIFFERENCE TO A MATTER WHICH SO DEEPLY AFFECTS ITALIAN INTERESTS IN THE MEDITERRANEAN IS OBVIOUS. FOREIGN DIPLOMATS IN ROME EXPRESS THE BELIEF THAT ITALY WILL TAKE NO ACTION, BUT WILL CONTINUE HER NEUTRALITY.

SHOULD THIS PROVE TO BE THE CASE INDEFINITELY, IT WOULD MEAN THAT GERMANY HAD LOST THE HOPE OF ANY ACTIVE ASSISTANCE FROM HER ALLY. THE THREAT OF ITALIAN MILITARY INTERVENTION ON GERMANY'S SIDE HAS BEEN HELD OUT BY NAZIDOM RECENTLY.

COINCIDENT WITH THIS STRIKING TURKISH-ALLIED MOVE, THE NAZIS APPEARED TO BE QUIETLY PURSUING THEIR SEARCH FOR PEACE IN WHICH SURELY MUST BE THE MOST EXTRAORDINARY WAR OF ITS KIND IN HISTORY, IN SO FAR AS RELATES TO HOSTILITIES IN THE WESTERN THEATRE.

OCT 21 1939

THE CONFERENCE OF SCANDINAVIAN COUNTRIES ADJOURNED WITHOUT INITIATING ANY PEACE MOVE. THERE WERE TWO OTHER HIGHLY INTERESTING DEVELOPMENTS, HOWEVER.

ONE HAD TO DO WITH HERR HITLER'S DECREE ANNEXING CONQUERED POLISH PROVINCES. HE LEFT DANGLING IN THE AIR FOR FINAL DISPOSAL CLOSE TO 50,000 SQUARE MILES OF WHAT WAS THE HEART OF POLAND. GERMANY IS OCCUPYING THIS ZONE RIGHT UP TO THE RUSSIAN FRONTIER.

MANY OBSERVERS ARE WONDERING IF HERR HITLER INTENDS TO OFFER THIS FOR A NEW POLISH STATE IN AN EFFORT TO APPEASE THE ALLIES AND THUS END THE WAR.

AT THE SAME TIME THE GERMAN HIGH COMMAND, IN ANNOUNCING WITHDRAWAL OF THE FRENCH FROM GERMAN SOIL IN THE WEST, EMPHASIZED THAT THE NAZI TROOPS WHICH REOCCUPIED THIS AREA STOPPED AT THE FRENCH FRONTIER. THAT IS, THEY DIDN'T VENTURE TO TRESPASS ON FRENCH GROUND.

30.24-4185

THIS WAS A NEW WAY OF TELLING FRANCE THAT THE REICH HAS NO QUARREL WITH HER. ONE HEARD THE BELIEF EXPRESSED IN BERLIN THAT RESERVE IN HANDLING THE WESTERN CAMPAIGN WOULD MEAN MORE THAN A FRESH PEACE OFFER.

THE PURPOSE, OF COURSE, IS TO INSPIRE EITHER THE ANGLO-FRENCH ALLIES OR NEUTRALS TO MAKE ANOTHER OVERTURE FOR A CESSATION OF HOSTILITIES. NAZI OFFICIALS HAVE INDICATED THAT HERR HITLER HAS NOTHING FURTHER TO SAY ON THE SUBJECT.

THIS ATTITUDE OF FRIENDLINESS--OR PERHAPS ONE SHOULD SAY LACK OF HOSTILITY--TOWARD THE FRENCH HAS BEEN MAINTAINED BY THE NAZIS EVER SINCE THE OUTBREAK OF HOSTILITIES. OBSERVERS GENERALLY HAVE INTERPRETED THIS AS CALCULATED NOT O

HOSTILITY--TOWARD THE FRENCH HAS BEEN MAINTAINED BY THE NAZIS EVER SINCE THE OUTBREAK OF HOSTILITIES. OBSERVERS GENERALLY HAVE INTERPRETED THIS AS CALCULATED NOT ONLY TO FOSTER PEACE BUT TO CAUSE A SPLIT BETWEEN THE FRENCH AND ENGLISH.

THE EXTREME POLITENESS, AND PULLING OF PUNCHES, WHICH HAVE MARKED OPERATIONS ON THE WESTERN FRONT AT TIMES, REMINDS ME OF AN INCIDENT I ENCOUNTERED SOME YEARS AGO UP NEAR THE KHYBER PASS ON THE NORTHWEST FRONTIER OF INDIA. TWO OF THE SAVAGE TRIBES IN THAT FORBIDDING REGION WERE AT WAR, AND THEY HAD ENGAGED IN A PITCHED BATTLE.

OCT 21 1939

ONE OF THE TRIBES HAD MANAGED SOMEHOW TO GET HOLD OF AN ANCIENT, MUZZLE-LOADING CANNON, WHICH FIRED BIG ROUND-SHOT. THE OLD GUN WASN'T PARTICULARLY DANGEROUS, BUT IT WAS RATHER A TERRIFYING INNOVATION TO PRIMITIVE MEN WHO WERE USED ONLY TO THEIR ANTEQUATED RIFLES AND SWORDS. THE SIDE WHICH DIDN'T HAVE A CANNON CEASED FIRING AND SENT A DELEGATION ACROSS TO THE ENEMY UNDER A FLAG OF TRUCE.

"LOOK HERE," SAID THE MESSENGERS, "WE HAVEN'T ANY CANNON AND IT ISN'T FAIR FOR YOU TO USE ONE. IF YOU DON'T STOP IT WE WILL CALL THE BATTLE OFF AND NOT FIGHT YOU ANY MORE."

A117

FIGHTING BEING THE BREATH OF LIFE TO THESE WILD-MEN, THE DEMAND WAS AGREED TO--AND THE SCRAP WENT ON.

THE GERMAN HIGH COMMAND, IN THE SAME STATEMENT WHICH TOLD OF THE REOCCUPATION OF THE GROUND FROM WHICH THE FRENCH HAD WITHDRAWN, MINIMIZED THE WAR IN THE WESTERN THEATRE THUS FAR. IT MADE THE STAGGERING ASSERTION THAT THE GERMANS HAD LOST ONLY 196 MEN ON THIS FRONT UP TO OCTOBER 17, WITH 356 WOUNDED AND 114 MISSING.

TODAY--OCTOBER 20--IS THE ANNIVERSARY OF THE BEGINNING-PROPER OF THE GREAT BATTLE OF THE YSER, FOUGHT IN BELGIUM NEAR THE START OF THE WORLD WAR IN 1914. THIS ENGAGEMENT HALTED THE LAST GERMAN ATTEMPT IN THAT FALL TO REACH THE CHANNEL PORTS. DURING THE SOME TEN DAYS IN WHICH THE MAIN FIGHTING LASTED THE BELGIANS AND FRENCH HAD 20,000 CASUALTIES AND IT IS SAID THAT THE GERMAN LOSSES PROBABLY WERE GREATER.

IN THE BRIEF WEEKS PRIOR TO THAT THERE HAD BEEN MANY BLOODY MAJOR ENGAGEMENTS IN BOTH THE EASTERN AND WESTERN THEATRES. ONE DOESN'T SUGGEST FOR A MOMENT THAT THIS IS 1914, OR THAT CONDITIONS NOW PERMIT OF SUCH ACTIVITY.

MILITARY EXPERTS SEEM AGREED, HOWEVER, THAT MUCH MORE COULD HAVE HAPPENED LEGITIMATELY THAN HAS SINCE THE START OF HOSTILITIES BETWEEN THE ANGLO-FRENCH ALLIES AND THE NAZIS. MOST FOLK CERTAINLY EXPECTED MORE FROM THE MUCH TOUTED AIR-FORCES.

NAZI PLANES ATTACK CONVOY, 4 DOWNED; Hore-Belisha Bars a False Peace; Turkish Pact Assailed in Moscow

Four Craft Felled in North Sea Fight, 2 Off Coast of Norway

CONVOY SAFE

LONDON, Oct. 21 (AP).—British fighting planes which raced today to answer the call of a ship convoy being attacked from the air were reported tonight to have defeated the German attacking squadron.

Official accounts of the air battle over the North Sea said three of the 12 German attackers were shot down and a fourth forced to alight at sea by fire from the planes and escort vessels of the convoy. The type of ships being convoyed and their destination was not given, but it was stated none was damaged.

Nazis Blocked in East, Hore-Belisha Says

[In what was apparently another battle, two German planes were shot down out of a squadron of six which attacked two British destroyers and a British seaplane about 10 miles off Norway today, according to reports by a fishing crew in Bergen, Norway. The British seaplane was also forced down, the fishermen said, but with the protection of the destroyers later managed to resume flight.]

In London Britain's War Secretary, Leslie Hore-Belisha, declared that further eastward expansion of Germany had been blocked by Russia and Turkey and he warned that a mass attack by the Germans to break the Western land and sea blockade would be a costly venture.

Hore-Belisha indicated the Allies would use "waiting war" tactics to fight Germany.

In addition to stating that "recent military experience shows that an offensive against prepared positions is unprofitable"—which presumably would apply to the Allies as well as Germany—the War Secretary said Germany for her part might "remain quiescent in the hope that we will prematurely take up the offensive against them."

'We Are Concerned With Human Spirit'

In his remarks, made in a broadcast on the progress of the war, Hore-Belisha said in connection with Britain's war aims:

"We did not enter the fight merely to reconstitute Czecho-Slovakia. Nor do we fight merely to reconstitute a Polish state. Our aims are not confined by geographical frontiers.

"We are concerned with the frontiers of the human spirit. Only the defeat of Nazi Germany can lighten the darkness which now shrouds our cities and lighten the horizon for all Europe and the world."

The Admiralty and Air Ministry communique on the air battle said "our aircraft sustained no casualties" and "no ship of the convoy or escort was damaged."

The German raiding planes

30.24-4187

30.24-4187

"were engaged by fighters and escort vessels," the communique said.

"At least three enemy aircraft were brought down by our fighters. A fourth raider after receiving intensive fire from our aircraft was forced to land on the sea," it said.

Two unidentified airplanes were sighted off the East Coast in the afternoon and air raid warning signals were sounded in the Hull and Grimsby areas.

The official announcement did not directly connect the appearance of these planes with the raid on the convoy, however.

A witness at one of the East Coast towns where warnings were sounded said that immediately after the warning he saw four planes which looked like British fighters streak out toward the sea.

Heavy Explosions Heard from Sea

The fighters later returned, circled around and went off again, the witness said. Heavy explosions were heard coming from out at sea after the "all clear" had sounded and "large numbers" of airplanes passed over the town."

The communique did not give the exact location of the engagement but a report passed by censors said gunfire and bomb explosions were heard from the sandhills of the Lincolnshire coast.

Another report tonight said anti-aircraft guns from ships at sea fired at three planes flying about 5,000 feet during the afternoon. Puffs of black smoke could be seen around the planes, the reports said, and some shrapnel fell inland.

Figures on the registration of men between 20 and 22 for military service today gave the total as 216,231.

ENGLISH HINT AT REPRISALS

R. A. F. May Substitute Bombs for Leaflets if Nazis Press Attacks on Scotland.

LONDON, Oct. 21 (A.P.).—The Air Ministry announced tonight that three of twelve German airplanes attacking a British convoy in the North Sea today had been shot down and another forced to alight at sea. There were no British casualties.

The communique read:

"It has now been ascertained that twelve enemy aircraft took part in the attack on the convoy in the North Sea reported earlier this evening by the Air Ministry.

"They were engaged by fighters and escort vessels. At least three enemy aircraft were brought down by our fighters. A fourth raider, after receiving intensive fire from our aircraft, was forced to land on the sea.

"All reports are not yet received. Our aircraft sustained no casualties. No ship of the convoy or escort was damaged."

Warning on East Coast.

Appearance of unidentified aircraft off England's east coast at 2 P. M. caused air raid warnings in the Hull and Grimsby areas, on opposite sides of the Humber estuary.

The all-clear signal was sounded in half an hour, but later in the afternoon a report passed by censors said that gunfire and the heavy explosions of bombs had been heard from the sandhills on the Lincolnshire coast.

At one coast town the drone of aircraft and the sound of gunfire was heard before the warning was given. Crowds en route to football games went to shelters. On one football field three players who were air raid precaution wardens left for duty and the game was deferred.

Report Casualties to Foe After Attack in North Sea

LONDON, Oct. 21 (AP).—German aircraft attacked a British convoy this afternoon and were driven off by British planes and anti-aircraft fire which inflicted casualties, the Air Ministry announced.

The Air Ministry announcement said:

"Enemy aircraft were sighted this morning by a convoy in the North Sea.

"In response to a signal, fighter aircraft were dispatched and the enemy made off.

"This afternoon an actual attack was made on the convoy by enemy aircraft. The escort vessels opened fire and our fighters inflicted casualties on the enemy."

Earlier the Ministry had announced that two unidentified airplanes were sighted off the east coast of England about 2 P. M. and fighter aircraft were sent up to intercept them."

The statement did not say whether any contact was made at this time.

The communique concluded:

"Air raid warnings were sounded in the Hull and Grimsby areas at about 2:30 and the all-clear signal was given in both areas about half an hour later."

French Also Sight Planes.

NANCY, Oct. 21 (A. P.).—Anti-aircraft guns fired at planes during an air raid alarm which lasted from 10:16 A. M. to 10:[illegible] A. M. today, military sources disclosed.

The planes were reported flying north at a high altitude.

Warning sirens excited the residents of Nancy, but the alarm ended without an air attack.

Nancy is seventy miles west of Strasbourg, which is on the Rhine frontier.

By GODFREY ANDERSON

WITH THE BRITISH ROYAL AIR FORCE, SOMEWHERE IN FRANCE, Oct. 21 (AP).—(Passed by R. A. F. Field Censor).—If German air raids continue on Scotland, Britain's Royal Air Force soon may be ordered to cease scattering propaganda "confetti" over Germany and go into action with real bombs for the first time since the bombing of the German Fleet at Kiel Harbor.

(The British on Sept. 4—the second day of the war with Germany—raided German naval craft at the entrance of the Kiel Canal and at Wilhelmshaven, German naval port. The Germans denied the English claim of damaging two battleships. The British are not known to have made any bombing attacks on Germany since.)

The decision to abandon leaflet warfare and fill the bombracks with explosives is a matter of high policy and would be taken by the British Cabinet in consultation with the French.

PLENTY OF PLANES.

The machines now concealed in secret airdromes over hundreds of square miles behind the Maginot Line would probably be the spearhead for such an attack if it were ordered.

Should the decision for such action come in midwinter, bad weather conditions hardly would be likely to prevent it being carried out.

MUD PROVIDED FOR.

Special steps have been taken at all the airdromes here to prevent the bombers from being "earthbound" by the winter mud and they should be able to take off and enter action against the enemy in all but the very worst of conditions.

In this respect the situation is far different from that which existed during the last war, when the planes of both sides were often kept grounded for weeks at a time because of heavy rains, low clouds or fog.

HORE-BELISHA DECLARES FOR WAITING WAR

But British Minister Says Allies Will Fight Foe to the Finish.

PICKING TIME TO ATTACK

Asserts Russia Has Checkmated Germany to East, Barring Road to Rumania.

LONDON, Oct. 21 (A. P.).—Leslie Hore-Belisha, Secretary of State for War, said tonight that Russia has checkmated Germany in the east. He indicated that the allies would use "waiting war" tactics to fight Germany to a finish.

"No peace proposals which rely for their sanction on the broken word can be considered," he said.

In a broadcast on the progress of the war, ending its seventh week, the former newspaper man said:

"Three courses are open to Nazi Germany—to try to smash through by land, sea and air; to remain quiescent in the hope we will prematurely take up the offensive against them, or lure us into the discussion of specious terms of peace."

Offensives Are Unprofitable.

As for the first course, he continued, "recent military experience shows that an offensive against prepared positions is unprofitable."

"On the western front there are strong defenses and they become stronger every day," he asserted. "The enemy will pay dearly for any massed attack upon them."

In words that recalled Prime Minister Chamberlain's outline of strategy as the art of concentrating a decisive force at a decisive point at a decisive time, Mr. Hore-Belisha said:

"Our commanders are not likely in advance of the time that suits them unnecessarily to risk the lives of those who compose our armies."

Of Germany's ambitions he said: "Poland was but an item. The Baltic States were to be dominated, but from these German nationals are now in retreat. Russia has claimed this sphere of influence. The corn fields of the Ukraine were coveted. Russia has made sure of this harvest. Through Poland Nazi Germany was to have an entrance to Rumania. This entrance has been barred—by Russia."

He referred elatedly to the new French-British-Turkish pact signed on Thursday.

Time Depends on Factories.

The War Minister described the British Expeditionary Force in France as "the vanguard of the great army now training in Britain."

"This in its turn will be reinforced by militiamen [illegible] their age group—another 250,000 registered today—and by volunteers," he asserted. "Of these we have already taken 50,000. Nazi Germany must watch this gathering momentum and realize that time is on the side of France and of Britain.

"The final magnitude of our effort will depend on the extent to which factories can supply equipment and munitions for our men."

Recalling Mr. Chamberlain's words that Great Britain was determined to "redeem Europe from the perpetual and recurring fear of German aggression," Mr. Hore-Belisha asserted:

"We did not enter the fight merely to reconstitute Czecho-Slovakia. Nor do we fight merely to reconstitute a Polish State. Our aims are not confined by geographical frontiers. We are concerned with the frontiers of the human spirit. Only the defeat of Nazi Germany can lighten the darkness which now shrouds our cities and lighten the horizon for all Europe and the world."

LLOYD GEORGE DEFENDS VIEWS

Says Peace Stand Has Been Viciously Misstated.

HOLDS RUSSIA TO BE KEY

Wants Great Britain to Press for a Better Understanding.

CARNARVON, Wales, Oct. 21 (A. P.).—David Lloyd George told his Welsh constituents today that his advocacy of a general world settlement had been viciously misrepresented and that "you can be firm at a conference, as well as on the battlefield."

Great Britain's world war Prime Minister maintained that he was entirely consistent in declaring for no surrender to Germany and simultaneously in showing a willingness to attempt a conference settlement of the European war.

If in such a conference, he said, "it became clear that Hitler had no intention of doing justice and that he meant to cling with greedy tenacity to his conquests, we could quit the conference with a clear conscience that we had done our best to secure an honorable peace."

Holds Russia to Be the Key.

He once more argued vigorously that Russia was the key to the whole problem. He solemnly warned his hearers that Russian collaboration with Germany might well prolong the war, because it had greatly diminished the chances of an effective blockade of Germany.

[Mr. Lloyd George pleaded in the House of Commons on October 3 that the Government be not too hasty in rejecting any serious peace proposals and thereby alienate Italy and Russia. Although Prime Minister Chamberlain said he agreed "entirely," Mr. Lloyd George was attacked in many quarters for making what Alfred Duff Cooper, former first Lord of Admiralty, described as a "suggestion of surrender."]

Hails Pact With Turks.

The veteran statesman characterized the signing of the British-French-Turkish mutual assistance pact as a notable diplomatic triumph, adding:

"Let us follow this victory by coming to a better understanding with Russia. Is it not time to accept the Russian idea of an international conference?"

Through Russian collaboration, he said, "Germany has been protected from any attack on her eastern and most vulnerable front."

"Even the road through Rumania is blocked by Russia," he added. "The allied armies therefore can only get at Germany through the formidable Siegfried Line."

He asked why British trade negotiations with Russia were not pushed along with the same promptitude and effectiveness as the Turkish negotiations.

He argued that there still was time to revive Russia's five-Power conference idea of last February, with the addition of the United States.

Time and Manpower Bolster Allies Along Western Front

England Observes Trafalgar Day Fighting Hitler With Same Naval Blockade She Used Against Napoleon.

LONDON, Oct. 21 (A. P.).—This is Trafalgar Day, and while Britain honors the memory of her greatest naval hero, Admiral Lord Nelson, 250,000 of her youngest men carry out his famous words, "England expects that every man will do his duty." The estimated quarter-million between 20 and 22, called up for service some weeks ago, must be registered by tonight for possible duty.

While they were signing up, wreaths were brought to the base of the tall Nelson column in busy Trafalgar Square, commemorating Britain's victory over the French fleet off the coast of Spain exactly 134 years ago. As England fought Napoleon then, so she fights Hitler with sea power, tightening a blockade of Germany while troops stand beside the French in the mud of the western front.

Time and Men.

British military authorities said that both time and manpower were strengthening the Allies on the western front. It was disclosed that the flow of troops which put 158,000 British soldiers on French soil in the first five weeks of the war had been continued and might be increased.

British transports are crossing to France at an average rate of three a night, landing thousands of troops to reinforce the armies on the western front. One authority said that with the approach of winter, each week of waiting "makes the chance of German large-scale operations that much less."

The new mutual assistance agreement among Turkey, Britain and France held first rank on the diplomatic front here, with the press reflecting extreme satisfaction and emphasizing reports of German anger at Turkey. Prominence was given to King George's message to the President of Turkey saying, "there could be no better proof than this treaty affords of the desire of the three countries to work in common accord for the advancement of the cause of peace and good will among the nations."

On all sides, the point was emphasized that the door remained open for friendly relations between Turkey and Russia. The Daily Sketch, saying that the way to agreement was paved by interference on the part of Germany's Ambassador to Turkey, Franz von Papen, called him "God's gift to the British Foreign Office."

The Daily Express said: "Hitler is worried. In the East, Turkey has sewed up the Mediterranean. In the West, his lightning peace has failed to strike.

"Within six months, he storms, he will destroy the British fleet and paralyze the British nation. On this day, 134 years ago, Napoleon made the same attempt at Trafalgar."

The public learned at least one happy result of the blackout—it has saved so much electricity that the rationing of current has been eased. Consumers are allowed as much electricity and gas as they were using a year ago.

The rationing of food, however, is drawing near. The distribution of ration books is to be started at the end of next week and it was expected that rationing might start about ten days later.

Beginning tomorrow, restrictions on the movement of printed matter in and out of the country will be relaxed, allowing freer movement of newspapers, books, maps and photographs.

Turkish Pact Assailed in Moscow

'Izvestia' Asserts Attempt to Split Soviet-German Entente Did Not Succeed

Will Keep 'Watchful Eye' on Dardanelles

Ankara Is Warned That Casting Its Lot In With Allies May Be Perilous

Moscow, Oct. 21 (AP)—Russia served notice today as "the greatest Black Sea power" she "must keep a watchful eye on everything" related to the Turkey-controlled Dardanelles, despite the British-French-Turkish pact.

The Government newspaper Izvestia's bitter attacks on the tri-power treaty [illegible] it an unsuccessful attempt to drive a wedge between Germany and the U. S. S. R. made diplomats wonder what effect the pact would have on Finnish-Russo negotiations which resume Monday.

The Soviet Union, which is the greatest power on the Black Sea (others are Turkey, Rumania and Bulgaria), is obligated to follow attentively everything connected with the approaches to the Black Sea," Izvesta said.

[Britain and France meanwhile were said in Ankara reports to have followed up their pact with Turkey with a 60,000,000 pound credit (about $240,000,000).

The Western powers, it was reported, would advance 25,000,000 pounds (about $100,000,000) of this sum in the form of arms and ammunition to enable Turkey to immediately strengthen her position as a guardian of the Dardanelles.]

TURKEY IN WAR ORBIT

The newspaper said the pact with the Allies "drew Turkey into the orbit of war" and attempted to "draw the U. S. S. R. into a combination which is chiefly directed against Germany and eventual enemies of England and France in the Mediterranean (presumably Italy)."

Russia retained "freedom of action, which cannot be said about Turkey—Turkey has assumed a responsibility which cannot fail to be reflected on Turkish policies within the nearest future," the paper added.

Some political observers thought the failure of Russian-Turkish negotiations might make Moscow adopt a moderate tone with Finland, while others pointed out that Russia, nettled by the Turkey breakdown, might increase her demands.

An indication of the growing ties to Germany was seen in the unofficial report that Russia had recognized Franz Tiso as the first Slovak Minister to Russia.

The result was a foregone conclusion as were Adolf Hitler's famous plebiscites.

Former prisoners, peasant women and factory workers were among the nominees for the Assembly. Agitators throughout the region were urging a vote "for a new and happy life with the U. S. S. R."

A Tass (official Soviet news agency) dispatch from Kaunas denied a report attributed to the Lithuanian newspaper Twenty Amgeus that almost 200,000 Ukrainians had escaped from the territory occupied by the Soviet Army into Germany.

Joseph Stalin, Premier-Foreign Commissar Vyacheslav Molotov and Mikhail Kalinin, chairman of the Presidium, relaxed from their recent labors of negotiating with foreign statesmen by attending the premiere last night at the Armenian opera, "Almast."

Watchful Eye on Black Sea.

Izvestia declared that a Turco-Russian agreement was incompatible "with Turkey's undertakings under the British-Turkish treaty," which creates, it said, a new balance of power in the Mediterranean. It added:

"The Soviet Union, being the greatest Black Sea Power, must keep a watchful eye on everything related to the approaches to the Black Sea."

The editorial acknowledges that that the Soviet State maintained "freedom of action which cannot be said about Turkey—Turkey has assumed responsibility which cannot fail to be reflected on Turkish policies within the nearest future."

"In any case the U. S. S. R. has no reason to be sorry for what happened," Izvestia said.

Polish 'Plebiscite.'

Propaganda meanwhile was going full blast for tomorrow's "plebiscite" in the Polish Western Ukraine and Western White Russia, the former Polish territories occupied by the Red army after the Russo-German partitionment of the land.

Delegates will be elected to an assembly, which in turn will vote whether to join the Soviet State through annexation to the Ukrainian and White Russian republics of the U. S. S. R.

Izvestia declared that a Turco-Russian agreement was incompatible "with Turkey's undertakings under the British-Turkish treaty," which creates, it said, a new balance of power in the Mediterranean. It added:

"The Soviet Union, being the greatest Black Sea Power, must keep a watchful eye on everything related to the approaches to the Black Sea."

The editorial acknowledges that Russian interests were not directly affected and that the proctocol to the treaty freed Turkey from any obligation that would involve her in war with the U. S. S. R.

But, it said, "the treaty cannot be regarded as an instrument of peace. It testifies to the fact that Britain and France drew Turkey into the orbit of war."

Izvestia said that "under this treaty Turkey is pledged to fight on the side of Britain and France against Germany and Italy."

"It is said that the U. S. S. R. may lose as a result of this alliance of Turkey with the British-French coalition," the editorial continued. "This, of course, is wrong. The U. S. S. R. did not join this bloc and preserves neutrality and a free hand. This certainly is good from the viewpoint of the preservation of peace.

Will Affect Future Policy.

"However, the same cannot be said of Turkey. She assumed such a responsibility which cannot but tell upon her policy in the very near future. At any rate, the U. S. S. R. has no ground to regret what has happened."

The editorial, accompanying the published text of the treaty signed Thursday night at Ankara, began with an analysis of the circumstances in which Britain and France, on one hand, or Turkey on the other, would be required to go to the other's aid in the Mediterranean.

Tracing the history of British-French-Turkish co-operation, it pointed out that the Western Powers had become belligerents since the first temporary understanding last spring and declared that "in light of the new situation" the treaty acquired "particular significance."

Izvestia acknowledged British-French interest because of Turkey's strategic position in the eastern Mediterranean.

"However, certain circumstances lead one to believe that plans of British-French diplomacy went beyond a mere pact with Turkey,"

Sees Turkey in Orbit of War

Moscow Adds That New Pact Fails to Drive Wedge Between Russia and Germany.

MOSCOW, Oct. 21 (A. P.).—The Government newspaper Izvestia today assailed the new British-French-Turkish mutual assistance pact, asserting that it "drew Turkey into the orbit of war."

In its first comment on the pact, which followed the failure of Soviet Russia to negotiate a similar agreement with Turkey, Izvestia said that the tri-Power treaty was an "unsuccessful attempt to drive a wedge between Germany and the U. S. S. R., also to draw the U. S. S. R. into a combination which is chiefly directed against Germany and eventual enemies of England and France in the Mediterranean (presumably Italy)."

"This agreement," the paper continued, "cannot be evaluated as an instrument of peace. It drew Turkey into the orbit of war."

Denying that Russia would lose from such an alliance, Izvestia said

30.24 - 4189

30.24-4189

Izvestia declared.

"British Prime Minister Chamberlain in his speech in Parliament stated that British-French-Turkish negotiations virtually were concluded three weeks ago and signature of the pact was postponed in connection with negotiations conducted at Moscow by Turkish Min-Minister of Foreign Affairs Sukru Saracoglu."

Izvestia continued:

"Chamberlain pointed out that hopes were entertained for conclusion of a parallel mutual assistance pact between the U. S. S. R. and Turkey.

"However, that proved impossible in view of the incompatibility of the terms of the Soviet-Turkish agreement with Turkey's undertakings under the Soviet-French-Turkish treaty.

"From Chamberlain's statement it follows that British-French diplomacy placed definite hopes on a Soviet-Turkish agreement. The British and French press alleged that the British-French-Turkish treaty represents a 'test of Soviet-German friendship.'

Soviet Policy of Peace.

"All this inevitably creates the impression that there existed certain plans to drive a wedge between Germany and the Soviet Union.

"It becomes clear that an unsuccessful attempt was made through parallel pacts between the U. S. S. R. and Turkey on one hand and among Britain, France and Turkey on the other hand.

"The Soviet Union, true to its policy of peace and protection of the interests of the Soviet State, proved able timely and correctly to evaluate the British-French diplomatic move based on gambling on the traditional friendship between Turkey and the U. S. S. R.

"The clear and determined position of the Soviet Union thwarted the 'artful' plans of those who attempted once more to fan enmity between Germany and the Soviet Union."

60,000,000 pound credit (about $240,000,000).

The Western powers, it was reported, would advance 25,000,000 pounds (about $100,000,000) of this sum in the form of arms and ammunition to enable Turkey immediately to strengthen her position as a guardian of the Dardanelles, gateway to the Black Sea.

There was no confirmation of this report available tonight either from Turkish officials or from the British or French embassies.

Conferred With Turks

But it was understood that Gen. Maxime Weygand, commander-in-chief of French forces in the Eastern Mediterranean, and Lieut. Gen. Archibald P. Wavell, British Middle East commander, had discussed the question of military equipment for Turkey in their talks with Turkish staff officers.

The conversations, which started Wednesday, ended tonight with a banquet at the French embassy. The French and British commanders were scheduled to fly back to their posts tomorrow.

Meanwhile, high Turkish circles went into a diplomatic huddle which may have a far-reaching effect on the fate of southeastern Europe in the war.

Saracoglu Reports

Sukru Saracoglu, Foreign Minister, returning from Moscow after three week of unsuccessful negotiations for a Turkish-Soviet Russian pact, made a report to President Ismet Inonu and the Turkish Cabinet.

Saracoglu gave them, unofficial sources said, details of Russia's demand that the Dardanelles be closed to British warships, which was reported to have caused the breakdown of negotiations.

No official announcement was made of the actual last-minute demands made by the Kremlin, and diplomatic observers anxiously awaited revelation of more details of the conversations.

Gives First-Hand Data

Saracoglu also was able to give the Cabinet first-hand information of Soviet diplomacy in dealing with Estonia, Latvia, Lithuania and Finland.

Diplomatic observers believed the action now to be taken by the Turkish Government depended upon:

1. Whether Russia agrees to resume negotiations on the basis of the original formula by which it was hoped a Turkish-Russian pact would be concluded;
2. Whether Russia, under German pressure, makes a new effort to force a wedge between Turkey, Britain and France despite the signing of the mutual assistance pact.
3. Whether the Soviet extends its aggressive diplomacy into the Balkans by making demands on Rumania for the return of Bessarabia;
4. Whether Turkey will renew her efforts to organize a neutral Balkan entente without Russian approval or with Italy assuming the sponsorship in Rome.

Minister Cheered

Saracoglu gave no hint in his brief statement to the Turkish press what developments might be expected next.

The foreign minister, who arrived at Istanbul yesterday aboard a Soviet warship, came here by train today. Crowds gathered to cheer him at stations across the Ankara plains en route and he was met here by a large gathering of Turkish officials and foreign diplomats.

Huge Loan Reported.

ANKARA, Oct. 21 (A. P.).—Great Britain and France were reported in reliable quarters tonight to have granted Turkey a credit of £60,000,000 ($240,000,000) in connection with the newly signed mutual assistance pact.

The Western Powers, it was reported, would advance £25,000,000 (about $100,000,000) of this sum in arms, ammunition and other military equipment, thus strengthening immediately Turkey's position as a guardian of the Dardanelles.

There was no confirmation of the report available tonight from Turkish officials or from the British and French embassies here.

War Planes for Turk

Military leaders of Great France and Turkey com[illegible] tensive plans today for military co-operation under the new treaty.

The plans, however, will become effective only in the event that the nations are called upon to fulfill their pledges of mutual aid by future developments.

[These pledges do not obligate Turkey to enter the current war of Great Britain and France against Germany, on its present basis, nor to fight under any circumstance against Soviet Russia.]

The conferences, which began on Wednesday, concluded as Gen. Maxime Weygand, Commander-in-Chief of French forces in the eastern Mediterranean, and Lieut.-Gen. Archibald P. Wavell, the British middle east Commander, prepared to return to their respective headquarters by plane.

Marshal Fevsi Cakmack, Chief of the Turkish Army, described the results as "highly satisfactory."

The military leaders are said to have decided on the exact co-operation and [illegible] of their staffs in case of war. Great Britain and France were reported to have pledged large quantities of fighting planes and war equipment for quick delivery to Turkey, as well as assistance for the Turkish Navy in the Black Sea.

Berlin, Oct. 21—Authorized officials held tonight that Turkey's step in allying herself with Great Britain and France might turn her into another Poland—meaning she would lose her independence.

Signs taken as ominous for the republic were seen as the press reproduced an article from Izvestia, Soviet Russian Government newspaper in Moscow, which authoritative quarters interrupted as a warning to Turkey."

Izvestia's article said the three-power mutual assistance pact "cannot be evaluated as an instrument of peace" but assertions that the treaty could injure Russia were "wrong." It also said Russia "has no ground to regret what has happened."

Declared Threat To Turkey

Authoritative sources said those passages "are a threat to Turkey."

"Russia does not need to regret Turkey's new alliance," it was said, "because she is free now to occupy the Dardanelles if she desires. Before, with Turkey friendly toward Russia, it would have been harder."

There was a general German belief that Russia had made up her mind to deal roughly with Turkey.

Dienst aus Deutschland, informed news commentary close to the Foreign Office, said Russia's reaction to "the new situation"—as Izvestia called it—"its background and repercussions leave no room for the slightest doubt or misunderstanding."

[Associated Press Editor's Note: Turkish Foreign Minister Sukru Saracoglu, returning to Turkey Friday from fruitless negotiations for a Turkish-Russian pact, declared he was convinced the British-French-Turkish treaty "will not have the slightest detrimental effect on the old and sincere Turkish-Soviet friendship."]

Dardanelles And Soviet Now

The Dardanelles is the strategic gateway to the Black Sea. Commentators said that as long as Turkey had remained neutral, her control of the strait was satisfactory to Russia.

But Turkey's alliance with Britain, they asserted, gave the Soviet Union cause to assume mastery of the gateway and Turkey.

With the Western Front reported comparatively quiet, officials resumed the peace-time week-end practice of departing their offices Saturday afternoon.

Adolf Hitler had as guests at dinner in the Chancellery a number of Nazi district leaders, providing opportunity for discussion of the functioning of war-time measures in the nation, such as ration cards.

Point to Poland's Fate.

BERLIN, Oct. 21 (A. P.).—Informed Nazis intimated today that Turkey may [illegible] another Poland.

The intimation—and it was no more than that—was based on the fact that Izvestia, the Soviet Russian Government newspaper in Moscow, had said that Russia had no reason to regret Turkey's action in signing a mutual assistance pact with Great Britain and France.

Authoritative persons said: "Russia does not need to regret Turkey's new alliance because she is now free to occupy the Dardanelles if she desires."

Izvestia's editorial was reproduced in the entire German press.

Commentators pointed out that Russia throughout her history had resisted British attempts to control the Dardanelles, strategic gateway to the Black Sea. They said that, as long as Turkey remained neutral, Russia could be satisfied to leave the Dardanelles in the hands of her friend.

But now that Turkey had definitely allied herself with Great Britain, they asserted, cause was given for Russia herself to assume the mastery not only of the strategic gateway, but of Turkey also.

They said they believed that Turkey would probably be carved up as Poland had been by Germany and Russia.

Nazis Accept Challenge.

Nazi sources let it be known that Germany has accepted what she regards as the challenge of Britain and France.

A release by DNB, which said that it [illegible] had been accepted, was described authoritatively as introducing no new element into the existing situation. Officials said it was intended merely to combat constantly recurring reports that Germany was on her knees, begging for peace.

Adolf Hitler made a peace offer once, it was said in sources close to the Foreign Office, and if the hatchet is to be buried now the initiative must come from the other side.

Both DNB, official news agency, and spokesmen in high places cautioned against assuming on the basis of the Thursday war communique that Germany was making conciliatory gestures toward France.

No Concession to France

Informed sources said Germany contemplated no concession to France and, the French-British-Turkish mutual assistance treaty notwithstanding, the German attitude was unchanged.

Commentators and the D. N. B. declared that the German High Command was not weakening and that to interpret the army's reserve as such was "absurd."

"England and France have rejected the Fuehrer's outstretched hand," D. N. B. said. "They threw down the gantlet and Germany picked it up."

"Britain's Stooge"

Nazis previously had described Turkey as "Britain's stooge," declaring she had chosen a "dangerous route" by entering the agreement with Britain and France.

Although German political leaders professed to see Turkey's reservation against being drawn into war against Russia as a loophole, attacks on the treaty were bitter.

Franz von Papen, German Ambassador to Turkey, who returned yesterday from Ankara, has delivered a report on the pact to Hitler.

Reports that the German Ambassador to Russia and Italy had been recalled for conferences with Chancellor Hitler were denied in authoritative German quarters today. It was said that there was no present intention of summoning either home.

A German effort to convince the world that the British were to blame for the sinking of the liner Athenia is growing more vigorous, Berlin morning newspapers, with unanimity indicating official inspiration, devoted their entire front pages to alleged disclosures of Gustav Anderson, an American citizen and a survivor of the sinking.

"Athenia Swindle Unmasked Before American Investigating Committee," Hitler's Voelkischer Beobachter headlined a story ascribing the attack to three British destroyers.

Italy To Maintain Balkan Interests, Ciano Declares

Rome Concludes Pact With Reich For Transfer Of 200,000 Germans From Italian Tyrol

[By the Associated Press]

Rome, Oct. 21—Italy's determination to maintain her interests in the Balkans in spite of the new situation created by the Turkish-British-French mutual aid treaty was authoritatively asserted tonight.

"Nothing may be attempted or done in the Balkans without Italy," wrote Virginio Gayda, the editor who often expresses the views of the Fascist regime.

Italy also moved to eliminate a possible source of friction with her Axis partner by concluding a pact with Germany for the transfer of 200,000 German-speaking residents of the Italian Tyrol—won from Austria in the World War—to the Reich.

Vital Interest In Balkans

Gayda, writing in his newspaper, Il Giornale d'Italia, said that Italy has vital interests in the Balkans which "obviously are not solely economic."

Neutral observers interpreted the Italian insistence on a voice in the Balkans' future as due to a desire to prevent the war spreading to that zone or the Mediterranean.

Gayda's remarks were in reply to the British view the new pact would enable Turkey to use her influence for mediation and stabilization of the Balkan countries.

Not Entirely Displeased

Foreign circles represented Italy as not entirely displeased with the pact. These sources took the view that Italy had been apprehensive that Russia would attempt to spread her influence into the Balkans.

Italy still will keep a close watch to see if the treaty functions actually to deter Russia, the commentators declared.

The plan for migration of Germans in the Tyrol was represented as showing the Government could settle minority problems peaceably. At the same time the beginning of the breakup of Sicily's large landed estates in a ten-year program was described as a token of "peaceful intentions."

[United Press]

Says Hitler Kept Promise

Il Giornale d'Italia said Hitler had kept his promise to establish an Italian-German frontier on the Brenner Pass.

"Every possible cause, however slight, of a nationality dispute between Italy and Germany has been eliminated at the roots," the newspaper declared. Il Giornale insisted that the inhabitants of German extraction would be free of any compulsion to leave.

Arrangements for the migration, part of Germany's vast plan for the return of German people in neighboring countries, provided that all German citizens in the Tyrol must return within three months.

Must Choose By End Of Year

All other inhabitants of German origin must choose by the end of this year between Italian and German citizenship. Those who decide on the latter must leave by the end of 1942.

There were indications the Reich would reimburse those who returned to Germany through a system of clearing arrangements between Italy and Germany.

Italian Foreign Minister Count Galeazzo Ciano, Hans Georg von Mackensen, German Ambassador to Italy, and Dr. Karl Cladius, head of a German delegation, signed the agreement.

The South Tyrol, renamed Alto Adige by the Italians, has 200,000 German-speaking residents, 90,000 Italians and 10,000 foreigners, mostly Germans, latest census figures showed.

Many Inhabitants Must Decide Which Nation They Prefer.

ROME, Oct. 21 (A. P.).—German and Italian authorities completed arrangements today to transfer approximately 200,000 German-speaking residents of the Italian Tyrol to Germany by 1942.

Count Galeazzo Ciano, Italian Foreign Minister; Hans Georg von Mackensen, German Ambassador to Italy, and Dr. Karl Cladius, head of a special German delegation, signed the agreement.

The arrangement provides all German "citizens" in the Tyrol must return to Germany within three months and that all other inhabitants of German origin must choose by the end of 1939 between Italian and German citizenship. Those who decide to become Germans must leave Italy by the end of 1942.

German and Italian diplomats said the population shift was expected to do away with any claim Germany might have to the south Tyrol area, which was taken from the Austria-Hungary Empire following the world war.

Many Have Returned.

Several thousand German residents already have returned to their homeland.

The agreement provides that property of those taking German citizenship must either be sold on the open market or bought by a special German agency, officials said. There were indications the German Government would reimburse those who return to Germany, with transactions between the two countries passing through a system of clearing arrangements.

Payment will be simple and as rapid as possible, it was announced.

Contrary to reports that those deciding to stay would be transferred to other parts of Italy, Giuseppe Mastromattei, the Prefect of Bolzano province, said no one would be removed.

The latest population figures show that the South Tyrol, renamed Alto Adige by the Italians, has 200,000 German speaking residents, 90,000 Italians and 10,000 foreigners, mostly Germans.

Gayda Says Italy Views Balkan Situation Calmly

Fascist Editor Sees No Action as Result of Ankara Pact

ROME, Oct. 21 (AP).—Virginio Gayda, authoritative Fascist editor, said today in a discussion of the Ankara pact that "nothing may be attempted or done in the Balkans without Italy," which has strategic as well as economic interests there.

Gayda, who often reflects the Italian government's views, confirmed a belief that Italy would refrain from any immediate action as a result of the British-French-Turkish mutual assistance treaty. He asserted that the Mediterranean and Balkan situation had been fixed since agreements in May among London, Paris and Ankara, with British loans to Turkey and the French cession to her of the Republic of Hatay. Italy will stand by now to follow developments in the functioning of the pact, Gayda said, "with usual calm and undivided attention."

Gayda's remarks were made in reply to British suggestions that the new pact would enable Turkey to use her influence for mediation and stabilization of the Balkan countries. Gayda said it remained to be seen what Soviet Russia's attitude would be toward the tripartite agreement.

WORKERS JOIN IN FINN REPLY TO KREMLIN

Chief Of Cooperatives Accompanies Paasikivi Back To Moscow

Firm Answer And Counter-Proposals To Soviet Demands Forecast

By LYNN HEINZERLING
Associated Press Correspondent

Helsinki, Oct. 21—with the melancholy "Song of Finland" echoing through Helsinki station, the Finnish delegation left tonight for Moscow to deliver a firm answer and counter-proposals to Soviet Russian demand for more power in the Baltic.

Heading the mission was former Premier Dr. Juho Kusti Paasikivi, who had returned from Moscow just a week ago after the initial conferences.

The delegation, due in Moscow Monday morning, included Finance Minister Vaeinoe Tanner, leader of the powerful Social-Democratic Party, which has thousands of Finnish workers as members, and president of the International Cooperative Alliance.

Defense Loan And Tax Boost

Tanner's inclusion was interpreted as a move to show Russia Finland's workmen were behind their Government staunchly.

Informed quarters said a decision on the future of the negotiations might be reached by Tuesday.

Finland, meanwhile, went ahead with preparations for a possible emergency, announcing a defense loan of 500,000,000 markka (about $9,300,000) and a twenty per cent. increase in income and property taxes expected to yield 100,000,000 markka (about $1,860,000).

A new tax on matches, it was estimated, would bring 25,000,000 markka ($466,250) to help support military defense measures.

A hush fell over the railroad station when Dr. Paasikivi and the other members of his small delegation walked to the train.

U. S. Minister At Station

There was scarcely a sound until a workers' choir sang the haunting melody which praises Finland's independence.

Among those to farewell the delegation were United States Minister Arthur Schoenfeld, the Swedish minister, and the secretary of the Russian legation.

Tanner, as a notable leader of the cooperative movement and president of Elanto, thriving Finnish cooperative which sells everything from food to bicycles, is counted as one of the most important men in the country.

A Determined Answer

A Government spokesman made clear that Finland, "morally strengthened" by the Stockholm conference in which she took part with Norway, Denmark and Sweden, was sending to Moscow a determined answer to Russian demands and counter-proposals.

He said he did not expect the discussions to last more than two or three days and added:

"If Russia has as good will as we do, agreement is possible."

This was interpreted as meaning Russia would have to make some alteration in her earlier demands, which still were a closely guarded secret.

Warlike Preparations

In Helsinki workmen were building underground air raid shelters and trenches in all sections of the city.

Factories are turning out gas masks by the thousands to catch up with the demand.

At the postoffice in the center of the city a guard was on duty all the time with an anti-aircraft gun.

Sand bags protected power houses. Some departments provided steel shelters for key workmen.

Throughout the city, women clerks, stenographers, hotel maids and housewives were knitting warm clothing for thousands of soldiers and reservists keeping vigil in the forests of East

Finns to Resume Talks With Russia

HELSINKI, Oct. 21 (A. P.).—A large crowd sing[illegible] the national anthem said goodby tonight to the Finnish delegation which entrained for Moscow to continue negotiations with Russia on Finland's place in the new Baltic setup dominated by Moscow.

The mission, headed by former Premier, Dr. Juho Kusti Passikivi, is due to reach Moscow Monday morning.

Finland moved today to float a defense loan of 500,000,000 markka (about $9,300,000) as she neared a showdown with Soviet Russia.

Apparently "morally strengthened" by the recent Stockholm conference, in which she participated with Norway, Denmark and Sweden, Finland ordered her former Premier, Dr. Juho Kusti Passikivi, back to Moscow to resume talks expected to reach a turning point in two or three days.

"More Authority"

Paasikivi planned to leave Helsinki at 11.20 P. M. with proposals believed to reflect the Northern nations' desire to preserve strict neutrality in the European conflict. He is scheduled to reach Moscow Monday.

Added to the staff accompanying Paasikivi will be Finance Minister V. Tanner. A Government spokesman said the addition would give the mission "more authority."

"So far the discussions with the Soviet have been on friendly terms. There has been no pressure," Foreign Minister Eljas Erkko said.

He indicated Finland was fortified by the backing of other northern countries and was ready to stand firmly her viewpoint.

Undehstanding Pleases

"We feel more confident," Erkko declared. "The demonstration of loyalty, not only of the northern countries but of the whole American continent is a great satisfaction to us, and it is very difficult to thank them. It shows a perfect understanding of our position everywhere."

Referring to Finland's extensive defense preparations, the minister said they are due to [illegible] in the South Baltic which forced us to take steps to guard our neutral position." He said the morale of Finland's armed forces was "very high."

The current defense measures caused the Administration to propose a five-year loan, to be negotiated through sale of bonds.

Beginning Monday it will be impossible to travel in Finland's frontier districts without a military pass. Some of these frontier areas already are under strict military control. Included will be the Aaland Islands, strategic archipelago between Finland and Sweden, and certain harbor districts along the Gulf of Bosnia.

BLOCKADE CUTS RUMANIAN OIL FLOW TO REICH

Nazis Badly Hampered In Efforts To Get Fuel For Mechanized Army

[By the Associated Press]

Bucharest, Oct. 21—Germany's plans for drawing on Rumania's rich oil fields to supply fuel for her highly mechanized army have been hampered seriously—chiefly by the British blockade.

The blockade has cut off the sea route from Constanzt to Hamburg by which the bulk of Rumanian oil was carried to Germany before the European war began.

Rumanian oil shipments to Germany, which averaged almost 4,500 tons daily before the outbreak of war in September, have declined steadily since hostilities started and now average but slightly more than 2,000 tons daily.

Sought Oil In Last War

Germany historically has sought Rumanian oil. In the World War one of the reasons for the German march into Rumania was to get oil. While she achieved a military victory she got little oil, for the wells were so thoroughly sabotaged that it was not until after the war that many of them were operating again.

In case the present war should bring Germany into Rumania, the country is well prepared for similar sabotage. A group of oil-well wrecking specialists from Texas is being held in readiness for such an eventuality.

Shipments Declining

At the same time shipments to Germany are on the decline, Rumanian oil exports to Great Britain, France and neutrals total 8,000 tons daily and there are indications that Britain and France are making plans to increase their purchases.

Two British tankers were being loaded today at Constanza and negotiations are under way to have Greek tankers carry Rumanian oil to England.

Another reason for the decline in exports to Germany is that companies operating in Rumania are financed by British, French, American and Dutch capital and, while these firms are still selling oil to Germany, they are demanding cash payment.

Using No Pressure

The Rumanian Government, though desirous of giving no open offense to Germany, is bringing no strong pressure on oil companies. One reason advanced for her attitude is that the Government's share in oil revenues is pledged to pay off a French loan.

A German trade delegation made strenuous efforts here in September to get more Rumanian oil on credit, but it does not appear to have been very successful.

With the sea route cut off and no pipeline between Rumania and Germany, two channels remain open—by rail and by barge through the Danube.

Rail Shipments Costly

30.24-4197

Rail shipments are expensive and handicapped by a shortage of tank cars. Rumania and other Balkan countries are reluctant to send tank cars into Germany and, though the Reich is operating its own tank cars regularly, the total oil thus shipped is not large.

Barge shipments likewise are curtailed by the lack of craft and Rumanian reluctance to send barges into Germany. This channel also faces suspension as soon as the Danube freezes sufficiently to impede traffic.

New Poland For Poles Only, Hitler's Buffer State Plan

Would Retain Old Religious And Patriotic Centers And Include A Jewish Reservation

By LOUIS P. LOCHNER
[Associated Press Correspondent]

Berlin, Oct. 21.—The Poland which Germany intends to rear on the wreckage of the conquered Polish republic, according to informed sources, probably will be characterized by these five features:

First, It will be made up of Poles only.

Second, It will be smaller than the Russian Poland of pre-1914 days.

Third, It will, however, retain Poland's religious center, Czestochowa, and patriotic center, Krakow.

Fourth, it also likely will contain a Jewish state within a state or reservation centering about Lublin between the Vistula and San Rivers.

Fifth, it will be saddled from the beginning of its existence with a tremendous financial burden arising from the necessity of reimbursing all Poles crowded out of their former habitats in the parts annexed by Germany.

Officialdom declares that everything relating to Poland is still in a state of flux, yet Adolf Hitler's decree published on October 19, confirming annexation of parts of former Poland, as well as private talks with men definitely in the know, reveal the picture as given above. Hitler's decree annexed Pomorze, Pozen and Polish Upper Silesia, which were German territory before the Versailles settlement.

Poles will be pushed from all sections annexed by the Reich. Gauleiter Förster, Nazi chief in Danzig, is authority for the statement that this will be done "ruthlessly." In their places with settle Germans coming "home into the Reich" from Baltic states under Hitler's migration plan.

Gdynia, now Gotenhafen, already is being cleared rapidly of its 80,000 Poles. All Poles will be huddled together in what remains of Poland after Germany and Soviet Russia have helped themselves.

Russia's share is everything east of the demarcation line including Stanislawow, Lwow, Luck, Pinsk, Bialystok and Nowogrodek as the chief centers.

Germany's share is, broadly speaking, not only whatever belonged to the Reich prior to 1914, but, beyond that, the small section around Kalisz, now Kalisch, and a similar section around Ciechanow, now Zichenau. Both of these sections, whose exact size has not been revealed, were Russian Polish before 1914.

Respect For Religious Feelings

The Zichenau district significantly, will include Mlawa, where the Poles had a well organized bunker line during Germany's invasion.

Men in the know say "strategic reasons" were responsible for addition of these former Polish sections. Czestochowa and Krakow were parts of the Austrian Empire before 1914, but Greater Germany will not annex them, out of respect for the religious and patriotic feelings of the Poles.

Czestochowa is famous for a "miracle-working" Black Madonna; Krakow for the tombs of Polish kings as well as Marshal Josef Pilsudski's shrine.

As To "Jewish Problem"

Plans with reference to Poland's 3,000,000 Jews are described officially as "not yet ripe for announcement," but informed circles insist that Hitler's Reichstag reference on October 6 to a "solution of the Jewish problem," which he said would be attempted by Germany, means Polish Jews will be put on a sort of reservation centering about Lublin.

What a staggering problem the new state will face financially may be illustrated by the fate of Poles in the seaport of Gdynia, which the Germans seized and propose to hold as Gotenhafen. Gdynia was virtually built from the ground by Poland after she became a sovereign state in 1918. It has often been called "Poland's pride." Previously it was an insignificant fishing village.

Must Reimburse Gdynians

Germany claims all of Gdynia by right of conquest—its marvelous harbor facilities, its fortifications, its public buildings, and beyond that all private property of its 83,000 residents.

Now the Polish, responsible Nazi leaders say, will have to reimburse these Gdynia citizens for their houses and other objects of value, and, besides, must assign them to new homesteads and provide new means of subsistence for them.

Presumably the new Polish Government will have to issue some form of treasury certificates which will become redeemable gradually.

FRENCH CABINET HOLDS SESSION

Economic Topics Discussed With Premier Daladier.

BRITISH SEND MORE TROOPS

Allied High Command Reports Only Artillery Fire

PARIS, Oct. 21 (A. P.).—Premier Daladier summoned ten Cabinet members to a special meeting today at the War Ministry at 10 A. M. (4 A. M., New York time).

The meeting lasted three hours. Afterward, M. Daladier said that only economic problems had been discussed.

Semi-official sources reported today that British transports were shuttling across the English Channel at the rate of three each night, landing thousands of additional troops to augment the French on the western front.

Little activity was reported from the zone of hostilities except for the skirmishing of small patrols. The French and Germans were said to be jockeying for position on isolated heights and in small wooded areas to strengthen their lines. The regular morning communique of the War Ministry spoke of the patrol raids and "harassing fire of artillery."

Text of Night Communique.

Tonight's communique follows:

"The day has merely been marked by certain artillery activity on both sides."

Military dispatches indicated that a muddy No-Man's Land about a mile wide separated the rectified main line positions of the opposing forces. The patrol operations were said to be confined largely to two areas where the Germans attacked in force early this week—just east of the Moselle River and between Saarbruecken and Zweibruecken, in the center of the northern flank.

Military sources said that the French advance guard was on German soil, except for a strip near the Luxemburg border and north of Bitche. Semi-official military quarters said that about one hundred landings of British troops had been made in the first month of the war, which started on September 3.

Leslie Hore-Belisha, British War Minister, announced on October 11 that 158,000 men had been landed Despite the British re-enforcements, military observers expected the French to sit tight and await developments of the allied naval blockade of Germany.

The French Navy assumed a large share of the duty of guarding the trans-Channel troop movements and engaged in mine sweeping and anti-submarine activity. Many French observers expressed the belief that German air and submarine attacks on Britain would increase as rains and approaching winter make land operations increasingly difficult.

However, Henry de Kerillis, member of the Chamber of Deputies Foreign Affairs Committee, declared in L'Epoque that "the French General Staff tends to believe that a very violent and powerful enemy offensive actually is being prepared." M. de Kerillis wrote that some quarters believed that the signal for a big-scale German attack was "only a question of days, even hours."

He reported that German troop concentrations extended to the southern flank of the line—that which parallels the Rhine—where there had been hardly any action since the war started. On the wall of a German Rhineland city, the French reported, the Germans have hung a sign intended for French eyes: "We are not playing any more."

CASTLE THORN AREA SHELLED METHODICALLY

Nazi Batteries Provoked Into Answering, Says Night Communique

General Gamelin Following De Moureillan Plan With Variations

By H. TAYLOR HENRY
Associated Press Correspondent

Paris, Oct. 21—Military observers tonight reported French heavy artillery had methodically shelled an area of twenty square miles on the extreme northern sector of the Western front, hoping to drop a big shell on German general headquarters.

A communique described the fire as "harassing."

From military information made public in Paris, it appeared that German gun positions formed a rectangle bounded on the southwest by heights at Nenning and Sinz (five miles within German territory) and on northeast by heights at Wincheringen and Saarbourg.

Castle Thorn Within Area

Within the rectangle lies the Castle Thorn, where French aerial observers have reported the constant coming and going of officers and sttaff cars, leading to the belief that German headquarters have been estabilised there.

French reports indicated the Germans had concentrated field guns of 105 millimeters (about 4.5 inches) at Nenning and Sinz and six miles behind them batteries of heavier guns.

Germans Answer French Fire

A night communique said German artillery had begun answering French fire. The German batteries have been quiet for the last few days and apparently were provoked into entering a duel by the continued French shelling.

At the end of the seventh week of the war, the Western front situation was little changed from that at the beginning of the conflict, when the French first began occupation of German territory—from which they later withdrew.

The French withdrew to positions running from the Moselle river to the Rhine which first were outlined 125 years ago during the Napoleonic wars by the French General de Moureillan.

Modified De Moureillan Plan

Gen. Maurice Gustave Gamelin, commander in chief of the Allied forces and a student of Napoleonic tactics, might well have followed the de Moureillan plan described in 1814.

The French front on the left at Apach lies only a few miles behind the original de Moureillan line, while the French right flank near Wissembourg, instead of being behind the old battle line, is about a mile in front of it.

General Gamelin's variations on the de Moureillan plan take advantages of small rivers and wooded heights lying in French territory. The variations were made necessary by modern war developments as well as changes in the frontier.

Barring light infantry patrols, land warfare is in the doldrums and some French commentators said it might remain quiet until Spring. Others, however, said they believed reports of German concentrations indicated the enemy was planning a drive.

Real Winter weather, with cold and rain, has settled over the front, making operations difficult. The French retirement, observers pointed out, might mean they were taking up Winter positions.

French Warn Nazis, Then Dynamite Bridge

BASEL, Switzerland, Oct. 21 (AP). French [illegible] engineers, after [illegible] warning to German sentinels on the opposite bank of the Rhine, dynamited today a small steel footbridge spanning the river near the electric plant at Kembs, twelve miles north of here.

The bridge was used in peace time by German workers who crossed daily to the Kembs region. It has been little used since the fall of 1938, when those workers were discharged and replaced with French employees.

In France Again for New War, Briton Visits Grave He's Buried In

By The Associated Press

WITH THE BRITISH EXPEDITIONARY FORCES IN FRANCE, Oct. 21 (passed by field censor).—One of the strangest ceremonies of this strange war took place today in a peaceful graveyard for British troops when an officer on whose chest was the crimson ribbon of the Victoria Cross put flowers on his own grave.

He is a high officer in the British forces. In the first months of the World War he completed valuable reconnaissance work after fighting off German squads and suffering several machine-gun wounds in one leg, which will [illegible] ted. For this exploit he [illegible] Victoria Cross.

[illegible] remained in the army and, despite his handicap, reached high rank. He landed in France a month ago and to his surprise learned that in the confusion after the last battles of the World War his leg had been buried in a grave with the notation that it was all that had been found of him.

So, this morning, with subalterns eyeing him suspiciously, he marched into a forest of little white crosses after a journey of many miles and placed flowers below the marking of his name and regiment on the grave.

"Dashed good leg, that," he said.

Britain's Tanks By Thousands Rumble Over French Cobbles

Conjecture Of 10 Days Ago Held Replaced By Confidence As B. E. F. Nears 250,000 Mark

By DREW MIDDLETON
Associated Press Correspondent

With the British Expeditionary Force in France, Oct. 21. (Passed by Field Censor)—Britain's war efforts began to take shape today as thousands of tanks rolled and rumbled over cobblestone roads in northern France.

The number of British troops on Frenc hsoil rose slowly but steadily toward a quarter of million, and defenses which looked skimpy and undermanned not long ago bristled with guns and men.

Battle lines were "fully manned," one officer told me, and satisfaction over men and materials has replaced the conjectur of ten days ago as to whether the defenses would be strong enough to hold advancing Germans.

The artillry heas ben augmented in the last week. "Heavy stuff" rolls daily along roads. The gunners feel they have enough ammunition to break up any attack.

Defenses grow stronger and every day chances of attack grow less. The opinion is that only the severest pressure from Adolf Hitler will start a German attack rolling this way, although staff officers point out, as have newspapers, that three large German concentrations are formed and apparently ready to move.

These concentrations are said to be on the Belgian frontier, south of Aachen and on the Swiss frontier. But German pressure on the French front apparently has taken, for the moment, most German military resources and obviated the chance of attacks elsewhere.

Residents of Mondorf and Evrange, who left their homes yesterday, said that the towns were emptied to provide quarters for troops. Ten of thirteen furnaces in the Luxemburg steel mills were reported operating despite the exodus of 2,000 steelworkers and their families—mostly German—returning to their own country.

BERLIN ADMITS FRENCH OCCUPY GERMAN SOIL

High Command Says Poilus Still Hold Their Advanced Fronts.

BERLIN, Oct. 21 (A. P.).—The German High Command acknowledged today that some French soldiers still occupied German soil in the dense woods west of Saarbruecken. The High Command issued the following communique:

"In the border region between the Moselle River and Saarbruecken there was livelier artillery and scouting troop activity at several front sectors.

"The enemy also yesterday evacuated the Warndt Forest region west of Saarbruecken, with the exception of two heights close to the border.

"Other parts of the western front were quiet, except for minor local disturbances and artillery fire."

Nazis Quit Blockhouses as Moselle Rises—Hitler Sees Leaders on Retaining.

LUXEMBURG, Oct. 21 (A. P.).—The German side of the Moselle Valley was flooded today as bright sunshine followed heavy rains which sent the river over its banks. In some sectors German troops were forced by the high water to leave blockhouses.

WILNO HAS PROBLEM

Refugees Crowd Old Capital Given Back to Lithuania.

KAUNAS, Lithuania, Oct. 21 (A. P.).—A refugee problem in Wilno, the historic capital returned to Lithuania by the Russians, brought serious concern today as Malcolm Davis, American Red Cross official, arrived to investigate.

Approximately [illegible] refugees from Russian and German-occupied Poland already are in the new Lithuanian territory.

Mr. Davis, planning to go to Wilno, said he had proposed an arrangement to take along all the warm underclothing available in Lithuania for the refugees, with the guaranty that the articles would be replaced later by the Red Cross.

Hitler Assures Slovakia Of Teschen Area Return

Promise Concerning Land Lost To Poland In '20, '24 And '38 Seen As Reward

Berlin, Oct. 21 (AP)—Adolf Hitler today promised Slovakia the return of territory she lost to Poland in 1920, 1924 and 1938.

He made the assurance to the Slovakian Premier. Details will be worked out through a treaty between Germany and the little state standing under the Reich's protection.

Return of the land, known as the Teschen area, was regarded in diplomatic circles as Slovakia's reward for fighting with Germany against Poland.

Finland Cancels Nazi Meet

BERLIN, Oct. 21 (AP).—Finland canceled today a gymnastic meet with Germany scheduled for Nov. 15 at Dresden, and a similar meet with Italy which had been due to follow. German sports authorities said the meet was canceled because Finland did not want to send a team "so far, owing to the general political situation."

CALLS BRITISH VAGUE

Gandhi Is Not Enthusiastic Over Viceroy's Offer.

BOMBAY, Oct. 21 (A. P.).—Mohandas K. Gandhi declared today that Britain's latest offer to India "left everything beautifully vague." The Indian Nationalist leader referred to the statement last Tuesday of the British viceroy, Lord Linlithgow, who said that there might be further consideration of constitutional reform for India at the end of the war.

What the Indian Congress wanted, Gandhi said, was the clearest possible acceptance of demands that India be treated as an independent nation. It was necessary, he said, to speak to India in "language of precision for her to become enthusiastic about the war."

RUMANIA JAILS COMMUNISTS

Cernauti, Rumania, Oct. 21 (AP)—A military tribunal today imposed prison sentences on thirty-eight Jews accused of spreading Communist propaganda in Cernauti and Orders on the Russian-occupied Ukraine of Poland. An 18-year-old girl, identified as the ring-leader, was sentenced to three years.

MARLEY ATTACKS LINDBERGH VIEWS

Peer Declares Flyer Is No International Expert.

TROY, Oct. 21 (A. P.).—A British statesman believes Col. Lindbergh is not qualified to comment politically on the international situation.

Lord Marley, [illegible] of the British House of Lords, last night told the annual convention of the eastern zone, New York State Teachers Association, that Col. Lindbergh's contributions to aviation do not qualify him as an expert on international questions.

He described the aviator's public announcement of superiority of the German air force over Russia, recently, as one of the factors which broke down a peace front in Europe.

Lord Marley declared the United States would make its greatest contribution when the war is over by exerting all its energies to achieving a just peace.

Nazis to Increase Activity.

BERLIN, Oct. 21 (A. P.).—The German official news agency predicted intensified activity on the part of the German Navy against ships carrying contraband, and asserted that the losses sustained by the British merchant marine were "considerably higher" than Great Britain has admitted.

The statement gave no figures but called attention to British reports that from October 13 to October 15 seven ships totaling more than 54,000 tons had been sunk, and added that since the beginning of the war numerous German naval units, submarines as well as other craft, have "operated successfully" outside of home waters.

German successes were increasing week by week, it said, adding: "It is to be assumed that the activity of the German fleet will be increasingly extended over all oceans and with continually greater success."

It concluded by saying that neutrals had recognized the insecurity of the British convoy system because "every ship which puts herself under the protection of English weapons invites attack just as much as an enemy ship sailing in a convoy."

67 Lost in Double Sinking

Tales of Hardship and Terror Told by 300 Survivors of Two British Ships.

W. McGAFFIN

BORDEAUX, France, Oct. 21 (A. P.).—At least sixty-seven persons lost their lives in the sinking of two British steamships in the Atlantic on Tuesday, authorties estimated today as they checked the stories of some 300 persons landed here last night by a rescue ship.

Officials said that sixty-one apparently had gone down with the Yorkshire and six or seven with the City of Mandalay. The two vessels were sunk by [illegible] within a half hour, about 500 miles off the Spanish coast.

Hardship and Terror.

Tales of hardship and terror were told by the survivors, many of whom were taken to hospitals suffering severely from exposure. All those rescued were English or East Indians en route to England.

Long lines of ambulances and a corps of nurses were waiting on the dock when the rescue ship, the American freighter Independence Hall, commanded by Capt. D. J. McKenzie, reached port. Scores of survivors were carried off the ship on stretchers.

Survivors said that the Yorkshire and the City of Mandalay were in a convoy of nineteen other vessels under the guard of British warships, but became separated from the convoy one day out from Gibraltar.

The 10,000-ton Yorkshire was the first to go down, torpedoed, passengers said, by a submarine which they identified as German. The City of Mandalay was struck a short time later.

Some survivors of the Yorkshire said that a torpedo exploded in the boiler room, killing some Indian stokers.

French newspapers quoted unidentified British soldiers aboard the ship as saying that she stopped at the first cannon shot. Some passengers jumped overboard at once. The Independence Hall arrived at the moment the ship was disappearing beneath the sea.

No official list of the survivors has yet been given out.

S O S Call Answered.

The westbound Independence Hall received S O S calls from the two vessels between 3 and 4 P. M. and immediately changed course to go to the rescue. The Mandalay, first to be reached, was breaking in two when the Independence Hall hove in sight.

Two of the vessal's lifeboats, heavily loaded, were awash. Scores of other passengers were floating in the sea in lifebelts.

The Independence Hall reached the spot where the Yorkshire sank about 10 P. M. The survivors, all in lifeboats, said that the vessel went down in about nine minutes.

Facilities Taxed.

Already crowded with her own passengers, the Independence Hall found her facilities taxed by the 300 survivors. The regular passengers gave up their own accommodations, but many of those rescued had to sleep on the floors.

Some survivors were barefoot when they came ashore here, many were wrapped in blankets and almost all were clad inadequately. Those suffering most severely from exposure told of floating for hours in the icy seas, kept afloat by lifebelts.

Among them was a four-year-old baby, whose mother was reported to have been drowned. A few of the hardier passengers bravely sang "God Save the King" to the thin notes of a violin as the rescue ship docked.

Nazi Mines Sink German Patrol; 71 Are Missing

Danes Save 4 on Raft, 5th Swims Ashore; 3 More Neutral Ships Go Down

COPENHAGEN, Oct. 21 (AP).—The German coast guard vessel Este was sunk by mines in a German mine field off the Danish coast today with the probable loss of seventy-one men.

One of the four rescued said he was certain that none of the others had escaped, but tonight a fifth man reached the town of Ulvshale, whence he was taken to a hospital at Stege. He said he had been swimming for ten hours.

Earlier, a Danish naval spokesman announced that seventy-two men were lost. The Danish Navy sent boats to search for other possible survivors.

Four of those rescued managed to make their way to a raft after explosions sank the [illegible] ship in less than a minute on the Danish town of Moen. A Danish naval plane saw the raft and descended near it about 5 p. m., five hours after the accident. The plane was unable to carry extra weight, but the crews gave the men on the raft coffee. They were picked up later by a fishing vessel and taken to Stege for hospital treatment. The four said they left the body of one companion lashed to the raft.

The Este was a unit of the 7th Advance Guard Flotilla delegated to watch mine fields, and was en route, a German informant said, to a post off southern Sweden near Trelleborg.

COPENHAGEN, Oct. 21 (A. P.).—An official Danish spokesman announced tonight that seventy-one of the crew of a German Coast Guard vessel were lost when their ship struck a mine in a German field off the Danish island of Moen today.

He said that four men were saved by a Danish naval plane and that the body of a fifth man was recovered. The rest were listed as drowned.

Danes See Sea Clash

COPENHAGEN, Denmark, Oct. 21 (AP)—A torpedo boat attempting to stop a steamer off Asdal on the northwestern Danish coast was reported today to have been driven off after an exchange of shots with two larger warships. The steamer fled during the exchange, the reports said.

Witnesses on shore said they were unable to identify any of the ships.

Battle Off Norway Coast

BERGEN, Norway, Oct. 21 (AP).—Crew members of a Norwegian fishing vessel reported to the newspaper "Bergens Aftenblad" that two German planes had been shot down out of a squadron of six which attacked two British destroyers and a British seaplane about ten miles off the coast of Norway today.

The British seaplane also was forced down, the fishermen said, but with the protection of the destroyers later managed to resume flight.

The newspaper said the battle in the North Sea occurred this afternoon.

U-Boat Sinks Steamer, Then Tows Lifeboats

Stockholm, Oct. 21 (AP)—The captain of the Swedish steamer Gustaf Adolf reported to her managers today that a German submarine sank his ship after allowing the crew twenty minutes to leave it. Then the U-boat towed lifeboats four hours until it met the Norwegian vessel Bisca, the captain said.

All nineteen members of the crew were rescued by the Norwegian boat.

The report of the sinking to her managers said the Gustaf Adolf went down north of the Shetland Islands. She left her home port, Gothenburg, for England last Tuesday.

Lloyd's Register lists the Gustaf Adolf as a ship of 925 tons operated by A. Bratt & Co. The Bisca is a 6,089-ton steamer whose home port is Bergen.

Rumanian Tanker Down.

BUCHAREST, Oct. 21 (A. P.).—The 6,394-ton Rumanian oil tanker Oltenic was reported today to have been sunk near Gibraltar while carrying a cargo of oil to England. The vessel belonged to the Steaua Romano Oil Company and her home port was Constanza.

First reports did not indicate exactly where or how the Oltenia was sunk.

Meanwhile, four British freighters and two tankers were being loaded with wheat and oil for England at Constanza, Rumania's Black Sea port. They are the first British ships to call at the port in several weeks.

The freighters have guns mounted on their decks, and it is believed they will leave in a group to be met by a warship convoy at Gibraltar.

Rumanian oil exports to Germany, which before the war averaged 4,500 tons daily, have dropped to 2,000 tons—the lowest in years.

Swedish Ship Torpedoed.

STOCKHOLM, Oct. 21 (A. P.).—The torpedoing and sinking of the Swedish steamship Gustaf Adolf was reported to her managers today by a Norwegian vessel which rescued the crew of nineteen men.

The report said that the Gustaf Adolf sank north of the Shetland Islands. The vessel left Gothenburg, her home port, last Tuesday for England.

The name of the ship which rescued the crew was given as the Bisca.

Lloyd's Register lists the Gustaf Adolf as a vessel of 925 tons operated by A. Bratt & Co.

Empty Norse Tanker.

LONDON, Oct. 21 (A. P.).—The sinking of the Norwegian motor tanker Deodata, 3,295 tons, after an explosion was disclosed today with the arrival of twenty-three of her crew, who had been picked up by a British vessel.

The tanker was in ballast when the explosion occurred, the third mate said. The crew were picked up ten minutes later.

SHIP WAS SUNK BY GERMANS

Captain and Engineer Were Taken Prisoners on Nazi Raider.

LIVERPOOL, England, Oct. 21 (A. P.).—Owners of the British steamship Clement, sunk on September 30 in the south Atlantic by a mysterious German raider, announced today that two of the ship's officers, taken prisoner by the raider, had safely reached Saint Vincent, Cape Verde Islands.

In some quarters this was taken as indicating that vengeance had overtaken the German vessel, which a few Clement survivors said they believed was the pocket battleship Admiral Scheer.

Another ship entered the speculation as to the identity of the German raider, however, when British censors passed a Reuter dispatch quoting the Buenos Aires correspondent of the New York Times as saying the attacker of the Clement had been identified as the German ship Schwabenland, a converted German merchantman.

The dispatch said the Schwabenland, an 8,631-ton ship, had in turn been sunk by a British cruiser.

However, there was nothing in the first announcement, by Sir Aldred Booth of the Booth Line, to bear out the theory the raider had been caught. How the two officers were freed was not disclosed.

When the Clement went down off the Brazilian coast Capt. F. P. C. Harris and Chief Engineer W. Bryant were taken from the surface vessel that sank her. Sir Alfred said he had been advised both Capt. Harris and Bryant were safe and well.

When members of the Clement's crew reached Brazilian ports, some in lifeboats, they reported Capt. Harris and Bryant had been taken aboard the raider.

"We have just received a message that they (the two officers) are coming home on the next available steamer and we understand they are quite well," Sir Alfred announced.

The 5,051-ton five-year-old Clement carried a crew of 49 and reports from several ports where survivors landed indicated all had been saved.

The ship left New York on Aug. 29, and when sunk, her cargo consisted of 20,000 cases of kerosene for Bahia, in addition to radios automobile tires, flour and building cement.

May Have Been Freighter.

BUENOS AIRES, Oct. 21 (A. P.).—Well informed naval men said today that it was entirely possible the German freighter Schwabenland had been converted into an armed raider and had sunk the British steamer Clement.

They added, however, that rumors the Schwabenland had been sunk had not been confirmed. These rumors were attributed in Montevideo shipping circles to the crew of the British destroyer Havock and have been semi-officially denied. The Havock recently made a brief call at Montevideo.

Naval sources said the 8,631-ton Schwabenland only required the addition of guns to make an ideal raider because of her high speed and airplane catapult equipment. She was formerly used by Luftchansa, German air line operating in South America.

SAYS FREIGHTER CRIPPLED U-BOAT

Sailor Tells How Destroyer Finished the Job.

LONDON, Oct. 21 (A. P.).—A story of a sea duel in which an armed British merchant ship holed a German submarine and left her to be sunk by a destroyer was related today in a communique of the Ministry of Information.

The tale was attributed to Antonio Cutajar, a Maltese seaman who returned to England after a voyage as fireman of a British freighter bound from Bristol Channel to South America.

The ship, he said, was attacked by the submarine at an undisclosed location and at once brought her gun into action, putting a hole in the submarine.

"Before long the merchant ship had a re-enforcement that quickly decided the battle," the account continued.

"A British destroyer came over the horizon at full speed and the U-boat, unable to submerge with a damaged hull, was at the warship's mercy."

"The destroyer," said Cutajar, who returned to Cardiff after his short and exciting voyage, "had no difficulty in finishing the U-boat off."

BRITAIN REPORTED AFTER GREEK SHIPS

Is Said to Want Half of Nation's Trade Vessels.

ATHENS, Greece, Oct. 21 (A. P.).—Informed persons said tonight that Great Britain was conducting negotiations with Greek shipowners which might result in the chartering of as much as half the Greek merchant marine for the shipment of goods to Britain.

Greek owners have sought higher payments to cover war risk.

In July, 1938, the Greek merchant marine, steamers and motor ships, consisted of 638 ships totaling 1,388,609 tons and ranked as the world's ninth.

WASHINGTON, Oct 21 (A. P.).—King Gustav of Sweden expressed to President Roosevelt in a cable made public today the Nordic States' "warm and sincere appreciation" for the message the President sent [illegible] this week supporting their efforts to preserve neutrality.

The King said Mr. Roosevelt's message was considered a precious support and encouragement." He added it was "warmly greeted by our peoples."

King Gustav's reply said:

Garner Urges Embargo Speed

Reported Exerting Influence to Reach Final Vote This Week

Washington, Oct. 21 (AP)—Vice President Garner, impatient over long-drawn-out speechmaking on the Administration Neutrality bill, was reported today to be exerting his influence toward a final vote next week.

Friends said that Garner, who has given wholehearted support to President Roosevelt's recommendation that the arms embargo be repealed, believed that the three weeks of debate had been ample and that opposition Senators now could accept a limitation on future debate.

The Vice President advised Majority Leader Barkley (D., Ky.), it was said, to ask the Senate to agree to a restriction on debate. Later Barkley asked unanimous consent to a proposal that further speeches be limited to an hour and that talks on amendments be limited to 30 minutes. Minority Leader McNary (R., Ore.) objected. McNary added, however, that it might be possible to agree on some sort of limitation Monday.

Senator Nye (R., N. D.), an opposition leader, [illegible] he would block any effort to limit debate by unanimous consent. Another opposition leader, Senator Johnson (R., Cal.), declared that there had been no effort to delay the bill and that a limitation on debate was not necessary.

Meanwhile the Senate heard Senator Reynolds (D., N. C.) announce that he would oppose repeal of the arms embargo.

The North Carolinian devoted much of his talk to the Athenia disaster, advancing the theory that the British vessel may have been sunk by Soviet Russia.

HINTS REDS SANK ATHENIA

He said that there would be no reason for Britain or Germany to sink the ship, which carried many Americans. And he added:

"Careful thinkers, including some responsible officials, have been looking around for plausible possibilities. And, fantastic as it may seem, the finger of guilt more clearly points to Soviet Russia than to any other nation."

Although saying that most Americans now believe that Germany sank the Athenia, Reynolds added that "There has not been published a shred of concrete evidence to prove this."

Reynolds spoke after Senator Andrews (D., Fla.), an Administration supporter, had contended that repeal of the arms embargo was desirable to aid Great Britain and France and forestall an attack by Germany and Russia on this hemisphere.

Danes See Sea Clash

COPENHAGEN, Denmark, Oct. 21 (AP)—A torpedo boat attempting to stop a steamer off Asdal on the northwestern Danish coast was reported today to have been driven off after an exchange of shots with two larger warships. The steamer fled during the exchange, the reports said.

Witnesses on shore said they were unable to identify any of the ships.

U-Boat Sinks Steamer, Then Tows Lifeboats

Stockholm, Oct. 21 (AP)—The captain of the Swedish steamer Gustaf Adolf reported to her managers today that a German submarine sank his ship after allowing the crew twenty minutes to leave it. Then the U-boat towed lifeboats four hours until it met the Norwegian vessel Bisca, the captain said.

All nineteen members of the crew were rescued by the Norwegian boat.

The report of the sinking to her managers said the Gustaf Adolf went down north of the Shetland Islands. She left her home port, Gothenburg, for England last Tuesday.

Lloyd's Register lists the Gustaf Adolf as a ship of 925 tons operated by A. Bratt & Co. The Bisca is a 6,089-ton steamer whose home port is Bergen.

Rumanian Tanker Down.

BUCHAREST, Oct. 21 (A. P.).—The 6,304-ton Rumanian oil tanker Oltenia was reported today to have been sunk near Gibraltar while carrying a cargo of oil to England. The vessel belonged to the Steaua Romano Oil Company and her home port was Constanza.

First reports did not indicate exactly where or how the Oltenia was sunk.

Meanwhile, four British freighters and two tankers were being loaded with wheat and oil for England at Constanza, Rumania's Black Sea port. They are the first British ships to call at the port in several weeks.

The freighters have guns mounted on their decks, and it is believed they will leave in a group to be met by a warship convoy at Gibraltar.

Rumanian oil exports to Germany, which before the war averaged 4,500 tons daily, have dropped to 2,000 tons—the lowest in years.

Swedish Ship Torpedoed.

STOCKHOLM, Oct. 21 (A. P.).—The torpedoing and sinking of the Swedish steamship Gustaf Adolf was reported to her managers today by a Norwegian vessel which rescued the crew of nineteen men.

The report said that the Gustaf Adolf sank north of the Shetland Islands. The vessel left Gothenburg, her home port, last Tuesday for England.

The name of the ship which rescued the crew was given as the Bisca.

Lloyd's Register lists the Gustaf Adolf as a vessel of 925 tons operated by A. Bratt & Co.

Empty Norse Tanker.

LONDON, Oct. 21 (A. P.).—The sinking of the Norwegian motor tanker Deodata, 3,295 tons, after an explosion was disclosed today with the arrival of twenty-three of her crew, who had been picked up by a British vessel.

The tanker was in ballast when the explosion occurred, the third mate said. The crew were picked up ten minutes later.

Senator Nye, Republican, of North Dakota, and Johnson, Republican, California, both expressed opposition to imposing a limitation [illegible] ever, and an effort to obtain unanimous consent to that end could, of course, be blocked by only one objection.

Mr. Johnson said that "there had been no effort to delay the bill. "We are getting toward the end now," he said, "and I don't see any reason to clamp on a debate limitation."

Some administration leaders had considered an arrangement whereby each Senator would be limited to one speech of an hour on the bill and one speech of thirty minutes on any amendment.

"I certainly will not agree to that," said Senator Nye.

Andrews Starts Discussion.

Senator Andrews, Democrat, of Florida, led off the day's discussion with the argument that failure of Congress to repeal the embargo, as the administration bill provides, might result in defeat of France and Great Britain and leave the American nations "to face the Nazi-Soviet bloc on this side of the Atlantic."

Senator Downey, Democrat, of California, offered an amendment which would permit only partial repeal by limiting arms sales to those American nations fighting non-American enemies. Thus, in the present war, arms could be sold to Canada, but not directly to any European belligerent.

Senators Burke, Democrat, of Nebraska, and Gillette, Democrat, of Iowa, offered an amendment which would exempt from the title transfer provisions of the act American firms which maintain branches in Canada. Mr. Gillette explained that such companies would not be required under the amendment to transfer title to goods shipped overland or by inland waterways to their establishments in Canada.

Reynolds Accuses Soviet.

Senator Reynolds, Democrat, of North Carolina, announcing that he was opposed to repeal of the arms embargo, declared that in the sinking of the British liner Athenia, "the finger of guilt more clearly points to Soviet Russia than to any other nation."

"Fantastic though it may seem," he asserted, "it is certainly less fantastic than some of the other startling surprises of the last several months which already are proved beyond any question.

"While at the moment most Americans believe that Germany sank the Athenia, there has not been published a shred of concrete evidence to prove this.

"But in the absence of concrete evidence there is a much stronger circumstantial case against Russia than any other nation. Let us remember that the two principal enemies of Russia are Germany and Great Britain. What could be sweeter than to help shove them into a life and death struggle from which Russia could pick up the profits with little or no cost to herself?"

Edison Reports Navy At Peak of Readiness

Announces Curtailed Observance of Navy Day Next Friday

WASHINGTON, Oct. 21 (AP).—Charles Edison, Acting Secretary of the Navy, reported today that the nation's sea forces were at a peak of readiness.

Announcing plans for a curtailed observance of Navy Day next Friday, he said: "Never before has the morale, material condition and state of training been higher.

"Although some few obstacles have been encountered in our shipbuilding program, all have been overcome, and the new ships going into our fleet are a tribute to all who have contributed to their building," he added.

Because of the Atlantic Coast neutrality patrol and other emergency demands since the start of the European war, there will be no customary general open house to visitors on Friday.

"Stern necessity," the Acting Secretary said, "makes imperative in the public interest the curtailment of general visiting to ships of the fleet and certain shore establishments."

TREASURY'S GOLD OVER 17 BILLIONS

Total Is 67 P. C. of World Governments' Total.

WASHINGTON, Oct. 21 (A. P.).—The Treasury's gold hoard today passed $17,000,000,000—67 per cent of all the governmental and central bank gold reserves in the world.

The war has nearly stopped gold shipments here temporarily, but fear of war was largely responsible for the present size of gold stocks in the United States. Already this year about $2,900,000,000 worth has come in.

More than $1,000,000,000 worth has been deposited by foreign Governments in the New York Federal Reserve Bank for convenience in paying for American goods. The remainder was sold the Treasury for American dollars which were deposited or invested in this country.

Practically all of the Treasury gold is pledged to the Federal Reserve banks, which have given the Treasury cash in exchange. The Federal Reserve System, in turn, has committed $5,162,000,000 of the metal to back paper money.

NIGHT LEAD PRES.HARDING (BUDGET)

BY JOHN A.MOROSO, 3RD.

NEW YORK, OCT 21-(AP)-BATTERED BY A HURRICANE IN A BIZARRE VOYAGE MARKED ALSO BY THE RESCUE OF THE CREW OF A TORPEDOED BRITISH FREIGHTER AND A FRONT-ROW VIEW OF A BLAZING FRENCH OIL TANKER, ANOTHER U-BOAT VICTIM, THE AMERICAN LINER PRESIDENT HARDING MADE PORT TODAY.

ABOARD WERE 598 PASSENGERS, MORE THAN A SCORE OF THEM STRETCHER CASES BECAUSE OF FRACTURED BONES AND BRUISED AND LACERATED BODIES.

MANY OF THEM WERE SO SHOCKED BY THE TERRORIZING 11-DAY (CQ) TRIP THAT THEY WERE UNABLE TO GIVE A COHERENT ACCOUNT OF WHAT HAPPENED. BUT A ROUNDUP OF THE TALES THAT WERE TOLD PICTURED ALMOST SUPERHUMAN BRAVERY AGAINST THE LASHING STORM, AND COOLNESS ON THE PART OF PASSENGERS WHO FEARED THE SHIP WOULD NEVER COME UP FROM A BOWLING-OVER ADMINISTERED BY A MOUNTAINOUS WAVE.

THIS WAVE, STRIKING AT 9:36 P.M. OCT. 17 AND DESCRIBED BY CAPT.JAMES ROBERTS AS THE FIERCEST SEA HE HAD SEEN IN 43 YEARS OF SEAFARING, WAS THE PRINCIPAL CAUSE OF THE INJURIES OF PASSENGERS.

IT WAS PARTICULARLY DAMAGING IN THE SMOKING ROOM WHERE MANY PASSENGERS HAD CONGREGATED AFTER DINNER.

A HUGE PIANO BECAME A RIPPING BODY-TEARING THING, SIMILAR TO THE CANNON IN VICTOR HUGO'S TALES OF THE SEA, AS IT SLITHERED ACROSS THE DECKS, STRIKING DOWN VICTIM AFTER VICTIM. OTHER FURNITURE FLEW ABOUT SPLINTERING LIKE EXPLODING BOMBS.

DESPITE THE VICIOUSNESS OF THE STORM THE 13,869-TON VETERAN LINER SUFFERED ONLY ONE CASUALTY.

A CABIN BOY, PAUL (RED) JOHNSON, OF STOUGHTON, WIS., WAS SWEPT OVERBOARD WHEN HE VENTURED ON DECK JUST BEFORE THE GIGANTIC WAVE STRUCK THE SHIP.

CAPT.ROBERTS SAID JOHNSON WAS NOT ON DECK DUTY AND THAT HE WAS THE VICTIM OF "TOO MUCH CURIOSITY."

IN ALL, 73 PASSENGERS AND CREW MEMBERS WERE INJURED, IZJZIKGNFL6

OF THESE HAD TO BE REMOVED FROM THE SHIP IN AMBULANCES. ONLY TWO OF THE CASES WERE CONSIDERED CRITICAL BY SHIP'S SURGEON THOMAS FISTER OF ALLENTOWN, PA., (CORRECT) WHO WAS ASSISTED BY A CORPS OF PASSENGER-PHYSICIANS.

IN ALL, 73 PASSENGERS AND CREW MEMBERS WERE INJURED, AND TODAY 26

SOME PASSENGERS SAID NEARLY EVERYONE ON BOARD WAS HURT IN SOME FASHION, BUT THE MAJORITY OF INJURIES WAS MINOR.

CHIEF BUTCHER FREDERICK STOVER OF ST.ALBANS, LONG ISLAND, TERMED HIMSELF THE VOYAGER WITH THE WORST LUCK. A PILE OF POTS AND PANS KNOCKED HIM TO THE FLOOR JUST IN TIME FOR A SHOWER OF BOILING GREASE AND WATER TO SPRAY HIM. HE WAS BURNED SEVERELY.

BEFORE THE STORM, THE RESCUE OF 36 CREW MEMBERS OF THE BRITISH FREIGHTER HERONSPOOL WAS THE HIGHLIGHT OF THE TRIP. THE HARDING RECEIVED AN SOS FROM THE FRENCH OIL TANKER EMILE MIGUET, LARGEST MERCHANT VESSEL LOSS OF THE CURRENT WAR, AND WAS ON THE WAY TO THE RESCUE WHEN THE HERONSPOOL CREW WAS SIGHTED THROUGH BLINKER SIGNALS FROM A GERMAN U-BOAT. FLASHLIGHT SIGNALS FROM TWO LIFEBOATS BROUGHT THE LINER ALONGSIDE.

SEVERAL HOURS LATER THE HARDING, ALREADY 200 MILES OFF HER COURSE, SPOTTED THE BURNING EMILE MIGUET AND TWO BRITISH DESTROYERS WHO REPORTED THERE WAS NO SIGN OF THE CREW.

IN SUMMING UP THE HECTIC VOYAGE, CAPT. ROBERTS SAID:

"THERE WAS NO PAC. THEY DID REMARKABLY WELL FOR PEOPLE UNACCUSTOMED TO THE SEA."

[By the Associated Press]

New York, Oct. 21—Twenty-six persons were removed on stretchers from the United States liner President Harding today when the storm-battered vessel arrived after one of the most tempestuos and dramatic voyages in modern maritime annals.

Eyes were blackened bones fractured and bodies bruised by tumbling furniture and heaving decks when the 13,869-ton liner was caught by a howling hurricane after rescuing the crew of the torpedoed British freighter Heronspool.

Altogether, seventy-three passengers and crew members were injured in the storm, but all except the twenty-six most seriously hurt were able to walk by the time the ship docked.

Cabin Boy Washed Overboard And Lost

A cabin boy, Paul Johnson, was washed overboard and lost when a mountainous wave broke over the decks. Johnson, a recent graduate of the University of Wisconsin, was making his fourth trip on the ship. Because of his death, the liner's flag was at halfmast when she arrived.

The hurricane, which had eluded meteorologists as a result of wartime restrictions on weather reports from ships at sea, struck the ship about 800 miles east of Boston Tuesday night.

Passengers said most of the injuries were caused by one huge wave, propelled by a 110-mile-an-hour wind. Some said that wave was a hundred feet high.

Hurtling Furniture Pins People To Wall

A fleet of ambulances and stretcher bearers waited at the dock when the vessel arrived.

Most of those severely injured were in the smoking room aft when the wave heeled the ship over to starboard. Tables, chairs, smoking stands and pottery slithered across the floor, pinnig passengers against the wall.

Down below, Frederick Stover, chief butcher, was passing through a galley door when a pile of pots and pans knocked him to the floor.

"Except for that I would have been all right," he said. "Getting knocked down slowed me up just enough for me to be caught in a flood of boiling water and scalding grease that tipped over from a stove.

Ship's Hospital Wrecked, Supplies Ruined

"I didn't know I was so badly hurt. With my clothes stuck to me I knew I was burned all right, but I walked through a passage toward my bunk and I saw a couple of men and I waved my arm and said to them, 'Get out of my way, boys. I'm hurt.'"

He was taken to a hospital.

Bobby Vernon, actor and singer, whose name appeared on a passport as Ralph Keller, of Los Angeles, explained the distress call that led to medical supplies being rushed to the President Harding by the Coast Guard cutter Hamilton.

"Our ship's hospital was wrecked in the storm and our bandages and other supplies were ruined," Keller said.

After the big wave hit, Keller said, the smoking room "was a shambles and full of horrible scenes."

"People Piled In Heaps, Furniture Smashed"

"People were piled in heaps and furniture was splintered and smashed," he said. "Human legs were sticking out of piles of broken table legs and chairs. A big console radio, which was bolted to the wall, tore loose and was smashed against the opposite wall.

"I was sitting in a chair on the side of the ship were the wave struck, and I found myself flying across to the other side. There was no chance to get to your feet, because first the ship would be tilted one way and then the other. The floor was like a greased pig, and the water and furniture would knock us down as fast as we tried to stand up."

Of the 598 passengers, 321 were American citizens.

Belgian Ex-Premier And Family Thrown From Beds

Paul Van Zeeland, former Premier of Belgium, was in his cabin with his wife and two children when the wave struck. All four were tumbled out of their beds and piled in a heap against the wall. Van Zeeland was bruised and cut.

Capt. Sidney E. Batson, master of the torpedoed Heronspool, who was rescued with his crew of thirty-five, praised the President Harding's commander, Capt. James E. Roberts, for his seamanship.

"I was inside the wheelhouse when that big wave hit us and the ship heeled over about forty degrees," Captain Batson said. "The storm blew up out of the southeast. Captain Roberts handled his ship in a fine seamanlike manner."

Most Of Passengers Also Praise Skipper

Most of the passengers expressed similar sentiments, but Prof. Louis C. Karpinski, 61, of the University of Michigan, criticized the officers for their handling of the situation. He also expressed resentment at the number of foreigners aboard and said preference should be given to Americans stranded in Europe.

Although the radio operator reported receiving "hundreds" of anxious messages from relatives and friends ashore, a relatively small crowd gathered at the early morning docking hour.

One of the most seriously injured passengers was Miss Alvarez Cabal, 43, a Spanish subject. She was virtually scalped, and her head was split open.

Another woman passenger, Mrs. Eileen Thurston, 72, of the British Barbadoes, suffered severe head injuries, severe shock, arm and leg fractures and heart strain. She was taken to the Jersey City Medical Center.

W. R. Clarke, of Orlando, Fla., told of seeing the submarine that sank the Heronspool. The U-boat had remained on the scene and flashed its blinked lights to attract rescuers, he said. When the President Harding approached the sub disappeared.

Washington Woman Hurled Out Of Chair

Pitched headlong out of a deck chair by the hurricane, Mrs. Isahl C. Wright of Washington, D. C., was saved from plunging in the ocean only by the rail of the ship.

The storm was at its worst," she related today, "and I was sitting there watching. Suddenly a tremendous wave hit and was rolled out of the chair, across the deck and up against rail, and then back again.

"For awhile I was helpless in about a foot of water.

Skipper Tells How U-Boat Torpedoed The Heronspool

Says Gunfire Forced Sub To Dive Several Times, But Nazis Finally Scored Hit

The following account of the torpedoing of the British freighter Heronspool, of West Hartlepool, England, was given to the Associated Press by the vessel's master, Sydney Batson, when he arrived at New York today aboard the American liner President Harding, which rescued him and his crew.

By SYDNEY BATSON

New York, Oct. 21—At 6 P. M. October 12, I observed three shots being fired at the French tanker Emile Miguet, about five or six miles distant, bearing about west, two points on the port bow. I then steered my ship, the S. S. Heronspool, away to the northeastward, to escape the submarine, continuing between this course and gradually hauling to north by east.

Shortly after 8 P. M. we heard an explosion some distance away on our starboard beam, a column of water appearing on that quarter. At about 8:30 P. M. the submarine signaled "What ship?" As soon as we could make him out we fired two shots at him, whereupon he dived. I hauled to the westward for two hours and then zigzagged between west and southwest.

U-Boat Appears Again

At about 11 P. M. the submarine again appeared in sight nearly aft, and we quickly fired two shots at him in succession. He again disappeared but reappeared at about midnight and fired a shot which exploded close to our starboard beam.

Soon after that we sighted him on the starboard quarter and fired at him. Then again he appeared on the port quarter and again we fired at him. Shortly after this he was again sighted on the port quarter and two more shots were fired at him at about ten-minute intervals.

Felt Violent Explosion

He then disappeared from view, but shortly afterward a violent explosion in the forepart of the ship indicated that we had been torpedoed and struck in the port side forward. We then abandoned ship in the two lifeboats, and after pulling away for some distance we laid to. In looking back at the ship the forepart appeared to be blown away and she was listed to port.

The submarine appeared in full view a short distance away about twenty minutes later, but she seemed not to notice us. We sighted the President Harding at about 5.30 A. M. and shortly after that the Heronspool disappeared. As the President Harding drew closer we flashed our electrical torch which the steamer acknowledged and shortly afterward we were taken on board.

SHIP DOCKS WITH OVER 100 HURT IN STORM

Steward Swept Into Sea In Tornado—Captain Shows Effects Of Strain

The following account of the S. S. President Harding's perilous trip across the storm-swept Atlantic was written by a reporter for the Detroit News, who was one of the passengers.

By PHILIP A. ADLER

[By the Associated Press]

New York, Oct. 21—With more than 100 passengers and members of the crew injured, many seriously, and many still unrecorded, the President Harding was a floating hospital when it reached its New York dock, after a twelve-day transatlantic odyssey.

One man, Paul Johnson, 19, a dining-room steward, was washed overboard during the tornado which hit the ship last Tuesday, the worst tornado in the memory of the oldest seadogs aboard.

Captain Shows Effects

Among the injured many are suffering with broken spines, collar bones, pelvises, sternums, legs, arms, fractured skulls, dislocated ankles, wrists, clavicles, concussions of the brains, nervous shock, scalping, to say nothing of cuts, bruises, abrasions, contusions, sprains, bumps and black eyes.

Some say there is hardly a person among the ship's 700 or 800 who has not been hurt in one way or another.

Among those showing effects of nervous strain is Capt. James E. Robert, the ship's commander. After spending nearly two days on the bridge and skillfully pulling his ship through one of the worst storms on the Atlantic, Captain Roberts, with forty-three years of sea service behind him, decided that there was to be no big story about his President Harding.

Passengers Warned

Twenty-four hours after the storm, he refused, without reading it, to allow my eyewitness report of the disaster to be broadcast from his ship.

The ship's command had advance notice of the storm. Some precautions had been taken. Deck chairs had been tied to banisters, but much furniture was left loose; some decks had been closed to passengers, but not all.

Most of those injured came from the starboard promenade deck, which was left open to passengers, and from the crowded barroom, heavily but insecurely furnished.

Passengers had been warned, but somehow could not take the warning seriously. The long and adventurous voyage not only had inured them to danger, but made them somewhat careless of it.

Before we had sailed from Bordeaux and Le Verdun, we felt that the warning issued by the German Admiralty to the United States steamship Iroquois applied also to the President Harding. Many passengers were prepared for the worst.

Stumble On Britishers

We sailed from Le Verdun October 10. On October 12, we received an S O S call from the French tanker Emile Miguet, which had been torpedoed by a German submarine and was on fire.

It was 5.30 P. M. when we changed our course from northwest to northeast, and it was about 5 A. M. the next morning that we saw on the horizon the lights of three small boats.

"Heave to port side," ordered the captain in French.

"Speak English," came the reply from the men in the lifeboats below. They were not survivors of the French Emile Miguet, but the crew of the British freighter Heronspool, which was sunk the day before by a German submarine. We had stumbled by accident on these Britishers while we had been searching for the Frenchmen.

Find French Tanker

We took them on board, the entire crew of thirty-six. They had been drifting for hours after their ship had been torpedoed, unable even to send an S O S call for aid.

They were crowded on two life boats which were ship[illegible] water. And the third [illegible]. Why that was the submarine itself. It was lying in wait for the rescue ship, hoping, no doubt, it would be an Englishman or a Frenchman.

With the Heronspool survivors on board, we proceeded the search for the Emile Miquet. We found her at about 9 A. M. that morning; from the distance, a rising cloud of smoke on the horizon; on proximity, as a roaring inferno. She was half submerged.

We reached the tanker almost simultaneously with two British destroyers who cruised around her for some time and after much signaling left her to her fate.

And there are at least one hundred passengers on the President Harding—your correspondent among them—who are willing to sign an affidavit to the effect that after we had left the burning hulk of the Emile Miguet we were pursued for at least an hour by a submarine, the periscope of which would bob up above the surface regularly at three minute intervals.

These, in brief, were some of the things we had been through. What was the warning of an approaching storm after that? So we paid no attention and, contrary to orders, gathered on the fore and aft decks to enjoy the unusual sight of an approaching storm.

And a glorious sight it was, a vast pageant of color, sound and movement on an almost cosmic scale. Mountainous waves, deep blue and pale green, were rising and falling, their white breakers reflecting a salmon-colored sun. A sixty-mile wind swept clouds of spray over the decks. Every rope, every cable, every mast and ladder on the ship sang a different tune.

Storm Suddenly Changes

The President Harding took the storm beautifully, with much pitching but hardly any rolling. This went on for hours, till dinner time. Then came a sudden change. The ship began to roll.

After dinner I tried to take a nap in my bunk, but was knocked out of bed by a cot thrown against it. I thought my chair on the promenade deck was a safer place than my bed. Others must have thought likewise. The deck was crowded, that is, the starboard deck on the lee side. The port side, windward deck had been closed to passengers.

The wind by that time had attained tornado proportions. The sea was a boiling cauldron—all foam. The deck windows were white from the clouds of spray. The waves were hitting the windward side of the ship with thunderous crashes. The rolling was getting stronger, the listing greater.

Half Deck Submerged

A crash of a wave louder than all the preceding ones and the lee side where I was dipped down to the very surface of the sea and the whole Atlantic seemed to have flooded the deck. Passengers, crew, chairs, tables, piano, baby carriages, blankets, clothing—everything loose on deck swept down to the lee side under water. Some, your correspondent among them, hung on to the railing to which the deck chairs were tied.

The minutes—or perhaps only seconds—that the promenade deck was under water, seemed like hours. It seemed as if the President Harding would never straighten herself out. I was convinced that the ship was going down. So were [illegible] around me who saw [illegible] the deck submerged, as I found out later. So thought the passengers and crew inside who felt the ship's list at a precarious angle and saw the cloudburst of water rushing in from broken skylights, torn hatches and the vestibules.

Impressed By Others' Calm

Contrasting with the storm outside was the calm of passengers inside the ship, of women as well as men. This self-possession was something phenomenal. Was it the general atmosphere of war and death in which we had all lived for nearly two months? Was it everything that preceded the tornado during our week on the high seas? Was it a realization of the utter helplessness of the situation—a lifebelt was useless in that boiling cauldron; a life boat would not have lasted two minutes, besides it could never be lowered? Whatever it was, the calm and self-possession at that critical moment of the women and men around me is a thing I shall never forget.

The President Harding did straighten herself and tilted over the other way, sweeping men and furnishings in the opposite direction. It repeated the performance several times, cutting, bruising people, breaking human bones, twisting muscles, smashing furniture, cracking glassware, sowing destruction everywhere.

Command Received

And not a scream in all this destruction; not a groan; not a suggestion of hysteria.

What to do? None could tell till the words of command came from somewhere.

"Stay where you are. Get hold of something stationary and hold on to it. Those who can, try to get to your cabins."

But nothing is static in a tornado. Everything is dynamic. Per instruction, I grabbed hold of some iron bar fixed to one of the walls. It immediately gave way and I went sailing across the deck, with the static bar in my hands.

Taking advantage of the few seconds in each roll when the deck seemed more or less level, those on deck made their way to the vestibule and to the bar room, the sole rest room on the ship, all the others having been converted into dormitories for the heavy overload of passengers that we carried.

The bar room was a miniature pandemonium. Bleeding men and women seemed hopelessly tangled up in piles of broken furniture, pinned down underneath the weight of tables, heavy settees, slot machines, the radio, a buffet, arm chairs. Some suffering broken backs and necks, seemed immobile.

Many, together with the piles of furniture in which they were entangled, sailed back and forth across the entire length of the barroom with every roll of the boat, knocking down those who had managed to get on their feet.

S. S. President Harding's 12-Day Odyssey Described By Eyewitness

30.24-4197

Five private physicians, who happened to be among the passengers, immediately produced their medical kits and, with the aid of volunteer nurses, men as well as women, formed rescue parties and gave first aid. They worked almost continually for twenty-four hours and later organized themselves into shifts and carried on their work till the ship was docked.

Call For Medical Supplies

A call for medical supplies issued by the President Harding early Wednesday brought within a few hours a United States Coast Guard cutter with the necessary articles.

Wind and waves played many a prank on the President Harding. The wave that submerged the lee side of the ship hit her windward side a short distance off the bow, tearing loose much of the superstructure on the bridge, some seventy feet above sea level.

Hours after the first big wave, when I was lying in my bed trying to fall asleep, the door of my cabin suddenly was flung wide open and a man came flying through it, horizontally, straight as an arrow, about four feet above the ground, he flew fifteen feet across my cabin and straight into the opposite wall, which, fortunately, was padded.

He was J. F. Yriart, of the Uruguayan Legation in Ecuador. How this flying Uruguayan attache managed to save his skull and neck is more than he or I can tell.

Countless similar adventures, almost incredible, even to those who had experienced them or to, eyewitnesses, happened on the President Harding the night of October 17, 1939.

One also could write countless stories of heroic deeds by passengers, members of the crew, pathetic stories of children begging to be taken off "this leaking boat," of the command literally pouring oil on troubled waters in an effort to pacify them, etc.

The whole story can be summed up in the laconic statement of Captain Roberts:

"It was the worst thing I have seen in my forty-three years at sea."

NOTE TO EDITORS:

THIS GRAPHIC STORY OF THE TORPEDOING OF THE FRENCH TANKER EMILE MIGUET AND THE BRITISH FREIGHTER HERONSPOOL BY A GERMAN SUBMARINE WAS TOLD TO THE ASSOCIATED PRESS BY GEORGE HARESNAPE, RADIO OPERATOR OF THE BRITISH SHIP, ON HIS ARRIVAL IN NEW YORK TODAY WITH 33 OTHER MEMBERS OF THE CREW WHO SURVIVED THE ATTACK.

BY RADIO OPERATOR GEORGE HARESNAPE

NEW YORK, OCT 21-(AP)-THE GERMAN SUBMARINE THAT SENT THE FREIGHTER HERONSPOOL TO THE BOTTOM WITH A TORPEDO OCT. 12 OFF THE IRISH COAST DID SO ONLY AFTER WE HAD BATTLED IT IN A FOUR-HOUR NIGHT FIGHT.

THE SUB DIDN'T HIT US WITH A SINGLE SHELL.

WE HAD BEEN PROTECTED BY A BRITISH WARSHIP CONVOY TO A POINT ABOUT 300 MILES OFF IRELAND. WE WERE ON OUR WAY TO MONTREAL.

AT 8:30 P.M., ONLY A FEW HOURS AFTER WE HAD LEFT THE CONVOY, WE CAME UPON THE SUBMARINE AS IT WAS SINKING THE BIG FRENCH OIL TANKER EMILE MIGUET.

OCT 22 1939

THE SUBMARINE WAS FIRING SHOT AFTER SHOT AT THE TANKER, AND WE STARTED RUNNING AT ONCE, HOPING TO GET AWAY UNNOTICED.

THE SUB SAW US, HOWEVER, AND STARTED FOR US.

WE HAD ONLY ONE GUN--I CAN'T TELL YOU WHAT SIZE BECAUSE IT'S AGAINST BRITISH ADMIRALTY ORDERS--BUT WE FOUGHT BACK AS BEST WE COULD. THE SUBMARINE SURFACED AND DIVED CONTINUALLY, FIRING WITH ITS GUNS. I THINK THEY WANTED TO SAVE THE EXPENSE OF A TORPEDO.

THEY ZIG-ZAGGED ALL OVER THE OCEAN IT SEEMED, FIRING BACK AND FORTH AT EACH OTHER FOR FOUR HOURS. BECAUSE OF OUR GUN THE SUBMARINE DIDN'T RISK COMING TOO CLOSE, AND WITH THE DARKNESS ADDING TO THE CONFUSION THEY FAILED TO TOUCH US WITH A SHELL.

AT ABOUT A.M., THE SUBMARINE COMMANDER MUST HAVE BECOME TIRED OF THIS. ANYWAY HE LET GO A TORPEDO--AND THE FIGHT WAS OVER.

THE TORPEDO STRUCK US SO UNEXPECTEDLY AND WE ABANDONED SHIP SO QUICKLY I DIDN'T HAVE TIME EVEN TO SEND AN S O S FOR HELP. ALL 34 CREW MEMBERS GOT AWAY SAFELY IN TWO LIFEBOATS.

THE SUBMARINE CRUISED ABOUT US AS WE BOBBED IN THE SEA SPELLS BUT NO ONE SPOKE TO US. THE HERONSPOOL SANK VERY SLOWLY AND WE WOULD HAVE BOARDED HER AGAIN IF THE SUB HAD ONLY LEFT.

FINALLY, FOUR HOURS AFTER IT WAS HIT, THE FREIGHTER SANK. THE SUB STUCK BY US, HOWEVER, FOR ANOTHER HOUR UNTIL THE AMERICAN LINER PRESIDENT HARDING CAME INTO SIGHT, THEN LEFT.

THE AMERICAN SHIP, WHICH WAS HURRYING TO THE SCENE IN ANSWER TO THE FRENCH OIL TANKER'S DISTRESS SIGNALS, SAW US AND PICKED US UP. TWO BRITISH WARSHIPS MEANWHILE HAD COME TO THE AID OF THE FRENCH TANKER'S

SURVIVORS.

ALL THE HERONSPOOL CREW ARE IN GOOD CONDITION. NONE WERE HURT WHEN THE HURRICANE HIT THE PRESIDENT HARDING LAST TUESDAY NIGHT, INJURING MANY OF HER PASSENGERS AND CREW.

IN THE PATH OF ANY BERLIN-TO-BAGHDAD DRIVE, HE SAID, STANDS TURKEY, "A BRAVE AND RESPECTED FRIEND," AND IRAQ, "OUR LOYAL AND UNSHAKEABLE ALLY."

IN ACTUAL FACT, I AM TOLD ON GOOD AUTHORITY THAT THE BRITISH PLANES IN FRANCE HAVE NOT YET CARRIED BOMBS ON ANY OF THEIR FLIGHTS OVER GERMAN TERRITORY, BUT THE POSSIBILITY HAS BEEN ENVISAGED THAT THE STRATEGICAL SITUATION ON THE WESTERN FRONT MIGHT ONE DAY DEMAND SWIFT CONCENTRATION OF FIRST LINE AIRCRAFT FOR A MASS RAID ON MILITARY OBJECTIVES IN OR BEHIND THE GERMAN LINES.

THE VISIT OF SIR KINGSLEY WOOD, THE BRITISH AIR MINISTER, TO THE ROYAL AIR FORCE WAR STATIONS LAST WEEK AFFORDED HIM THE OPPORTUNITY FOR A LONG CONSULTATION WITH THE FRENCH AIR MINISTER, GUY LA CHAMBRE.

THE MEETING, WHICH FOLLOWED UPON DECISIONS RECENTLY TAKEN BY THE SUPREME WAR COUNCIL, ENABLED THE TWO MINISTERS TO DISCUSS A WIDE RANGE OF SUBJECTS OF MUTUAL INTEREST AND LAID THE GROUNDWORK FOR EVEN CLOSER COOPERATION BETWEEN THE BRITISH AND FRENCH AIR FORCES WHEN THE TIME FOR ACTION COMES.

LATER AT THE R.A.F.FIELD HEADQUARTERS, SIR KINGSLEY PORED LONG OVEI OPERATIONS MAPS WITH THE HIGHEST STAFF OFFICERS OF THE FORCE IN FRANCE.

A COMMUNIQUE READ;

"THE FUEHRER TODAY RECEIVED SLOVAKIAN MINISTER CERNAK IN THE REICHSCHANCELLERY. DURING THE CONFERENCE THE FUEHRER TOLD THE MINISTER THAT GERMANY WILL FULFILL THE WISHES SET FORTH BY THE SLOVAKIAN GOVERNMENT OUT OF HISTORICAL NATIONAL REASONS FOR THE RETURN TO SLOVAKIA OF TERRITORY TAKEN BY THE FORMER POLISH STATE IN THE YEARS 1920, 1924 AND 1938. RETURN OF THIS TERRITORY WILL BE REGULATED THROUGH A TREATY BETWEEN GERMANY AND SLOVAKIA."

ALTHOUGH NOT SPECIFICALLY DEFINED, THE TERRITORY IS [redacted] KNOWN AS THE OLSA OR TESCHEN AREA IN THE EXTREME SOUTHWEST CORNER OF POLAND WHICH WAS THE FIRST CAUSE OF STRIFE BETWEEN POLAND AND CZECHO-SLOVAKIA IN 1920.

THE DISPUTED LAND THEN WAS DIVIDED BETWEEN THE TWO COUNTRIES AT THE ENTENTE CONFERENCE IN PARIS JULY 28, 1920. LAST YEAR POLAND TOOK OVER THE REMAINDER OF THE TESCHEN AREA, WHICH IS RICH IN COAL, WHEN GERMANY DISMEMBERED CZECHO-SLOVAKIA AFTER THE MUNICH ACCORD. POLAND ALSO ACQUIRED A SMALL SLOVAKIAN AREA IN THE TATRA MOUNTAINS EAST OF ZAKOPANE.

MEXICO CITY, OCT. 21-(AP)-FOREIGN INTELLIGENCE AGENTS TONIGHT WERE INVESTIGATING REPORTS THAT THE GERMAN TANKER EMMY FRIEDRICH, WHICH SAILED FROM TAMPICO LAST NIGHT, WOULD SERVE AS A SUPPLY SHIP FOR GERMAN SUBMARINES OPERATING IN THE WESTERN ATLANTIC.

THE TANKER CARRIED A CARGO OF 39,000 BARRELS OF AMERICAN OIL.

THERE ALSO WERE REPORTS THAT THE 4,326-TON VESSEL, WHICH HAD REMAINED IN MEXICAN WATERS SINCE THE OUTBREAK OF THE EUROPEAN WAR, WOULD ATTEMPT TO SLIP THROUGH THE ALLIED BLOCKADE AND REACH A GERMAN PORT.

THE EMMY FRIEDRICH'S CLEARANCE PAPERS GAVE HER PORT OF DESTINATION AS MALMO, SWEDEN, BUT DIPLOMATIC SOURCES HERE HEARD REPORTS THAT SHE WOULD SEEK SHELTER IN SOME TINY CENTRAL AMERICAN OR SOUTH AMERICAN PORT.

THERE SHE COULD BE FREE TO FUEL U-BOATS OR SEA RAIDERS, WHICH FREQUENTLY HAVE BEEN REPORTED IN NEIGHBORING WATERS, AND ASSIST IN REPAIRS. THE DIPLOMATIC SOURCES SAID ALSO THE TANKER MIGHT KEEP A RENDEZVOUS AT SEA WITH GERMAN FIGHTING CRAFT.

THE TANKER TOOK ON HER OIL CARGO AT PORT ARTHUR, TEX., JUST BEFORE THE START OF THE WAR. LEAVING THERE EN ROUTE TO HAMBURG, THE CRISIS IN EUROPE SENT THE SHIP INTO TAMPICO FOR REFUGE.

WASHINGTON, OCT 21-(AP)-THE SMALL NEUTRAL STATES OF EUROPE ARE WATCHING THE SENATE DEBATE ON NEUTRALITY PERHAPS AS CLOSELY AS THE LARGE BELLIGERENTS.

THEIR INTEREST CENTERS ON TWO MAIN POINTS--THE ARMS EMBARGO AND SHIPPING RESTRICTIONS.

THE NORTHERN NEUTRALS LIKE NORWAY, DENMARK, HOLLAND, SWEDEN, BELGIUM AND FINLAND, TOGETHER WITH SWITZERLAND, ALREADY HAVE AN EMBARGO ON THE SHIPMENT OF ARMS TO BELLIGERENTS. TWO, SWEDEN AND DENMARK, ARE, IN PROPORTION TO THEIR SIZE, IMPORTANT ARMS MANUFACTURERS. THE NEUTRALS' EMBARGOES ARISE NOT FROM LEGISLATIVE ACTION BUT FROM THE FACT THAT EXPORT LICENSES ARE REQUIRED FOR ARMS SHIPMENTS AND SUCH LICENSES ARE NOT NOW BEING GRANTED FOR SHIPMENTS TO BELLIGERENTS.

IF THE UNITED STATES LIFTS HER EMBARGO, WILL THE SMALL EUROPEAN NEUTRALS DO LIKEWISE? THEY ARE NOT IN THE HAPPY SITUATION OF THE UNITED STATES, 3,000 MILES FROM THE BELLIGERENTS.

IN THE WORLD WAR, THE UNITED STATES PERMITTED BRITISH AND FRENCH ARMED MERCHANTMEN TO COME INTO AMERICAN PORTS, BUT LITTLE HOLLAND BARRED THEM FROM HER PORTS. SHE HAD A FRONTIER CONTIGUOUS TO GERMANY AND FEARED REPRISALS FROM HER POWERFUL NEIGHBOR.

THERE IS EVERY LIKELIHOOD THAT THE SMALL NEUTRALS WILL CONTINUE TO KEEP THEIR ARMS AT HOME, NO MATTER WHAT THE UNITED STATES DOES.

THE NEUTRALS POSSESSING LARGE SHIPPING LINES LIKE NORWAY, HOLLAND AND SWEDEN, ARE VITALLY INTERESTED IN WHAT CONGRESS INTENDS DOING ABOUT AMERICAN SHIPPING. IF THE UNITED STATES WERE TO BAN ALL AMERICAN SHIPS FROM TRAVELING TO THE BELLIGERENTS, THE SHIPS OF THE NEUTRALS WOULD HAVE AN OPPORTUNITY TO ASSUME A LARGE PART OF THE BURDEN OF CARRYING AMERICA'S GOODS AND TAKING GOODS OF THE BELLIGERENTS TO THESE SHORES.

WITH A POPULATION OF LESS THAN THREE MILLIONS, NORWAY OCCUPIES FIFTH PLACE IN THE WORLD'S SHIPPING, WITH NEARLY 5,000,000 TONS. HOLLAND IS SEVENTH, BELGIUM NINTH. NORWAY CARRIES AN APPRECIABLE AMOUNT OF AMERICAN COMMERCE, NOT ONLY BETWEEN THE UNITED STATES AND NORWAY, BUT FROM AMERICAN PORTS TO MANY CORNERS OF THE WORLD.

DURING THE WORLD WAR, THE SMALL MARITIME NEUTRALS INSISTED ON CONDUCTING THEIR COMMERCE-CARRYING DESPITE THE DANGERS OF SUBMARINES, MINES, RAIDERS AND CAPTURE. NORWAY LOST NO LESS THAN 49 PERCENT OF HER MERCHANT FLEET IN THAT CONFLICT BUT CONTINUED HER WORLD SHIPPING.

LONDON, OCT. 21--[redacted] A BRITISH WAR OFFICE STATEMENT

ASSERTS REPETITION OF THE "FLIMSY AND MENDACIOUS LIE" THAT ENGLAND SUPPLIED [illegible] POISON GAS TO POLAND "CLEARLY INDICATES AN INTENTION ON THE PART OF GERMANY TO USE POISON GAS ON THE WESTERN FRONT."

THE WAR OFFICE SAID USE OF POISON GAS WOULD BE "IN CONTRAVENTION OF THE 1925 GENEVA PROTOCOL" TO WHICH GERMANY AND THE ALLIED BELLIGERENTS ARE SIGNATORIES.

"THE SEQUENCE OF EVENTS IN THE LAST WAR WILL BE RECOLLECTED," THE STATEMENT CONTINUED, "IT IS AN ESTABLISHED FACT THAT A DECISION TO USE THIS BARBAROUS FORM OF WARFARE WAS TAKEN BY THE GERMAN HIGH COMMAND AS EARLY AS THE LATE AUTUMN OF 1914.

"TECHNICAL PREPARATIONS HAD BEEN COMPLETED BY THEM TO USE POISON GAS ON THE YPRES FRONT. WHILE WAITING FOR A SUITABLE WIND, THE GERMAN PROPAGANDA MACHINE ENDEAVORED TO PREPARE THE WAY FOR THEIR INTENDED OUTRAGE BY LYING ACQUSATIONS AGAINST THEIR OPPONENTS."

According [illegible] THAT THE GERMANS HAD GIVEN OUT AN "UTTERLY UNTRUE" STATEMENT THAT THE BRITISH EMPLOYED "SHELLS AND BOMBS FILLED WITH ASPHYXIATING GAS" ON APRIL 16,1915, THE WAR OFFICE STATEMENT SAID "NO POISON GAS FOR WAR PURPOSES HAD AT THAT TIME BEEN MANUFACTURED, EVEN EXPERIMENTALLY, IN BRITAIN."

"THE DECISION TO EXPLORE THE POSSIBILITIES OF MAKING IT WAS NOT TAKE UNTIL A FORTNIGHT AFTER ITS INHUMAN USE BY GERMANY," THE STATEMENT ADDED. "THE SEQUEL [illegible] GERMANY'S FALSE ACCUSATION[illegible] WAS THE LAUNCHING OF THE FIRST GERMAN GAS ATTACK FIVE DAYS LATER."

THE WEEK OF OCTOBER 15-21, 1939, APPEARS HEADED INTO HISTORY RED-LETTERED AS ONE OF POSSIBLE VITAL CONSEQUENCE NOT ONLY FOR THE EUROPEAN BELLIGERENTS, BUT FOR THE WORLD.

NO MILITARY OR NAVAL DEVELOPMENT OF REAL CONSEQUENCE MARKED IT. BUT WITHIN ITS SEVEN-DAY SPAN CAME POLITICAL AND ECONOMIC HAPPENINGS THAT MAY FORESHADOW MORE CLEARLY THAN BATTLES THE OUTCOME OF THE STRUGGLE BETWEEN THE ANGLO-FRENCH ALLIES AND NAZI GERMANY.

FOREMOST FOR ATTENTION WAS CONSUMATION OF THE PACT OF ANKARA. IT BINDS TURKEY, FRANCE AND BRITAIN TO MUTUAL ASSISTANCE IN THE EVENT OF INTERNATIONAL AGGRESSION INVOLVING THE MEDITERRANEAN.

OF HARDLY LESS CONSEQUENCE THAN THIS POTENTIAL REMOVAL OF THE DARDENELLES BARRIER TO ALLIED HAMMERING AT GERMANY'S BACKDOOR IS THE FACT THAT EVERY EFFORT WAS MADE TO MAKE THE PACT INOFFENSIVE TO SOVIET RUSSIA.

ALLIED DIPLOMATIC STRATEGISTS ARE SEEKING TO WEAN RUSSIA AWAY FROM HER STILL DOUBTFUL "FRIENDSHIP" WITH NAZI GERMANY. UNDOUBTEDLY, ALLIED AND TURKISH MILITARY MEN ARE HOPING THAT THE PACT MEANS EXCLUSION NOT ONLY OF RUSSIA, BUT OF ITALY FROM ANY ROLE OF WAR ALLIES OF NAZI GERMANY.

HOW SUCCESSFUL THEY MAY BE REMAINS TO BE SEEN, BUT FIRST REPORTS OF MOSCOW REACTION INDICATE THAT THE SOVIETS ARE NONE TOO WELL PLEASED WITH THE PACT. THE GOVERNMENT NEWSPAPER IZVESTIA, ASSERTING THAT THE U.S.S.R. "HAS NO REASON TO BE SORRY FOR WHAT HAPPENED," COMMENTED THAT A TURKISH-RUSSIAN AGREEMENT WAS INCOMPATIBLE WITH TURKEY'S "UNDERTAKINGS" UNDER THE BRITISH-FRENCH-TURKISH TREATY.

BY IMPLICATION, AT LEAST, THE PACT HOLDS OUT ASSURANCES TO BOTH ROME AND MOSCOW, HOWEVER, THAT IF THE WAR WITH GERMANY CAN BE BROUGHT TO THE SORT OF TERMINATION WHICH THE FRANCO-BRITISH ALLIES SEEK, BOTH RUSSIA AND ITALY WOULD BE WELCOMED TO FRONT SEATS AT THE PEACE CONFERENCE TABLE PROVIDED THEY REMAIN NEUTRAL. THERE IS MORE THAN A SUGGESTION OF BRITISH "APPEASEMENT" POLICY TO BE DETECTED IN THE PACT OF ANKARA AND CIRCUMSTANCES SURROUNDING ITS SIGNATURE, APPEASEMENT FOR ITALY AND RUSSIA IF NOT FOR NAZI GERMANY.

WHATEVER THE PACT'S ULTIMATE PLACE IN HISTORY, THERE WERE OTHER HAPPENINGS DURING THE WEEK OF MORE IMPORTANCE THAN MILITARY ACTION.

THE FOUR NORDIC NEUTRALS OF THE BALTIC AREA CONSULTED ABOUT THE RUSSIAN PRESSURE ON FINLAND. THE PUBLISHED PRODUCT OF THE STOCKHOLM CONFERENCE WAS A BLAND AND IN ITSELF ALMOST MEANINGLESS REAFFIRMATION OF THE INTENTION OF SWEDEN, NORWAY, DENMARK AND FINLAND TO REMAIN NEUTRAL AND TO BE READY, IF OPPORTUNITY OFFERS, TO PUT THEIR SHOULDERS TO THE PEACE WHEEL.

THAT OFFENDED NOBODY. YET THERE WAS AMPLE EVIDENCE THAT THE FINNISH CONFEREES CAME AWAY FROM STOCKHOLM CONFIDENT OF SCANDINAVIAN MORAL, AND PERHAPS EVEN MILITARY SUPPORT, IF RUSSIA ENDEAVORS TO FORCE THE ISSUE WITH FINLAND AND MAKE THAT COUNTRY A VIRTUAL PROTECTORATE.

WHAT WAS NOT SAID IN THE OFFICIAL ACCOUNT OF THE CONFERENCE WAS VASTLY MORE IMPORTANT THAT WHAT WAS. BETWEEN THE UTTERLY NEUTRAL AND CONCILIATORY LINES OF THAT STATEMENT MOSCOW COULD READ CLEARLY A DEFINITE HINT THAT SHE MIGHT FIND SWEDEN, NO INCONSIDERABLE ANTAGONIST, CONFRONTING HER IF SHE ATTEMPTS A "BLITZKRIEG" OF HER OWN IN FINLAND.

FINLAND HOLDS THE LAND ROUTES FROM RUSSIA TO THE SWEDISH IRON DEPOSITS THAT HAVE MADE SWEDEN THE OUTSTANDING ECONOMIC BENEFICIARY OF THE EUROPEAN ARMAMENT RACE. STOCKHOLM COULD NOT WELCOME ANY CLOSER APPROACH BY RUSSIA, OR GERMANY, TO THAT SWEDISH HORN-OF-PLENTY.

STILL ANOTHER DEVELOPMENT OF THE WEEK FITS INTO THE CLOUDED PICTURE OF ECONOMIC AND POLITICAL HAPPENINGS. FROM BUDAPEST CAME A SUMMARY OF WHAT HAS BEEN HAPPENING BACKSTAGE IN GERMAN EFFORTS TO ENLARGE HER FLOW OF ESSENTIAL COMMODITIES FROM HER BALKAN NEIGHBORS. IT CANNOT BE A PLEASANT CONTEMPLATION FOR NAZI EYES IF IT DEPICTS THE SITUATION ACCURATELY.

NAZI NEGOTIATORS IN YUGOSLAVIA, RUMANIA, HUNGARY, AND EVEN IN BULGARIA, MET OBSTACLES, THE SUMMARY SAID. NOT ONLY WERE THE BALKAN NEIGHBORS JEALOUS OF THEIR NEUTRALITY IN THE WAR, BUT HIGHLY PRACTICAL OVER THE MATTER OF GERMAN PAYMENTS. THEY TOOK A CASH-ON-THE-BARRELHEAD TONE WHICH IMPLIED SKEPTICISM AS TO GERMAN ABILITY TO PAY NOW OR LATER.

NO INCREASED FLOW OF RUMANIAN OIL, OR FOODSTUFFS FROM YUGOSLAVIA INTO THE REICH WAS INDICATED. EVEN BULGARIA, AT THAT TIME SLANTED TOWARD BERLIN BY THE POLICY OF A CABINET SINCE RESIGNED, WAS DEMANDING BARRELHEAD PAYMENTS. TURKEY PREFACED HER SWING TO THE ALLIED SIDE IN THE PACT OF ANKARA BY REFUSING TO RENEW, MUCH LESS EXPAND, AN EXPIRED TRADE PACT WITH BERLIN.

ALTOGETHER, IT WAS A BLEAK PICTURE OF BERLIN'S EFFORT TO COMB THE BALKANS FOR NEEDED WAR SUPPLIES.

The Skies Rain Death

By ELMER W. PETERSON

[Associated Press Correspondent]

Budapest, Oct. 21—Unforgettable scenes of the war in Poland as seen personally and as authentically reported:

A building flaming from incendiary bombs with thick, black smoke pouring out of the windows . . . a man running toward the building with arms stretched high and shouting "my wife . . . my wife . . ." . . . and then collapsing in a limp heap before he reaches the building . . .

Bodies Hurled Into Street

Another burning building and only a few minutes to attempt a rescue of occupants . . . police dash into the building . . . they find people who are unconscious, but there is no time to carry them out . . . the police smash what is left of broken windows and hurl bodies out into the street . . . bodies that start with a dull, plopping sound . . . bones are broken but there's a chance at least that some life may be saved . . . a gruesome, terrifying but necessary thing . . .

The wild panic of refugee scenes . . . the frenzied efforts to save something of value . . . the weary, hungry frightened caravans of people inspired by terror . . . a man pushing his exhausted wife and child in a wheelbarrow . . . steel-helmeted firemen traveling toward the frontier on a fire-fighting truck . . . a shopkeeper pedalling away on a delivery bicycle once pedalled by his errand boy . . . refugees so hungry that when confronted with food they are unable to eat . . . people of wealth reaching the frontier barefooted.

Bomb Kills Children

The miraculous and freakish division between life and death . . . A man steps into a store while his two children wait outside. . . . When he comes out of the store his children are dead in the street from a small bomb from the air. . . .

30.24-4309

Flying shrapnel kills a woman while the child in her arms remains untouched. . . . A wrecked house yields so many dead, so many wounded, and so many with not even a bruise. . . .

Frontier scenes. . . . High up a layer of German warplanes bombing frontier stations and troop concentrations. . . . Underneath a layer of Polish warplanes flying between the dropping bombs to gain refuge in Rumania. . . . On the ground the endless confusion of retreating soldiers and civilians. . . . An army in flight, with trucks, guns, traveling machine shops for airplanes, field wireless cars, cavalry detachments, officers' cars. . . .

Soldiers Bound For Frontier

Contrast. . . . Rumania soldiers rushing toward the Rumanian-Polish frontier, while Polish soldiers move away from the frontier into Rumania. . . . Soldiers leaving a war going down one side of the road. . . . Soldiers going to guard a frontier going up the other side of the same road. . . . Soldiers of an army still intact gazing at soldiers of an army no longer intact. . . . And you wonder at the thoughts of each. . . .

The startling swiftness with which modern warplanes can appear . . . at Krzemienic a foreign diplomat breaks a leg while clambering into a shallow dugout . . . airplanes are overhead before the raid alarm can be heard . . . a train grinds to a stop and people go scrambling into fields while machine-gun bullets rip through old wooden coaches . . .

Gasoline Precious

You see evidence of the value of gasoline . . . men and women offering large sums of money for . . . ew gallons . . . foreign diplomats queued by for a share of the precious fluid . . . you are told how a wealthy Pole offered 50,000 zlotys (normally more than $9,000) for ten gallons . . . without it his efforts to get his family to the frontier were useless . . .

Vogue Of Ration Cards For Groceries Makes Shopping Fine Art

"Mixed" Coffee And "German" Tea Figure In Sample Meal Schedule

By LOUIS P. LOCHNER
Associated Press Correspondent

Berlin, Oct. 21—How to make palatable dishes for the family on war rations is a problem the German hausfrau has had to face from the very beginning of the war.

With bread cards, flour cards, meat cards, fat cards and a variety of other cards in vogue, shopping has become a fine art.

One hausfrau took the trouble of counting how many coffee beans the little paper bag containing her weekly ration actually had. The result surprised even her; sixteen beans from which to brew coffee for a week.

Help Out Housewife

The Nazi Women's Auxiliary is trying to step into the breach and help out the puzzled housewife with daily bills of fare. Until cold weather sets in, the daily ration can be made palatable by fruits of various kinds. Later, it is to be assumed, something else must be thought up.

Here are sample menus devised by the auxiliary for four days for a family of four:

Thursday

Breakfast—"Mixed" coffee (meaning a few coffee beans mixed with chickory, barley or some other ingredient), 1½ pints milk (skimmed), bread, jam and artificial honey.

Dinner—Pear soup, spinach, potatoes, pork sausage.

Supper—Leftovers or dinner spinach, potatoes and gravy. In addition: Plum pancake.

Friday

Breakfast—Like Thursday.

Dinner—Carrots, apples and potatoes boiled together as one dish; sour milk, canned cranberries.

Supper—Tomato salad, bread with sausage, oil sardines or cold meats (if available).

Saturday

Breakfast—"Light" oatmeal soup (presumably meaning with plenty of water), bread and jam and/or artificial honey.

Dinner—Soup made of herbs (if possible with bread added), sauerkraut with bacon, potatoes.

Supper—Mixed salad made up of boiled potatoes, tomatoes and cucumbers; bread with canned fish; "German" tea (meaning tea made of whatever herb or tree blossom grows in the particular section of the country).

Sunday

Breakfast—Jam and fresh fruit, home-baked white bread, honey or marmalade, tea.

Dinner—Plum soup, pork or lamb roast, cabbage salad, potatoes, chocolate pudding with vanilla sauce. (This is assuming that the butcher will have a roast for this family of four. Housewives already complain that this often is not the case. Every citizen is entitled to one pound of meat—including canned meats and sausage—per week.)

Supper—Tomatoes with whey cheese mixed with herbs, fried potatoes, "German" tea.

If perchance the family should decide that, of a Sunday, it would like to indulge in the luxury of going to an ice-cream parlor, it will find itself out of luck. At best, it can obtain only a watery sort of substitute of ice cream. Since September 13, the use of unskimmed milk has been forbidden to ice-cream manufacturers as well as in the preparation of sour milk, joghourt and substances for whitening coffee.

If the family should hanker for "real" and not "German" coffee, hence go to some coffee shop or bakery or confectionery, it never knows whether coffee will be available, or whether, as happens in many cases, "real" tea instead of coffee is the best to be obtained.

PRESS ABROAD 'CENSORED' TO BAR SPY CODES

Paris, Oct. 21 (AP).—Many elements of a newspaper that are innocuous in peacetime become alive with danger in a war. For instance: Classified advertisements and crossword puzzles.

The puzzles have been banned completely after it proved too difficult a task to censor them daily. And newspapers on government order now require forty-eight hours to investigate the little notices of the want ad page—with no guarantee they will be published then.

Used for Spy Codes.

The danger in both cases is of enemy spies communicating coded information through these innocent-appearing channels.

Most important of all for wartime, however, are the weather reports. The war has made them a state secret. No longer do you see them in the paper, hear them on the radio.

The Allies are profiting from their mistakes at the start of the last war.

The weather was important then because of its power to help make or break an offensive by land or sea. It became vital later on when the German Zeppelins started raiding France and England.

Eleven Zeppelins ran into an unexpected storm one night over England, were blown south and lost four of their number in France next morning.

Weather Reports Vital.

Now that the airplane has been developed into one of Mars' chief aids, weather reports are increasingly vital.

Fortunate thing for the Allies is that they have the edge on the Germans. Meteorologists say that, because of the way nature works, they can know the weather in Germany without the Germans knowing the weather in France and England.

PARIS-OCT-21

SHIPS IN THE ATLANTIC TIP ENGLAND AND FRANCE ON WHAT TO EXPECT.

ONCE THEY KNOW THEIR OWN WEATHER, THEY CAN DEDUCE PRETTY WELL WHAT

THE GERMANS, WEATHER EXPERTS BELIEVE, WILL TRY TO COMPENSATE

BY GETTING REPORTS FROM NEUTRAL SHIPS IN THE ATLANTIC, AND FROM ICELAND

AND SPAIN. THEY ALSO CAN FALL BACK ON THE "AIR-MASS" PREDICTION SYSTEM

DEVISED BY NORWEGIAN SCIENTISTS IN THE LAST WAR.

MYSTERY:

THE STATUS OF THE ROME-BERLIN AXIS

MUSSOLINI WATCHING ALL DEVELOPMENTS,

KEEPING WAY OPEN TO MOVE

IN ANY DIRECTION (900)

BY EDWARD KENNEDY

(ADVANCE) ROME-(CORRESPONDENCE OF THE ASSOCIATED PRESS)-DOES THE ROME-BERLIN AXIS AND ITS MILITARY ALLIANCE STILL EXIST?

AN AUTHORITATIVE ANSWER TO THIS QUESTION, WHICH IS A PUZZLE TO BOTH ITALIANS AND FOREIGN OBSERVERS, WOULD BE AN ALL-IMPORTANT INDICATION OF WHAT MAY BE EXPECTED IN EUROPE AS THE WAR GOES ON.

THE ITALO-GERMAN PARTNERSHIP HAS NEVER BEEN PUBLICLY RENOUNCED AND, THEREFORE, IT EXISTS AS BINDING AS EVER, THEORETICALLY, AT LEAST.

ON THE OTHER HAND, NEITHER MUSSOLINI NOR ANY OTHER FASCIST OFFICIAL HAS REAFFIRMED THE AXIS-ALLIANCE SINCE HOSTILITIES BEGAN.

FOR MORE THAN TWO YEARS, THE AXIS WAS EXTOLLED DAILY IN THE FASCIST PRESS AND IN THE SPEECHES OF MUSSOLINI AND OTHER OFFICIALS AS THE POWERFUL AND UNSHATTERABLE UNION OF TWO GREAT PEOPLES BATTLING SIDE BY SIDE FOR "PEACE WITH JUSTICE."

THE MILITARY ALLIANCE INTO WHICH IT DEVELOPED LAST SPRING WAS ACCLAIMED BY THE DUCE AND HIS SPOKESMEN AS THE INDOMITABLE "PACT OF STEEL" OF 150,000,000 PEOPLE READY TO FIGHT FOR THEIR RIGHTS AND AS AN AUTOMATIC MECHANISM WHICH WOULD BRING ONE TO THE IMMEDIATE AID OF THE OTHER IN CASE OF WAR.

THEN THE WAR CAME--AND ITALY DID NOT RUSH TO THE AID OF GERMANY.

THIS FACT, MUCH AS IT CONTRASTS WITH THE ASSERTIONS HEARD IN ITALY BEFORE THE CONFLICT STARTED, IS NOT IN ITSELF PROOF THAT THE AGREEMENT IS OFF, FOR AS HIS SOLDIERS MARCHED INTO POLAND, REICHSFUEHRER HITLER TELEGRAPHED MUSSOLINI:

"I AM CONVINCED THAT THE MILITARY FORCES OF GERMANY CAN ACCOMPLISH THE ASSIGNED TASK. I BELIEVE, THEREFORE, IN THESE CIRCUMSTANCES THERE IS NO NEED OF ITALIAN MILITARY AID."

THIS MESSAGE MAY BE A FULL EXPLANATION OF WHY ITALY HAS NOT GONE TO WAR.

BUT IT CAN HARDLY EXPLAIN WHY NOT THE SLIGHTEST MENTION OF THE AXIS OR THE MILITARY ALLIANCE HAS BEEN MADE BY MUSSOLINI, OR ANY OTHER OFFICIAL, OR THE PRESS SINCE THE WAR STARTED.

AN INTERESTING FACT IS THAT ALL MENTION OF THE "PACT OF STEEL" SUDDENLY DISAPPEARED FROM FASCIST NEWSPAPERS JUST THREE DAYS AFTER THE CONVERSATIONS OF FOREIGN MINISTER GALEAZZO CIANO WITH HITLER

1939

30.24-4211

30.24-4211

AND FOREIGN MINISTER VON RIBBENTROP AT SALZBURG AND OBER-SALZBURG AUGUST 12 AND 13.

AT THE CONCLUSION OF THE SALZBURG TALKS, IT WAS ANNOUNCED OFFICIALLY THAT PENDING QUESTIONS HAD BEEN EXAMINED, THAT THE TWO NATIONS HAD FOUND THEMSELVES THOROUGHLY IN ACCORD ON EVERYTHING AND THAT NO FURTHER CONFERENCES APPEARED NECESSARY.

NEWSPAPERS FOR TWO DAYS JUBILATED OVER THE SUCCESS OF THE TALKS, HAILING THE "UNCONDITIONAL SOLIDARITY" BETWEEN GERMANY AND ITALY AND MORE THAN EVER EXALTING THE "PACT OF STEEL."

THEN--SILENCE. IT WAS AS THOUGH MENTION OF THE NEUTRALITY ACT SHOULD SIMULTANEOUSLY DISAPPEAR FROM ALL AMERICAN NEWSPAPERS AND AS THOUGH WEEK AFTER WEEK PASSED WITHOUT A WORD ABOUT THE STATUS OF THE ACT--OR ANY EXPLANATION WHY.

AFTER SALZBURG STRANGE STORIES CIRCULATED IN EUROPEAN CAPITALS. THERE WERE REPORTS OF A THREE-HOUR MEETING BETWEEN CIANO AND HITLER IN THE GARDEN AT OBERSALZBURG AT WHICH THE FUEHRER DID ALL THE TALKING AND IN AN EXCITED MANNER.

THERE SINCE HAVE BEEN REPORTS THAT HITLER AND VON RIBBENTROP OUTLINED PLANS FOR THE AGREEMENT WITH RUSSIA AND THE PARTITIONING OF POLAND AND THAT MUSSOLINI REFUSED TO SUPPORT THEM.

ITALY'S POSITION OF REFUSING TO TAKE ANY MILITARY INITIATIVE REMAINED UNCHANGED AFTER A SECOND CIANO JOURNEY TO GERMANY FOR CONSULTATION WITH THE FUEHRER AND HIS AIDES. THE WAR HAD BEEN IN PROGRESS FIVE WEEKS WHEN HITLER INVITED IL DUCE TO SEND HIS ENVOY TO BERLIN.

BUT THE VISIT--OCT. 1 AND 2--LASTED LESS THAN 24 HOURS AND WHEN CIANO RETURNED TO ROME THERE WAS NO APPARENT CHANGE IN ITALY'S POSITION. THE DESIRE OF THE PEOPLE TO REMAIN ALOOF WAS AS STRONG AS EVER AND THEIR GOVERNMENT GAVE THEM NO INKLING THAT ANY CHANGE WAS IN PROSPECT.

OCT 22 1939

ON THE BASIS OF THESE DEVELOPMENTS AND THE FACT THAT ITALY HAS NOT GONE TO GERMANY'S AID, SOME DIPLOMATS ARE CONVINCED THAT THE AXIS, IF NOT BROKEN, IS AT LEAST IN A STATE OF SUSPENSE.

BUT MANY OTHER OBSERVERS ARE SKEPTICAL OF SUCH A VIEW. THEY LEAN MORE TO THE IDEA THAT ITALY AND GERMANY ARE STILL TIED TOGETHER AND THAT ITALY'S CONDUCT IS PART OF THE AXIS STRATEGY.

TO BEGIN WITH, IT IS OBVIOUS THAT ITALY'S MILITARY ASSISTANCE WAS NOT NEEDED FOR THE GERMAN ATTACK ON POLAND.

IF ITALY HAD ENTERED THE WAR AT ONCE, SHE MIGHT HAVE SUFFERED A DISASTROUS BRITISH-FRENCH ATTACK, SINCE HER GEOGRAPHICAL POSITION MAKES HER MUCH MORE VULNERABLE THAN GERMANY.

BY STAYING OUT OF THE WAR AT PRESENT, SHE IS IN A POSITION TO PROVIDE GERMANY WITH A GATEWAY FOR SUPPLIES.

SHE ALSO CONSERVES HER STRENGTH FOR POSSIBLE ENTRY INTO THE WAR AT A LATER AND MORE OPPORTUNE MOMENT AND, IN THE MEANTIME, AS THE ONLY GREAT INDUSTRIAL AND MARITIME NATION OF EUROPE NOT AT WAR, SHE HAS A CHANCE TO MAKE TRADE GAINS AND IMPROVE HER GOLD RESERVE.

OCT 22 1939

BUT EVEN SHOULD THIS LATTER VIEW REPRESENT THE REAL STATE OF THINGS, IT WOULD NOT MEAN THAT ITALY WILL ENTER THE WAR ON GERMANY'S SIDE.

MUSSOLINI HAS BURNED NO BRIDGES BEHIND HIM. HE HAS LEFT THE WAY OPEN IN ALL DIRECTIONS. PRESSING FOR BRITISH-FRENCH ACCEPTANCE OF HIS APPEAL THAT THEY ACCEPT THE CONQUEST OF POLAND AS AN ACCOMPLISHED FACT AND COME TO TERMS WITH GERMANY, HE MIGHT BE THE ARBITER OF A PLAN FOR SETTLING THE DISPUTE ON HIS OWN "PEACE WITH JUSTICE" FORMULA--WHICH NATURALLY WOULD ENTAIL CONCESSIONS TO ITALY.

HE MAY KEEP ITALY INDEFINITELY NEUTRAL AND PROFITING WHILE OTHERS

DISSIPATE THEIR RESOURCES IN WAR.

HE MIGHT CONCEIVABLY PUT ITALY INTO THE WAR ON THE SIDE OF BRITAIN AND FRANCE, SHOULD EVENTS PROVIDE HIM WITH MORAL JUSTIFICATION FOR THIS AND SHOULD HE BELIEVE IT TO ITALY'S INTEREST. FASCIST COMMENTATORS HAVE STATED FRANKLY THAT ITALY IS ACTING IN SELF-INTEREST.

ONE THING IS CERTAIN: THE DUCE IS WATCHING EVENTS CAREFULLY AND CHARTING ITALY'S COURSE AS THEY COME INTO VIEW. HE IS WATCHING THE BATTLEFIELDS, HE IS WATCHING THE ECONOMIES OF THE WARRING NATIONS, HE IS WATCHING INTERNAL SENTIMENTS AND MORALE OF THE BELLIGERENT PEOPLES, HE IS WATCHING THE TEMPER OF HIS OWN PEOPLE AT HOME, AND HE IS WATCHING THE OTHER NEUTRALS--ESPECIALLY THE UNITED STATES.

LOUIS LOCHNER

(ADVANCE) BERLIN, OCT. 21--AP--CAN FRANZ VON PAPEN, CRAFTIEST GERMAN DIPLOMAT OF AN OLD AND DYING SCHOOL, BRING TURKEY BACK TO NEUTRALITY DESPITE THE BRITISH-FRENCH-TURKISH PACT?

THIS WAS THE QUESTION UPPERMOST IN POLITICAL CIRCLES OF BERLIN AS THE GERMAN AMBASSADOR TO ANKARA RETURNED TO REPORT TO ADOLF HITLER ON THE TURKISH SITUATION WHICH RAN COUNTER TO ALL GERMAN PROGNOSTICATIONS.

ANOTHER QUESTION RAISED WAS:

WILL HITLER HOLD VON PAPEN RESPONSIBLE FOR COMMISSAR OF FOREIGN AFFAIRS, PREMIER VYACHESLAFF MOLOTOFF'S FAILURE TO DRAW TURKEY DEFINITELY TO THE RUSSIA'S SIDE, AND HENCE GERMANY'S, AND:

WILL HITLER POLITELY DISMISS THE MAN WHO PERSUADED PAUL VON HINDENBURG TO TURN THE CHANCELLORSHIP OVER TO THE THEN YOUTHFUL NAZI FUEHRER IN JANUARY, 1933?

VON PAPEN, ONCE THE CATHOLIC CENTRIST PART POLITICIAN, IS PERHAPS, THE LAST OF A SCHOOL OF GERMAN DIPLOMATS WHO WITH CHARMING, ENGAGING MANNERS MANAGED TO SAY NOTHING TO COMMIT THEMSELVES.

MODERN GERMAN DIPLOMACY IS BLUNTER, MORE DIRECT AND LESS GIVEN TO "BEATING ABOUT THE BUSH." FOREIGN MINISTER JOACHIM VON RIBBENTROP IS THE OUTSTANDING EXAMPLE OF THIS METHOD OF NEGOTIATING WITH FOREIGN NATIONS.

VON PAPEN'S MOST POWERFUL FRIEND UNDOUBTEDLY WAS THE LATE VON HINDENBURG. WHEN HE WAS COMPELLED TO YIELD TO THE FORWARD-STORMING NAZIS AFTER HAVING BEEN CHANCELLOR UNDER VON HINDENBURG IN 1932, GERMANY'S LATE SOLDIER-PRESIDENT HANDED HIM AS A FAREWELL GIFT AN AUTOGRAPHED PHOTOGRAPH OF HIMSELF UPON WHICH HE WROTE THE FIRST LINES OF GERMANY'S FAMOUS SOLDIER SONG PLAYED AT FUNERALS AND ON MEMORIAL DAY:

"ICH HATT EINEN KAMERADEN." (ONCE I HAD A COMRADE.)

VON PAPEN'S BRILLIANT CAREER WAS PARTLY DUE TO HIS EXCELLENT COMMAND OF THE GERMAN, FRENCH AND ENGLISH LANGUAGES AND HIS POLISHED MANNERS.

WITH THE SAAR VALLEY AS HIS HOME AND A WIFE WHO BELONGED TO THE FAMOUS BOCH-GALHAU FAMILY OF INDUSTRIAL BARONS HAVING CONNECTIONS WITH BELGIUM, LUXEMBOURG AND FRANCE, HE KNEW THE FRENCH MENTALITY AS FEW OTHER GERMANS.

A LONG STAY IN THE UNITED STATES GAVE THIS ALMOST 60-YEAR OLD SCION OF A WEALTHY WESTPHALIAN LANDED FAMILY AN INSIGHT INTO THE ANGLO-SAXON MENTALITY, EVEN THOUGH THERE IS A CLOUD OVER HIS WASHINGTON PERFORMANCE AS A GERMAN MILITARY ATTACHE.

VON PAPEN AND NAVAL ATTACHE CAPT. RICHARD BOY-ED WERE IDENTIFIED IN THE AMERICAN MIND WITH DOCUMENTS FOUND BY THE BRITISH ON THE PERSON OF JAMES F.J.ARCHIBALD, AN AMERICAN NEWSPAPER CORRESPONDENT DURING THE WORLD WAR.

ARRESTED IN FALMOUTH, ENGLAND, IN 1915, ARCHIBALD HAD IN HIS POSSESSION A COLLECTION OF PAPERS SIGNED "PAPEN" ONE OF WHICH REFERRED TO "THOSE IDIOTIC YANKEES."

AT SECRETARY OF STATE ROBERT LANSING'S REQUEST, VON PAPEN AND BOY-ED WERE RECALLED "ON ACCOUNT OF WHAT THIS GOVERNMENT CONSIDERS IMPROPER ACTIVITIES IN MILITARY AND NAVAL MATTERS."

SUSPICION HAD FALLEN ON GERMANY'S NAVAL AND MILITARY REPRESENTATIVES DURING A SERIES OF FIRES AND EXPLOSIONS IN AMERICAN MUNITIONS PLANTS AND ABOARD UNITED STATES SHIPS BEFORE THE U.S. ENTERED THE WORLD WAR.

30.244213

IN APRIL, 1916, AFTER VON PAPEN WAS RECALLED TO GERMANY, HE WAS INDICTED BY A FEDERAL GRAND JURY IN NEW YORK IN CONNECTION WITH AN ALLEGED CONSPIRACY TO BLOW UP THE WELLAND CANAL IN CANADA. THE CHARGE WAS DROPPED A MONTH LATER AND THERE NEVER WAS ANY LEGAL PROOF OF THE CHARGES AGAINST VON PAPEN.

THERE WAS GENERAL ACCEPTANCE OF HIS STATEMENT MADE ON HIS DEPARTURE THAT HE HAD CONFINED HIS ACTIVITIES TO HIS REGULAR DUTIES.

VON PAPEN'S TALENTS SEEM TO LIE ESPECIALLY IN THE DIRECTION OF "FIXING" THINGS. IT WAS HE WHO ESTABLISHED CONTACTS BETWEEN GERMANY'S RHENISH-WESTPHALIAN INDUSTRIAL BARONS AND HITLER IN 1932, THEREBY EASING THE POSSIBILITY OF THE NAZI MOVEMENT DYING FOR WANT OF FUNDS. IT WAS VON PAPEN WHO PERSUADED VON HINDENBURG THAT HITLER MUST BE GIVEN A CHANCE TO GOVERN THE COUNTRY.

HINDENBURG, HOWEVER, MADE HITLER AGREE TO TAKE VON PAPEN INTO THE CABINET AS VICE CHANCELLOR. AS SUCH, WHEN RADICALS IN THE NAZI MOVEMENT THREATENED TO GET THE UPPER HAND IN THE SPRING OF 1934, HE DELIVERED A SPEECH AT MARBURG UNIVERSITY ON JUNE 17 SHARPLY CRITICIZING CERTAIN NAZI TENDENCIES.

THE PURGE WHICH FOLLOWED ON JUNE 30 WAS A DIRECT RESULT OF THIS SPEECH. VON PAPEN HIMSELF NEARLY LOST HIS LIFE. HIS SECRETARIES WERE ARRESTED, HIS CHIEF AIDE SHOT TO DEATH AND HE AND HIS FAMILY HELD VIRTUAL PRISONERS FOR SEVERAL DAYS IN THEIR BERLIN HOME.

SOON AFTERWARD, HE WAS REMOVED FROM THE CABINET ON THE GROUNDS HE HAD MORE IMPORTANT WORK TO PERFORM IN AUSTRIA.

VON HINDENBURG'S LAST OFFICIAL SIGNATURE BEFORE HIS DEATH AUG. 1, 1934, WAS FOR THE APPOINTMENT OF VON PAPEN AS EXTRAORDINARY AMBASSADOR TO AUSTRIA, WHERE CHANCELLOR ENGELBERT DOLLFUSS HAD BEEN SLAIN BY AUSTRIAN NAZIS.

HIS DIFFICULT TASK WAS THAT OF REESTABLISHING BETTER RELATIONS WITH THE REICH DESPITE AUSTRIA'S ANGER OVER THE DEATH OF DOLLFUSS. HE HANDLED THE SITUATION WITH SUCH DIPLOMATIC SKILL THAT HE PERSUADED KURT VON SCHUSCHNIGG TO COME WITH HIM TO BERCHTESGADEN TO MEET HITLER. THIS MEETING PRECEDED THE DOWNFALL OF THE AUSTRIAN REGIME AND LED TO "ANSCHLUSS" AND SCHUSCHNIGG'S ARREST IN MARCH, 1938.

VON PAPEN WAS REWARDED. HITLER PRESENTED HIM WITH A GOLD-RIMMED MEMBERSHIP BUTTON OF THE NAZI PARTY, REGARDED AS THE HIGHEST DECORATION TO ANY GERMAN.

VON PAPEN ONCE AGAIN WENT INTO RETIREMENT, AS HE HAD FREQUENTLY DONE BEFORE. DURING SUCH INTERVALS HE USUALLY DEVOTED HIMSELF TO SUCH DUTIES AS PRESIDENT OF GERMANY'S "HERRENKLUB", AN ORGANIZATION OF GERMAN ARISTROCRATS.

A NEW FIELD TO CONQUER CAME WHEN HITLER APPOINTED HIM AMBASSADOR TO TURKEY, APRIL 18, 1939. HE GOT UNDER WAY TOO LATE TO PREVENT TURKEY'S SIGNING OF A PRELIMINARY PACT OF ALLIANCE WITH BRITAIN IN MAY.

SOME SAID HE WAITED TOO LONG IN BERLIN BEFORE HURRYING TO ANKARA, WHILE OTHERS ASSERTED VON RIBBENTROP HAD NOT EXPECTED TURKEY WOULD ALIGN WITH BRITAIN AGAINST HER FORMER WAR ALLY AND HAD DELAYED VON PAPEN'S APPOINTMENT. IN ANY EVENT, VON PAPEN APPEARS TO HAVE STAVED OFF THE ANGLO-FRENCH-TURKISH PACT FOR A WHILE.

ALLIED-TURKEY PROTECTION PLAN REPORTED

Program For Guarding Near East Interests Believed Agreed Upon

Said To Include Coordinated Military And Financial Action

By LLOYD LEHRBAS
Associated Press Correspondent

Ankara, Oct. 22—Great Britain, France and Turkey tonight were understood to have agreed upon a three-point program for protection of their interests in the Near East.

The program, mapped by diplomats and by military experts in joint staff talks held under closest secrecy, was believed by observers to include:

1. Coordinated action by the British and French forces in the Near East and by the Turkish army in event of any aggressive acts within the scope of the newly signed British-French-Turkish mutual-assistance pact.
2. Granting by Britain and France to Turkey of a £60,000,000 ($240,000,000) credit, as tellingly reported yesterday, of which £25,000,000 ($100,000,000) is earmarked for arms, ammunition and other military supplies.
3. Recommendation by French and British experts on the type of military equipment to be purchased by Turkey to strengthen her position as guardian of the Dardanelles, strategic gateway to the Black Sea and Europe's "back door."

Allied Talks Ended

Having concluded their important military discussions with the Turkish general staff, Gen. Maxime Weygand, commander in chief of French forces in the eastern Mediterranean, flew to his headquarters in Beirut, Lebanon, and Lieut. Gen. Archibald P. Wavell, British Middle East commander, returned to Jerusalem.

Meanwhile the Turkish Government analyzed its position as the result of the breakdown of Turkish-Russian negotiations and the signature of the three-power mutual-aid pact.

Some foreign observers here believed Turkey's friendship with Russia had been shaken so severely by the recent Soviet demands in the Moscow talks that they may seriously affect the future course of Turkish foreign policy. Officially, however, the Turks still adhere to Soviet friendship. Russia's demands were reported to have included insistence that only Russian warships be permitted to enter the Black Sea.

Have Been Friendly

The Turkish Government and the Soviet successors to the imperialistic Russian Empire have been sincere friends since the World War. The Russians, sitting on the sidelines, were kept fully informed of Turkey's negotiations with Britain and France leading to the three-power pact.

Observers here understand that—at that time—the Russians were fully aware of Turkey's commitments concerning the Dardanelles under the Montreux convention and the agreement with the British and French.

Results Not Known

The Turkish Foreign Minister, Sukru Saracoglu, it was learned here, went to Moscow prepared to negotiate a mutual-assistance agreement with Russia which would be complementary to the Anglo-French pact.

No one has disclosed to the public just what happened during Saracoglu's three-week stay in Moscow.

Diplomatic observers here pointed out, however, that after the arrival in Moscow of the German Foreign Minister, Joachim von Ribbentrop, during Saracoglu's visit, Russia apparently made new and unexpected demands which Turkey could not accept since they conflicted with Turkish commitments to Britain and France and possibly the Balkan countries.

Russia's surprise non-aggression pact with Germany was reported in diplomatic circles to have been a rude shock. Some Turkish officials are reported to have considered that Russia had "let Turkey down."

Fears Stirred Up

Turkey's apprehension concerning the realities of the Soviet friendship is reported to have been aroused still more by the Russian occupation of eastern and southeastern Poland and her aggressive diplomacy in the Baltic.

Saracoglu was in Moscow as an eye-and-ear witness of the Russian Baltic campaign. Russia's unexpected demands on Saracoglu, pyramided on the previous Russian action, was reported to have been the final blow to Turkish confidence.

Diplomatic observers here believe that Turkey now is carefully weighing her foreign policy in the light of the Russian action and that on the final decision hangs the orientation of Turkey's future policy and action.

DELEGATION DUE IN MOSCOW THIS MORNING

Hopes For Peaceful Settlement Rise In View Of Turkish Pact

Plebiscite On In Poland. Talk Of Red Economic Mission To Berlin

By WITT HANCOCK
Associated Press Correspondent

Moscow, Oct. 22—Finnish hopes for a peaceful settlement of negotiations with Soviet Russia rose today on the theory the U. S. S. R. was desirous of friendly neighbors on her northern flank, particularly in view of the failure of talks with Turkey.

Speculation on the results of negotiations with Finland shared interest with word Russia shortly would send to Germany an economic mission, headed by Ivan T. Tevosyan, People's Commissar of Shipbuilding.

Official quarters also watched voting today in the Russian-occupied portions of Poland (White Russia and the Ukraine) to decide whether the region would vote to join the U. S. S. R.

Wont "Give Too Much Away"

The Finnish delegation headed by Dr. Juho Kusti Paasikivi sped toward the Russian capital by train and was due to arrive at 10.20 A. M. tomorrow.

The Finns were said to be prepared to make some concessions to Russian demands, possibly with islands in the Gulf of Finland, but were determined not "to give too much away."

Observers, pointing out Russia has announced her intention of remaining neutral in the European conflict, said it was not likely she would try to push Finland too far and risk having a warring nation on her northern flank.

Ritter Flies To See Hitler

A German economic delegation under special Ambassador Dr Karl Ritter has been conferring with Soviet officials on trade exchanges and unofficial quarters said Government communiques were expected soon to the effect that "principal questions have been cleared."

Dr. Ritter left by plane today for Berlin to report to Adolf Hitler while the remainder of the delegation stayed to carry on the talks.

Informed sources said the Russian mission to Germany would examine the question of the export of machinery and manufactured goods to Russia, thus complementing the work of the German delegation here.

The Plebiscite In Poland

The plebiscite in the Russian-occupied portions of Poland was being carried out through the selection of national assembly deputies who, in turn, will vote on the question of joining the separate regions with their counterparts in Russia.

The result was regarded as a foregone conclusion, with observers expecting virtually a 100 per cent vote for the Russian candidates. There apparently was no other list and opponents of joining Russia had only the alternative of scratching out the names of the Red nominees. Among 911 candidates for the assembly in White Russia were 123 women. Of the nominees, 638 were peasants, 152 workers, 112 "intellectuals" (teachers, doctors, lawyers and bookkeepers) and 9 were not classified.

The Government newspaper Izvestia disclosed unemployed workers from Russian-occupied Poland were being transferred to coal regions in the Don Basin, which supplies sixty per cent of Russia's coal.

The Government asserted the transfers were "voluntary" and 10,000 already had been taken from Lwow province.

Finland Watches Moscow And Tightens Defenses

Helsinki, Oct. 22 (AP)—All Finland today watched the fateful journey of Dr. Juho Kusti Paasikivi and his delegation to Moscow for renewed discussion of Soviet Russian proposals.

The head of the delegation was expected to present tomorrow Finland's counter-proposals, backed by the solidarity of the northern countries as shown at last week's conference at Stockholm.

There was no marking of time in Finland's intense preparations for defense should defense measures be necessary.

Finnish factories are working full force turning out shoes, clothing and equipment for thousands of reserves called to the colors.

Reds Reported Eying Isles

Forced to make unusual expenditures by tremendous military preparations and the care of thousands of persons removed from potentially dangerous districts, the administration revised its budget estimates.

There still was no authoritative indication of the nature of Russia's demands except that they are of a "serious" nature. It has been reported, however, Russia sought certain islands in the Gulf of Finland for naval bases, a military alliance, and a new arrangement respecting the strategic Aaland Islands in the Gulf of Bothnia.

Sale of bonds totaling 500,000,000 marks (about $9,900,000) as a defense loan was expected to start next week to help meet the national emergency.

Sharp Drop In Revenue

In the revised budget, it was estimated the Government's revenue would be pared from 5,767,000,000 marks (about $103,806,000) to 4,588,000,000 marks (about $82,584,000) due to trade restrictions and the drop in customs revenue.

Expenditures were reduced from 5,752,000,000 marks (about $103,536,000) to 5,007,000,000 (about $90,126,000). The difference between income and expenditures was to be made up from Government funds and the loan.

Strict economies were ordered. A total of 200,000,000 Finn marks (about $3,600,000) originally earmarked for fortification of the Aaland Islands was dropped from the budget.

Finns who wish to travel abroad must give evidence they are not obliged to serve th ir Government in the emergency work decree recently proclaimed.

Held Important To Latvia That Russia Feels Safe

Riga, Oct. 22 (AP)—William Munters, Latvian Foreign Minister, declared today his tiny nation "easily, even inevitably" could have been a theater of war had Russia found it necessary to take steps to strengthen her security in the Baltic.

Speaking to a joint session of Latvia's Corporative Chamber, which succeeded Parliament in 1934, Munters said the recent Soviet-Latvian pact contained the political principle that the integrity of the Baltic neighbors was a necessity to the Soviet union.

It is important to Latvia that Russia feels safe, Munters said, otherwise "she would take steps regarded as necessary to strengthen her security."

The Minister said he did not believe Russia would try to Sovietize Latvia against the disposition of the Latvian people. He asserted that if such became the case the confidence between the governments would disappear and complications would arise "which could in no case strengthen the Soviet Union's security."

Russ Military Mission Arrives At Kaunas

To Discuss Arrangements For Red Air, Naval And Army Bases In Lithuania

Kaunas, Lithuania, Oct. 22 (AP)—A Russian military mission of eighteen members arrived tonight to discuss arrangements for air and naval bases and garrisons for the Red army on Lithuanian soil.

Rights to establish these bases and garrisons were granted in the Russian-Lithuanian mutual assistance treaty signed October [illegible] under the pact, Lithuania regained the city of Wilno (Vilna) and the Wilno region which had been seized and added to Poland in 1920.

It was reported 20,000 Russian troops would be stationed in Lithuania, including a garrison at Wilno. Lithuania's own standing army has approximately 23,000 men.

Entry of Lithuanian troops into Wilno was set for tomorrow.

Dutch Airmen's Dawn Patrol Is Barrier to War

Flyers Chase British and Nazi Planes Alike if They Cross Holland Frontiers

GRONINGEN, the Netherlands, Oct. 22 (AP).—A Netherlands dawn patrol, poised at a tiny airport in northeastern Holland, has the tough and ticklish job of listening and flying to keep this country out of war. The officers are "getting elephant ears" listening for the tell-tale drone of foreign planes. Sometimes the high-pitched motor of an automobile gives them a start.

The violators of the neutrality of the Netherlands have become known to the dawn patrol as "those fellows." Nearly every day, usually early in the morning, the roar of a motor means that "those fellows" again are crossing the Netherlands land or sea frontiers which lie between Great Britain and Germany.

It makes no difference to the patrol whether they are German or British planes. The Netherlands is neutral. It is the job of the patrol to chase any plane which violates the neutrality of the Netherlands, catch it if they can and intern the crew.

"We try to catch them, but it is not an easy thing to do," an officer said. "If they are headed east they are across the German border before we can get after them. If they are going west sometimes we chase them to the North Sea.

"Up in the waters of the Dollart Gulf, across from the German naval base at Emden, there is no frontier line for a flyer to see. Our territorial waters are supposed to go three miles from our shore, but there the Germans say the frontier is the ebb tide mark. That is barely half a mile from our shore."

Last Tuesday, Netherlands planes went up on border patrol while British raiders were over Emden. Some planes were fired upon by German anti-aircraft. One young Netherlands pilot dodged two shell bursts.

"They thought we were English," he said. "We were [illegible] three miles away. It was not [illegible] shooting."

The Netherlands planes are now being marked with an orange triangle instead of the tri-colored "bullseye" which resembled British and French markings. However, it is not always possible to see markings from the ground.

Officers at the airport said that they thought both the Germans and British planes were trying to avoid the Netherlands.

"But sometimes they are in a hurry to get home," the officers added with a shrug.

These hurried belligerent planes do not always fly high. One shot across the airport the other day at about 10,000 feet. Sometimes clouds of British leaflets printed in German come fluttering down on the Netherlands side.

One or two of the quiet little villages near the patrol airport literally have been buried in misplaced British pamphlets captioned "Achtung, Achtung" (Warning, Warning) and addressed to the German people. The Netherlands flying officers pick them up and keep them for souvenirs.

In confirming a report that the crew of a German seaplane had been forced down and interned, one officer said: "Yes. They were very angry about it. There was some shooting. Now they are held on one of our islands. It cannot be helped."

30-24-4215

Goebbels Says Churchill Had Athenia Sunk

Dares Him to Tell World of How 3 British Warships Sent Liner to the Bottom

BERLIN, Oct. 22 (AP).—Dr. Paul Joseph Goebbels, German Minister of Propaganda and Public Enlightenment, in a radio address today, charged Winston Churchill with ordering the sinking of the British liner Athenia, and challenged the First Lord of the British Admiralty to make a full explanation to the world.

Goebbels declared that the ship was sunk by British command in the "most primitive and criminal plot in modern times" with the object of injecting the United States into the European war.

The Nazi Minister, addressing his remarks to Churchill, said:

"You stand accused before the court of world opinion. It is your turn to speak. Go into the lower house or stand before the radio to tell the truth about the Athenia."

Goebbels said Germany would not let the situation rest until a series of questions directed to Churchill had been answered. In one question Goebbels demanded: "How could you say, Mr. Churchill, that the Athenia was sunk by a German torpedo when you knew it went down under the fire of three British destroyers?"

Goebbels also asked: "How can you contend the Athenia was hit by a German torpedo when the vessel remained afloat fourteen hours? You know from the swift sinking of the heavily armored Royal Oak how a German torpedo works."

(The British battleship Royal Oak was torpedoed by a German submarine at Scapa Flow on Oct. 14 and sank in a few minutes.)

Goebbels said that Germany, in view of the fact that the matter was so serious as to involve the possible entry of the United States into the war, would not let the subject drop.

"Our charges are so exact and so precise they cannot be ignored," Goebbels continued. "When made by the German press, Churchill sought to dismiss these charges lightly. But he must take note of them if they are made by a German Minister or by his silence he will have to acknowledge guilt. Churchill, who is a danger to Europe, stands accused. The world waits to hear his answer."

The German Minister said the charges were being broadcast throughout the world in many languages.

Germans Believe Allies Plan "Hunger Blockade"

By MELVIN K. WHITELEATHER
Associated Press Correspondent

Berlin, Oct. 22—A terse army high command report of continued quiet on the Western front today strengthened a growing German belief that the Allies were trying to crush Germany with a "hunger blockade" and diplomatic attack rather than on the battlefield.

The high command issued its shortest communique of the war today:

"In the west no special developments beyond minor artillery and scout-troop activity."

A group of district Nazi leaders were spending the week end in Berlin, conferring on methods to meet internal problems. The leaders dined with Reichsführer Hitler last night, when their meeting was described authoritatively as without political significance.

Minor Activity Noted

With only minor activity reported day after day from the Western front, millions of Germans daily are asking: "When is the enemy going to strike?"

The conviction appears spreading that the Allies will confine their efforts to tightening what Germans call the "hunger blockade" and increasing diplomatic efforts to isolate Germany.

Some quarters already are ruling out the possibility of a "blitzkrieg" or lightning war such as the Reich used to sweep over Poland.

Long War Expected

Daily reports from the West, where armies face each other on the Maginot Line and West Wall without apparent offensive plans on either side, were seen as strengthening the possibility the war would be a long one.

German advices from the front say German soldiers are leading almost a "pensioned life," and that through field glasses French soldiers are seen whiling away their time as though they were bored.

German military men expressed confidence they have the upper hand in fighting materials and could smash their way across the Rhine if it should become necessary.

British Idea Wrong

At the same time, German leaders have asserted Britain's estimation of Germany's internal weaknesses was wrong and that the Reich can beat the Allies at their own waiting game.

Nazi officials laughed at foreign reports of internal dissension and pointed to the Russian economic agreement and the flow of raw materials and food from Southeastern Europe and the Scandinavian countries as means of beating the sea blockade.

A campaign to strengthen the morale of the people is under way. Nazi leaders are telling mass meetings the restrictions on the civilian population are nothing compared to those the soldiers may have to endure.

"Germany Will Fight"

At one meeting in Berlin today a local leader said:

"It is not easy for our women to stand in line for several hours to get food for the family. But all this is necessary to win the final battle. Never again will England be able to subjugate the German people. As long as one German can raise his hand, as long as our German woman lives, Germany will fight!"

"We don't know how long this war will last," he added. "Perhaps several months, perhaps several years. But long as it may last never, never again will we be conquered by England."

The leader described the conflict as a "war of nerves" and predicted the people of France and Britain would break first.

Bulgars Expect Premier To Stay in New Cabinet

Ministry Will Be Formed Today on Neutral Policy

SOFIA, Oct. 22 (AP).—Well informed sources said tonight that George Klosseivanoff would be retained as Premier and Foreign Minister in the new Bulgarian cabinet, expected to be announced tomorrow. The cabinet will involve only two or three minor changes," it was said.

Klosseivanoff and his cabinet, which had pursued a mildly pro-German policy, resigned on Oct. 19. He had been Premier and Foreign Minister since his cabinet was reconstructed on Nov. 14, 1938.

King Boris III was said to be convinced that Bulgaria must re-affirm her policy of neutrality and that the present conditions did not justify a return to activity of the political parties in Bulgaria.

Spokesmen said the new cabinet would be regarded as evidence that Bulgaria interprets her international position as delicate, but not critical. The government was represented as intending to steer its own course, taking the attitude that nothing could be gained for Bulgaria by joining any "neural bloc" of Balkin states or by aligning with any great powers.

Paris and Berlin Join In Saying All's Quiet

PARIS, Oct. 22 (AP).—A French war communique issued reported today:

"A moderately quiet night on the front as a whole."

Berlin Agrees

BERLIN, Oct. 22 (AP).—The German Army high command issued the following communique today:

"In the west no special developments beyond minor artillery and scout-troop activity."

Polish Exile Government Protests Red Plebiscite

Notes to Allies and Neutrals Call Soviet Election Void

PARIS, Oct. 22 (AP).—The Polish government, in notes addressed to France, Great Britain and neutral countries, declared today that the plesbiscite organized by the Soviet government in the Russian-occupied section of Poland was "contrary to international law" and "without legal force."

The note to the French government was addressed to Premier Edouard Deladier and signed by Julius Lukasiewicz, Polish Ambassador to France.

The plebiscite was being held today to establish whether the occupied territory should join the U. S. S. R.

British Flyers Play Football, Find War Dull

At Front With Nothing to Do, Leader Finds Hardest Task Is Fighting Boredom

WITH THE ROYAL AIR FORCE, SOMEWHERE IN FRANCE, Oct. 22 (AP).—In a muddy plain behind the Maginot Line, where the rain now has poured down for nearly a week, one of the advance posts of the Royal Air Force was inspected today by this correspondent. Concealed among the foliage of a belt of trees, the post was hard to spot from the main road and probably could not have been discerned from above.

Outside the commander's hut the camouflaged planes stood ranged over the muddy surfaces of the flying field, spaced well apart, so that in the event of an attack no more than one machine could be disabled by a single bomb.

The commander, a native of Tasmania, was leaning over a desk made of packing cases writing a letter home. Inviting the visitor to sit down on a biscuit tin he said: "There's little to do but wait. I am trying to teach the men Australian rules of football on the muddy aerodrome, but they can't play football all day."

The main complaint of the men was that "this is a boring war." Most billets have wireless sets and some flyers brought their dartboards when they flew over from England. A camouflaged dugout bears the legend "White House" because it was hollowed from white chalk.

Philadelphia Woman Honored For War Work

Miss Sibley First American Decorated By France In Current Conflict

Verdun, Oct. 22 (AP)—Miss Florence Sibley, of Philadelphia, became the first American to receive a decoration of the French Government for work in the European war. She was promoted from the rank of legionnaire to officer in the French Legion of Honor for her assistance in organizing hospitals.

Miss Sibley was decorated for similar work in the World War.

Australian Head Denies War Ends if Hitler Falls

Fight Against System Cited by Prime Minister Menzies

MELBOURNE, Australia, Oct. 22 (AP).—Prime Minister R. G. Menzies declared today that Great Britain and France could win the European war nearly by overthrowing Adolf Hitler.

"Our fight is against a series of principles of conduct of government, the continued existence of which is intolerable," he told a church congregation.

"If Hitler ceased to exist, the war would continue because the system exists in far more hearts than Hitler's," the Prime Minister added.

"Unless a miracle happens, this will be the greatest struggle Britain has ever entered," Menzies concluded. "I disagree with the theory that we are fighting one man and that the war will be won if he is overthrown."

Pope Calls For Prayer On Leaving Gandolfo

Would Dissipate War's Whirlwind And Reconcile The Nations

Castel Gandolfo, Italy, Oct. 22 (AP)—Pope Pius XII, in a farewell audience with local inhabitants, before his return to the Vatican, today urged them to pray that God might "dissipate the war's whirlwind, reconcile the nations and protect His church."

The Pontiff contrasted the tranquillity of Castel Gandolfo, his summer home, with the "human tempests unleashed in Europe" and said the world needed "that peace of which St. Augustine spoke, that is 'tranquillitas ordinis,' peace governed by harmony among men."

"In this present hour of whirlwinds and tempests among nations," the Pope said, "it is the dawn of this peace which the church invokes on nations, when it prays that the Lord may grant kings and Christian princes peace and true concord, and peace and unity to all Christian people."

Nazi Barnyard Ration Cards

Berlin, Oct. 22 (AP)—Horses, cows and pigs must have food cards after November 1, unless they are fortunate enough to be owned by farmers.

After that date, it has been ordered, owners unable to grow enough feed for animals will be able to get only stipulated amounts.

Chiefly affected will be teamsters and workers who keep one cow or are fattening a pig.

Break in Nazis' Nerves From Lack of Fats Seen

Economist Predicts Drastic Physical Reaction to Diet

CHICAGO, Oct. 22 (AP).—A former German newspaper man and economist, Peter Drucker, asserted today that a shortage of fats would have a physiological effect upon the nerves of German people.

"The economic war will first be felt when lack of fats and fodder cracks the nerves of the German civilian population," he said in the University of Chicago's round-table broadcast.

"A lack of fats in the diet acts upon the nerves to bring discontent, impatience and discouragement. Germany is lacking in fats, and the fodder for cattle which produce butter and milk."

Mennonites in Canada Prefer War to Russia

Oklahoma Conference Hears Militant Reports

CORN, Okla., Oct. 22 (AP).—A militant spirit pervaded the North American Conference of the Mennonite Brethren Church today as its delegates, pledged never to bear arms, heard a Canadian spokesman declare "Canada in war time is ten times preferable to Russia under so-called conditions of peace."

The Rev. H. H. Janzen, of Ketchener, Ont., one of the delegates attending who immigrated to Canada from Russia in the last fifteen years, said: "Individualism, in which the Mennonites believe perhaps as strongly as any people in the world, is ruthlessly destroyed in Russia. The children of the Mennonites remaining in Russia are being systematically turned into atheists by the Stalin government."

Another member of the group from Canada, the Rev. H. P. Toews, of Arnaud, Manitoba, asserted: "The popular theory that a democracy must instantly be converted into an iron-bound dictatorship when war is declared is bunk. Our liberty and freedom remain undisturbed."

A war-time plan under which the Mennonites would co-operate with the Dunkards and others in all war activities short of carrying arms will be brought before the conference for approval. Such activities would include front-line work in nursing, reconstruction and other non-military tasks.

The attitude of some of the United States delegates toward the present European war was voiced by the Rev. J. J. Wiebe, pastor of the Corn church. He pointed out that "we are praying daily that America will be allowed to remain neutral in the present conflict, and we have urged our Congressmen to fight for neutrality." "But," he added, "it will be a different thing with us if our country is attacked."

British Bag 13 German Planes in Single Week

By HUGH WAGNON

London, Oct. 22 (AP).—A German plane was shot down off the southeast coast of Scotland this afternoon, the Air Ministry announced tonight, bringing to 13 the number of Nazi airplanes destroyed in nine air raids in seven days.

The aircraft fell into the sea and a collapsible boat is said to have been seen leaving the wreck, a communique said.

The day's aerial activity started with the sound of air raid warnings in coastal areas of northeastern England when "unidentified aircraft" were reported sighted out at sea.

Intercepted by British.

Several hours later the Air Ministry announced:

"Early this afternoon two enemy aircraft were seen over the southeast coast of Scotland. Our fighters intercepted them and one enemy aircraft was shot down."

British authorities counted only one of the nine raids during the week as damaging, the one last Monday at the Firth of Forth, when 16 British naval men were killed by enemy bombers, four of which were said to have been shot down.

The Sunday Observer in its leading editorial today said the German strategy was "to sustain a holding struggle on the Western Front with an economy of effort" until next Spring, while launching their heaviest fire by submarines and bombers against British sea power.

"For the purpose of turning out U-boats and aircraft, they are throwing into their own shipyards and factories the highest proportion of manpower that they can risk with sufficient regard to restrained military purposes. So far we have seen only the preface of the sea-war and air-war."

In a series of communiques today, the Air Ministry also announced that five German airmen who took part in yesterday's attack on a British convoy in the North Sea had been picked up by trawlers and landed at Grimsby.

Announcements last night said at least three German planes of 12 in the attacking party were shot down and another was forced to alight.

One trawler brought in two fliers, both badly injured. Another brought three men, one injured, who were afloat in a rubber boat when picked up. The fliers were suffering from immersion, not bullet wounds. Of the five, the eldest was 25. Two spoke English.

BORROWS ARMY'S PIGEONS

Swiss Sergeant Uses Them To Send Wedding Announcements

Zurich, Switzerland, Oct. 22 (AP)—When Johann Drucker, a sergeant in charge of carrier pigeons in the Swiss army, got leave to go home to Zurich he obtained permission to take ten pigeons with him.

His comrades couldn't understand why until the pigeons came flying back to the army base next day carrying the announcement of Drucker's wedding to his comrades.

"CASH AND CARRY" ADOPTED

European Languages Pick Up Phrase From Neutrality Plan

Berne, Switzerland, Oct. 22 (AP)—Another American word like "jazz," "gangster" and "okay" is creeping into many a European language.

It's "cash and carry." Used to describe the Roosevelt neutrality plan, it has been heard so much in Europe recently that it's now current usage in German, French and Italian—with varying degrees of pronunciation. One popular Swiss department store put the American phrase on a sign in its window in English to describe the store's "no-credit" policy.

Anniversary Of Victory Observed By Belgium

Winning From Reich Of Vital Yser Canal Battle Commemorated Quietly

Brussels, Oct. 22 (AP)—Belgium quietly commemorated today the twenty-fifth anniversary of the Battle of the Yser Canal, which saved the last corner of the country from German invasion in the World War.

With France, Britain and Germany again at war, Belgium's hope to stay out of it was emphasized in the simplicity of the commemoration.

There were services to the late King Albert and to all Belgian World War dead. Delegates of war veterans placed wreaths on the unknown soldier's tomb, the tombs of King Albert and Queen Astrid and on the monument of an unknown French soldier.

Warsaw Bombing Toll Placed at 20,000-40,000

Swede Says He Never Saw a City 'So Terribly' Blasted

STOCKHOLM, Oct. 22 (AP).—Lieut. Col. Erik De Laval, who was the Swedish Military Attache at Warsaw, said in an interview today he believed 20,000 to 40,000 persons had been killed in the German bombardment of the Polish capital.

"I never before have seen a capital with more than 1,000,000 inhabitants so terribly bombed," the attache said after returning from an inspection of the city he left on Sept. 21, six days before its surrender.

Some open places have been transformed into cemeteries, he said. Every fifth building and all three miles of the main street were demolished.

"The mob ruled for half a day as the German attack reached a climax," he said. "There were many deaths and injuries due to falling houses and many buildings were blasted to avoid new catastrophies."

Duff Cooper Forecasts Nazi Rebellion Over Red Hookup

Army's Disillusionment Will Bring Revolution, Says Former Chief Of British Admiralty

[By the Associated Press]

New York, Oct. 22—Britain's former First Lord of the Admiralty, Alfred Duff Cooper, predicted today there would be an early Right-wing revolution in Germany.

It would originate, he said, from the German army's disillusionment following the German-Russian pact—about the Nazi movement's professed basis of anti-Communism.

A contributing cause, said Cooper—who resigned from the Cabinet after the Munich pact, but who still is a member of Parliament—would be the Nazi movement's antagonism to the national institution of religion.

Although originating in the army, he said, the revolution probably would produce not a military dictatorship but a new monarchy.

Cooper arrived on the liner Manhattan for a lecture tour arranged, he said, before the war started.

His wife, the former Lady Diana Manners, renowned as the star of "The Miracle," came with him.

BRITISH ENVOY AIDS EMBARGO FIGHT—BORAH

Washington, D. C., Oct. 22 (AP).—Senator Borah (Rep., Da.) charged tonight that "powerful British influences" were trying to draw the United States into the war on the side of the Allies and that repeal of the arms embargo was the first step.

Speaking in opposition to the Administration's Neutrality bill, Borah said in a radio address over NBC station that, "if reports be true," Lord Lothian, new British Ambassador to the United States, was "most active in advancing reasons" why the embargo should be repealed. The Ambassador confers almost daily, he added, with Administration officials.

"With some decree of pride," he said, "He (Lord Lothian) must look down from the Senate gallery, if he deigns to visit that humble scene, and note the progress toward repeal of a law he so early and boldly denounced."

Always Opposed Law.

Borah declared that the British Government and its leaders had opposed the Neutrality law and its prohibition on sales of arms and munitions to belligerents from the time it was enacted.

The Senate debate, Borah contended, already had demonstrated that advocates of repealing the arms embargo sought to take sides in the European war by aiding England and France.

"The ruthless retaliation of the Germans and the shrewd and persistent propaganda of the British could put us into the war over night," he said.

Last War a Lesson To U. S., Says Norris.

Washington, D. C., Oct. 22 (AP).—Senator Norris (Ind., Neb.) said today that while he thought "we have more cause to go to war now than we had in 1917," a vastly different psychology on the part of the American public would keep this country out of the present European conflict.

The 78-year-old Nebraskan, the sole remaining Senator who voted against American entry into the World War, said in an interview that the lessons of the last conflict still were fresh in the memory of the public.

"I think we have learned by the bitter experience of the last war that it doesn't do us any good to go to war," he said. "We would like to make the world a decent place to live in, but there are some things that we can't do, though we would like to."

Norris, a supporter of the Administration's neutrality bill, said he thought that if its restrictions on American shipping were adopted, many of the factors that led to American entry into the World War would be eliminated.

"Of course," he said "some overt act by Hitler might inflame the people. He might order submarines to sink our ships trading with neutral nations. I don't think he would do that, but he is a madman and you can't tell what might happen."

PARIS, OCT.22-(AP)-FRENCH MILITARY DISPATCHES SAID TONIGHT THE FRENCH HAD GIVEN UP ALL THEIR GAINS OF GERMAN TERRITORY IN THE FIRST SEVEN WEEKS OF THE EUROPEAN WAR EXCEPT TWO SMALL HEIGHTS IN THE WARNDT FOREST.

THESE HEIGHTS ARE SOUTHWEST OF SAARBRUECKEN NEAR THE CENTER OF THE NORTH FLANK OF THE WESTERN FRONT.

DISPATCHES FROM THE FRONT SAID PATROL AND SCOUTING ACTIVITY OVER RAIN-SOAKED NO-MANS-LAND HAVE BEEN INCREASING SINCE SUNDAY MORNING.

BUT LITTLE OTHER ACTIVITY WAS REPORTED.

THE NAZIS, EMBOLDENED BY THE DISCOVERY THAT THE FRENCH HAD EVACUATED THE LAST OF SEVERAL HUNDRED SQUARE MILES OF GERMAN SOIL, WERE SENDING OUT INCREASINGLY LARGE SCOUTING PARTIES.

THE TWO HEIGHTS IN GERMAN TERRITORY STILL OCCUPIED BY THE FRENCH ARE JUST ACROSS THE BORDER IN THE FOREST WHICH STICKS LIKE A CLINCHED FIST INTO FRENCH TERRITORY. IT WAS TO CAPTURE THESE TWO HILLS THAT THE FRENCH MADE THEIR FIRST REAL SORTIES OF THE WAR, LATER BACKING IT UP WITH A FULL DIVISION WHICH IS BELIEVED TO HAVE BEEN THE LARGEST UNIT THE FRENCH HAVE PUT INTO THE FRONT LINE SO FAR.

AT ALL OTHER POINTS ALONG THE 100-MILE NORTHERN FLANK BETWEEN THE MOSELLE AND RHINE RIVERS, THE FRENCH FRONT LINES EITHER FOLLOW THE FRONTIER OR DIP BACK AS MUCH AS A MILE AND A HALF INTO FRENCH TERRITORY.

THE TWO HEAVILY WOODED HEIGHTS ARE RINGED BY BARBED WIRE, AND FROM THE MILITARY DISPATCHES WERE JUDGED BY OBSERVERS TO BE NORTHWEST OF NASSWEILER AND EMMERSWEILER.

THE HEIGHTS OF EMMERSWEILER PROTECT THE WEST FLANK OF THE FORTIFIED FRONTIER CITY OF FORBACH WHICH IS OPPOSITE THE STRONGLY FORTIFIED GERMAN CITY OF SAARBRUECKEN. NASSWEILER IS A SMALL VILLAGE JUST ON THE FRONTIER AT THE SOUTHERNMOST SECTION OF THE WARNDT FOREST.

PARIS,OCT.22-(AP)-FRENCH SOLDIERS TURNED ACTORS TO COVER THEIR WITHDRAWAL FROM WARNDT FOREST WITH SUCH SUCCESS THE GERMANS DID NOT DISCOVER THE DECEPTION FOR FOUR DAYS, MILITARY DISPATCHES ASSERTED TODAY.

FRENCH SAID THE TROOPS STARTED LEAVING THE FOREST, WEST OF SAARBRUECKEN, LAST MONDAY. AS THEY LEFT, SMALL PATROLS HURRIED FROM SECTION TO SECTION FIRING MACHINE-GUNS AND RIFLES, ACTING THE PART OF A LARGER FORCE, TO GIVE THE IMPRESSION THE FOREST STILL WAS GUARDED HEAVILY.

ALLIED FORCES LEFT ALL OF THE FOREST EXCEPT TWO HEIGHTS CLOSE TO THE BORDER WHICH WERE HEAVILY FORTIFIED, THEY REPORTED.

MILITARY COMMENTATORS SAID THE SMALL PATROLS KEPT UP THEIR DECEPTION EVEN AFTER THE FOREST WAS CLEARED OF THE MAIN BODY AND THE GERMANS DID NOT DISCOVER THE WITHDRAWAL UNTIL FRIDAY WHEN THEY MARCHED IN AND REOCCUPIED THE AREA.

THE DEPARTURE WAS SAID TO HAVE BEEN ORDERED BY GENERAL MAURICE GUSTAVE GAMELIN, COMMANDER IN CHIEF OF THE ALLIED FORCES, WHO FREQUENTLY HAS EXPRESSED A DESIRE TO SAVE AS MANY LIVES AS POSSIBLE.

THE FRENCH SAID PREVIOUS TO THE WITHDRAWAL WORD WAS RECEIVED THAT THE GERMANS PLANNED TO RETAKE THE FOREST, WHICH IS IN GERMANY, AT ANY COST FOR PSYCHOLOGICAL REASONS.

TODAY'S MORNING COMMUNIQUE REPORTED A "MODERATELY QUIET NIGHT" ON THE FRONT.

COLD AND CLEAR WEATHER SENT FRENCH AND BRITISH AIR PATROLS INTO THE SKY OVER THE LINES ON SCOUTING MISSIONS AFTER SEVERAL DAYS OF COMPARATIVE INACTIVITY, MILITARY ADVICES SAID.

MEANWHILE, NATURE CAME TO THE AID OF THE FRENCH IN THEIR DEFENSE PLANS WHEN FLOOD WATERS SWELLED OVER THE BANKS OF THE RHINE COVERING AREAS IN FRONT OF THE FRENCH DEFENSE LINES.

NAZIS SEIZE U. S. SHIP CITY OF FLINT, SAILING HER TO MURMANSK, RUSSIA; SOVIET INTERNS GERMAN CAPTORS

Germans And Vessel Interned, Moscow Says—No Word Of U. S. Crew—Washington Starts Probe On Contraband Angle

[By the Associated Press]

Moscow, Oct. 23—Tass, Soviet Russian news agency, reported tonight that a German crew had seized the United States ship City of Flint and took her into Kola Bay under the Nazi flag as a prize under German contraband regulations.

The Russian port of Murmansk is on Kola Bay.

The news agency said eighteen Nazi crewmen from a German cruiser took charge of the 4,963-ton ship, which is owned by the United States Maritime Commission, and arrived in Kola Bay without a Soviet pilot.

Murmansk port authorities for the time being detained the ship and interned the Germans, Tass added.

Was En Route To England

The City of Flint was said by Tass to have been en route from New York to Manchester, England, with a 3,700-ton cargo of tractors, grain, fruit, leather and wax.

The Tass report failed to say what became of the American crew or when or where she was halted.

To reach Kola Bay, it would have been necessary for the ship to skirt more than 300 miles of Norway's northern coast from the Atlantic into the Barents Sea.

Washington Starts Probe

[By the Associated Press]

Washington, Oct. 23—The freighter City of Flint, owned by the United States Maritime Commission, has been captured somewhere on the Atlantic by a German raider and, according to reports tonight, has been taken to Kola Bay, near Murmansk, Russia.

The vessel was en route from New York for Liverpool and Glasgow when taken. Reports to the Maritime Commission, which announced the seizure, did not say on what grounds the ship was taken, but it was assumed that the Germans considered that she was carrying contraband to Britain.

Cargo Described

News dispatches from Russia described the cargo as tractors, grain, fruit, leather and wax. These dispatches said the ship arrived at Kola Bay under the German flag and manned by a German crew. The dispatches made no mention of what became of the American crew.

The United States Government immediately started inquiries to learn just what goods were carried by the craft, which is operated under charter of the United States Lines, private organization subsidized by the Government. Officials said that if fifty-one per cent. or more of the cargo consisted of contraband, international law permitted the Germans to seize the vessel.

Items In Cargo Revealed

The Maritime Commission informed the investigators the City of Flint was carrying "more than fifty separate items typical of her usual cargo on this run."

The list included lard, cereals, canned meats, flour, canned goods, apples, wax, lubricating oil, cotton, sewing machines, plows, tractors, asphalt, pitch, grease, shade rollers, machinery, silk, commercial chemicals, abrasive grains, disinfectants, feathers, rags, coffee, lumber, gauze, hair and wallboard.

The cargo amounted to about 5,000 tons.

Part Is Contraband

Officials said the tractors, leather and wax were contraband, but that the fruit and grain were not contraband unless it was specifically proved that they were destined for British armed forces.

The Maritime Commission was informed that the vessel was taken first to Tromso, Norway, on Saturday, and that same day set sail from that port for an unknown destination. Although the commission received no official information as to where she went after that, the dispatches from Russia said she was at Kola Bay.

Information Sought

The State Department announced that it had asked the Minister at Oslo and the Ambassador at Moscow to make inquiries of the Norwegian and Russian governments concerning the circumstances of the freighter's seizure.

It was expected that a similar inquiry would be directed to Berlin tonight or tomorrow.

There was some question among legal experts as to Germany's right to take the vessel into neutral ports. They said only exceptional circumstances, such as stress of weather, lack of supplies or need of repairs could warrant such an action.

In such exceptional cases, the neutral is supposed to allow the necessary repairs to be made, or if it sees fit, to give the ship the necessary supplies and to tell it to move along. If the ship fails to do so, it must be interned, together with the prize crew.

The American crew aboard the City of Flint, if in a neutral port, must be released and allowed to return to their home country. They cannot be interned unless engaged in hostile activities.

It is presumed here that the case of the City of Flint will be taken under consideration shortly by a German prize court. This prize court must sit in Germany and not in the neutral country to which the City of Flint has been taken.

Becomes Nazi Property

If the prize court finds that the City of Flint carried a contraband percentage of fifty-one or more it can condemn the ship, whereupon it becomes German property. If, in the meantime, the ship has been interned owing to the inability of the prize crew to take her into a German port, the interned ship remains the property of the German Government, to be released to the account of the German Government at the end of the war. The cargo can be kept in the neutral port.

The skipper of the City of Flint is Capt. J. A. Gainard. There were no passengers aboard.

Congress Awaits Report

Whether the capture of the City of Flint would have any effect on the Congressional debate over neutrality legislation remained in doubt tonight. Most Senators and House members said they preferred to await a complete account of the seizure before commenting.

Some advocates of the cash-and-carry system, which would prevent American ships carrying cargoes to belligerents, said that the incident proved the wisdom of their proposal. One of this group, Senator Byrnes (Dem., S. C.), said:

"The United States will certainly demand an explanation, and when we have the full details we will be able better to judge the matter. Under the pending embargo repeal bill there could be no such incident, since American shipping would not be permitted to enter the danger zone."

Rescued Survivors

The City of Flint was in British waters at the outbreak of the war and participated in the rescue of survivors of the British liner Athenia, which was sunk September 3.

More than 200 survivors were picked up by the City of Flint and brought to Halifax, N. S. Since the vessel has accommodations for only six passengers, two Coast Guard cutters were dispatched to meet her in mid-ocean with supplies.

Her commander was commended for the rescue and the Athenia survivors praised captain and crew.

"He didn't sleep a wink," one said in telling of Gainard's efforts to make them comfortable in the ship's limited quarters.

City Of Flint Reached Manchester, N. Y. Hears

New York, Oct. 23 (AP)—The course of the United States freighter City of Flint, which took her into the hands of a German raider, remained a mystery tonight as efforts were made to trace it through maritime reports.

The October 18 New York Maritime Register, a shipping journal listing arrivals and departures of the marine world, showed that the City of Flint had reached Manchester on October 15.

This was confirmed by the United States Lines, which added, however, that there was no information available here to indicate that she had called also, as intended, at Liverpool, Glasgow or Dublin.

Not Due At Tromso

The ship had not intended to call at Tromso, Norway, or any other foreign port, before returning to the United States, the line said.

Therefore, it speculated, if the City of Flint never reached another British port after leaving Manchester, it might have been seized in waters presumably dominated by the British navy.

A line official expressed amazement when told of a cable advice, reaching here in routine manner earlier today, indicating the ship had been in Tromso last Saturday. He said it was impossible, that Tromso was not an intended port of call.

Vice-President A. J. McCarthy of the line said there were no passengers aboard.

German Admiralty Lacks Report on Case

Berlin, Tuesday, Oct. 24 (AP)—The German Admiralty and the Propaganda Ministry said early today that they had no knowledge of the American freighter City of Flint being seized by a German raider.

"No report of such action has arrived here thus far," the Admiralty spokesman said. However, he suggested that inquirers check the Admiralty again later in the day.

BRITISH CLAIM THREE MORE U-BOATS SUNK

Planes Send Two Down With Bombs—Warships Account For Third

Flyers Report Seeing Bubbles And Oil After Dropping "Eggs"

[By the Associated Press]

London, Oct. 23—The British tonight reported the sinking of three German submarines by British warships and bombing planes.

These attacks on the Nazi undersea craft were announced as the Government described German air raids on British naval bases and convoys as failures and continued its preparations for a waiting war.

The sinking of one submarine by warships was reported belatedly after the Air Ministry earlier had told of the two successful attacks on U-boats by battleplanes.

Freighter Fights Sub

The report said the warships were summoned to the aid of a merchant vessel which engaged in a fight with the attacking submarine. It said both the freighter and the submarine were hit and that the latter, unable to submerge, was sent to the bottom.

[Editor's Note—An Associated Press night dispatch from Lisbon said the British freighter Baron Forbes wirelessed for help, advising that she had sighted a submarine in the Atlantic. Her location was not given.]

Also announced were the sinkings of two British merchantmen, coinciding with the statement by naval authorities that submarine attacks on Allied shipping had again become "considerable," but that losses were small in comparison with those of 1917, when Germany started her unrestricted submarine warfare.

U-Boats Attacked

The German submarines were reported attacked by Royal Air Force planes scouting from their home bases, one in the North Sea, the other in the Atlantic. Anti-submarine bombs were the weapons in both cases. The Air Ministry announcement said both attacks were "believed to have been successful."

Pilots of the two R. A. F. planes said they saw air bubbles and oil on the surface after bombing the submarines and expressed confidence they had been sunk.

Before today's announcement the Government had reported that about one-third of sixty German submarines in service at the start of the war had been sunk or damaged.

16 Nazi Planes Lost

In a naval press conference authorities said Germany had lost about sixteen planes in last week's raids on Scapa Flow, the Firth of Forth and British convoys. They declared these losses outweighed damage inflicted by the raids and said no British ship had been harmed by air raiders to the extent that would have kept it from going to sea.

Of the "revived U-boat intense activity" an authority said that in comparison with the intensive period of submarine warfare in 1917 "the British losses last week amounted to only ten per cent. in number and twenty-six per cent. in tonnage."

Warning Sounded

An air-raid warning was sounded at the Firth of Forth today when two unidentified aircraft appeared, but later it was found that no German planes were in the area.

An auxiliary air force squadron, comparable to a National Guard squadron in the United States, was given official credit for saving a convoy of merchant ships from mines in the North Sea. The squadron spotted the floating mines directly in the path of the leading ships and dropped smoke flares warning them away.

The two additional British ships announced as sunk were the Whitemantle and the Sea Venture. Fourteen men were reported missing off the Whitemantle. Five men survived the sinking, the cause of which was not disclosed. The Sea Venture sank after an explosion. The crew of twenty-five reached shore safely.

"Bureaucrats"

On the home front officials and the press devotes increasing attention to the wartime economic setup.

The Daily Mail declared the "bureaucrats" in the war economic organization were "the biggest threat to the British people" and added:

"At home we have endured fifty days of muddle on a grand scale. The food-control muddle, the petrol muddle, the information muddle, the blackout muddle, the A. R. P. (air-raids precautions) muddle are the offspring of plans so confused that the result is chaos."

Denounces "Muddler"

The Daily Herald said the "muddler" who "makes war on us from Whitehall" was an ally of Hitler, and other papers spoke of "controlitis" and "pool follery" in the economic regimentation which has created "pools" of tea and gasoline.

The Foreign Office—still jubilant over the British-French-Turkish mutual-aid pact signed Thursday—issued an announcement that the Prime Ministers of Turkey and Iraq had exchanged telegrams of good will on signing of the pact.

The Premier of Iraq, the oil reservoir of the Near East under the British wing, spoke of it as the culmination of "high policy closely affecting Iraq."

Swedish Steamer Sunk In North Sea; 2 Perish

Gothenburg, Sweden, Oct. 23 (AP)—The owners of the Swedish steamer Albania received a report today that the vessel had been sunk in the North Sea with the loss of two lives.

Nineteen persons were reported rescued in the sinking, described as possibly having been caused by a torpedo, near Grimsby, on the east coast of England.

Lloyd's Register shows the steamer Albania, 1,241 tons, was owned by the Swedish Lloyd Company and managed by K. R. Bokman. She was built in 1903 and her home port was Gothenburg.

Denies U. S. Warship Seized Nazi Freighter

Washington, Oct. 23 (AP)—A Navy Department spokesman said tonight the German freighter Havelland was not in custody of any United States warship. When asked if the freighter was under surveillance, he declined comment.

A dispatch from Panama said it was reported there without official confirmation or denial that the Havelland had been taken in custody by a United States warship off the Pacific coast of Panama.

The 6,334-ton steamer left San Jose, Costa Rica, October 8 with Panama as her announced destination, although her large cargo of Diesel oil had aroused speculation among shipping circles as to her actual purpose.

Her course through the Americas' neutral safety zone has been watched with interest here.

BRITISH REPORT AIR ATTACK ON 2 SUBMARINES

Believe U-Boats Bombed Heavily by the R. A. F. Were Destroyed.

OIL AND DEBRIS SEEN ON SEA

2 More English Ships Are Sunk With 14 Missing—London Minimizes Losses.

LONDON, Oct. 23 (A. P.).—The Air Ministry announced today that British war planes had made two attacks on German submarines and both were "believed to have been successful."

The announcement said one attack "took place in the North Sea and teh other in the Atlantic, many miles from the aircraft bases."

"After both attacks the pilots remained circling above the places where the submarines disappeared and nothing more was seen of the U-boats," said the communique.

Earlier in the day the naval authorities disclosed that two more British vessels had been sunk—the Whitemantle and the Sea Venture. At least fourteen of the Whitemantle's crew were missing.

An air raid warning was sounded in the Firth of Forth area again today on the appearance of unidentified planes. Later, however, it was said no German aircraft were in the region.

The text of the Air Ministry's announcement of the R. A. F. attacks follows:

"Two attacks on U-boats were recently made by R. A. F. aircraft and both are believed to have been successful. One took place in the North Sea and the other in the Atlantic, many miles from the aircrafts' bases. After both attacks, the pilots remained circling above the places where the submarines disappeared, and nothing more was seen of the U-boats.

Pilots' Report of Attacks.

"The following is the pilot's report of the North Sea attack:

"'A reconnaissance aircraft sighted and attacked a submarine in position. A salvo of anti-submarine bombs was dropped ahead of the periscope. The submarine dived steeply.

"'The airgunner said definitely that he noticed a second underwater explosion after the explosion of these bombs. The aircraft then turned about, flew over the submarine a second time, and dropped a second salvo.

"'Patches of oil were observed after the first salvo and more extensively after the second attack.

"'Nothing more was seen of the U-boat.'

"The pilot of the Atlantic patrol aircraft says:

"'An enemy submarine was sighted some distance away. It dived and several heavy bombs dropped on it. The first is thought to have been a direct hit.

"'Dark objects appeared in the water after the attack, and air bubbles rose to the surface.

"'A second bombing attack was made as near to the same position as possible. We circled over the area for some time, but nothing further was observed'."

Two More Freighters Sunk.

British naval authorities said today that the attacks of German submarines on allied shipping had again "become considerable," but contended that losses were small in comparison with those of 1917, when Germany began her unrestricted submarine campaign in the world war.

Disclosure was made of the sinking of two more British vessels, with a total of at least fourteen persons missing and thirty survivors accounted for from the two ships.

British naval experts said that from their standpoint the most significant war development was the raids by German warplanes on British ships and anchorages and the losses the Nazis incurred in these raids in comparison with the damage they inflicted.

The cause of the sinking of the 1,692-ton steamship Whitemantle in the North Sea was not given in today's announcement. Fourteen crew members were missing; five survivors were landed at an east coast port.

The 2,327-ton coastal vessel Sea Venture, owned by the Dover Navigation Company of London, was disclosed to have sunk after an explosion. Its crew of twenty-five landed on an island in one of the steamship's boats. They later reached a northern town in a lifeboat sent for them.

Says Nazis Lost Sixteen Planes.

Naval authorities stressed their assertion that the Germans lost about sixteen planes in the last week's series of raids on Scapa Flow, the Firth of Forth and action in the North Sea.

They said no British ship was damaged by airplanes to an extent that would have kept it from going to sea. Hitherto the German losses had been computed at thirteen planes.

At a naval press conference Britain was described as endeavoring to cut down delays caused to neutral ships passing through her "contraband control" searches.

It was also said with reference to the Pan-American neutrality zone around the Americas that "the British Admiralty will do all it can to keep war away from the coast of America."

Norway Gets Warning.

OSLO, Oct. 23 (A. P.).—A German memorandum, delivered today to the Norwegian Foreign Office, warned that neutral vessels running without lights faced the risk of being mistaken for enemy warships and destroyed.

The memorandum [illegible] said that the Germans would attack not only convoying warships but all vessels traveling under their protection. This, it was stated, was in accordance with the acknowledged rules of sea warfare and Article 32 of the German prize laws.

29 German Dead Picked Up.

COPENHAGEN, Oct. 23 (A. P.).—Danish fishing boats reported today that they had picked up the bodies of twenty-nine men from the German mine-field guardship Este 7, which exploded off Moen Island on S[illegible]urday.

At the same time, King Christian commended in a telegram two Danish airplane pilots who had braved mined waters and a heavy sea to rescue four survivors. A fifth saved himself after a ten-hour swim.

The four rescued men were transferred from a raft to the plane after it had landed nearby. They clung to the wings until a fishing boat, summoned by another plane, picked them up.

Air Raid Alarms in Scotland

Firth of Forth District Gets Warning, but No Nazi Planes Appear.

LONDON, Oct. 23 (A. P.).—An air raid warning was sounded over the Firth of Forth area of Scotland at about noon today but was canceled shortly later.

The "all clear" was sounded fifteen minutes after the alarm had been lifted in other regions of southeast Scotland.

An Air Ministry communique said later that the warnings were "due to the approach of unidentified aircraft," and that the all clear signal was sounded about half an hour later when it was known that no enemy aircraft were in the area.

The persistent German flights over the North Sea toward vital British seaports and naval bases are believed "to be" for the purpose of feeling out the British defenses: of spreading anxiety and mapping objectives more precisely for a wave of larger raids to come.

Counting four German planes shot down in the convoy raid on Saturday and another off the east coast yesterday, the Air Ministry figured that at least thirteen enemy airplanes, or 25 per cent of the invading squadrons, were lost in a week. Attacks were made every day last week but Thursday.

The successful defense of the convoy in the first such test brought both praise and caution against overconfidence.

"The attacks on our bases did badly," said the London Daily Express. "The attack on the North Sea convoy did worse. That must be a surprise for those who used to predict that the airplane was a big new danger for us at sea. But wait a little before you decide that the danger does not exist."

When the Real War Comes.

Meanwhile today Great Britain counted the first fifty days of war well spent, although there was still little to answer the question, "What kind of a war is this?"

As the war entered its eighth week, commentators considered the British-French-Turkish mutual assistance pact the No. 1 achievement so far, but there was also much pointing with pride to the way British warplanes had beaten off the first air attack on a naval Borah Gets Little Space.

The assertion yesterday of United States Senator William E. Borah that "powerful British interests" were trying to draw the United States into the war was given little space on the news pages and there was no editorial comment.

Much bigger headlines went to the German Propaganda Minister, Paul Joseph Goebbels. "Goebbels lies for thirty-seven minutes," was the Laborite London Daily Herald's headlines over its report of the German Minister's broadcast accusing the British of having sunk the Athenia.

The price of eggs went up about six cents a dozen and there were slight increases also in bacon, meat, fish and jam. Some 46,000,000 food rationing cards were ready for distribution and November 13 was given as the probable starting day for rationing.

The Wool Control Advisory Council ordered a 10 per cent reduction in civilian use of wool, the saving to be made by using thinner cloth.

WESTERN FRONT COMES TO LIFE; FIGHTS RESUME

Patrols Skirmish On North Flank — Nazis Increase Pressure

Daladier To Call Parliament Next Month To Consider Budget

By TAYLOR HENRY
Associated Press Correspondent

Paris, Oct. 23—The Germans were reported tonight to be increasing pressure on the French advance line after five days of almost dead calm on the Western front.

As the French strengthened their outposts to meet renewed German activity, reinforced patrols of both sides skirmished briskly along the northern flank, where the Nazis have been cautiously feeling their way with units as small as three and five men.

The French evening communique said there was "marked activity" of contact elements west of the Saar river.

To Call Parliament

As the Western front came to life Premier Daladier announced he had decided to summon Parliament to meet the latter part of November to consider the 1940 budget for another war year.

The semi-dictatorial powers under which Daladier has been ruling France expire November 30. All decrees enacted by his Government must be approved by Parliament before that date.

The meeting of Parliament will be the first since the war began.

The communique tonight was the first since October 18 to report any Western front activity other than sporadic artillery fire and brief encounters between scouts hunting for prisoners.

Weather Clearing

The increased Nazi activities coincided with clearing weather after rains which sent numerous streams to flood stage.

The sector just west of Saarbrücken was said to be getting particular attention from the Germans. Apparently they were attempting to advance in the Warndt Forest, the only place where the French still hold any of the German territory occupied at the beginning of the war.

Dispatches also indicated that German patrols had penetrated close enough to involve the French main line in a brief engagement near the Luxembourg border.

Strikes Pessimistic Note

A pessimistic note was struck tonight by the retired French general, Maurice Duval, writing in the authoritative Journal Des Debats. He summed up the war to date by saying that the French were presented with the problem of ... ing the Siegfried Line and "simply had to admit our impotence."

The general wrote frankly that "we cannot turn the Siegfried Line unless the Germans, taking the initiative, attack through Holland, Belgium or Switzerland and draw us into action there."

Offensive Advised

General Duval added that unless the Siegfried Line fell from within because the French-British naval blockade caused a German political revolution, the only route to victory might be a direct offensive against the German fortifications.

Although General Duval indicated the Siegfried Line ... have to be cracked, the Ar... indicated their tactics were aimed at sapping Germany's civilian morale, while avoiding "needless" sacrifice of their troops.

They said the only type of action now being waged consists of a kind of "guerrilla" warfare, involving skirmishes by patrols constantly seeking to chart enemy positions.

British Freighter Flashes Call in Atlantic.

LISBON, Oct. 23 (A. P.).—The British freighter Baron Forbes wirelessed for help tonight, advising that she had ... a submarine in the Atlantic. Her location was not given.

Lloyd's Register lists the Baron Forbes as a 3,061-ton vessel in the Spanish-British trade. The 311-foot ship was built in 1915 and her home port is Ardrossan, England. The freighter is owned by the Iberia Shipping Company.

Two British Destroyers Refuel at Buenos Aires

BUENOS AIRES, Oct. 23 (A. P.).—The British destroyers Hotspur and Havock, first belligerent warships to visit Buenos Aires since the beginning of the war, arrived today. The officers exchanged formal calls with the Argentine authorities while the ships refueled.

International law permits belligerent warships to remain twenty-four hours in a neutral port without being liable to internment.

DENY U. S. HOLDS NAZI SHIP

But Navy Sources Are Silent on Whether Havelland Is Watched

PANAMA, Oct. 23 (AP)—It was reported here tonight, without official confirmation or denial, that the German freighter Havelland had been taken in custody by a United States warship off the Pacific coast of Panama.

[A Navy Department spokesman in Washington said the Havelland was not in ... of any United States ... He would not say whether she was being watched.]

The 6,334-ton steamer left San Jose, Costa Rica, Oct. 8, with Panama as her announced destination, although her large cargo of Diesel oil had aroused speculation among shipping circles as to her actual purpose.

Her course through the Americas' neutral safety zone has been watched with interest here.

FRENCH REPORT BRISK BATTLES BY BIG PATROLS

Front Springs Suddenly to Life After Days of Calm.

DALADIER CALLS PARLIAMENT

Special Session to Meet Second Week of November to Vote New War Credits.

PARIS, Oct. 23 (A. P.)—The western front sprang to life today, after days of calm, with re-enforced patrols fighting brisk engagements on the northern flank.

The text of a communique issued by the High Command at 8:35 P. M. (2:35 P. M. Eastern standard time) today follows:

"Marked activity on the part of elements in contact, more particularly in the region west of the Saar."

This was revealed in a High Command communique issued shortly after Premier Daladier announced that he would call Parliament into extraordinary session the second week of November to approve financial credits for the war.

The communique described activity on the front as "marked" after a series of communiques which listed calm days and nights broken only by slight patrol activity.

The sector extending west toward the Luxemburg frontier from the Saar River was listed as the area where the skirmishing was heaviest.

First Session Since War Began.

The coming session of Parliament will be the first since the war started on September 3.

The session became necessary under French law if the Government were to obtain passage of the 1940 budget, without which it would be impossible to carry on the war.

Early winter floods was aiding France in her "super-guerrilla" war against Germany.

The French War Ministry's morning communique today said: "The night was quiet on the front as a whole."

The French, having relinquished virtually all the positions they had captured on German soil in the first seven weeks of the war, indicated that their tactics were aimed at sapping Germany's civilian morale, while avoiding "needless" sacrifice of their own troops. The only type of action now being carried on at the front, they said, consists of a kind of "guerrilla" warfare involving skirmishes by patrols constantly seeking to chart the enemy positions.

Leave of Absence.

Apparently pointing to a continued absence of large scale military activity was a War Ministry announcement that beginning on November 1 men with the armed forces would be granted ten days' leave for every four months of service. An extra three days was promised the men who received decorations or in special cases involving deaths or births in their families. Men mobilized behind the lines will receive eight days' vacation.

During the world war, leaves were granted only after a whole year of active service.

The withdrawal of French troops across their border along most of the northern end of the front relieved the pressure on Saarbruecken, the rich German industrial center threatened from three sides since the early days of the war.

Still Dominate City.

The French said, however, that the city was still dominated by their heavy guns near Forbach and by troops on two small heights in the Warndt Forest. These heights, southwest of Saarbruecken, are the only positions on German soil now occupied by their forces, French declared.

Heavy rains which sent the ... River out of her banks and washed out bridges east of Saarbruecken contributed to the natural strength of positions established by the French to meet German attempts to cross the border.

Small streams overflowed elsewhere along the entire northern end of the front between the Moselle and the Rhine, curtailing military activities. At some points, French artillery kept up a sporadic fire on German communication lines.

Winter Stalemate.

Some French informants expressed a belief that a Berlin conference of Adolf Hitler and other Nazi leaders might end in a decision to attempt a big offensive against the Maginot Line. Most were of the opinion, however, that the Germans would concentrate on intensifying their submarine and aerial attacks to break the British blockade.

The French indicated that they expected a winter stalemate on the western front unless the Germans should attempt a mass offensive. Manpower apparently was held fairly evenly on both sides.

Attempts to sap German morale during the winter, the French indicated, would take several forms—the allied naval blockade, heavy use of the radio for propaganda purposes and a steady diet of air pamphlet "raids."

Third of Paris Priests Serving as Soldiers

PARIS, Oct. 23 (A. P.).—More than 500 Paris priests, representing one-third of the capital's clergy, are fighting with French armies, Cardinal Verdier, in charge of mobilized priests of the Paris archdiocese, said today.

Of those called to the colors, he said, 400 are serving in front lines as officers or soldiers.

R. A. F. IS ATTACKED OVER NAZI LINES

Planes Get Bath of Fire, but Escape Safely.

WITH THE ROYAL AIR FORCE IN FRANCE, Oct. 23 (A. P.) (Passed by R. A. F. Censor).—Flying in formation as perfect as if at a peace-time air pageant, a patrol of British fighting planes returned safely to its base today after being hotly attacked by anti-aircraft fire over the Siegfried Line.

The wings on one of the planes was riddled with bullet-holes. The pilot's face, as he climbed from the cockpit, was purple with cold.

A crowd of several hundred French soldiers broke up a football game they were playing near this aerodrome, one of the most advanced R. A. F. bases in France, and rushed across the field to watch the planes come in.

FINNS EXPECTED TO YIELD ISLES TO RUSSIANS

Concessions Looked For As Second Parley Starts At Kremlin

Helsinki, However, Said To Bar Soviet Troops From Finnish Soil

By WITT HANCOCK
Associated Press Correspondent

Moscow, Oct. 23—Russia and Finland began a second series of negotiations tonight which observers believed would result in the concession of Finnish islands to the Soviet.

Diplomatic circles believed Russia would emerge as the unchallenged master of the Gulf of Finland and the Baltic as the result of the conferences, following concessions gained from Latvia, Estonia and Lithuania, but would not win consent to Russian garrisons on Finnish soil.

Called To Kremlin

The delegation headed by Dr. Juho Paasikivi, which arrived this morning with instructions from its Government on how far Finland was prepared to yield to Soviet demands, was summoned to the Kremlin at 6 P. M. after waiting most of the day.

The first talks were still under way several hours later with the prospect they would be continued into the night.

Although the Finns were reported resigned to granting some islands for Soviet military bases, it was understood they would resist if the question of placing troops on Finnish soil were raised.

Finns To Hold Aalands

It was understood the Finns, backed up by other Scandinavian states, would vigorously oppose any Russian move to take control of the strategic Aaland Islands in the Gulf of Bothnia.

The Finns were hopeful the conferences would end quickly. They pinned this hope on the belief Russia wants to remain neutral in the European war and desires to avoid a fight with her small northern neighbor which might prove to be the start of a general conflict.

Meanwhile, indications of Russia's friendship with Germany was seen in reports from unofficial, but reliable, sources that the Government soon would give a ten-day "festival of German art," including concerts devoted to the music of Bach, Beethoven, Schubert and other German composers.

First Of Its Kind

Russia has never given a "ten-day festival" devoted to the works of foreign artists although she has done so for Russian minorities.

The press carefully emphasized the "free" nature of yesterday's plebiscite in the Polish Ukraine and White Russia to determine whether the territory should join the U. S. S. R. Newspapers said among those voting were the Count and Countess Pototozky, widely known Polish noble family in Lwow, and sixty nuns.

The result of the ballot has not been announced. There was only one slate of candidates—those favoring annexation by Russia.

The Soviet public, which had not been informed that Paasikivi had left here after the first conferences for instructions in Helsinki, was informed today over the radio of his return.

Situation Is Considered as Hopeful as Helsinki Delegation Arrives.

COMPROMISE RUMOR HEARD

Soviet May Get Permission to Fortify Some Islands in Gulf of Finland.

MOSCOW, Oct. 23 (A. P.).—Finland and Soviet Russia today resumed negotiations initiated by Russia as part of a drive for increased dominance over her northern European neighbors.

The Finnish delegation, headed by Dr. Juho Kusti Paasikivi, conferred at the Kremlin for two and a half hours after returning this morning from Helsinki.

Although the Finns were believed to be resigned to granting some island concessions to the Soviet Union, observers expected Finland to prove stubborn if the question of placing Russian troops on Finnish soil were raised—a concession which Moscow won from Estonia, Lithuania and Latvia recently.

It was understood that Finland, with support from Sweden and other Scandinavian States, would vigorously oppose any Soviet move to take control of the Aaland Islands, strategically placed between Finland and Sweden. Finns were hopeful the negotiations might be ended quickly.

The atmosphere was considered hopeful by Finns as the diplomats stepped from their train and were received by Vladimir N. Barkov, chief of protocol in the Russian Foreign Office, a handful of minor Soviet officials and the envoys here of all the Scandinavian States.

Compromise Predicted.

Observers, pointing out Russia's declared intention of remaining neutral in the European war, expressed the belief that she would not try to push Finland too far and risk war with her northern neighbor. On the other hand, Finland was said to be prepared to yield somewhat to the Soviet's demands, possibly by allowing fortification of islands in the Gulf of Finland.

Meanwhile, a Tass (Russian official news agency) dispatch from Kaunas said that a Soviet military mission had arrived in the Lithuanian capital. Under a recent pact, Russia was granted the right to station troops in that country, which adjoins Germany.

It also was announced here the newly appointed Russian Ambassador to Tokio had departed for Japan. Japanese circles in Moscow said everything on the Outer Mongolian-Manchoukuan frontier remained quiet following the recent armistice.

Russian attention was directed also to two other fruits of the new Soviet diplomacy.

Commission Going to Berlin.

Informed sources said that the purpose of a decision to send Ivan T. Tevosyan, Commissar of Shipbuilding, to Berlin as head of an economic mission was to study the export of German machinery and manufactured goods to Russia, thus complementing the work of a German delegation here.

Dr. Karl Ritter, head of a German economic delegation which has been conferring here on trade exchanges, flew back to Berlin yesterday to report to Adolf Hitler. The rest of the mission stayed to continue talks with Soviet officials, and some sources said that any obstacles to trade probably soon would be ironed out.

Although a vote almost 100 per cent favorable to Russia was regarded by observers as a foregone conclusion, officials were attentive to voting yesterday in Russian-occupied regions of Poland to decide whether they want to join the U. S. S. R. The voting was based on an election in which apparently, there were lists only of advocates of joining Russia. Opponents had only the alternative of scratching out names of those nominees.

Finns Continue to Prepare.

HELSINKI, Finland, Oct. 23 (A. P.).—It was revealed here today that Dr. Juho Paasikivi, head of the Finnish delegation to Moscow, probably would present to the Russians counter-proposals decided on here when the mission came home after a series of discussions with Soviet leaders. Neither the details of the Russian proposals nor the Finnish answer has been disclosed.

In Finland, meanwhile, there was no relaxation of intense preparations for defense, if necessary, of Finland's independence.

(The Russian demands have been described here as of a "serious" nature, and it has been reported that Moscow wants certain islands in the Gulf of Finland for naval bases, a military alliance and a new arrangement respecting the strategic Aaland Islands in the Gulf of Bothnia.)

Soviet Warships Reach Latvia.

RIGA, Latvia, Oct. 23 (A. P.).—Five Russian warships arrived today at Libau, one of three Latvian ports set aside for Russian naval use by the Soviet-Latvian neutral assistance pact.

Berlin Organizing Civilians to Combat Hunger Blockade—Ribbentrop to Speak in Danzig Tomorrow.

BERLIN, Oct. 23 (A. P.).—Germany's political army—the Nazi party—set out today further to consolidate the home front, now that the first phase of the war in the west is completed—according to the High Command—and the lightning campaign in Poland was ended nearly a month ago.

There were no indications of how long Germany expected the armed conflict with Great Britain and France to last, but in preliminary meetings of party organizers the possibility was considered that the war may last for months, even years.

Foreign Minister Joachim von Ribbentrop is to make a speech in Danzig tomorrow which officials today said would be an important statement on foreign policy.

Political quarters speculated whether Adolf Hitler had commissioned his Foreign Minister to make another peace gesture to the press defiance of Germany's enemies again. Nazi authorities said that translations of the speech would be furnished foreign newspaper men.

Hitler today appointed Arthur Greiser, former President of the Danzig Senate, to be Nazi party (district leader) of the Warthe district, the party unit corresponding to the former Polish province of Posen, now annexed to the Reich.

The high command's daily communique again was brief today. It reported only artillery and reconnoitering activity during the last twenty-four hours on the western front, and said that a tri-motored British plane had been sighted on Saturday over Konzen, fifteen miles from Aachen, and then disappeared over the Belgian frontier.

Silences of Communiques.

When foreign correspondents at their daily press conference inquired why no mention was made in the communique of a mine disaster to a German patrol boat in the Baltic Sea, on Saturday and of an engagement between Germany planes and British vessels and planes off Scotland the same day, an authoritative reply was given that "these matters are still under investigation, wherefore a statement cannot at present be made."

Rumors from Moscow to the effect that Joseph Stalin had declined to give further military aid to Germany were put off with the laconic statement: "That is another balloon to see what kind of a rise can be got out of it."

Athenia Charges Ignored.

Germany's propaganda machine was active today circulating Propaganda Minister Goebbels's charges that the British passenger liner Athenia was sunk in a "primitive and criminal" trick to draw the United States into the war.

Dr. Goebbels's speech, made last night, was virtually the only story in German newspapers today, while the radio in many languages was challenging Britain's First Lord of the Admiralty, Winston Churchill, to clarify the circumstances surrounding the destruction of the ship on which many Americans were passengers.

"How could you say, Mr. Churchill, that the Athenia was sunk by a German torpedo when you knew it went down under the fire of three British destroyers?" Dr. Goebbels asked.

—ANGLO-TURK TRADE—

[By the Associated Press]

London, Oct. 23—Great Britain was reported today to have entered into financial and economic discussions with Turkey in line with the new British-French-Turkish mutual-assistance treaty.

Informed sources said these discussions were being conducted principally in Ankara, the Turkish capital, and dealt with questions of British credits to Turkey and British-Turkish trade.

There was no indication of the amount of the credits involved.

(The granting to Turkey of a credit by Britain and France was said at Ankara yesterday to have been one part of a program mapped by military experts in joint staff talks there after conclusion of the treaty. Others, observers said, probably included coordinated measures by British-French forces in the Near East and by the Turkish Army in the event of any aggressive acts within the scope of the pact.)

"How can you contend the Athenia was hit by a German torpedo when the vessel remained afloat fourteen hours? You know from the swift sinking of the heavily armored Royal Oak how a German torpedo works."

Gustav A. Anderson of Evanston, Ill., a passenger on the Athenia, told a congressional committee in Washington last week that the ship did not sink immediately, that he saw it some time before noon the following day, which would be from twelve to sixteen hours after the British said she was torpedoed by a German submarine. "I learned later that it was sunk by British destroyers as it was a floating derelict," he said.

Asked to comment on Mr. Anderson's statement, the British Admiralty in London said:

"The Athenia was sunk by a German submarine."

The Admiralty added that the testimony and accounts of the disaster speak for themselves.

Besides blaming a German submarine for the destruction of the Athenia, the British have all along asserted that the underwater craft shelled it and its passengers.

The British battleship Royal Oak was torpedoed by a German submarine at Scapa Flow on October 14 and sank within a few minutes.

Challenges Churchill.

Still addressing Mr. Churchill, Dr. Goebbels said: "It is your turn to speak, . . . Tell the truth about the Athenia."

Dr. Goebbels said his charge that the sinking of the ship on September 3, a few hours after Britain declared war on Germany, was confirmed by American witnesses, among whom he named Anderson.

Dr. Goebbels said his charges were made on the declaration of American witnesses that three British destroyers sank the Athenia after the original blast proved inadequate to send the vessel down.

Adolf Hitler's newspaper Voelkischer Beobachter made a similar assertion Saturday.

"Our charges are so exact and so precise that they cannot be ignored," Dr. Goebbels continued. "When made by the German press, Churchill sought to dismiss these charges lightly. But he must take note of them if they are made by a German Minister—or by his silence he will have to acknowledge guilt."

Strengthening the Home Front.

This year's political campaign—one of a series that sweeps the Reich annually beginning in the winter months—was primarily devoted to "strengthening the home front." Hausfraus will be urged to save on everything from foodstuffs down to the simplest of life's necessities, not to grumble but to bear their hardships with the same grim determination as soldiers on the front.

Similarly, men in the factories and especially armament industry workers were being told that, as has been the case frequently in the past, they stand in the first line with the fighting troops.

It was recalled that Hitler and other Nazi top men have repeatedly declared that Germany will never capitulate and another November, 1918, will not occur. German world war histories contend that the Reich's defeat then was due solely to the collapse of the home front.

Western Front Strategy.

What strategic moves were contemplated by army commanders in the western warfare remained their secret. This much, however, has been emphasized time and again: That the halting of the German army at the French border should not be interpreted as a sign of weakness.

The trend of the western war has hitherto obviously been to spare the French as much as possible, in the slim hope of weaning them away from the British.

The second stage of this war, as seen through the eyes of the German High Command, began with the lull along the entire front which has been interrupted occasionally by the two opposing artilleries.

Mass Meetings Held.

The Nazi campaign to strengthen German morale in the face of the allied blockade was marked by numerous mass meetings in which the conflict was characterized as "a war of nerves." It was predicted freely that France and Great Britain would break first.

"We don't know how long this war will last," one speaker said. "Perhaps it will last for several months, perhaps for several years. But as long as it does last, never, never again will we be conquered by England."

Reminding the civilian population that the sacrifices it may be called upon to make cannot compare with those made by German soldiers, another Nazi leader declared:

"It is not easy for our women to stand in line for several hours to get food for the family. But all this is necessary to win the final battle. Never again will England be able to subjugate the German people. As long as one German man can raise his hand, as long as one German woman lives, Germany will fight!"

Of Long Duration.

A group of Nazi district leaders spent the week end in Berlin, meeting with Adolf Hitler and conferring on methods to meet internal problems.

German advices from the western front emphasized the lack of military activity there. The absence of any evident intention on either side to launch a major offensive strengthened a growing belief here that the war might prove to be of long duration.

Nazi military leaders expressed the belief, however, that Germany has the upper hand in fighting materials, and that her armies can smash their way across the Rhine, if it should become necessary.

German economic leaders expressed satisfaction over the Russo-German trade negotiations being conducted in Moscow. As a result, it was said, a large Soviet delegation headed by Ivan T. Tevosyan, Soviet Commissar of Shipbuilding, was expected to arrive in Berlin within a few days to discuss questions connected with German exports to Russia.

HITLER'S AIDE WILL ADDRESS WAR VETERANS

Berlin Speculates On Whether He Will Talk Peace Or Defiance

Campaign To Consolidate Home Front Launched By Nazi Party

By MELVIN K. WHITELEATHER
Associated Press Correspondent

Berlin, Oct. 23—Germany's interest centered tonight on a foreign policy speech which Joachim von Ribbentrop, Foreign Minister, is to make in Danzig tomorrow before an organization of war veterans.

Officials would give no hint of what the Foreign Minister would say beyond declaring his speech, scheduled for 8.15 P. M., was important.

Additional evidence that the Nazis attach significance to his words was seen in the announcement that translations would be furnished foreign newspapermen.

Peace Or Defiance?

Political quarters speculated whether Adolf Hitler, with the military and diplomatic war fronts quiet, had commissioned von Ribbentrop to make another peace gesture or shake a defiant fist at Germany's enemies.

Authorities repeatedly have said Hitler would make no more peace proposals following rejection by Britain and France of his latest terms announced in a Reichstag speech October 6 after the conquest of Poland.

This would not rule out the possibility, however, that some other high Nazi might inform the world that the door for peace is still open as far as Germany is concerned.

Front Reported Quiet

Another day of quiet on the Western front was reported in a high-command communique, which said there was no fighting "excepting artillery and reconnoitering activity."

The communique reported a British plane had flown over the railway station at Konzen, about fifteen miles southeast of Aachen, on October 21 and then disappeared over the Belgian frontier.

Home Front Fostered

A campaign to consolidate the home front—where many Germans believe the last war was lost—was launched by the Nazi party as part of the political drive which usually occurs in the winter months.

Munitions and other factory workers were being told at a series of meetings that they stand in the first line with field troops. Housewives were being urged to bear hardships with the same determination as soldiers and to save on everything down to the simplest necessities.

Among 11 Aliens Arrested as Spy Suspects.

STOCKHOLM, Oct. 23 (A. P.).—Two Americans and nine other foreigners were arrested today for suspected espionage. The names of the Americans were not disclosed.

Swedish police said the foreigners were taking photographs in a military zone.

The other suspects were six Germans and three Russians.

The Americans, who described themselves as newspaper men and had a foreign office permit to visit a children's home on a hilltop, said they were particularly interested in welfare institutions. Police, however, alleged they were more interested in surrounding military objects.

Pair Among 11 Foreigners Arrested On Suspicion Of Espionage

[By the Associated Press]

Stockholm, Oct. 23—Two Americans identified by Swedish police as John Gray Faron and George Evered Kidder-Smith—both graduates of Princeton University—were among eleven foreigners under arrest here tonight on suspicion of espionage.

The police alleged the Americans were carrying cameras during a visit to a hilltop children's home, and showed suspicious interest in surrounding military objectives.

Taken In Custody

Both Americans vigorously denied they had taken any pictures of military value, but pending development of the films in their cameras the men were kept in custody.

Swedish authorities acknowledged the possibility that a mistake had been made in the case of the Americans, but insisted on a full investigation.

Police said their attention was first attracted to Faron and Kidder-Smith because they failed to acknowledge a warning sent them by authorities not to take pictures of bridges, harbors and other possible military objectives without permission.

Warning Sent To Group

The warning was sent to seventeen Americans studying in Sweden under the Swedish-American Foundation scholarships.

No details were divulged regarding the other foreigners arrested, but they were said to be six Germans and three Russians.

A rigid patrol of the Stockholm and Gothenburg harbor districts has been established to exclude unauthorized persons.

A number of coast artillery batteries were established recently.

Had Foreign Office Permit

Faron and Kidder-Smith described themselves as newspapermen, police said, and they had a Foreign Office permit to visit a children's home on the top of a hilltop.

Police said the Americans told them they were interested particularly in welfare institutions, but when they got up on the hill they displayd more interest in surrounding military objectives.

Italy Planning Southeast Bloc To Bar Russia

OCT 24 1939

Balkans See Fascists Paving Way for Understanding With Allies and Turkey

BUDAPEST, Oct. 23 (AP).—Reports that Italy was pushing formation of a bloc of southeastern European nations were interpreted by Balkan diplomats tonight as foreshadowing better relations between the Fascist government and Great Britain and France.

Pointing out that such a bloc, composed of Hungary, Yugoslavia, Greece, Bulgaria, Rumania and Turkey, would resist expansion of Russian or German influence, diplomats said it would provide a common ground for a meeting of the Fascists with the western allies.

There were widespread reports—without official confirmation—that Premier Benito Mussolini intended to call a meeting of the interested states at Rome or Belgrade, perhaps as early as next week.

Sympathy for Allies Seen.

Diplomats said formation of a Balkan bloc would be made easier by the fact that Turkey already was allied to Britain and France, while Greece and Rumania had French-British pledges for defense of their independence. Yugoslavia always has been in close sympathy with France and Britain, and King Boris of Bulgaria was said to favor close relations with those powers.

It was believed in most southeastern European capitals that Bulgaria's newly formed government would agree to co-operate with its neighbors under Italian leadership, thus postponing Bulgarian territorial demands on Rumania and Greece. Premier-Foreign Minister George Kiosseivanoff completed tonight a new cabinet to replace the one which resigned Thursday.

Indications in the Bucharest press that Rumania favored the neutral bloc plan came as the inspired Turkish press took pains to assert that Italy would benefit by the new mutual assistance pact between Turkey and France and Britain. Istanbul and Ankara newspapers said the ground now was cleared for Turkish-Italian friendship, since both nations wished to keep Russia and Germany from expanding into the Balkans.

Southeastern European diplomats said they had learned that Italy had been informed, step by step, of French-British negotiations with Turkey, which led to the mutual assistance pacts. They declared that Italy, through the pacts, obtained indirect assurance that Russia's Black Sea fleet would not appear in the Mediterranean to challenge her interests.

It was predicted in Ankara that Turkey soon would take steps to bring about cordial relations with Italy. Balkan diplomats said they had been informed that France and Britain had counseled Turkey to make advances to Italy, pointing out the Fascists had a great interest in keeping German or Russian influence from becoming predominant in southeastern Europe.

The Budapest newspaper "Fuggetlen Magyarorszag," in an apparently inspired article from Rome, said: "A Soviet attempt to take Bessarabia from Rumania would be considered in Rome as having unhealthy consequences in the Balkans. Such a move would provoke unrest in Italy."

ITALY MAY FOSTER BLOC OF NEUTRALS

OCT 24 1939

Rumania Said to Be Ready to Join in Group.

BUDAPEST, Oct. 23 (A. P.).—Formation of a neutral bloc of southeastern nations under Italian leadership to check German and Russian expansion in that part of Europe was discussed as a possibility today in the capitals involved.

Government newspapers in Bucharest expressed willingness for Rumania to join such an Italian-sponsored neutral bloc. With Hungary and Yugoslavia already working closely with Italy, the newspapers Universul and Curentul said that King Carol's Government "can be counted on to co-operate with Italy."

Reports were prevalent that Premier Mussolini had signified his intention of calling a meeting of the southeastern Powers either in Rome or Belgrade. Some reports said the conference might be held as early as next week.

Diplomats in Hungary, Rumania, Yugoslavia, Bulgaria, Turkey and Greece pointed out that Italy already had taken steps to constitute a neutral bloc. Spokesmen credited Italy with causing Hungary and Rumania to withdraw troops from their common frontier. Italy virtually has demilitarized her own border with Greece and has brought relations with Yugoslavia to the point of cordiality after twenty years of bitterness, it was pointed out.

Budapest Newspaper Lauds Stand by Finland Too.

BUDAPEST, Oct. 23 (A. P.).—The newspaper Fuggetlen Magyarorzag editorially congratulated Finland and Turkey today for "standing on their own feet" in the face of Soviet Russia, and urged Hungary to follow their example.

Diplomatic circles believed the newspaper, strictly censored like the rest of the Hungarian press, might reflect the opinion of the Government, which has given no official indication of its attitude toward Moscow since the signing of Russan-German accords.

"We Hungarians," the editorial said, "should keep before us the examples of Finland and Turkey, who stood their ground in the face of Powers greater than themselves, ready to make great sacrifices.

"Our national ambition cannot be higher than to remain as wise and determined to serve our rightful role in Europe as our brothers, Finland and Turkey."

Junk Conservation Drive in Hungary

BUDAPEST, Oct. 23 (A. P.).—The Hungarian Government posted signs today with pictures of an old toothpaste tube, a broken watch spring, a discarded sardine can and a cracked flywheel in a campaign for the conservation of Hungary's scant supplies of metal.

Depots are being established throughout the nation where the Government will buy junk metal, which would be needed urgently in the event of war.

OCT 24 1939

Kiosseivanov Again Asked to Form Cabinet.

SOFIA, Oct. 23 (A. P.).—King Boris today commanded Premier-Foreign Minister George Kiosseivanov to form a new Cabinet.

Mr. Kiosseivanov and his Ministers resigned Thursday with the explanation that this was to open the way for the formation of a government with a more definite policy for coping with the tense situation in southeastern Europe.

Choice of the veteran Premier to succeed himself was interpreted by observers as meaning that the monarch had rejected any proposed changes in Burgaria's foreign policy. Diplomats considered it evidence that King Boris had shunned Soviet Russian pressure for an alignment with Moscow.

It was generally believed the Premier would be receptive toward Italian efforts to form a neutral bloc in the Balkans.

The Ministry, if Mr. Kiossivanov forms it, will be his eighth consecutive Cabinet in less than four years.

CROATIAN LEADER BEATEN TO DEATH

OCT 24 1939

Killed by Gang as Violence Flares in New State.

ZAGREB, Yugoslavia, Oct. 23 (A. P.).—One political leader was killed today as political violence flared again in the newly formed autonomous Croat State.

Peter Vratar, commander of the armed Peasants' Protective Society at Pakrao, was beaten to death by an unidentified gang. Vratar was a follower of Vladimir Macek, head of the Croatian Peasant Party.

The killing followed the Croatian authorities' recent suppression of the Sokol youth organization as too Serbian in character. At one place the Sokol headquarters was burned. Croatian autonomy is the result of a compromise after long Serb-Croat conflict within the Yugoslav State.

300 Inventions a Week Offered Britain for War

OCT 24 1939

'Secret' Hitler Weapon Causes Deluge of Defense Schemes

LONDON, Oct. 23 (AP).—Three hundred inventions a week, designed to help Great Britain win the war, are being sifted by a special department of scientists, the Ministry of Supply announced tonight. Most of the inventive ideas are concerned with Adolf Hitler's "secret weapon."

"The conceptions include a monster projectile of incredible proportions," the statement said, "which it is alleged would wipe out an entire town." It also told of "a device which it was said would invade the British Isles with a plague of locusts."

Every suggestion is carefully examined, the ministry went on, for "the germ of some important device." Most were said to be valueless, such as suggestions for body armor. However, details were withheld by the ministry, "owing to the risk of information leaking through to the enemy."

SOFIA, OCT. 23-(AP)-BULGARIA'S FIVE-DAY POLITICAL CRISIS ENDED TONIGHT WITH THE FORMATION OF A NEW GOVERNMENT ALMOST IDENTICAL TO THE LAST, WITH 50-YEAR-OLD GEORGE KIOSSEIVANOFF AGAIN HOLDING THE JOINT ROLE OF PREMIER AND FOREIGN MINISTER.

League Of Nations Reports Their Exports Dropped 54 To 27 Per Cent. Last Month

[By the Associated Press]

Geneva, Oct. 23—A League of Nations bulletin giving the first general statistical study of how the world has been affected by the European war showed today that Switzerland and Holland were the greatest neutral sufferers.

Swiss exports in September, as compared to August, dropped fifty-four per cent. and Holland's twenty-seven per cent., the bulletin said. The Swiss franc and the Netherlands' florin, however, held strong with the United States dollar, the Belgian belga and South American currencies through September, while the British pound, French franc and Japanese yen dropped.

Import and export figures for Italy and Germany were not given for August and September.

China Shows Biggest Increase

China led the rest of the world in increases in both imports and exports with what the bulletin called "astounding rises" of forty-two per cent. for imports and twenty-six per cent. for exports.

The bulletin did not explain the rise in Chinese figures, which compared August and September with June and July.

Next to China in export gains was the United States' thirteen per cent. increase in September over August. Argentina showed a gain of seven per cent. and Japan three per cent.

KERMIT ROOSEVELT JOINING TOMMIES

OCT 24 1939

Has Second Lieutenancy in British Army.

LONDON, Oct. 23 (A. P.).—Kermit Roosevelt, son of President Theodore Roosevelt, is expected to join a British Army regiment in a few days under an emergency Second Lieutenant's commission.

Friends said today that Mr. Roosevelt, whose appointment was announced recently in the Official Gazette, was recovering from a slight illness. He was a Major in the British Army during the world war.

His assignment is with the Middlesex Infantry—the "Die Hards."

It was not disclosed immediately whether Mr. Roosevelt was becoming a British citizen. The War Office said regulations would not necessarily require that he be a subject under his special commission.

Military men explained that frequent procedure in the British Army in event of special commissions was to issue second lieutenancies and if the officer then was detached for a special job he was given the temporary rank that went with the job. An officer, for instance, might have a lieutenant's commission but get an assignment which carried the rank of temporary major.

BERLIN, Oct. 23 (A. P.).—The Government announced that it had agreed to the appointment of Saburo Kurusu as Japanese Ambassador to Berlin, succeeding Lieut.-Gen. Hiroshi Oshima, who has been recalled to Tokio.

Gen. Oshima was an ardent supporter of a military alliance of Japan, Germany and Italy. This project was frustrated when Germany signed her non-aggression pact with Russia, and Gen. Oshima made no secret of his disappointment over this development.

Mr. Kurusu, a former Consul at Chicago, has been Ambassador to Belgium since 1936.

Hundreds of top-hatted diplomats and society figures made North Station seem like the scene of a brilliant reception as the Ambassador said good-by. Virtually all French Cabinet ministers were present.

Neither the name nor the nationality of the suspect was given, but is was disclosed that he was a citizen of a belligerent nation.

MASTERS MUST SAY WHERE CARGOES GO

U. S. Orders Alien Skippers to Sign Under Oath.

WASHINGTON, Oct. 23 (A. P.).—The Treasury ordered the customs authorities today to obtain sworn affidavits from the masters of foreign ships regarding their intentions to transfer cargoes or stores to other vessels.

Affidavits will also be required of the owners, shippers or consignors of cargoes destined for foreign ports.

OCT 24 1939

If the masters of foreign-bound ships intend to transfer cargo or stores to other vessels on the high seas or in port they must list the goods to be transferred and to whom.

The oaths, required by the neutrality laws, are apparently intended to prevent illegal shipments of goods from the United States to belligerents under fake manifests.

Reported Sunk as a Derelict

WASHINGTO. Oct. 23 (AP).—The State Department has issued an affidavit of Gustav A. Anderson, of Evanston, Ill., a passenger on the Athenia, to the effect that the vessel did not sink immediately, but was sent to the bottom by British destroyers the next day as a derelict menace to ocean travel.

Anderson, who was questioned by three members of the House, said: "The ship did not sink immediately and not until the next day. I saw it some time before noon Monday (Sept. 4). I learned later that it was sunk by British destroyers, as it was a floating derelict."

TANKER SURVIVORS TELL OF SHELLING

One Seaman Killed but Nazi U-Boat Let 39 Others Flee the Emile Miguet

OCT 24 1939

BOSTON, Oct. 23 (AP)—Survivors of the huge French tanker Emile Miguet told today how a German submarine opened fire on their gasoline-laden vessel without warning, but then let the crew escape before torpedoing the ship.

Captain Robert Andrade and the thirty-eight other survivors of the Emile Miguet arrived here on the American rescue ship Black Hawk.

The tanker was about two days away from the French coast on Oct. 12 and dusk had just fallen when the first shell screamed overhead. Seven or eight other shells quickly followed.

"One struck the crew's quarters, almost cutting in half Joseph LeMaou, an 18-year-old apprentice seaman," Captain Andrade said.

LeMaou was the only one lost in the sinking.

"I hailed the submarine after the first burst of shell fire," Captain Andrade said, "and asked permission to take my men off before the ship was sunk. The German commander consented, and all thirty-nine of us crowded into the one lifeboat left after the shelling.

"We were packed in like sardines, but otherwise we suffered no particular discomfort during the more than thirty-one hours before the Black Hawk picked us up. We had plenty of food and water."

After the crew had taken to its single boat, the German raider swung across the Emile Miguet's bow before firing a torpedo that struck amidship. The tanker buckled in the middle, but still remained afloat.

Even then the Emile Miguet did not catch on fire immediately. Later that night the survivors saw a red glare light the sky.

The Emile Miguet left Corpus Christi, Texas, on Sept. 17.

"IT WAS A SERIOUS SETBACK BECAUSE IT REKINDLED THE COURAGE OF ALL BALKAN COUNTRIES WHICH AT FIRST WERE ALSO DISPOSED TO INITIATE 'CORDIAL' CONTRACTS WITH RUSSIA BUT WHICH LATER WERE VERY BADLY IMPRESSED BY THE KIND OF 'CORDIALITY' SHOWN BY THE SOVIET UNION TOWARD THE BALTIC COUNTRIES.

WILLIAMS

THE WAR TODAY

BY DEWITT MACKENZIE

DIPLOMATIC QUARTERS IN MOSCOW EXPRESS THE BELIEF THAT THE SOVIET MAY TAKE ADVANTAGE OF ENGLAND'S PREOCCUPATION WITH THE WAR AND TRY TO EXTEND RUSSIAN INFLUENCE INTO INDIA THROUGH THE BUFFER STATE OF AFGHANISTAN.

OCT 24 1939

PROBABLY COINCIDENTLY, BUT NONE THE LESS EMBARRASSING TO BRITAIN, IS THE SENSATIONAL POLITICAL ACTION TAKEN BY THE POWERFUL INDIA CONGRESS TO FORCE ENGLAND TO PLEDGE HERSELF TO INDIAN INDEPENDENCE AFTER THE WAR.

THE CONGRESS, OR NATIONALIST PARTY, UNDER THE LEADERSHIP OF MOHANDAS GHANDI, HAS ADOPTED THE EXTREME MEASURE OF CALLING ~~OF~~ on the EIGHT PROVINCIAL GOVERNMENTS WHICH IT CONTROLS TO RESIGN. SINCE THE CONGRESS DOMINATES ALL BUT THREE OF THE GOVERNMENTS OF BRITISH INDIA, RESIGNATIONS OF EIGHT WOULD MAKE PRETTY WELL A CLEAN SWEEP.

THIS POLITICAL UPHEAVAL, COUPLED WITH THE POSSIBILITY OF A FURTHER SOVIET EFFORT TO MAKE INDIA COMMUNISTIC, PRESENTS A REAL PROBLEM TO THE MOTHER COUNTRY, WHICH ALREADY HAS ITS HANDS FULL IN THE WAR WITH HERR HITLER.

EVER SINCE COMMUNISM ESTABLISHED ITSELF IN RUSSIA IT HAS DONE ITS UTMOST TO GROW THE "ISM" IN THIS NATIONALIST SOIL WITH SOME SUCCESS, THOUGH NOT WIDESPREAD, OWING TO THE VIGOROUS COUNTER-MEASURES OF THE BRITISH GOVERNMENT.

ACTUALLY THE RUSSIAN AMBITION TO DOMINATE INDIA ISN'T ORIGINAL WITH COMMUNISM, SINCE IT LONG WAS A CZARIST DREAM. AND AFGHANISTAN ALWAYS WAS REGARDED AS THE GATEWAY TO THIS MYSTERIOUS LAND WHERE THE PRINCES ARE SO RICH THAT MONEY AND JEWELS CEASE TO HAVE A MEANING.

FOR CLOSE TO A CENTURY THE BRITISH ATTITUDE TOWARD THE PRIMITIVE COUNTRY OF AFGHANISTAN HAS BEEN CONTROLLED BY THE RELATION OF THAT COUNTRY TO A POSSIBLE INVASION OF INDIA BY RUSSIA. IN ORDER TO PREVENT AFGHANISTAN FROM FALLING UNDER CZARIST INFLUENCE THE AFGHAN WARS OF 1838 AND 1878 WERE WAGED.

OCT 24 1939

ANGLO-AFGHAN RELATIONS NOW ARE CORDIAL AND AFGHANISTAN IS GENERALLY REGARDED AS LYING WITHIN THE BRITISH SPHERE OF INFLUENCE.

SOME FIFTEEN YEARS AGO THE BOLSHEVISTS DID UNDERTAKE PENETRATION OF AFGHANISTAN. THE BRITISH CHARGE THAT THE PURPOSE OF THIS WAS TO MAKE IT POSSIBLE FOR RUSSIA TO ATTACK INDIA.

THE BOLSHEVISTS GAVE LARGE SUBSIDIES TO AFGHANISTAN. TELEGRAPH LINES WERE ERECTED, HIGHWAYS WERE BUILT AND AN AIRFORCE WAS DEVELOPED. THIS SUCCESS WAS INTERRUPTED, HOWEVER, AT THE END OF 1925 WHEN THE BOLSHEVISTS CAPTURED AN AFGHAN POST. THE TROUBLE ENDED IN A TREATY OF FRIENDSHIP, BUT THE EXTENSIVE RED PENETRATION WAS STOPPED. NOW IT MAY BEGIN AGAIN.

THE DANGER OF ANY ARMED INVASION OF INDIA THROUGH AFGHANISTAN IS

30.24-4233

30.24-4233

PROBABLY SLIGHT THESE DAYS. THERE ARE ONLY TWO GATES INTO THE EMPIRE THROUGH THAT MOUNTAINOUS REGION AND THEY ARE POWERFULLY GUARDED.

OCT 24 1939

ONE IS THE FAMOUS KHYBER PASS, ON THE NORTHWEST FRONTIER OF INDIA, AND THE OTHER IS VIA THE KANDAHAR ROUTE AND SOUTH-EASTERN AFGHANISTAN. ALEXANDER THE GREAT IS SAID TO HAVE USED THE KHYBER FOR HIS CONQUEST OF INDIA.

TIMES HAVE CHANGED, HOWEVER, AND THE GREAT ROCK-RIBBED KHYBER HAS BEEN MILITARIZED IN VERY RECENT YEARS, UNTIL IT IS DIFFICULT TO VISUALIZE AN ENEMY GETTING THROUGH.

OPPOSITE THE OTHER GATEWAY THE BRITISH HAVE CREATED A GREAT MILITARY STATION AT QUETTA. THIS IS ONE OF THE MOST IMPORTANT STRATEGIC POSITIONS OF THE WORLD, AND MANY MILITARY EXPERTS SAY IT BLOCKS ANY PASSAGE INTO INDIA HERE.

OCT 24 1939

SO THE CHIEF DANGER FROM THE BRITISH VIEWPOINT WOULD LIE IN THE POSSIBLE SPREAD OF COMMUNISM AT A MOMENT WHEN THERE IS STRONG AGITATION FOR SELF-GOVERNMENT IN BRITISH INDIA, WHICH IS THE PORTION DISTINCT FROM THAT GOVERNED BY THE NATIVE PRINCES.

NATURALLY IN A COUNTRY THE SIZE OF INDIA, WITH ITS POPULATION OF MORE THAN 350,000,000, THERE IS A CERTAIN AMOUNT OF SEDITION KNOCKING ABOUT. BECAUSE OF THIS THE GOVERNMENT OF INDIA HAS BUILT UP ONE OF THE MOST EXTENSIVE SECRET SERVICE NETWORKS THE WORLD HAS KNOWN.

IN TIMES OF EMERGENCY THIS SERVICE COVERS EVERY NOON AND CRANNY OF INDIA. A SPREAD OF COMMUNISM, AGAINST WHICH THE GOVERNMENT HAS FOUGHT SO LONG, CERTAINLY WOULD BE CONSIDERED AN EMERGENCY.

I WALKED INTO THE OFFICE OF SIR CHARLES CLEVELAND, THEN HEAD OF THE SECRET SERVICE (CRIMINAL INVESTIGATION DEPARTMENT), IN SIMLA ONE EVENING, HAVING AN ENGAGEMENT FOR DINNER WITH HIM. HE REACHED OVER TO SOME PAPERS ON HIS DESK AND RECITED FROM ONE OF THEM VIRTUALLY EVERY MOVE I HAD MADE ALL DAY.

WHEN I EXPRESSED AMAZEMENT AT HIS KNOWLEDGE OF MY PRIVATE AFFAIRS, HE SAID:

OCT 24 1939

"I'M NOT HAVING YOU WATCHED. THAT IS A ROUTINE REPORT, LAID ON MY DESK A FEW MINUTES AGO BY ONE OF MY MEN. ALL VISITORS ARE DEALT WITH IN THE SAME WAY."

THAT'S HOW THOROUGHLY THE INDIAN SECRET SERVICE DRAGNET WORKS.

U. S. TO DEMAND SOVIET RELEASE SHIP; FINNS HALT MOSCOW NEGOTIATIONS; RIBBENTROP ASSAILS BRITAIN AS FOE

U. S. WILL MOVE FOR RELEASE OF CITY OF FLINT

OCT 25 1939

Believes Germans Had No Right to Take Vessel to a Neutral Port.

ASKS CREW'S WHEREABOUTS

Soviet Promises Complete Data---Roosevelt Says He's Received No Details Yet.

WASHINGTON, Oct. 24 (A.P.).—The American Government was expected today to demand that Russian release the freighter City of Flint which was taken into the Soviet harbor of Murmansk by a German crew.

It was reported in official quarters that the Government would base this request on the ground that Germany, in the absence of extraordinary circumstances, had no right to send the 4,963-ton vessel into a neutral port, regardless of any contraband she might have carried.

[A dispatch from Moscow said that Soviet Russia had promised the United States Government full information concerning the City of Flint as soon as the data could be made available. United States Ambassador Steinhardt was cordially received by Vladimir Potemkin, Soviet Vice-Commissar for Foreign Affairs, when he presented the American request.]

While this international aspect of the seizure of the American vessel was fast developing, the White House was represented to have taken the view that, in so far as domestic law is concerned, the City of Flint was on a "perfectly legal and lawful voyage."

U. S. Embassies Busy.

Stephen Early, presidential press secretary, explained that in making this statement he was speaking only of Ameri an laws and did not mean that Germany had no right under international law to seize the freighter.

The question of right of seizure—apparently supported by the Germans on their belief that contraband was aboard—was being investigated by the State Department.

The first move of the Government, however, will be to seek the release of the ship and her crew of forty-one, in command of Capt. Joseph Gainard. The City of Flint was captured by the German cruiser Emden as a prize of war last week. She was out of New York, bound to Glasgow, Liverpool and other English ports.

Already the American embassy at Moscow has asked the Soviet Government what became of the crew and at Berlin the American embassy sought an explanation of the seizure.

Roosevelt Discusses Seizure.

President Roosevelt said at his press conference late today that this Government still was trying to find out from Russia details about the seizure of the City of Flint but that no information had yet been received regarding the whereabouts of the crew. Asked whether a ship owned by the Government was in the same status as a private vessel, so far as seizure was concerned, the President said such a ship was virtually in that status. He added that the City of Flint was leased to the United States Lines.

He said there was nothing further he could say about the incident but that a report had been received from Ambassador Laurence Steinhardt in Moscow, the gist of which was that all the facts were not yet known in the Soviet capital about the seizure. Mr. Roosevelt added that Russia still was trying to obtain information and so was this Government.

To a question whether he had authority under existing law to order American ships away from war zones, Mr. Roosevelt replied in the negative. Another inquiry centered around whether he hoped to get the City of Flint back, and Mr. Roosevelt said he did.

He said he had first heard of the vessel's capture about noon yesterday, but could not recall the source of the information. Perhaps, he said, it was the Maritime Commission.

Hull's Press Conference.

Secretary Hull said at his press conference that no word had been received from any source about the crew or their whereabouts. Likewise, no word has come from the ship itself.

Mr. Hull said probably more than half the cargo of the City of Flint was conditional contraband. Only a limited portion of the cargo, he told reporters, could be called absolute contraband. He said the vessel carried 5,000 tons of goods of fifty different kinds.

The seizure of the vessel, Mr. Hull said, was a question of force, but he told reporters that this referred only to the manner in which the seizure was made. This left the impression that the fact that force was involved did not change the legal situation presently pertaining to the status of the ship.

Mr. Hull said the whole case now had become a subject for a prize court proceeding. In this respect it was pointed out that although a majority of the cargo might be only conditional contraband Germany might be able to allege that it was destined for Britain's armed forces or a British Government agency, in which case it would become absolute contraband.

Asked About British Seizures.

When asked what the British have done with regard to American vessels, Mr. Hull replied that the Black Diamond Line, an American company, complained that two of its ships had been sent into port and searched by the British. Two others of the Moore & McCormack Line also have been searched, he said, but no complaint has come from the owners. The Secretary said he believed that still another American ship had been searched in British ports.

The Black Diamond complaints, he said, had been taken up by the State Department with the British embassy here, and the question of facilitating the voyage of those vessels discussed.

Mr. Hull pointed out that as a general rule, this Government has reserved all its rights under international law so that it is free to take what action it sees fit in the future.

He was asked why a Government agency, the Maritime Commission, made an official statement on the seizure of the City of Flint, whereas none had been made in the case of the American ships searched by the British. He said there was no significance in this fact and added that the State Department did not go around looking for difficulties to settle.

The White House, like some legislators, apparently viewed the incident as strengthening the argument for amending the neutrality law.

Three Phases of Situation.

The situation as regards the City of Flint, Mr. Early said, divides itself into these three parts, in the White House view:

1. She was on a perfectly legal and lawful voyage under existing laws.

2. Under the neutrality act requested of Congress she could not have sailed on that voyage to a belligerent port.

3. The State Department has sent cablegrams asking its representatives at various points abroad to develop the facts and report. The reports now are being awaited.

In requesting Russia, as a neutral, to release the ship and crew, unless such conditions as storm, lack or provisions or a break down of machinery forced her into port, the American Government will rest its case on a traditional American attitude.

Hague Convention Involved.

Russia, on the other hand, may rely upon Article 23 of the 1907 Hague Convention on Neutrality to enable her to contest the probable United States claim. This article stated that "a neutral power may allow prizes to enter its ports and roadsteads, whether under convoy or not, when they are brought there to be sequestrated pending the decision of a prize court. It may have the prize taken to another of its ports.

"If the prize is convoyed by a warship, the prize crew may go on board the convoying ship.

"If the prize is not under convoy the prize crew are left at liberty."

When the United States ratified the Hague Convention it specifically declined to accept Article 23.

Russia, therefore, may claim that the City of Flint can be detained in port until a German prize court decides her fate, but the United States will say that such detention is illegal.

The American position, laid down by statements and decisions of both the executive and judicial departments, is that granting a belligerent the right to sequestrate prize ships taken to neutral ports would give him a great assistance if he were unable for any reason to take his prize ships to his own ports.

Case of the Appam Recalled.

Such is the case with Germany which was clearly unable, because of the British blockade in the North Sea, to take the City of Flint to a German port.

The most celebrated case decided by the United States Supreme Court on this point was quoted by experts today as that of the British steamship Appam, which was captured by the German raider Moewe in 1916 and sent into Hampton Roads, Va., with a prize crew aboard. Also aboard the ship were the crews of seven other vessels which the Moewe had sent to the bottom.

As a result of a suit for the release of the boat filed by the British Government, the case came before the Supreme Court which decided that the ship must be released together with the various crews.

The State Department began today assembling all possible details of the incident, but there appeared to be an understanding that Germany must have considered that the City of Flint—one of the rescue ships in the Athenia disaster—was carrying contraband to Great Britain.

Meanwhile, the Maritime Commission said that "several" American merchant ships now are being detained for search by the British.

"This has been going on ever since the start of the war and it is perfectly legal," a spokesman said.

Cargoes Removed by British.

Recently, it was said, the British held up for search more than 100 neutral vessels. These vessels were released after being searched, but in some instances the British removed cargo falling within their contraband lists. Cargoes have been removed from at least two American vessels and the ships allowed to continue on their way.

Commission officials said that unofficial reports indicated that two of the American vessels now being detained by the British are the Black Falcon and the Black Condor, operated by Black Diamond Lines.

The American Government has not recognized the contraband lists of any of the nations now at war and has taken the position that American flag ships may carry anything except arms, ammunition and implements of war, forbidden by the present neutrality act.

The British and German contraband lists are so extensive that they include almost anything which might help the other in war.

International law provides for examination and detention of a neutral ship believed to be carrying contraband. If 51 per cent or more of the City of Flint's cargo were held by a German prize court to be contraband, the ship could be condemned and would become German property.

On the freighter, the Maritime Commission said, were such items as tractors, lard, cereals, canned goods, flour, apples, wax, lubricating oil, cotton, sewing machines, plows, asphalt, pitch, grease, machinery, silk, commercial chemicals, disinfectants, feathers, rags, coffee, lumber, gauze, hair and wallboard.

The fact that the City of Flint was taken to a neutral port rather than to Germany complicated the situation, in the belief of legal experts. They said that only exceptional circumstances—bad weather, need of repairs or lack of supplies—warranted such an action.

The neutral country ordinarily tells the prize crew to move the ship along after the repairs are made or supplies taken. Otherwise, the vessel and her prize crew are interned, but the original crew must be released and permitted to return home.

Russia Promises Full Data.

MOSCOW, Oct. 24 (A. P.).—Soviet Russia today told the United States Government that full information would be furnished as soon as available concerning the American steamship City of Flint, which was captured by a German sea raider and sent to a Soviet arctic port.

United States Ambassador Laurence A. Steinhardt, in an interview with Vladimir Potempkin, Vice-Commissar for Foreign Affairs, asked for details of the ship's capture and the fate of the forty-one members of her crew.

His interview was described as cordial and he was promised information as soon as obtainable from Murmansk where a German prize crew took the vessel as a war captive.

One theory advanced here was the Germans had stopped another neutral vessel at sea after seizing the City of Flint on the grounds that she was carrying contraband to England, and put the American crew aboard the other vessel.

However, it was stated at Tromso, Norway, that the City of Flint still had its American crew aboard when she left the Norwegian port Saturday.

Speculation on Nazi Procedure.

Diplomats speculated on why the German prize crew put into a Soviet port, knowing that under international law they would be interned.

One theory was that the Germans hoped Russia would purchase the cargo of the City of Flint and then reship it into Germany in a Russian boat.

Another explanation was that the Germans had been pursued by a British warship.

The German embassy said it had no report on the incident, but that Soviet officials were "perfectly correct" in interning the German crew.

Murmansk is Russia's northernmost port which is not icebound in winter. The Bremen, German liner, is understood to be there.

Russia Pledges Full Details to U.S. on the Flint

Steinhardt Sees Potemkin; Soviet Officials Surprised by Freighter's Arrival

30-24-4235

30.24-4235

MOSCOW, Oct. 24 (AP).—Arrival of the American vessel City of Flint in a Soviet port as a war captive with a German prize crew in command confronted Russian officials with a knotty and ticklish problem in international law tonight.

United States Ambassador Laurence A. Steinhardt was assured by Vladimir Potemkin, Vice-Commissar for Foreign Affairs, that full information would be furnished as soon as it was available concerning the captured 4,963-ton vessel.

The Embassy pressed inquiries into the fate of the crew and of the cargo of tractors, grain, fruit, leatheran d wax which she was said to be carrying for England.

Steinhardt described his interview with Potemkin as cordial, and said he was promised details as soon as obtainable from Murmansk, where the City of Flint was taken, flying the German flag.

Delay of a day or two was expected, since there are no foreign consulates at Murmansk, Russia's northernmost port which is not ice-bound in winter. The German liner Bremen also is understood to be at Murmansk, about 200 miles north of the Arctic Circle.

The German prize crew was interend by Russian officials on reaching Murmansk, an act which the German Embassy said was "perfectly correct," although embassy officials said they had no report on the incident.

Foreign sources here said they believed the Russians were as surprised as any one when the City of Flint put in, flying a German flag, and that they probably were embarrassed by the situation.

OCT 25 1939

The Soviet Foreign Office was said to be studying the numerous complicated points of international law arising from the incident. There was considerable speculation here as to why the German crew put into a Russian port, knowing that under international law they would be interned. One theory was that they had been pursued by a British warship. Another was that the Germans hoped Russia would purchase the City of Flint's cargo and then reship it to Germany in a Russian boat.

There was some speculation here that the Germans might have stopped another neutral vessel at sea, after seizing the City of Flint on the ground that she was carrying contraband to England, and put the captured crew aboard her. This was discounted, however, in view of reports from Norway that the American crew was on board there.

City of Flint Taken to Murmansk Under Nazi Flag After Being Grabbed by Cruiser Emden—Had Saved 38 Britons Earlier.

BERLIN, Oct. 24 (A. P.).—The United States embassy was instructed today to make informal inquiry of the German Government as to the seizure of the American steamship City of Flint.

OCT 25 1939

The method of presenting this inquiry had not yet been determined. It would cover the vessel's whereabouts and other details.

Authoritative sources said the War Ministry was investigating the City of Flint case, but there was no confirmation of its seizure by the German Navy nor word of its whereabouts.

Two Raiders at Large.

OSLO, Oct. 24 (A. P.).—The capture of the American steamship City of Flint and the sinking of the 5,044-ton British freighter Stonegate gave evidence today that at least two fast, powerful German warship raiders were ranging far outside Great Britain's naval blockade.

Reliable informants who talked with survivors of the Stonegate quoted them as saying that their ship had been torpedoed by the pocket battleship Deutschland in the mid-Atlantic about ten days ago.

OCT 25 1939

Norwegian officials said that the City of Flint, which called at Tromso, Norway, with a German prize crew in command and there landed the thirty-eight Stonegate survivors, had been captured by the cruiser Emden, a namesake of the famous German commerce raider of the world war.

The City of Flint picked up the crew of the Stonegate out of their life boats in the Atlantic shortly before she in turn was captured by the Germans.

[A dispatch from London quoted an Admiralty spokesman as saying that a report that the Deutschland had slipped through the British blockade and sunk the Stonegate, lacked confirmation. Naval men said, however, that the combined navies of the world could not completely blockade the Baltic, and that on a dark or stormy night ships could pass within 100 yards of each other without being detected.]

Shipping Circles Worried.

After leaving Tromso at the request of Norwegian authorities the German prize crew took the American ship to the Russian arctic port of Murmansk. Russian officials immediately interned the German crew and detained the City of Flint.

These two reports of German surface raiders in one day brought new worries to harried shipping circles, which recalled the havoc wrought by German raiders during the world war, particularly the Emden and the famous See Adler.

Another German pocket battleship, the Admiral Scheer, has been reported in the South Atlantic. Some of the crew of the British freighter Clement said that the Admiral Scheer sank their ship near South America on September 30.

The Deutschland and Admiral Scheer are of 10,000 tons, capable of twenty-six knots and carrying six eleven-inch guns and eight torpedo tubes. The third vessel of this class is the Admiral Graf Spee.

Captured by Emden.

TROMSO, Norway, Oct. 24 (A. P.).—The American steamship City of Flint, captured by the German cruiser Emden as a contraband carrier after the steamship had rescued thirty-eight British seamen from the torpedoed British freighter Stonegate, left for Murmansk in charge of a prize crew of seventeen after having landed the Stonegate survivors here Friday night and taken on fresh water.

According to a report received here from Tass, the Soviet news agency, the 4,963-ton City of Flint, owned by the United States Maritime Commission, was boarded while en route from New York to Manchester, England. Tass said the ship was carrying a 3,700-ton cargo of tractors, grain, fruit, leather and wax.

The Tass report did not specify where or when the vessel had been halted, and said nothing of the whereabouts of the crew.

The forty-one sailors of the City of Flint were still aboard the vessel when she disappeared Saturday evening, bound for Murmansk, where she arrived Sunday night.

Authorities here expressed belief that the American crew would be sent home from the Russian port.

The City of Flint was flying the German flag when she reached Tromso.

OCT 25 1939

British Sailors Landed.

Permission was granted the commander of the prize crew to land the Stonegate seamen, who later were sent to England by way of Bergen after the British consul here provided them with clothing.

The prize crew also was permitted to take on water in accordance with international law covering seized ships taken to neutral ports.

Norwegian authorities ordered the City of Flint's captors to take her out of territorial waters within twenty-four hours and a torpedo boat escorted her beyond the three-mile limit Saturday morning. She stood by, however, until the late evening when she disappeared in the north.

The survivors from the Stonegate said they had had only a few minutes to leave their own ship before she was torpedoed. They were exhausted from their long battle with the North Atlantic when their lifeboats were picked up by the City of Flint.

The picking up of the Stonegate's survivors was the City of Flint's second act of mercy since the European war started. She carried 220 survivors of the sunken British liner Athenia to Halifax. The Athenia was sunk September 3.

Course Not Known Here.

The course of the City of Flint in the few days before her capture was not known in the United States.

An official of the New York Maritime Register said today he felt sure that she never reached an English port after sailing from New York. She was scheduled to call first at Manchester and then go on to Liverpool and Glasgow. She did not reach Manchester, where she was expected about October 15.

The meager information led shipping men to believe that the City of Flint was near the British coast—probably in submarine-infested waters—when the German craft overtook her. She left Tromso, Norway, about 6:30 P. M., Saturday, and then had to skirt more than 300 miles of Norway's northern coast to reach Kola Bay.

The City of Flint, built at Hog Island in 1920, was commanded by Capt. Joseph A. Gainard, who has had plenty of excitement at sea.

He was a junior officer on the American transport President Lincoln when she was torpedoed and sunk by a German submarine during the world war.

He was master of the Maritime Commission's freighter Algic when crew difficulties held her at Montevideo, Uruguay, two years ago. Fourteen members of the crew were convicted at Baltimore on charges of endeavoring to make a revolt.

3 British Ships Sunk 80 Miles From Gibraltar

OCT 25 1939

U. S. Freighter Saves 36 Off Two; Scottish and Greek Vessels Also Lost

By The Associated Press

GIBRALTAR, Oct. 24.—Three British freighters were sunk today in the vicinity of Gibraltar. They were the Menin Ridge, 2,474 tons; the Tafna, 4,413 tons, and the Ledbury, 3,528 tons.

While details of the sinkings were not immediately divulged, an authoritative source said they occurred about eighty miles west of the Rock of Gibraltar.

U. S. Ship Rescues 36

WASHINGTON, Oct. 24 (AP).—The Maritime Commission announced today that the steamship Crown City of the government-owned American Pioneer Line, had rescued thirty-six members of the crews of two British freighters in the North Atlantic. The commission said the rescue brought to more than 700 the number of survivors picked up by American ships since the start of the European war.

A message from Capt. W. E. Carley on the Crown City said the vessel had aboard five survivors from the steamship Menin Ridge and that twenty-two members of the crew of that vessel had been lost. The other thirty-one rescued were survivors from the steamship Ledbury and composed that ship's entire crew.

OCT 25 1939

The Crown City, which is operated by the Roosevelt Steamship Company, Inc., for the commission, sailed from New York for India on Oct. 11. At noon yesterday she was about 2,957 miles east of New York.

The report from the Crown City did not disclose the nature of the trouble in which the two British freighters were involved, nor the spot of rescue. It was indicated, however, that this must have been in the vicinity of a point about 260 miles from Gibraltar.

Scottish Ship Sunk

LONDON, Oct. 24 (AP).—The 7,256-ton Scottish ship Clan Chisholm was reported in Glasgow tonight to have been sunk. A Clan Line steamer registered in Glasgow, she was launched in 1937. Details of the sinking were not available.

Fifteen members of the crew of the 5,962-ton Greek steamer Konstantinos Hadjipateras, including the captain, landed at an English port in lifeboats today, reporting that their ship had been sunk early today by a submarine in the North Sea. The captain reported that three members of the crew and the Engineer were missing.

Ship Out of Boston Lost

BOSTON, Oct. 24 (AP).—Local agents expressed surprise today at the sinking of the Konstantinos Hadjipateras by a submarine, asserting they understood the vessel was under convoy by British warships.

The freighter was almost a month in this port, and trouble with her crew, who objected to entering the war zone, delayed her sailing until Oct. 5. Three seamen were missing when finally she sailed, and the agents were required to post $3,000 in bonds with immigration authorities.

The freighter carried 8,200 tons of scrap metal for Tyne, England, and was in command of Capt. George Halkias.

OCT 25 1939

Deutschland a Raider

An Associated Press dispatch from Tromsoe, Norway, last night said that the American freighter City of Flint, seized by a German cruiser, had put ashore at Tromsoe on Friday with thirty-eight crew members of the torpedoed 5,044-ton British freighter Stonegate.

According to the survivors of the Stonegate, their vessel was torpedoed a week ago by the 10,000-ton German "pocket battleship" Deutschland. They said they had had only a few minutes to leave their ship before she was torpedoed, and were in an exhausted condition when picked up by the City of Flint.

The sinkings reported yesterday brought the total of merchant vessels sunk since the start of the war to ninety, an aggregate of 399,319 tons, with 1,774 lives lost. Great Britain has lost forty-five ships, totaling 219,805 tons. The sinking of a Greek freighter brought neutral losses to twenty-nine ships, twenty of which were Scandinavian, while the French have lost six and the Germans ten ships.

The largest commercial vessel sunk so far is the 14,115-ton French tanker Emile Miguet, which went down Oct. 15 off the French coast. The largest passenger vessel to have been sunk is the 13,581-ton liner Athenia, which went down off Scotland on Sept. 3 with a loss of 113 lives.

Greek Vessel Also Sent Down—U. S. Ship Picks Up 36 Survivors

[By the Associated Press]

New York, Oct. 24—Four more British merchantmen and a Greek vessel heavily laden with scrap iron were sunk today as intense diplomatic exchanges arose over the German seizure of the American freighter City of Flint.

Also disclosed today was the sinking of a fifth British merchantmen more than a week ago.

Loss of the five British ships sent England's toll to forty-five and the losses of all nations to ninety ships. Tonnage losses of all nations rose to 399,319, exclusive of millions of dollars' worth of cargoes, the total known loss of life was 1,774.

Worst Day For British

As far as it could be learned from the usually reticent British sources it was the worst day they had suffered since the war began.

Germany indicated a new phase in her U-boat campaign by sinking in succession three British ships near the strongly fortified Strait of Gibraltar.

These ships, the Menin Ridge, 2,474 tons; Tafna, 4,413 tons, and Ledbury, 3,528 tons, apparently were part of a British convoy.

Rescued 36

The American freighter Crown City radioed Washington she had rescued the entire crew of thirty-one from the Ledbury and had picked up five survivors from the Menin Ridge. The message said twenty-two men were lost from the Menin Ridge.

No report was made on the survivors of the Tafna and such was the case in the destruction of the Scottish freighter Clan Chisholm, 7,256 tons. Glasgow officials announced she had gone down but gave no details.

Sunk In Mid-Atlantic

Sinking of the British Stonegate was revealed in the City of Flint affair. Official sources said the German pocket battleship Deutschland sank her in mid-Atlantic about ten days ago. The City of Flint rescued thirty-eight seamen and they were landed at Tromso, Norway, by the prize crew which took over the City of Flint.

The Greek vessel Konstantinos Hadjipateras, 5,962 tons, was sunk by a submarine in the North Sea while carrying 8,200 tons of scrap iron from Boston to Tyne, England. Fifteen of the crew escaped to the English coast. Four were lost including an English pilot.

OCT 25 1939

Boston agents expressed surprise over the loss of the Greek ship. They said it had been part of a British convoy.

Neutrals' losses in the war rose to twenty-nine. The French have lost six ships and the Germans ten. Twenty Scandinavian ships are among the neutral losses.

American merchantmen have been halted by British warships and taken to British ports.

OCT 25 1939

There their papers have been scrutinized and their cargoes searched for contraband. Some contraband destined for Germany has been seized, but it is understood here that the British Government is paying for it.

One merchant ship, the Wacosta, returning to this side early in September, reported that she had been stopped by a German submarine and searched. The submarine commander was reported to have given a general warning that American ships which did not stop after being signaled by German submarines would be fired upon.

All cases have been studied by the State Department, but no diplomatic representations have been made about them. The department also has been studying the contraband lists published by Britain and Germany, but has found nothing to which it has objected.

Likewise, the department has passed on to port authorities and shipping companies the various warnings received from both sides on submarine activities, mine fields and so forth. Germany has warned against suspicious behavior by neutral vessels, such as accepting convoy by British or French warships, sailing without lights and zigzagging.

Among incidents in the City of Flint case which have drawn the attention of officials was the report that the vessel was sailed under a German flag after her capture. If the German prize crew did run up the German flag, replacing the American flag, they acted contrary to a custom followed by the United States.

Formal instructions to the American Navy, issued in 1917, state that "if the prize is a neutral vessel, the neutral flag shall be flown as usual until she is adjudged to be a lawful prize by a competent court. The flag of the United States shall be exhibited at the fore to indicate that she is for the time in the possession of officers of the United States."

CANADA ASSURES U. S. ON ATHENIA

Denies Liner Carried Arms as Cargo or Stores.

OCT 25 1939

WASHINGTON, Oct. 24 (A. P.).—The Canadian Government gave the United States a formal assurance today that the British liner Athenia, sunk on September 3 while en route from England to the United States, carried no guns, ammunition or munitions of war, either as cargo or as stores.

The assurance, contained in a note to Secretary of State Hull from the Canadian Minister, Loring C. Christie, was based on assurances from the Donaldson-Atlantic Line, owners of the Athenia. German Propaganda Minister Goebbels charged that the Athenia had carried guns for use in Canada.

An American passenger aboard the boat, Gustav A. Anderson of Evanston, Ill., filed an affidavit with the State Department stating that the chief officer of the Athenia had told him that the vessel was carrying coast defense guns for Canada and other guns with which she was to have been fitted out as a raider on the return voyage.

Crew Deserting Columbus at Vera Cruz.

BRUSSELS, Oct. 24 (A. P.).—Belgians returning from the Congo today on the steamship Elizabethville reported having seen five German ships in refuge at the Belgian Congo port of Bomba, where they were said to have fled from the French submarine Surcouf.

[The 4,300-ton Surcouf is reported to be the largest submarine in the world. Completed in 1934, she is 361 feet long. The Surcouf was reliably reported on October 5 to have been the French raider which a Paris communique said had seized a German merchant ship 1,100 miles out in the Atlantic. She had a cruising radius of 12,000 miles.]

The Belgians also said they were held five days by the British contraband control in Weymouth, England, where they reported seeing 200 other ships.

MEXICO CITY, Oct. 24 (A. P.).—Several members of the crew of the German liner Columbus, which has been anchored in Mexican waters southeast of Vera Cruz since the outbreak of the European war, were reported today to have deserted because of conditions on board.

Foreign intelligence agents, who have been watching the ship, said that food supplies were running low. The crew has been granted shore leave.

Nazi Warship Called Captor Of U. S. Vessel

Emden and Deutschland, Past Blockade, Sank British Ship, Norway Hears

TRONDHEIM, Norway, Oct. 24 (AP).—A new saga of the seas in wartime—raids by two swift German men-of-war and the capture of the American freighter City of Flint by one or both of the pair—was only partly unfolded tonight in varying stories by a British sailor and Norwegian officials.

The sailor, captured and then released by the Germans, said his ship, the 5,044-ton Stonegate, was sunk by the German "pocket battleship" Deutschland, after leaving Valparaiso, Chile. Then, he said, the Deutschland, which apparently had eluded the British blockade, headed northward in the Atlantic and seized the City of Flint on the ground she was carrying contraband.

OCT 25 1939

From Norwegian officials, however, came the story that the City of Flint, now in a Russian harbor, had been captured by the German cruiser Emden, which also was reported to have run the British blockade. The possibility that both the eutschland and the Emden had been involved was mentioned, however.

Sailor's Version

The British sailor's tale began with the departure of the Stonegate from Valparaiso and, still unfinished, progresses thus:

The Stonegate, after calling at Panama, picked up survivors of an unidentified British steamer, which had been torpedoed with the loss of fifteen men.

Six days out of Panama, the Stonegate was halted and sunk by the Deutschland, which took the British aboard.

The Deutschland then headed northward and captured the City of Flint, taking along the British prisoners.

The Flint wandered past Greenland through ice and snow, and came on Friday night to Tromsoe, Norway, where she dropped the British crews, totaling thirty-eight.

Americans in Russia

That was the story told by the British sailor when a boat carrying him and his colleagues from Tromsoe to Bergen stopped here.

The Germans then took the City of Flint to a Russian port in Kola Bay, where the ship was interned by the Russians and where the American crew of forty-two presumably was awaiting arrangements to be transported home, probably from the port of Murmansk. Exact disposition of the Americans was uncertain, however.

A representative of the American consulate at Trondheim boarded the boat and talked with Capt. Randall of the Stonegate, but neither made a statement.

Other sources said the German cruiser Emden participated in the seizure of the City of Flint, indicating a widespread German patrol in the Atlantic—a possibility which greatly concerned shipping circles in the neutral Scandinavian countries.

OCT 25 1939

At Tromsoe Friday Night

TROMSOE, Norway, Oct. 24 (AP).—Flying the German flag, the American freighter, City of Flint, in the hands off a German prize crew of seventeen, put into Norwegian waters off Tromsoe Friday night to land thirty-eight seaman from the torpedoed British freighter Stonegate.

The commander of the prize crew asked Norwegian permission to land the thirty-eight Stonegate survivors. He classified them as prisoners of war. This permission was granted, and the Stonegate seamen were landed. The British sailors later were sent to England by way of Bergen fater the British consul here provided them with clothing. The prize crew also was permitted to take on water, in accordance with international law covering seized ships taken to neutral ports.

Norwegian authorities ordered the City of Flint's captors to take her out of territorial waters within twenty-four hours, and a torpedo boat escorted her beyond the three-mile limit Saturday morning. She stood by, however, until the late evening, when she disappeared in the north.

The survivors from the Stonegate said they had had only a few minutes to leave their own ship before she was torpedoed. They were exhausted from their long battle with the North Atlantic when their lifeboats were picked up by the City of Flint.

DECLARES BRITAIN FORCED CONFLICT; ABSOLVES FRENCH

Says Nazis Did Not Strike Until Attack Was Made by Poles.

OCT 25 1939

SECURITY IS WAR AIM

Safety of Reich Must Be Assured for All Time, Danzigers Are Told.

Danzig, Germany, Oct. 24.—(AP)—Adolf Hitler's Foreign Minister told the world tonight that Germany now was determined to conduct the war against Britain and her allies to the bitter finish and until the security of the German Reich in Germany was assured for all time.

Joachim von Ribbentrop characterized the war with the western powers as "completely senseless," but held that Britain and especially the Chamberlain Government had insisted upon having this war.

He denied the charge that Germany had broken her word; he asserted, with constant references to recent history, that every attempt by the Fuehrer to come to an understanding with Britain, France and Poland had been frustrated by the London Government.

Speaks to Fighters

The immediate audience for his 45-minute broadcast address was formed of veteran fighters of the Nazi party in this one-time free city, now incorporated in the Reich.

He declared that "in the truest sense of the word the war has been forced upon Germany."

Von Ribbentrop disclosed for the first time that only a few months after Hitler's assumption of power in 1933 a secret meeting had been arranged between the Fuehrer and French Premier Deladier to attempt to settle French-German difference. (Daladier was Premier from January to October, 1933.)

Says Daladier Ousted

The Foreign Minister asserted that at Britain's instigation the meeting was called off at the last minute by the French, and Daladier was ousted from the Premiership, because, as von Ribbentrop insisted, the British feared "the French front fighter and man of the people, Daladier, might find a real basis for agreement with front fighter and man of the people, Hitler."

The Nazi Foreign Minister said Hitler's policy from 1933 on was one of coming to terms with Britain on the following basis:

1. A naval agreement.
2. An eternal mutual guarantee of the inviolability of the borders of Belgium, the Netherlands and France.
3. German respect for Britain's imperial interests and British respect for German interests in Eastern Europe.
4. A protective and defensive British-German alliance, with a pledge of armed aid by Germany to the British Empire, with no such counter aid demanded of England.

Aim Pursued

Despite constant setbacks, Von Ribbentrop said, Hitler pursued his aim of British-German friendship with "unexampled vigor" because it corresponded both to his feelings for Britain and his racial views.

Only after a last attempt to win England's friendship had failed did he decide to ally himself with nations willing to declare their solidarity with Germany, he declared.

There ensued the Italian and Japanese and more recently the Soviet Russian friendship. The Soviet pact, he said, precluded any territorial divergencies between the two contracting parties.

New Orientation

German-Russian interests touched. Von Ribbentrop declared, but did not conflict. He said the pact with Moscow meant a new orientation of German foreign policy and a reversion to traditional friendship.

Turning to the United States, he said no country respected the Monroe Doctrine more than Germany.

On the whole American continent, he declared, Germany had no interests other than those of trade. Only a "sickly imagination" could construe any point of difference, he added.

The United States has nothing against Germany, Von Ribbentrop asserted, and Germany has nothing against the United States.

British colonies in the Americas, on the other hand, constitute a constant menace to the Monroe Doctrine, the Nazi official continued.

British Reaction

30-24-4237

He declared British reaction to the recent Panama conference decision to insulate the western world against the European war showed where the danger lurked.

(British naval spokesmen have said that it would be fore the belligerents to decide whether they must operate in the so-called safety zone established around the western hemisphere in the Panama declaration.)

Von Ribbentrop said it was "simply silly" to charge Germany with aiming at world domination. He declared that world domination no longer was possible.

Retorts to Charges

Retorting to British charges that Germany has broken her word, he countercharged that:

1. Britain broke her word to Italy in 1915.
2. She cheated the Arabs in the Near East.
3. She failed to live up to her pledge given to India in 1915.
4. She failed to pay her war debts to the United States.
5. She acted against the spirit of the Munich agreement of Sept. 29, 1938.

OCT 25 1939

It was absurd to hold either Danzig or Germany responsible for the conflict, Von Ribbentrop said. He added Germany and Danzig never more would be separated.

Says Poles Informed

When Adolf Hitler in 1934 arranged a new orientation of eastern Europe with Poland's late Marshal Josef Pilsudski, the Fuehrer left no doubt in the minds of the Poles that sooner or later Danzig and the Corridor problems must be solved, Von Ribbentrop said.

"Precisely a year ago, on Oct. 24, on instructions of Hitler, I received former Polish Ambassador to Germany Lipski at Berchtesgaden," he said. "On this day I presented to him the suggestion of political union of Danzig and the Reich, but with the provision that Danzig remain in the field of Polish economics.

"The proposal also envisaged extra-territorial automobile and rail connections to both separated Polish and German territories and provided recognition of frontiers for extension of the non-aggression pact of 1914 for a period of 25 years.

Proposals Repeated

"These proposals were repeated by the Fuehrer personally in my presence and that of Ambassador Moltke and Lipski to former Polish Foreign Minister (Jozef) Beck at Berchtesgaden on Jan. 15, 1939.

"The Fuehrer observed at this time that for no one but himself would it be possible to renounce the Corridor in such a manner. The next day in Munich, and on Jan. 26 in Warsaw, this offer was discussed in detail between Beck and myself.

"On these occasions, our proposals by no means were rejected by the Poles, but it was emphasized that in view of internal difficulties it would have to be examined most carefully and the Poles would attempt to improve German-Polish relations."

Von Ribbentrop said that "harassing of German nationals, Polish press attacks and anti-German demonstrations in front of the German Embassy in Warsaw" forced him to warn the Polish ambassador on March 21, 1939. At the same time, he said, he repeated the German offer of settlement and invited Beck to a conference for a "final settlement of all questions."

Proposals Rejected

On March 26, he said, he was presented with a rejection of Hitler's proposals.

"It hardly appears believable, and yet it is a fact," he said.

He continued that the Polish ambassador "told me any further pursuit of German plans regarding the political return of Danzig to the Reich meant war with Poland."

The invitation to Beck to go to Berlin also was rejected, Von Ribbentrop said.

"If at that time we regarded the Polish attitude as extraordinary in view of the Fuehrer's generous proposal, that mystery is cleared now—England was in the background," the Foreign Minister declared. "Today we know that already at that time negotiations with England for guarantees were under way."

Accuses Poles

Von Ribbentrop then described Polish mobilization on the border of the Reich, which he said up to then had not mobilized a single man. The Polish Ambassador in Berlin was informed of possible consequences of such action, he said, and then, when abuses to Germans in Bromberg occurred, Von Ribbentrop asserted, he told the Polish Ambassador that Germany not only viewed the events with regret but was obliged to observe that relations between the states were becoming worse.

He asserted the Reich held the Polish government responsible for the unfortunate turn of events.

"For six months, the extraordinary generous offer remained open and for an additional six months Germany watched as German nationals were terrorized, Danzig was threatened, and the Reich provoked," he said.

Attacks Charged

"Only after the Polish military started making inroads on German territory did the Fuehrer strike.

"Three weeks later, the campaign was ended and the Polish State fell together like a house of cards. Now the Reich will see to it that there be true liberation. Preservation of order and freedom in Eastern Europe is guaranteed from now on by Germany and Russia."

Reich Will Fight To End, Von Ribbentrop Asserts

Foreign Minister Warns England She Is "Playing Dangerously With The Fate Of Her Empire"

OCT 25 1939

[By the Associated Press]

Danzig, Oct. 24—Germany is determined to fight Britain to the bitter end and is supremely confident of victory, Joachim von Ribbentrop, Foreign Minister, told the world tonight.

In a ninety-minute address von Ribbentrop warned Britain that by continuing the war she was "playing dangerously with the fate of her empire."

"The present British Government may go down in history as the gravedigger of the empire," he told a group of veteran Nazi fighters which formed his immediate audience in this one-time free city, now incorporated in the Reich.

No Hint Of Compromise

The Nazi Foreign Minister let fall not a single hint of a possible compromise to end the war before the conflict at arms goes to its conclusion.

"Chamberlain refused the hand of the Führer stretched out in a gesture of peace," he shouted at the climax of his address.

"Now the German people takes up the challenge. The German people is ready and is determined to fight until the security of the German people is assured for all time.

"The German people is a solid block, defended by its army, air force and navy, which have just won bright laurels. The German people now will fight this war to the end.

Victory Guaranteed

"That this end will be a great German victory is guaranteed by the Führer."

On the continent of Europe, German borders now are final, Von Ribbentrop continued.

"The frontiers of the Reich, north, against England and France except the return of her former colonial possessions."

But in her determination to bring about a new era in eastern Europe, including calling home her minorities, Germany will brook interference from no quarter, he warned.

Speaks With Less Fire

Von Ribbentrop, making one of his rare public addresses, spoke with less fire than the better-known Nazi orators.

He spoke with great earnestness and care, however, giving an exact definition of Germany's present attitude toward the war.

That attitude, he emphasized repeatedly, is that Germany makes no retreat from the last stand taken by Adolf Hitler in his Reichstag speech of October 6, and that the war goes on to the destruction of the British Empire if necessary.

He uttered again the frequent Nazi assertion that Germany has sympathy for the position of France, which, Germans say, was dragged into the conflict by Britain.

At Peace With U. S.

Von Ribbentrop also asserted with great emphasis that no cause exists for conflict between Germany and the United States.

"Only diseased phantasy could even conceive of a question which could bring about trouble between these states," he asserted. "Germany wants only extensive trade on the American continent and it always respected the Monroe Doctrine.

"There is a greater possibility that England will come into conflict with the Monroe Doctrine because of her special interests on account of her possessions, fleet bases and coaling stations in the Western Hemisphere."

The English reserved attitude toward conclusions of the Panama conference, he added, already indicated the chances of England's challenge to the Monroe Doctrine.

"Germany's Last Word"

Political quarters tonight were calling von Ribbentrop's address "Germany's last word" on the war. They regarded it as the answer to Prime Minister Chamberlain's speech of October 12 when he said it would be impossible for Britain to accept any such basis for peace as Hitler proposed "without forfeiting her honor."

Hitler himself did not find it necessary to answer Chamberlain because he felt his attitude has been made as plain as possible in his last Reichstag address. At that time he proclaimed the exclusive German and Soviet Russian right to reshape and reorganize eastern Europe and asserted he had no war aims against Britain and France.

Von Ribbentrop said no more tonight but he gave sharp emphasis to Hitler's words.

Nazi Attitude Clear

Informed quarters declared Germany's attitude now was clear beyond any question of doubt and that it would be unnecessary to make a new statement of policy for a long time.

A large part of von Ribbentrop's address consisted of historical background to justify Germany's annexation of Danzig and occupation of Poland.

He said repeated efforts had been made to come to an understanding with Poland and that there were good prospects of an agreement until Britain started the negotiations which resulted in the British guarantee of Polish integrity.

"England was behind it," the Foreign Minister said.

Then he recalled that the Polish attitude toward Germany stiffened. He charged that abuse of German nationals and actual crossing of the German border by Polish troops made armed intervention an inescapable necessity.

Von Ribbentrop said Britain long planned war against Germany and that it failed to materialize after the Munich conference because British armament was not completed then.

For the first time, he disclosed that only a few months after Hitler came to power in 1933 a secret meeting was arranged between the Führer and Edouard Daladier, who served as Premier of France for ten months that year, to iron out French-German differences.

At Britain's instigation, he charged, the meeting was called off at the last minute by the French and Daladier was ousted from the Premiership, which he regained in April, 1938.

Motivated By Fear

He said Britain was motivated by a fear that "the French front fighter and man of the people, Daladier, ...ight find a real basis for agreement with the front fighter and man of the people, Hitler."

From 1933 on, he asserted, Hitler's policy pursued a fourfold policy of coming to terms with Britain. These terms he said were:

A naval agreement, an eternal mutual guarantee of the integrity of the borders of Belgium, the Netherlands and France; German respect for Britain's imperial interests and British respect for German interests in eastern Europe; and a protective and defensive British-German alliance.

Under the latter, he said, Germany would have pledged armed aid to the British Empire with no such counter-aid demanded of England.

The destruction of Germany, he charged, was the essential point of British policy.

He also accused Britain of a long succession of "historical breaches of faith," that she tricked Germany with the 1918 armistice, fooled Italy into a peace pact, betrayed the Arabs to the Jews and refused to pay the United States war debt.

New Attempt To Split Allies, Is London View

London, Oct. 24 (AP)—Official circles tonight stated German Foreign Minister Joachim von Ribbentrop's Danzig speech was another "clumsy attempt to divide Great Britain and France" and said it "introduced no new element into the situation."

A statement issued tonight said the speech apparently was designed "for internal consumption in Danzig and Germany."

OCT 25 1939

Von Ribbentrop, the statement added, "does not hesitate to spread falsehoods about the Prime Minister's policy at the time of Munich in 1938."

BERLIN STANDS FIRM ON HITLER OFFER OF PEACE

Official News Agency Bars Any Proposal But That of October 6.

VON RIBBENTROP TO SPEAK

Foreign Minister May Reply at Danzig to Chamberlain's Refusal of Fuehrer's Terms.

OCT 25 1939

BERLIN, Oct. 24 (A. P.).—The official German news agency, DNB, said emphatically today that the proposals contained in Adolf Hitler's Reichstag address of October 6 still constitute the only basis on which Germany will consider peace.

"As far as German peace conditions are concerned," DNB declared, "they are to be drawn exclusively from the Fuehrer's Reichstag speech in which he showed the world the way to peace."

Hitler, speaking at the close of the Polish campaign, said that Germany had no war aims in the West, but added that the Polish State never would be revived in its old form, and that only Soviet Russia and Germany had a legitimate right to reorganize Eastern Europe.

It Won't Be a Peace Offer.

The news agency made its assertion as diplomatic circles awaited with interest an address which Foreign Minister Joachim von Ribbentrop was scheduled to make at 8:15 o'clock tonight (2:15 P. M., New York time), before a war veterans' organization in Danzig.

In Government quarters it was said that Von Ribbentrop would make "an important contribution" to the trend of affairs in the European war, but gave no hint of the nature of this contribution.

The DNB statement, however, apparently eliminated the possibility that Hitler might have commissioned his Foreign Minister to make another peace gesture.

In the opinion of men who usually know, von Ribbentrop will devote himself chiefly to Great Britain. The address therefore may constitute Germany's first direct official reply to Prime Minister Chamberlain's speech of October 12 in effect rejecting Hitler's peace gestures.

Asserting that Great Britain had "brusquely rejected Hitler's outstretched hand . . . thereby clarifying the situation for us," DNB said:

"We have not the slightest reason to set up new conditions for a peace initiative on our part. The German conditions are those of the Fuehrer's Reichstag address, and we know of no others."

Puts Turkey in Poland's Place.

Dienst aus Deuchland, a commentary close to the Foreign Office, said that Turkey, having signed a mutual assistance pact with France and Great Britain, now found herself in a position resembling that occupied by Poland after she had joined the "encirclement front."

Poland's alliance with France and Britain, Dienst aus Deutschland said, forced Russia to assert her claim as an eastern European Power "quickly and energetically." Turkey, by a similar alliance, the commentary added, had disturbed the balance of power in the Balkans and transferred the tension from western Europe to the east.

Thereby, Dienst aus Deutschland asserted, Turkey "created mistrust among Powers with legitimate interests in this region—Germany, Russia and Italy."

House Had Questioned Amount Of Nazi Propaganda In America

Press Plays Up Capture Of City Of Flint—"U. S. Angry," It Says

[By the Associated Press]

London, Oct. 24—The British Government promised the House of Commons a "constant endeavor to secure the largest possible measure of publicity" in the United States today while newspaper placards reported the "U. S. A. angry" over German seizure of the steamship City of Flint.

Sir Edward Grigg, parliamentary secretary to the Ministry of Information, set forth the Government's publicity aims in reply to a question in Commons on the volume of "German propaganda" in America compared with the "shortage of information from British sources."

"I am aware that the demand in the United States of America for information regarding our war effort and purpose is still to a considerable extent unsatisfied," declared Sir Edward.

Propaganda Not Policy

"It is not the policy of the Ministry of Information to engage in propaganda activities in the United States of America, but every effort is being made to give American correspondents the fullest opportunity of studying and assessing our war activities.

"For the presentation of the British case in the United States of America the Ministry rely principally upon straightforward information; and although my noble friend, Lord MacMillan, Information Minister, is no longer himself responsible for the supply of news from Government sources, it will be his constant endeavor to secure the largest possible measure of publicity in the United States of America for such news as may be released by the departments concerned and for other information concerning the British war effort."

Laborite Poses Question

George Ridley, Laborite, had asked whether the Minister of Information "is aware that opinion in the United States of America is not adequately informed, through the medium of the American press, about the British war effort and purpose because of an absence of information from this country; whether he is aware of the volume of German propaganda circulated through the same medium, and what steps is he taking to correct the unsatisfactory state of affairs."

In the House of Lords, Lord Cobham, Under Secretary of War, announced that Britain had captured 110 German seamen and airmen as compared with only a "handful" of British airmen captured by Germany.

London newspaper headlines on the City of Flint seizure reported "Anger in the U. S. A." and "America Angry—Nazi Blunder."

U. S. Gets Good Press

In line with attempts to develop friendliness between the United States and Britain, the United States has received an unusually enthusiastic press in England lately.

Debate on neutrality legislation is followed closely.

One example of British press treatment was the way in which newspapers lyrically described the rescue of passengers of the British liners Yorkshire and City of Mandalay by the American steamer Independence Hall.

"The Yanks Are Coming"

Headlines told how the passengers sang "The Yanks Are Coming" when the Independence Hall appeared. Vanished from the daily press now are traces of the attitude of some isolationists and high-tariff journals which in depression days pictured Uncle Sam as a Shylock snarling over his unpaid notes.

On the home front A. T. Lennox-Boyd, parliamentary secretary to the Ministry of Home Security, answered a question on whether glucose works would have to close down because of decreased imports of corn from the United States by saying:

"Purchases have been made in South Africa and elsewhere, substantial shipments being on the way. Purchases will be continued from all possible sources."

Commenting on a report that the British freighter Stonegate had been sunk in the Atlantic by the German pocket battleship Deutschland, an Admiralty spokesman said there was "no present confirmation" that the Deutschland had evaded the British blockade and attacked the Stonegate.

Weather Factor Cited

It was said in naval circles, however, that the combined navies of the world would not be sufficient to establish a complete blockade on the Baltic. Officials said that on dark or stormy nights ships could pass within one hundred yards of each other without being detected.

A "rationing system" in Britain's trade dealings with neutral countries was revealed by a reliable source. It was said the aim was to prevent exports from reaching Germany.

The basis of the plan was applied in Britain's recent agreement with Russia to trade British tin and rubber for Russian timber. The exports of tin and rubber are based on Russia's normal peacetime requirements and there is an understanding that none of the supplies will go to Germany.

British Propaganda in U. S. to Be Increased.

LONDON, Oct. 24 (A. P.).—The Information Ministry promised the House of Commons today that constant efforts would be made "to secure the largest possible measure of publicity" in the United States."

The pledge was made in reply to a question on the volume of German propaganda in America compared with the shortage of information from British sources.

Sir Edward Craig, parliamentary secretary to the Information Ministry, said that "the demand in the United States for information regarding our war effort is still to a considerable extent unsatisfied," but that efforts were being made for more extensive publicity concerning British war activities.

Nazis Give Hans Frank Absolute Rule in Poland

To Govern Occupied Parts Not Incorporated in Reich

BERLIN, Oct. 25 (Wednesday) (AP).—A decree published in the government law gazette today placed the entire administrative power over Polish territory occupied by Germany but not incorporated in the Reich in the hands of Hans Frank.

Frank is to be known as the Governor General and is to be assisted by Arthur Seyss-Inquart, Governor of Austria, who was appointed Frank's deputy. Frank has been Governor of Poznan, a part of Poland that has been incorporated into the Reich.

OCT 25 1939

According to the decree, Frank is responsible directly to Fuehrer Adolf Hitler. Existing Polish laws are to remain effective so far as they do not conflict with administration of the country under German laws.

The Ministerial Council for National Defense, the director of the four-year plan and the Governor General are authorized to proclaim law by decree in the territory.

The cost of administration is to be borne by the occupied territory.

The decree is effective after withdrawal by Hitler of administrative powers of the military commander in Poland.

French Repulse Nazi Attacks

Still Hold German Village After Three Assaults by German Troops.

PARIS, Oct. 24 (A. P.).—French military commentators reported today that three German assaults on a German village held by French outposts in the Warndt Forest had been repulsed.

Patrol attacks on the village, which was not identified, coincided with increasing German pressure in the French lines last night, they said.

OCT 25 1939

It was emphasized that the action was localized, being one of a series of raids in which the Nazi troops were aiming at recovery of the few remaining portions of German soil held by the French.

Military dispatches said that the French also had made a raid, seizing a German post east of the Moselle River. Taking several prisoners and capturing a machine-gun. A French ambush north of Forbach brought the capture of a German lieutenant of artillery.

While the French strengthened their Moselle outposts near the Luxembourg border, the Rhine front was reported completely calm.

No Notable Action.

Military dispatches said that the French had long feared a possible German attempt to storm the frontier town of Apach and then to cross the Moselle westward to strike the Maginot defenses where they are admittedly the weakest.

German pressure after five days of almost dead calm on the Western front was reported last night—brisk skirmishes by small patrols along the northern, or Rhine-to-Moselle, flank—but apparently this activity developed no great momentum.

This morning's communique remarked succinctly: "No notable activity during the night."

[At Berlin the German High Command issued the following communique today: "No special fighting on the front."]

The French forces captured several German prisoners yesterday, dispatches said, and obtained "valuable" information concerning lines in the Saarland.

Meanwhile, on the home front Premier Daladier's decision to call Parliament about the middle of next month silenced some political grumbling. Parliament will consider the 1940 budget for another war year.

The Socialist leader, Leon Blum, whose writings on the subject of recalling Parliament have been trimmed by the censor, indicated that he would take up the matter of censorship when Parliament convenes. Writing in his newspaper, Le Populaire, M. Blum asserted that the whole French system of censorship could be junked "without the least damage." He demanded that the nation's publicity machine be turned to combatting German propaganda.

Finns Get New Soviet Demands

OCT 25 1939

Helsinki Announces Delegates Leave Moscow Tonight but Talks Will Go On.

HELSINKI, Oct. 24 (A. P.).—The Finnish delegation negotiating with Soviet Russia will leave Moscow tonight to return to Helsinki, bringing new written proposals from the Kremlin, a Finnish Government spokesman said today, adding that the return of the delegation headed by Dr. Juho Kusti Paasikivi, who had arrived in Moscow only yesterday, was "nothing alarming."

"They thought it best to come back to consult the Government," the spokesman said.

At the same time, he declared, that the negotiations would be continued, but whether by Dr. Paasikivi or through normal diplomatic channels it was not yet certain.

Neither the Finns nor the Russian officials have disclosed the status of the talks or the nature of Russia's demands.

Military Preparations.

Dr. Paasikivi, after preliminary conversations at Russia's invitation, returned here on October 15 with word of the Soviet demands. He and his party went back to Moscow yesterday and were closeted at the Kremlin for four and a half hours last night. This conference was the longest yet held.

The statement that the negotiations would be continued was greeted here with relief, but there was no relaxation in the military preparations of this little country fearful of infringement on her independence. Restrictions were tightened on travel in areas near the Russian border, and additional harbor districts were included in these regulations.

Helsinki maintained the optimistic air which has pervaded the capital since the Scandinavian kings pledged their moral support at the Stockholm meeting of last week.

New Demands.

MOSCOW, Oct. 24 (A. P.).—An indication of new Russian demands on Finland was seen today in the plan of the Finnish delegation to return to the Finnish capital.

The delegation announced that they would leave for Finland at a little after midnight, but there was no indication of a breakdown in talks and the delegates were expected to return to Moscow within a few days after receiving fresh instructions.

Diplomatic informants said that the return meant either that Russia had presented new demands or that a compromise was near and that final action by the Helsinki Government was necessary. A report in neutral diplomatic circles said that Finland was asking for a free port or the right of duty free entry for Finnish goods to some Russian port on the White Sea near Finland.

The Finns were believed by foreign observers to be balking at surrender of the Aaland Islands in the Gulf of Bothnia and the quartering of Soviet troops in Finland proper. These observers expressed the belief that Russia had asked also for certain small islands in the Gulf of Finland and possibly some trade privileges, and that on these lesser concessions Finland was ready to yield.

The Finnish delegation was at the Kremlin twice last night, from 6 P. M. to 8:30 P. M., and from 10:30 P. M. until long past midnight, leaving at an hour which was not disclosed here.

The Finns had hoped for a quick end of the conferences, in the belief that Russia, having already strengthened her defenses with virtual protectorates over Estonia, Latvia and Lithuania, desired to avoid a fight.

Dr. Passikivi returned to Moscow only yesterday with instructions from his Government. The Moscow radio announced his return, although the Russian public had never been told of his departure a week ago last Sunday after preliminary negotiations.

Norway Orders More Planes.

OSLO, Oct. 24 (A. P.).—Neutral Norway, whose north coast borders Finland and is close to the Soviet frontier, is accelerating her defense program.

The Government, which had already placed an order for twelve Curtiss Hawk highspeed planes, decided today to raise the number to twenty-four—all to be delivered this winter.

DR. PAASIKIVI, AIDES RETURN TO HELSINKI

Delegation Expected To Get Instructions For Further Talks

Observers Believe Difficulty Is Over Demand For Aalands

[By the Associated Press]

Moscow, Oct. 24—Renewed negotiations between Soviet Russia and a Finnish delegation were suspended today less than forty-eight hours after the Finns' arrival, leading foreign observers to believe the talks were not going too happily.

OCT 25 1939

The Finns prepared to return tonight to Helsinki, presumably for fresh instructions from their government. It was indicated that compromise proposals they brought here were unacceptable or that Soviet authorities may have made new demands.

Neither Russians nor Finns would discuss the status of negotiations, although there was no indication they had broken down. The Finnish delegation was expected to return again to Moscow within a few days after consultation with officials at home.

Finns Balk Over Aaland Islands

Some foreign observers believed that Finland was balking at purported proposals for surrender of the strategic Aaland Islands in the Gulf of Bothnia and the quartering of Soviet troops in Finland proper.

At the same time, these sources said they believed Finland was ready to yield some trade privileges and perhaps concessions on certain small islands in the Gulf of Finland.

Neutral diplomatic circles reported that Finland, on the other hand, was seeking a free port or the right of duty free entry for Finnish goods to some northern Russian port on the White Sea near where Finland has territory but no outlet.

Hope Of Early Accord Dashed

Renewal of talks at the Kremlin had inspired Finnish hopes for a quick conclusion in the belief that Russia, already having strengthened her hand in the Baltic with virtual protectorates over Estonia, Latvia and Lithuania, desired to avoid a fight.

The Finnish delegation, headed by Dr. Juho Kusti Paasikivi, conferred with Soviet officials at the Kremlin yesterday for several hours.

The results of that conference, foreign observers believed, raised questions on which final action by Helsinki Government leaders was necessary.

Press Criticizes U. S.

The Russian press ignored the Finnish talks. Moscow newspapers which have been attacking Britain and France criticized the United States today.

The Government newspaper Izvestia asserted that Washington was trying to thwart efforts of Russia and Japan to reach a basis for improved relations.

A dispatch from Shanghai in Izvestia quoted "responsible quarters" as saying that "agents of Washington are active" in trying to put pressure on the Japanese Government because of Japan's dependence upon imports from the United States.

"Japan would like to improve her relations with the U. S. S. R.," the dispatch added, "but meets great resistance from representatives of the United States because improvement of Soviet-Japanese relations would strengthen Japan—which does not correspond to United States' interest."

The article said American representatives continued to "consider neutrality of the United States a comfortable mask necessary to cover the policy of isolation of Japan and for upsetting the relations between Japan and the U. S. S. R."

Finland Awaits New and Easier Soviet Demands

Envoy Reported Bringing Milder Proposals, Though Snag Is Hinted in Moscow

By The Associated Press

HELSINGFORS, Oct. 24.—Soviet Russia has modified her demands on Finland in new proposals being brought here by Finland's special envoy to Moscow, Dr. Juho Kusti Paasikivi, authoritative sources asserted tonight. There was no indication as to whether such proposals would be acceptable.

Finland has declared that no program which would damage her independence or neutrality would be accepted, and has backed her word with border mobilization. Only a vague outline of the demands was said to have been received by the Foreign Office.

Dr. Paasikivi is expected here at 9:47 a. m. Thursday (2:47 a. m., New York time). Whether the delegation would return to Moscow was not known.

Government sources here intimated that future talks might be carried on through normal diplomatic channels. Military and economic experts with the delegation were said to have remained in Moscow.

OCT 25 1939

"The government will continue to make all defensive preparations, but there is no reason to be alarmed," a government spokesman said this evening.

He pointed out that there was no time limit to the negotiations and added: "We know from experience that very often negotiations with Soviet Russia take a long time. We are not demanding anything from Russia, and in case we don't reach an agreement we are just where we were before."

PARIS, Oct. 24 (A. P.).—Charles Boyer, the movie actor, now stationed with the Army of the Center in southwestern France, probably will be recalled to Paris to undertake a propaganda mission to the United States, it was reported reliably today.

BERLIN, Oct. 24 (A. P.).—Adolf Hitler created today a new decoration, the "Cross for Meritorious War Service," to be given persons outside the army as well as to military men.

First Encyclical Of Pope May Be Out This Week

Comment on World Affairs Expected; Cardinals May Be Named in December

VATICAN CITY, Oct. 24 (AP).—Pope Pius XII is expected to issue his first encyclical soon after his return from his summer palace at Castel Gandolfo on Friday, it was said today in Vatican circles. Publication of the encyclical Saturday, the ever of the Feast of Christ the King, was held likely by Vatican officials, who declined to forecast the contents of the papal message.

The document has been revised twice because of the international situation, and authoritative sources expressed the belief it would be devoted largely to the world's current state of affairs.

OCT 25 1939

Another important event, the Pope's appointment of new cardinals in the first consistory of his reign, was reported imminent. Vatican officials said the consistory was almost certain to take place in December.

After that the Pope may announce to the College of Cardinals the names of several new cardinals.

Foremost among the prelates mentioned as likely to receive the red hat is the Most Rev. Francis J. Spellman, Archbishop of New York, who succeeded the late Patrick Cardinal Hayes in that highly important see of the United States.

Whether another American cardinal would be named to fill the place vacated in the College of Cardinals by the death of George Cardinal Mundelein was problematical, but it was considered unlikely that more than one American name would be in the first list. Cardinal Mundelein, Archbishop of Chicago, died Oct. 2.

The Most Rev. Stephen J. Donahue, auxiliary bishop of New York, has been mentioned prominently here to succeed Cardinal Mundelein. Bishop Donahue administered the New York archdiocese for several months before the appointment of Archbishop Spellman.

Seven months after the elec[tion] Pope Pius XII, death has furth[er] reduced the College of Cardinals by four members. There now are fifty-seven cardinals, of whom thirty-one are Italians and twenty-six foreigners. The college may have a maximum of seventy members, but it was considered unlikely that the Pope would name as many as thirteen at his first consistory.

70 Tons of Gold Saved by Poles Arrive in Paris

OCT 25 1939

Over $50,000,000 Escapes Germans in 6,000-Mile Truck-Train-Ship Trip

PARIS, Oct. 24 (AP).—Seventy tons of Polish gold, removed from Warsaw in the opening days of the war, has arrived safely in Paris after a hazardous 6,000-mile journey by truck, train and ship, it became known today.

Credit for the escape of the gold was given to former Polish Finance Minister Col. Ignacy Matuszewski, who organized a convoy of trucks. They were ordinary trucks, it was said, since Col. Matuszewski felt that armored vehicles would have aroused too much suspicion.

[Seventy tons of gold would be worth about $58,800,000 at the United States Treasury's price of $35 a troy ounce. There are twelve troy ounces to the pound.]

According to Polish accounts, trucks took the gold from the vaults of the Bank of Poland to Rumania. A squadron of German planes, apparently having been informed of the removal, launched an unsuccessful attack on the caravan at the frontier.

Upon arrival in Rumania the gold was transferred to a special train which raced to the Rumanian Black Sea port of Constanza, where a Turkish ship was waiting. A few hours after the vessel shoved off, the German government, according to accounts published here, warned Rumania not to let the gold get away "under any circumstances."

The little boat hung around the eastern Mediterranean for more than a week until the French government arranged for it to go to Syria. There the gold was transferred to a French boat, which brought it to France.

The newly constituted Polish government in France has announced it will not use the gold for its own needs, but only as a reserve for Polish money "when Poland is reconstituted."

Poles in England Mobilize

LONDON, Oct. 24 (AP).—The Polish Embassy announced tonight that it had issued an order mobilizing all Polish citizens in England "to fulfil their military duty." The notice published by the embassy gave a list of classes which should "appear before the recruiting commission in order to be enlisted for military service in the Polish Army in France."

Red Cross to Clothe Poles

WASHINGTON, Oct. 24 (AP).—The American Red Cross set up machinery today to provide 220,000 winter garments for more than 80,000 Polish war refugees in various European countries as a result of urgent appeals from abroad. The program calls for 83,000 heavy dresses and 137,000 sweaters. The British and French Red Cross have also requested clothing.

A SLOGAN IN REVERSE

British Urged to Do Their Christmas Shopping Late.

LONDON, Oct. 24 (A. P.).—The British Government told the public in effect today: "Do your Christmas shopping late—there's a war loan coming."

Oliver Stanley, president of the Board of Trade, answered a question in the House of Commons on whether it was "desirable to stimulate Christmas shopping this year," by saying:

"It will be the duty of everyone to respond to the appeal which will be made in due course for subscriptions to war loans. Subject to this, it is desirable that the public should continue to buy in the usual way, so as to reduce unemployment."

The loans would supplement the four billion dollars to be raised this year by taxation—some from the increase in income tax to 17½ per cent.

Lady Astor Has Dream; Women 1st

Visions House of Commons With Only 15 Men in It

LONDON, Oct. 24 (AP).—Lady Astor described a "dream" House of Commons today composed of 600 women and only fifteen men, with the men imploring the women "to treat us men fairly."

In criticizing the Government for failure to provide compensation for housewives in event of injury in air raids, Lady Astor told the House:

"I had a dream—I dreamed that I awoke after twenty-five years and saw before me a House of Commons in which there were 600 women members and only fifteen men."

(This virtually reverses the present membership—twelve women in a total of 615.)

"The fifteen men M. P.'s were pleading with the Prime Minister of that day to do justice to the married men. They were saying to the women M. P.'s 'there was a time we know when we did not treat you fairly, but we implore you to treat us men fairly now.'

"I am amazed that the interests of the married women could be so completely ignored at the present time."

2 AMERICANS FREED

Princeton Men Held for Time by Swedish Police.

STOCKHOLM, Oct. 24 (A. P.).—Two Americans, John Gray Faron and George Kidder-Smith, were footloose and free again today after a brief entanglement with Sweden's anti-espionage machinery.

Graduates of Princeton University, they were arrested yesterday when police thought they were showing too much interest in military objects near a child welfare institution they were visiting. After their release they explained they never were actually jailed, but merely taken to police headquarters and questioned. Two hours later they were freed.

Their cameras, which were confiscated, were returned with a police apology.

110 CAPTIVES TAKEN BY BRITISH SO FAR

LONDON, Oct. 24 (AP).—More than 110 German sailors and airmen were said officially today to have been captured by the British since the war began while "a mere handful of British airmen" were taken by the Germans.

Viscount Cobham, undersecretary to the War Office, announced the figure in the House of Lords and said no question of exchange of prisoners had yet been raised.

Hitler Youth Members Over 16 Face Drilling

BERLIN, Oct. 24 (A. P.).—Germany today ordered special pre-military training for members of the Hitler Youth Organization aged 16 to 18, inclusive.

The Army Command will cooperate in the courses, which the announcement said were designed "systematically to prepare the three oldest classes in the Hitler Youth for military service."

Emphasis will be placed on shooting small caliber weapons and in maneuvering, marching and similar military field work. In this fashion, it was said, the army could be assured of already partly trained recruits. The courses will be conducted Saturday nights and Sundays.

"No special fighting on the front."

PARIS, Oct. 24 (AP).—The French general staff issued the following communique this morning (9:36 A.M.—3:36 A.M. E.S.T.):

"No notable activity during the night."

HUNGARY ON ALERT IN AIR RAID DRILL

Prepared to Nip Nazi Putsch During Blackout.

BUDAPEST, Oct. 24 (A. P.).—Hungary began air raid drills today while the police took precautions against a possible Hungarian Nazi "putsch" during the excitment of the blackout.

Similar practice scheduled last spring was called off because of widespread reports that the Nazi element would try to provoke disorders.

Kalman Hubay, Nazi leader, issued a new challenge today saying: "We have shown that masses of the electors are behind us and if the Government People's Front aids Jews and wants new test—we are ready."

New Nazi Outburst.

BUDAPEST, Oct. 24 (A. P.).—The Hungarian Nazis today demanded the confiscation of several hundred thousand acres of land owned or rented by Jews.

Through their official newspaper, the Magyarsag, they accused the Government of weakness in handling the Jewish and the land problems.

In an article by a Nazi member of Parliament, the Magyarsag said that "many Jews who long ago ingratiated themselves with the Hungarian aristocracy" had been permitted to retain thousands of acres each despite the land reform laws. Apparently referring to the recent arrest of more than 100 members of the outlawed "Legion of Death," alleged by the Government to have plotted a Nazi putsch, the Magyarsag added:

"We've seen in the last few days how strong the Government can be in some things. Now let's see how strong it can be in things that matter."

Germans Get Warning.

HEGYSHALOM, Hungary, Oct. 24 (A. P.).—The Germans of this frontier city were told today by Istvan Antal, the Under-Secretary of Justice, that Hungary would stand for no foreign interference and would not be dominated by any "Great Power."

Standing close to the old Austrian border, now patrolled by German troops, Mr. Antal spoke at a flag-raising. He said, in part:

"One thought forever stranger to Hungarian soil is for any one to give orders to the Hungarian people or to force Hungary to take decisions not of her own choosing.

"This kind of regime, though dressed up in the most pleasing form, will never be borne by the Hungarian people."

Bulgarian Parliament Dissolved Pending Vote

King Boris Acts on Request of New Cabinet

SOFIA, Oct. 25 (Wednesday) (AP).—King Boris III signed early today a decree dissolving the Bulgarian Parliament and calling for a new election. The monarch acted within a few hours after receiving a request for such action from Premier George Kiosseivanoff's newly formed government. The Parliament had been called to meet on Saturday.

Thus Bulgaria will revert at least temporarily to rule by royal decree, the form of government that existed from 1934 to May, 1938, when Parliament was recalled. The government's declaration asked for a new election to provide a better determination of public opinion on general policies.

Premier Kiosseivanoff formed a new government on Monday after having resigned on Thursday.

Bulgar-Soviet Pact Near

SOFIA, Oct. 24 (AP).—Indications of improving Bulgarian-Russian relations were seen tonight in a report in well informed circles that an air convention was near conclusion. The pact was said to provide for Soviet engineers to construct a large airdrome at Bourgas, Bulgarian port on the Black Sea.

Hungary Puts Herself In the Junk Business

Advertises for Old Metal in Drive to Conserve Supply

BUDAPEST, Oct. 23 (AP).—The Hungarian government posted signs Monday with pictures of an old toothpaste tube, a broken watch spring, a discarded sardine can and a cracked flywheel in a campaign for conservation of Hungary's scant supplies of metal.

Depots are being established throughout the nation where the government will buy junk metal.

New regulations require a government permit even for the purchase of a one-foot piece of pipe.

Planes Seen Over Jutland

Danes Report Heavy Gunfire Followed Flight of Four Ships

COPENHAGEN, Denmark, Oct. 24 (AP).—The newspaper "Ekstrabladet" reported today that inhabitants of Hanstholm, in northern Jutland, saw four large warplanes late yesterday flying north, and half an hour later heard heavy gunfire. Hantsholm is on Denmark's extreme northwestern coast, facing the Skagerrak and the North Sea.

At the same time a Danish ship brought to Korsoer today two German aviators found clinging to a plane in the North Sea. One had machine-gun bullet wounds in the legs, but the other was unharmed. The plane was abandoned.

Nazi Art Festival In Moscow Planned

MOSCOW, Oct. 24 (A. P.).—Indicative of Russia's new friendship for Germany was a report from reliable source today that the Government here would soon hold a ten-day "Festival of German Art," including concerts of the works of German composers.

Such a festival has never been devoted to foreign works of art before.

Beefless Tuesday Observed In France

People Required To Abstain So As To Conserve Meat For Army

Paris, Oct. 24 (AP) — Today was France's first "beefless Tuesday," but nobody seemed to notice the difference.

A decree published last Tuesday ordered butcher shops closed on Mondays and prohibited the sale of beef on Tuesdays. Public dining places were ordered to serve no beef, veal or mutton on Mondays and no beef on Tuesdays.

The decree, which was intended to conserve beef for the army, is the nearest thing to food control that France has adopted.

Dobruja Tension Rises As Rumanian Gendarmes Clash With Bulgarians

Russe, Bulgaria, Oct. 24 (AP)—Increased tension was reported tonight in the Dobruja area of the Bulgarian-Rumanian frontier.

Confirmation was lacking, however, of a reported clash between Rumanian gendarmes and Bulgarian "free corps" fighters in Dobruja, former Bulgarian territory which Rumania gained after the World War.

Clamor for the return of Dobruja has grown recently in Bulgaria, and there have been revisionist demonstrations following repeated reports of clashes between Bulgarians and Rumanians in the area.

Bulgarians Arrested

Bucharest, Oct. 24 (AP)—Many Bulgarian "free corps" fighters in Dobruja were reported arrested today after an attack in which they wounded two gendarmes but suffered heavy losses themselves.

French Parliament Call Quells Some Grumbling

Blum Still Plans to Ask Junking of Censorship

PARIS, Oct. 24 (AP).—Premier Edouard Daladier's decision to call the French Parliament about the middle of November to consider the 1940 budget and ratify decree laws has silenced some political grumbling, it was said here today.

Leon Blum, Socialist leader and former Premier, whose writings on the subject of recalling Parliament have been trimmed by the censor, indicated he would take up the matter of censorship when Parliament convened.

Writing in his newspaper, "Le Populaire," Blum asserted the entire French censorship could be junked "without the least damage," and demanded that the nation's publicity machine be turned to combating German propaganda.

Toy Balloons Really A Barrage by Hitler

BASEL, Oct. 24 (AP).—There had been a carnival last night at the Swiss village of Riehen, so nobody paid much attention today when a few brilliantly colored toy balloons drifted down on the village streets.

But when children who caught them found excerpts from a speech by Fuehrer Adolph Hitler printed in French on the balloons, the Riehen police went into action. They caught twenty balloons and confiscated them, much to the children's disgust.

Police said the balloons apparently had been released by the Germans in Baden, destined for French soldiers across the Rhine. A strong north wind bore some into Switzerland.

Swiss Sign With Nazis

BERNE, Switzerland, Oct. 24 (AP).—A Swiss-German economic and clearing agreement was signed today. The agreement provides wartime trade clearing arrangements which, owing to Swiss determination to maintain her neutral position, resulted in long negotiations. Details were lacking, but it was known it concerned facilities for reducing a 116,000,000-franc (about $27,000,000) debt Germany owes the Swiss.

France Orders Motorcycles

Buys 5,000, to Cost $2,000,000, More Than Doubling Company's Business

SPRINGFIELD, Mass., Oct. 24 (AP).—Receipt of an order from the French government for 5,000 motorcycles to cost $2,000,000 was announced today by Loring F. Hosley, vice-president and general manager of the Indian Motorcycle Company, of Springfield. The order specified delivery in New York.

The amount of the order was more than all the company's business last year, which Mr. Hosley said totaled $1,508,000.

He added that although the machines undoubtedly would be used for military purposes, they were not among the articles banned for shipment under the embargo.

Hears Of Plan To Sabotage Normandie Or Queen Mary

Navy Intelligence Unit Sends Warning And New York Police Increase Pier Guard

[By the Associated Press]

OCT 25 1939

New York, Oct. 24—United States naval intelligence reports that one of the two greatest liners in the world, the Normandie or the Queen Mary, was to be sabotaged in New York harbor within the next few weeks tonight sent strong police reinforcements to the mid-town piers, where the two ships have been tied up for more than six weeks.

The French liner Normandie, 83,423 gross tons, has been moored at a Hudson river dock since before the European war broke out, and the Cunard-White Star liner Queen Mary, 81,235 tons, and recently camouflaged, has been moored alongside her since shortly after the war began.

Lieutenant Commander Coddington, of the naval intelligence, informed police late today that his office had information that "one of the ships" was to be sabotaged "within the next few weeks." High police officials promptly inspected the vessels. The ship's officers were informed of the reports.

Members of the newly formed police sabotage squad, the dock squad, the alien squad, the marine division and emergency service of the department conferred with ship and line officials aboard the vessels.

At least one more sergeant and ten uniformed patrolmen were added to the sergeant and fifteen men assigned to the piers, and two police launches covering river approaches to the vessels were instructed to be on constant guard. Roaming squads of detectives were assigned to the ships. Police craft searched surrounding waters.

About 700 members of the crew are aboard the Queen Mary. Many of the Normandie's crew have returned to France.

The Normandie was built in 1935, the Queen Mary in 1936.

FRANCE'S UNKNOWN SOLDIER—

OCT 25 1939

[By the Associated Press]

Paris, Oct. 24—Drop into a Normanesque chateau somewhere behind the Maginot Line and you may see a sober-visaged, battle-scarred veteran of many wars working with quiet efficiency in a room full of maps.

This man is Gen. Alphonse Joseph Georges. He is running the campaign for Gamelin on the Western front.

Fought Germans Before

General Georges was middle-aged when he fought Germany before. He celebrated his sixty-fourth birthday a fortnight before the present conflict began. His hair, in pompadour style, has turned white in the intervening years. The lines have deepened in his rather full face, characterized by kindly eyes and a firm, strong mouth.

The thing that strikes you about the man is his dead seriousness. There is none of the usual trivial human interest anecdotes recounted about him. Instead they will tell you such things as how he was gravely younded at the start of the war in 1914 and came back to make a brilliant record as a member of Foch's staff.

Aide To Maginot

In 1915 General Georges became famous as an administrator. In this phase of his career he was associated with two names which have a familiar ring today.

He was military chief in the War Department when it was headed by Andre Maginot—who started the famous line of fortifications.

He was chief administrator of the Ruhr when the French troops occupied that rich German industrial region after the war. Today, Georges' troops are taking off from the Maginot Line and are worrying the Ruhr through pressure on the Saar area immediately adjoining it.

SENATE DROPS 90-DAY CREDIT, EASES SHIP BAR

Amends Neutrality Bill After Agreeing to Limit Debate.

FINAL VOTE DUE THIS WEEK

Ordinary Trade With Canada Not to Be Affected by War Legislation.

OCT 25 1939

WASHINGTON, Oct. 24 (A. P.).—The Senate quickly amended the administration's neutrality bill today to lift drastic restrictions from American shipping except in the danger zones of the North Atlantic.

With Vice-President Garner gaveling amendments through hurriedly, the chamber also accepted a proposal by Senator Pittman, Democrat, of Nevada, to strip from the measure a clause permitting belligerents to obtain ninety-day credits on purchases in this country.

An amendment by Senator Pittman to lift the bill's original drastic curb against American vessels carrying any supplies to a belligerent port in any part of the world was adopted without a dissenting voice after it had been changed somewhat.

The bill now would permit American vessels to carry any materials, except arms, to belligerent ports in Bermuda, the South Atlantic, certain ports in the Bay of Fundy and Gulf of Maine for New Brunswick and Nova Scotia, the Pacific and Indian Oceans, the China, Tasman and Arabian seas and the Bay of Bengal.

Concerning Title.

There soon followed adoption of an amendment by Senator Connally, Democrat, of Texas, exempting ordinary goods shipped in American vessels from the bill's general requirement that citizens of this country must divest themselves of title to commodities shipped to belligerent purchasers.

Connally offered his proposal as an amendment to the one by Senator Pittman permitting American vessels to operate freely excepting in the North Atlantic.

Ships could go safely into the regions which the Pittman amendment would permit them to enter, the Texan said, arguing that American-owned cargoes aboard them would likewise be safe. Shipping men had informed him, he added, that some purchasers in the Orient would find it difficult to pay for goods before they were delivered.

Senator Danaher, Republican, of Connecticut, protested vainly that the Connally amendment was inconsistent with the contention of administration supporters that the legislation would put exports to belligerents on a cash-and-carry system.

Senators Taft, Republican, of Ohio; Borah, Republican, of Idaho, and White, Republican, of Maine, voiced approval of the Connally amendment, Mr. Borah saying that he favored elimination of restrictions on American shipping to the fullest possible extent, retaining a reasonable provision for its safety.

The Senate next adopted an amendment by Senator Wagner, Democrat, of New York, which would permit American vessels to carry supplies to Bermuda. Senator Pittman opposed the amendment, contending that there was danger that American ships going to Bermuda might be sunk. Mr. Borah said, however, that he thought there was little more danger than in the areas of the South Atlantic which Mr. Pittman proposed to exempt from the shipping ban.

300-Mile Rule Rejected.

Subsequently the Senate rejected, 71 to 18, a proposal by Senator Taft, Republican, of Ohio, to prevent American ships from going within 300 miles of Europe.

Mr. Taft pleaded vainly that his amendment was needed to avoid the danger of American ships being sunk while en route to neutral countries.

The administration bill gives the President authority to define forbidden combat zones.

The Senate agreed to permit American ships and cargoes to go to South Atlantic ports in Africa.

Senator Connally, who opposed this change, said its only real objective was to permit trade with Capetown, South Africa.

Cash requirements of the measure were tightened by inserting a requirement that munitions sold in this country to private citizens of belligerent countries would have to be sold on a cash basis. Arms sales by American citizens to belligerent governments or their agents also would have to be on a cash basis.

Working under a unanimous consent agreement to limit debate, the Senate previously had approved an amendment by Senator Brown, Democrat, of Michigan, which would permit inland commerce with Canada and Mexico to continue normally, without the requirement that purchasers in those countries must obtain title to supplies before they crossed the border.

Was a Substitute.

Mr. Brown's amendment was approved after Vice-President Garner, who had sought to speed up proceedings, had apologized to the Senate for having gaveled through an amendment by Senator Pittman. Offered as a substitute, Mr. Brown's amendment displaced that of Mr. Pittman, who offered no opposition to the substitution.

As explained by the Michigan Senator, the amendment would permit the shipment by inland waterways, rail or airplanes of any supplies, except arms, to Canada without the purchaser first being required to obtain title in this country. Shipments going by sea, however, could not be carried in American vessels, and would require title transfer. Purchasers of arms in any case would be required to obtain title before shipment.

Mr. Brown said that the effect of the amendment would be to permit the continuance of formal commercial relations with Canada and Mexico, affecting both countries alike.

Debate on Shipping.

The Senate then took up the controversial shipping sections of the bill. Senator McNary, the Republican leader, asked that the shipping amendments go over a day, but Mr. Pittman insisted on immediate consideration.

Spokesmen for both factions in the neutrality legislation fight agreed that the speech-curtailing agreement would hasten action.

The agreement would limit each Senator's general discussion of the legislation to forty-five minutes. In addition, each Senator would be permitted to speak for forty-five minutes on each amendment.

The agreement was reached after Senator Clark, Democrat, of Missouri, won a promise from Mr. Barkley not to call the Senate into daily sessions earlier than 11 A. M. There was also an understanding that night sessions would not be held.

Mr. Barkley likewise announced, in answer to a query from Mr. Clark, that he had no intention of seeking to cut off debate on any germane amendment by moving to lay it on the table.

Amendments Brought Up.

With the agreement out of the way, Senator Pittman obtained unanimous consent for immediate consideration of committee amendments to the bill, this automatically ending more than three weeks of general debate.

Efforts to obtain an agreement heretofore had been blocked by Senators opposed to repealing the arms embargo, although most of them professed to find acceptable in some degree other sections of the neutrality measure setting up controls over shipping and commerce with belligerent countries.

Today they agreed to debate limitation.

Senator Nye, Republican, of North Dakota, held up Senate acceptance of the debate arrangement while he protested that Mr. Barkley and other supporters of the administration bill had indulged in personalities by their remarks about him yesterday. He referred to statements made about his fees as a public lecturer on neutrality, among other things.

This, he said, was the first time in four weeks of Senate debate that discussion had dropped to a personal level. He added that he would not reply on that plane.

Has No Apology.

He had no apology to make, he continued, for accepting fees for public speeches, saying that others in the Senate have done this for generations.

He said he had delivered more public speeches free of charge than he had for fees and that his limited means required some other source of income.

"I, unlike many other Senators, am without the backing of a political machine," Mr. Nye said. "I have no support from 2 per cent clubs that assess public officials."

His reference was to clubs among Indiana State officials which Senator Minton, Democrat, of Indiana, the Democratic whip, who criticized Mr. Nye yesterday, had previously defended.

Excerpts From the Address by Foreign Minister von Ribbentrop at Danzig

OCT 25 1939

By The Associated Press.

DANZIG, Oct. 24—Following are excerpts from the official translation of the speech here tonight of German Foreign Minister Joachim von Ribbentrop:

Fellow-Countrymen!

Today, Oct. 24, is a memorable day in the history of Danzig. It is the anniversary of Gauleiter Forster's arrival in Danzig in 1930, when he established "Gau Danzig" of the National Socialist party.

Exactly a year ago, on Oct. 24, 1938, acting on the Fuehrer's instructions, I asked [Josef] Lipski, former Polish Ambassador, to come to Berchtesgaden. On that day I referred to the Fuehrer's wish that German and Polish relations should be placed on a permanent footing acceptable before history and submitted to him the well-known proposal for Danzig's political reunion with the Reich, while the city was to remain Polish as far as its economic life was concerned.

On the other hand, the two countries were definitely to recognize their neutral frontier and the German-Polish non-aggression pact of 1934 was to be prolonged for twenty-five years. On Jan. 5, 1939, in Berchtesgaden, the Fuehrer himself repeated the proposals to [Colonel Josef] Beck, Polish Foreign Minister, in my presence and before the two Ambassadors, von Moltke and Lipski.

On that occasion the Fuehrer drew particular attention to the fact that it had never been possible for any German statesman before him, and would probably not be possible for any German statesman after him, to renounce all claims to the Corridor as he was willing to do. On the following day in Munich, as well as later on Jan. 26, when I visited Warsaw, this offer again was discussed in detail between Beck and myself. On none of these occasions was the offer actually rejected by the Polish representatives, but the reply given referred to certain difficulties in domestic politics and stated that the offer would have to be thoroughly examined, adding that Poland also desired a final settlement of German-Polish relations.

Tells of Warning Lipski

During these months, in marked contrast to the diplomatic negotiations conducted in a friendly spirit by Germany, the state of tension noticeable in German-Polish relations did not, as anticipated, show any signs of slackening, but became more pronounced.

This agitation was steadily becoming more unbearable. Things came to such a pass that anti-German agitations took place every day in front of the German Embassy in Warsaw. On March 21, 1939, I communicated a warning to M. Lipski, the former Polish Ambassador to Berlin, about these matters and also declared that a fresh attempt had to be made to put Polish-German relations on the right path. On that occasion I once more repeated to M. Lipski the German proposal, now universally known, for the solution of Danzig and the Corridor, actually supplementing it in some respects in favor of Polish interests. At the same time we invited Colonel Beck to Berlin in order to establish, by joint discussion, a basis for a comprehensive agreement that would clarify German-Polish relations for good.

On March 26 M. Lipski then brought me an answer to the German offer in the form of a memorandum that amounted to complete rejection of the Fuehrer's general proposal.

Dumfounded by Rejection

When I replied, dumbfounded, that after all the German proposal was made with the intention of establishing permanent and friendly relations between the two nations rather than with a view of bringing about a German-Polish conflict and that the answer of the Warsaw Government was wholly incomprehensible to me, the Ambassador was unable to advance any explanation.

The invitation we had extended to Colonel Beck to come to Berlin was answered by what amounted to a point-blank refusal, whereas at the time the astonishing attitude adopted by Poland toward the Fuehrer's exceptional offer appeared to me to be somewhat peculiar. We now have the solution to the riddle before our eyes: Britain was at the back of it! Today we know that already at that time negotiations for a guarantee pact with Britain were underway.

As early as March 26 I drew M. Lipski's attention to reports we had received about the concentration of Polish troops along the German frontier and warned him what the consequences might be.

I informed him that if that kind of thing continued we shortly might be faced with a serious situation.

Dwells on Polish Excesses

The next day we received news of unprecedented excesses committed against Germans in Bromberg [Bydgoszcz]. Thereupon, I once more summoned the Polish Ambassador and told him I had not only to my regret received information of the rejection of the German proposals by Poland but also that relations between the two countries were rapidly deteriorating.

For a further period of six months Germany watched Poland expel and terrorize Germans—tens of thousands of refugees during these months are tangible proof of such action.

It was only after a final warning on the part of Germany addressed to the Polish Government in the form of a communication dated Aug. 9, stating that the economic strangulation of Danzig would create a very serious situation—a warning that the Polish Government again answered by impudence and threats of war—and after Polish troops began to invade the Reich that the Fuehrer struck the first blow.

In not a single instance were any vital interests of the Western democracies thereby affected, let alone impaired. Instead of being grateful to the Fuehrer for applying his genius and the whole power of his will to the task of repairing the irresponsible, and indeed incredibly stupid, historical errors of Versailles in a peaceful manner, we have witnessed a spectacle of how the statesmen of those very countries that have been responsible for the folly committed opposed Germany in every single attempt at revision.

British Understanding Sought

In particular this applies to Britain. In the astonishing failure to recognize the natural dynamic qualities of the German Reich, the vitality of the German people and above all the determination and creative force of the Fuehrer, Britain has, during recent years, with unparalleled tenacity, attempted to oppose every step undertaken by Germany in her foreign affairs. This is all the more astonishing, since from the outset Germany on her part made every conceivable effort to establish reasonable relations with the Western democracies—namely, France and Britain.

In the Summer of 1933, for example, a personal meeting was arranged between the Fuehrer and [Edouard] Daladier, who was then as he is now the French Premier. The object of this meeting was to clear up Franco-German relations and to conclude an armaments agreement.

The Fuehrer was full of the idea of an understanding with France, but at the last moment the French Premier cancelled the meeting. A few weeks later he was no longer Premier. The reasons for his dismissal were ostensibly connected with internal politics. In Paris it was common knowledge that Britain alone was responsible for his fall.

Recalls Daladier Incident

It would not do for Germany and France to come together. From the angle of British policy, with its system of sowing discord between the two nations and profiting thereby, this would be quite inadmissible. When I saw M. Daladier last year in Munich and reminded him of this incident in 1933 and pointed out to him how advantageous such a meeting would have been in promoting understanding between our two countries, he answered with a gesture that spoke volumes: "You don't have to tell me that."

In this connection I ought to mention that sometime in 1933 I was present when a member of the British Embassy in Paris reproached the French because their government had not yet waged a preventive war against Germany on account of her rearmament. Britain, he said, had done her utmost but had been unable to persuade the French Government to take this step.

An understanding with Britain has always been the foundation for the Fuehrer's foreign policy.

The sole purpose of countless speeches, actions, and deeds of the Fuehrer and of countless journeys to England undertaken by me on the Fuehrer's instructions was to achieve this end. All these were not just vague ideas but concrete proposals which, acting on the Fuehrer's instructions, I repeatedly laid before the British Prime Minister or Foreign Secretary or other men prominent in politics.

Outlines Offer British Refused

The main points contained in these offers were as follows:

First: An Anglo-German naval agreement at the ratio of 35 to 100.

Second: Permanent inviolability of the countries situated between Germany and Great Britain—the Netherlands, Belgium and France.

Third: Respect of British interests throughout the world by Germany and respect of German interests in Eastern Europe by Britain.

Fourth: A close alliance between the countries under the terms of which Germany would renounce any claim to armed assistance from Britain but would at any time on her part be prepared to place her fleet and a certain number of divisions at the disposal of Britain for the defense of her empire.

Britain refused this offer and since then has missed no opportunity of giving the Fuehrer to understand through the medium of responsible British Cabinet Ministers, politicians and Members of Parliament, as well as by the press, that she does not care for Germany's friendship.

Naturally enough, the Fuehrer then drew the obvious conclusion from the British attitude and from then on based Germany's foreign policy on the sober realization of political actualities. In so doing he attached special importance to the countries whose interests coincided with those of Germany's.

Cites Italy, Soviet as Friends

Rapprochement with these countries was sought and their friendship secured. In this way true and sincere friendship arose between Germany on the one hand and the Italian Empire in the Mediterranean and Japan in the Far East on the other hand.

The spirit of national socialism and fascism and the personal friendship between the Fuehrer and Il Duce were decisive factors in this development. Soviet Russia has recently also joined the ranks of the States that are friendly toward Germany.

As the Fuehrer said in his last Reichstag speech, the conclusion of the German-Russian nonaggression pact and later the friendship pact meant a complete change in German foreign policy.

The previous traditional friendly relationship that brought the two great peoples such blessings and good fortune has now been restored and there is every reason to hope that this friendship will grow still closer.

The previous traditional friendly relationship which brought the two great peoples such blessings and good fortune has now been restored and there is every reason to hope that this friendship will grow still closer. Living spaces of these two powers, like their natural requirements, border on each other but they do not overlap.

Any territorial disputes between the two states are therefore out of the question for all time. The economic needs of the two countries complement one another in an almost ideal manner. We need many Russian raw materials, and the Soviet Union can make use of most of Germany's industrial products. By means of a comprehensive agreement this exchange already is in full swing and will increase year by year. We will probably soon reach the previous record turnover.

As regards the inner structures of the two states, they are undoubtedly different. Recent developments have shown, however, that, provided Nat ional Socialist Germany and Soviet Russia respect one another's ideology—and both nations are firmly determined to do this—they can certainly live in neighborly friendship.

During my visit to Moscow as well as on my return to Germany I noticed with satisfaction to what extent the natural conditions favorable to Russo-German friendship have long been firmly rooted in both of these peoples. The non-aggression pact and the friendship pact today are undoubtedly popular with both peoples. It is really quite amazing to learn what remarkable lengths the British propaganda will go in order to conceal from the British public the significance of the Russo-German rapprochement . . .

Since Jan. 30, 1933, the aim of Germany's foreign policy has been to abolish the Treaty of Versailles and its consequences. From the outset the Fuehrer did his utmost to carry out necessary revisions by peaceful methods. In this, except for the Polish problems, he was completely successful. Whether it was reintroduction of compulsory military service, reoccupation of the Rhineland, reincorporation of Austria and the Sudetenland or the establishment of a protectorate in Bohemia and Moravia—in each case the Fuehrer left nothing undone in order to settle by means of negotiations questions which had to be solved sooner or later if grave conflict was to be avoided.

It was only when the Fuehrer realized that these methods carried him no further that he had recourse to deeds. Without doubt, it is an achievement unparalleled in history that anybody without shedding blood should have succeeded in finding a solution reasonably satisfactory to all concerned for the difficult problems artificially created by the follies contained in the Treaty of Versailles. . . .

Sees No Difference With U. S.

As far as Germany's relations with America is concerned, there is no possibility of any difference ever arising between the two countries. On the contrary, Germany is precisely the country among all others that has faithfully observed and respected the Monroe Doctrine.

Germany has no interests to stand up for on the entire American Continent unless it be to develop as extensive trade as possible with all States on that continent.

It requires an almost morbid imagination to conceive of any difference or dispute between America and Germany that might ever lead to conflict between these two peoples. The German has nothing against the American and the American nothing against the German.

Although British propaganda continually tried to throw the seeds of discord between America and Germany, we in Germany are firmly convinced that the common sense of the American gradually sees through this game and realizes where the real interests lie and that both people—in the long run—will profit by mutual friendship.

Britain, of all countries, has every reason to be extremely cautious in the use of this sort of propaganda, for while Germans always respected the Monroe Doctrine, the existence of many British colonies, possessions, coaling stations, naval bases, etc., on the American Continent is a constant infringement of this doctrine.

Holds Britain Guilty of War

Fellow countrymen, permit me to say a few words of Britain's war guilt.

Permit me to turn first to France: I believe that throughout the entire world there is today not the slightest doubt that the French people did not want war and that the French people would sooner or later have peace today than tomorrow, and that this war was forced upon them with unparalleled cunning, cynicism and brutality on the part of Britain and her henchmen in Paris and in the French Government.

As to Britain, I have already given you a short survey of the policies she has pursued toward Germany since Jan. 30, 1933, and I will now lay before you incontrovertible proof that the present British Government for years has been planning and preparing for this war against Germany.

Last year's Munich conference was hailed by part of the world as a great peace achievement of British Prime Minister Chamberlain. There can be no greater mistake. Let us try to visualize once more the situation that led to Munich.

The British Government had given Czecho-Slovakia's government to understand that they would assist them against Germany, and thereby had made a European crisis out of a problem that would have been settled overnight had it not been for British interference.

Therefore, when later in Munich Mr. Chamberlain offered to assist in finding a thoroughly reasonable last-minute solution of this problem, he actually was only providing partial atonement for his own blunder, which originally led to the crisis and by which he had brought Europe almost to the brink of war.

But why did he do that? The answer is to be found first in the speech which Mr. Chamberlain made after returning to London, carrying in one hand the olive branch of peace, while with the other he presented the British nation with a gigantic armaments program.

OCT 25 1939

Cites War Preparations

Everybody knows that for years a systematic campaign has been openly waged in England against everything German and that preparations of all kinds were made for a coming war—I need only remind you of the institution of a Blockade Ministry more than two years ago, as recently admitted by Mr. Chamberlain.

Sees Britain Desiring War

In other words, Chamberlain, who had hoped by threats of war to dissuade Germany from insisting on her just demands for liberation of her Sudeten Germans, did not carry out his threat for the simple reason that Britain was not sufficiently prepared. Chamberlain did not come to Munich to prevent war but only to postpone the war already decided upon by the British government.

. . . The aim of the British government, however, now is obviously to bring Britain diplomatically and politically into such irreconcilable opposition to Germany it would be possible for the government at their discretion to start a war against Germany at whatever moment seemed propitious.

This would have to be done in such a manner that the warmongers, who form the British government, would not have to hold back under the pressure of their own people; that is to say it would be necessary to find a pretext which would allow the British government to make the grounds for war appear so compelling that every Englishman would feel that to yield would be incompatible with the honor of his country.

By the guarantee to Poland, Mr. Chamberlain created such a situation. That this guarantee was only a pretext is quite obvious from the recent official declaration of the British Government in Parliament. That guarantee was aimed solely against Germany. Great Britain was not concerned with seeing that the Polish State was not harmed but solely with the potential military assistance that the country might supply against Germany.

Continental Policy Changed

By this guarantee, which pledged her to give immediate and unlimited support to Poland, Great Britain abandoned the age-old foundations of her Continental policy. Whereas, in 1936 even such an admitted Germanophobe as Sir Austin Chamberlain had declared that England would not move a finger for the Polish Corridor and emphasized England had no interest in the Corridor, his brother now mortgaged England's armed assistance for this capital injustice committed against Germany at Versailles.

This policy, that at first would appear insane, can only be understood as an expression of Britain's consistent determination under all circumstances and in the not too distant future to provide herself with a pretext for striking at Germany.

Further evidence of the unshakable desire of the British Government for war against Germany will be found in the sequence of events during the last days before the outbreak of war.

On Sept. 2 the Italian Ambassador in Berlin handed over a message from Premier Mussolini according to which Italy still had the possibility to arrange for peaceful settlement of the Polish conflict. On the same day the Havas News Agency published the assent of the French Government to this Italian peace plan.

Although Germany also assented the plan was refused in the course of the afternoon by the declaration of British Foreign Secretary Lord Halifax. It is indeed shattering proof of his bad consciousness that Mr. Chamberlain, the British Prime Minister, has the face to lay the sabotage of Signor Mussolini's peace plan at Germany's door.

Denies Domination Theory

However, the British Government showed their true face and their determination to destroy the German people when they refused the generous peace offer which the Fuehrer made to Britain in his speech before the Reichstag on Oct. 6 and through their speaker—British Prime Minister Chamberlain—replied with insults that aroused profound indignation among the German people.

British warmongers maintain that Germany is striving for world domination. This statement in itself is a deliberate falsehood, and a stupid one at that, for every schoolboy today knows that there no longer is such a thing as world domination and that it is hardly likely that there will ever be one; but coming from the British this claim is nothing but a piece of insolence.

If I were to read out to you a list enumerating the peoples dominated by Britain, I should have to keep you here at least for an hour longer.

In India, for example, apart from 290,000,000 natives in various provinces of the colony, there are 562 Indian principalities under British sovereignty.

In this manner incalculable riches have been stored up by Great Britain in the course of a century. Only Britain, therefore, can be reproached with striving for world domination.

Says Reich Seeks Colonies

And what is the result of these six and one-half years of German foreign policy?

The process of consolidating the German Reich in Europe has now been completed. Wrongs contained in the Treaty of Versailles have been righted. Owing to the reorganization of eastern Europe, Germany has sufficient space for many generations of settlers and she is at present endeavoring to gather and unite within that space all those small scattered groups of German descent in Europe for whom resettlement is possible.

Germany thus is creating orderly and final ethnographic conditions and frontiers, and by this large-scale resettlement removing the possibility of future conflict. The frontiers of the Reich to the north, east, south and west are now finally established.

As the Fuehrer repeated in his last speech in the Reichstag, Germany has no claims on France and Britain, with the exception of restitution of Germany's former colonial possessions; that is to say, the field for colonial activity which generally is accepted as due a great power. The folly of the Treaty of Versailles has been wiped out and stable conditions have been established in Europe. That is nobody's work but the Fuehrer's.

The very moment when all conditions necessary for the establishment of an enduring European peace are fulfilled has been chosen by the British government to start a war of life and death between the British and German peoples.

Sees Danger to British Empire

In so doing the British Government are playing a dangerous game with the future of their empire. If the British Government continue in this policy which, when we bear in mind the interests of all mankind, can only be described as criminal, they will go down in history as the grave diggers of the British Empire.

That such a development would be in the interest neither of Germany nor of the British nation, is apparently of no importance to this small clique of unscrupulous gamblers and narrow-minded doctrinaires, who with unparalleled dilettantism are leading their people into the abyss. When the British Ambassador visited me for the last time early in September, my parting words to him were that it would one day be recorded in the annals of world history as an historic farce that Britain, although she had not the slightest conflicting interest with Germany, declared war on the very man who had made an understanding with Great Britain his political creed.

But Mr. Chamberlain would not have it otherwise. From his last speech in the Commons, in which, with a mixture of artlessness, British arrogance and schoolmasterlike self-sufficiency, he rejected the Fuehrer's offer, I should like to pick out one single point that will reveal the utter falsity, hypocrisy and dilettantism of the present British Government. I refer to the assertion that Germany and her Fuehrer broke faith and that it therefore no longer was possible to trust a single word Germany says.

Charge Breaches of Faith

To prove to you that no British statesman has the right ever to utter the words "breach of faith" I will now lay before you a few instances drawn from the recent history of the British Empire.

In the Treaty of London in 1915, Britain promised Italy in the event of extensic of British and French possessions in Turkey, Asia or Africa she should receive corresponding compensation in the Near East and Africa. But what did Britain actually do?

She broke her word to Italy in a most disgraceful manner and subsequently tried to console her with a few thorny thickets in the desert of Jubaland. It was left to the genius of Il Duce, acting again in violent opposition to Britain, to procure these compensations for Italy in 1936 by virtue of his own right.

Example Two: In 1915 the British Government, speaking through the medium of the High Commissioner in Egypt, promised the Arabs to create an Arab State that was to include Arab territory and also Palestine. What did the British do?

An independent Arab State was not formed and the famous British Colonel Lawrence, who had won over the Arabs for the British and had pledged his word to them on behlf of the British, resigned his commission on account of this breach of good faith on the part of his country's government.

In this case Britain's treachery was twofold, for despite the pledge given the Arabs, Arabian Palestine was promised to the Jews on the basis of the Balfour Declaration while war still was in progress. By this promise to the Jews the British intended to win over influential Jews to persuade the United States of America to come into the war against Germany. Thus the British Government broke its word twice.

Example Three: On Aug. 20, 1917, the British Government offered India complete self-government and the same status as other British Dominions. But this promise, too, was shamefully broken and indeed today under the cloak of empty shams and confessions India is nothing more than she was before—a British colony.

Example Four: During the Great War Britain incurred enormous debts for war supplies in the United States subject to explicit and precise promises of payment. What did Britain do?

Britain simply broke this contract, did not pay her debts nor has she the slightest intention of paying them.

Example Five: On Sept. 30, 1938, Mr. Chamberlain at his own urgent request signed an agreement with the Fuehrer that was an expression of the desire felt by both countries never again to wage war against one another. But what did Mr. Chamberlain do? Mr. Chamberlain broke this agreement.

Peace Bid Misunderstood

It is true that Mr. Chamberlain speaks of peace, but his peace means nothing but "back to Versailles," "Down with National Socialism." The Fuehrer's historical offer for peace, made before the Reichstag, was not only not understood by Mr. Chamberlain but, following his previous mistaken policy toward Germany, with rare consistency, he has again made precisely that mistake which he should not have made and against which the Fuehrer uttered an explicit warning in his speech. For Mr. Chamberlain actually interpreted the Fuehrer's offer as an indication of Germany's weakness.

The British Prime Minister has proclaimed removal of the German Government. I will refrain from proclaiming removal of the British Government, for I am absolutely convinced that in the course of events the British people, who were goaded into this war by British warmongers contrary to their own will, will see to that of their own accord.

Fully conscious that right is on her side, and that up to the end she did everything in her power to avoid this utterly senseless war that was forced upon her, Germany will fight this war to the finish, backed by the tremendous impetus of the whole nation.

Every word that Mr. Chamberlain uttered in the House of Commons Oct. 12 proves that a yawning abyss lies between the generous and far-sighted attitude of the Fuehrer and the materialistic stubbornness of Mr. Chamberlain. It is true that Mr. Chamberlain speaks of peace, but his peace means nothing but "back to Versailles," "down with national socialism." Such a peace would mean the perpetuation of discord, strife and disorder in Europe, an annihilation of the German people. Mr. Chamberlain may do his utmost; the time will never return, and the idea of annihilating a nation of 80,000,000 is worthy of a Don Quixote.

The Fuehrer's historic offer of peace, made before the Reichstag, was not only not misunderstood by Mr. Chamberlain but, following his previous mistaken policy toward Germany, with rare consistency, he has again made precisely that mistake which he should not have made and against which the Fuehrer uttered an explicit warning in his speech. For Mr. Chamberlain actually interpreted the Fuehrer's offer as an indication of Germany's weakness. Completely misunderstanding its high ethical value, and the eminence from which the Fuehrer made his offer of peace to Great Britain, in order to prevent utterly senseless bloodshed for nations, Mr. Chamberlain has now finally refused to grasp Germany's outstretched hand of peace.

By so doing, the British Prime Minister has taken upon himself a grave responsibility in the eyes of the world and at the same time has shown afresh that whatever Germany were to do Britain is determined to wage this war against the Reich. Germany has accepted this British challenge. The German nation is now resolved to wage this war which has been forced upon it by British warmongers and not to lay down arms until the security of the German Reich in Europe is assured and guaranties have been given that a similar attack on the German people is precluded for all time.

The British Prime Minister has proclaimed removal of the German government. I will refrain from proclaiming removal of the British government, for I am absolutely convinced that in the course of events the British people, who were goaded into this war by British warmongers contrary to their own will, will see to that of their own accord. The fate of Poland has shown what dire results the provocation of Germany can bring. Chamberlain and those who share with him the responsibility for this war may then perhaps have their eyes opened. They will one day have leisure to reflect whether they were well advised when they interpreted the German peace offer as a sign of weakness, rejected it, and in its place challenged Germany to battle.

The German people, welded by national socialism into a solid block of steel, stand united behind their leader, while in front of the Reich there stands today a glorious arm and air force, and a navy which has gained for itself fresh laurels. Fully conscious that right is on her side, and that up to the end she did everything in her power to avoid this utterly senseless war which was forced upon her, Germany will fight this war to the finish, backed by the tremendous impetus of the whole nation. That this decisive struggle for the future of the German nation can only end in a great German victory is assured for us by our own strength and by our faith in the man who is the embodiment of our highest ideals in the world—our Fuehrer.

DANZIG, OCT 24-(AP)-THE FOLLOWISING IS THE OFFICIAL TRANSLATION OF A PARTIAL TEXT OF THE SPEECH HERE TONIGHT OF GERMAN FOREIGN MINISTER JOACHIM VON RIBBENTROP:

(ABOUT 5,000. FULL TEXT ESTIMATED AT 6,500)

FELLOW COUNTRYMEN!

OCT 25 1939

IT IS A LONG TIME AGO THAT HERR FORSTER FIRST INVITED ME TO SPEAK IN DANZIG, WHICH AT THAT TIME, THOUGH SUPPOSED TO BE A "FREE CITY," WAS SUFFERING CRUEL OPPRESSION. SEVERAL TIMES MY VISIT HAD TO BE POSTPONED OWING TO DEVELOPMENTS IN FOREIGN AFFAIRS WHICH IN RECENT YEARS WERE CERTAINLY NOT CONSPICUOUS BY THEIR ABSENCE; BUT AT LAST MY LONG-CHERISHED WISH TO SEE DANZIG WAS ALL OF A SUDDEN FULFILLED UNDER CIRCUMSTANCES I HAD NOT DARED HOPE FOR--I WAS PRIVILEGED TO WITNESS THE FUEHRER'S ENTRY INTO THE LIBERATED CITY.

I SHALL NEVER FORGET HOW OUR FUEHRER, COMING STRAIGHT FROM THE SCENE OF HIS VICTORIES IN POLAND, ENTERED YOUR BEAUTIFUL CITY AND HOW HE WAS GREETED BY DANZIG'S BRIGHT-EYED YOUTH AND ALL OF YOU WITH UNENDING CHEERS AND FERVANT ENTHUSIASM.

AFTER MORE THAN 20 YEARS OF HARDSHIP AND OPPRESSION, DANZIG IS ONCE MORE TRULY A FREE CITY.

OUR HEARTFELT THANKS ARE DUE THE FUEHRER FOR THIS MAGNIFICENT AND FINAL SOLUTION OF THE PROBLEMS OF DANZIG AND THE CORRIDOR, WHICH RANKED AMONG THE WORST AND MEANEST INJUSTICES PERPETRATED AT VERSAILLES AND HAD LAIN AS A BURDEN UPON THE GERMAN PEOPLE.

THE EARLY MEMBERS OF THE PARTY PRESENT TODAY KNOW THE STORY OF THE FIRST STAGE IN THE STRUGGLE TO WIN DANZIG FOR THE NATIONAL SOCIALIST MOVEMENT, A FIGHT WHICH WAS WATCHED BY THE PARTY HEADQUARTERS IN THE REICH WITH THE SPECIAL INTEREST AND SYMPATHY DUE THAT STRUGGLE FOR A GERMAN OUTPOST.

THE COMING INTO POWER OF THE NATIONAL SOCIALISTS ON JANUARY 30, 1933, IN THE REICH AT THE SAME TIME PROVIDED A FRESH IMPULSE FOR "GAU DANZIG," SINCE THE FUEHRER'S IDEAS WERE STEADILY GAINING GROUND, SOON TO BE ADOPTED BY ALL DANZIG.

THE WATCHWORD, "BACK TO THE REICH," IS SYMBOLIC OF THE SECOND STAGE OF THE NATIONAL SOCIALIST STRUGGLE. THIS PERIOD, EXTENDING OVER SIX AND ONE-HALF YEARS, WAS ONE OF EXTRAORDINARY DIFFICULTY FOR THE LEADERS OF THE PARTY IN DANZIG; IT WAS THEIR TASK TO SAFEGUARD THE GERMANS OF DANZIG AGAINST CONTINUAL ECONOMIC AND POLITICAL PRESSURE EXERCISED BY THE POLES AND TO WIN THEM OVER TO THE FUEHRER'S IDEAS AND, ON THE OTHER HAND, IN ACCORDANCE WITH THE REICH'S POLICY TO MAINTAIN TOLERABLE RELATIONS WITH THE POLISH STATE.

TONIGHT'S MEETING WILL NOT ALLOW ME SUFFICIENT TIME TO DEAL AT LENGTH WITH MANY DIFFICULTIES, SETBACKS, COMPROMISES, CRISES AND OTHER ADVERSITIES WHICH WERE ALL TOO COMMON IN THE HISTORY OF DANZIG THOSE SIX AND ONE-HALF YEARS.

OCT 25 1939

HOWEVER, THERE IS ONE THING I SHOULD LIKE TO SAY ON THIS OCCASION, NAMELY THAT DURING THAT TIME DANZIG AND ITS LEADERS PROVED THEMSELVES EXEMPLARY FIGHTERS IN THE FUEHRER'S CAUSE AND I MAY ADD, AS THE MINISTER MOST NEARLY CONCERNED FOR WHOM DANZIG WAS ALWAYS, AS IT WERE, A "CHILD OF SORROWS" IN FOREIGN POLITICS, THAT THEY BROUGHT OFF MANY A BRILLIANT DIPLOMATIC STROKE.

THEY WERE TORN BETWEEN THEIR NATURAL LOYALTY TO THE REICH'S POLICY OF SEEKING AN UNDERSTANDING WITH POLAND, CONTINUAL PRESSURE EXERTED BY POLAND IN AN ATTEMPT TO EXTEND THE ECONOMIC AND POLITICAL RIGHTS GRANTED HER BY THE PEACE TREATY, AND BY DECREES OF UNPRACTICAL, INCOMPETENT AND SOMETIMES EVEN MALEVOLENT LEAGUE OF NATIONS AUTHORITIES, AGAINST WHOM (DR.ARTHUR KARL) GREISER, PRESIDENT OF THE DANZIG SENATE, KEPT FIGHTING A HARD, SELF-SACRIFICING BATTLE.

30.24-4245

ALL THE TIME THEY WERE FACED WITH MARXIST ENEMIES IN THEIR MIDST, WHO, AFTER THE NATIONAL SOCIALISTS CAME INTO POWER IN THE REICH, HAD TO A CERTAIN EXTENT CHOSEN DANZIG AS THE SCENE OF THEIR ACTIVITIES.

OCT 25 1939

UNDER THESE CIRCUMSTANCES IT WAS CERTAINLY NOT ALWAYS AN EASY MATTER TO CHOOSE THE RIGHT COURSE. IT IS ONLY FAIR TO MENTION ON THIS OCCASION THE JUST AND UNBIASED WAY IN WHICH THE LAST LEAGUE COMMISSIONER PROFESSOR (CARL J.) BURCKHARDT, OF SWITZERLAND, DISCHARGED HIS OFFICIAL DUTIES. HE ALWAYS ENDEAVORED TO FIND A FAIR SETTLEMENT DOING JUSTICE TO THE INTERESTS OF EITHER PARTY, AND HIS ACTIVITY WAS A PRAISEWORTHY EXCEPTION BY COMPARISON WITH CERTAIN OF HIS PREDECESSORS.

X X X X DANZIG HAS HAD TO WAIT FOR A LONG TIME BEFORE IT WAS ALLOWED TO RETURN HOME TO THE REICH BUT THE ERA NOW DAWNING FOR THIS BEAUTIFUL BALTIC CITY IN GREATER GERMANY WILL BE ALL THE MORE GLORIOUS FOR THE PATIENCE SHOWN BY THE CITY. DANZIG WILL NEVER AGAIN BE SEPARATED FROM THE REICH!

JUST NOW I SPOKE OF TODAY AS OF A MEMORABLE DAY ON WHICH "GAU DANZIG" WAS FOUNDED BUT THIS DATE IS OF SPECIAL SIGNIFICANCE FOR ANOTHER REASON AS WELL.

IN HIS LAST SPEECH IN THE HOUSE OF COMMONS, CHAMBERLAIN, THE BRITISH PRIME MINISTER, ATTEMPTED TO MAKE DANZIG THE SCAPEGOAT FOR THE OUTBREAK OF THE WAR BETWEEN GERMANY AND POLAND BY ASSERTING, WITH A TRULY BRITISH DISPLAY OF PRESUMPTION AND WITH THE PROVERBIAL IGNORANCE OF BRITISH CABINET MINISTERS CONCERNING THE TRUE STATE OF AFFAIRS, THAT THE CITY OF DANZIG, THAT IS TO SAY, GERMANY AND NOT POLAND WAS RESPONSIBLE FOR THE RELATIONS BETWEEN GERMANY AND POLAND HAVING COME TO A HEAD DURING THE MONTH OF AUGUST, AND FOR THE EXISTING STATE OF WAR.

IN VIEW OF THIS CONSCIOUSLY FALSE BRITISH STATEMENT, I CONSIDER IT NECESSARY, FELLOW GERMANS IN DANZIG, TO GIVE YOU OUNCE AGAIN A SHORT ACCOUNT OF THE DEVELOPMENTS WHICH LED TO THE FUEHRER'S BEING LITERALLY FORCED INTO THIS WAR, CONTRARY TO HIS DETERMINATION, PROCLAIMED FOR MANY YEARS, OF REACHING A SETTLEMENT WITH POLAND.

SINCE THE YEAR 1934 WHEN THE FUEHRER AND MARSHAL PILSUDSKI AGREED TO THE REVISION OF POLISH-GERMAN RELATIONS, GERMANY NEVER LEFT POLAND IN DOUBT AS TO THE FACT THAT IN CONNECTION WITH THE NEW AND FRIENDLY RELATIONS, THE SOLUTION OF THE PROBLEMS OF DANZIG AND THE POLISH CORRIDOR WOULD SOONER OR LATER HAVE TO BE FOUND.

EFFORTS TO TURN CITIZENS OF GERMAN ORIGIN OUT OF WHAT WAS THEN POLISH TERRITORY INCREASED IN VIGOR. GERMAN PROTESTS LODGED WITH THE GERMAN AND POLISH MINORITIES COMMITTEE NOT ONLY REMAINED UNANSWERED BUT WERE OBVIOUSLY OFTEN DELIBERATELY OPPOSED BY THAT BODY.

OCT 25 1939

OPPRESSION OF GERMAN NATIONALS BY LOCAL POLISH AUTHORITIES WAS ASSUMING PROPORTIONS AND THE POLISH PRESS IN PARTICULAR WAS NOW IN AN INCREASING MEASURE GIVEN A FREE HAND BY THE GOVERNMENT TO AGITATE AGAINST EVERYTHING GERMAN AS WELL AS AGAINST THE REICH.

ON THIS OCCASION, I URGED THE POLISH AMBASSADOR TO GO TO WARSAW HIMSELF IMMEDIATELY IN ORDER TO CLEAR UP THE SITUATION. IN VIEW OF THE PECULIAR POLISH ATTITUDE IN CONNECTION WITH CERTAIN QUESTIONS, I WISHED TO PREVENT THE FUEHRER FROM GAINING THE IMPRESSION POLAND SIMPLY DID NOT WANT TO COME TO AN UNDERSTANDING. ON MARCH 26 LIPSKI THEN BROUGHT ME AN ANSWER TO THE GERMAN OFFER IN THE FORM OF A MEMORANDUM WHICH AMOUNTED TO COMPLETE REJECTION OF THE FUEHRER'S GENERAL PROPOSAL. INCREDIBLE THOUGH IT MAY SEEM, IT NEVERTHELESS IS A FACT THAT THE POLISH AMBASSADOR TOLD ME THAT FURTHER PURSUIT OF GERMANY'S PLANS REGARDING THE POLITICAL REUNION OF DANZIG WITH THE REICH WOULD MEAN WAR WITH POLAND.

ONLY THREE WEEKS OF THIS CAMPAIGN--AND THE WHOLE STRUCTURE OF THE POLISH STATE COLLAPSED LIKE A HOUSE OF CARDS. THE REICH WILL NOW SEE TO IT THAT IN TERRITORIES LYING WITHIN ITS SPHERE OF INTEREST A NEW PARTITION GIVING JUSTICE TO ACTUAL CONDITIONS SHALL TAKE PLACE AND A REAL STATE OF PEACE BE RESTORED.

OCT 25 1939

TWO EUROPEAN POWERS, GERMANY AND RUSSIA, WILL NOW FOR ALL TIME GUARANTEE THE MAINTENANCE OF LAW AND ORDER AND SECURITY IN EASTERN EUROPE.

THE FUEHRER HAS REPEATEDLY AND EXPLICITLY DEFINED THE STRICTLY LIMITED AIMS OF GERMAN FOREIGN POLICY. THEY MUST BE SUMMARIZED IN A FEW WORDS: TO SAFEGUARD THE LIFE AND FUTURE OF THE GERMAN PEOPLE WITHIN ITS NATURAL, LIVING SPACE; TO SECURE FOR EACH GERMAN CITIZEN AN ADEQUATE STANDARD OF LIVING AND TO ENABLE HIM TO DEVELOP HIS CULTURAL LIFE.

THE BRITISH GOVERNMENT IS FIGHTING FOR CAPITALISTIC INTERESTS AND LUXURIES OF THE UPPER CLASS, WHILE THE WORKING MASSES ARE STRUGGLING DAY IN AND DAY OUT FOR THEIR EXISTENCE AND SOCIAL BETTERMENT. THE AIM OF THE NATIONAL SOCIALIST GOVERNMENT ON THE OTHER HAND IS TO ENSURE DAILY BREAD FOR EACH OF THEIR 80,000,000 FELLOW COUNTRYMEN. BUT IT IS PRECISELY THIS MOST FUNDAMENTAL RIGHT OF ANY NATION THAT BRITAIN IS OPPOSING.

WE HAVE REPEATEDLY HAD TO LISTEN TO SUCH STATEMENTS FROM THE MOUTHS OF INANE BRITISH CHATTERERS. X X X X

WHEN ONE CONSIDERS WHAT THE FUEHRER HAS DONE TO CONSOLIDATE EUROPEAN CONDITIONS, THIS ACCUSATION OF BROKEN FAITH COMING FROM A BRITISH CABINET MINISTER IS NOT ONLY THE HEIGHT OF HYPOCRISY, BUT, ABOVE AND BEYOND THAT, A PIECE OF GROSS STUPIDITY. X X X

THE OBJECT OF LETTING THE "HONORABLE" BRITISH PARLIAMENT DEFAME THE FUEHRER IS TO ESTRANGE OUTRIGHT AND DECENT GERMAN PEOPLE FROM THEIR LEADER. BUT IN THIS RESPECT, MEMBERS OF THE BRITISH PARLIAMENT HAVE MADE ONE MORE FLAGRANT MISTAKE, FOR TODAY THE GERMAN NATION IS ADOLF HITLER AND ADOLF HITLER IS THE GERMAN NATION. CHAMBERLAIN'S ACCUSATION OF BREACH OF FAITH, THEREFORE, AFFECTS EVERYONE OF THESE 80,000,000 GERMANS. YOU PEOPLE OF DANZIG REPRESENT A FEW HUNDRED THOUSAND OF THESE 80 MILLION AND I ASK YOU: DO YOU FEEL YOU HAVE BROKEN YOUR WORD? NO!

OCT 25 1939

THEN LET ME TONIGHT BE YOUR SPOKESMAN AS WELL AS SPOKESMAN FOR ALL THE 80,000,000 AND LET ME INFORM MR.CHAMBERLAIN:

"THE GERMAN NATION HAS NOT ONLY APPROVED BUT ENTHUSIASTICALLY ACCLAIMED EVERY STEP AND EVERY ACTION THE FUEHRER HAS TAKEN TO LIBERATE THEM FROM THE FETTERS OF VERSAILLES AND THEY TAKE STRONG EXCEPTION TO SUCH BRITISH INSOLENCE.

"FURTHERMORE WE ABSOLUTELY DISPUTE THE RIGHT OF BRITAIN AS PERPE-TRATOR OF THE EVILS OF VERSAILLES TO PASS JUDGMENT ON ANY ACTION TAKEN BY GERMANY IN RECENT YEARS."

30.24-4247

30.24-4246

OCT 25 1939

NOW THAT WE ARE DISCUSSING BREACH OF FAITH I STATE THIS AS THE UNANIMOUS OPINION OF THE GERMAN PEOPLE: THE GREATEST BREACH OF FAITH OF ALL TIME WAS PERPETRATED AGAINST THE GERMAN PEOPLE IN 1919 AFTER THE ARMISTICE WAS DECLARED. BRITAIN INSTIGATED THIS BREACH OF FAITH AS PROMINENT BRITONS HAVE BEEN FORCED TO ADMIT.

HERE YOU HAVE ANOTHER CASE OF BRITISH PERFIDY! A FEW DAYS AGO, SO THE PRESS INFORMS US, BRITAIN RENEWED HER PROMISE OF SELF-GOVERNMENT TO INDIA. WE CAN SAFELY ASSUME THIS PROMISE ALSO WILL BE BROKEN.

DURING THE GREAT WAR, BRITAIN INCURRED ENORMOUS DEBTS FOR WAR SUPPLIES IN THE UNITED STATES SUBJECT TO EXPLICIT AND PRECISE PROMISES OF PAYMENT. WHAT DID BRITAIN DO?

BRITAIN SIMPLY BROKE THIS CONTRACT, DID NOT PAY HER DEBTS NOR HAS SHE THE SLIGHTEST INTENTION OF PAYING THE SUM OF TEN BILLIONS (EDITOR'S NOTE, WHETHER MARKS OR DOLLARS WAS NOT STATED). INSTEAD, SHE IS ALREADY CRYING OUT TO THE UNITED STATES FOR CREDITS AND ASSISTANCE AND FOR DELIVERY OF WAR SUPPLIES TO BE USED ONCE MORE AGAINST GERMANY. TODAY AGAIN AS IN THE GREAT WAR UNSCRUPULOUS PERSONS ARE EAGER TO EARN THEIR POUND OF FLESH BY SUCH CREDITS. IT WILL BE INTERESTING TO SEE WHETHER THE AMERICAN PEOPLE, WHO THEN WERE FORCED TO SHOULDER BRITISH WAR DEBTS, WILL BE EQUALLY INCLINED TO BURDEN THEMSELVES WITH NEW AND WHOLLY USELESS SACRIFICES FOR THE BENEFIT OF A FEW PARASITES AND TO SEE THEIR STANDARD OF LIVING LOWERED.

EXAMPLE FIVE: ON SEPTEMBER 30, 1938. MR.CHAMBERLAIN AT HIS OWN URGENT REQUEST SIGNED AN AGREEMENT WITH THE FUEHRER WHICH WAS AN EXRPESSION OF THE DESIRE FELT BY BOTH COUNTRIES NEVER AGAIN TO WAGE WAR AGAINST ONE ANOTHER. BUT WHAT DID MR.CHAMBERLAIN DO? MR.CHAMBERLAIN BROKE THIS AGREEMENT. ONLY A FEW DAYS AFTER CONCLUDING IT, HE PERMITTED THE MOST UNBRIDLED ANTI-GERMAN WAR AGITATION TO BREAK OUT IN LONDON, HE REACHED REARMAMENT IN EVERY POSSIBLE FORM, HIMSELF PARTICIPATED IN THE AGITATION, AND, AS A DIRECT BREACH OF THE MUNICH AGREEMENT, DECLARED WAR ON GERMANY SEPT. 3, 1939.

THESE EXAMPLES OF BRITISH PERFIDY ARE SELECTED FROM RECENT TIMES. BUT IN ACTUAL FACT, EVERY STAGE IN THE DEVELOPMENT OF THE BRITISH EMPIRE DURING THE LAST FEW CENTURIES IS MARKED BY COUNTLESS CASES OF BREACH OF FAITH. IT IS NOT WITHOUT REASON THAT THE POPULAR SAYING OF "PERFIDIOUS ALBION" IS FOUND AN ECHO THROUGHOUT THE WHOLE WORLD! ALMOST 200 YEARS AGO, FREDERICK THE GREAT, WHEN HE WAS TRAITOROUSLY DESERTED BY THE ENGLISH IN THE SEVEN YEARS WAR, SPOKE THE FOLLOWING WORDS: "TO BREAK FAITH WITH AN ALLY, TO CONCOCT PLOTS SUCH AS NONE OF HIS ENEMIES COULD DEVISE, TO WORK ZEALOUSLY FOR HIS DESTRUCTION, TO BETRAY HIM AND SELL HIM, IN OTHER WORDS, TO MURDER HIM DASTARDLY--EVIL DEEDS SUCH AS THESE, BLACK AND REPREHENSIBLE ACTIONS SUCH AS THESE--AND THERE YOU HAVE ENGLAND!"

OCT 25 1939

MORE FAR-REACHING IN ITS CONSEQUENCES THAN THIS ACCUSATION AGAINST THE GERMAN PEOPLE, WHICH SEEMS CHILDISH COMING AS IT DOES FROM A BRITISH CABINET MINISTER, IS THE POLITICAL SIGNIFICANCE OF MR. CHAMBERLAIN'S SPEECH.

LONDON, OCT 24-(AP)-A RELIABLE SOURCE REVEALED TODAY THAT BRITAIN IS APPLYING A "RATIONING SYSTEM" IN HER TRADE DEALINGS WITH NEUTRAL COUNTRIES TO PREVENT EXPORTS FROM REACHING GERMANY.

THE OBJECTIVE OF THE SYSTEM WAS SAID TO BE TO KEEP UP NORMAL TRADE WITH NEUTRALS WITHOUT ENDANGERING THE SUCCESS OF THE BRITISH BLOCKADE, DESIGNED TO DEFEAT THE NAZIS IN A "WAITING WAR."

THE BASIS OF THE PLAN IS APPLIED IN THE RECENT AGREEMENT WITH RUSSIA TO TRADE BRITISH TIN AND RUBBER FOR RUSSIAN TIMBER.

THE BRITISH EXPORTS OF TIN AND RUBBER TO RUSSIA ARE BASED ON THAT COUNTRY'S NORMAL PEACETIME REQUIREMENTS. THERE IS AN UNDERSTANDING THAT NONE OF THE SUPPLIES WILL GO TO GERMANY.

AUTHORITATIVE BRITISH CIRCLES ASSERT EFFORTS ARE ALSO BEING MADE TO SPEED UP DELAYS CAUSED NEUTRAL SHIPS UNDER THE BRITISH CONTRABAND CONTROL. THESE SOURCES SAY PROGRESS IS BEING MADE BY GETTING NEUTRAL SHIPPERS TO SEND MANIFESTS OF CARGOES ON AHEAD OF THEIR SHIPS SO THE PAPER WORK COULD BE DISPOSED OF IN ADVANCE. THE BRITISH ARE SAID TO BE DESIROUS OF EXTENDING THEIR PRESENT TRADE RELATIONS WITH RUSSIA TO OTHER GOODS PROBABLY ON A BARTER BASIS.

LONDON, OCT 24-(AP)- OFFICIAL CIRCLES TONIGHT STATED GERMAN FOREIGN MINISTER JOACHIM VON RIBBENTROP'S DANZIG SPEECH WAS ANOTHER "CLUMSY ATTEMPT TO DIVIDE GREAT BRITAIN AND FRANCE" AND SAID IT "INTRODUCED NO NEW ELEMENT INTO THE SITUATION."

VON RIBBENTROP THE STATEMENT ADDED "DOES NOT HESITATE TO SPREAD FALSEHOODS ABOUT THE PRIME MINISTER'S POLICY AT THE TIME OF MUNICH IN 1938."

BRITISH DOCUMENTS OUTLINING BRITISH POLICY PRIOR TO THE WAR HAVE BEEN "KEPT CAREFULLY FROM THE GERMANS" ALTHOUGH "THEY HAVE BEEN THE SUBJECT OF EXHAUSTIVE STUDY THROUGHOUT THE WORLD," IT CONTINUED.

"IT IS EVIDENT FROM HIS SPEECH TONIGHT THAT HERR VON RIBBENTROP IS STILL FAR FROM COMPREHENDING" THE SOLID FRONT OF FRANCE AND BRITAIN AND THAT "BOTH COUNTRIES WILL THEREFORE CONTINUE ON THE COURSE THEY HAVE SET THEMSELVES UNTIL THE ATTITUDE OF THE GERMAN GOVERNMENT UNDERGOES A CHANGE."

THE FOLLOWING IS THE TEXT OF THE COMMENT ISSUED BY OFFICIAL QUARTERS:

OCT 25 1939

"WHILE THERE HAS NOT BEEN SUFFICIENT TIME TO SUBJECT HERR VON RIBBENTROP'S SPEECH TO ANY DETAILED CRITICAL EXAMINATION, THE FOLLOWING PRELIMINARY COMMENT HAS BEEN MADE:

"THE SPEECH OF HERR VON RIBBENTROP INTRODUCES NO NEW ELEMENT INTO THE SITUATION NOR IS IT CONSIDERED TO HAVE ANY PARTICULAR IMPORTANCE, COMPOSED AS IT WOULD SEEM TO BE, FOR INTERNAL CONSUMPTION IN DANZIG AND GERMANY.

"YET ONCE MORE THE SAME CLUMSY ATTEMPTS ARE MADE TO DIVIDE GREAT BRITAIN FROM FRANCE. THE SAME STUPID FALSEHOODS ABOUT THE AGGRESSIVE INTENTIONS OF GREAT BRITAIN---INTENTIONS WHICH EVERYONE OUTSIDE GERMANY UNDERSTANDS---EXIST ONLY IN THE IMAGINATION OF HERR VON RIBBENTROP AND OTHER MEMBERS OF THE NAZI GOVERNMENT.

30.24-4253

"IN HIS DESPERATE ATTEMPTS TO MAINTAIN THE GERMAN PEOPLE IN THE ISOLATION FROM THE TRUTH HERR VON RIBBENTROP DOES NOT HESITATE TO SPREAD FALSEHOODS ABOUT THE PRIME MINISTER'S POLICY AT THE TIME OF MUNICH IN 1938 WHICH MAY WELL BE THOUGHT TOO STUPID TO DECEIVE EVEN THE MOST CREDULOUS.

OCT 25 1939

"SO FAR AS CONCERNS BRITISH POLICY PRIOR TO THE WAR, THIS HAS BEEN MADE PLAIN BY THE OFFICIAL DOCUMENTS WHICH HAVE BEEN MADE PUBLIC IN RECENT WEEKS. IT IS HARDLY NECESSARY TO POINT OUT THAT WHILE THESE DOCUMENTS HAVE BEEN KEPT CAREFULLY FROM THE GERMANS THEY HAVE BEEN THE SUBJECT OF EXHAUSTIVE STUDY THROUGHOUT THE WORLD.

"THE BRITISH GOVERNMENT IS WELL CONTENT TO ALLOW THE WORLD TO FORM ITS OWN VIEW NOW THAT THEIR CASE HAS BEEN MADE PUBLIC, AS TO WHOM, WHETHER GREAT BRITAIN AND FRANCE ON THE ONE HAND OR GERMANY ON THE OTHER, IS THE AGGRESSOR IN THE PRESENT WAR.

"THE SAME STALE REPETITION OF LIES ABOUT PALESTINE AND INDIA WHICH HAVE BEEN PART OF THE STOCK IN TRADE OF GERMAN ANTI-BRITISH PROPAGANDA FOR SOME CONSIDERABLE TIME PAST IS AGAIN PARADED, THOUGH ON THE PRESENT OCCASION IT DOES NOT SEEM THEY WERE UTTERED WITH ANY PARTICULAR CONVICTION.

"GREAT BRITAIN AND FRANCE THEN, IT MAY BE SAID, CONTEMPLATE THIS LATEST EFFUSION FROM GERMANY UNMOVED. THEIR STANDPOINT HAS BEEN MADE ABUNDANTLY CLEAR IN RECENT SPEECHES BY THEIR RESPECTIVE PRIME MINISTERS, CHAMBERLAIN AND MONSIEUR DALADIER. IT IS EVIDENT FROM HIS SPEECH TONIGHT THAT HERR VON RIBBENTROP IS STILL FAR FROM COMPREHENDING IT AND BOTH COUNTRIES WILL THEREFORE CONTINUE ON THE COURSE HAVE SET THEMSELVES UNTIL THE ATTITUDE OF THE GERMAN GOVERNMENT RGOES A CHANGE."

SAN DIEGO,CALIF.,OCT.23-(AP)-GERMANY'S NEWEST HIGH EXPLOSIVE USED WITH DEVASTATING EFFECT IN POLAND AND IN ATTACKS AGAINST THE BRITISH FLEET IS THE INVENTION OF TWO BERKELEY ENGINEERS, IN THE OPINION OF MILTON T.VANDERSLICE, STATE PARK COMMISSIONER.

"FIVE YEARS AGO TWO BERKELEY MEN NAMED HAUCK AND MCCLOUD INVENTED AN EXPLOSIVE WHICH THEY NAMED ATOMITE," VANDERSLICE SAID. "THE FORMULA WAS PATENTED IN A NUMBER OF COUNTRIES, INCLUDING GERMANY.

"THE GERMAN AIR FORCE TRIED IT OUT IN SPAIN BUT THE BOMBS PROVED SO DESTRUCTIVE GENERALISSIMO FRANCO URGED THAT THEY NOT BE USED IN THE BOMBING OF MADRID.

OCT 24 1939

"THERE IS VIRTUALLY POSITIVE PROOF GERMANY USED THIS EXPLOSIVE IN THE DESTRUCTION OF WARSAW AND POLISH MILITARY AIRDROMES AND DEPOTS FOR WE KNOW THERE IS NO BOMB NOW IN USE BY EUROPEAN ARMIES THAT CAN LITERALLY SLICE THROUGH AND CRUMBLE HUGE CONCRETE AND STEEL BUILDINGS EXCEPT THE ATOMITE PROJECTILES WHICH THE NAZIS HAVE BEEN USING FOR TWO YEARS.

"WE HAVE NO PROOF THE SUBMARINE TORPEDOES WHICH CAUSED THE BRITISH BATTLESHIP ROYAL OAK TO FOUNDER WITH SUCH RAPIDITY WERE FILLED WITH ATOMITE EXPLOSIVES. NEVERTHELESS THE ROYAL OAK WAS EQUIPPED WITH BLISTERS IN ADDITION TO HER HEAVY ARMOR PLATE AND NO TORPEDO EVER HAS BEEN ABLE TO DO THAT MUCH DAMAGE TO A BATTLESHIP BEFORE. IT IS EXTREMELY LIKELY THE BRITISH AIRCRAFT CARRIER COURAGEOUS ALSO WAS SUNK WITH ATOMITE TORPEDOES."

VANDERSLICE SAID THE BUREAU OF ORDNANCE OF THE U.S.ARMY IS EXPERIMENTING WITH THE EXPLOSIVE. HE SAID THE GOVERNMENT REFUSED TO TAKE THIS STEP WHEN THE BERKELEY INVENTORS ENDEAVORED TO INTEREST THE ARMY IN THEIR EXPLOSIVE FIVE YEARS AGO.

HE ASSERTED ATOMITE IS 34 PERCENT MORE POWERFUL THAN TNT, CAN BE MANUFACTURED AT ONE-THIRD THE COST OF PRESENT DAY HIGH EXPLOSIVES, IS HARMLESS TO HANDLE, WILL NOT FREEZE AND HAS FROM 40 TO 50 PERCENT GREATER EXPLOSIVE FORCE THAN DYNAMITE.

A TIN COATING, HE SAID, COSTS TWO ONE-HUNDREDTHS OF A CENT. A SILVER COATING FOR THE "SILVER CANS" WOULD COST ONE-THIRD OF A CENT.

THE SILVER COATING, WHICH WOULD BE THREE TIMES AS THICK AS THE TIN LINING, WOULD BE RECLAIMED AT PLANTS SIMILAR TO THOSE WHICH IN THE WORLD WAR DETINNED SCRAP TO RECOVER THE TIN.

HE SAID 98 PER CENT OF TIN USED IN THE UNITED STATES CAME FROM THE MALAY STATES, A BRITISH POSSESSION, AND SOME CAME FROM BOLIVIA. THIS COUNTRY, HE SAID, HAD NO DEPOSITS WHICH COULD BE MINED PROFITABLY.

THE WAR TODAY

OCT 25 1939

THE ANGLO-FRENCH ALLIES HAVE MADE IT ABUNDANTLY CLEAR THAT THEIR LAND STRATEGY FROM NOW ON IN EUROPE'S FANTASTIC WAR IS TO SIT TIGHT AND PAY OUT PLENTY OF ROPE TO HERR HITLER IN THE BELIEF HE WILL HANG HIMSELF IN THE LONG RUN.

BEING CONVINCED THAT THE ONLY SORT OF CONFLICT THE NAZI LEADER ORIGINALLY WAS EQUIPPED FOR WAS A BLITZKRIEG (LIGHTNING WAR), WHICH BECAME A PET PHRASE OF HIS, THE ALLIES HAVE REACHED THE COMFORTABLE

30.24-4257

CONCLUSION THAT HE ALREADY HAS LOST THE OPPORTUNITY OF WAGING SUCH A WAR AND IS BEGINNING TO FEEL THE LACK OF SINEWS FOR A PROTRACTED SESSION.

THE ALLIED POLICY OF WATCHFUL WAITING ON THE WESTERN FRONT, HOWEVER, DOESN'T MEAN THAT THE WAR HAS DIED AT BIRTH, AS A LOT OF FOLK MISTAKENLY BELIEVE. IT'S A CRAZY WAR BUT IT'S STILL ALIVE.

THE ANGLO-FRENCH (MAINLY ENGLISH) NAVAL BLOCKADE REPRESENTS THE FIERCEST OFFENSIVE THEY ARE CAPABLE OF WAGING AGAINST GERMANY AT THIS TIME.

IT ISN'T SPECTACULAR LIKE A LAND-OPERATION. BUT IT'S THERE JUST THE SAME--A NOOSE WHICH IS CALCULATED TO STRANGLE THE REICH UNLESS HITLER CAN BREAK IT.

THE FUEHRER IS DEVOTING HIS CHIEF ENERGIES TO TORPEDOING HIS WAY THROUGH THIS HUNGER-RING, AND AT THE SAME TIME IS TRYING TO SINK ENOUGH BRITISH MERCHANT SHIPPING TO SQUEEZE AN ENGLAND WHICH IS DEPENDENT ON THE OUTSIDE WORLD FOR THREE-QUARTERS OF HER OWN FOOD SUPPLIES.

OCT 26 1939

IF ANYBODY THINKS SUBMARINE WARFARE ISN'T REAL WAR, LET HIM EXPERIENCE IT. I WENT THROUGH LONG WEEKS OF IT DURING THE WORLD WAR WHEN THE GERMAN UNRESTRICTED U-BOAT CAMPAIGN WAS AT ITS HEIGHT--HAD THIRTEEN SHIPS SUNK ALL ABOUT ME IN THE MEDITERRANEAN IN ONE SHORT STRETCH--AND THAT TYPE OF OFFENSIVE IS PLENTY NASTY.

AS REGARDS THE WESTERN FRONT, MILITARY EXPERTS ON BOTH SIDES AGREE THAT THE GERMAN WEST-WALL AND THE FRENCH MAGINOT LINE ARE SO NEARLY IMPREGNABLE THAT AN ATTEMPT TO SMASH EITHER WILL PILE UP CASUALTIES

IMPREGNABLE THAT AN ATTEMPT TO SMASH EITHER WILL PILE UP CASUALTIES THAT WOULD HAVE STAGGERED EVEN NAPOLEON, PROFLICATE AS HE WAS WITH HUMAN LIVES. HENCE THE RELUCTANCE TO START A GREAT OFFENSIVE THERE.

THE WHOLE ALLIED STRATEGY AT THIS MOMENT IS DIRECTED AT CONSTANT TIGHTENING OF THE BLOCKADE, COUPLED WITH AN INTENSIVE PROPAGANDA DRIVE TO TRY TO CREATE A REVOLT AMONG THE GERMAN PEOPLE AGAINST HITLER.

IF THE PROPAGANDA DOESN'T WORK, THE ALLIES STILL HAVE IN MIND THAT THE GERMANS TURNED AGAINST THEIR GOVERNMENT IN THE WORLD WAR WHEN THEY GOT HUNGRY.

A REVOLUTION AGAINST NAZI RULE IS WHAT ENGLAND AND FRANCE ARE DRIVING FOR.

WHILE THE ALLIES ARE HOLDING THE WESTERN FRONT AND APPLYING THE SCREWS IN THE BLOCKADE, THEY ARE GETTING AHEAD WITH THE VERY NECESSARY BUSINESS OF BRINGING THEIR AIR-FLEETS AND OTHER MILITARY PREPAREDNESS UP TO SCRATCH WITH THOSE OF GERMANY, WHICH HAD A LONG START IN THE RACE.

TIME IS WORKING FOR THEM AND AGAINST HERR HITLER.

HITLER HASN'T YET SENT HIS GREAT AIR-FLEET INTO ACTION AGAINST THE ALLIES, EXCEPTING FOR SMALL RAIDS. THE GERMANS HAVE BEEN DEPENDING HEAVILY ON THIS TO PULL THEM THROUGH, AND MAY BE EXPECTED TO LASH OUT AT ANY TIME.

OCT 26 1939

THERE IS ONE OTHER LINE OF OFFENSIVE WHICH GERMANY COULD PURSUE, AND THAT IS TO DRIVE THROUGH THE NETHERLANDS TO THE COAST, IF NAZIDOM IS PREPARED TO VIOLATE DUTCH NEUTRALITY. HOLLAND HAS BEEN FEARFUL OF SUCH A MOVE, AND MANY OBSERVERS HAVE FELT IT POSSIBLE.

THIS PRESUMABLY WOULDN'T INVOLVE FUEHRER HITLER IN FRESH WAR WITH ANYONE EXCEPTING THE DUTCH. SUCH A PUSH, IF SUCCESSFUL, WOULD GIVE GERMANY INVALUABLE AIR-BASES FOR RAIDS AGAINST ENGLISH PORTS AND SHIPPING. IT WOULD OPEN UP FRESH SUPPLIES. AND IF THE NAZIS WON THE WAR IT WOULD GIVE THEM PERMANENT CONTROL OF THE MOUTH OF THEIR RIVER RHINE, IF THEY CHOSE TO HOLD IT--A CONTROL WORTH A KINGDOM

TO THE REICH.

HERR HITLER, SIZING UP THE POSSIBILITIES OF A LONG, HARD WAR, YESTERDAY STARTED A CAMPAIGN TO CONSOLIDATE THE "HOME FRONT" MORALE. THIS IS DIRECTED LARGELY TO THE WOMEN, WHO ARE URGED TO SAVE AND NOT TO GRUMBLE AT HARDSHIP. THE STABILITY OF THE NAZI GOVERNMENT WILL DEPEND ON THAT MORALE.

THE FUTURE TREND OF THE CONFLICT STILL DEPENDS HEAVILY ON RUSSIA'S PLANS, WHICH REMAIN OBSCURE. OBVIOUSLY SHOULD SHE THROW ALL HER FORCES INTO THE WAR WITH GERMANY, THE SITUATION WOULD BE VASTLY ALTERED.

THE ANGLO-FRENCH ALLIES HAVE BEEN OPENLY LEANING OVER BACKWARD IN ORDER NOT TO DO ANYTHING WHICH MIGHT IMPEL THE SOVIET TO JOIN ARMS WITH THE NAZIS. AT THE SAME TIME RUSSIA, WHILE REACHING FAST AND FAR IN EXTENDING HER INFLUENCE IN EASTERN EUROPE, HAS WORKED WITH A VERY CAUTIOUS LOOKOUT.

THERE HAS BEEN NO INDICATION THAT RUSSIA WANTS WAR WITH THE ALLIES. A GOOD GUESS IS THAT THE SOVIET INTENDS TO REMAIN "NEUTRAL", AT LEAST FOR THE PRESENT, AND PLAY THE ANGLO-FRENCH ALLIES AND GERMANY AGAINST EACH OTHER FOR THE ULTIMATE BENEFIT OF COMMUNISM.

FLINT'S CREW IS SAFE; RUSS ASSAIL BRITISH LIST OF CONTRABAND

Moscow Assures Steinhardt Americans Are At Murmansk

Says Freighter Is Being Detained Pending Probe Of Cargo

[By the Associated Press]

Washington, Oct. 25—Ambassador Laurence A. Steinhardt reported to the State Department tonight that the Foreign Office at Moscow had assured him the American officers and crew of the City of Flint were safe aboard the vessel at Murmansk.

The State Department made public Steinhardt's report that the crew was safe immediately upon its receipt here and indicated further details were expected within a short time.

Had Caused Concern

The status of the crew had been the principal concern of authorities since the City of Flint was seized by a German raider.

The remainder of Steinhardt's bare report that the American crew was safe, however, dealt with information that the German prize crew had been released from internment and gave no further details on the Americans.

Relays Dispatch

The Ambassador relayed a Tass (Soviet news agency) dispatch from Murmansk as follows:

"The vessel is remaining at Murmansk pending definite establishment of the nature of her cargo. Ambassador Steinhardt immediately telephoned an official of the Foreign Office and was informed that it was that official's understanding that the German prize crew had been released from internment but were not being put back on board the City of Flint."

Steinhardt quoted the dispatch as saying the City of Flint had put into Murmansk because her machinery had been damaged.

Russia Releases Nazi Prize Crew On Flint

By WITT HANCOCK
Associated Press Correspondent

Moscow, Oct. 25—The Russian Government tonight announced the release from internment of the German prize crew of eighteen which brought the American freighter City of Flint to Murmansk.

The announcement by Tass, Soviet news agency, added that marine authorities at Murmansk, the Russian port in the Arctic to which the City of Flint was taken on Monday, had decided that the need of repairs to the Flint's machinery had necessitated bringing the steamer to port.

"For the time being," Tass said, the steamer will remain tied up at Murmansk for "precise verification of the composition of its cargo."

Nazis Admit Knowing About Seizure Of Flint

By MELVIN K. WHITELEATHER
Associated Press Correspondent

Berlin, Oct. 25—Germany and the United States attempted today to unravel the circumstances surrounding the Nazi seizure of the American freighter City of Flint which Germans said carried a contraband cargo for England.

An authorized German source said the captured freighter had a "good cargo" and that the Germans were asking Soviet Russia to let them have it back from Murmansk, Soviet port, where the ship was taken by a German prize crew.

Sent Marine Expert

It was understood that Germany sent a marine expert to Russia seeking release of the prize crew which took the steamer to the Arctic port after a stop at Tromso, Norway.

Germany also sought to establish with Russia what should be done with the ship, recognizing that delicate questions of international law were raised by its seizure and detainment in a neutral port.

Alexander Kirk, American charge d'affaires, visited Baron Ernst von Weizsaecker, Secretary of State in the German Foreign Office, and was told that Germany was discussing the question with Russia. This was the first acknowledgment that Germany officially knew of the ship's seizure.

Calls On Prize Court

The American consul at Hamburg was understood to have called upon the German Prize Court for information on legality of the seizure.

German quarters informally said the ship was taken because of contraband aboard. She was taken to Tromso, these quarters said, because she was "not seaworthy." For a similar reason, it was indicated, she was then taken to Murmansk, where the prize crew was "detained."

Questions Involved

Among the questions arising were:
First—Where is the American crew?
Second—Are the German "unseaworthy" claim and the allegation the ship carried contraband valid?
Third—If the ship was not seaworthy, why was it taken from Norway to Russia?
Fourth—Will Russia hold the Germans for the duration of the war?
Fifth—Can Russia legally release the ship to the Germans because of the German contention her papers were not in order and the fact that she entered the Russian harbor flying the swastika flag?

The "unseaworthiness" of the City of Flint, German quarters said, was caused by the American crew's concealment of maps essential for navigation. Hence, they said, the ship could not proceed safely through the war areas of the North and Baltic seas.

The Germans took the view that Russia should release the prize crew because they sought refuge in a neutral harbor for safety reasons.

Germans and Russians Weigh Fate of Seized U. S. Freighter

Berlin Strives to Get Its Prize Crew Freed—Charges Flint's Maps Were Hidden, So That She Became Unseaworthy.

BERLIN, Oct. 25 (A. P.).—German officials worked with the United States embassy tonight to clear up the complicated circumstances surrounding the seizure of the American freighter City of Flint by a German sea raider.

Alexander Kirk, Charge d'Affaires, was told by Baron Ernst von Weizsaecker, Secretary of State in the German Foreign Office, that the Government was discussing the case with Russia. The City of Flint was taken to the Russian arctic port of Murmansk.

30.24-4259

It was understood that Germany had sent a marine expert to Russia to negotiate for the release of the prize crew and establish what should be done with the freighter, which was seized on the charge that she carried contraband goods.

Prize Court Ruling Asked.

It was acknowledged that delicate questions of international prize law were involved, especially in view of the fact that Russia is neutral.

According to the German report, the City of Flint was taken into Tromso, Norway, as "unseaworthy" because the American crew had put certain maps essential for navigation out of the way before the Germans took charge.

Lacking these maps, it was explained, the ship could not be navigated through the complicated North and Baltic Sea war areas and therefore was taken to the far north.

At Tromso the prize crew attempted unsuccessfully to obtain the missing maps, informed circles said. The City of Flint then was taken to Murmansk. It was said here that the German crew is being detained pending negotiations between Germany and Russia.

In German opinion, the prize crew should be released because they sought refuge in a neutral harbor for reasons of safety while navigating an unseaworthy vessel.

Soviet Position Inquiry.

MOSCOW, Oct. 25 (A. P.).—A spokesman for the Foreign Office said today that inquiries were being urgently pressed into the situation of the American vessel City of Flint, which arrived in a Russian Arctic port under command of a German prize crew.

United States Ambassador Laurence A. Steinhardt said he had no new information on the fate of the vessel's crew of forty-one or its cargo, but added that some delay was expected in view of the remoteness of Murmansk, where the seized ship was taken.

The Soviet press made no mention of the incident today.

Inquiry Made in Norway.

OSLO, Norway, Oct. 25 (A. P.).—A representative of the United States legation called at the Foreign Office today to discuss the German seizure of the American steamship City of Flint and her call at the Norwegian port of Tromso in control of a German prize crew. The nature of the discussion was not disclosed.

The City of Flint case remained a puzzle to Scandinavian shipping circles.

There were conflicting reports of the roles said to have been played by the German pocket battleship Deutschland and the cruiser Emden in the sinking of two British vessels whose survivors were aboard the Flint when she arrived Friday in Tromso, Norway. The survivors were members of the crew of the 5,044-ton Stonegate and an unidentified vessel.

The newspaper Aftenposten said the Deutschland operated south and east of Newfoundland from October 5 to October 15. According to the paper, the Stonegate was sunk October 5 and the 1,918-ton Norwegian steamship Lorentz W. Hansen on October 14, both by the Deutschland, which also halted two other Norwegian ships, but allowed them to proceed.

British consular officials who talked with the British survivors aboard the Flint when they were put ashore at Tromso, and later at Trondheim, where they paused while en route to Bergen, were uncommunicative.

Mystification was expressed in British circles as to why the Flint, after her arrival in the neutral port of Tromso, "allowed herself to be taken to Russia" despite the presence of Norwegian warships in the harbor. A Norwegian explanation was that the German prize crew in command of the ship had a right to call at a neutral port for supplies and resume the journey within twenty-four hours.

As far as could be learned, the American skipper of the Flint, Capt. Joseph A. Gainard, had no opportunity to communicate with Norwegian port authorities.

Hull to Press Flint Case.

WASHINGTON, Oct. 25 (A. P.).—Secretary Hull said today that this Government was determined to follow the case of the City of Flint through to what he called its logical conclusion from the standpoint of international law and American rights.

Mr. Hull disclosed that the State Department still has had no word as to the whereabouts of the forty-one American sailors aboard the City of Flint, a Government-owned freighter.

He said it was well known that the incident would have been averted if the new neutrality bill preventing American shipping from entering danger zones were on the statute books.

He declined to state on what principles of international law this Government would rest its case, saying he preferred first to get all the facts.

American shippers generally, he said, are so well satisfied with the way they are getting on with the belligerents that the State Department has not been called upon to write any notes on their behalf.

President Roosevelt told reporters yesterday he hoped to get back the City of Flint.

U. S. Expects No Difficulty.

A report from United States Ambassador Steinhardt in Moscow, he said, explained that all the facts were not yet known there. Mr. Roosevelt added that he had no information as to the whereabouts of the American crew supplanted by Germans on the trip to Murmansk.

Washington officials expected no difficulty from Russia in getting the City of Flint and her crew released. They pointed to three factors in support of their view:

1. Word from Moscow that Russia had interned the German prize crew aboard the freighter.

2. A statement at the same time that the American ship was being detained only temporarily.

3. The willingness with which the Russian Government promised Ambassador Steinhardt to get all possible facts from Murmansk port authorities.

The case appeared to some officials to be a likely means of clarifying Russia's position either as a neutral or as a virtual ally of Germany in the European war.

The United States contends that a neutral country should not permit her ports to be used as a repository for ships taken by a belligerent. If Russia permits her ports to be used as a refuge for German vessels and their prizes which are unable to reach Germany because of the British blockade, she, in the American view would be going beyond the limits of neutrality.

What would be done here in that case is a matter of pure speculation, although it is not improbable that Russia would have to be named in the President's neutrality proclamations along with the other belligerents.

This would cut off shipments of war materials to her under the present law, and would prevent American ships from going to Soviet ports if the neutrality bill before the Senate is enacted. In any event, the United States will insist on the release of the City of Flint and her crew.

Would Forestall Visit.

Russia's position has been a matter of much study here, and officials are not certain what attitude to adopt toward her.

Russia assured this country of her neutrality when she invaded Poland. She also gave a generalized assurance of friendship toward Finland in response to a telegram from Mr. Roosevelt to Soviet President Kalinin, despite the fact that the United States refused to recognize the conquest of Poland by Russia and Germany.

On the other hand, Russia and Germany joined in a recent demand that Britain and France consent to peace, and they agreed to consult on what measures to take in the event their demand was rejected.

There was speculation in some quarters that Russia's expressed readiness to gather full information on the City of Flint case for Ambassador Steinhardt may have been designed to forestall a request by the envoy that he or one of his staff go to Murmansk to talk to the crew of the vessel, if they are there.

It is keenly desired here that an American official go to Murmansk not only to see the City of Flint but also to see what else is going on in that harbor, where several German ships—including the Bremen—are reported to be anchored.

Wife Tells of Contraband.

NORFOLK, Va., Oct. 25 (A. P.).—Mrs. Jesse V. Roberson, wife of the third assistant engineer of the City of Flint, said today that he wrote her on October 3, the day the ship left New York, that it was "loaded to the gills with contraband cargo."

Danes Propose Relaying.

AALBORG, Denmark, Oct. 25 (A. P.).—Danish shippers reported today that they were in contact with American shippers on the possibility of relaying freight to warring nations in Scandinavian boats.

They said the American interests—which were not identified—proposed not to ship directly to belligerents hereafter.

Soviet Notifies London It Considers Shipping Ban Illegal

Reserves Right To Claim Compensation For Any Losses

[By the Associated Press]

Moscow, Oct. 25—Soviet Russia tonight refused to recognize validity of Britain's contraband regulations and informed the London Government that she reserved the right to claim compensation for any losses incurred in enforcement of them.

In a note handed to Sir William Seeds, British Ambassador, by Vladimir Potemkin, Assistant Commissar of Foreign Affairs, the Soviet Government declared it considered the British contraband list a violation of the principles of international law.

Text Of Soviet Note

The Russian note, replying to British notification of the contraband list and the establishment of contraband control ports, said:

"The Peoples Commissariat of Foreign affairs, on instructions of the Government of the U. S. S. R., has the honor to state the following:

"The announcement by unilateral act of the British Government list of goods proclaimed war contraband in the note of September 6, violates the principles of international law which find their general expression in the international declaration of regulations of naval warfare of Febuary 26, 1909, gravely impairs the interests of neutral countries and destroys international trade.

Fears "Abitrariness"

"By including in its lists of contraband such articles and goods as fuel, paper, cotton, fodder for agricultural animals, footwear, clothing and materials for their manufacture and even all foodstuffs—bread, meat, butter, sugar and other foodstuffs—the British Government in fact proclaims contraband basic articles of mass consumption and creates the possibility of unlimited arbitrariness in classing all articles of popular consumption as war contraband.

"This inevitably leads to profound disorganization of the supply of the peaceful civil population with necessities, gravely endangers the health and lives of the peaceful population and portends innumerable calamities for the masses of people."

Cites Law On Air War

"It is known that universally recognized principals of international law do not permit air bombardment of peaceful population of women, children and aged people.

"On the same grounds, the Soviet Government deems it not permissible to deprive a peaceful population of foodstuffs, fuel and clothing and thus subject children, women and aged people and invalids to every hardship and to starvation by proclaiming goods of popular consumption as war contraband.

"Proceeding from the above, the Soviet Government declares that it does not agree to the note of the British Government of September 6 and refuses to recognize any validity of this note.

Disagree With British

"The government of the U. S. S. R. similarly declares that it does not agree to the British note of September 11 and that it does not recognize the validity of this note which informs of unilateral institution by the British Government of a system of control of merchant ships of neutral countries in ports specially designated for this purpose by the British Government.

"The Soviet regards as wholly unfounded and arbitrary the demand for obligatory calling of these ships at the above ports, reinforced in addition, by a threat of forcible bringing of ships into these ports.

Principles Violated

"Such measures violate the elementary principles of the freedom of merchant shipping. Nor do they conform to the international declaration of February 26, 1909, and the decision of the Hague Tribunal of May 6, 1913, in the case of the French steamer Carthage.

"Simultaneously, the Soviet Government cannot fail to declare that merchant ships of the U. S. S. R. are state property and for this reason alone should not be subjected to any measures of compulsion applied to privately owned merchant ships.

"On the strength of the above, the Government of the U. S. S. R. reserves its right to claim from the British Government of compensation for losses to organizations, institutions or citizens of the U. S. S. R. by the above-mentioned measures of the British Government and actions of British authorities."

NAZI THRUST IN APACH AREA IS REPULSED

Poilus On Guard Against Sudden Offensive On Northern Flank

Massing Of At Least 90 Divisions In 100-Mile Stretch Reported

By TAYLOR HENRY
Associated Press Correspondent

Paris, Oct. 25—Reinforced German patrols were reported testing French main lines at the extreme northern tip of the Western front tonight in a series of feeler attacks. Heavy concentrations of troops were noted elsewhere.

A French communique said a Nazi thrust against French positions near Apach had been repulsed.

German and French patrols were active along the entire northern flank from the Luxembourg border to the Rhine where the French are guarding against a sudden German offensive.

French advices received by the high command said the Germans had massed at least ninety divisions on this flank along a one hundred-mile front. This places approximately a million and a half men in the area.

Include Siegfried Line Forces

The ninety divisions included troops actually in the Seigfried line and those holding advance frontier positions. The troop concentrations were considered extraordinarily large unless the Germans are planning an attack.

One military observer said the German force could be lined up shoulder-to-shoulder three-deep all along the one hundred-mile flank.

Premier Daladier had a long conference late today with Gen. Maurice Gustave Gamelin, commander in chief of the allied forces.

Reports of new German troop concentrations behind the Siegfried line led military observers to the belief the Germans might be planning an attack in force despite bad weather along the front.

Advices from Berlin by way of Switzerland said Col. Gen. Walther von Brauchitsch, German chief of staff, was making a detailed inspection of the German lines near Saarbrücken.

German local attacks have been directed in this sector at trying to drive the French from one of their few remaining strongpoints on German soil in the Warndt Forest.

French military observers expressed the belief that if the Germans have decided to launch an offensive all preparations have been made.

Heavy Material Moves Up

French air scouts reported heavy German material had been moved up in attack position. The French command were said to have considered the possibility of a German attack seriously enough to rush fortification lines along the frontier.

The French apparently are determined to rest on defensive tactics, trusting to a winter-long blockade to crack Germany.

The general staff communique this morning said that "on the whole the night has been quiet" and noted "patrol and artillery activity to the west of the Saar."

President Albert Lebrun returned from a trip to the war zone, where he visited Strasbourg, now almost completely empty of civilians, and inspected sandbag protection erected around the Alsatian city's architectural treasures.

The night communique said:

"Our reconnaissance units and those of the enemy have shown a certain activity in the course of the day.

"We repulsed a German detachment in the region close to the Moselle River."

"If she had been sighted," he said, "she would not now be at large."

22,715 Lost in Two Days.

Publication of news of the Stonegate sinking, passed by British censors, was the first admission in England that the 5,044-ton vessel had been lost. It raised to 22,715 tons the losses of British shipping reported in the last two days.

Sinking of four merchant ships off the Spanish coast yesterday led to speculation as to whether a German warship had struck successfully at British convoys.

These ships went down: Ledbury, 3,582 tons, crew of thirty-one saved; Tafna, 4,413 tons, thirty-one of thirty-five seamen saved; Menin Ridge, 2,474 tons, and Clan Chisholm, 7,256 tons, sixty-three seamen missing.

The British announced cryptically that the Tafna, Ledbury and Menin Ridge went down after they were "fired upon." Authorized persons believed it likely that surface raiders were the attackers.

The British Press Association in a report passed for publication said the Clan Chisholm was sunk "presumably by a U-boat while on a homeward voyage to Britain."

These losses raised the total of belligerent and neutral vessels sunk to ninety, of which forty-five have ben British, and the tonnage toll to 399,319—exclusive of cargoes. The known loss of life mounted to 1,774.

The assignment of warships to track down sea raiders would mean the withdrawal of important vessels from stations in the North Sea, weakening the blockade—although London naval circles remarked that no matter how heavy a blockade, it always was possible for ships to slip through on dark, stormy nights.

Question Raised Before.

The question of whether an armed German raider was at large was raised as early as October 2 when the 5,051-ton British steamship Clement was sunk off the coast of Brazil.

[Survivors disagreed on the identity of the attacking vessel. Mentioned were the German freighter Cap Norte, which the British Admiralty announced on Ostober 12 had been captured and the pocket battleship Admiral Scheer. The Schwabenland, a converted merchantman, also was mentioned as the likely raider.]

"This fresh menace will be dealt with according to prearranged plans," Prime Minister Chamberlain told the House of Commons on October 3, referring to the armed raider menace. Presumably he referred to precautionary dispositions of naval vessels.

How Raider Could Be Sunk.

Naval circles said that while the British navy included only three ships—the Hood, Repulse and Renown—that "ship for ship" could catch and smash the Deutschland, two or three British eight-inch-gun cruisers working together would be "quite capable of dealing with her."

The Deutschland, armed with six eleven-inch, eight 5.9-inch and six 4.1-inch guns, has a speed of 26 knots—two knots faster than the general line of British capital ships. The Hood, Repulse and Renown, however, have fifteen-inch guns and a speed of over 30 knots.

If one of these ships met the Deutschland, British naval circles said, there "would be no doubt" about the issue.

The result would be the same if two or three British thirty-two knot cruisers with eight-inch guns met the German raider, but "one British cruiser might be sunk." Even a mass attack of destroyers against the pocket battleship might be successful, these sources added.

The Deutschland is more heavily armored than British cruisers, but her armor is lighter than that of the battle cruisers.

not immediately learned. Some military observers associated it with the recent destruction by the French of three Rhine railroad bridges and the Kembs dam foot bridge. This move was taken as an indication that the French command was preparing for a German attack across the river from Baden.

Forts Are Still Occupied.

Others, however, said that the exodus was a routine measure inspired by the French Army's need of more quarters for troops moving into the Rhineland front.

These observers reported that a large contingent of British troops was moving gradually into the Rhineland, first adapting themselve to life in the third line of Maginot fortresses at the Vosges mountains and then moving forward into the second line of defenses on the eastern slopes of the Vosges.

Farmers have continued to work in the fields within the first six-mile zone ordered emptied of civilians, but the latest orders provided that all persons must leave.

The Rhine front remained quiet. Despite the rise of the river in recent weeks, neither Germans nor French were reported to have left any of their main riverside forts.

Paris Reports Patrol Clashes.

PARIS, Oct. 25 (A. P.).—Sporadic artillery fire boomed along the western front today as small infantry patrols skirmished in the cold and mud west of Forbach, where French troops still occupy a narrow salient on German soil.

Through the sullen rumble of the guns, loudspeakers in the German front lines blared a monotonous refrain: "Frenchmen, lay down your arms and shake hands. The Germans don't want to fight!"

The French soldiers shouted back: "Change the record!"

Military dispatches said that French machine-gunners silenced one loudspeaker mounted on a truck behind the German lines.

The French General Staff summed up the situation in a terse communique this morning, saying: "On the whole the night has been quiet. Patrol and artillery activity to the west of the Saar."

Soldiers Want Jazz.

The lack of action spurred those at home to call for new steps to bolster the morale of the soldiers. The press insisted that radio stations change their programs to suit the taste of the troops, who have been calling for more jazz music.

It was disclosed today that Alfred Napoleon Beauvais, 46 years old, an American legionnaire with two sons in the French Army, had set out for the front with a volunteer ambulance, minus orders or credentials, with his wife. Mr. Beauvais managed to reach a point four miles behind the lines, where he remained for two days before being sent back.

In that time, he said, he transported sixty-eight wounded or ill soldiers to the rear.

President Lebrun returned from a trip to the war zone, where he visited Strasbourg, now almost completely empty of civilians, and inspected sandbag protections erected around the Alsatian city's architectural treasures.

Military commentators said that the Germans yesterday renewed efforts to push the remaining French outposts from German soil near the Warndt Forest.

Infantry in groups of not more than 100 men each were repulsed by French gunfire, these sources said.

Say French Are All Out.

BERLIN, Oct. 25 (A. P.).—The German High Command declared today that the last French soldier had been driven off German soil. An assault by German troops west of Voelklingen yesterday, a communique disclosed, caused the withdrawal of the French "rear guards" across the border.

These "rear guards" were said to have made up the one French company still on German soil. With the exception of this action, the communique said, there were "no special actions" on the western front.

British Hunt for Nazi Raiders

Admiralty Says Deutschland Has Not Been Sighted—Four Ships Lost in Day.

LONDON, Oct. 25 (A. P.).—London's afternoon newspapers gingerly approached today one of the most intriguing and important naval questions of the war—have German warships far more potent than submarines slipped into the Atlantic shipping lanes?

"Did the (German pocket battleship) Deutschland capture the City of Flint?" was the puzzling headline of one edition. News agency essages from Norway headed, British Steamer (Stonegate) sunk by pocket battleship," were passed for publication.

An Admiralty spokesman limited himself to the cryptic comment that the British Navy had not "sighted" the Deutschland.

French Civilians Leaving Rhine

Twelve-mile Strip Near Swiss Frontier Is Given Over to the Military.

BASLE, Switzerland, Oct. 25 (A. P.).—French civilians began a complete withdrawal today from another six-mile strip along the Rhine frontier from Strasbourg south to a point below the Swiss frontier. When this move is completed the area abandoned will extend twelve miles back from the Rhine.

Score of Generals Confer at German Chancellery —Topic Kept Secret.

BRITISH FLY OVER BERLIN

R. A. F. Scouting Flights Also Are Made Over Hamburg and Magdeburg.

BERLIN, Oct. 25 (A. P.).—Germany's next war move will probably be to loose a shower of bombs on England, the authoritative newspaper Nationalzeitung of Essen said today.

This daily is known to be especially close to Field Marshal Hermann Wilhelm Goering, Air Minister and No. 2 Nazi. Hence, its editorials command special attention.

"The moment has come when the war desired by England must rain down upon the British Isle itself," Nationalzeitung said.

"The patience of a people has limits. In their boundless indignation the German people to a man now turn against the British war inciters in order, by a fight which will hereafter be relentless, to create the necessary guaranties for their security from such irresponsible machination."

Generals Confer With Hitler.

More than twenty generals and staff officers conferred for several hours in the Chancellry today, presumably in the presence of Adolf Hitler, but the subject of discussion was not disclosed.

Newspapers throughout Germany took up the cry for a relentless battle, after Foreign Minister Joachim von Ribbentrop's speech in Danzig last night, when he indicated the war was "on in earnest."

In authoritative quarters in Berlin the address was interpreted as having "definitely put an end to foreign reports that Germany is seeking peace under all circumstances."

Newspapers featured the address under glaring headlines. Hitler's Voelkischer Beobachter said editorially "The dice have been cast," while the Hamburger Fremdenblatt characterized the British as "war agitators" and that Germany is waging a war "forced upon her."

The Berliner Lokal Anzeiger, in an editorial headed "Final Settlement," said: "The war which England wanted will continue in the way England desired. Beware, England!"

British Fly Over Berlin.

LONDON, Oct. 25 (A. P.).—The Air Ministry announced today that Royal Air Force reconnaissance during the last twenty-four hours "included night flights over Berlin" and over Hamburg and Magdeburg.

British newspapers reported that the Hamburg Radio station went off the air in the midst of a broadcast of the Ribbentrop speech.

Magdeburg, site of a branch of the Krupp armament factory, is the southernmost point mentioned thus far in Royal Air Force communiques. It is about 200 miles from the western tip of Germany's coastline.

It was also learned here that five German airmen, brought down in recent raids, turned up on the English coast today. Two others are reported to have landed in Denmark.

Also rescued from the North Sea were seven members of the Royal Air Force, unreported for four days when the small boat in which they went to the aid of a disabled British flying boat was caught in a storm.

Chamberlain to Speak.

The Air Ministry's announcement came as Parliament looked forward to Prime Minister Chamberlain's comment on the "fight to the end" speech delivered last night in Danzig by the German Foreign Minister, Joachim von Ribbentrop.

Mr. Chamberlain was expected to deal with the speech in his weekly war report in the House of Commons tomorrow afternoon. It was understood that he would probably reiterate the British determination to fight to "crush Hitlerism," but there was no indication that his statement would elaborate on Great Britain's war aims.

Von Ribbentrop's speech apparently left British officials unmoved, but it brought a salvo of heated retorts from the press.

An official commentary characterized the address as a "clumsy attempt to divide Great Bri-"

...from France."

The statement said that von Ribbentrop had voiced "the same stupid falsehoods about the aggressive intentions of Great Britain—intentions which every one outside Germany fully understands exist only in the imagination of Herr von Ribbentrop and other members of the Nazi Government."

Will Continue on Course.

The British commentary said: "Britain and France will continue on the course they have set themselves until the attitude of the German Government undergoes a change."

This stand was echoed by the London News Chronicle, which commented: "Nothing in the speech can alter the determination of the Allies to redress the wrongs which the Nazis have done."

Referring to Von Ribbentrop's assertion that the war would prove "the doom of the British Empire," the London Daily Express said: "They (the Germans) must resign themselves to a long war if that is their goal. Poor, pale Ribbentrop! He never did understand us."

The London Daily Mail declared that Von Ribbentrop had "given the world another farrago of distortion, half-truths and untruths . . . the truth is thrown more clearly into relief against the background of Nazi falsehood."

In the London newspapers the speech shared attention with accounts of the seizure of the American steamship City of Flint by a German sea raider. Headlines reported, "Anger in the U. S. A." and "America Angry—Nazi Blunder."

Internal Decay.

PARIS, Oct. 25 (A. P.).—Authorized French persons declared today that Foreign Minister von Ribbentrop's speech was an admission of internal decay under the allied blockade.

Nazis Disclose Its Time to Rain War on Britain

Press Asserts Germany's Patience Nearly Gone; Army Chieftains Confer

By The Associated Press

BERLIN, Oct. 25.—More than twenty German generals and staff officers conferred for several hours today at the Chancellery, but the subject of discussion was not disclosed. Foreign circles said Fuehrer Adolf Hitler participated in at least part of the conference.

The German press with one voice echoed Foreign Minister Joachim von Ribbentrop's fighting speech at Danzig last night with such assertions as "There will be no stopping now." The "National Zeitung" of Essen, close to Air Marshal Hermann Wilhelm Goering, intimated once again that bombs must shower on England, as Nazi patience over Britain's "inability to understand" apparently neared an end.

"The moment has come when the war desired by England must rain down upon the British Isle itself," "National Zeitung" said. "The patience of a people has limits. In their boundless indignation, the German people to a man now turn against the British war inciters in order, by a fight which hereafter will be relentless, to create the necessary guaranties for their security from such irresponsible machination."

"Voelkischer Beobachter" said editorially, "The dice have been cast," whilte the "Hamburger Fremdenblatt" characterized the British as "war agitators" and said that Germany was waging war "forced upon her." The Berliner Lokal Anzeiger, in an editorial headed "final settlement," said: "The war which England wanted will continue in the way England desired. Beware, England!"

Nazis regarded as favorable the reaction in neutral countries, especially Italy, to Ribbentrop's address expressing German determination to fight on. "This leads to the belief," said an article entitled "Fight!" in "Boersen-Zeitung," "that not only the meaning and full implication of Ribbentrop's statement are understood but that the full measure of Britain's war guilt is recognized."

Meanwhile, the high command's communique reported another company of French troops had been driven from German soil on the western front. How many remained was not stated. The communique said:

"West of Voelklingen, enemy rear guards to the strength of one company which was still on German soil were attacked and thrown back across the border. Otherwise no special actions."

Military authorities declined to comment on British claims that reconnoitering planes flew over Berlin, Hamburg and Madgeburg last night.

Negotiating to Give Relief

BERLIN, Oct. 25 (AP).—A Quaker field representative from Philadelphia said tonight that the Quakers were negotiating with Nazi relief organizations for permission to assist in caring fo rhte destitute and persons whose hom : were wrecked by the war in Warsaw.

He said the prospects were good that the organization would be allowed to participate "in a specialized way" in the Warsaw relief work. He added that the Quakers' help would probably be limited to providing milk for babies and helping expectant mothers, and that the aid would be extended impartially to all needy without respect to religion, race or nationality.

There was great need, the representative said, but he emphasized that German relief organizations were doing excellent work in caring for the needy civilian population and were feeding a quarter of a million Warsaw citizens daily.

"They are using field equipment which was constructed to provide food for vast Nazi gatherings, and the technical arrangements are the best I ever saw for meeting the problem of feeding thousands of thousands," he said.

He said Warsaw, which he visited last week, was being cleaned up rapidly. He added, however, that thousands of homes were uninhabitable and that tens of thousands of citizens had neither the means of obtaining food nor kitchens in which to prepare it. While German relief was efficient, he said, there still was a great opportunity for specialized work on the part of the Quakers.

SOME POLES VOTE DOWN RUSS RULE

New Elections Set In Eleven Districts Where Needed Majorities Fail

Protest Can Be Shown Only By Scratching Names Of Candidates

By WITT HANCOCK

Associated Press Correspondent

Moscow, Oct. 25—Election results from the western Ukraine and White Russian districts seized by Soviet Russia in partitioning Poland with Germany showed today at least some opposition to Soviet rule.

New elections will be held in eleven districts where Government - designated candidates failed to get the necessary majority for election to new people's assemblies of the Soviet Union.

Indication of opposition was given by less than ten per cent. of the voters, however.

No Substitute Candidates

Since no substitute candidates were proposed, opposing voters could only scratch the Government candidate's name.

Official returns from the Sunday election said 4,433,997 of the 4,776,275 eligible electors voted in the western Ukraine and that candidates' names were scratched on 325,918 ballots.

In White Russia 2,672,280 of 2,763,191 eligibles voted, with 247,245 scratches.

Convene At Lwow Today

Newly elected delegates of the western Ukraine, 1,484 in all, convene tomorrow at Lwow and on Saturday the 927 delegates of White Russia will meet at Belostok (Bialystok).

Diplomatic circles were surprised at radio reports from abroad that Russia had demanded a mutual assistance pact with Finland.

It was known that the Finnish delegation, en route to Helsinki for consultation over Russia's proposals, does not wish to sign such a pact.

May Seek German Armor Plate

In authoritative circles, meantime, the belief was expressed that the Russian economic delegation now en route to Berlin would take up there the question of buying armor plate and naval technical instruments. The delegation is headed by I. T. Tevosyan, Soviet Shipping Commissar.

It was said that Russia is making a determined effort to build up her fleet, but is sadly lacking in many materials and instruments necessary in modern ships. However, it was pointed out, Germany is not in a position to build entire warships for Soviet Russia.

A banquet was given tonight at the Hotel Metropole for the German trade delegation, indicating the possibility some of them may leave tomorrow for Berlin to report on their negotiations here.

HITLER AID NAMED TO GOVERN POLES

Hans Frank to Rule District Not Brought Into Reich.

BERLIN, Oct. 25 (A. P.).—Hans Frank, German Minister Without Portfolio, was designated today to be Governor-General of all Polish territory occupied by Germany but not incorporated in the Reich.

Frank, a decree published in the Government Law Gazette disclosed, will exercise entire administrative authority over the area and be directly responsible to Hitler.

Named deputy under Frank was Arthur Seyss-Inquart, Minister Without Portfolio and former Governor of Austria.

They will assume their posts after the present military commander in Poland is relieved of administrative powers by Hitler.

Since September 30, Frank has been Governor of Poznan, a part of Poland now incorporated in the Reich.

Authority to proclaim law by decree in occupied Polish territory is jointly vested in him, the Ministerial Council for National Defense and the Director of the Four Year Plan. Existing Polish laws are to remain in effect so far as they do not conflict with German laws.

The cost of administration will be borne by the occupied territory.

Election in Russian Area.

MOSCOW, Oct. 25 (A. P.).—The Western Ukraine and White Russia, formerly parts of Poland, overwhemingly elected the nominees of their provisional administrations as delegates to new Peoples' Assemblies of the U. S. S. R. in Sunday's elections, the Government announced today.

Tass, the official news agency, said that in the Western Ukraine 4,433,997 of the 4,776,275 eligible electors voted, but that the candidates' names were crossed off 325,918 ballots.

In White Russia, it said, 2,672,280 persons of the 2,763,191 eligibles voted, with 247,245 opposing the slate of candidates.

Tass said that new elections would be held in eleven Western Ukraine and two White Russian districts, where the candidates failed to get more than half the votes cast. The 1,484 Western Ukraine delegates will convene tomorrow at Lwow and the 927 of White Russia on Saturday at Belostok (Bialystok).

Czech Workers Warned

PRAGUE, Oct. 25 (AP).—Czech authorities tonight took measures to forestall any demonstrations on Oct. 28, anniversary of the founding of Czecho-Slovakia in 1918.

The labor leader, Anton Selenka, of the government national unity party, made a radio address advising workers against "clinging to the dead past." We urged Czechs to labor as usual on a day which formerly was a holiday comparable to the Fourth of July in the United States.

Police reported that "whisper propaganda" was under way to induce Czech workers to parade to the President Wilson statue on the anniversary and to engage in sabotage at their jobs.

EDEN BROADCASTS BRITISH WAR AIMS

Lists Toleration, Liberty, Security and Peace.

LONDON, Oct. 25 (A. P.).—Anthony Eden, Dominions Minister, in a broadcast to the Empire tonight, said that the war aim of Great Britain was "an international order that shall be respected for religious toleration, for the de...nial and not the worship of ... aggressive nationalism, for liberty security and peace."

He declared that Adolf Hitler had forced the war upon Great Britain by flagrant breaches of faith, but already had lost the initiative.

Recalling the world war, he declared that "we are determined this time good will come out of the sacrifices now demanded."

Mr. Eden said that ministers of the dominions who are coming to London for co-ordination talks would discuss the scheme for rapid expansion of the air force with training centered in Canada.

"No action the German forces can take will influence this development, which has no parallel in the world's history," he said. "This time it is the new world which is offering its help to determine the future of the old."

He declared that the outcome of the war could not be in question and that a "patchwork peace, an armed truce must be utterly unacceptable to us."

"It is not because we love war," he continued, "but because we hate it, that we are determined to go on this time until we have finally made an end of a system that has grown to power on breaking promises and glorifying force. This time we must not only win the war, but win the after war and the latter may prove the most difficult task."

Nazis Rig Up Balloon For Dropping Pamphlets

BERNE, Switzerland, Oct. 25 (A. P.).—The Swiss military authorities marveled today at a new German invention—a "robot pamphleteer."

They exhibited a balloon, ten feet in diameter and equipped with a large clock operating a mechanism designed to drop propaganda pamphlets at hourly intervals. Apparently destined for France, the balloon was driven over the Swiss border by adverse winds and found by farmers in a field near Lake Constance.

For some reason the Swiss said, the mechanism failed to release the packages of pamphlets, still attached to the balloon. The pamphlets contained copies of Adolf Hitler's recent Reichstag speech printed in French.

Finland Awaits Moscow Word

Delegates Reach Leningrad on Way Home From Kremlin—Helsinki Bars Concession.

HELSINKI, Oct. 25 (A. P.).—A Finnish delegation en route home from Moscow was reported in authoritative quarters today to be carrying modified Russian demands for consideration by the Helsinki Government.

The Finnish people, who are still without official word as to the nature of the "political and economic" talks at the Kremlin, and the Finnish Foreign Office, which is reported to have only a vague outline of the Russian demands, eagerly awaited the arrival of their emissaries.

The delegation, headed by Dr. Juho Kusti Paasikivi, former Premier, was scheduled to arrive at 9:47 A. M. tomorrow. Dr. Paasikivi and his party reached Leningrad today.

[The Copenhagen newspaper Berlingske Tidende reported today from a Moscow "newspaper source" that the Russian demands now include "certain rights" on the Gulf of Finland islands of Hokhland, Tyaersaari and Seiskari; assurance that the Aaland islands in the Gulf of Bothnia would remain unfortified, and an agreement that Finland would never carry on an anti-Russian foreign policy. The islands mentioned lie on the flank of the Russian Navy's route from Leningrad into the Baltic.]

Finland has reiterated that no concessions damaging to her neutrality or independence would be granted, and to strengthen this there has been a border mobolization and widespread military preparations in the interior, including the removal of civilians from the principal cities.

There was no indication that the Russian proposals—whatever they were—would be accepted readily.

"We know from experience that very often negotiations with Soviet Russia take a long time," said a Government spokesman. "We are not demanding anything of Russia, and in case we don't reach an agreement we are just where we were before."

He said that the Government would continue to make "all defensive preparations, but there is no reason to be alarmed."

Partial blackouts, order of the night in Helsinki and other cities, were being made more complete. Even lights in public telephone booths were ordered dimmed.

A complete blackout will be rehearsed within the next few days.

Shop windows also were receiving the attention of the precaution authorities. Street illumination has been cut by half.

Sweden to Buy Warplanes.

STOCKHOLM, Oct. 25 (A. P.).—The Swedish Parliament today approved an appropriation of 36,000,000 crowns (about $9,000,000) for the purchase of 102 military planes of various types.

Norway yesterday doubled her order for American high-speed fighting planes, raising it to twenty-four.

New Soviet Trade Pacts Considered by England

May Follow Up Agreement for Exchange of Timber

LONDON, Oct. 25 (AP).—The government disclosed today that it was studying the possibility of new trade agreements with Russia.

Emanuel Shinwell, Laborite, asked in the House of Commons whether the government appreciated the "urgent need for extending trade discussions with the Soviet government."

Foreign Affairs Under Secretary R. A. Butler replied: "The possibility of following up the recent agreement with Russia for exchange of timber against rubber and tin, by further arrangements suitable to war conditions, is now under examination."

To another question whether the government would publish details of its unsuccessful attempts last summer to draw Russia into the British-French front, Butler said: "The British government never hides itself."

William Gallacher, Communist, insisted that in negotiations with Russia the government had "refused proposals for the defense of Poland" by Soviet troops, but Butler replied: "I cannot accept the statement."

Lord Camrose Will Quit Ministry of Information

'Organized Myself Out of a Job,' Says MacMillan Aid

LONDON, Oct. 25 (AP).—Lord Camrose, publisher of "The Daily Telegraph," who was appointed chief assistant to Lord MacMillan, Minister of Information, on Sept. 18, told the House of Lords today: "I have managed to organize myself out of a job."

"I have arranged with Lord MacMillan that I should no longer occupy an official position in the ministry itself," he said in debate on the much criticized ministry, which controls propaganda and censorship.

Lord Camrose explained that he had joined to help "with press matters which now have been removed," and said that if Lord MacMillan "is given a fair chance, I have no doubt he will make the ministry function properly."

ITALY KEEPS EYE ON SOVIET BALKAN MOVES

Fascists Say Rome Will Not Yield Position In Southeast Europe

Reiteration Indicates Step Contemplated To Form Bloc

[By the Associated Press]

Rome, Oct. 25—Italy is keeping a wary eye on efforts of Soviet Russia to consolidate her position in the Balkans.

Informed Fascists said that Rome has no intention of yielding her southeastern European position to any power.

They indicate that Italy, having fought in Spain to prevent Bolshevism from gaining a foothold in the Mediterranean, certainly would resist any Communist penetration in another area where Rome considers Italian interests paramount.

These interests, Fascist leaders said, are not only economic but also political and strategic since Italy considers herself a Balkan power as the result of her occupation of Albania.

Dwells On Bloc Leadership

The Fascist press continued to dwell on the possibility of a southeastern European bloc under Italian leadership. Thus far, however, the project has been presented as an insistent demand from Balkan capitals looking to Rome for protection.

The almost daily reiteration of this theme suggested to foreign observers that the Fascist Government might eventually find the appeal so urgent that it could not escape accepting the responsibility.

Such a bloc, if formed, diplomats believed would tend to assume strength in proportion to the vigor of Soviet efforts to establish its influence in the Balkans.

Neither Affirm Nor Deny

Authoritative Fascists would neither affirm nor deny that Italian assurances of support and assistance had been given Hungary in the event of a Russian move, as authoritative Budapest sources reported.

Fascists said even if such assurances had been given the delicacy of the situation would make confirmation impossible.

In informed quarters it was said there were many obstacles to be removed before a solid Balkan bloc could be created. Minority problems and territorial issues which have been a constant cause of dissension must first be settled.

Some progress toward this goal was said to have been achieved particularly through relaxation of tension between Hungary and Rumania.

Yugoslavia was expected to play an increasingly important role in promoting such rapprochement.

Believe Conference Possible

Foreign reports of a possible Balkan conference under Premier Mussolini's leadership were received in Rome without comment, failing to bring either denial or confirmation.

Foreign observers believed that such a conference was possible eventually but that conditions favorable to it were not yet ripe.

Premier Mussolini conferred today with Gen. Augusto Grassi, one of Italy's high-ranking officers. Il Duce previously had piloted his own bombing plane on an early morning flight along Italy's west coast.

The Premier also heard a report from Gen. Attilio Teruzzi, Under Secretary for Italian Africa, that Ethiopia was well on the way toward supplying Italy with raw materials for economic self-sufficiency.

The Under Secretary reported increased gold production in Ethiopia and outlined extensive plans for a greater output of minerals and production of foodstuffs.

Italy And Greece Agree To Open Pact Discussion

Athens, Oct. 25 (AP)—Italy and Greece have agreed to start negotiations in the near future on a pact of friendship and non-aggression, it was reported authoritatively tonight.

The pact would replace the present treaty of friendship and arbitration which expires this year.

Negotiations for a new accord were seen as following Italy's desire for a Balkan bloc under Rome's leadership to prevent Soviet expansion into southeastern Europe.

May Help Turkish Relations

Italy and Greece recently agreed to reduce their armed forces on the Greek-Albanian frontier. Since Greece is a military ally of Turkey, diplomats expressed belief that Greece might help promote good relations between Italy and Turkey.

Istanbul reports said representatives of Turkey, Iran, Iraq and Afghanistan were conferring there today. The four states are united in a pact designed to block Soviet expansion through one of their countries to the Dardanelles or the Persian Gulf, both of which have figured in traditional Russian aims.

Yugoslavia and Italy Joining With Hungary to Bar Red Drive

Rome and Belgrade Reported to Have Pledged Aid to Budapest if Soviet Moves Against Ruthenia.

BUDAPEST, Oct. 25 (A. P.).—The presence of Soviet Russian troops on the Polish side of the Carpathian Mountains is forging unity among Hungary, Yugoslavia and Italy to prevent any march of Communism into southeastern Europe, it was indicated in authoritative quarters today.

It was said authoritatively that should there materialize any threat of a Russian advance into Ruthenia, the former Czecho-Slovak province which Hungary occupied last March, Hungary would have the aid of Italy and Yugoslavia if it became necessary for her to take up arms.

These quarters said that Hungary had received such assurances from Italy and Yugoslavia.

Hungary, an anti-communist stronghold since the communist rule of Bela Kun in 1919, is was said, is determined to make the Carpathians a barrier to any further westward advance of Communism.

This objective, it was said, is supported by Italy and Yugoslavia, the one Fascist, the other strongly anti-communist, because they fear that if the Red Army once passed this natural bulwark, it would find little to stop it short of the Adriatic.

It also was said authoritatively that should there be a Russian invasion of the Rumanian province of Bessarabia, Hungarians probably would be impelled to march to the Carpathian range in that country—Carpathian range in that country-through the western Rumania province of Transylvania.

Red Troops Close at Hand.

So far, there has been no clear indication that such a threat, to Ruthenia or Bessarabia, would develop. Rumania has received official assurances that Russia does not intend to make any demands against her, and the Russian press has been emphasizing a desire for more friendly relations with Hungary.

But Red troops in considerable numbers have been reported across the border from Ruthenia, which is largely populated by Ukrainians such as inhabit the southern part of Poland. The Red army "liberated" the Ukrainians in Poland during the German invasion.

New tension also has been reported in Rumania, despite Russian assurances, where it was reported by political circles that im-portant developments, are imminent in the Balkans. King Carol's envoys to Bulgaria and Turkey were summoned home for consultation.

Authoritative quarters reflected the widely expressed view among Balkan diplomats that if it were Russia's purpose to thrust her influence into the Balkans, she would move as soon as she has disposed of her negotiations with Finland and while Germany is occupied by Great Britain and France.

Troops Crossing Prevented.

These informants said that Italy's "promise" of support to Hungary was manifest last August when the Hungarian Government refused to permit German troops to cross its territory to attack Poland. These sources disclosed it was this request, which sent Foreign Minister Count Csaky on a hurried departure from conferences with German leaders at Munich to Rome.

They said that Premier Mussolini then informed Adolf Hitler that he was ready to send 100,000 bersaglieri (sharpshooters) into Hungary to protect their neutrality, and that Hitler then abandoned the idea of trans-Hungarian troop movements.

While Hungary is determined not to admit German troops to her soil, it was said, she would not hesitate at opening the door to Italians and Yugoslavs, if it became necessary to preserve the Carpathian barrier.

One factor in Rumanian uneasiness, it was believed by observers here, was the report yesterday that many Bulgarian Free Corps fighters in Dobruja were arrested after an attack in which they wounded two gendarmes and suffered heavy losses themselves. The Bulgarian minority in Dobruja, once Bulgarian territory, frequently has carried on agitation against Rumanian authority.

Tension in Dobruja.

Reports from Sofia said there had been an increase of tension in the Dobruja district recently because of enforced employment of many Bulgarian peasants on trench digging and fortification work near the Bulgarian frontier. Requisitioning of cattle and horses by Rumania authorities also was said to have provoked resentment.

In Sofia, where King Boris decreed the dissolution of Parliament following formation of a new cabinet by Premier George Kiosseivanov, the Bulgarian Government reiterated a policy of peace and neutrality.

Increasingly close relations between Bulgaria and Russia were seen in a report that an air convention permitting Soviet engineers to construct a large airdrome at Bourgas, on the Black Sea, was nearing completion.

30.24-4263

Attitude In Rome.

ROME, Oct. 25 (A. P.).—Well informed Fascists said today that Italian diplomatic support for Hungary in resisting any Soviet Russian move toward the Balkans would harmonize with Fascist policy. There was no confirmation, however, that Italy already had given Hungary assurances of aid in this connection.

Italy, Fascists said, is watching her Balkan interests closely and will not permit any Power to jeopardize them.

It was noted that the speech delivered in Danzig yesterday by German Foreign Minister Joachim von Ribbentrop evoked no evidences of Italian enthusiasm. The newspapers reported it without comment.

Bulgarian Elections Called.

SOFIA, Oct. 25 (A. P.).—A royal decree today ordered elections for a new Parliament to start on December 24.

This followed upon King Boris's dissolution of Parliament in response to a request by the Government of Premier George Kiosseivanov.

The Government asked for a new election to provide a better determination of public opinion on general policies and uphold Bulgaria's present policy of peace and neutrality.

HUNGARIANS DOUBT RUMANIAN DEFENSE

Believe Russia Would Have No Difficulty in Regaining the Province of Bessarabia

ASSERT ALLIES WON'T AID

Budapest Is Ready to Check Communists by Seizing the Transylvanian District

BUDAPEST, Hungary, Sept. 25 (AP)—Diplomats familiar with the Balkans said tonight that if Russia extends her influence by moving into the Rumanian Province of Bessarabia she would be met with little or no resistance.

These sources, who said they expected Russian action soon if the Soviet intends to push her influence into Southeastern Europe, advanced the belief that Rumania probably would be compelled to fight alone if she defended Bessarabia.

In such event, they said, Hungary probably would be forced to move immediately into Transylvania, which she lost to Rumania after the World War, as a "self-defense" measure to hold the Carpathian Mountains as a barrier against further Communist expansion into Central Europe.

Clear indications of Russian intentions against Bessarabia have been lacking so far. Rumania has received official assurances that Russia has no demands on that former Soviet territory. But despite these assurancees new tension has been reported in Rumania, and King Carol's envoys to Bulgaria and Turkey have been summoned home for consultation.

Political circles have reported from Rumania that "important developments are imminent in the Balkans."

Difficulties for Rumania

Rumanian officials have maintained stoutly that their country would fight, even without allies if necessary, to maintain her territorial integrity, but these diplomats pointed out that:

1. Turkey, aligned with Rumania in the Bankan entente, was exempted from fighting Russia under her new mutual assistance pact with Britain and France.

2. The Western powers already have closed their eyes to the Soviet march into Poland. Would they do likewise in event of similar action in Rumania?

3. Italy and Yugoslavia are authoritatively reported here to be backing Hungary, should she advance to the Carpathians in Rumania—occupying the former Hungarian province of Transylvania in the meantime—to hold that natural barrier against communism.

Informed quarters in Budapest expressed the belief that Britain and France would hesitate to declare war on Hungary, Yugoslavia and Italy. Without Turkey's help, diplomats said, it would be virtually impossible for the Western powers to fulfill their guarantees of independence to Rumania.

[Although the Turkish-British-French pact exempted Turkey from involvement in any war between Russia and the Western Allies, it provided that she would aid the Allies if they had to fight to fulfill their guarantees to Rumania and Greece.]

Bulgaria Also Has Claims

To further complicate the British-French position in this part of Europe, Balkan diplomats said the position of Bulgaria would have to be borne in mind. Bulgaria also never has recognized her claims to Dobruja, now Rumanian territory.

Some diplomats said they believed Britain and France would favor a Hungarian march into Transylvania as erecting a barrier against communism if they saw it impossible to prevent a Soviet march into Bessarabia.

They pointed out further that it might be in Germany's interest to have the Carpathian Mountain range in the hands of Hungary, which could curb Russian expansion into Germany's sphere of influence while the Nazis are occupied on the Western Front.

Budapest newspapers today printed dispatches from Rome expressing Italian expectations that Russia soon would demand Bessarabia.

"These Italian politicians are convinced that such Russian demands would meet no other resistance than that of Rumania," said the independent Uj Magyarsag.

The Budapest press also featured dispatches from the Berlin Boersen-Zeitung which declared "any Rumanian idea that Turkey will cooperate with her conflicts completely with reality."

SWISS-GERMAN PACT

Trade Accord Requires Nazis to Thaw Part of Debt.

BERNE, Switzerland, Oct. 25 (AP).—A Swiss-German economic and clearing agreement was signed yesterday.

The agreement provides for war time trade clearing arrangement which, because of Switzerland's determination to maintain her neutrality position in trade with all her neighbors, resulted in prolonged negotiations.

Details of the accord were lacking, but it was known that it concerns facilities for bringing German coal into Switzerland and for thawing out at least a part of a 116,000,000 franc debt (about $27,000,000), which Germany owes the Swiss.

Turn Sidewise, With Legs Apart, Briton Advises

LONDON, Oct. 25 (AP).—The man who started the British Navy's submarine service, now a retired admiral, gave some advice today on how to behave when a bomb explodes close by. Turn sideways to the bomb, legs apart, advised Sir Reginald Bacon, who was Controller of Munitions Inventions for a time during the World War.

He said: "If you are fifteen or twenty yards off, you have time to turn sideways. This takes about a tenth of the time needed to fall flat." He cited cases to support his point.

20 Ships Reported Held in Archangel

NARVIK, Norway, Oct. 25 (AP)—The skipper of a Swedish tramp steamer arriving from Archangel, Russian Arctic port, reported today that twenty foreign freighters were being held there by Russian authorities.

He said that the vessels could not get their loadings and that Russian authorities forbade them to leave. He said many of the crews were running short of food.

His ship was permitted to leave Archangel, he said, only after a Swedish diplomatic protest to Moscow backed by Swedish refusal to permit a Russian ship of the same tonnage to leave a Swedish port.

Swiss Confiscate Red Leaflets

A communique said the tract contained "a series of incorrect assertions concerning the Federal government's policy."

Heavy Gunfire Heard Off Netherlands Coast

ZANDVOORT, The Netherlands, Oct. 25 (A. P.)—Many persons in this west coast resort town reported hearing sounds of heavy gunfire between 11 and 11:30 A. M. (5 and 5:30 A. M., Eastern standard time) today, seemingly coming from the North Sea.

Nothing could be seen, however, and there were later indications that the firing might be coming from Netherlands coastal batteries shooting at belligerent planes over Holland territory.

POPE PIUS DELAYS FIRST ENCYCLICAL

Publication Before Next Week Reported Unlikely.

VATICAN CITY, Oct. 25 (A. P.).—Prelates said today that the first encyclical of Pope Pius XII would be delayed, probably until next week.

The encyclical had been expected on Saturday, but today's informants reported without explanation that publication had been postponed for several days.

Pope Pius is expected to return to the Vatican on Friday from his summer palace at Castel Gondolfo.

His first appointment of new cardinals also was reported likely in the near future. Officials said that the first Consistory was almost certain to occur in December.

Among those mentioned as likely to be named at that time was Archbishop Spellman of New York as successor to the late Cardinal Hayes.

It was considered unlikely that the first list would include another American to replace Cardinal Mundelein of Chicago, who died on October 2. However, the Most Rev. Stephen J. Donahue, Auxiliary Bishop of New York, is mentioned prominently as a possible successor to him as Archbishop.

In the seven months since the election of Pope Pius, death has reduced the College of Cardinals further by four, leaving thirty-one Italians and twenty-six others.

It was believed unlikely that the Pope would bring the college to its maximum of seventy at his first consistory.

Germans Using Balloons As 'Robot Pamphleteers'

Swiss Find Bag Fitted to Drop Propaganda on Hourly Schedule

BERNE, Switzerland, Oct. 25 (AP).—Swiss military authorities marveled today at a new German invention, a "robot pamphleteer."

They exhibited a balloon, ten feet in diameter and equipped with a large clock operating a mechanism designed to drop propaganda pamphlets at hourly intervals. Apparently destined for France, the balloon was driven over the Swiss border by adverse winds and found by farmers in a field near Lake Constance.

For some reason, the Swiss said, the mechanism failed to release the packages of pamphlets, still attached to the balloon. The pamphlets contained copies of Adolf Hitler's Oct. 6 Reichstag speech—printed in French.

PARIS, Oct. 25 (A. P.).—Maritime officials announced today that a French armed trawler had taken the 7,910-ton Norwegian tanker Elise into an unidentified French port with 11,000 tons of oil, which they said was consigned to Germany.

The officials said that the Elise had been halted and boarded off Cape Finisterre, on the northern coast of Spain, while en route from Syria to Rotterdam.

Britain Denies Sending Poison Gas to Poland

Chamberlain Refutes Nazi Charge Again as Impudent Lie

LONDON, Oct. 25 (AP).—Prime Minister Neille Chamberlain told a House of Commons questioner today that he was grateful for the opportunity for "stating categorically once more that poison gas has never been supplied by this country to Poland."

Arthur Henderson, Laborite, asked the Prime Minister whether, in view "of the repeated official German allegations that gas was supplied to the Polish government by His Majesty's government, in breach of the anti-gas Geneva convention of 1925, he would make a statement."

Chamberlain replied: "The Secretary of State for War has already caused a most explicit denial to be made of this impudent and transparent falsehood. I am grateful, however, for the opportunity of stating categorically once more that poison gas has never been supplied by this country to Poland in any form."

Bishop of Bradford Calls War 'A Sin Against God'

British Churchman Says Nation 'Cannot Disclaim All Guilt'

LONDON, Oct. 25 (AP).—The Right Rev. A. W. F. Blunt, Bishop of Bradford, in a letter to his clergymen today termed the war "an appalling sin against God" and declared, "We cannot disclaim all share in the guilt which has brought it about."

The bishop said "the history of the last twenty years is not one which gives us ground for self-righteousness," and added: "The moral righteousness of the cause in which we have been compelled to take up arms is quite unquestionable. However little we deserve it, we are on God's side in this war."

Started Abdication Crisis

It was a speech by the Bishop of Bradford which first brought the abdication crisis into the open in Great Britain almost three years ago. Though American and Continental newspapers had freely discussed the romnace of King Edward VIII and the then Mrs. Wallis Warfield Simpson, the British press ignored it until Dec. 1, 1936, when the bishop ended his sermon with this statement: "The King needs the grace of God for his office. . . . Some of us wish he gave more positive signs of such awareness."

Newspapers broke their silence, and ten days later the King abdicated.

Volunteer Ambulance At Front Sent Home

PARIS, Oct. 25 (AP).—Alfred Napoleon Beauvais, forty-six-year-old American Legionnaire with two sons in the French Army, conducted his own ambulance service near the front without bothering [illegible] army officials, it was reported here today.

With his wife, Beauvais set out for the front in a volunteer ambulance. He had neither credentials nor orders, but he managed to get within four miles of the front and stay there two days before his unofficial capacity was discovered.

Before he was sent back, he said, he transported sixty-eight wounded or ill soldiers to the rear.

Refugee Plan Is Reorganized By Roosevelt

Modifies Program to Meet Objections Projected by Great Britain and France

WASHINGTON, Oct. 25 (AP).—President Roosevelt has modified his program for the settlement of the ten to twenty million persons he says may be made homeless by the European war.

Objections raised by Britain and France have resulted in a compromise which will be submitted to the executive committee of the Intergovernmental Committee on Political Refugees when it meets here tomorrow.

President Roosevelt said in his address to the committee last week: "All we can do is to estimate on the reasonable doctrine of chances, that when this ghastly war ends there may be not one million but ten million or twenty million men, women and children belonging to many races and many religions, living in many countries and possibly on several continents, who will enter into the wide picture—the problem of the human refugee."

He asked the committee therefore to "start at this time a serious and probably a fairly expansive effort to survey and study definitely and scientifically this geographical and economic problem of resettling several million people in new areas of the earth's surface."

Britain and France, it was learned, have objected to the President's idea. The executive committee adjourned from last week until tomorrow to give the two nations time to think it over.

Britain and France were said to have contended in effect:

1. That they expected to win the war in Europe.

2. That such being the case, the Europe that would exist after the war would not be the Europe of today in which hundreds of thousands of persons are persecuted because of race or religion.

3. That peoples scattered by the war would be returned to their homes. If the regions in which they lived were devastated, the regions would be rebuilt, like France and Belgium after the World War.

4. That consequently there was no need for a vast program involving tremendous shifts of populations and the expenditure of billions of dollars.

Myron C. Taylor, former head of the United States Steel Corporation, and American vice-chairman of the Inter-Governmental Committee, was understood to have presented these views to the President and to have sought his consent to some modification of the plan. As a result, it was said, the plan will be reworded to remove the British and French objections.

Some reservations to the President's plan were also made by organizations in this country which have been helping in the international refugee work started by Mr. Roosevelt and Cordell Hull, Secretary of State.

They contended that some persons who had been contributing to and helping the work were astonished by the President's plan and might lose interest because they figured their contribution toward the huge program envisaged by Mr. Roosevelt would be infinitesimal.

At any rate, teh work of helping the German political refugees—almost all Jewish—will go on. It will take two major forms: The first will call for the mass settlement of refugees in places like the Philippines and the Dominican Republic. The second will seek to get German Jewish emigres out of Switzerland, Holland and Belgium, to prevent their becoming too burdensome for these nations.

Red Cross Allocates $25,000 For Poles

American Funds To Be Used For Sick And Wounded Through German Red Cross

Washington, Oct. 25 (AP)—The American Red Cross said today it had allocated $25,000 for sick and wounded Poles under care of the German Red Cross in that part of Poland now in German hands.

The American Red Cross also is sending two units of basic drugs, each sufficient to stock a hospital for six months, to Rumania and to Hungary.

The drugs will be for Polish refugees, as will be shipments of 20,000 suits of underwear, 10,670 blankets and 8,000 yards of muslin cloth.

Belgium Moves to Buy More Foodstuffs in U. S.

Theunis, Ex-Premier, Declares Nation Feels Blockade Pinch

WASHINGTON, Oct. 25 (AP).—George Theunis, former Belgian Premier now on an economic mission to the United States, indicated after a conference with President Roosevelt today that Belgium was interested in increasing purchases, particularly foodstuffs, from the United States.

Asserting that his neutral country "must have raw materials to keep our economy going on to live," Theunis said that "we feel the pinch of the British blockade."

The need of foodstuffs came first, he said, mentioning cereals in particular. He said cotton also was needed to keep mills operating.

New, special economic difficulties confronted Belgium as a result of the war, since the country was "between the devil and the deep blue sea," Theunis said.

He gave the President a letter from King Leopold of Belgium.

$78,908,525 Exports Barred

Permits to Ship Arms Revoked Since Sept. 5 —Nazis Ordered $49 Worth.

WASHINGTON, Oct. 25 (A. P.).—The State Department announced today that $78,908,525 in export licenses for the shipment of arms to European belligerents had been revoked since invocation of the neutrality act on September 5.

France was the principal sufferer thereby, her revoked licenses amounting to $58,418,113. Great Britain came next with revocations totaling $14,877,086.

Revoked licenses for Germany totaled $49.

The Department announcement showed that licenses for shipments to many of Britain's dominions and colonies had been revoked, including $5,078,700 for Australia. Others in the list were British Honduras, Burma, Canada, Federated Malay States, Hongkong, Jamaica, India, Kenya, New Caledonia, Newfoundland, New eZaland New Guinea, Palestine, Southern Rhodesia, Trinidad and the Union of South Africa.

The rush of Britain and France to move as much of their orders as possible at the outset of the war was reflected in figures showing that in the first few days of September France got exports totaling $4,429,323, consisting entirely of aircraft, mostly military; and Great Britain, $1,422,800, consisting entirely of [illegible] craft.

Since January 1, Great Britain obtained $26,550,644 worth of arms from this country and France got $21,148,860 worth.

Licenses issued for export of arms in August totaled $3,687,216 and were down to $508,989 in September.

U. S. EXTENDING NO SUPPORT TO FOREIGN MONEY

Morgenthau Is Quoted as Saying Stabilization Fund Hasn't Been Used.

IN TALK WITH VANDENBERG

Treasury Head Also Discusses Possibility of Change in the Price of Gold.

WASHINGTON, Oct. 25 (A. P.).—Senator Vandenberg, Republican, of Michigan, told the Senate today that Secretary Morgenthau had informed him that the Treasury's $2,000,000,000 stabiliztion fund had not been operated to support foreign currencies since the European war began.

The Senator reported on a telephone conversation he said he held with Mr. Morgenthau after the Secretary had sent him a long letter answering queries propounded earlier by the Senator.

Mr. Vandenberg said the Treasury Secretary had neglected to say whether there was any existing stabilization agreement with England, France or any other foreign country.

"I have only a day-to-day agreement with England, France, Holland, Switzerland and Belgium to deal on their orders for their account, not our account, with settlements at the end of each day," Mr. Vandenberg quoted the Secretary as having told him over the phone.

"There have been no such transactions since the war started."

What the Secretary Said.

In his letter to Senator Vandenberg, the Secretary of the Treasury said:

"If there is a war in any country, before we would use the stabilization fund or any money in the Treasury to assist any country in prosecuting that war, I would come up before the proper committee and ask for guidance."

This pledge was similar to one given by the Secretary last session to the Senate Banking Committee. Its publication today occurred a short time before the Senate was scheduled to consider proposed amendments to the neutrality revision bill which would forbid the Treasury to make loans to warring nations through the stabilization fund.

Referring to a question by Senator Vandenberg as to whether the purchase of foreign gold should not be curtailed and repriced at least for the period of the war, Mr. Morgenthau wrote:

"I am not clear whether by repricing gold you have in mind an increase or a decrease in the price of gold. I judge from the context of your letter, however, that you are inquiring about the effects of a reduction in the dollar price of gold. . . . Any substantial change in the price of gold which is known to be temporary would have seriously disrupting influences on trade and international capital flows. It would introduce a still greater risk element in business relations with foreign countries and would, moreover, increase world speculation in dollar exchange."

Not Buying Foreign Money.

At another point, the Treasury chief said:

"The stabilization fund is not acquiring any currencies of belligerent countries and is holding only a trifling amount of foreign currencies acquired long before the outbreak of the war."

Referring to another senatorial inquiry, Mr. Morgenthau continued:

"You may be asking whether the recent depreciation of foreign currencies will of itself lead to an increased inflow of gold (into the United States). If this is the sense of your question, the answer is probably no. It is, of course, impossible to foretell all this time the total effect of a Europe at war upon our balance of payments.

"The specific effect of the recent depreciations of foreign currencies, however, would clearly seem to operate in the direction of a reduction in gold offerings.

". . . the war well may have the effect of causing a wider distribution of gold among the countries of the world. . . . These considerations as well as others indicate that gold will emerge from this disturbed period with added prestige as the international medium of exchange."

Borah Calls Closer Ties With Canada Impossible

Sees No Use Trying to Better Already Good Relations

WASHINGTON, Oct. 25 (AP).—Relations between the United States and Canada are so friendly, in the opinion of Senator William E. Borah, Republican, of Idaho, that there's no use trying to improve them.

Senator Borah told the Senate that a number of Canadians had asked him to try to do so. He inserted one of his replies in the Congressional Record, saying:

"Let's travel along undisturbed the path which we have so gloriously marked out for ourselves, peace, friendship and commerce, with just a little modification of our trade agreements, if you find it possible to let us have it. But we will not quarrel with you even about that."

Says Germans Knew Athenia Was Carrying $59,000,000

New York Paper Adds That Department Of Justice Is Investigating "Impressive Evidence"

[By the Associated Press]

New York, Oct. 25—The Daily News says the Department of Justice is investigating "impressive evidence that the Germans sank the liner Athenia because they were convinced she carried a treasure of $59,000,000 in gold and securities to underwrite British war purchases."

The evidence came from sources close to two German marine salvage companies which have specialized in learning the exact manifests of treasure-bearing vessels, the News says, and from a chance remark dropped by a newly-arrived German naval attache in Washington.

Richest Wreck

The remark, according to the News, was: "From the moment the Athenia sank, Krupp (a salvage firm) marked it as the world's richest wreck."

"According to the report now being investigated," the News went on, "a London agent of the salvage companies obtained a copy of the Athenia's manifest from the underwriters of her cargo. It was said to have included: $22,000,000 in gold metal and $37,000,000 in negotiable securities.

Germans Had Information

"The German companies and the German Admiralty had this information before the Athenia sailed from Liverpool and Glasgow on her fateful voyage."

The newspaper said it had contacted Eric Redford, Canadian representative of the Athenia's owners, the Donaldson-Atlantic Line, in Montreal, who said he was "not aware that there was any gold on the Athenia."

BY EDWIN STOUT

LONDON, OCT. 25-(AP)-BRITISH NAVAL FORCES, CAST FOR A LEADING ROLE IN THE NEAR-AT-HAND WINTER CAMPAIGN, HUNTED THE SEAS TONIGHT FOR ELUSIVE GERMAN SUBMARINES AND SURFACE RAIDERS COMBINING IN NEW ATTACKS ON THE NATION'S VITAL SHIPPING.

IN A HEAVY BLOW OFF SPAIN, GERMAN RAIDERS WERE CREDITED WITH SINKING FOUR MERCHANT CRAFT YESTERDAY, STRENGTHENING THE BELIEF THAT NAZI SUBMARINES RAIDING THE SEA LANES HAD BEEN AUGMENTED BY THE POCKET BATTLESHIP DEUTSCHLAND AND THE EMDEN II, NAMESAKE OF THE FAMED WORLD WAR "PHANTOM CRUISER."

THESE SINKINGS, IN WHICH BRITAIN LOST 17,671 TONS OF SHIPS IN A SINGLE DAY, BRINGING HER LOSSES THUS FAR TO [redacted] SHIPS [redacted]--ALSO GAVE RISE TO SPECULATION THAT AN ENTIRE CONVOY HAD BEEN ATTACKED.

THE NEWS OF THESE LOSSES REACHED BRITISH READERS AT ABOUT THE SAME TIME THE AIR MINISTRY ANNOUNCED ROYAL AIR FORCE SCOUTING EXPEDITIONS HAD SUCCEEDED IN REACHING BERLIN, HAMBURG AND MAGDEBURG IN NIGHT FLIGHTS. MAGDEBURG IS THE SITE OF A BRANCH OF THE KRUPP MUNITIONS WORKS, 200 MILES FROM THE GERMAN COAST.

THE FULL EXTENT OF THE DAY'S SHIPPING LOSSES WAS NOT PASSED FOR PUBLICATION UNTIL TODAY WHEN A CRYPTIC ADMIRALTY STATEMENT SAID THAT THREE OF THE VICTIMS, THE 4,413-TON TAFNA, THE 3,528-TON LEDBURY AND THE 2,474-TON MENIN RIDGE HAD BEEN "FIRED UPON."

THE BRITISH PRESS ASSOCIATION SAID THE FOURTH SHIP, THE 7,256-TON CLAN CHISOLM, WAS SUNK "PRESUMABLY BY A U-BOAT WHILE ON A HOMEWARD VOYAGE TO BRITAIN."

ALL WERE SUNK IN THE SAME VICINITY--ABOUT 80 MILES WEST OF THE STRAITS OF GIBRALTAR. EIGHTY-NINE PERSONS WERE REPORTED DEAD OR MISSING.

LONDON NEWSPAPERS, MINDFUL OF THE HEAVY LOSSES INFLICTED ON BRITISH SHIPPING IN THE WORLD WAR BY GERMAN SURFACE RAIDERS, ASKED THE QUESTION: HAVE THESE WARSHIPS, FAR MORE POTENT THAN SUBMARINES, SLIPPED INTO ATLANTIC SHIPPING LANES?

"DID THE DEUTSCHLAND CAPTURE THE CITY OF FLINT?" ONE NEWSPAPER ASKED IN COMMENTING OF THE SEIZURE OF THE UNITED STATES VESSEL TAKEN INTO THE RUSSIAN PORT OF MURMANSK BY A GERMAN PRIZE CREW.

NEWS AGENCY REPORTS HEADED "BRITISH STEAMER (STONEGATE) SUNK BY POCKET BATTLESHIP" WERE PASSED FOR PUBLICATION

(REPORTS FROM OSLO, NORWAY, YESTERDAY SAID THE 5,044-TON FREIGHTER STONEGATE HAD BEEN SUNK IN MID-ATLANTIC BY THE DEUTSCHLAND. HER CREW AND THE CREW OF ANOTHER SUNKEN BRITISH SHIP--38 MEN IN ALL--WAS RESCUED BY THE UNITED STATES VESSEL CITY OF FLINT AND LANDED AT TROMSOE, NORWAY, BEFORE THE CITY OF FLINT WAS TAKEN ON TO MURMANSK.)

AN ADMIRALTY SPOKESMAN SAID MERELY THAT THE BRITISH NAVY HAD NOT "SIGHTED" THE DEUTSCHLAND.

"IF SHE HAD BEEN," HE ADDED, "SHE WOULD NOT NOW BE AT LARGE."

ON THE BASIS OF KNOWN SPEED RECORDS AND ARMAMENT BRITAIN HAS ONLY THREE WARSHIPS--THE BATTLE CRUISERS REPULSE, RENOWN AND HOOD--BOTH FAST AND POWERFUL ENOUGH TO OVERTAKE AND CONQUER GERMANY'S POCKET BATTLESHIPS.

NAVAL CIRCLES SAID, HOWEVER, THAT TWO OR THREE EIGHT-INCH-GUN CRUISERS WORKING TOGETHER WOULD BE "QUITE CAPABLE" OF DEALING WITH THE DEUTSCHLAND.

(BESIDES THE DEUTSCHLAND, GERMANY HAS TWO OTHER POCKET BATTLESHIPS, THE ADMIRAL SCHEER AND THE ADMIRAL GRAF SPEE.)

FIRST REPORTS THAT AN ARMED GERMAN RAIDER WAS AT LARGE WERE HEARD AS EARLY AS OCT. 2 WHEN THE SINKING OF THE 5,051-TON BRITISH STEAMER CLEMENT OFF THE COAST OF BRAZIL BECAME KNOWN.

(THERE WAS DISAGREEMENT, HOWEVER, AMONG THE SURVIVORS AS TO THE IDENTITY OF THE ATTACKING SHIP. THE ADMIRAL SCHEER, THE SCHWABENLAND, A CONVERTED MERCHANTMAN FORMERLY USED AS A MID-OCEAN STATIONFOR A COMMERCIAL AIRLINE, AND THE GERMAN FREIGHTER CAP NORTE, WHICH THE BRITISH ADMIRALTY SAID ON OCT. 12 HAD BEEN CAPTURED, ALL WERE MENTIONED AS THE POSSIBLE RAIDER.)

OBSERVERS POINTED OUT THAT IN THE WINTER MONTHS LONG NIGHTS AND POOR VISIBILITY MIGHT GIVE THE GERMAN RAIDERS A BETTER CHANCE TO ELUDE THE BRITISH CRAFT.

PRIME MINISTER CHAMBERLAIN IN HIS WAR REPORT TOMORROW WILL HAVE AN OPPORTUNITY TO ANSWER GERMAN FOREIGN MINISTER JOACHIM VON RIBBENTROP'S DECLARATION OF A "FIGHT TO THE END" AGAINST BRITAIN.

DURING THE UPPER HOUSE INFORMATION MINISTRY DISCUSSION TODAY LORD CRAWFORD ASKED THAT NEWSPAPERS "WORK THEIR OWN CENSORSHIPS BECAUSE THEY WILL DO IT MUCH MORE EFFICIENTLY."

LORD STRABOLGI A WORLD WAR NAVAL OFFICER TOLD OF "SERIOUS COMPLAINTS" ABOUT "UNNECESSARY DELAYS IN CENSORSHIP."

THE PART THE DOMINIONS ARE TO PLAY IN THE WAR WILL BE DRAFTED AT A MEETING SOON OF CABINET MINISTERS FROM CANADA, AUSTRALIA, NEW ZEALAND AND SOUTH AFRICA. THEY ARE TO BE ACCOMPANIED BY MILITARY AND ECONOMIC ADVISERS.

LONDON, OCT 25-(AP)-THE HOUSE OF LORDS HAS BEEN TOLD BY LORD COBHAM, UNDERSECRETARY OF WAR, THAT FAR FEWER ENEMY ALIENS WOULD BE INTERNED FOR THE DURATION OF THE WAR THAN WAS THE CASE IN 1914-1918.

SPEAKING FOR THE GOVERNMENT LAST NIGHT, HE TOLD THE HOUSE THAT THE FIGURE HE HAD BEEN GIVEN ON THE NUMBER LIKELY TO BE INTERNED WAS BETWEEN 1,000 AND 1,500 AS COMPARED WITH 29,000 IN THE LAST WAR.

LORD COBHAM REPLIED TO A QUESTION BY LORD STRABOLGI, WHO SAID THAT "A NUMBER OF PEOPLE OF UNDOUBTED HOSTILITY TO THE PRESENT REGIME IN GERMANY AND IN SYMPATHY WITH BRITAIN HAVE BEEN INTERNED."

HE SUGGESTED THAT "PERHAPS THE HOME OFFICE ERRED IN BEING A LITTLE TOO CAREFUL."

SPECIAL TRIBUNALS CREATED BY THE HOME OFFICE HAVE BEEN REVIEWING THE CASES OF ENEMY ALIENS TO DETERMINE WHETHER THEY SHOULD BE ALLOWED TO REMAIN AT LARGE IN ENGLAND.

HELSINKI, OCT 25-(AP)-DETERMINED TO MAINTAIN COMPLETE INDEPENDENCE AND NEUTRALITY, FINLAND WAITED IN A SERIOUS MOOD TONIGHT FOR THE RETURN OF HER DELEGATION FROM MOSCOW TOMORROW BEARING NEW RUSSIAN PROPOSALS.

FOREIGN MINISTER ELJAS ERKKO REITERATED THE GOVERNMENT'S DETERMINATION TO STAND FIRM AS HE AWAITED DR. JUHO KUSTI PAASIKIVI, HEAD OF THE DELEGATION, WHO WAS EXPECTED TO GO INTO IMMEDIATE CONFERENCE WITH THE FOREIGN MINISTER AND OTHER OFFICIALS.

IT WAS UNDERSTOOD THE FINNISH DELEGATION WAS BRINGING MODIFIED SOVIET DEMANDS FOR CONSIDERATION OF THE HELSINKI GOVERNMENT AS AN ANSWER TO FINNISH COUNTERPROPOSALS.

THE FOREIGN MINISTER REVEALED THAT AFTER THE STOCKHOLM CONFERENCE LAST WEEK HE HAD BEEN IN DAILY CONTACT WITH THE GOVERNMENTS OF OTHER NORTHERN COUNTRIES ON THE COURSE OF FINNISH-SOVIET NEGOTIATIONS.

ERKKO DESCRIBED A REPORT FROM MOSCOW THAT

ERKKO (CORRECT) DESCRIBED A REPORT FROM MOSCOW THAT RUSSIA MADE THREE-POINT DEMANDS FOR NO FORTIFICATION OF THE AALAND ISLANDS, CONCESSION OF CERTAIN ISLANDS IN THE GULF OF FINLAND AND A FRIENDLY POLICY BY THE FINNISH GOVERNMENT TOWARD RUSSIA AS "JUST AS UNFOUNDED AS ALL OTHERS."

IN A STATEMENT TO SCANDINAVIAN CORRESPONDENTS ERKKO SAID FINLAND WOULD "REMAIN FIRM IN HER INSISTENCE THAT FINNISH INDEPENDENCE AND NEUTRALITY BE INVIOLATE."

SPOKESMAN REVEALED THAT THE SOUTHERN COAST OF FINLAND WAS MINED ALONG ALMOST THE ENTIRE LENGTH INSIDE TERRITORIAL WATERS. SHIPS HAVE BEEN WARNED AND ADVISED TO GET FINNISH PILOTS BEFORE PROCEEDING IN CERTAIN WATERS. TOMORROW NIGHT A DEFENSE PROGRAM WILL BE HELD IN THE NATIONAL THEATER AND ERKKO WAS EXPECTED TO SPEAK.

LINING OF THE BORDER WITH TROOPS, FORTIFICATIONS, REMOVAL OF THOUSANDS OF CITIZENS AND CARE FOR DEPENDENTS OF RESERVISTS IS PROVING A HEAVY BURDEN ON FINLAND BUT A GOVERNMENT SPOKESMAN SAID "THERE IS NO REASON TO WORRY." HE SAID EXPENSES COULD BE REDUCED IF NECESSARY AND THERE WAS NO TENDENCY EITHER TO HURRY OR DELAY NEGOTIATIONS.

AT THE HEIGHT OF DEFENSE PREPARATIONS IT WAS ESTIMATED FINLAND WAS SPENDING ABOUT $1,000,000 DAILY, BUT THIS HAS BEEN REDUCED.

IN 1938 THE TOTAL APPROPRIATION FOR DEFENSE WAS $14,286,000.

NEWSPAPERS ARE PRINTING DAILY SEVERAL COLUMNS OF VOLUNTARY CONTRIBUTIONS TO THE DEFENSE FUND.

NEW BLACKOUT RESTRICTIONS WENT INTO EFFECT, LEAVING ONLY DIM STREET LIGHTS BURNING.

THE WAR TODAY

BY DEWITT MACKENZIE

IS THAT A BIT OF GRAVEL RASPING THE BERLIN-ROME AXIS, OR ARE WE HEARING THINGS?

ANYWAY, IT ISN'T SURPRISING TO GET REPORTS THAT SIGNOR MUSSOLINI IS QUIETLY TRYING TO FORM A NEUTRAL BUT SELF-DEFENSIVE BLOC WITH THE BALKAN STATES, PRESUMABLY INVOLVING HIS ADOPTION OF A MORE FRIENDLY ATTITUDE TOWARD THE ANGLO-FRENCH ALLIES WHO MAKE WAR TO A FINISH AGAINST HIS AXIS PARTNER.

IT STILL ISN'T SURPRISING EVEN WHEN WE FIND THAT ONE OF THE CHIEF PURPOSES OF SUCH A BLOC WOULD BE TO STYMIE FRIEND HITLER, AS WELL AS STALIN OF THE RUSSIAS, FROM EXTENDING THEIR POWERFUL INFLUENCE OVER SOUTHEASTERN EUROPE WHICH, MORE THAN INCIDENTALLY, IL DUCE REGARDS AS HIS RIGHTFUL PRESERVE.

MUSSOLINI'S AIM, IF HE MAKES THIS MOVE, WILL BE TO SAFEGUARD PRESENT ITALIAN INTERESTS, AND AT THE SAME TIME TO SEIZE THE OPPORTUNITY OF STRENGTHENING HIS OWN POSITION IN THE BALKANS WHILE THE GOING IS GOOD.

AND ONE CAN'T ESCAPE THE THOUGHT THAT AS HE GOES ABOUT THIS JOB THERE IS GLADNESS IN HIS HEART, FOR REASONS WHICH IN LARGE DEGREE ARE FAIRLY PERSONAL.

NOW I DON'T PRESUME TO SPEAK FOR SIGNOR MUSSOLINI. BUT TAKING ADVANTAGE OF THE PREROGATIVE OF SPEAKING FOR MYSELF, I FEEL QUITE SURE THAT THE FASCIST LEADER IS A VERY, VERY HAPPY MAN TO SEE WHAT LOOKS LIKE A CHANCE TO EASE THE BONDS OF HIS GERMAN PACT.

FROM FIRST HAND INVESTIGATION IN ITALY AND NEIGHBORING COUNTRIES NOT SO LONG AGO IT IS MY BELIEF THAT THE ITALO-GERMAN ALLIANCE WAS A MARRIAGE OF CONVENIENCE AND NOT INSPIRED BY ANY AFFECTION.

INDEED, MY INFORMATION IS THAT IL DUCE WAS A RELUCTANT, IF NOT ENTIRELY UNWILLING, PARTY TO THE UNION AND AGREED TO IT MERELY AS A MATTER OF EXPEDIENCY.

NEUTRAL OBSERVERS IN ITALY, WITH EXCEPTIONAL SOURCES OF INFORMATION, ASSURED ME THAT IF GERMANY WENT TO WAR SHE WOULDN'T HAVE ITALY'S MILITARY SUPPORT. SEEMS LIKE THEY WERE GOOD PROPHETS.

THE BELIEF WAS STRONG THAT MUSSOLINI WOULD BREAK AWAY FROM THE BERLIN-ROME AXIS WHEN A FAVORABLE OPENING OCCURRED.

THIS IDEA WAS STRENGTHENED BY THE VIGOROUS MANNER IN WHICH HERR HITLER WAS REACHING INTO WHAT IL DUCE REGARDED AS HIS SPECIAL ZONE OF INFLUENCE. THERE WAS EVERY INDICATION THAT THE NAZI CHIEF WAS AIMING AT DOMINATION OF THE BALKANS AND THE EASTERN MEDITERRANEAN.

30.24-4275

NOW ALONG COMES RUSSIA WITH SIMILAR AMBITIONS. THUS FAR MUSSOLINI HAS REFRAINED FROM JOINING HIS AXIS ALLY IN SWAPPING DRINKS WITH THE COMMUNISTS. MAYBE AIR MARSHAL BALBO'S NEWSPAPER IL CORRIERE PADANO SPOKE FROM INSPIRATION THE OTHER DAY WHEN IT DECLARED THAT FASCISTS WERE "BORN ANTI-COMMUNISTS AND ARE DETERMINED SO TO REMAIN."

ALL IN ALL, THIS WOULD SEEM TO BE AN OPPORTUNE MOMENT TO TRY TO FORM A BALKAN BLOC UNDER GUIDANCE OF ITALY. THESE SMALL STATES, FIGHTERS THOUGH THEY ARE, HAVE TAKEN TO COVER IN THE FACE OF THE RUSSO-GERMAN STORM, AND THEIR INCLINATION AS A WHOLE IS TO STICK TOGETHER FOR PROTECTION.

A POSSIBLE WEAK SPOT IN THE SCHEME IS THAT TURKEY, WHICH HAS BEEN TAKING THE LEAD IN BALKAN AFFAIRS, LONG HAS DISTRUSTED MUSSOLINI'S EXPANSION PROGRAM. I WAS TOLD IN ANKARA THAT THE TURKS FEARED IL DUCE MORE EVEN THAN HITLER, BECAUSE OF A BELIEF THAT THE ITALIAN LEADER WAS AIMING TO ANNEX RICH LANDS IN TURKEY'S WESTERN ASIA MINOR.

OCT 26 1939

HOWEVER, WHEN THIS DISTRUST HAS BEEN IRONED OUT THERE WOULD SEEM TO BE NO INSURMOUNTABLE OBSTACLE TO THE FORMATION OF A REALLY POWERFUL BLOC WHICH COULD COMMAND RESPECT. BULGARIA IS REPORTED TO HAVE BEEN PLAYING WITH RUSSIA RECENTLY, IN THE HOPE OF REGAINING TERRITORY SHE LOST TO RUMANIA, BUT THERE IS A STRONG LINK BETWEEN BULGARIA AND ITALY IN THE FACT THAT KING BORIS' YOUTHFUL QUEEN IS GIOVANNA, DAUGHTER OF THE ITALIAN KING-EMPEROR.

THE TOTAL ARMED STRENGTH OF AN ITALO-BALKAN BLOC WOULD BE FORMIDABLE IF PROPERLY COMBINED. APART FROM ITALY'S GREAT FIGHTING MACHINES OF LAND, AIR AND WATER (WHICH INCLUDES SOME 1,500,000 SOLDIERS ACTUALLY UNDER ARMS) THE BALKAN STATES WOULD BE ABLE TO PUT INTO THE FIELD ON SHORT NOTICE PERHAPS 5,600,000 TRAINED TROOPS, WITH MILLIONS OF POTENTIAL RESERVES.

FORMATION OF SUCH A BLOC MUST GIVE THE ANGLO-FRENCH ALLIES THE HIGHEST SATISFACTION. SO LONG AS THIS COMBINATION MAINTAINED ARMED NEUTRALITY, IT WOULD IPSO FACTO PROVIDE PROTECTION FOR THE ALLIED RIGHT FLANK WHICH COMPRISES THEIR VAST INTERESTS IN THE EASTERN MEDITERRANEAN.

Nazi Spokesman Says Whole Story Is Not Told.

GERMANY GETS LITTLE NEWS

Will Issue No Statistics Yet—Holds British Understate Facts.

BERLIN, Oct. 26 (A. P.).—A German spokesman implied today that Great Britain was not telling the whole story of the cost in British tonnage of the bitter war at sea.

German submarines, warplanes and surface raiders are almost daily challenging British supremacy on the seas and sunken British shipping is calculated in the hundreds of thousands of tons, though the German Admiralty and Propaganda Ministry, for the time being, are giving out no precise figures on the accomplishments of Nazi sea raiders.

"Our sailors and aviators are out there, at Scapa Flow, in the North Sea and in the vast Atlantic, giving a good account of themselves," a spokesman for the Propaganda Ministry said. "But the whole story cannot be told now and for actual German accomplishments at sea, the world, for the time being, must be content with the understated admissions of the British Admiralty.

Incomplete Picture.

"Germany is issuing no statistics. [illegible] Germany has only an incomplete picture of the success of her actions at sea.

"The accomplishments of airplane raiders are known almost immediately, but the commanders of surface and submarine vessels report only when they have an opportunity to use wireless without danger of interception."

Raiding at sea is the German answer to the British efforts to blockade Germany, it was said in official quarters, and the raiding policy is being guided by Great Britain's conduct of her blockade. Any cargoes in British ships which the British would hold up if they were destined for Germany are regarded as fair game for the German raiders.

No News for Germany.

German naval sources noted with satisfaction that butter rationing is scheduled to be introduced in Great Britain and declared that such a necessity was the result of harassment of the British sea trade.

The closest the Germans have come to giving any precise idea of the progress of the naval warfare was an official German news agency announcement last Saturday that Great Britain had acknowledged the loss of seven ships, grossing 54,000 tons, between October 13 and 15. The British have reported losses since the outbreak of war of [illegible] five ships, totaling 398,[illegible] tons, and yesterday disclosed that German raiders had sent four ships, aggregating 17,761 tons, to the bottom within a single day.

British Admiralty reports, submitted without comment, are the Germans' only information on the little publicized sea warfare. With an announcement of yesterday's sinkings, a Propaganda Ministry spokesman commented: "Anything more would come dangerously near revealing information which, in part, is still unknown to the British. At the moment it is not regarded as wise to be too specific."

SOVIET REPORTS VESSEL SAILING FROM MURMANSK FLYING AMERICAN FLAG

Nationality Of Crew In Charge Not Disclosed. Washington Hopes For Diplomatic Victory. Germans Claim Ship Is Still Theirs

[By the Associated Press]

Copenhagen, Oct. 26—A dispatch by DNB, German official news agency, from Moscow tonight implied that a German prize crew again was in control of the United States freighter City of Flint after it had been set free from Murmansk by Soviet Russian authorities.

The dispatch said the City of Flint had been released and ordered to leave Soviet waters in accordance with the provisions of international law concerning such cases.

DNB said the German prize crew which took the City of Flint into Murmansk, and which was interned and then released, was again aboard the ship.

While DNB did not specifically say so, the dispatch implied the German crew again was in control of the vessel.

By WITT HANCOCK
Associated Press Correspondent

Moscow, Oct. 26—The Soviet Government tonight released the American freighter City of Flint, and well-informed sources said she had sailed under the United States flag from Murmansk, Russian port where she was taken Monday by a German prize crew.

The Government announcement said merely that the ship had been given clearance after inspection of her cargo and ordered to leave port immediately, but failed to throw any light on the all-important question whether the American or German crew was directed to take the vessel away.

German Reports Denied

Well-informed sources, however, denied German reports that she had sailed under the Nazi banner.

[Editor's Note: Even if the City of Flint were flying an American flag, it would not be certain that she was actually under control of an American crew. If a German crew in control of the vessel were following United States naval practice, an American or other neutral flag would be hoisted and flown until the vessel reached a German port and her status determined by a prize court.]

U. S. Envoy Reassured

Laurence A. Steinhardt, United States Ambassador, however, received assurances during the day the American crew of the Flint was safe aboard the ship.

Earlier Tass, official Soviet news agency, had announced the Government's intention of examining the City of Flint's cargo and had indicated the vessel would be tied up at Murmansk at least a day or two longer.

Then the agency and the Soviet radio made the surprise announcement of the freighter's release.

Murmansk Remote

Because of the remoteness of Murmansk, the embassy had said, it had no way of knowing in what position the Flint was lying in the harbor or what treatment the ship and her crew were receiving.

The embassy said it was dependent on the Soviet Foreign Office for all its information, but did not call on the Russian Foreign Office today.

Meantime a sharp attack on efforts to repeal the United States neutrality law was made in the Soviet newspaper Red Star.

Backed By "Reactionaries"

"The efforts of English and French imperialists to convert the war in western Europe into a world war are meeting with active support on the part of reactionary circles in the United States," the newspaper said.

"The American bourgeois press is striving to conceal from the people the imperialist aims of the war.

"Attempts to silence the Communist party of the United States, and arrest of its general secretary, Comrade Browder (Earl Browder, under Federal indictment in New York on a charge of obtaining and using a fraudulent passport), is direct proof of what the policies and intention of American reactionaries are."

Berlin Confident Flint Will Reach Reich Port

Berlin, Oct. 26 (AP)—Supreme confidence that the American freighter City of Flint would reach some German port safely before long was expressed tonight in well-informed German circles.

These quarters intimated that despite the demand of the United States Secretary of State, Cordell Hull, that the ship be returned to the United States, the vessel would be convoyed from Murmansk by submarines whose commanders would be only too happy if British men-of-war would try to seize her.

Says Moscow Agreed

The Germans had announced officially that the Soviet Government had agreed to release the City of Flint to Germany.

The Nazis' contention that they acted within their rights in capturing the American merchantman and taking her to the Russian port of Murmansk was set forth in a strongly worded official statement which said:

"The City of Flint was without any doubt legally captured because she had contraband aboard."

Soviets' Notice To Britain Is Hailed in Berlin

German Press Talks of 'Serious Trouble' Over Dispute on Contraband

BERLIN, Oct. 26 (AP).—The German press today interpreted Soviet Russia's rejection of Great Britain's contraband list as a "sharp protest against blockade warfare" which might lead to serious trouble between the two powers.

Commenting on what to Germany is one of the war's most serious aspects, Propaganda Minister Paul Joseph Goebbels' newspaper "Der Angriff" said "Moscow's note contains a clear warning susceptible of causing far-reaching consequences unless it is observed." The paper declared Britain had two alternatives—either to alter her contraband list or take the consequences which might result from any seizures of Russian ships.

(Russia, in her protest, called the British contraband list a violation of international law and objected to inclusion of foodstuffs, fuel and clothing which it said would "subject children, women, and aged people and invalids to every hardship and starvation.")

Britain Called Pirate

"Der Angriff" said: "A decisive word has been spoken. Soviet Russia established in this note that England's method of conducting war contradicts all international conventions relating to war-time sea commerce. England's methods are nothing more than open piracy, made no better by the fact that it is practiced by a great sea power."

Meanwhile, a German spokesman hinted that Britain was not telling the whole story of the cost in British tonnage of the bitter war at sea, in which German submarines, warplanes and surface raiders almost daily are challenging British supremacy, with sunken British shipping calculated in the hundreds of thousands of tons.

But the German Admiralty and Propaganda Ministry, for the time being, are giving no precise figures on the accomplishments of Nazi sea raiders.

"Our sailors and aviators are out there, at Scapa Flow, in the North Sea and in the East Atlantic, making a good account of themselves," a Propaganda Ministry spokesman said.

"But the whole story cannot be told now, and for actual German accomplishments at sea, the world, for the time being, must be content with the understated admissions of the British Admiralty. Germany is issuing no statistics. In fact, Germany has only an incomplete picture of the successes of her actions at sea. The accomplishments of airplane raiders are known almost immediately, but commanders of surface and submarine vessels report only when they have an opportunity to use wireless without danger of interception."

Follow British Policy

Raiding at sea is the German answer to British efforts to blockade Germany, it was said in official quarters, and the raiding policy is being guided by Britain's conduct of her blockade. Any cargoes in British ships which the British would hold up if they were destined for Germany are regarded as fair game for the German raiders.

"We are doing to them what they are trying to do to us," was one comment in quarters close to the government.

German naval sources noted with satisfaction that butter rationing was scheduled to be introduced in Britain, and declared such a necessity was the result of harassment of British sea trade.

British Admiralty reports, submitted without comment, are the Germans' only information on the little publicized sea warfare. With an announcement of yesterday's sinkings, a propaganda ministry spokesman commented: "Anything more would come dangerously near revealing information which, in part, still is unknown to the British. At the moment it is not regarded as wise to be too specific."

A Russian trade delegation, said to be particularly interested in the developing of artificial rubber and co-operation under the Soviet-Nazi trade pact. The delegation is returning a visit made by a German delegation to Russia.

Headed by I. T. Tevosyan, Commissar for Shipbuilding, the Russian mission will visit heavy machinery plants to make purchases to offset orders placed in Russia by Germany.

Germany is negotiating with Russia for grain, oil, cotton, raw phosphate, flax, and manganese and other ores to replace sources shut off by the British blockade.

One million tons of fodder, the scarcity of which beset Germany in the World War, will be the first delivery to arrive from Russia, which bulwark against a British blockade, made the former Free City of Danzig. The first shipments were expected to arrive soon.

A fodder shortage at the beginning of the World War caused a wholesale slaughter of hogs, the number falling from 20,000,000 to 8,000,000 by 1915. The country never recovered from this loss of meat and fat.

Authorities said a repetition of this would be prevented and that Germany was expected to have 26,000,000 head of hogs by Dec. 1. In addition to the Russian source, authorities said southeastern Europe, especially Rumania, had agreed to increase exports of fodder.

Further consolidating Nazi gains in the east, Feuhrer Adolf Hitler made the former free city of Danzig a province and named Albert Forster, former Nazi district leader there, as Governor. The new province also includes the pre-war province of West Prussia. It has a total population of about 2,400,000.

THE NAZI NAVY FACED THE PROBLEM HOW TO GET THE CITY OF FLINT TO HAMBURG FOR THE PRIZE COURT TRVNCK IT MUST RUN A BRITISH BLOCKADE AROUND NORWAY AND THROUGH THE NORTH SEA IF IT IS TO BE BROUGHT INTO COURT. THIS WAS ADMITTEDLY A PRECARIOUS TASK AS THE FREIGHTER HAS BEEN GIVEN SO MUCH PUBLICITY THAT IT WAS FELT BRITAIN WOULD BE ON THE WATCH.

WHETHER THERE WAS ANY OTHER WAY FOR THE REICH TO HAVE THE VESSEL'S CARGO CONDEMNED AS CONTRABAND WITHOUT BRINGING THE SHIP INTO HAMBURG WAS NOT CLEAR. AUTHORIZED SOURCES SAID THE SHIP TONIGHT STILL WAS AT MURMANSK HARBOR. NAZIS HAVE ASSERTED THEY ARE MASTERS OF THE NORTH SEA AS WELL AS THE BALTIC, HOWEVER.

THE FOREIGN OFFICE INFORMALLY GAVE THE AMERICAN EMBASSY A FEW DETAILS OF THE SHIP'S SEIZURE BUT LEFT OPEN A NUMBER OF QUESTIONS.

ANNOUNCEMENT THAT THE SOVIET HAD RELEASED THE FREIGHTER AND THE GERMAN PRIZE CREW TO GERMANY WAS MADE FOLLOWING NEGOTIATIONS BETWEEN THE TWO COUNTRIES. THE REICH ASKED THAT BOTH BE SET FREE ON THE GROUND THEY ENTERED THE RUSSIAN HARBOR IN DISTRESS AND THAT THE SHIP WAS NOT SEAWORTHY.

THREE OTHER NOTEWORTHY EVENTS WHICH OCCURRED TODAY WERE: A RUSSIAN TRADE DELEGATION ARRIVED TO PLACE ORDERS FOR MACHINERY; PRIVATE TELEPHONE AND TELEGRAPH MESSAGES FOR ABROAD WERE RESTRICTED TO THOSE GIVEN SPECIAL PERMITS; AND THE GERMAN PRESS THREW ITS FULL WEIGHT BEHIND THE SOVIET'S REFUSAL TO RECOGNIZE BRITAIN'S BLOCKADE.

A LARGE SOVIET TRADE GROUP TOMORROW WILL BEGIN VISITING FACTORIES AND INSPECTING THE REICH'S SYNTHETIC RUBBER AND GASOLINE PLANTS WITH THE VIEW OF MAKING PURCHASES. IT WAS ANNOUNCED THAT MUNITIONS FACTORIES WOULD BE INCLUDED ON THE TOUR OF INDUSTRIAL PLANTS, APPARENTLY WITH A VIEW OF BUYING.

ARTILLERY GENERAL SAWTSCHENKO, DESCRIBED AS A SOVIET EXPERT ON GUNS, IS A MEMBER OF THE DELEGATION, WHICH IS A COUNTERPART OF A GERMAN MISSION NOW CARRYING OUT A SIMILAR TASK IN MOSCOW.

ONE MILLION TONS OF FODDER, THE SCARCITY OF WHICH BESET GERMANY IN THE WORLD WAR, WILL BE THE FIRST DELIVERY TO ARRIVE FROM RUSSIA, WHICH HAS BECOME THE NAZIS RAW MATERIAL BULWARK AGAINST A BRITISH BLOCKADE. THE FIRST SHIPMENTS WERE EXPECTED TO ARRIVE SOON.

A FODDER SHORTAGE AT THE BEGINNING OF THE WORLD WAR CAUSED A WHOLESALE SLAUGHTER OF HOGS, THE NUMBER FALLING FROM 20,000,000 TO 8,000,000 BY 1915. THE COUNTRY NEVER RECOVERED FROM THIS LOSS OF MEAT AND FAT.

AUTHORITIES SAID A REPETITION OF THIS WOULD BE PREVENTED AND THAT GERMANY WAS EXPECTED TO HAVE 26,000,000 HEAD OF HOGS BY DEC. 1. IN ADDITION TO THE RUSSIAN SOURCE, AUTHORITIES SAID SOUTH-EASTERN EUROPE, ESPECIALLY RUMANIA, HAD AGREED TO INCREASE EXPORTS OF FODDER.

HALIFAX SAYS EXAMPLE WAS SET BY REICH

Pleas Made In Parliament For New Effort To Woo Moscow

Chamberlain Declares Nation Ready For Nazis' "Fight To Finish"

[By the Associated Press]

London, Oct. 26—Britain today partly excused without defending Soviet Russia's part in the partition of Poland while new pleas were made in Parliament for another attempt to gain Russian friendship for the British-French allies.

Lord Halifax, Foreign Secretary, told the House of Lords that Russia would never have occupied eastern Poland if Germany "had not started it and set the example."

As he spoke Prime Minister Neville Chamberlain, addressing the House of Commons, declared that Britain was ready for Germany's "fight to the finish."

Russ Border Extended

Lord Halifax explained to the upper House that the Soviet action "has been to advance the Russian boundary recommended at the time of the Versailles conference by Lord Curzon," then British Foreign Secretary, who was a Versailles delegate.

However, he said he did not wish "to defend the action of the Soviet Government at the particular time at which they took it."

This and the call by the Labor and Liberal opposition to seek again Soviet friendship came in spite of a Russian protest at the inclusion of foodstuffs in the British contraband list. In a note Russia reserved the right to claim compensation for any losses incurred in enforcement of British contraband regulations.

Nazis "Made The Choice"

Chamberlain in his weekly report on the war said in reply to the speech in Danzig Tuesday by Joachim von Ribbentrop, German Foreign Minister, that "the positive conclusion which we are to draw from it is that the German Government have made the choice, which, as I stated on October 12, lay before them."

The choice that Chamberlain offered then was that Germany give convincing proof of her sincerity and desire for peace by "definite acts" and "effective guarantees" or "we must persevere in our duty to the end."

"He (von Ribbentrop) has announced their intention of seeing the struggle through with all their energy and strength," Chamberlain continued today.

Only One Reply

"If that, indeed, is their decision there can be but one reply and we are prepared to give it."

The Prime Minister drew a chuckle from the Soviet Ambassador, Ivan Maisky, in the diplomatic gallery as he recalled the words of von Ribbentrop, when he was Ambassador to London three years ago, that the only real danger to Europe was the further spread of Communism.

He also drew laughter from the Soviet envoy when he accused Germany of inviting Russia to "join a crusade against the British Empire."

Reviews Developments

He reviewed the war developments of the past week, saying that "it seems now to have become the rule for merchant ships to be sunk without warning" by German sea raiders, but that the destruction of "enemy submarines is being maintained at a sufficiently high rate to encourage us to believe that this menace to our trade will eventually be overcome."

Chamberlain confirmed that the German pocket battleship Deutschland sank the British freighter Stonegate, indicating the speedy Nazi warship was operating far outside the British blockade.

After Clement R. Atlee, Labor leader, had expressed satisfaction with the Prime Minister's statement, Sir Archibald Sinclair, Liberal leader, urged "vigorous initiative" by Britain to improve both trade and political relations with Russia.

Urges Conciliation

Sinclair declared "we ought not to allow our relations with the Russian Government to stagnate in their present unsatisfactory and even dangerous position, erupting from time to time in fresh disagreement like that which is reported on the question of contraband."

A similar plea was made in the House of Lords by Lord Listowel, Laborite, who declared "we need not hesitate to say that we are anxious to obtain the benevolent neutrality of Russia as we are to maintain the benevolent neutrality of the U. S. A."

Caused Anxiety

Lord Halifax entered the debate, asserting the Soviet action "in regard to the Baltic states has caused anxiety not only in quarters immediately concerned, and the situation that has been created is not by any means wholly clear."

He expressed the hope that the Russian-Finnish negotiations "may be brought to a reasonable conclusion."

The Foreign Secretary declared the new Turkish mutual assistance pact with Britain and France was a "pretty firm guarantee against aggression in that part of the world."

Arrangements are under discussion, he said, for financial and economic assistance to Turkey, particularly "in regard to the supply of war materials."

4th Lead

London, Oct. 26-AP- The British government partly excused Russia's share in the partition of Poland today as it was pressed in both houses of Parliament to seek once more Russian friendship for the British-French alliance.

Foreign Secretary Lord Halifax declared that Russia had occupied eastern Poland only after Germany had "started it and set the example," and that the new frontier thereby established was substantially the boundary recommended by a British delegate at the time of the Versailles conference.

Curzon Urged Boundary.

Lord Halifax said that Great Britain's pledge to Poland had been only "to provide against the case of aggression by Germany," though he admitted "it is quite true that it makes no difference to the Poles while recalling that the action of the Soviet Government has been to advance the Russian boundary to what was substantially the boundary recommended at the time of the Versailles conference by Lord Curzon."

In reply to a question as to whether Germany and Russia had "arrived at an agreement to partition Poland as far back as last summer," Lord Halifax said: "I am afraid I have no precise information on that point."

R. H. Cross, Minister of Economic Warfare, said that the Government was attempting to encourage Balkan trade to find other than German channels and was aware of "the importance of counteracting German economic penetration" in southeastern Europe.

Lord Halifax spoke as Prime Minister Chamberlain, addressing the House of Commons, accused Germany of inviting Russia "to join a crusade against the British Empire."

Chamberlain Backs Russia.

Mr. Chamberlain also indirectly approved a statement which Winston Churchill, First Lord of the Admiralty, made on October 1 that the Russian advance into Poland "was clearly necessary for the safety of Russia."

Geoffrey Mander, opposition Liberal, had asked whether the First Lord of the Admiralty, in his broadcast speech on October 1, was speaking on behalf of the Government in his references to Russian action in Poland."

"My right honorable friend made his own personal interpretation of events in connection with the Russian action in Poland," Mr. Chamberlain said. "I can assure the honorable member, however, that there is nothing in this interpretation which is at variance with the view of the Government."

Necessary for Soviet Safety.

Mr. Churchill had said that Russian troops had established "an eastern front" in an advance which "was clearly necessary for the safety of Russia."

In both houses the call was made for a quick understanding with Russia—in the upper by Lord Listowel, opposition Laborite, and in Commons by Sir Archibald Sinclair, opposition Liberal leader.

Lord Listowel urged the recognition of Russian occupation of eastern Poland as not too high a price "for the good will of a first-class Power in wartime."

The Foreign Secretary said that the possibility of new trade agreements with Russia was being examined and declared that despite professions of Soviet economic solidarity with Germany, Russia now appeared "willing to trade impartially with all the belligerents."

The Prime Minister, giving his eighth weekly war report, replied directly to the declaration of the German Foreign Minister, Joachim von Ribentrop, in Danzig on Tuesday that Germany would make a fight to the finish.

"There can be but one reply," said Mr. Chamberlain, "and we are prepared to give it."

His accusation that Germany sought to bring Russia into the war against Great Britain brought laughter from the Soviet Ambassador, Ivan Maisky, who was listening from the diplomatic gallery.

Deutschland Loose at Sea.

Mr. Chamberlain officially confirmed the fact that the German pocket battleship Deutschland sank the British freighter Stonegate, indicating that the swift warship was operating on the high seas far outside the British blockade.

The Stonegate's crew was rescued last week by the American freighter City of Flint in the Atlantic and landed at Tromsoe, Norway, after the American vessel herself was captured by a German raider.

"It seems now to have become the rule for merchant ships to be sunk without warning," said Mr. Chamberlain, but declared that enemy submarines were being destroyed at a sufficiently high rate to give Great Britain confidence that their menace eventually would be halted.

Referring specifically to the von Ribbentrop speech, he said he did not intend to waste time by "commenting on the many details of this performance."

"No one in this country will be deceived by its distortions of the truth and there is already abundant evidence that Herr von Ribbentrop has been no more successful in his attempt to mislead impartial observers in other parts of the world," he declared.

"Indeed I even cherish the hope that, despite all suppressions and falsifications, there are still some in Germany itself who see where the real truth lies.

"One of the questions which the historians of the future will have to consider is how far the great tragedy of our times was due to the failure of Herr von Ribbentrop to comprehend either the policy or the character of the British people.

"It is not England that has challenged Germany. It is the German Government who, by their persistent acts of aggression pursued in the face of our repeated warnings have forced us at last reluctantly to take up arms.

"It is the German Government who, by their reckless disregard of their pledged word and of the rights and liberties of other people, must bear the responsibility for this war and for all its consequences.

"In his final report on his mission to Berlin, Sir Nevile Henderson (the British Ambassador) referred to the encouragement given Herr Hitler in his designs on Poland by Herr von Ribbentrop, who apparently advised him up to the last moment that Britain would not fight.

"Yet this is the man who now asserts that the whole object of British policy since 1933 has been to concert war against Germany.

"I will make one other comment upon the German Foreign Minister's speech. He desires, it seems, to invite the Soviet Union to join in a crusade against the British Empire."

"Why," Mr. Chamberlain exclaimed, "what a change is here. Let me read two sentences from Herr von Ribbentrop's address to the press when he first came to England in 1936:

"'Germany wants to be friends with Great Britain and I think the British people also wish for German friendship. The Fuehrer is convinced that there is only one real danger to Europe and to the British Empire as well—that is the spreading further of Communism, this most terrible of all diseases—terrible because people generally seem to realize its danger only when it is too late.'"

There was loud laughter in the House.

Urges Ties With Russia.

"The positive conclusion which we are apparently asked to draw from the German Foreign Minister's speech," Mr. Chamberlain said, "is that the German Government have made the choice which as I stated on October 12 lay before them."

Sir Archibald Sinclair urged a new attempt for political understanding with Russia. By commercial and diplomatic initiative, he said the British Government might convince Russia that her interests "and those of mankind might be served by understanding and collaboration."

"We ought not to allow our relations with the Russian Government to stagnate in their present unsatisfactory and even dangerous position, erupting from time to time in fresh disagreement like that which is reported on the question of contraband," Sir Archibald said.

His reference was to Russia's protest to Britain against inclusion of foodstuffs in the contraband list.

Takes Up U-boat Warfare.

Speaking at the outset of his speech of the German war against shipping, Mr. Chamberlain declared he noted a growing lawlessness on the part of German submarines, and added:

"There are many varieties of neutrality and we need not hesitate to say that we are anxious to obtain the benevolent neutrality of Russia, as we are to maintain the benevolent neutrality of the U. S. A."

Backs Up Churchill

LONDON, Oct. 26 (AP)—Before he made his weekly war statement in the House of Commons today, Prime Minister Chamberlain answered a question by Geoffrey Mander, Opposition Liberal, on assertions of Winston Churchill, First Lord of the Admiralty, on the Russian invasion of Poland.

Mr. Mander asked "whether the First Lord of the Admiralty, in his broadcast speech on Oct. 1, was speaking on behalf of the government in his references to Russian action in Poland."

Mr. Chamberlain replied: "My right honorable friend [Mr. Churchill] made his own personal interpretation of events in connection with the Russian action in Poland," Mr. Chamberlain replied.

"I can assure the honorable member, however, that there is nothing in this interpretation which is at variance with the view of the government," the Prime Minister added.

Mr. Churchill had said Russian troops had established "an Eastern Front" in an advance that "was clearly necessary for the safety of Russia."

British Laborites Assail Lack of Indian Freedom

Sir Samuel Hoare Replies to Accusations in Commons

LONDON, Oct. 26 (AP).—Laborites in the House of Commons assailed today the British government's India policy on the ground that it failed to grant to India the democracy "we are fighting for." Wedgwood Benn labeled as a "clumsy document" the recent White Paper in which India was promised that constitutional reforms might be considered after the war.

In defense of the government's policy, Sir Samuel Hoare, Lord Privy Seal, declared that India had advanced far along the road to dominion status, but that such status should not be granted until "the Indians themselves" removed class and geographical divisions within the country. He spoke of the "impossibility of having constitutional reform by statute in war time."

Eight provincial governments in India have resigned in protest against the British stand, it was revealed. The Madras Legislature passed today a motion of disapproval of the Madras ministry's resignation.

"We have long ago set aside imperialistic ambitions, for we believe that our mission in the world is not to govern other people but to help other people to govern themselves," Sir Samuel added.

Britain Issues First Call For Volunteers

General Volunteer Enlistments Opened For Infantry, Artillery And Engineers

London, Oct. 26 (AP)—Britain issued tonight the first general call for volunteers since the war began.

A War Office announcement said voluntary enlistment was being opened for cavalry, infantry, artillery and engineers.

Previously enlistment of only specialized classes had been asked.

Age limits for volunteers were set at 22 to 35 years in Great Britain and 20 to 35 years in northern Ireland. After acceptance on the first call those enlisted will be sent home with orders to report on November 15.

Wreckage Of U-Boat Discovered On Shoals In Straits Of Dover

London, Oct. 26 (AP)—The British Admiralty announced tonight that "the shattered wreck of a German U-boat was found today on the Goodwin Sands."

The Goodwin Sands, in the Straits of Dover, are considered exceedingly dangerous shoals. They are off Ramsgate and flank the southern approach to the Thames river.

Boatmen at Deal, just opposite the shoals, said they saw most of the conning tower sticking out of the water.

Gunfire was heard off Deal yesterday, but a heavy mist prevented the sight of any action.

TELLS OF SHIP'S DUEL WITH U-BOAT

Briton Says Gunner Aboard Freighter Sank Foe.

LONDON, Oct. 26 (A. P.).—How a British cargo boat sank an attacking German submarine was told in the South Wales Argus today by one of the ship's officers.

30-24-4279

His story related:

"The U-boat surfaced almost under this ship's starboard bow when the crew were at dinner. After a shell duel in which the ship was not hit, the U-boat dived, re-emerging three miles away. The ship's gunners reopened fire and with the explosion of the final shell the U-boat sank."

King George Visits Two Ammunition Factories

Plants Producing Munitions At Faster Rate Than During Last War, Sovereign Told

London, Oct. 26 (AP)—King George VI visited two ammunition factories today, showing particular interest in shotblasting to polish shell interiors—a job so noisy that only deaf mutes were employed on it.

"The King looked through a small glass window at the robot-like figures of the mutes at work," the account passed for publication stated. The King spent five hours on his unheralded visit and saw every kind of ammunition from rifle bullets to giant shells being produced.

King George was informed the plants engaged solely in making munitions were producing at a rate many times faster than the most active rate in the last war and better than the German or European practice, it was stated. He also was told a number of similar plants were under construction.

continually strengthened. In the air, aircraft of the fighter command have again been in action. The House is already aware of the attempted attacks by German bombers on the east coast convoy on Oct. 21. In the morning attacks, delivered by six bombers, it is probable that two of the enemy aircraft were destroyed and in the afternoon attempt, made by two formations of nine and twelve bombers respectively, it is certain that four and probably that five were destroyed.

On the following day one of two bombers was shot down into the sea near a convoy off St. Abbs Head. None of the ships or escorts in the convoys suffered hurt nor did any of the R. A. F. aircraft engaged. The work of the units of the coastal command is almost continuous. Occasionally it is spectacular and attracts attention, but more often it is of the routine kind and, though no less effective, passes unnoticed.

This week there are certain successes to report. Mines in the path of convoys have been detected from the air in time to save the ships in the convoys from danger, and seven U-boats have been sighted. Of those sighted, four have been attacked. There is good reason to believe that at least one of those attacked was severely damaged and that another was destroyed by naval vessels directed to the scene by the attacking aircraft. I should like also to mention the admirable work of the anti-aircraft gunners, who have been continuously at their posts from a date before the war began. It is now known that in the raids on Rosyth and Scapa Flow they brought down two German bombers, and there is reason to think menace to our trade will eventually be overcome. Honorable members may indeed have seen that during the last few days the sinking of five British ships has been announced. One of the ships—Stonegate—was sunk by the German raider Deutschland some time ago, but information of this loss has only just reached us. Together, these ships aggregated 22,715 tons.

On the other hand, a number of enemy ships have been arrested and brought in by our blockading squadrons for adjudication in the regular way. These ships are the Phoebus of 8,863 tons, the Gloria of 5,896 tons, the Bianca of 1,375 tons, the Poseidon of 5,864 tons and the Biscaya of 6,369 tons, all of which are now in our control, totaling 28,367 tons.

In addition to these, the Gonzeinhem of 4,574 tons was intercepted and scuttled herself to avoid capture. There is therefore a loss to the enemy of some 33,000 tons and a net gain to us of nearly 6,000 tons. These figures are, however, subject to the decision of the Prize Court.

Points to U-Boat Lawlessness

One feature of the enemy's U-boat campaign to which I must call attention is their growing lawlessness. It seems now to have become the rule for merchant ships to be sunk without warning. Frequently passengers and crew have been turned adrift in small open boats in stormy seas to suffer from cold and exposure. In the case of the S. S. Yorkshire in particular there was a deplorable loss of life among the wives and children of soldiers returning home from the East.

Another flagrant instance was the sinking of the French ship Bretagne, carrying a large number of women and children. This ship was sunk miles from land by gunfire and torpedo without warning. Fourteen of those on board are missing.

No words are strong enough to express our detestation of this cowardly form of warfare.

The outstanding event in foreign affairs since my last statement to the House was made has been the signature of the treaty with Turkey. The treaty has been received with profound satisfaction throughout the Empire and in France and it is a great encouragement to us to know that it has been widely welcomed in many other parts of the world. That is doubtlessly because the world sees in it a guarantee for the maintenance of peace in at least one region of the world.

It is a purely defensive instrument, threatening no one and designed only to oppose resistance to aggression. We are proud to feel that under its provisions we now share mutual responsibilities with the Turkish people, for whose patriotism, probity and valor we have long cherished a high regard.

Economic Aid to Turkey

I should like to take this opportunity of informing the House that His Majesty's Government and the French and Turkish Governments have been discussing for some time the question of financial and economic assistance for Turkey. The assistance to be given relates particularly to the supply of war material. Conversations on this subject have been taking place in London with a Turkish military mission and it has been a great pleasure to us to welcome the mission and its distinguished leader, General Orbay, to this country.

The conversations have been conducted in a spirit of frankness and cordiality and are now nearing completion. I am confident that they will lead to useful and practical results.

A week ago I informed the House that there had been no indication from Berlin of the views of the German Government upon the issues which I sought to define in my statement of Oct. 12.

In the last few days reports have come from Berlin of lengthy consultations among the Nazi leaders. It may be that the speech made at Danzig on Oct. 24 by the German Foreign Minister is the result of these consultations.

I do not propose to waste time by commenting on the many details of this performance. No one in this country will be deceived by its distortions of the truth, and there is already abundant evidence that Herr von Ribbentrop has been no more successful in his attempt to mislead impartial observers in other parts of the world. Indeed I cherish the hope that, despite all suppressions and falsifications, there are still some in Germany itself who see where the real truth lies.

Contradicts von Ribbentrop

The main thesis of tohe speechd is that it was England, and not Germany, who desired and plotted for war. The whole world knows that this is not true. The whole world knows that no government ever sought more ardently to avoid war or took greater risks to preserve peace than did the government of this country. We have already published with complete frankness the essential documents relating to the causes of the war. We are content to be judged by the facts and to know that the verdict of the great majority of neutral observers is in our favor.

In his final report on his mission to Berlin, Sir Nevile Henderson referred to the encouragement given to Herr Hitler in his designs on Poland by Herr von Ribbentrop, who apparently advised him up to the last moment that Britain would not fight. Yet this is the man who now asserts that the whole object of British policy since 1933 has been to concert war against Germany. One of the questions which the historians of the future will have to consider is how far the great tragedy of our times was due to the failure of Herr von Ribbentrop to comprehend either the policy or the character of the British people.

Quotes Reich Foreign Minister

I will make one other comment upon the German Foreign Minister's speech. He desires, it seems, to invite the Soviet Union to join in a crusade against the British Empire. Why, what a change is here! Let me read two sentences from Herr von Ribbentrop's address to the press when he first came to England in 1936:

"Germany wants to be friends with Great Britain and I think the British people also wish for German friendship. The Fuehrer is convinced that there is only one real danger to Europe and to the British Empire as well, that is the spreading further of communism. This most terrible of all diseases—terrible because people generally seem to realize its danger only when it is too late."

The positive conclusion which we are apparently asked to draw from the German Foreign Minister's speech is that the German Government have made the choice which, as I stated on Oct. 12, lay before them. He has announced their intention of seeing the struggle through with all their energy and strength. If that is indeed their decision they can be but one reply, and we are prepared to give it. But it is not England that has challenged Germany. It is the German Government who, by their persistent acts of aggression pursued in face of our repeated warnings, have forced us at last reluctantly to take up arms. It is the German Government who by their reckless disregard of their pledged word and of the rights and liberties of other peoples must bear the responsibility for this war and for all its consequences.

Text of Chamberlain's War Report

By The Associated Press.

LONDON, Oct. 26—The text of Prime Minister Chamberlain's war report to the House of Commons today was as follows:

During the past week there have been no operations of importance on the Western Front. Minor adjustments in the positions occupied have been made and the general result is that the French and German forces are now on the line of the common frontier.

The steady stream of reinforcements and reserves of material for the British Expeditionary Force continues and the defenses in the British sector are being

Submarine Attacks Lessened

In the war at sea there has been an intensification of the German submarine campaign. This intensification we have always expected, but I can assure the situation is well in hand. In spite of one or two strokes of good fortune, the enemy have not been able to attain the rate of sinking which they attained at the beginning of the war. Their submarines have been driven to operate farther and farther from their bases and farther and farther from the focal points where trade is bound to congregate.

Finally, the destruction of enemy submarines is being maintained at a sufficiently high rate to encourage us to believe that this

Soviet Announces Release but Does Not Say to Whom.

NO MEMBER OF CREW HURT

Berlin Plans to Sail Freighter From Murmansk to German Port as a Prize.

MOSCOW, Oct. 26 (A. P.).—The Russian radio announced late tonight that the American freighter City of Flint had been released.

The brief broadcast said that the cargo had been inspected by Soviet authorities at Murmansk and then freed.

[The Danish radio also announced the release, but said the cargo first had been taken off. The Danish broadcast did not give the source of its information. Neither in Russia nor Denmark was it made clear whether the Flint had been released to the United States or Germany.]

The ship was ordered to leave port immediately.

Hull Demands Release.

WASHINGTON, Oct. 26 (A. P.).—Secretary Hull announced today the American Government has demanded of Soviet Russia the return of the City of Flint and her cargo to her American crew.

The demand, Mr. Hull said, was presented by Ambassador Laurence A. Steinhardt, and no reply has yet been received.

The American demand, he said, was based on the United States conception of international law on the subject.

[In Berlin authoritative persons declared that Soviet Russia had agreed to permit the vessel to leave the Russian port of Murmansk in charge of her German prize crew as soon as they considered the vessel seaworthy.]

At the same time the State Department was informed by the German Foreign Office through the American Charge d'Affaires at Berlin, Alexander C. Kirk, that no member of the crew had been injured when the vessel was captured by a German warship last week and taken to Murmansk.

Case of Appam Is Cited.

Mr. Hull said that this country's views of the international law on the matter embraced a United States Supreme Court decision in the case of the British steamship Appam which was sent by the German raider Moewe in 1916 into Hampton Roads, Va., with a German prize crew aboard.

The Supreme Court's decision called for the release of the vessel on the grounds that Germany had no right to send a prize crew into an American port. Mr. Hull said that the American position also embraced Article 21 of the Hague Convention of 1907, which said that a prize ship could put into a neutral harbor only in case of exceptional circumstances such as stress of weather, breakdown of machinery or lack of provisions.

In such case, Mr. Hull said, the ship must be released and depart after the exceptional circumstances have been overcome.

Legal Advice Sent to Envoy.

Secretary Hull said the American legal position in the case of the City of Flint had been set forth in several long telegrams to Ambassador Steinhardt.

A State Department official said that the same legal argument had also been cabled to the American Chargé d'Affaires in Berlin for presentation to the German Government.

No instructions with regard to specific demands on the German Government had been sent, however. The Berlin embassy is simply to tell the German Government, as the embassy in Moscow told the Soviet Government, that the United States did not admit the right of a belligerent to [illegible] an American merchant ship into a neutral port except under certain exceptional circumstances.

Mr. Hull revealed that the State Department is still very much in the dark as to the status of the City of Flint at Murmansk.

Secretary Hull also said he had authorized Ambassador Steinhardt to send a representative to Murmansk to talk to the American crew. He estimated it would take two days, however, to get there.

Word that the crew of the City of Flint is safe aboard the ship at Murmansk, Russia, was received by the State Department last night from Ambassador Steinhardt.

Text of U. S. Announcement.

The same information came today from Berlin through Mr. Kirk and its receipt brought the following announcement by the State Department:

"American Charge d'Affaires at Berlin, Alexander C. Kirk, reported to the department that he today received a memorandum from the German Foreign Office with reference to his informal inquiry in the matter of the American steamer City of Flint and her crew.

GERMAN ACTION AS TO VESSEL YET UNKNOWN

"The Foreign Office stated that, according to the information available, the City of Flint was captured by a German warship because of carriage of contraband and that a prize crew placed on board brought the steamer to the harbor of Murmansk because of sea damage ('havarie').

"The Foreign Office stated that no news reached it that any member of the American crew has suffered injury.

"In transmitting the memorandum an official of the Foreign Office said efforts were being made to obtain promptly further information.

"He asserted that the Foreign Office had no details as to the 'damage' which necessitated the ship's being taken to Murmansk. But he said in response to an inquiry that the term 'havarie' would cover the case of a ship lacking charts with which to navigate the waters through which she had to proceed."

Nazis Say They'll Hold Flint.

BERLIN, Oct. 26 (A. P.).—Authoritative Germans declared today that Russia had agreed to allow the American steamship City of Flint to leave the port of Murmansk in charge of her German prize crew as soon as they considered the vessel seaworthy.

A spokesman indicated that the vessel would be brought to Germany as a prize.

"The German prize crew will get aboard again," he said, "and you may rest assured the ship will not be headed for the United States."

The United States embassy said the German Foreign Office at noon (6 A. M., New York time) had informally communicated to the embassy that the City of Flint entered Murmansk because she had suffered sea damage and that her American crew was safe and unhurt. Sources close to the Foreign Office indicated that the communication was oral.

[In Moscow, United States Ambassador Laurence A. Steinhardt said he had been assured that the City of Flint's crew of forty-one was safe aboard. Tass, Soviet news agency, said the vessel was taken to Murmansk after a brief halt at Tromsoe, Norway, because her machinery had been damaged.]

Accord Reached With Soviet.

Authorized German sources said that the case of the American ship had been clarified between Germany and Soviet Russia. He said that Russian officials had recognized that the City of Flint sought refuge in Murmansk because she was unseaworthy and, therefore, would be permitted to leave again when she had been put in condition.

German sources said that the United States embassy here would be given a full explanation of the ship's situation soon.

A Hamburg prize court, informed sources said, is expected to judge the contraband question in accordance with international law. The City of Flint was en route to Great Britain with what Germans have said was contraband when she was boarded by a prize crew in the Atlantic.

Contraband Reported Aboard.

An official German statement today said that the American freighter City of Flint "was without any doubt legally captured because it had contraband aboard."

"The City of Flint, en route to Glasgow, was searched on the Atlantic by a German warship a few days ago and captured because contraband was established," the statement said.

Defending the action of the Nazi prize crew in carrying the ship to the Russian port of Murmansk, the statement said:

"Because of damage by the sea, the ship had to enter the harbor at Murmansk under direction of the German prize command."

Because of the alleged contraband cargo, it was said that Russia had agreed to release the ship to Germany.

The statement said that the question of whether contraband consisted more than one-half of the cargo "plays no part in the seizure of the ship."

"This question first comes up for discussion when the matter of confiscation of the ship is examined before a prize court," it added.

"According to German prize regulations all ships are subject to capture without regard to nationality, if they are transporting contraband.

"Furthermore, in accordance with the Hague agreement of 1907, which Russia and the United States entered, prizes damaged by the sea are entitled to enter neutral harbors and may remain there to repair the damage."

Ship Still at Murmansk.

MOSCOW, Oct. 26 (A. P.).—The American freighter City of Flint remained at Murmansk today pending precise verification of her cargo, Tass News Agency announced.

The German prize crew of eighteen, which seized the ship and took her to the Soviet Russian port in the Arctic Ocean Monday, has been released from internment, but has not gone aboard the City of Flint again.

United States Ambassador Laurence A. Steinhardt, who said he was assured the American crew of forty-one was safe aboard, expected the Russian Government to give him more details of the seizure and internment today. He and the Foreign Office said that they had no knowledge of any change in the ship's status.

Tass reported the City of Flint had been taken to Murmansk after a brief halt at Tromsoe, Norway, because her machinery had been damaged.

Studies Legal Aspects.

Ambassador Steinhardt spent most of last night studying [illegible] aspects of the Flint case with his aids in view of Russian intention to inspect the cargo.

There was intense speculation in diplomatic quarters here on the quick release of the prize crew by the Russians.

Pravda, Communist party newspaper, today displayed a cartoon showing American munitions makers, with guns and airplanes strapped to their backs, toeing a line labeled "to Europe," while a figure labeled "Repeal of embargo" prepared to fire a starting pistol.

SOVIET OBJECTS TO BRITISH LIST OF CONTRABAND

Declares It Violates Law of Nations and Impairs Neutral Rights.

NAZIS SEE SERIOUS THREAT

Goebbels's Newspaper Declares England Will Have to Change List or Take Consequences.

MOSCOW, Oct. 26 (A. P.).—Russia, it was learned here today, has informed Great Britain that she regarded the British contraband lists as a violation of the principles of international law, to which the U. S. S. R. could not agree.

In a note replying to the British notification of contraband lists, Vladimir Potemkin, Vice-Commissar for Foreign Affairs, declared that the list "gravely impairs the interests of neutral countries and destroys international trade."

The note was handed to the British Ambassador, Sir William Seeds.

Potemkin said that the Soviet Government "deems it not permissible to deprive a peaceful population of foodstuffs, fuel and clothing and thus subject children, women and aged people and invalids to every hardship and to starvation by proclaiming goods of popular consumption as war contraband."

Resents Checking.

He said that the Soviet also did not agree to the British note of September 11 demanding that neutral merchant ships call at designated ports for checking by the British.

"Such measures violate the elementary principles of the freedom of merchant shipping," Potemkin declared.

"The Soviet Government cannot fail to declare that merchant ships of the U. S. S. R. are State property and for this reason alone should not be subjected to any measures of compulsion applied to privately owned merchant ships," Ptemkin said.

"On the strength of the above, the Government of the U. S. S. R. reserves its right to claim of the British Government compensation for losses to organizations, institutions or citizens of the U. S. S. R. by the above mentioned measures of the British Government and actions of British authorities."

May Lead to Trouble.

BERLIN, Oct. 26 (A. P.).—The German press today interpreted Russia's rejection of the British contraband list as a "sharp protest against blockade warfare" which might lead to serious trouble between the two.

Commenting on what to Germany is one of the war's most serious aspects, Propaganda Minister Paul Joseph Goebbels's newspaper, Der Angriff, said: "Moscow's note contains a clear warning capable of causing far-reaching consequences unless it is observed."

The paper declared that Great Britain had two alternatives—either to alter her contraband list or take the consequences which might result from the seizure of Russian ships. It added:

"A decisive word has been spoken.

"Soviet Russia established in this note that England's method of conducting war contradicts all international conventions relating to wartime sea commerce.

"England's methods are nothing more than open piracy, made no better by the fact that it is practiced by a great sea power."

Difficult Question.

LONDON, Oct. 26 (A. P.).—Soviet Russia's objection to the British contraband list raises once more the question of how far belligerent nations may go in pinching off enemy supplies without infringing the rights of neutrals.

What the blockade has meant thus far in the current war is disclosed by the report delivered to Parliament yesterday by Britain's Minister of Economic Warfare, R. H. Cross.

Mr. Cross emphasized that discussions with neutral nations were being undertaken in "a friendly spirit" through diplomatic channels to ease their shipping problems arising from the blockade. Delegations from Iceland, Sweden, Holland and Belgium are now in London to pursue these discussions.

The nub of the contraband question is the character of Great Britain's contraband list, in which contraband is classified as absolute and conditional.

Fuel is listed with arms and ammunition and similar outright implements of warfare on the absolute list. The conditional list includes "all kinds of food, foodstuffs, feed, forage and clothing and articles used in their production."

Food Can Become Fuel.

The list raises the subsidiary question, to what degree foodstuffs may be converted into direct supplies for war, as the distillation of fuel alcohol from [illegible].

There is also the point that foodstuffs [illegible] to munitions, in that they are necessary to provision the fighting troops, and while some shipments might be ostensibly directed toward civilian use they could be considered as making up reductions caused by the allocation of supplies to military use.

Oil, necessary to lubricate the highly mechanized modern armies, is regarded as one of the primary objectives of the present blockade.

Mr. Cross, in his Parliamentary report, listed 76,500 tons of petroleum products seized as contraband thus far. The other commodities seized included iron ore, manganese ore, phosphates, aluminum ore haematite ore, copra and oilseeds.

While the Russian protest against Britain's current contraband list brought no official comment, one international law authority quoted by the British Press Association characterized the Soviet objection as "fantastic."

Official circles suggested that the contraband control system was similar to that followed by all the allies, including Russia, during the world war.

Moscow's Report Raises U. S. Hope Of Diplomatic Victory

[By the Associated Press]

Washington, Oct. 26—Reports from Moscow tonight that the freighter City of Flint had been permitted to sail from Murmansk under the American flag raised hopes here that the United States had won a victory in a tense diplomatic struggle.

However, officials were keeping their fingers crossed, especially in view of German news agency despatches implying that a German crew was in command of the American freighter when she departed from the Russian port.

Nazis May Be in Control

There was believed to be a possibility that the ship might be flying the American flag and still be in the possession of the Germans. There would be precedent for the German crew raising the American colors under such circumstances. It was recalled that in the World War formal instructions to the United States Navy said that in case a neutral ship was taken by an American vessel, the flag of the neutral should be kept flying until a competent court adjudged the vessel a lawful prize.

Cordell Hull, Secretary of State, had formally demanded today that Russia turn the vessel over to this Government, while Germany marshaled arguments to show that the craft was legally a German prize of war.

Legal Point Involved

The nub of the dispute was whether the German raider which captured her had violated international law by sending her into the Russian Arctic port of Murmansk. Hull, in his formal demand on Russia, took the position that a prize of war could be sent into a neutral port only in case of unseaworthiness, stress of weather or want of supplies.

The Reich came right back with a claim that the vessel had suffered "sea damage." That was the reason she was taken to Murmansk, said a memorandum presented by the German Foreign Office to Alexander C. Kirk, American charge d'affaires.

No Details On Damage

Asked what the damage consisted of, the Foreign Office replied informally that it lacked details on that point, but that such damage would include lack of charts aboard the City of Flint with which to navigate the waters through which she had to proceed.

When Kirk reported this last observation to Washington, there was some raising of eyebrows here. The view was expressed that the City of Flint undoubtedly had charts to find her way to her original destination in the British Isles, that she could not be expected to have charts of the Arctic Ocean, and that presumably the raider had charts which might have been used.

No Argument About Seizure

There appeared to be no argument about Germany's action in stopping the ship and taking possession of her. Berlin announced that a quantity of contraband was found aboard; Hull has acknowledged this.

In the memorandum handed to Kirk in Berlin, the German Foreign Office said that it had received no news of any injury to any member of the American crew of the City of Flint.

Secretary Hull said the American position regarding the City of Flint, as communicated to Moscow and Berlin, was based on a decision by the United States Supreme Court and on Article 21 in the Hague Convention of 1907.

The Supreme Court case, he said, involved the British steamer Appam. The Appam was seized by the German raider Moewe in 1916 and sent into Hampton Roads, Va. When the British shipowners brought suit to have her released, the Supreme Court decided that a belligerent did not have the right to take a prize ship into a neutral port, since that would have the effect of making a neutral port a base of operations. The court ordered the release of the ship.

Article 21 of the Hague convention read: "A prize may only be brought into a neutral port on account of unwant of fuel or provisions. It must seaworthiness, stress of weather or leave as soon as the circumstances which justified its entry are at end. If it does not, the neutral power must order it to leave at once; should it fail to obey, the neutral power must employ the means at its disposal to release it with its officers and crew and to intern the prize crew."

Must Release Prize

Article 22 of the same convention said: "A neutral power must similarly re[illegible] a prize brought into one of its ports under circumstances other than those referred to in Article 21." on the Hague convention of 1907 cited

30-24-4281

Whether Russia would agree to stand by Mr. Hull was pretty much of a question here prior to the time the ship was released. Russia ratified the convention, but that was Czarist Russia, and Soviet Russia has repudiated treaties entered into by the Czarist regime. It is also a fact that Article 23 of the same convention might have afforded Russia a loophole. It says:

"A neutral power may allow prizes to enter its ports and roadsteads whether under convoy or not when they are brought there to be sequestered pending the decision of a prize court."

units and artillery action on either side at different points on the front."

Anticipating an attempt to crack the Maginot defenses, the French authorities offered facilities for the voluntary removal of the civilian population of Nancy, which is about forty miles behind the fortifications. Only fifty-seven of the 120,000 residents, it was disclosed, have thus far availed themselves of these facilities.

At the rear, Polish and Czech recruit armies were in training. It was disclosed today that Gen. Wladyslaw Sikorski, the Polish Premier, had visited the Polish recruits yesterday. Most of these came from the mining regions of North France and Belgium.

The Ministry of Justice an[illegible] nounced a plan to accelerate the naturalization of foreigners seeking to serve with the French Army. France has several million resident foreigners, thousands of whom would be eligible for military service.

French Report Push Imminent

Intelligence Men Say 1,500,000 Troops Are Now in Nazi Lines.

PARIS, Oct. 26 (A. P.).—French land and air patrols were reported today to have returned from reconnaissance assignments with information indicating that the Germans were fully prepared for a big push on the western front.

The French said that their scouts told of huge troop concentrations and supply arrangements usually regarded as forerunners of a major offensive. They estimated that the Germans now have 1,500,000 men on the front and in support areas.

Actual fighting, meanwhile, was limited to minor patrol clashes between the lines on the northern flank—the only sign of action along the front since the Germans counter-drive into the Saarland ten days ago.

French military experts said that their patrols were seeking to take prisoners for questioning on the possibility of an enemy attack. German patrols, they said, were met with firm resistence in their attempts to filter through the French outposts and barbed wire.

First Snow Appears.

For the first time since the start of the war, snow fell in the Vosges Mountains as rain and cold swept the entire front, hindering infantry operations and grounding air forces.

Today's French communique said: "The night was quiet as a whole. Bad weather."

"Tonight's communique read:

23 Millions a Day.

Paul Reynaud, Minister of Finance, told the Senate Finance Committee today that the ordinary French budget for 1940 has been set provisionally at approximately a billion francs (about $23,000,000) a day.

He placed the exact figures for the year at 349 billion francs (about $8,000,000,000), but said this might be increased before the year was out, because it was based only on estimated needs for the first three months of the year.

The estimated budget was almost six times as large as it was for 1939. In addition, there will be an extraordinary budget composed of supplementary credits which last year amounted to 40 per cent of the ordinary budget.

Parliament to Be Called.

The ordinary budget alone divided among the French population means roughly $220 a year for every man, woman and child.

As M. Reynaud made his budget announcement, Premier Daladier issued a call for a full dress cabinet meeting with President Lebrun at 10 A. M. tomorrow.

Parliament will be called into session shortly after the middle of November to vote war credits, in addition to approving the use the Government has made of dictatorial decree powers for ruling France, Daladier announced.

Definite budgets will be placed before the Senate Finance Committee for consideration shortly before Parliament meets.

Tells of French Repulse.

BERLIN, Oct. 26 (A. P.).—The German High Command declared in a communique today:

"The enemy yesterday attempted to regain a height close to the border, twelve kilometers (about 7.5 miles) west of Voelklingen, which our forces took the day before. The attack by one battalion was frustrated by our artillery and machine-gun fire while still on French soil. Otherwise there was no noteworthy activity."

As the Nazi press meanwhile was preparing the nation for what Field Marshal Hermann Wilhelm Goering's newspaper, the Essener National Zeitung, had said would be a "relentless" fight, more than twenty army and air force generals and staff officers were reported to have conferred in Adolf Hitler's chancellery last night. Der Fuehrer was believed to have participated in some of the discussions.

NAZI SOURCES THINK BIG PUSH IS IMMINENT

Observers In Berlin Cite Ban On Messages To Foreign Countries

By MELVIN [illegible] TELEATHER
Associated Press Correspondent

Berlin, Oct. 26 — Germany, in the belief of some observers here tonight, is preparing for a great offensive on the Western front. This belief, they said, is borne out by the fact that the Government today clamped a ban on all private telephone calls and telegrams to foreign countries.

It was recalled that a ban on communications was invoked just before the war against Poland started, and again immediately after England and France declared themselves in a state of war with Germany.

Shrug Their Shoulders

Persons in informed circles merely shrugged their shoulders when this interpretation was mentioned. The belief was expressed that an offensive under preparation would be directed almost exclusively against Great Britain.

There was much talk in political sources that the Germans know exactly where British troops are stationed in France. German air forces, these circles claimed, would try to strike terror into the British Expeditionary Force.

Attack Prepared

At the same time there seemed to be under preparation a large-scale combined air and naval attack on British seaports and coastal airdromes. Storage plants for gasoline were said to be on Germany's list of marks to be hit.

The impression prevailed in German political circles—whether rightly or wrongly remains to be seen—that Russia soon would make another Poland of Turkey and place herself in possession of the Dardanelles. Thereby the war would assume a new aspect and strike Great Britain at one of her most vital points.

PRISON TERMS ARE IMPOSED ON SIX OTHERS

Roos, Alsace Autonomist Leader, And Soldier Await Execution

France's Ordinary Budget For Next Year Set At $8,000,000,000

By TAYLOR HENRY
Associated Press Correspondent

Paris, Oct. 26—A 60-year-old Alsatian autonomist leader and an unidentified French soldier tonight awaited execution on espionage charges while Allied patrols trudged through snow and sleet on the Western front in search of information on German war plans.

Conviction of Dr. Karl Roos, veteran sponsor of home rule for Alsace, by a military court at Nancy today overshadowed news from the front, where there were comparatively few developments.

Arrested Before War Started

Dr. Roos was arrested February 7, almost seven months before the war started, when the French charged him and seven others with having furnished German agents with precise details of the movements of French troops during March, 1936, when Germany occupied the Rhineland, and September, 1938, during the Czecho-Slovak crisis.

A curt military announcement disposed of the case as follows:

"A permanent military tribunal of the Second military region has condemned to death Karl Roos, convicted of having delivered important military secrets to German espionage agents."

Nothing To Do With Autonomy

It was asserted that Dr. Roos' conviction had nothing to do with his autonomy activities which first led to his arrest in 1928 on charges of participating in a separatist plot against the security of the state.

The soldier sentenced to death with Dr. Roos was not identified. They are believed to be the first two Frenchmen convicted as spies since the war started.

The six other defendants received prison terms ranging from three years to life imprisonment.

There was no indication when the death sentences would be carried out.

Budget Increased Sixfold

In the domestic field, Finance Minister Paul Reynaud told the Senate Finance Committee that the ordinary budget for 1940 had been set provisionally at 349,000,000,000 francs (about $8,000,000,000, nearly $23,000,000 a day), almost six times as large as it was for 1939.

There also will be an extraordinary budget.

Premier Edouard Daladier summoned the Cabinet to meet with President Albert Lebrun at 10 A. M. tomorrow.

Finns Disagree Over Demands; New Talks Seen

One Legation Calls Soviet Deal Unacceptable, as Another Voices Annihilation Fear

HELSINGFORS, Oct. 26 (A. P.).—Soviet Russia's demands were declared still unacceptable to Finland by one Finnish leader tonight, while another bade the Finnish people to look at the "nations wiped off the map of Europe."

Finance Minister Vaeino Tanner declared that Russia's proposals were still unacceptable, but said, nevertheless, that "I still think we can come to an agreement."

On the other hand, Foreign Minister Elias Erkko, addressing a large patriotic rally, referred to the last two years in which "two ancient countries have been wiped off the map of Europe." He added: "Both great and small states are anxiously wondering what the future holds for them and in which direction the wheels of fate will carry them."

As Foreign Minister, Erkko has had an active part in the Moscow negotiations, while Tanner was a member of the delegation which went to the Kremlin.

In his statement, Tanner said the negotiators probably would start a return trip to Moscow on Sunday to resume the talks.

Speaking in an unusually solemn mood, Erkko told the Finns they must face with calmness and courage a "period of nerve-testing" and place implicit faith in the government. Discussing the delicacy of the negotiations with Russia, he said: "Nothing could be more dangerous than a too early public discussion of questions in which the self-respect and vital interests of our people are at stake."

At the same time he called on the present regime at Moscow to "show of its own free will that conditions have altered" in Russia.

"I cannot give you particulars," Erkko said, "but I can assure you that no decision regarding a settlement will be made without you and your Diet (Parliament) having the opportunity of considering it and expressing your opinion."

He touched upon what many believed to be the nub of the difficulty with Russia, however, when he mentioned Finnish neutrality. He said Finland could not "entangle herself with any of the belligerents or groups of great powers, nor can she be involved in any combination which would be considered inimical to any other state."

Finland, Erkko said, could not make an agreement which would make it possible for her territory to be used in an unneutral manner. He referred to the tremendous precautionary measures taken by the country and said "the most recent events in Europe gave rise" to them.

"The country has to be on its guard lest it unconsciously be led into ways which would result in its destruction," he continued. It would not be right," he said, "for me to deny that relations between Finland and the country which inaugurated these questions are capable of improvement.

"Finland has shown she is without prejudice but this does not mean she is prepared to sacrifice anything which she considers essential for her freedom and existence. These things are limited."

An indication of the importance Russia attached to the negotiations with Finland was seen in Tanner's disclosure that Josef V. Stalin himself took charge of the talks in Moscow while Premier-Foreign Commissar Vacheslav Molotov sat by silently. He said Stalin was "very friendly and cordial" and smoked cigarettes constantly, instead of his customary pipe.

Finland became increasingly "spy conscious" at the same time as Sweden intensified her anti-espionage activities. Seven persons were held tonight in Helsingfors on suspicion of espionage. Travelers in and out of Finland were scrutinized closely and visas were required even from neighboring Estonians.

Helsinki, Oct. 26-AP-Finland's Finance Minister, Vaeinoe Tanner, fresh from important talks in the Kremlin, declared today he believed Soviet Russia and Finlanad could reach an agreement, in Russia's drive for a more dominant position in Northern Europe.

Negotiations have "gone forward a little," said Dr. Tanner soon after his return from Moscow with Finland's chief delegate, Dr. Juho Kusti Paasikivi, for consultations with their home Government on revised and modified Soviet demands.

Dr. Tanner said that Joseph Stalin did most of the talking for Russia at their Moscow parleys while the Soviet Premier and Foreign Commissar, Vyacheslav Molotov, sat by quietly.

Both Stalin and Molotov were "very friendly and cordial," he said, adding that Stalin constantly had a lighted cigarette in his hand instead of the customary pipe.

"I think we can come to an agreement," Dr. Tanner asserted. "We are not in a hurry. That was the trouble with the other countries (Estonia, Latvia and Lithuania which granted Russia sweeping military and naval concessions soon after the partitionment of Poland).

"We wanted to discuss it thoroughly and consult with our Government."

Refuses to Yield.

The Finnish delegates arrived home from Moscow only this morning and an hour later an authoritative informant declared that the Russian demands, the nature of which has never been disclosed, still contain points on which Finland refused to yield.

After Dr. Paasikivi had spoken for an hour with President Kyosti Kallio, Foreign Minister Elias Erkko and Prime Minister Aimo Cajander, a Foreign Office spokesman said that there was "no doubt" that the negotiations with Russia could be continued and that the Finnish delegation would go back to Moscow for the third time.

What points Russia has raised were not disclosed, but they were said to involve what the Finns consider the independence and neutrality of Finland.

Publicity Not Yet Called For.

There was no announcement of when Dr. Paasikivi would go back to Moscow, a Government source saying merely that he would leave "in due time."

Of reports that the Government was considering making public the Russian demands to put Finland's case before the world, a spokesman said: "Always, in negotiations of this kind, the point comes when they must be made public. So far, we have no reason to do it."

When the delegates arrived in Helsinki this morning, and a welcoming official commented on the brevity of the trip, Dr. Paasikivi laughed and replied that it was "like a promenade." He was met by the Prime Minister and other Cabinet Ministers, and by members of the Diplomatic Corps, including the Russian and Scandinavian representatives here.

Dr. Paasikivi, two umbrellas crooked over his arm, was followed from the train by Finance Minister Tanner.

Some observers expected that the latest Russian demands would be communicated immediately to the Governments of Norway, Denmark and Sweden which, it was disclosed, have been in daily contact with Helsinki since the Stockholm Conference of last week.

Reports from Moscow that Russia had demanded that the Aaland Islands remain unfortified, that concessions on certain other islands in the Gulf of Finland be given Russia and that the Finnish Government adhere to a friendly policy toward Russia, were described by Foreign Minister Erkko as "just as unfounded as all the others."

Military Precautions.

While the Cabinet listened to Dr. Paasikivi's report and planned the future course of the negotiations, a new law was announced restricting the exportation of money from Finland. In the future, Finns will be permitted to take out only the equivalent of 2,000 markkas (about $36) in Finnish or foreign currency.

Foreigners will be permitted to take out money and valuables only to the amount brought in and reported to the customs authorities.

Meanwhile, today twenty Russian submarines were reported bound for the harbor of Tallinn, the Estonian seaport and capital across the Gulf of Finland from this country.

The Russians have been holding naval maneuvers off their new bases in Estonia and Latvia for the past few days, these reports said.

Finnish territorial waters have been mined as a protective measure and new blackout restrictions have left only dim street lights burning here at night. A complete test blackout is scheduled for tomorrow night.

Still Hasn't Wilno.

KAUNAS, Lithuania, Oct. 26 (A. P.).—The Lithuanian troops had still not entered the historic Lithuanian caiptal of Wilno today, sixteen days after the Russo-Lithuanian pact had ceded it to Lithuania. The entry of the army has been postponed daily.

Wilno, which was taken by Poland after the World War, became Russian as a result of the division of the conquered country with Germany. It was returned to Lithuania by Russia in exchange for military and naval concessions.

Meanwhile, a Soviet military mission made a tour of various towns designed to receive Red army garrisons and sites for Soviet air force fields.

Roos, a former municipal councilor in Strasbourg, was one of eight persons on trial. One of the others, identified only as a soldier, also was condemned to death, to be preceded by formal military degradation. Three others were condemned to five years' imprisonment with hard labor.

An engineer of German origin, Paul Schuck, 41, was sentenced to life imprisonment. Maurice Guerdin and Schmitt Etienne received sentences of ten and nine years.

Roos was charged specifically with having furnished German agents with precise details on the movements of French troops and implacements of artillery batteries during March, 1936, when Germany reoccupied the Rhineland, and September, 1938, during the Czecho-Slovak crisis.

It was asserted his conviction had nothing to do with his autonomy activity and was based entirely on spying.

He was arrested April 6, 1928 on charges of a separatist plot against the security of the State. After his release, the French accused him of continuing as one of the most active German propaganda agents in Alsace. His newspaper, Elsass Lothringen Zeitung, was suppressed by the Government after his arrest.

FRENCH AUTHORITIES SAID "COMPROMISING DOCUMENTS" WERE FOUND IN ROOS' HOME AT THE TIME OF HIS ARREST.

FRENCH CONDEMN FIRST SPY OF WAR

OCT 27 1939

Seven Others Convicted With Alsatian Leader.

OCT 27 1939

NANCY, France, Oct. 26 (A. P.).—Dr. Karl Roos, sixty-year-old Alsatian autonomist leader, was condemned to death by a military court today on charges of having turned over French military secrets to German spies.

Dr. Roos, a veteran of home rule for Alsace, was arrested on February 7 when French officials accused him of being in close touch with Nazi party officials in Berlin.

It is believed that he is the first Frenchman condemned to death as spy since the war started.

The announcement merely read: "The permanent military tribunal of the second military region has condemned to death Karl Roos, convicted of having delivered important military secrets to German

Netherlands Nervous As Nazi Troops Mass Along Frontier

German Soldiers Plainly Visible From Hills On Holland's Southern Border—Communications Delayed

[By the Associated Press]

Amsterdam, Oct. 26—Concentrations of German troops sighted along the southern half of the Netherlands-German frontier caused nervousness late today in villages along the border.

The German troops were plainly visible from the hills which line the frontier from Gennep to Vaals.

This was said to be the first time there had been any noticeable troop movements opposite the Netherlands province of Limburg, although a week ago observers noted how fortifications were under construction in the Siegfried Line opposite Vaals at the southern tip of the Netherlands.

The Taal hills behind Vaals overlook Aachen, which is a key point in the Siegfried Line. The southern half of Limburg province lies between Germany and Belgium, and Vaals is the point from which parts of three countries—Germany, Belgium and the Netherlands—can be seen.

For several hours eye-witnesses in the Netherlands near Venlo, Gennep, Sittard and Vaals said they saw many military cars filled with soldiers and troops on the march in the fortified and rolling country across the frontier.

These troops disappeared suddenly and observers assumed they had entered deep fortifications which line the low hills of the German Westwall across from Limburg.

Normal communications to Germany were subject to long delays, and it was impossible to get a telephone call through to Aachen, a point where previous reports have said there were large German troop concentrations.

There were few Netherlands soldiers either along the frontier itself or in extreme southern Limburg, although the border roads are heavily mined and barricaded.

Hull Hears British Took 2 Ships With Mexican Oil

Said to Have Thought Cargo for Sweden Would Aid Nazis

WASHINGTON, Oct. 26 (AP).—Secretary of State Cordell Hull said today he had heard reports that two tankers carrying Mexican oil had been captured by the British. According to the reports, the oil had been shipped from Mexico in Norwegian tankers by W. G. Davis, oil sales promoter who arranged several barter deals exchanging Mexican oil for German goods.

The reports said Sweden was the announced destination of the ships but the British suspected the oil was destined for German consumption.

The ships will be held until a British prize court can determine what disposal will be made of the oil, the reports said. Presumably the oil would be taken over by the British and compensation paid to the shipper.

Rheims Cathedral Set For Another Onslaught

Still Open to Worshipers but Is Reinforced Against Shelling

WITH THE BRITISH EXPEDITIONARY FORCE IN FRANCE, Oct. 26 (AP) (Passed by Censor).—The doors of Rheims Cathedral are still open and women in black still kneel in the nave, but the great church is again feeling—as it often has since its building in the twelfth century—the [illegible] of war. The cathedral, which withstood a terrific shelling in the World War from German artillery, is prepared for another such onslaught. Sandbags are piled fifteen high around the entrance and down the side. The enormous rose windows, which have been the pride of the city for centuries, are being removed.

The roof, which was damaged by shells of the last great war, is being reinforced. John D. Rockefeller gave $4,000,000 toward rebuilding the roof after the World War.

Columns, which seem to reach to heaven, are pitted and pocked with shrapnel scars. In the last war the floor of the nave was six to eight feet deep in rubbish. Now it is clear and worshipers come and go all day long.

No marks are left from the fire which killed an unknown number of German wounded when a shell set fire to the hay on which they were lying.

POPE TO PRESENT ENCYCLICAL TODAY

Pontiff, In First Document, Expected To Denounce Atheism And Neopaganism

Letter Intended For Nations Where Anti-Christian Doctrines Are Most Destructive

[By the Associated Press]

Vatican City, Oct. 26—The Vatican announced today that the first encyclical by Pope Pius XII would be given to the world tomorrow, when the Pontiff is expected to denounce atheism and neopaganism.

The Italian press said the circular letter, addressed to Roman Catholic bishops throughout the world, would be intended particularly for "nations where atheism and neopaganism have done the greatest destruction."

Contents Not Disclosed

Prelates said the text in Latin would begin with the words "Summi pontificatus," which, by tradition, would become the future title of the document. These words mean "the supreme pontificate's," but the remainder of the phrase was not disclosed in advance of publication to be made tomorrow about noon (6 A. M., E. S. T.).

The letter was expected to be lengthy, dealing with the European war, which the Vatican fears might facilitate the spread of doctrines which it considers anti-Christian.

Departure Postponed

The Pope had indicated he would return from Castel Gandolfo, his summer residence, tomorrow, but members of his household said his departure now had been postponed until Saturday evening.

In an address to his Castel Gandolfo police guard today the Pope said his heart "has no bounds, knows no rancor or hatred, but beats for all."

He tered the guards "custodians of that peace which we would like to see shine over the whole face of the earth."

Vatican officials estimated the encyclical would contain about 10,000 words. The Vatican radio was expected to broadcast summaries in English, French, German, Spanish and possibly in Polish.

Mussolini Sees Test Of New Armored Cars

ROME, Oct. 26 (A. P.).—Premier Mussolini watched a demonstration of new types of armored cars and motorized artillery today.

He inspected the equipment carefully for several hours and drove one of the motorized units.

NAZIS TO CENSOR WIRED MESSAGES

Bar Foreign Telephone Calls Except With Permit.

BERLIN, Oct. 26 (A. P.).—New restrictions were imposed today on communications between Germany and the outside world.

A regulation was issued providing that private telephone calls to foreign countries hereafter would not be accepted without a special permit and that private telegrams would be censored.

Authorized persons said that newspaper correspondents would not be affected by the regulation—that no direct [illegible]ship of press dispatches was contemplated.

Telephone numbers and teleprinters of foreign news offices will be registered with the Postal Ministry and approved by the Propaganda Ministry. It was stated that correspondents then could telephone and telegraph unhampered.

German officials since the first few days of the war have not attempted to exercise direct censorship on news dispatches, perferring to hold the correspondents personally responsible later for whatever they may write.

Some dispatches were held up for several hours today, however, and telephone lines for foreign calls were not available while the new system was being put into operation.

No reason for the regulation on private messages was given.

U. S. RADIO MAN FLED FROM FLINT

Disclosed to Have Escaped While at Tromsoe.

BERGEN, Norway, Oct. 26 (A. P.).—Reports received here today indicated that the American radio operator of the City of Flint, the United States ship captured by the Germans, escaped the craft at Tromsoe, where survivors of the sinking of the British steamship Stonegate were put ashore.

The report said that he mixed with members of the British crew and wandered off the City of Flint unnoticed by the German prize crew as the [illegible] were sent ashore.

The present whereabouts of the radio man and his name were not immediately available.

The City of Flint, captured in mid-ocean by a German warship and boarded by a prize crew, first stopped at Tromsoe to put off the crew of the Stonegate who had been picked up by the City of Flint after the British ship had been sunk by a German craft. The Flint later was sailed to the Russian port of Murmansk by the prize crew.

May Have Been Schuss.

NORFOLK, Va., Oct. 26 (A. P.).—Mrs. William Schuss, wife of the chief radio operator of the City of Flint, said today that she had not heard from him since the ship was captured, and expressed a belief that the radio operator reported to have escaped at Tromsoe probably was her husband.

Clarence Faust of Orangeburg, Pa., was listed as second radio operator aboard the City of Flint.

NAZI PLANE DOWN

Ship of Famous Red Devil Unit Lands in Denmark.

COPENHAGEN, Oct. 26 (A. P.).—A German pursuit plane, returning to its home base with a squadron, lost its bearings in a fog today and landed undamaged on Danish soil.

The plane was confiscated and its crew interned.

The plane belonged to the Red Devils, Field Marshal Hermann Wilhelm Goering's personal squadron and a continuation of the famous Baron von Richthofen world war unit.

NAZI POLICE FEAR RIOTING BY CZECHS

Extra Forces Posted as Old Independence Day Nears.

PRAGUE, Oct. 26 (A. P.).—Extra police forces were stationed in several towns today following demonstrations against an order of the German Protectorate Government prohibiting the celebration of the anniversary of the [illegible] Czecho-Slovak Republics [illegible] on October 28, 1918.

The demonstrations were reported to have occurred in Beroun and Tabor, where 150 persons were arrested. Moving picture theaters and restaurants were closed in Tabor and the sale of alcoholic beverages to Czechs was halted.

Meanwhile the Ministerial Council was called to discuss measures to prevent further demonstrations.

Tiso Slovak President, But Tuka Has the Power

Former Premier Gets Symbolic Post, Hands Over Reins

BRATISLAVA, Slovakia, Oct. 26 (AP).—Joseph Tiso was elevated today to be first President of the Slovak Republic and turned over his post of Premier, at least temporarily, to Interior Minister Bela Tuka.

This shift in leadership of the republic was forecast on Oct. 2, when well-informed Slovak sources explained it would mean relegating Tiso to a post of symbolic power but with little actual authority. The German Army took control of the republic at the outbreak of the European war. Tuka is chief of the radical pro-German wing of the Hlinka party, sole surviving political machine in Slovakia.

Although Tiso followed Fuehrer Adolf Hitler's order last March 14 in arranging for Slovakia to break away from the Czecho-Slovak Republic, he since has been described by the pro-German element as "untrustworthy."

Norway to Spend More for Defense

OSLO, Oct. 26 (A. P.).—Christian Frederik Moltzen, Defense Minister, announced today that Norway would spend an additional $13,000,000 this year for national defense.

FORSTER IS MADE DANZIG GOVERNOR

Hitler Converts Free City Into a Province.

BERLIN, Oct. 26 (A. P.).—Further consolidating Nazi gains in the east, Hitler made the former Free City of Danzig today a province and appointed Albert Forster, former Nazi district leader there, to be Governor. The new province includes also the pre-war province of West Prussia. It has a total population of about 2,400,000.

A Russian trade delegation, said to be particularly interested in the development of artificial rubber and gasoline, arrived here to further co-operation [illegible] the Soviet-Nazi trade pact. The delegation is returning a visit made by a German delegation to Russia.

Headed by I. T. Tevosyan, Commissar for Shipbuilding, the Russian mission will visit heavy machinery plants to make purchases to offset orders placed in Russia by Germany. Germany is negotiating with Russia for grain, oil, cotton, raw phosphate, flax, and manganese and other ores to replace sources shut off by the British blockade.

Italian Liner Saturnia Held Up At Gibraltar

Many Other Ships Detained As British Are Believed To Fear Oil Leak To Germany

Rome, Oct. 26 (AP)—Word reached here today that the Italian liner Saturnia, with Mrs. William Phillips, wife of the United States Ambassador, aboard, had been tied up at Gibraltar by the British contraband control.

The Saturnia, scheduled to arrive at Naples last Tuesday, was expected to be delayed until Saturday. Mrs. Phillips was returning to Italy after a vacation in the United States.

Several freighters and tankers bound for Italy also were reported among a large number of vessels detained. Since Italy's storage tanks are reported to have been filled with oil as an emergency precaution, it was believed the British suspected further supplies might find their way to Germany.

Russia Names New Envoy To Hungary, Ends Breach

Resumes Relations Broken by Anti-Comintern Move

MOSCOW, Oct. 26 (AP).—The Presidium of the Supreme Soviet (parliament) appointed Nicholas Sharanov today as Minister to Hungary.

Hungarian-Russian diplomatic relations were interrupted Feb. 2 when the Kremlin ordered the Soviet legation at Budapest closed and asked Hungary to close her Moscow legation. The breach came as Russia's reply to Hungary's decision to join the anti-Comintern pact Italy, Germany and Japan. An official Russian explanation of Hungary's decision said the accord was "thrust upon the Hungarian government from the outside." The recall of envoys was not a formal rupture of relations.

Sharanov formerly served as Ambassador to Greece and was named Ambassador to Poland last May.

Hungary appointed Dr. J. Christoffy, formerly counselor of the Hungarian legation at Warsaw, as Minister at Moscow Sept. 23, when the two countries decided to resume normal diplomatic relations.

American Ship Lands Survivors At Gibraltar

Crown City Arrives With 31 Crew Members Of Torpedoed British Vessel

Gibraltar, Oct. 26 (AP)—The American freighter Crown City today arrived here with the thirty-one crewmen of the British vessel Ledbury, which was topedoed eighty miles off Gibraltar Tuesday. The rescued British seaman said a German submarine sank their ship.

The 5,428-ton Crown City, chartered by the United States Maritime Commission, put into Gibraltar especially to land Capt. Norman Price and his crew, rescued without a casualty.

The 3,528-ton Ledbury was one of four British ships sunk Tuesday in the same vicinity, giving rise to the belief that an entire British convoy had been attacked. A cryptic Admiralty statement in London said merely that they had been "fired upon."

The other three sunken ships were the 4,412-ton Tafna, the 2,474-ton Menin Ridge and the 7,256-ton Clan Chisholm. Eighty-nine persons were reported dead or missing.

Normandie Is Costing $1,000 Day At Pier

French Line Reports That Until Two Weeks Ago Daily Cost Was $2,500

New York, Oct. 26 (AP)—The French Line said today it was costing approximately $1,000 per day, above pier rental, to keep the superliner Normandie tied up in the safety of New York harbor.

The line said the cost until two weeks ago was about $2,500 per day, but this was reduced when almost 1,200 crew members were sent back to France. The cost included wages of 125 members of the crew, food and protection money. The line leases its pier and does not include that in the cost.

Cunard White Star Line officials refused to comment on the cost of keeping the $25,000,000 Queen Mary at its pier. Both ships are heavily guarded because of sabotage threats.

Supreme Soviet Meets Oct. 31 in Special Session

Ratification of New Treaties With Estonia, Latvia and Lithuania May Be Voted

MOSCOW, Oct. 26 (AP)—An extraordinary session of the Supreme Soviet (Parliament) of Soviet Russia was called today for Oct. 31 by the Presidium of the Supreme Soviet.

The session, the fifth to be held, presumably was called to ratify recent mutual assistance pacts with the Baltic states of Estonia, Latvia and Lithuania, and pacts of friendship and trade with Germany.

The last session of the Supreme Soviet ratified Russia's non-aggression treaty with Germany.

The question of the annexation of the one-time Polish Ukraine and White Russia to the U. S. S. R. also was expected to be taken up.

"Pravda," Communist party newspaper, described today the results of the plebiscite in the Russian-occupied parts of Poland as an expression of their solidarity with the Soviet government and desire to join the Soviet Union.

Official results gave government-designated candidates in White Russia and the Polish Ukraine more than 90 per cent of the votes, although in eleven districts new elections must be held because the candidates did not receive a majority. There was only one set of candidates on the ballots, and the only way voters could express their opposition was to cross out the names of the government nominees.

In explaining why about 10 per cent of the vote cast was against the government "Pravda" said: "This is comprehensible, for suffrage was universal and landlords, former officials, merchants, factory owners, priests and kulaks participated in the voting."

"Pravda" said that under Soviet rule the "landless and small peasants and farm laborers have received the land robbed from them by landlords, monasteries and high officials."

Candidates elected by the poll will take their places in national assemblies in the Western Ukraine today and in White Russia on Saturday to vote on ratifying annexation of the two areas by Russia.

Lithuania to Occupy Wilno

COPENHAGEN, Oct. 26 (AP).—A D. N. B. dispatch tonight from Kaunas said that Lithuanian troops tomorrow would enter the Wilno (Vilna) district, ceded to Lithuania in her recent pact with Russia.

Decision Is Reached Relative To Refugees

Current Surveys For Resettlement Of Germans May Be Useful Later, Group Says

Washington, Oct. 26 (AP)—The executive committee of the Intergovernmental Committee on Refugees decided today that its current surveys for resettlement of German refugees might be useful at a later date should it become necessary to resettle millions made homeless by the present European war.

President Roosevelt had asked the committee to undertake studies looking to the settlement of perhaps 10,000,000 to 20,000,000 of war refugees.

British and French representatives would not agree to this at the final meeting today, their position being that Britain and France would win the war and such handling of refugees would be unnecessary. The committee reached its decision as a sort of compromise between this and the President's view.

NEW PARIS STYLES FEATURE MILITARY

Maginot and Poilu Blue Among Dominant Colors.

PARIS, Oct. 26 (A. P.).—Maginot and poilu blue, trench brown, plane gray and legion red were the dominating colors in mid-season collections of new military fashions shown today.

The shows were given in spite of the war, but greatly under its influence.

This feminine wear included coats and suits with big military-style pockets, ten to twenty inches long. Some new models by Schiaparelli showed swinging saddle pockets, some in fur and others in elaborately braided fabrics.

Many suits had leather-trimmed pockets swung in knapsack style from the shoulder. Dresses had front pockets swung from belts.

Apart from the military motif were new "washerwoman" frocks, featuring skirts and adjustable at the hips for day length or ankle length for evenings. Ostrich and Coq Toques were shown with these dresses.

Military style coats had turnover collars, gold buttons and belts. Some copied trench coats.

Wool jersey dresses showed military touches at the collar points, which were of red velvet and gold, embroidered with various French Army insignia.

Tweed suits featured a wrap-around skirt worn over bloomers or plus-fours in a bright, contrasting color which matched accompanying blouses and hats. Many soft, fold-up hats were shown with the millinery models.

For gas raids—there haven't been any—there was a blue oilskin suit along the lines of a ski outfit. It carried an oilskin hood, and the accessories included oilskin-topped boots and a pigskin-covered canteen to be carried at the hip.

A taffeta dress streaked with dark red, green and blue was named "camouflage."

Funk Places Economics Upon a Par With Armies

Nazi Minister Sees Two Wars, With Reich Set for Both

BERLIN, Oct. 26 (AP).—Minister of Economics Walther Funk, in a magazine article published today, observed that the war may be won as much in the field of economics as on the battlefield.

He said Germany was prepared for a "totalitarian" war involving economics and propaganda—"the rudiments of which we were taught by the enemy in the World War."

Writing for the publication "Berlin-Rome-Tokio," anti-Comintern organ, Funk said:

"The decisive battle of modern war is only partially won by weapons. So, facing a totalitarian attack, we have arranged a totalitarian defense. For the idea of this defense we are thankful for the initiative given us by our opponents in the World War, who taught us with unexampled brutality in the field of economics."

Funk said that commodities which Germany was unable to produce under the four-year economic plan were being provided through commercial treaties with neutral countries and that Britain was unable to disturb this commerce. He declared that the conquest of Poland and commercial accords with Soviet Russia had solved the problem of where to obtain raw materials, he declared.

Criticism Of His Policy "Fake," Says Roosevelt

Charge It May Lead To War Labeled "Shameless And Dishonest"—Any Hint Of "Remotest Possibility" Of Joining Conflict Denied

[By the Associated Press]

Washington, Oct. 26 — President Roosevelt, striking out at critics who charge that his foreign policy may lead the United States to war, accused them tonight of perpetrating "one of the worst fakes in current history."

In and out of Congress, he said, orators have been "beating their breasts and proclaiming against sending the boys of American mothers to fight on the battlefields of Europe."

Calls It "Bogey Man"

This, he asserted in a broadcast address, I do not hesitate to label as one of the worst fakes in current history. It is a deliberate setting up of an imaginary bogey man.

"The simple truth is that no person in any responsible place in the national Administration in Washington, or in any State government, or in any city government, or in any county government, has ever suggested in any shape, manner or form the remotest possibility of sending the boys of American mothers to fight on the battlefields of Europe.

"That is why I label that argument a shameless and dishonest fake."

Is Forum Speaker

The President's speech, made as the Senate neared the final action on his proposal to repeal the arms embargo, was delivered from the White House under the auspices of the New York Herald Tribune forum on "The War's Challenge to the United States."

The President also praised the "majority of the press and the radio" for "objective reporting" of the international situation. He said this had worked so well that he wished "for more of it in the field of domestic news."

Says Country Is Neutral

After repeating that this country is neutral and does not intend to get involved in the war, the President said:

"That we can be neutral in thought as well as in act is, as I have said before, impossible of fulfillment because again, the people of this country, thinking things through calmly and without prejudice, have heard and are making up their minds about relative merits of current events on other continents.

"It is a fact increasingly manifest that presentation of real news has sharpened the minds and the judgment of men and women everywhere in these days of real public discussion — and we Americans begin to know the difference between the truth on the one side and the falsehood on the other, no matter how often the falsehood is iterated and reiterated. Repetition does not transform a lie into a truth."

Sees Good In "Deluges"

Discussing propaganda, he said it was perhaps a good thing that Congress had been "deluged" with it from time to time in behalf of various causes.

"Members of the House of Representatives, and the Senate," he explained, "begin to discriminate nowadays between honest, spontaneous, unsolicited expressions of opinion on the part of voters and the propaganda type of mass appeals."

In another portion of his speech, the President said there were two distinct dangers to democracy. One, he said, was the "peril from those who seek the fulfillment of ideals at a pace too fast for the machinery of the modern body politics to function—people who by insistence on too great speed foster an oligarchic form of government such as Communism, or Naziism or Fascism.

Danger Held Equal

"The other group, which presents an equal danger," he said, "is composed of that small minority which complains that the democratic processes are inefficient as well as being slow, people who would have the whole of government put into the hands of a little group of those who have proved their efficiency in lines of specialized science or specialized private business.

"They equally, and in most cases unconsciously, too, are in effect advocating the oligarchic form of government, Communism, or Naziism, or Fascism."

Extreme rightists and extreme leftists, he said, should not be taken out and shot against the wall, "for they sharpen the argument and make us realize the value of the democratic middle course—especially if that middle course, in order to keep up with the times, is 'just a little bit left of center.'"

He gave four definitions as follows:

"A radical is a man with both feet firmly planted—in the air.

"A conservative is a man with two perfectly good legs who, however, has never learned to walk.

"A reactionary is a somnambulist walking backward.

"A liberal is a man who uses his legs and his hands at the behest of his head."

Paul V. McNutt, Federal Security Administrator, speaking before the same forum, declared that "hemispheric isolation" would mean for the United States "an upheaval almost as great as war itself—only wars do end, whereas this process would wreck a generation."

Describes Effects

He said such a policy would require the country to maintain a military establishment "capable of putting a protective force into any part of the New World at any time."

"It means," he added, "abandoning many markets for agricultural products. It means putting two-thirds of the cotton-producing South out of action. It means the end of much of our wheat and cattle-producing West.

"It means reshifting of a great part of our population, and stagnation in many, if not all, of our manufacturing centers in the industrial East. Foreign trade is less than ten per cent. of our total trade; but that trade is the key to a great deal of what we do."

Speaks Of Philippines

The administrator, who formerly was United States High Commissioner to the Philippines, called his address "Frontier of the Pacific," and devoted much of it to a discussion of the Philippines, which he termed "not only one of the main elements of our protection in the Pacific, but . . . also our own open door to Malaysia and Asia, wherein half the total population of the world is found."

He pointed out that unless there is a change in existing law—a change possible only at the initiation of the Filipinos themselves—the islands will be politically separated from the United States in 1946, and added:

"I often wonder if our people realize what we are giving up."

Gives "Main Question"

To withdraw from the Philippines, he went on, would be to "close our voice in Oriental diplomacy" and to leave a barrier of islands to "intervene between the United States and the continent of Asia."

The main question, he said, was: "Are we in or out of the Far East?"

To be out," he added, would mean the abandonment of the open door to China, "the integrity of the Chinese nation," and the freedom of the seas and air.

Finnish Minister Talks

Hjalmar J. Procope, Finnish Minister to the United States, told the forum that while Finland hoped its Russian negotiations would reaffirm "peace in northern Europe," Finland "neither will nor can agree to anything that violates her independence, integrity and neutrality. Behind this policy the Finnish people stands as one man."

Walter G. Krivitsky, who describes himself as a former Soviet military intelligence officer, who escaped the 1937 "purge," said in a prepared address it was "not at all improbable that Stalin will seek an agreement with Japan by dividing spheres of influence in China and diverting the Japanese southward against the French, Dutch and British possessions."

Belgium Appeals To U. S. For Neutrality Support

Brussels, Friday, Oct. 27 (AP)—Leopold III, King of the Belgians, today reaffirmed Belgium's desire for neutrality and peace and appealed to the United States for support "in the attitude we have adopted."

Leopold spoke for six minutes in a broadcast to the United States in connection with a forum conducted by the New York Herald Tribune. Speaking quietly in perfect English, the young sovereign said:

"Belgium, neutral, loyal and strong, fulfills an eventually peaceful mission. She stands with other neutrals as a stronghold for peace."

"Emphasizing Belgium's ties to the United States, he said:

"I hope the American nation, to whom we feel so closely drawn, will take courage and support us in the attitude we have adopted."

The King waited up until after 2 A. M. to speak from a microphone in Laaken Palace. His speech was broadcast in English, French and Flemish from Belgian stations.

The sovereign, who was a leader in affirming his country's neutrality in 1937, said nothing was changing Belgium's course since her two powerful neighbors began to war. Belgium always has been a fountainhead of Christian civilization, he said, and "I am convinced my country is acting in defense of civilization."

Reviews 1937 Declaration

He reviewed the Declaration of Neutrality in 1937, serving treaty ties with England and France, and noted that all the country's neighbors agreed to respect it.

Reference to a pinch upon the country by the British blockade was apparently made by the King when he said the country requires a continuous flow of export trade and unimpeded importation of [illegible].

"Peace is a matter of life and death to my country," he said. "Side by side with Holland, Belgium stands for an island of peace in the interest of all."

If Belgium were attacked, and the King added parenthetically, "I pray God this may not happen," her forces would be ten times stronger than twenty-five years ago in the World War, he said.

He referred to his "dear father," King Albert, and recalled that twenty-five years ago today he was leading the army in defense of the country.

BRUSSELS, OCT. 27-(FRIDAY)-(AP)-YOUTHFUL KING LEOPOLD DECLARED IN A TRANSATLANTIC RADIO ADDRESS EARLY TODAY THAT IF BELGIUM WERE INVADED NOW HER PEOPLE WOULD FIGHT "WITH THE SAME CONVICTION" AS IN 1914 BUT "WITH FORCES TEN TIMES STRONGER."

ADDRESSING THE PEOPLE OF THE UNITED STATES THROUGH A FORUM CONDUCTED BY THE NEW YORK HERALD TRIBUNE, LEOPOLD REAFFIRMED BELGIUM'S DESIRE FOR PEACE AND NEUTRALITY, AND HE ASKED FOR THE SUPPORT OF THE UNITED STATES IN THIS STAND.

"WE ARE PREPARED," HE SAID, "TO EXERT OUR ENTIRE STRENGTH IN ORDER TO UPHOLD OUR INDEPENDENCE.

"EXACTLY 25 YEARS AGO, DAY FOR DAY, A BELGIAN ARMY UNDER COMMAND OF MY FATHER KING ALBERT ARRESTED, AFTER A HARD BATTLE, THE PROGRESS OF A CRUEL INVASION.

"IF WE ARE ATTACKED--AND PRAY GOD THIS MAY NOT HAPPEN--IN VIOLATION OF SOLEMN AND DEFINITE UNDERTAKINGS THAT WERE GIVEN US IN 1937 AND RENEWED AT THE OUTSET OF THE PRESENT WAR, WE WOULD NOT HESITATE TO FIGHT WITH THE SAME CONVICTION, BUT WITH FORCES TEN TIMES STRONGER. ONCE AGAIN A SINGLE-MINDED NATION WOULD SUPPORT ITS ARMY."

IN HIS SIX-MINUTE ADDRESS KING LEOPOLD SAID "WE CANNOT BELIEVE THAT THE BELLIGERENTS WOULD FAIL TO RESPECT OUR NEUTRALITY," ADDING THAT "WE TRUST IN THE WORD THEY HAVE GIVEN US."

BRUSSELS, OCT. 27-(FRIDAY)-(AP)-FOLLOWING IS THE TEXT OF KING LEOPOLD'S RADIO ADDRESS TO THE UNITED STATES EARLY TODAY: (ABOUT 800)

I AM HONORED BY SPEAKING FROM THE SAME PLATFORM AS YOUR GREAT PRESIDENT. WHEN THE FORUM KINDLY ASKED ME TO GIVE A SHORT MESSAGE TO THE AMERICAN NATION I ACCEPTED THE INVITATION WITH PLEASURE. MY COMPATRIOTS, MY FAMILY AND I HAVE MANY DEAR AND FAITHFUL MEMORIES OF THE UNITED STATES. NO BELGIAN CAN FORGET THE SOLACE AND EFFICIENT AID THAT THE AMERICAN PEOPLE EXTENDED TO THE BELGIAN POPULATION BY LEADING RELIEF OF ITS NEEDS DURING YEARS OF DISTRESS.

THE TOPIC SUGGESTED TO ME WAS A CALL IN DEFENSE OF CIVILIZATION. I REGARD THIS SUGGESTION AS A COMPLIMENT TO MY COUNTRY. IT IMPLIES RECOGNITION OF THE DISTINGUISHED PLACE BELGIUM HAS HELD THROUGHOUT THE HISTORY OF THE WESTERN WORLD. BELGIUM HAS ALWAYS BEEN LOOKED UPON AS A FOUNTAINHEAD OF CHRISTIAN CIVILIZATION.

CONVINCED THAT MY COUNTRY IS ACTING IN DEFENSE OF THIS CIVILIZATION BY THE ATTITUDE IT HAS TAKEN AMIDST THE CONFLICT THAT HAS BROKEN OUT IN EUROPE, I FEEL I MAY CONFINE MY REMARKS TO CLARIFY TO MY AMERICAN AUDIENCE BELGIUM'S POSITION IN THIS WAR, A POSITION ENTIRELY CONSISTENT WITH THE WILL AND COURAGE AND INTEGRITY OF MY PEOPLE. IN MY CAPACITY OF HEAD OF THE BELGIAN STATE I WELCOME THIS OPPORTUNITY OF SETTING OUT CLEARLY THE FOLLOWING FACTS.

IN 1937 WE MADE KNOWN OUR POLICY OF INDEPENDENCE AND EACH OF OUR THREE GREAT NEIGHBORS ACKNOWLEDGED THIS NOTIFICATION. THEY WENT FURTHER, SPONTANEOUSLY GIVING US DEFINITE ASSURANCE THEY WOULD RESPECT BELGIUM'S FRONTIERS AND ENSURE HER INDEPENDENCE.

THIS LED LOGICALLY TO THE DECLARATION OF NEUTRALITY WHICH MY GOVERN-

30.24-4289

30.24-4289

MENT MADE AT THE BEGINNING OF THE PRESENT WAR. AN ATTITUDE OF NEUTRALITY IS, MOREOVER, IN KEEPING BOTH WITH THE TRADITIONS AND THE ASPIRATIONS OF THE BELGIAN PEOPLE, WHOSE FEELINGS HAVE EVOLVED FROM AGE-LONG STRUGGLES. THE BELGIAN NATION, WHICH IS THE VERY INCARNATION OF THE SENSE OF INDIVIDUAL LIBERTY, GAVE ITS BLOOD TO SAVE ITS INSTITUTIONS IN UNFLINCHING DETERMINATION TO REMAIN ITSELF.

NEUTRALITY ALSO IS VITAL TO MY COUNTRY. BELGIUM, WHOSE TERRITORY IS SMALL BUT ONE OF THE MOST THICKLY POPULATED IN THE WORLD, ESSENTIALLY DEPENDS FOR ITS VERY SUBSISTENCE ON THE ACTIVITIES OF HER INHABITANTS.

THESE ACTIVITIES IN TURN REQUIRE A CONTINUOUS FLOW OF EXPORT TRADE AND UNHINDERED IMPORTATION OF FOOD AND INDUSTRIAL SUPPLIES. PEACE IS THUS FOR THE BELGIAN PEOPLE A MATTER OF LIFE AND DEATH. WE HAVE NO AMBITIONS FOR TERRITORIAL EXPANSION. NEITHER HAVE WE ANY PART WHATEVER IN THE HAPPENINGS THAT BROUGHT ABOUT THE CONFLICT TODAY DIVIDING EUROPE.

IF WE BECOME INVOLVED IN THE FRAY IT IS ON OUR SOIL THAT THE ISSUE WOULD BE FOUGHT OUT, AND IN VIEW OF THE SMALL AREA OF OUR TERRITORY THAT WOULD SPELL UTTER DESTRUCTION FOR BELGIUM WHATEVER THE ISSUE OF THE WAR.

OCT 27 1939

SIDE BY SIDE WITH HOLLAND, BELGIUM STANDS FOR AN ISLAND OF PEACE IN THE INTERESTS OF ALL. AT THE CROSSROADS OF THE BORDERS OF THE GREAT WESTERN EUROPEAN POWERS, BELGIUM, NEUTRAL AND LOYAL--AND STRONG AS SHE IS TODAY--FULFILLS AN ESSENTIALLY PEACEFUL MISSION.

SHE SETS A LIMIT TO THE FIGHTING FRONT AND TO THE LOSS OF HUMAN LIFE. SHE STANDS AMONG OTHER NEUTRAL STATES FOR A STRONGHOLD OF PEACE AND AN AGENT OF APPEASEMENT WHICH ALONE CAN SAVE OUR CIVILIZATION FROM THE ABYSS INTO WHICH A WORLD WAR WOULD THROW IT.

WE FULLY PERCEIVE OUR DUTIES AND RIGHTS, WE AWAIT THE FUTURE WITH STEADFAST SERENITY AND A CLEAR CONSCIENCE, WHICH NOTHING CAN PERTURB. WE ARE PREPARED TO EXERT OUR ENTIRE STRENGTH IN ORDER TO UPHOLD OUR INDEPENDENCE.

EXACTLY 25 YEARS AGO, DAY FOR DAY, THE BELGIAN ARMY UNDER THE COMMAND OF MY FATHER KING ALBERT ARRESTED, AFTER A HARD BATTLE, THE PROGRESS OF A CRUEL INVASION.

IF WE ARE ATTACKED--AND PRAY GOD THIS MAY NOT HAPPEN--IN VIOLATION OF SOLEMN AND DEFINITE UNDERTAKINGS THAT WERE GIVEN US IN 1937 AND RENEWED AT THE OUTSET OF THE PRESENT WAR, WE WOULD NOT HESITATE TO FIGHT WITH THE SAME CONVICTION BUT WITH FORCES TEN TIMES STRONGER.

ONCE AGAIN A SINGLE-MINDED NATION WOULD SUPPORT ITS ARMY.

BUT WE CANNOT BELIEVE THAT BELLIGERENTS WOULD FAIL TO RESPECT OUR NEUTRALITY. WE TRUST IN THE WORD THEY HAVE GIVEN US AND HAVE PROCLAIMED BEFORE THE WORLD JUST AS THEY MAY RELY ON OUR LOYALTY FROM WHICH, FOLLOWING THE EXAMPLE SET BY MY BELOVED FATHER, I AM RESOLVED NEVER TO SWERVE AS SOVEREIGN OF A FREE AND GALLANT PEOPLE.

LET ME EXPRESS THE HOPE THAT THE AMERICAN NATION, TO WHOM WE FEEL SO CLOSELY DRAWN BY TIES OF COMMON ASPIRATION AND BY SIMILARITY OF OUR INSTITUTIONS, WILL ENCOURAGE AND SUPPORT US IN THE ATTITUDE WE HAVE ADOPTED FOR THE GOOD OF PEACE AND IN THE SERVICE OF CIVILIZATION.

LONDON,OCT.26-(AP)-PUBLIC CRITICISM OF GREAT BRITAIN'S MINISTRY OF INFORMATION EASED OFF TODAY AS FRESH PLANS WERE MADE FOR THE WAR OF WORDS AGAINST GERMANY.

NEW PROPAGANDA STRATEGY WAS FORESHADOWED BY AN ANNOUNCEMENT IN THE HOUSE OF LORDS YESTERDAY BY LORD MACMILLAN, MINISTER OF INFORMATION, OF A REORGANIZATION FOR GREATER EFFICIENCY AND A REDUCTION OF THE MINISTRY STAFF BY 30 PER CENT.

RESPONDING TO LORD ASTOR'S OBSERVATIONS THAT "GOOD PUBLICITY MIGHT WELL SHORTEN THE WAR BY WEEKS AND PERHAPS BY MONTHS," THE MINISTER ACKNOWLEDGED THAT MORE NEWSPAPERMEN WERE NEEDED, ESPECIALLY IN THE FOREIGN DEPARTMENT.

PRIME MINISTER CHAMBERLAIN'S WEEKLY REVIEW OF THE WAR WAS SET FOR THIS AFTERNOON IN THE HOUSE OF COMMONS AND IT WAS POSSIBLE HE WOULD REPLY TO GERMAN FOREIGN MINISTER JOACHIM VON RIBBENTROP'S "FIGHT-TO-THE-END" SPEECH OF TUESDAY NIGHT AT DANZIG.

FIGHTING SHIPS MEANWHILE WENT AHEAD WITH THE MOST ACTIVE PHASE OF THE WAR.

CONFRONTED WITH THE LOSS OF FIVE MERCHANT SHIPS THIS WEEK--BRINGING THE WAR'S TOTAL TO 45, AMOUNTING TO 209,319 TONS, BY THE GOVERNMENT'S OWN FIGURES--THE BRITISH NAVY SCANNED THE SEAS FOR A GLIMPSE OF ONE OF GERMANY'S POCKET BATTLESHIPS.

(RECENT REPORTS OF THE WAR AT SEA INDICATED THAT AT LEAST ONE OF GERMANY'S THREE POCKET BATTLESHIPS HAD SLIPPED THROUGH THE NORTH SEA BLOCKADE AND WAS ROVING THE ATLANTIC.)

BRITAIN, HOWEVER, REPORTED INCREASING SUCCESS WITH HER BLOCKADE. R.H.CROSS, MINISTER OF ECONOMIC WARFARE, TOLD PARLIAMENT YESTERDAY THAT "IN GENERAL THE POSITION IS THAT GERMANY IS NOW EFFECTIVELY CUT OFF FROM NEARLY ALL HER OVERSEAS SOURCES OF SUPPLY."

WHILE SOME READERS SAW AN AIR RAID WARNING IN THE GERMAN PRESS ASSERTION THAT THE TIME HAD COME FOR WAR TO "RAIN DOWN UPON THE BRITISH ISLE (CORRECT)" THE SIREN SOUNDING SYSTEM WAS CHANGED TO MAKE IT EASIER ON THE NERVES.

HENCEFORTH, AIR MINISTER SIR KINGSLEY WOOD ANNOUNCED, WARNINGS WILL BE SOUNDED ONLY WHEN AN ATTACK IS PROBABLE--AND NOT EVERY TIME ENEMY PLANES ARE SIGHTED.

THE AIR MINISTRY ANNOUNCED A NEW CASUALTY LIST OF 18 AIRMEN DEAD AND 14 MISSING, THREE OF WHOM WERE BELIEVED TO HAVE BEEN KILLED--MAKING A TOTAL OF 100 DEAD AND 91 MISSING FROM THE ROYAL AIR FORCE SINCE THE START OF THE WAR.

IN A RADIO ADDRESS LAST NIGHT, DOMINIONS SECRETARY ANTHONY EDEN DECLARED BRITAIN WAS FIGHTING FOR THE PRINCIPLE OF "GOOD FAITH BETWEEN PEOPLES" AND "THIS TIME WE MUST NOT ONLY WIN THE WAR BUT WIN THE AFTER WAR.

"IT IS NOT BECAUSE WE LOVE WAR," HE SAID, "BUT BECAUSE WE HATE IT, THAT WE ARE DETERMINED TO GO ON THIS TIME UNTIL WE HAVE FINALLY MADE AN END OF A SYSTEM THAT HAS GROWN TO POWER ON BREAKING PROMISES AND GLORIFYING FORCE."

LONDON,OCT.26-(AP)-DOWAGER LADY READING SAID TONIGHT IN A BROADCAST TO AMERICAN WOMEN THAT BRITISH WOMEN WERE FACING THE ORDEAL OF WAR WITH SERENITY AND STOICISM.

30.24-4291

SHE COMPARED THE POSITION OF THE ENGLISH WOMAN WITH THAT OF ONE WHO HAS TO UNDERGO A PAINFUL BUT NECESSARY OPERATION AND EXPLAINED.

"ONE DOES NOT MARCH INTO THE OPERATING THEATER TO THE MUSIC OF DRUM AND FIFE. KNOWING THAT ONE DOES WELL TO GO, ONE GOES QUIETLY. IT IS NOT NICE BUT NOBODY ANY LONGER BELIEVES IT IS NOT NECESSARY.

"YOU AMERICAN WOMEN IN YOUR PEACEFUL HOMES FIVE THOUSAND MILES AWAY REMEMBER THIS --THAT MILLIONS OF WOMEN IN GREAT BRITAIN PARTED BY WAR FROM THEIR HUSBANDS AND THEIR CHILDREN ARE WORKING TO PRESERVE THE THINGS WE ALL LOVE, FAMILY LIFE AND QUIET THINKING, QUIETNESS OF MIND AND A CLEAR CONSCIENCE".

LONDON,OCT.26-(AP)-THE DIRECTORS OF THE BANK OF ENGLAND DECIDED TODAY TO LOWER THE BANK RATE FROM THREE TO TWO PER CENT.

A PREVIOUS REDUCTION, FROM FOUR TO THREE PER CENT, WAS MADE SEPT. 26.

THE LAST TIME THE BANK RATE WAS SET AT TWO PER CENT WAS JUNE 30, 1932. IT REMAINED THERE UNTIL LAST AUGUST, MORE THAN SEVEN YEARS.

LONDON,OCT. 26-(AP)-THE BRITISH AIR MINISTRY ANNOUNCED TONIGHT "IT IS NOW KNOWN THAT AT LEAST SEVEN OUT OF TWELVE GERMAN AIRCRAFT HAVE FAILED TO RETURN TO THEIR BASES AFTER LAST SATURDAY'S UNSUCCESSFUL ATTACK ON A BRITISH CONVOY IN THE NORTH SEA.

"THIS HAS BEEN ESTABLISHED BY THE RESCUE OF A GERMAN AIRMAN BROUGHT DOWN IN THE FIGHT.

PARIS, OCT. 26-(AP)-FRENCH AND GERMAN ADVANCE GUARDS FOUGHT IN SNOW AND SLEET AND HEAVY RAIN TONIGHT ALONG THE 100-MILE NORTHERN FLANK OF THE WESTERN FRONT AS THE FRENCH STUDIED NAZI OUTPOST LINES SEEKING INFORMATION CONCERNING A POSSIBLE GERMAN OFFENSIVE.

FRENCH MILITARY OBSERVERS BELIEVED THE RENEWED GERMAN ACTIVITY WAS DESIGNED TO COVER FINAL PREPARATIONS FOR AN OFFENSIVE IN FORCE, EITHER A FRONTAL ASSAULT ON THE MAGINOT LINE OR A FLANKING ATTACK THROUGH SWITZERLAND OR THE NETHERLANDS.

WHILE SOME FRENCH MILITARYMEN STILL EXPRESSED DOUBT THAT FINAL ORDERS TO LAUNCH A GERMAN OFFENSIVE WOULD BE GIVEN THIS LATE IN THE YEAR, NEW ATTENTION WAS RIVETED ON THE POSSIBILITY OF A FLANK ATTACK AS A RESULT OF DEVELOPMENTS IN NEUTRAL COUNTRIES PROTECTING THE WINGS OF THE FRENCH ARMIES ON THE WESTERN FRONT.

REPORTS REACHING PARIS FROM HOLLAND, BELGIUM AND SWITZERLAND SAID THE GERMANS HAD SUDDENLY ESTABLISHED A RIGID CONTROL OF COMMUNICATIONS TO THOSE COUNTRIES SHORTLY AFTER NOON.

TELEPHONE CALLS TO BOTH BELGIUM AND THE NETHERLANDS, THESE ADVICES SAID, WERE INTERRUPTED FOR MORE THAN FOUR HOURS AND COMMUNICATION WAS RE-ESTABLISHED ONLY UNDER STRICT SUPERVISION. DISPATCHES FROM BERNE, SWITZERLAND, SAID SWISS CALLS WERE PLACED UNDER THE SAME CONTROL AT THE SAME TIME.

DISPATCHES FROM AMSTERDAM TOLD OF "IMPORTANT" TROOP AND PLANE

CONCENTRATIONS ALONG THE GERMAN COAST EAST OF THE NETHERLANDS.

(THE GERMAN GOVERNMENT ANNOUNCED IN BERLIN NEW RESTRICTIONS ON COMMUNICATIONS WITH POINTS OUTSIDE GERMANY. PRIVATE CALLS TO FOREIGN COUNTRIES WILL NOT BE ACCEPTED WITHOUT A SPECIAL PERMIT AND TELEGRAMS ARE TO BE CENSORED. NEWSPAPER CORRESPONDENTS WERE REPORTED EXEMPT. NO REASON FOR THE RESTRICTIONS WAS GIVEN.)

FRENCH SCOUTS, WHO SLASHED THROUGH ICE-COATED BARBED WIRE AND DROPPED INTO SHELL HOLES FILLED WITH ICY RAIN WATER TO WATCH MOVEMENTS OF THE GERMANS, REPORTED SHOCK DIVISIONS ALL THE WAY FROM THE LUXEMBOURG BORDER TO THE RHINE IN JUMP-OFF POSITIONS.

EACH DIVISION WAS SAID TO BE FLANKED BY SQUADRONS OF TANKS AND PROTECTED BY SPECIAL ANTI-TANK UNITS.

AIRDROMES BEHIND THE SIEGFRIED LINE WERE REPORTED TO HAVE BEEN FILLED WITH PURSUIT, ATTACK AND BOMBARDMENT PLANES.

THE FRENCH AND GERMAN ADVANCE TROOPS CLASHED AS THE GERMANS TOOK UP THE CHALLENGE OF THE FRENCH PATROLS AFTER A QUIET WHICH HAD LASTED THROUGH MOST OF THE DAY.

THE FIRST BLOWS WERE STRUCK AS FRENCH RAIDING PARTIES SNAKED THEIR WAY TOO CLOSE TO THE NAZI LINES. THEY MOVED OVER SLUSHY GROUND WHICH IN SOME SECTORS HAD BEEN FROZEN INTO A THIN CRUST OF ICE.

FINGERS ALMOST STIFF WITH COLD JERKED THE LANYARDS OF FIELD GUNS AS THE ARTILLERY TOOK UP THE FIGHT.

A MILITARY WRITER IN THE USUALLY WELL INFORMED LE TEMPS DECLARED:

"IT SEEMS UNDOUBTED THAT THE GERMANS COULD LAUNCH A POWERFUL ATTACK AGAINST OUR FRONT WITHIN A FEW DAYS."

SNOW FELL LIGHTLY ON THE TREE COVERED SLOPES OF THE VOSGES MOUNTAINS AND IN HAARDT FOOTHILLS ACROSS THE BORDER IN GERMANY. AT THE OPPOSITE END OF THE 100-MILE FRONT, IN THE SAAR RIVER VALLEY, SNOW WAS MIXED WITH STINGING SLEET AND RAIN WHICH FORMED A THIN COAT OF ICE AS IT FROZE ON THE GROUND.

THE FRENCH MORNING COMMUNIQUE SAID THE NIGHT WAS "QUIET AS A WHOLE" AND NOTED THE "BAD WEATHER."

TO BE PREPARED FOR ANY NAZI ATTACK, THE FRENCH HAVE OFFERED TO PROVIDE SHELTER FOR THE CIVILIAN POPULATION OF NANCY, WHICH IS ABOUT 40 MILES BEHIND THE MAGINOT LINE, IF THE CITIZENS WOULD WITHDRAW FROM THE CITY VOLUNTARILY. ONLY 57 OF 120,000 RESIDENTS HAVE AVAILED THEMSELVES OF THE OFFER.

IN THE REAR, POLISH AND CZECH RECRUIT ARMIES ARE IN TRAINING. MOST OF THE RECRUITS COME FROM THE MINING REGIONS OF NORTHERN FRANCE AND BELGIUM.

IN A MOVE WHICH IT WAS ESTIMATED WOULD MAKE SEVERAL MILLION FOREIGNERS LIVING IN FRANCE ELIGIBLE FOR MILITARY DUTY, THE MINISTRY OF JUSTICE ANNOUNCED A PLAN TO ACCELERATE NATURALIZATION PROCEDURE.

WASHINGTON, OCT. 26-(AP)-THE SENATE REFUSED TODAY TO RESTRICT OPERATIONS OF THE $2,000,000,000 STABILIZATION FUND AFTER RECEIVING ASSURANCES FROM SECRETARY MORGENTHAU THAT NO PART OF IT WOULD BE USED TO FINANCE WARTIME OPERATIONS OR PURCHASES FOR ENGLAND AND FRANCE.

BY A 47 TO 37 ROLL CALL VOTE, THE CHAMBER TURNED DOWN AN AMENDMENT TO THE NEUTRALITY BILL OFFERED BY SENATOR TAFT (R-OHIO

30-24-4293

30-24-4293

WHICH WOULD HAVE LIMITED STABILIZATION FUND OPERATIONS IN THE CURRENCIES OF ANY BELLIGERENT COUNTRY TO A MAXIMUM OF $20,000,000.

"WE SHOULD MAKE IT ABSOLUTELY CLEAR THAT WE'RE NOT GOING TO USE THE STABILIZATION FUND TO FINANCE THE EUROPEAN WAR," TAFT SAID, AFTER DECLARING IT WAS "PERFECTLY LEGAL" FOR MORGENTHAU TO USE THE WHOLE $2,000,000,000 TO BUY ENGLISH POUNDS "THAT MIGHT NOT BE WORTH $2,000,000 AFTER THE WAR."

SENATOR WAGNER (D-NY) OFFERED A LETTER FROM SECRETARY MORGENTHAU SAYING THAT SINCE THE WAR STARTED THE FUND HAD NOT PURCHASED EITHER FRENCH FRANCS OR BRITISH POUNDS, AND IT HELD ONLY SMALL AMOUNTS OF THESE.

ESTIMATING THAT GREAT BRITAIN ALREADY HAD MORE THAN $10,000,000,000 OF CREDITS AVAILABLE IN THIS COUNTRY, CANADA, AND SOUTH AMERICA, WAGNER SAID PERSONS WHO HAVE FORECAST A HUGE WARTIME BOOM FROM REPEAL OF THE ARMS EMBARGO "WILL BE DISAPPOINTED, IN MY OPINION."

SENATOR TOWNSEND (R-DEL) SAID THE HUGE PILE OF $17,000,000,000 IN GOLD ACCUMULATED IN THIS COUNTRY UNDER ADMINISTRATION MONETARY POLICIES THREATENED A "DANGEROUS SPECULATIVE BOOM."

THE WAR TODAY

BY DEWITT MACKENZIE

THE GREATEST DANGER TO THE ANGLO-FRENCH ALLIES THUS FAR DEVELOPED LIES IN THE NAZI ASSAULT ON MERCHANT SHIPS CARRYING WAR SUPPLIES AND FOODS.

THE EXTENT OF THIS MENACE HAS BEEN EMPHASIZED BY THE INCREASE IN THE NUMBER OF SINKINGS OF ALLIED TONNAGE (CHIEFLY BRITISH) IN THE PAST FEW DAYS, AND THE CONTINUED USE OF THE DRAG-NET TO CATCH NEUTRALS ALLEGEDLY CARRYING CONTRABAND, AS WITNESS CAPTURE OF THE AMERICAN STEAMER CITY OF FLINT.

IN THIS CONNECTION, ONLY THIS MORNING A GERMAN OFFICIAL SPOKESMAN INTIMATED THAT THE FULL COST TO BRITISH SHIPPING HASN'T YET BEEN TOLD.

TO GET THE ENTIRE PICTURE ONE MUSN'T OVERLOOK THE RENEWED THREAT FROM BERLIN OF WHOLESALE BOMBING OF ENGLAND. THIS PRESUMABLY WOULD BE CALCULATED TO INCLUDE MASSED ATTACKS ON SHIPPING TIED UP IN PORTS.

ALL THIS IS, OF COURSE, THE NAZI ANSWER TO THE ALLIED BLOCKADE WHICH ALSO IS AIMED AT SQUEEZING GERMANY INTO SUBMISSION--A WEAPON WHICH WAS ONE OF THE MAJOR FACTORS IN THE DEFEAT OF THE GERMANS IN THE WORLD WAR.

THE TERRIBLE CAPABILITIES OF THE SUBMARINE WERE FULLY DEMONSTRATED N THE LAST UPHEAVAL. DURING THAT CONFLICT GERMAN U-BOATS SANK A TOTAL OF 5,408 ALLIED AND NEUTRAL SHIPS (11,189,000 GROSS TONS), AND IN THE PROCESS LOST 203 UNDER-WATER BOATS, WHICH ARE COMPARATIVELY EASY TO REPLACE.

OCT 27 1939

THINGS GOT SO BAD AT THE END OF 1916 AS THE RESULT OF GERMANY'S FIRST "UNRESTRICTED" SUBMARINE CAMPAIGN THAT ADMIRAL JELLICOE, BRITISH COMMANDER-IN-CHIEF OF THE BRITISH GRAND FLEET, DESCRIBED IT AS "THE GREATEST PERIL WHICH EVER THREATENED THE POPULATION OF THIS COUNTRY (ENGLAND)."

THE FAMOUS SAILOR NATURALLY HAD IN MIND THAT BRITAIN IS UTTERLY DEPENDENT ON THE OUTSIDE WORLD FOR 75 PERCENT OF HER FOOD, AND AT THAT TIME SUPPLIES WERE G ING DANGEROUSLY LOW.

JELLICOE ALSO TOOK THE EXTREME STEP OF WRITING DIRECT TO THE PRIME MINISTER TO DECLARE THAT THE LOSS OF SHIPPING ALONE MIGHT SOON COMPEL THE ALLIES TO MAKE PEACE.

THE TERROR REACHED ITS HEIGHT IN 1917. ON FEBRUARY 1 THE GERMANS BEGAN A SECOND "UNRESTRICTED" CAMPAIGN. THEY DESIGNATED THE MEDITERRANEAN AND THE AREAS ENCLOSING THE BRITISH ISLES AND FRANCE AS WAR ZONES AND DECREED THAT VESSELS OF ANY NATIONALITY FOUND IN THESE WATERS SHOULD BE DESTROYED.

DAYS OF HORROR FOLLOWED. I DID MY TRICKS AS SUBMARINE-WATCH ON THE BRIDGE OF A SHIP IN THE MEDITERRANEAN WHEN VESSELS WERE GOING DOWN ALL ABOUT US, SOMETIMES WITH ALL HANDS ABOARD, AND CAN TESTIFY THAT LIFE WAS HELL ON THE HIGH-SEAS THEN. IN THAT YEAR ALONE 2,639 MERCHANT SHIPS WERE SUNK.

IT'S HARD TO SAY WHAT MIGHT HAVE HAPPENED TO THE ALLIES HAD AMERICA'S DECLARATION OF WAR NOT BROUGHT THE UNITED STATES NAVY INTO ACTION TO CONVOY MERCHANT VESSELS AND TROOP-SHIPS. CERTAINLY IT ISN'T BOASTING TO SAY THAT OUR NAVY DID MUCH TO SAVE THE DAY.

RECORDS OF SINKINGS IN THE PRESENT WAR AREN'T COMPLETE, BUT ABOUT 90 ALLIED AND NEUTRAL MERCHANT STEAMERS APPEAR TO HAVE BEEN SENT TO THE BOTTOM.

THE BRITISH THE OTHER DAY ESTIMATED THAT THEY HAD DESTROYED FROM A QUARTER TO A THIRD OF THE ENTIRE GERMAN SUBMARINE FLEET. THEY FIGURED THIS FLEET LAST APRIL AT 43, WITH 22 MORE BUILDING.

WITH LAND FIGHTING AT A STALEMATE, EACH SIDE HAS BEEN CONCENTRATING ON TRYING TO CUT THE OTHER FELLOW OFF FROM NECESSARY SUPPLIES. BITTER ACCUSATIONS OF ATTEMPTS TO STARVE CHILDREN AND OTHER HELPLESS CIVILIANS HAVE BEEN BANDIED ABOUT, AND VIGOROUSLY DENIED.

OCT 27 1939

THAT CHARGE HAS CROPPED UP AGAIN IN THE RUSSIAN NOTE REPLYING TO THE BRITISH NOTIFICATION OF CONTRABAND LISTS. THIS NOTE IN EFFECT ACCUSES ENGLAND OF SUBJECTING "CHILDREN, WOMEN AND AGED PEOPLE AND INVALIDS TO EVERY HARDSHIP AND TO STARVATION BY PROCLAIMING GOODS OF POPULAR CONSUMPTION AS WAR CONTRABAND."

THE RUSSIAN NOTE MIGHT HAVE ADDED THAT THE GERMAN SUBMARINE CAMPAIGN IS A PIECE OFF THE SAME CLOTH, SO FAR AS REGARDS HARDSHIPS ON CIVILIANS.

OBVIOUSLY, HOWEVER HIGH MAY BE THE MORALS OF THE COMBATTANTS AND WHATEVER MAY BE THE EXACT PURPOSE OF THEIR OPERATIONS AGAINST SHIPPING, THOSE OPERATIONS ARE BOUND TO BRING HUNGER TO WOMEN AND CHILDREN IF SUCCESSFUL AND CARRIED OUT TO A FINALITY. THE FACT THAT HUNGER IS PRODUCED INDIRECTLY WOULD SEEM TO BE BESIDE THE POINT.

THAT GIVES ME A CHANCE TO RAISE THE QUESTION--PURELY ACADEMIC, OF COURSE--OF WHETHER IT IS LESS PAINFUL FOR A GERMAN OR FRENCH OR ENGLISH YOUNGSTER TO DIE OF STARVATION THAN BY BOMBING. OR WHETHER IT IS MORAL TO CUT CIVILIANS OFF FROM FOOD BUT AN ATROCITY TO BOMB THEM.

OCT 27 1939

I'VE HAD THE MISFORTUNE TO SEE MANY THOUSANDS DIE AS THE RESULT, DIRECT OR INDIRECT, OF WAR--IN BATTLE, THROUGH DROWNING, FROM HUNGER, FROM THIRST ON BURNING DESERTS, BY BOMBING, AND WHAT NOT. AND WHILE I'M PROBABLY ALL MIXED UP ON MY WAR-ETHICS, IT SEEMS TO ME THAT THE MORAL RESPONSIBILITY INVOLVED IN INFLICTING ANY OF THESE DEATHS, EVEN INDIRECTLY, IS THE SAME, THOUGH NATURALLY IT'S NICE FOR THE VICTIM TO BE ABLE TO CHOOSE HIS OWN FAVORITE FORM OF EXECUTION.

Pope Foresees Resurrection of Poland

SENATE VOTES ARMS REPEAL

Pontiff Asks a Just Peace and Enduring Treaties When War Ends

30.24

CASTEL GANDOLFO, Oct. 27 (AP).—Pope Pius XII today condemned governments which assume "that absolute autonomy which belongs exclusively to the Supreme Maker" and offered consolation to dismembered Poland.

OCT 28 1939

Poland, he said, "has the right to the generous brotherly sympathy of the whole world while it awaits . . . the hour of resurrection in harmony with the principles of justice and true peace."

In the first encyclical of his reign the Pontiff, after recounting the failure of his efforts for peace, also pleaded for settlements at the end of the present European war which would avoid the errors of past treaties which failed to bring lasting peace.

He blamed the "denial of God" for the rise of governments which make the state "the last end of life."

Continuing his attack on claims of unlimited authority by the state, the Pope said such practice was "not simply an error harmful to the internal life of nations, to their prosperity, to a larger well-ordered increase of their well-being, but likewise injures relations between peoples."

Its effects, he added, were to "break the unity of supernational society, rob the law of nations of foundation and vigor and lead to a violation of others' rights and impede agreement and peaceful intercourse."

The present war, he said, would fail to impose a decisive change in conditions unless followed by treaties "animated by justice and by equity toward all."

Pope Pius described his "expectation and conviction" that each party would respect its plighted word in treaties as an indispensable condition of peace.

He said peace could not be achieved until "both sides are ready to enter into discussion and avoid recourse to force or threats of force in case of delays, hindrances, changes or disputes."

The Pope acknowledged that treaties might become outdated with the passing of time. In such cases, he said, "recourse should be had to rank discussion with a view to modifying the treaty or making another in its stead."

"But to consider treaties on principle as ephemeral," he declared, "and tacitly to assume the authority of rescinding them unilaterally when they no longer are to one's advantage would be to abolish all mutual trust among states."

Turning from causes of the present war to prospects of a more enduring settlement at its conclusion, the Pontiff asked whether there would be a new international order "animated by justice and by equity toward all" or "repetition of ancient and recent errors."

The hour of victory, he warned, is "the hour of temptation," and the danger exists that "settlements and decisions born in such condition may be nothing else than injustice under the cloak of justice."

Holds Error Lead to Chaos

"As I write these lines," the Pope said, "the terrible news comes to us that the dread tempest of war is already raging in spite of all our efforts to avert it."

He said "new errors" added to the "doctrinal abberations of the past" have resulted in "extremes which lead inevitably to a drift toward chaos."

"Once the authority of God and the sway of His law are denied in this way, civil authority, as an inevitable result, tends to attribute to itself that absolute autonomy which belongs exclusively to the Supreme Maker.

"It puts itself in the place of the Almighty and elevates the state or group into the last end of life, the supreme criterion of moral and juridical order, and therefore forbids every appeal to the principles of natural reason and Christian conscience."

Cites Survival of Traditions

"Fortunately, false principles do not always exercise their full influence, especially when the age-old Christian traditions on which peoples have been nurtured remain still deeply, even if unconsciously, rooted in their hearts," the Pope declared.

This was interpreted as a reference to such devoutly Catholic peoples as the Poles.

The only hope for the future, the Pontiff said, was that the new order, instead of resting on "quicksands of ephemeral standards that depend only on selfish interests of groups and individuals," should be based on an "unshakable foundation on the solid rock of natural law and divine revelation."

The Pope recalled with sorrow the failure of his own efforts to avert war. He said he considered it his duty to "try every means to spare mankind and Christianity the horrors of world conflagration even at the risk of having our intentions and our aims misunderstood."

"Our advice, if heard with respect, was not, however, followed," he observed.

Expressing especially his sorrow for Poland, the Pope said: "The blood of countless human beings, even noncombatants, raises a piteous dirge over a nation such as our dear Poland, which for its fidelity to the Church, for its services in the defense of Christian civilization, written in indelible characters in the annals of history, has the right to generous, brotherly sympathy of the whole world."

The Pontiff promised to do all in his power to hasten return of peace. He would continue his efforts, he said, "trusting in those statesmen who before the outbreak of war nobly toiled to avert such a scourge from their peoples, trusting in millions of souls in all countries of every sphere who call not for justice alone but for love and mercy."

Defines Function of State

The Pope said it was the function of the state to direct private individual activities toward the common good.

"That good can neither be defined according to arbitrary ideas, nor can it accept for its standard primarily the material prosperity of society," he continued.

"To consider the state something ultimate to which everything else should be subordinated and directed can not fail to harm the true lasting prosperity of nations.

"This can happen either when unrestricted dominion comes to be conferred on the state as having a mandate from the nation, the people or even a social class or when the state arrogates such dominion to itself as absolute master despotically without any mandate whatsoever."

Discusses Education

The Pontiff expressed concern over the education of youth problem which occasionally has brought the Church into conflict with the state as in the controversy with Italy over Catholic Action.

This is dangerous, the Pope said, for family group to be "considered from the narrow standpoint of national power."

In such circumstances, he declared the education of the new generation "would not aim at a balanced development of physical powers and all intellectual and moral qualities but would be a one-sided formation of the civic virture considered necessary in attaining political success."

—POPE'S MESSAGE—

Vatican City, Oct. 27 (AP)—Pope Pius XII's first encyclical will be known as the "Summi Pontificatus," the first two words of the Latin text, meaning "The Supreme Pontificate's."

It bore the date October 20, 1939, and Castel Gandolfo, the Pope's summer residence in the Alban Hills, was given as the place of issue.

Prelates said the encyclical, on which the Pope had been meditating virtually from the day he ascended the throne, bore the unmistakable stamp of the Pontiff's own literary style.

Castel Gandolfo, Oct. 27—Pope Pius XII, in the first encyclical of his reign, today blamed "the denial of God" for leading the world to war, and pleaded for peace.

The Pope appealed for peace treaties at the end of this war which would avoid the "sacrifices and sufferings" which failed to bring lasting peace in the

Warns Of Failure

The war, he said, would fail to impose a decisive change in conditions—unless followed by treaties of peace "animated by justice and by equity toward all."

He warned "there is danger lest settlements be born in such conditions" as "sacrifies and sufferings."

At the same time, he said, respect for treaties was indispensable to peace.

The Pontiff criticized dictatorships which assume "absolute autonomy, which belongs exclusively to the Supreme Maker."

Pushed To Extremes

"As we write these lines," the Pope said, "the terrible news comes to us that the dread tempest of war is already raging in spite of all our efforts to avert it."

He said "new errors" added to the "doctrinal aberrations of the past" have pushed these "to extremes which lead inevitably to a drift toward chaos."

"Once the authority of God and the sway of His law are denied in this way," Pope Pius declared in his letter of more than 11,000 words to all Catholic bishops, "civil authority as an inevitable result tends to attribute to itself that absolute autonomy which belongs exclusively to the Supreme Maker.

"Forbids Appeals To Principles Of Reason"

"It puts itself in the place of The Almighty and elevates the state or group into the last end of life, the supreme criterion of moral and juridicial order, and therefore forbids every appeal to the principles of natural reason and Christian conscience."

"Fortunately, false principles do not always exercise their full influence, especially when the age-old Christian traditions on which peoples have been nurtured remain still deeply, even if unconsciously, rooted in their hearts," the Pope declared.

This was interpreted as a reference to such devoutly Catholic peoples as the Poles.

Expresses Sympathy For Poland

Poland, the Pontiff said, "has the right to generous brotherly sympathy of the whole world while it awaits . . . the hour of resurrection in harmony with principles of justice and true peace."

Pope Pius described his "expectation and conviction" that each party will respect its plighted word" in treaties as an indispensable condition of peace.

He said peace could not be achieved until "both sides are ready to enter into discussion and avoid recourse to force or threats of force in case of delays, hindrances, changes or disputes."

Recourse To Discussion

The Pope acknowledged that treaties might become outdated with the passing of time. In such cases, he said, "recourse should be had to frank discussion with a view to modifying the treaty or making another in its stead."

"But to consider treaties on principle as ephemeral," he declared, "and tacitly to assume the authority of rescinding them unilaterally when they no longer are to one's advantage would be to abolish all mutual trust among states."

Turning from causes of the present war to prospects of a more enduring settlement at its conclusion, the Pontiff asked whether there would be a new international order "animated by justice and by equity toward all" or "repetition of ancient and recent errors."

"Hour Of Temptation"

The hour of victory, he warned, is "the hour of temptation" and the danger exists that "settlements and decisions born in such condition may be nothing else than injustice under the cloak of justice."

The only hope for the future, the Pontiff said, was that the new order, instead of resting on "quicksands of ephemeral standards that depend only on selfish interests of groups and individuals," should be based on an "unshakeable foundation on the solid rock of natural law and Divine revelation."

The Pope recalled with sorrow the failure of his own efforts to avert war. He expressed especially his sorrow for Poland, saying "the blood of countless human beings, even noncombatants, raises a piteous dirge over a nation such as our dear Poland, which for its fidelity to the church, for its services in the defense of Christian civilization, written in indelible characters in the annals of history has the right to generous, brotherly sympathy to the whole world."

The Pontiff promised to do all in his power to hasten return of peace.

States and public authorities.

Having noted in this grave hour a reawakening of sentiment of the community of the Catholic family, his Holiness takes pleasure in the consoling proof which he received of this in a plebiscite of filial attachment to the church and vicar of Christ on the occasion of his election and coronation—a plebiscite of unbreakable Catholic unity throughout the world which comforted him greatly amid toils, activities and trials; and for which he addresses to all the world of deepening faithfulness thanks which he extends also to those who are without the body of the Catholic Church, but who have not forgotten those things which in Christ and God still united them with the universal shepherd.

Refers Particularly to Italy.

He has particular reference to Italy, which now by the virtue of the Lateran pacts occupies a post of honor among the States represented at the apostolic feast.

He expresses the wish that the peace of Christ sprung from those pacts may animate the Italian peoples, so that they may ever remain faithful to their traditions.

Summary of Pope's Encyclical

CASTEL GANDOLFO, Oct. 27 (A. P.).—The official summary of the Pope's encyclical follows:

Under the date of October 20, 1939, Pope Pius XII has addressed the Catholic world his first encyclical letter which he places under the seal of Christ the King.

It begins by observing that this fortieth anniversary of the consecration of the human race to the Sacred Heart of Jesus is a date which coincides with the fortieth anniversary of the Pope's ordination to the priesthood and the pontiff takes occasion to renew devotion to the King of Kings in an opening prayer as he is to speak of his pontificate, the Alpha and Omega of his apostolic activity.

His Holiness rejoices to perceive the splendid crowning of the spread and deepening of devotion to the Divine Heart of Peace in the feast of Christ the King from which an immense good has sprung.

It is expected, moreover, that the feast of Christ the King may mark a day of a great profound revival in the spirit of the Kingdom of Christ.

Marks of Reverent Homage.

With singular gratitude the august pontiff points out the marks of reverent homage which come to him from sovereigns, the heads of apostolic firmness will be, in the present hour, a fundamental duty of the apostolic office, and that without being influenced by earthly considerations, by fear of distrust and opposition of rebuff and a lack of comprehension, of disregard and false interpretation—always, however, in a spirit of charity—for the purpose of bringing about a recognition of the royal rights of Christ and return of individuals and society to the laws of truth and love.

While he writes, the Pope is prey to indescribable anguish because of the outbreak of "terrible hurricanes of war"—war which he sought to avert by every means in his power.

He therefore invites all to raise their eyes and hearts to the One only from whom comes salvation so that this hour of greatest need may be one of change of thought and of sentiment for many since it is true that hours of such painful delusion may become hours of grace, a passage of the Lord.

Pope Limits His Letter.

Reserving to a more opportune moment the "taking of a complete doctrinal position against the errors of the present time," the Pontiff limits himself now "to some fundamental observations."

The profound and ultimate root of present evils is the "refusal to accept a norm of universal morality, both for life of the individual, and for social life and international relations;" that is to say disregard and forgetfulness of the natural law whose foundations is in God, for after denial of God comes denial of law and that because of seporation from the doctrines of Christ and from the chair of Peter, which is the depositary and teacher of that doctrine. From this separation has come the subversion of the central dogma of Christianity, the divinity of the Saviour. Naturally laicizing of society has brought about reassurance of ever clearer, more distinct, more distressing signs of corrupt and corrupting paganism. This progress was in reality retrogression, elevation, degredation; arrival at man's estate, stooping to servility.

Undermined, therefore, was the sole irreplaceable foundation of that stability and tranquillity, of that order internal and external, private and public, which alone can engender and safeguard the prosperity of States.

Pernicious Errors Arise.

From religious and moral agnosticism the august pontiff notes, have sprung pernicious errors. In the first place forgetfulness of the law of human solidarity and charity dictated and imposed by common origins by equality of rational nature and by redeeming sacrifice of Christ.

The Pope develops Biblical concepts and Biblical narrative on the origin of man and insisting particularly on the thought of Saint Paul in which shines forth the unity of human nature of its purposes and its [illegible] of subsistence within [illegible] supernatural order. He touches upon the unity of ransom paid by the Son of God and underlines the precept of charity.

Individuals and peoples are not, therefore, disjoined from one another, but rather united in organic, harmonious mutual relations even amid a variety of differentiation according to diverse conditions of light and culture. The church appreciates and respects the particular characteristics of which every people are proud, but does not lose sight of its higher purpose which is super-natural unity in universal love.

Indeed, the church salutes with joy the development of those forces and tendencies which are peculiar in every stock as proven by her missionary apostolate.

Those men who enter the church, whatever the origin of their language, have an equal right in the house of the Lord. Nor does this in any way stand in contrast to legitimate love of fatherland in accord with the orter established by God in the exercise of charity; it has further nobly contributed to the religious aid and civil progress of mankind.

Contrary to Natural Reason.

No less harmful in the second place is the error which pretends to absolve civil authority from any dependence whatsoever upon God and, therefore, from every bond transcendant to law, thus setting up the State as the final end of life and supreme criterion of the moral and individual order.

This absolute authority is contrary to the principles of natural reason and of Christian conscience, since it reduces everything to a utilitarian morality and deprives human law of that moral authority which is its foundation.

The activity of the State should co-operate to common good; if the State is considered as an end in itself this cannot but be harmful to the prosperity of nations, since it is damaging to private initiative, disadvantageous to public welfare and compromising to the growth and well-being of the family which, with the individual, is by nature anterior to the State.

The rights of the consecrated are sacred and inviolable; the State may lay claim to position and blood, but never to the soul redeemed by Christ.

Youth should indeed perform with intelligence, conscientiousness and pride the noble duties of the nation, but cannot and must not close its eyes to the supernatural Fatherland.

VATICAN CITY, Oct. 27 (AP).—Pope Pius XII's first encyclical will be known as the "Summi Pontificatus," the first two words of the Latin text.

The official text, which will be mailed to bishops throughout the world to whom it was addressed, was written in Latin. Translations of [illegible] French, Italian, German and Spanish were issued simultaneously with the Latin text and translations in other languages will be distributed later.

Vatican authorities said the texts in modern languages sometimes may seem archaic in style, since fidelity to the Latin original was placed ahead of grace and elegance in translating the Pope's thought.

Germans Are Irritated Over Papal Encyclical

Berlin, Oct. 27 (AP).—German political quarters expressed irritation today because Pope Pius XII, in his encyclical, expressed sympathy for the Poles but not for the German nationals "butchered" in Poland.

"That the Pope appeals for brotherly sympathy for the Poles is not surprising in view of the affection which Polish Catholics always have enjoyed from the Vatican," they said.

"Without doubt, however, it would have made a good impression if the Pope had thought not only of the Poles but also of the thousands of German nationals—men, aged women, children—among them also thousands of Catholics who were butchered by the Poles in the cruelest manner."

Although no reaction to the encyclical was available from authoritative Government quarters, it was pointed out that comment "appeared to be superfluous because it is known how far the views of the National Socialist state regarding the problems handled in the encyclical differ from the standpoint of the Vatican and to what extent they parallel and agree."

Treaty Opinion Approved

Quick approval was accorded the Pontiff's statement that [illegible] or treaty conditions which [illegible] unjust or too oppressive and impracticable should be changed or replaced in time through honorable negotiations.

This viewpoint, it was felt, applied especially to the German nation after the Versailles and St. Germain treaties.

"Many sentences of the encyclical are an estimate of the Versailles conditions which could not be better stated," political quarters said.

The encyclical so far has not been published in the German press.

Dictators, Treaty-Breaking and Racism Are Condemned by the Pope in His First

By The Associated Press.

VATICAN CITY—Following is the text of Pope Pius XII's Encyclical issued today:

ENCYCLICAL LETTER

TO OUR VENERABLE BRETHREN, THE PATRIARCHS, ARCHBISHOPS, BISHOPS AND OTHER ORDINARIES IN PEACE AND COMMUNION WITH THE APOSTOLIC SEE.

POPE PIUS XII.

Venerable Brethren:

Health and Apostolic benediction.

In the very year which marks the fortieth anniversary of the consecration of mankind to our Redeemer's most sacred heart the inscrutable counsel of the Lord, for no merit of ours, has laid upon us the exalted dignity and grave care of the supreme pontificate; for that consecration was proclaimed by our immortal predecessor Leo XIII at the beginning of the Holy Year which closed the last century.

And we, as a newly ordained priest, then just empowered to recite:

"I will go in to the altar of God" (Psalm xlii, 4) hailed the encyclical "Annum Sacrum" with genuine approval, enthusiasm and delight as a message from heaven. We associated ourselves in fervent admiration of the motives and aims which inspired and directed the truly providential action of a Pontiff so sure in his diagnosis of the open and hidden needs and sores of his [illegible]

Gratitude to Providence

It is only natural then that we should today feel profoundly grateful to Providence for having designed that the first year of our pontificate should be associated with a memory so precious and so dear of our first year of priesthood, and that we should take the opportunity of paying homage to the "King of Kings and Lord of Lords" (I Timothy, 6, 15; cf. Apocalypse 19, 6) as a kind of introit prayer to our pontificate, in the spirit of our renowned predecessor and in the faithful accomplishment of his designs and that, in fine, we should make of it the alpha and omega of our aims, of our hopes, of our teaching, of our activity, of our patience and of our sufferings, by consecrating them all to the spread of the Kingdom of Christ.

As we review from the standpoint of eternity the past forty years in their exterior events and interior developments, balancing achievements against deficiencies, we see ever more clearly the sacred significance of that consecration of mankind to Christ the King; we see its inspiring symbolism, we see its power to refine and to elevate, to strengthen and to fortify souls. We see, besides, in that consecration a penetrating wisdom which sets itself to restore and to ennoble all human society and to promote its true welfare.

It unfolds itself to us ever more clearly as a message of comfort and a grace from God not only to His church but also to a world in all too dire need of help and guidance; to a world which, preoccupied with the worship of the ephemeral, has lost its way and spent its forces in a vain search after earthly ideals.

It is a message to men who in ever increasing numbers have cut themselves off from faith in Christ and, even more, from the recognition and observance of His law; a message opposed to that philosophy of life, for which the doctrine of love and renunciation preached in the Sermon on the Mount and the divine act of love on the cross seem to be a stumbling block and foolishness.

"Mighty Cry of Entreaty"

Even as the precursor of the Lord proclaimed one day to those who sought and questioned Him: "Behold the Lamb of God" (St. John i, 29) in order to warn them that the Desired of the Nations cf. Aggeus ii, 9) dwelt, though as yet unrecognized, in their midst, so too the representative of Christ addressed His mighty cry of entreaty: "Behold your King" (St. John xix, 14) to the renegades, to the doubters, to the wavering, to the hesitant, who either refused to follow the glorious Redeemer, living ever and working in His church, or followed Him with carelessness and sloth.

From the widening and deepening of devotion to the divine heart of the Redeemer, which had its splendid culmination in the consecration of humanity at the end of the last century, and further in the introduction, by our immediate predecessor of happy memory, of the Feast of Christ the King, there have sprung up benefits beyond description for numberless souls—as the stream of the river which "maketh the city of God joyful" (Psalm xlv, 5).

What age has had greater need than ours of these benefits? What age has been, for all its technical and purely civic progress, more tormented than ours by spiritual emptiness and deep-felt interior poverty? May we not perhaps apply to it the prophetic words of the Apocalypse: "Thou sayest: I am rich, and made wealthy, and have need of nothing: and knowest not that thou art wretched, and miserable, and poor, and blind, and naked" (Apocalypse iii, 17)?

Can there be, venerable brethren, a greater or more urgent duty than to preach the "unsearchable riches of Christ" (Ephesians iii, 8 to the men of our time? Can there be anything nobler than to unfurl the "ensign of the King" before those who have followed and still follow a false standard, and to win back to the victorious banner of the cross those who have abandoned it?

What heart is not inflamed, is not swept forward to help at the sight of so many brothers and sisters who, misled by error, passion, temptation and prejudice have strayed away from faith in the True God and have lost contact with the joyful and life-giving message of Christ?

"Soldiers of Christ" Exhorted

Who among "the soldiers of Christ"—ecclesiastic or layman—does not feel himself incited and spurred on to a greater vigilance, to a more determined resistance, by the sight of the ever-increasing host of Christ's enemies; as he perceives the spokesmen of these tendencies deny or in practice neglect the vivifying truths and the values inherent in belief in God and in Christ; as he perceives them wantonly break the tables of God's commandments to substitute other tables and other standards stripped of the ethical content of the revelation on Sinai, standards in which the spirit of the Sermon on the Mount and of the cross has no place?

Who could observe without profound grief the tragic harvest of such desertions among those who in days of calm and security were numbered among the followers of Christ, but who—Christians unfortunately more in name than in fact—in the hour that called for endurance, for effort, for suffering, for a stout heart in face of hidden or open persecution, fell victims of cowardice, weakness, uncertainty; who, terror stricken before the sacrifices entailed by a profession of their Christian faith, could not steel themselves to drink the bitter chalice awaiting those faithful to Christ?

Feast of Christ the King

In such dispositions of time and temperament, venerable brethren, may the approaching Feast of Christ the King, on which this our first encyclical will reach you, be a day of grace and of thorough renewal and revival in the spirit of the Kingdom of Christ. May it be a day when the consecration of the human race to the Divine Heart, which should be celebrated in a particularly solemn manner, will gather the faithful of all peoples and all nations around the throne of the Eternal King, in adoration and in reparation, to renew now and for ever their oath of allegiance to Him and to His law of truth and of love.

May it be for the faithful a day of grace, on which the fire, that our Lord came to cast upon the earth, will kindle with ever greater light and purity. May it be a day of grace for the lukewarm, for the weary, for the afflicted, that their hearts, which have become faint, may give proofs of interior renewal and regeneration of spirit.

May it be a day of grace also for those who have not known Christ or who have lost Him; a day when from millions of faithful hearts will raise to heaven the prayer that "the light which enlighteneth every man that cometh into this world" (St. John i, 9), may make clear to them the way of salvation; that His grace may stir in the "troubled heart" of the wanderers a homesickness for things eternal, a homesickness that impels them to return to Him, who from His [illegible] throne of the cross thirsts for their souls also and who is consumed by a desire to become for them too "the way, and the truth and the life" (St. John xiv, 6).

As, with a heart full of confidence and hope, we place this first encyclical of our pontificate under the seal of Christ the King, we feel entirely assured of the unanimous and enthusiastic approval of the whole flock of Christ. The difficulties, anxieties and trials of the present hour arouse, intensify and refine, to a degree rarely attained, the sense of solidarity in the Catholic family. They make all believers in God and in Christ share the consciousness of a common threat from a common danger.

Display of Solidarity

We witnessed a consoling and memorable display of this Catholic solidarity, greatly intensified in such difficult circumstances, the serried ranks, the assurance, the resolution, the will to win, in those days when, with faltering step but with confidence in God, we took possession of the chair left vacant by the death of our great predecessor.

We cherish the memory of the many testimonies of filial attachment to the church and to the Vicar of Christ, and of the ovation so genuine, so enthusiastic and so spontaneous accorded to us on the occasion of our election and coronation; and we gladly take this opportune occasion to address to you, venerable brethren, and to all who belong to the flock of the Lord, a word of sincere gratitude for that orderly manifestation of reverent love and of steadfast loyalty to the papacy, in which one could see recognition of the God-given mission of high priest and of the supreme pastor.

For, we well know it, all those manifestations were not and could not have been addressed to our poor person, but to the singular and exalted office to which the Lord had raised us. And though from that first moment we felt all the great weight of responsible cares inseparable from the supreme power given to us by divine Providence, it was a consolation to see that magnificent and tangible demonstration of the indissoluble unity of the Catholic Church rallying all the closer to the impregnable Rock of Peter, to form around it a wall and a bulwark as the enemies of Christ become bolder.

This same manifestation of world-wide Catholic solidarity and of supernatural brotherhood of people around their common Father, seemed to us all the richer in fair hopes in view of the tragic circumstances, both material and spiritual, of the moment. That memory has come [illegible] to comfort us also in the first months of our pontificate, in which we have already witnessed the toil, the anxiety and the trials with which the path of the Spouse of Christ across the world is strewn.

Good Wishes From Others

Nor can we pass over in silence the profound impression of heartfelt gratitude made on us by the good wishes of those who, though not belonging to the visible body of the Catholic Church, have given noble and sincere expression to their appreciation of all that unites them to us in love for the person of Christ or in belief in God.

We wish to express our gratitude to them all. We entrust them one and all to the protection and to the guidance of the Lord, and we assure them solemnly that one thought only fills our mind: To imitate the example of the Good Shepherd in order to bring true happiness to all men: "That they may have life, and may have it more abundantly" (St. John x, 10).

But we must, in obedience to an inner prompting, make special mention of our gratitude for the tokens of reverent homage which we have had from the sovereigns, heads of States and governments of those nations with which the Holy See is in friendly relations. Our heart is joyous especially at the thought that we can, in this first encyclical directed to the whole Christian people scattered over the world, rank among such friendly powers our dear Italy, fruitful garden of the faith which was planted by the Prince of the Apostles.

For, as a result of the Lateran pacts, her representative occupies a place of honor among those officially accredited to the Apostolic See. "The peace of Christ restored to Italy," like a new dawn of brotherly union in religious and in civil intercourse, had its beginning in these pacts. We pray God that, in the serene atmosphere of that peace, He may pervade, revivify, strengthen and fortify the heart of the Italian people, so close to us, in the midst of which we live, with which we share the very air we breathe.

Plea to People of Italy

We hope and trust that that people, so dear to our predecessors and to us, may be faithful to its glorious Catholic tradition, and experience through the divine protection ever more that truth of the Psalmist: "Happy is that people whose God is the Lord" Psalm cxliii, 15).

This happy, new juridical and spiritual position, which that achivement, destined to make an indelible mark in history, has secured and sealed for Italy and for the whole Catholic world, never appeared to us so impressive in its unifying effects as when from the lofty loggia of the Vatican basilica we opened and raised our arms and our hand for the first time in blessing over Rome, Rome the seat of the papacy and our own dear birthplace, over Italy reconciled with the church, and over the peoples of the entire world.

As vicar of Him who in a decisive hour pronounced before the highest earthly authority of that day the great words: "For this was I born, and for this came I into the world: that I should give testimony to the truth; every one that is of the truth heareth my voice" (St. John xviii, 37), we feel we owe no greater debt to our office and to our time than to testify to the truth with Apostolic firmness: "To give testimony to the truth."

This duty necessarily entails the exposition and confutation of errors and human faults; for these must be made known before it is possible to tend and to heal them. "You shall know the truth and the truth shall make you free" (St. John viii, 32). In the fulfillmen of this our duty we shall not let ourselves be influenced by earthly considerations nor be held back by mistrust or opposition, by rebuffs or lack of appreciation of our words, nor yet by fear of misconceptions and misinterpretations.

We shall fulfill our duty, animated ever with that paternal charity which, while it suffers from the evils which afflict our children, at the same time points out to them the remedy; we shall strive to imitate the divine model of shepherds, Jesus the Good Shepherd who is light as well as love: "Doing the truth in charity" (Ephesians iv, 15).

Efforts to Dethrone Christ

At the head of the road which leads to the spiritual and moral bankruptcy of the present day stand the nefarious efforts of not a few to dethrone Christ; the abandonment of the law of truth which He proclaimed and of the law of love which is the life breath of His kingdom.

In the recognition of the royal prerogatives of Christ and in the return of individuals and of society to the law of His truth and of His love lies the only way to salvation.

Venerable brethren, as we write these lines the terrible news comes to us that the dread tempest of war is already raging despite all our efforts to avert it.

When we think of the wave of suffering that has come on countless people who but yesterday enjoyed in the environment of their homes some little degree of well-being, we are tempted to lay down our pen. Our paternal heart is torn by anguish as we look ahead to all that will yet come forth from the baneful seed of violence and of hatred for which the sword today plows the blood-drenched furrow.

But precisely because of this Apocalyptic foresight of disaster, imminent and [illegible], we feel we have a duty [illegible] with still greater insistance the eyes and hearts of those in whom there yet remains good-will, to the One from whom alone comes the salvation of the world—to One whose almighty and merciful hand can alone calm this tempest—to the One whose truth and whose love can enlighten the intellects and inflame the hearts of so great a section of mankind plunged in error, selfishness, strife and struggle, so as to give it a new orientation in the spirit of the kingship of Christ.

Perhaps—God grant it—one may hope that this hour of direst need may bring a change of outlook and sentiment to those many, who till now have walked with blind faith along the path of popular modern errors, unconscious of the treacherous and insecure ground on which they trod. Perhaps the many who have not grasped the importance of the educational and pastoral mission of the church will now understand better her warnings, scouted in the false security of the past.

No defense of Christianity could be more effective than the present straits. From the immense vortex of error and anti-Christian movements there has come forth a crop of such poignant disasters as to constitute a condemnation surpassing in its conclusiveness any merely theoretical refutation.

Hours of Disillusionment

Hours of painful disillusionment are often hours of grace—"a passage of the Lord" (cf. Exodus xii, 11), when doors which in other circumstances would have remained shut, open at our Saviour's words: "Behold, I stand at the gate and knock" (Apocalypse iii, 20).

God knows that our heart goes out in affectionate sympathy and spiritual joy to those who, as a result of such painful trials, feel within them an effective and salutary thirst for the truth, justice and peace of Christ. But for those also for whom as yet the hour of light from on high has not come, our heart knows only love, our lips move only in prayer to the Father of Light that He may cause to shine in their hearts, indifferent as yet or hostile to Christ, a ray of that light which once transformed Saul into Paul; of that light which has shown its mysterious power strongest in the times of greatest difficulty for the church.

A full statement of the doctrinal stand to be taken in face of the errors of today, if necessary, can be put off to another time unless disturbed by calamitous external events; for the moment we limit ourselves to some fundamental observation.

The present age, venerable brethren, by adding new errors to the doctrinal aberrations of the past, has pushed these to extremes which lead inevitably to a drift toward chaos. Before all else, it is certain that the radical and ultimate cause of the evils which we deplore in modern society is the denial and rejection of a universal norm of morality as well for individual and social life as for international relations; we mean the disregard, so common nowadays, and the forgetfulness of the natural law itself, which has its foundation in God, almighty creator and father of all, supreme and absolute lawgiver, all-wise and just judge of human actions.

When God is hated, every basis of morality is undermined; the voice of conscience is stilled or at any rate grows very faint, that voice which teaches even to the illiterate and to uncivilized tribes what is good and what is bad, what lawful, what forbidden, and makes men feel themselves responsible for their actions to a supreme judge.

Revolt Against Morality

The denial of the fundamentals of morality had its origin in Europe, in the abandonment of that Christian teaching of which the chair of Peter is the depository and exponent. That teaching had once given spiritual cohesion to a Europe which, educated, ennobled and civilized by the cross, had reached such a degree of civil progress as to become the teacher of other peoples, of other continents. But, cut off from the infallible teaching authority of the church, not a few separated brethren have gone so far as to overthrow the central dogma of Christianity, the divinity of the Saviour, and have hastened thereby the progress of spiritual decay.

The Holy Gospel narrates that when Jesus was crucified "there was darkness over the whole earth" (Matthew xxvii, 45); a terrifying symbol of what happened and what still happens spiritually wherever incredulity, blind and proud of itself, has succeeded in excluding Christ from modern life, especially from public life, and has undermined faith in God as well as faith in Christ.

The consequence is that the moral values by which in other times public and private conduct was gauged have fallen into disuse; and the much-vaunted civilization of society, which has made ever more rapid progress, withdrawing man, the family and the State from the beneficent and regenerating effects of the idea of God and the teaching of the church, has caused to reappear, in regions in which for many centuries shone the splendors of Christian civilization, in a manner ever clearer, ever more distinct, ever more distressing, the signs of a corrupt and corrupting paganism: "There was darkness when they crucified Jesus" (Roman Breviary, Good Friday, response 5).

Many perhaps, while abandoning the teaching of Christ, were not fully conscious of being led astray by [illegible] glittering phrases, which proclaimed such estrangement as an escape from the slavery in which they were before held; nor did they then foresee the bitter consequences of bartering the truth that sets free for error which enslaves.

What Was Not Realized

They did not realize that, in renouncing the infinitely wise and paternal laws of God, and the unifying and elevating doctrines of Christ's love, they were resigning themselves to the whim of a poor, fickle human wisdom; they spoke of progress, when they were going back; of being raised, when they groveled; of arriving at man's estate when they stooped to servility. They did not perceive the inability of all human effort to replace the law of Christ by anything equal to it; "they became vain in their thoughts" (Romans i, 21).

With the weakening of faith in God and in Jesus Christ, and the darkening in men's minds of the light of moral principles, there disappeared the indispensable foundation of the stability and quiet of that internal and external, private and public order, which alone can support and safeguard the prosperity of States.

It is true that even when Europe had a cohesion of brotherhood through identical ideals gathered from Christian preaching she was not free from divisions, convulsions and wars which laid her waste; but perhaps they never felt the intense pessimism of today as to the possibility of settling them, for they had then an effective moral sense of the just and of the unjust, of the lawful and of the unlawful which, by restraining outbreaks of passion, left the way open to an honorable settlement.

In our days, on the contrary, dissensions come not only from the surge of rebellious passion, but also from a deep spiritual crisis which has overthrown the sound principles of private and public morality.

Errors of Agnosticism

Among the many errors which derive from the poisoned source of religious and moral agnosticism, we would draw your attention, venerable brethren, to two in particular, as being those which more than others render almost impossible or at least precarious and uncertain, the peaceful intercourse of peoples.

The first of these pernicious errors, widespread today, is the forgetfulness of that law of human solidarity and charity which is dictated and imposed by our common origin and by the equality of rational nature in all men, to whatever people they belong, and by the redeeming sacrifice offered by Jesus Christ on the altar of the cross to his Heavenly Father on behalf of sinful mankind.

In fact, the first page of the Scripture, with magnificent simplicity, tells us how God, as a culmination to His creative work, made man to His own image and likeness (cf. Genesis i, 26, 27); and the same Scripture tells us that he enriched man with supernatural gifts and privileges, and destined him to an eternal and ineffable happiness.

It shows us besides how other men took their origin from the first couple, and then goes on in unsurpassed vividness of language, to recount their division into different groups and their dispersion to various parts of the world. Even when they abandoned their Creator, God did not cease to regard them as his children who, according to his merciful plan, should one day be reunited once more in his friendship (cf. Genesis xii, 3).

The Apostle of the Gentiles later on makes himself the herald of this truth which associates men as brothers in one great family, when he proclaims to the Greek world that God "hath made of one, all mankind, to dwell upon the whole face of the earth, determining appointed times, and the limits of their habitation. That they should seek God" (Acts xvii, 26, 27).

A Marvelous Vision

A marvelous vision, which makes us see the human race in the unity of one common origin in God, "one God and Father of all; who is above all, and through all, and in us all (Ephesians iv, 6); in the unity of nature which in every man is equally composed of material body and spiritual, immortal soul; in the unity of the immediate end and mission in the world; in the unity of the dwelling place, the earth, of whose resources all men can by natural right avail themselves, to sustain and develop life; in the unity of the supernatural end, God Himself, to whom all should tend; in the unity of means to secure that end.

It is the same Apostle who portrays for us mankind in the unity of its relations with the Son of God, image of the invisible God, in whom all things have been created: "In Him were all things created" (Colossians i, 16); in the unity of its ransom, effected for all by Christ, who through His holy and most bitter passion, restored the original friendship with God which had been broken, making Himself the mediator between God and men: "For there is one God, and one mediator of God and men, the man Christ Jesus" (I Timothy ii, 5).

And to render such friendship between God and mankind more intimate, this same divine and universal mediator of salvation and of peace, in the sacred silence of the supper room, before He consummated the supreme sacrifice, let fall from His divine lips the words which reverberate mightily down the centuries, inspiring heroic charity in a world devoid of love and torn by hate: "This is my commandment: that you love one another, as I have loved you" (St. John xv, 12).

These are supernatural truths which form a solid basis and the strongest possible bond of a union that is reinforced by the love of God and of our divine Redeemer, from whom all receive salvation "or the edifying of the body of Christ: until we all meet into the unity of the faith, and of the knowledge of the son of God, unto a perfect man, unto the measure of the age of the fullness of Christ" (Ephesians iv, 12, 13).

In the light of this unity of all mankind which exists in law and in fact, individuals do not feel themselves isolated units, like grains of sand, but united by the very force of their nature and by their internal destiny into an organic, harmonious mutual relationship which varies with the changing of times.

Mission of the Nations

And the nations, despite a difference of development due to diverse conditions of life and of culture, are not destined to break the unity of the human race, but rather to enrich and embellish it by the sharing of their own peculiar gifts and by that reciprocal interchange of goods which can be possible and efficacious only when a mutual love and a lively sense of charity unite all the sons of the same Father and all those redeemed by the same divine blood.

The church of Christ, the faithful depository of the teaching of divine wisdom cannot, and does not, think of deprecating or disdaining the particular characteristics which each people with jealous and intelligible pride cherishes and retains as a precious heritage. Her aim is a supernatural union in all-embracing love, deeply felt and practiced, and not the unity which is exclusively external and superficial and by that very fact weak.

The church hails with joy and follows with her maternal blessing every method of guidance and care which aims at a wise and orderly evolution of particular forces and tendencies having their origin in the individual character of each race, provided that they are not opposed to the duties incumbent on men from their unity of origin and common destiny.

Church's Guiding Star

She has repeatedly shown in her missionary enterprises that such a principle of action is the guiding star of her universal apostolate. Pioneer research and investigation, involving sacrifice, devotedness and love on the part of her missionaries of every age, have been undertaken in order to facilitate the deeper appreciative insight into the most varied civilizations and to put their spiritual values to account for a living and vital preaching of the gospel of Christ.

All that in such usages and customs is not inseparably bound up with religious errors will always be subject to kindly consideration and when it is found possible will be sponsored and developed.

Our immediate predecessor of holy and venerated memory, applying such norms to a particularly delicate question, took some generous decisions which are a monument to his insight and to the intensity of his apostolic spirit. Nor need we tell you, venerable brethren, that we intend to proceed without hesitation along this way. Those who enter the church, whatever be their origin or their speech, must know that they have equal rights as children in the house of the Lord, where the law of Christ and the peace of Christ prevail.

In accordance with these principles of equality the church devotes her care to forming a cultured native clergy and gradually increasing the number of native Bishops. And in order to give eternal expression to these our intentions we have chosen the forthcoming Feast of Christ the King to raise to the episcopal dignity at the tomb of the Apostles twelve representatives of widely different peoples and races.

In the midst of the disruptive contrasts which divide the human family, may this solemn act proclaim to all our sons, scattered over the world, that the spirit, the teaching and the work of the church can never be other than that which the Apostle of the Gentiles preached: "Putting of the new (man), him who is renewed unto knowledge, according to the image of him that created him. Where there is neither Gentile nor Jew, circumcision nor uncircumcision, barbarian nor Scythian, bond nor free. But Christ is all and in all" Colossians III, x, 11.

Love of Country

Nor is there any fear lest the consciousness of universal brotherhood aroused by the teaching of Christianity, and the spirit which it inspires, be in contrast with love of traditions or the glories of one's fatherland or impede the progress of prosperity or legitimate interests. For that same Christianity teaches that in the exercise of charity we must follow a God-given order, yielding the place of honor in our affections and good works to those who are bound to us by special ties; nay, the Divine Master Himself gave an example of this preference for His own country and fatherland, as He wept over the coming destruction of the Holy City.

But legitimate and well-ordered love of our native country should not make us close our eyes to the all-embracing nature of Christian charity, which calls for consideration of others and of their interests in the pacifying light of love.

Such is the [illegible] doctrine of love and peace which has been [illegible] an ennobling factor in the civil and religious progress of mankind and the heralds who proclaimed it, moved by supernatural charity, not only tilled the land and cared for the sick, but above all they reclaimed, molded and raised life to divine heights, directing it toward the summit of sanctity in which everything is seen in the light of God.

They have raised mansions and temples which show to what lofty and kindly heights the Christian ideal urges man; but above all they have made of men wise or ignorant, strong or weak, living temples of God and branches of the very vine which is Christ. They have handed on to future generations the treasures of ancient art and wisdom and have secured for them that inestimable gift of eternal wisdom which links men as brothers by the common recognition of a supernatural ownership.

Venerable brethren, forgetfulness of the law of universal charity—of that charity which alone can consolidate peace by extinguishing hatred and softening envies and dissensions—is the source of very grave evils for peaceful relations between nations.

Another Pernicious Error

But there is yet another error no less pernicious to the well-being of the nations and to the prosperity of that great human society which gathers together and embraces within its confines all races. It is the error contained in those ideas which do not hesitate to divorce civil authority from every kind of dependence upon the Supreme Being—first cause and absolute master of man and of society—and from every restraint of a higher law derived from God as from its first source.

Thus they accord the civil authority an unrestricted field of action that is at the mercy of the changeful tide of human will, or of the dictates of casual historical claims, and of the interests of a few.

Once the authority of God and the sway of His law are denied in this way, the civil authority as an inevitable result tends to attribute to itself that absolute autonomy which belongs exclusively to the Supreme Maker. It puts itself in the place of the Almighty and elevates the State or group into the last end of life, the supreme criterion of the moral and juridical order and therefore forbids every appeal to the principles of natural reason and of the Christian conscience.

We do not, of course, fail to recognize that, fortunately, false principles do not always exercise their full influence, especially when age-old Christian traditions on which the peoples have been nurtured remain still deeply, even if unconsciously, rooted in their hearts.

None the less, one must not forget the essential insufficiency and weakness of every principle of social life which rests upon a purely human foundation, is inspired by merely earthly motives and relies for its force on the sanction of a purely external authority.

Where the dependence of human right upon the divine is denied, where appeal is made only to some insecure idea of a merely human authority and an autonomy is claimed which rests only upon a utilitarian [illegible] there human law itself [illegible] forfeits in its more weighty application the moral force which is the essential condition for its acknowledgment and also for its demand of sacrifices.

It is quite true that power based on such weak and unsteady foundations can attain at times under chance circumstances material successes apt to arouse wonder in superficial observers. But the moment comes when the inevitable law triumphs, which strikes down all that has been constructed upon a hidden or open disproportion between the greatness of the material and outward success and the weakness of the inward value and of its moral foundation. Such disproportion exists whenever public authority disregards or denies the dominion of the Supreme Lawgiver, who as He has given rulers power, has also set and marked its bounds.

Function of the State

Indeed, as our great predecessor

30.24-4299

30.24-4299

Leo XIII wisely taught in the encyclical, "Immortale Dei," it was the Creator's will that civil sovereignty should regulate social life after the dictates of an order changeless in its universal principles; should facilitate the attainment in the temporal order by individuals of physical, intellectual and moral perfection; and should aid them to reach their supernatural end.

Hence, it is the noble prerogative and function of the State to control, aid and direct the private and individual activities of national life that they converge harmoniously toward the common good. That good can neither be defined according to arbitrary ideas nor can it accent for its standard primarily the material prosperity of society, but rather it should be defined according to the harmonious development and the natural perfection of man. It is for this perfection that society is designed by the Creator as a means.

To consider the State as something ultimate to which everything else should be subordinated and directed cannot fail to harm the true and lasting prosperity of nations. This can happen either when unrestricted dominion comes to be conferred on the State as having a mandate from the nation, the people, or even a social class or when the State arrogates such dominion to itself as absolute master despotically without any mandate whatsoever.

If in fact the State lays claim to and directs private enterprises, these, ruled as they are by delicate and complicated internal principles which guarantee and assure the realization of their special aims, may be damaged to the detriment of the public good, by being wrenched from their natural surroundings, that is, from responsible private action.

Further, there would be danger lest the primary and essential cell of society, the family, with its well-being and its growth, should come to be considered from the narrow standpoint of national power, and lest it be forgotten that man and the family are by nature anterior to the State, and that the Creator has given to both of them powers and rights and has assigned them a mission and a charge that correspond to undeniable natural requirements.

Rights of the Family

The education of the new generation in that case would not aim at the balanced and harmonious development of the physical powers and of all the intellectual and moral qualities, but at a one-sided formation of those civic virtues that are considered necessary for attaining political success, while the virtues which give society the fragrance of nobility, humanity and reverence would be inculcated less, for fear they should detract from the price of the citizen.

Before us stand out with painful clarity the dangers we fear will accrue to this and coming generations from the neglect or non-recognition, the minimizing and the gradual abolition of the rights peculiar to the family. Therefore we stand up as determined defenders of those rights in the full consciousness of the duty imposed on us by our apostolic office. The stress of our times as well external as internal, material and spiritual alike, and the manifold errors with their countless repercussions are tasted by none so bitterly as by that noble little cell, the family.

True courage and a heroism worthy in its degree of admiration and respect are often necessary to support the hardships of life, the daily weight of misery, growing want and restrictions on a scale never before experienced whose reason and necessity are not always apparent.

Whoever has the care of souls and can search hearts knows the hidden tears of mothers, the resigned sorrow of so many fathers, the countless bitternesses of which no statistics tell nor can tell. He sees with sad eyes the mass of sufferings ever on the increase; he knows how the powers of disorder and destruction stand on the alert ready to make use of all these things for their dark designs.

No one of good-will and vision will think of refusing the State, in the exceptional conditions of the world of today, correspondingly wider and exceptional rights to meet the popular needs. But even in such emergencies the moral law, established by God, demands that the lawfulness of each such measure and its real necessity be scrutinized with the greatest rigor according to the standards of the common good.

Soul Cannot Be Demanded

In any case, the more burdensome the material sacrifices demanded of the individual and the family by the State, the more must the rights of conscience be to it sacred and inviolable. Goods, blood it can demand; but the soul redeemed by God, never.

The charge laid by God on parents to provide for the material and spiritual good of their offspring and to procure for them a suitable training saturated with the true spirit of religion cannot be wrested from them without grave violation of their rights.

Undoubtedly, that formation should aim as well at the preparation of youth to fulfill with intelligent understanding and pride those offices of a noble patriotism which give to one's earthly fatherland all due measure of love, self devotion and service. But on the other hand, a formation which forgot or, worse still, deliberately neglected to direct the eyes and hearts of youth to the heavenly country would be an injustice to youth, and injustice against the inalienable duties and rights of the Christian family and an excess to which a check must be opposed, in the interests even of the people and of the State itself.

Such an education might seem perhaps to the rulers responsible for it a source of increased strength and vigor; it would be, in fact, the opposite, as sad experience would prove. The crime of high treason against the "King of Kings and Lord of Lords" (Timothy vi, 15; cf. Apocalypse i, 6) perpetrated by an education that is either indifferent or opposed to Christianity, the reversal of "Suffer the little children * * * to come unto Me" (St. Matthew xix, 14), would bear most bitter fruits.

On the contrary, the State which lifts anxiety from the bleeding and torn hearts of fathers and mothers and restores their rights, only promotes its own internal peace and lays foundations of a happy future for the country. The souls of children given to their parents by God and consecrated in baptism with the royal character of Christ are a sacred charge over which watches the jealous love of God. The same Christ who pronounced the words "Suffer little children to come unto me" has threatened, for all his mercy and goodness, with fearful evils those who give scandal to those so dear to his heart.

Misdirected Formation of Youth

Now what scandal is more permanently harmful to generation after generation than a formation of youth which is misdirected toward a goal that alienates from Christ "that way and the truth and the life" and leads to open or hidden apostasy from Christ?

That Christ from whom they want to alienate the youthful generations of the present day and of the future is the same Christ who has received from his Eternal Father all power in heaven and on earth. He holds in His omnipotent hand the destiny of States, of peoples and of nations. His it is to shorten or prolong life: his to grant increase, prosperity and greatness.

Of all that exists on the face of the earth, the soul alone has deathless life. A system of education that should not respect the sacred precincts of the Christian family, protected by God's holy law, that should attack its foundations, bar to the young the way to Christ, to the Saviour's fountains of life and joy (cf. Isaiah xii, 3) that should consider apostasy from Christ and the church as a proof of fidelity to the people or a particular class's word: "They that depart from Thee shall be written in the earth" (Jeremiah xvii, 13).

The idea which credits the State with unlimited authority is not simply an error harmful to the internal life of nations, to their prosperity, and to the larger and well-ordered increase in their well-being, but likewise it injures the relations between peoples, for it breaks the unity of supranational society, robs the law of nations of its foundation and vigor, leads to violation of others' rights and impedes agreement and peaceful intercourse.

A disposition in fact of the divinely sanctioned natural order divides the human race into social groups, nations or States, which are mutually independent in organization and in the direction of their internal life. But for all that, the human race is bound together by reciprocal ties, moral and juridical, into a great commonwealth directed to the good of all nations and ruled by special laws which protect its unity and promote its prosperity.

Now no one can fail to see how the claim to absolute autonomy for the State stands in open opposition to this natural way that is inherent in man—nay, denies it utterly—and therefore leaves the stability of internation relations at the mercy of the will of rulers, while it destroys the possibility of true union and fruitful collaboration directed to the general good.

So, venerable brethren, it is indispensable for the existence of harmonious and lasting contacts and of fruitful relations that the peoples recognize and observe these principles of international natural law which regulate their normal development and activity. Such principles demand respect for corresponding rights to independence, to life and to the possibility of continuous development in the paths of civilization; they demand fidelity loyalty to compacts agreed upon and sanctioned in conformity with the principles of the law of nations.

The indispensable presupposition, without doubt, of all peaceful intercourse between nations, and the very soul of the juridical relations in force among them, is mutual trust; the expectation and conviction that each party will respect its plighted word; the certainty that both sides are convinced that: "Better is wisdom than weapons of war." (Ecclesiastes ix, 18), and are ready to enter into discussion and to avoid recourse to force or to threats of force in case of delays, hindrances, changes or disputes, because all these things can be the result not of bad will, but of changed circumstances and of genuine interests in conflict.

But, on the other hand, to tear the law of nations from its anchor in divine law, to base it on the autonomous will of States is to dethrone that very law and deprive it of its noblest and strongest qualities. Thus it would stand abandoned to the fatal drive of private interest and collective selfishness exclusively intent on the assertion of its own rights and ignoring those of others.

Treaties Can Be Modified

Now, it is true that with the passage of time and the substantial change of circumstances, which were not and perhaps could not have been foreseen in the making of a treaty, such a treaty or some of its clauses can in fact become, or at least seem to become, unjust, impracticable or too burdensome for one of the parties.

It is obvious that should such be the case, recourse should be had in good time to a frank discussion with a view to modifying the treaty or making another in its stead. But to consider treaties on principle as ephemeral and tacitly to assume the authority of rescinding them unilaterally when they are no longer to one's advantage, would be to abolish all mutual trust among States. In this way, natural order would be destroyed and there would be seen dug between different peoples and nations trenches of division impossible to refill.

Today, venerable brethren, all men are looking with terror into the abyss to which they have been brought by the errors and principles which we have mentioned, and by their practical consequences. Gone are the proud illusions of limitless progress. Should any still fail to grasp this fact, the tragic situation of today would rouse them with the prophet's cry: "Hear ye deaf and ye blind, behold" (Isaiah xlii, 18).

What used to appear on the outside as order was nothing but an invasion of disorder: confusion in the principles of moral life. These principles once divorced from the majesty of the divine law have tainted every field of human activity.

But let us leave the past and turn our eyes toward that future which, according to the promises of the powerful ones of this world, is to consist, once the bloody conflicts of today have ceased, in a new order founded on justice and on prosperity.

Will that future be really different; above all, will it be better? Will treaties of peace, will the new international order at the end of this war be animated by justice and by equity toward all, by that spirit which frees and pacifies? Or will there be a lamentable repetition of ancient and of recent errors?

Temptation in Victory

To hope for a decisive change exclusively from the shock of war and its final issue is idle, as experience shows. The hour of victory is an hour of external triumph for the party to whom victory falls, but it is, in equal measure, the hour of temptation. In this hour the angel of justice strives with the demons of violence; the heart of the victor all too easily is hardened; moderation and far-seeing wisdom appear to him weakness; the excited passions of the people, often inflamed by the sacrifices and sufferings they have borne, obscure the vision even of responsible persons and make them inattentive to the warning voice of humanity and equity, which is overwhelmed or drowned in the inhuman cry, "Vae victis—woe to the conquered."

There is danger lest settlements and decisions born in such conditions be nothing else than injustice under the cloak of justice.

No, venerable brethren, safety does not come to peoples from external means, from the sword, which can impose conditions of peace but does not create peace. Forces that are to renew the face of the earth should proceed from within, from the spirit. Once the bitterness and the cruel strifes of the present have ceased, the new order of the world, of national and international life, must rest no longer on the quicksands of changeable and ephemeral standards that depend only on the selfish interests of groups and individuals.

No, they must rest on the unshakable foundation, on the solid rock of natural law and of divine revelation. There the human legislator must attain to that balance, that keen sense of moral responsibility without which it is easy to mistake the boundary between the legitimate use and the abuse of power.

Thus only will his decisions have internal consistency, noble dignity and religious sanction, and be immune from selfishness and passion. For true though it is that the evils from which mankind suffers today come in part from economic instability and from the struggle of interests regarding a more equal distribution of the goods which God has given man as a means of sustenance and progress, it is not less true that their root is deeper and more intrinsic, belonging to the sphere of religious belief and moral convictions which have been perverted by the progressive alienation of the peoples from that unity of doctrine, faith, customs and morals which once was promoted by the tireless and beneficient work of the church.

Re-education of Mankind

If it is to have any effect, the re-education of mankind must be, above all things, spiritual and religious. Hence, it must proceed from Christ as from its indispensable foundation; must be actuated by justice and crowned by charity.

The accomplishment of this task of regeneration, by adapting her means to the altered conditions of the times and to the new needs of the human race, is an essential and maternal office of the church. Committed to her by her divine founder the preaching of the Gospel, by which is inculcated to men truth, justice and charity and the endeavor to implant its preecpts solidly in mind and conscience, is the most noble and most fruitful work for peace. That mission would seem as if it ought to discourage by its very grandeur the hearts of those who make up the church militant.

But that cooperation in the spread of the Kingdom of God which in every century is effected in different ways, with varying instruments, with manifold hard struggles, as a command incumbent on every one who has been snatched by divine grace from the slavery of Satan and called in baptism to citizenship of Kingdom of God.

And if belonging to it, living according to its spirit, laboring for its increase and placing its benefits at the disposition of that portion of mankind also which as yet has no part in them, means in our days having to face obstacles and oppositions as vast and deep and minutely organized as never before, that does not dispense a man from the frank, bold profession of our faith. Rather, it spurs one to stand fast in the conflict even at the price of the greatest sacrifices.

Whoever lives by the spirit of Christ refuses to let himself be beaten down by the difficulties which oppose him, but on the contrary feels himself impelled to work with all his strength and with the fullest confidence in God. He does not draw back before the straits and the necessities of the moment but faces their severity ready to give aid with that love which flees no sacrifice, is stronger than death, and will not be quenched by the rushing waters of tribulation.

Commends Aid of Laity

It gives us, venerable brethren, an inward strength, a heavenly joy, for which we daily render to God our deep and humble thanks, to see in every region of the Catholic world evident signs of a spirit which boldly faces the gigantic tasks of our age, which with generous decision is intent on uniting in fruitful harmony the first and essential duty of individual sanctification, and apostolic activity for the spread of the kingdom of God. From the movement of the Eucharistic congresses, furthered with loving care by our predecessors, and from the collaboration of the laity formed in Catholic Action toward a deep realization of their noble mission, flow forth fountains of grace and reserve of strength, which could hardly be sufficiently prized in the present time, when threats are more numerous, needs multiply and the conflict between Christianity and anti-Christianism grows intense. At a moment when one is forced to note with sorrow the disproportion between the number of priests and the calls upon them, when one sees that even today the words of our Saviour apply: "The harvest indeed is great, but the laborers are few" (St. Matthew ix, 37; St. Luke x, 2). The collaboration of the laity in the apostolate of the hierarchy, a collaboration indeed given by many and animated with ardent zeal and generous self devotion, stands out as a precious aid to the work of priests and shows possibilities of development which justify the brightest hopes.

The prayer of the church to the Lord of the harvest that he send workers into his vineyard (cf. St. Matthew ix, 37; St. Luke x, 2) has been granted to a degree proportionate to the present needs, and in a manner which supplements and completes the powers, often obstructed and inadequate, of the priestly apostolate. Numbers of fervent men and women, of youth obedient to the voice of the supreme pastor and to the directions of their bishops, consecrate themselves with the full ardor of their soul to the works of the apostolate in order to bring back to Christ the masses of peoples who have been separated from Him.

Paternal Greeting Goes Out

To them in this moment so critical for the church and for mankind go out our paternal greeting, our deepfelt gratitude, our confident hope. These have truly placed their life and their work beneath the standard of Christ the king; and they can say with the psalmist: "I speak my words to the king" (Psalm xliv, 1). "Thy kingdom come" is not simply the burning desire of their prayers; it is, besides, the guide of their activity. This collaboration of the laity with the priesthood in all classes, categories and groups reveals precious industry and to the laity is entrusted a mission than which noble and loyal hearts could desire none higher nor more consoling.

This apostolic work, carried out according to the mind of the church, consecrates the layman as a kind of "minister to Christ" in the sense which St. Augustine explains as follows: "When, brethren, you hear our Lord saying: where I am there too will my servant me, do not think solely of good bishops and clerics." You too in your way minister to Christ by a good life, by almsgiving, by preaching His name and teaching to whom you can. Thus every father should recognize that it is under this title that he owes paternal affection to his family. Let it be for the sake of Christ and for life everlasting that he admonishes all his household, teaches, exhorts, reproves, shows kindness, corrects; and thus in his own home he will fulfill an ecclesiastical and, in a way, an episcopal office ministering to Christ, that he may be forever with Him. (On the Gospel according to St. John, tract 51, N. 13.)

In promoting this participation by the laity in the apostolate, which is so important in our times, the family has a special mission, for it is the spirit of the family that exercises the most powerful influence on that of the rising generation.

As long as the sacred flame of the faith burns on the domestic hearth, and the parents forge and fashion the lives of their children in accordance with this faith, youth will be ever ready to acknowledge the royal prerogatives of the Redeemer, and to oppose those who wish to exclude Him from society or wrongly to usurp His rights.

Family Is Christian Refuge

When churches are closed, when the image of the Crucified is taken from the schools, the family remains the providential and in a certain sense impregnable refuge of Christian life. And we give thanks to God as we see that numberless families accomplish this, their mission, with a fidelity undismayed by combat or by sacrifice. A great host of young men and women, even in those regions where faith in Christ means suffering and persecution, remain firm around the throne of the Redeemer with a quiet, steady determination that recalls the most glorious days of the church's struggles.

What torrents of benefits would be showered on the world, what light, order, what peace would accrue to social life, what unique and precious energies would contribute toward the betterment of mankind, if men would everywhere concede to the church, teacher of justice and love, that liberty of action to which, in virtue of the divine mandate, she has a sacred and indisputable right. What calamities could be averted, what happiness and tranquillity assured, if the social and international forces working to establish peace would let themselves be permeated by the deep lessons of the gospel of love in their struggle against individual or collective egoism!

There is no opposition between the laws that govern the life of faithful Christians and the postulates of a genuine humane humanitarianism, but rather unity and mutual support. In the interests of suffering mankind, shaken to the depths, both materially and spiritually, we have no more ardent desire than this: that the present difficulties may open the eyes of many to see our Lord Jesus Christ and the mission of His church on this earth in their true light, and that all those who are in power may decide to allow the church a free course to work for the formation of the rising generation according to the principles of justice and peace.

Urges Liberty of Church

This work of pacification presupposes that obstacles are not put to the exercise of the mission which God has entrusted to His church; that the field of this activity is not restricted, and that the masses, and especially youth, are not withdrawn from her beneficent influence. Accordingly we, as representatives on earth of Him who was proclaimed by the prophet "Prince of Peace" (Isaiah IX, 6), appeal to the rulers of the peoples, and to those who can in any way influence public life, to let the church have full liberty to fulfill her role as educator by teaching men truth, by inculcating justice, and inflaming hearts with divine love of Christ.

While the church cannot renounce the exercise of this her mission, which has for its final end to realize here below the Divine plan and to "re-establish all things in Christ, that are in heaven and on earth" (Ephesians I, 10), her aid, none the less, is shown to be indispensable as never before, now that sad experience teaches that external means and human provisions and political expedients of themselves bring no efficacious healing to the ills which affect mankind.

Taught precisely by the sad failure of human expedients to stave off the tempest that threatens to sweep civilization away, many turn their gaze with renewed hope to the church, the rock of truth and of charity, to that chair of Peter from which, they feel, can be granted to mankind the unity [illegible] teaching [illegible] of the moral code which of old gave consistency to pacific international relations.

OCT 28 1939

Unity, toward which so many answerable for the destiny of nations, look with regretful yearnings as they experience from day to day the vanity of the very means in which once they had placed their trust! Unity, the desired of those many legions of our sons who daily call upon "the God of peace and of love!" (II Corinthians XIII, 11). Unity, the hope of so many noble minds separated from us, who yet in their hunger and thirst for justice and peace turn their eyes to the See of Peter and from it await guidance and counsel.

Principles Stand 2,000 Years

These last are recognizing in the Catholic Church principles of belief and life that have stood the test of two thousand years; the strong cohesion of the ecclesiastical hierarchy, which in union with the successor of Peter spends itself in enlightening minds with the teachings of the Gospel, in guiding and sanctifying men, and which is generous in its material condescension toward all, but firm when, even at the costs of torments of martyrdom, it has to say: "Non licet! It is not allowed!"

And yet, Venerable Brethren, the teaching of Christ, which alone can furnish man with such solid basis of belief as will greatly enlarge his vision, and divinely dilate his heart and supply an efficacious remedy to the very grave difficulties of today—this and the activity of the church in teaching and spreading that doctrine, and in forming and modeling men's minds by its precepts, are at times an object of suspicion, as if they shook the foundations of civil authority or usurped its rights.

Against such suspicions we solemnly declare with apostolic sincerity that—without prejudice to the declarations regarding the power of Christ and of His church made by our predecessor Pius XI of venerable memory in his encyclical "Quas Primas" of Dec. 11, 1925—any such aims are entirely alien to that same church, which spreads its maternal arms toward this world not to dominate but to serve. She does not claim to take the place of other legitimate authorities in their proper spheres, but offers them help after the example and in the spirit of her Divine Founder Who "went about doing good" (Acts X, 38).

The church preaches and inculcates obedience and respect for earthly authority which derives from God its whole origin and holds to the teaching of her Divine Master, Who said: "Render therefore to Caesar the things that are Caesar's" (St. Matthew XXII, 21); she has no desire to usurp, and sings in the liturgy: "He takes away no earthly realms who gives us the celestial" (hymn for feast of Epiphany). She does not suppress human energies but lifts them up to all that is noble and generous and forms characters which do not compromise with conscience.

No Peace Resisting God

Nor has she who civilizes the nations ever retarded the civil progress of mankind, at which on the contrary she is pleased and glad with a mother's pride. The end of her activity was admirably expressed by the angels over the cradle of the Word Incarnate, when they sang of glory to God and announced peace to men of good-will: "Glory to God in the highest; and on earth peace to men of good-will" (St. Luke II, 14). This peace, which the world cannot give, has been left as a heritage to His disciples by the Divine Redeemer Himself: "Peace I leave with you, my peace I give unto you" (St. John XIV, 27); and thus following the sublime teaching of Christ, summed up by Himself in the twofold precept of love of God and of the neighbor, millions of souls have reached, are reaching and shall reach peace.

History, wisely called by a great Roman "the teacher of life," has proved for close on two thousand years how true is the word of scripture that he will not have peace who resists God. (cf., Job IX, 4). For Christ alone is the "corner stone" (Ephesians II, 20) on which man and society can find stability and salvation.

On this cornerstone the church is built, and hence against her the adversary can never prevail: "The gates of Hell shall not prevail" (St. Matthew 16, 18) nor can they ever weaken her; nay, rather, internal and external struggles tend to augment the force and multiply the laurels of her glorious victories.

On the other hand, any other building which has not been founded solidly on the teaching of Christ rests on shifting sands and is destined to perish miserably (cf. St. Matthew VII, 26, 27).

Appeals for Poland

Venerable brethren, the hour when this our first encyclycal reaches you is in many respects a real "hour of darkness" (cf. St. Luke XXII, 53) in which the spirit of violence and of discord brings indescribable suffering on mankind. Do we need to give assurance that our paternal heart is close to all our children in compassionate love, and especially to the afflicted, the oppressed, the persecuted? The nations swept into the tragic whirlpool of war are perhaps as yet only at the "beginnings of sorrows" (St. Matthew XXIV, 8), but even now there reigns in thousands of families death and desolation, lamentation and misery. The blood of countless human beings, even non-combatants, raises a piteous dirge over a nation such as our dear Poland, which, for its fidelity to the church, for its services in the defense of Christian civilization, written in indelible characters in the annals of history, has a right to the generous and brotherly sympathy of the whole world, while it awaits, relying on powerful intercession of Mary, help of Christians, the hour of a resurrection in harmony with the principles of justice and true peace.

OCT 28 1939

What has already happened and is still happening, was presented, as it were, in a vision before our eyes when, while still some hope was left, we left nothing undone in the form suggested to us by our apostolic office and by the means at our disposal, to prevent recourse to arms and to keep open the way to an understanding honorable to both parties. Convinced that the use of force on one side would be answered by recourse to arms on the other, we considered it a duty inseparable from our apostolic office and of Christian charity to try every means to spare mankind and Christianity the horrors of a world conflagration, even at the risk of having our intentions and our aims misunderstood.

Peace Counsel Disregarded

Our advice, if heard with respect, was not, however, followed; and while our pastoral heart looks on with sorrow and foreboding, the image of the Good Shepherd comes up before our gaze, and it seems as though we ought to repeat to the world in His name: "If thou * * * hadst known * * * the things that are to thy peace; but now they are hidden from thy eyes" (St. Luke XIX, 42).

In the midst of this world which today presents such a sharp contrast to "the peace of Christ in the reign of Christ," the church and her faithful are in times and in years of trial such as have rarely been known in her history of struggle and suffering. But in such times especially, he who remains firm in his faith and strong at heart knows that Christ the King is never so near as in the hour of trial, which is the hour for fidelity.

With a heart torn by the sufferings and afflictions of so many of her sons, but with the courage and the stability that come from the promises of our Lord, the Spouse of Christ goes to meet the gathering storms. This she knows, that the truth which she preaches, the charity which she teaches and practices, will be the indispensable counselors and aids to men of good-will in the reconstruction of a new world based on justice and love, when mankind, weary from its course along the way of error, has tasted the bitter fruits of hate and violence.

In the meantime, however, venerable brethren, the world and all those who are stricken by the calamity of the war must know that the obligation of Christian love, the very foundation of the Kingdom of Christ, is not an empty word, but a living reality. A vast field opens up for Christian charity in all its forms. We have full confidence that all our sons, especially those who are not being tried by the scourge of war, will be mindful, in imitation of the Divine Samaritan, of all these who as victims of the war have a right to compassion and help.

Church Awaits Hand of Christ

The "Catholic Church, the city of God, whose king is truth, whose law love and whose measure eternity" (St. Augustine, Ep. cxxxxiii ad Marcellinum, C. 3, N. 17), preaching fearlessly the whole truth of Christ and toiling as the love of Christ demands with the zeal of a mother, stands as a blessed vision of peace above the storm of error and passion awaiting the moment when the all powerful hand of Christ the King shall quiet the tempest and banish the spirits of discord which have provoked it. Whatever we can do to hasten the day when the dove of peace may find on this earth, submerged in a deluge of discord, somewhere to alight, we shall continue to do, trusting in those statesmen who before the outbreak of war nobly toiled to avert such a scourge from the peoples; trusting in the millions of souls of all countries and of every sphere who call not for justice alone but for love and mercy; above all, trusting in God Almighty to whom we daily address the prayer: "In the shadow of Thy wings will I hope, until iniquity pass away" (Psalm LVI, 2).

God can do all things. As well as the happiness and the fortunes of nations He holds in His hands human counsel and sweetly turns them in whatever direction He wills; even the obstacles are for His omnipotence means to mold affairs and events and to direct minds and free wills to His all high purposes.

Pray then, Venerable Brethren, pray without ceasing; pray especially when you offer the divine sacrifice of love. Do you, too, pray, you whose courageous profession of the faith entails today hard, painful and not rarely heroic sacrifices; pray you suffering and agonizing members of the church, when Jesus comes to console and to heal your pains, and do not forget with the aid of a true spirit of mortification and worthy practice of penance to make your prayers more acceptable in the eyes of Him who "lifteth up all that fall: and setteth up all that are cast down" (Psalm CXIV, 14) that He in His mercy may shorten the days of trial and that thus the words of the psalmist may be verified: "Then they cried to the Lord in their affliction: and He delivered them out of their distresses" (Psalm CVI, 13).

Asks Prayers of Children

And you, white legions of children who are so loved and dear to Jesus, when you receive in holy communion the bread of life, raise up your simple and innocent prayers and unite them with those of the universal church. The heart of Jesus, who loves you, does not resist your supplicant innocence. Pray every one, pray uninterruptedly: "pray without ceasing" (Thessalonians V, 17).

In this way you will put into practice the sublime precept of the Divine Master, the most sacred testament of His heart, "that they all may be one" (St. John XVII, 21) that all may live in that unity of faith and of love, from which the world may now the power and efficacy of Christ's mission and of the work of his church.

OCT 28 1939

The early church lived this and practiced this divine precept, and expressed it in a magnificent prayer; do you associate yourselves with those sentiments which answer so well to the necessities of the present hour: "Remember, O Lord, Thy church, to free her from all evil and to perfect her in Thy love; and sanctify and collect her from the four winds into Thy kingdom, which Thou hast prepared for her, because Thine is the power, and the glory for ever" (doctrine of the twelve apostles, C 10).

In the confidence that God, the Author and Lover of peace, will hear the supplications of the church, we impart to you all as a pledge of the abundance of divine grace, from the fullness of our paternal heart, the Apostolic Benediction.

Given at Castel Gandolfo, near Rome, on the twentieth day of October, in the year of Our Lord 1939, the first of our Pontificate.

Senate Rejects Substitute Bill With Arms Ban—Final Vote Near

WASHINGTON, Oct. 27 (AP).—The Senate went on record for repealing the arms embargo 67 to 22 today, but a fighting opposition promptly demanded one more ballot on the controversial issue before permitting a final vote on the Administration neutrality bill.

Leaders on both sides agreed the 67 to 22 ballot was a vote to repeal the embargo, but subsequently Senator Clark (Dem., Mo.), said he would seek one more ballot on this key issue.

OCT 28 1939

The repeal vote, reached on the twenty-first day of the Senate's history-making neutrality debate, came on a proposal by Senator Nye (Rep., N. D.), to discard the Administration measure and substitute a bill, similar to that of the Administration, except that it would maintain the existing ban on arms sales.

Repeal of the embargo was recommended by President Roosevelt when he called Congress into special session last month. Although it was only one of his recommendations for revising the neutrality law, it immediately became the crux of the entire foreign policy fight in the Senate.

All sides agreed the effect of repeal would be to give aid to England and France in their war with Germany, but many repeal proponents argued the present embargo is unneutral. Opponents of repeal, on the other hand, argued that action would be unneutral.

Driving toward passage of the bill by nightfall, an overwhelming Senate majority first turned aside an amendment to ban armed merchant vessels and submarines of belligerent nations from United States ports.

The proposal, by Senator Clark of Missouri, lost 65 to 26, the heavy preponderance of votes which supported the Administration being in line with voting on other controverted amendments earlier in the week.

Extraordinary Speed

Events moved at what was, for the Senate, extraordinary speed as a result of an agreement obtained by Democratic leader Barkley last night that no Senator should speak for more than 20 minutes on an amendment.

On the House side, it was learned that leaders last night tentatively agreed on procedure by which they hope to get final Congressional action on the bill a week from tomorrow night.

The Senate version—a neutrality bill having been passed by the House last session—is slated to be called up in the House Tuesday. An effort will be made to send it to a Senate-House conference by a simple order from the Rules Committee, which is to meet Monday.

The House members of the conference committee probably will be instructed to insist on retention of a limited arms embargo, as provided in the original House bill, rather than agree to the Senate repealer.

Two Days of Debate

If all goes well to that point leaders plan for the House to debate embargo repeal and other controversial issues not more than two days. With further Senate-House conferences, it is expected by leaders that the measure will be in final form by Friday night of next week.

Senator Pittman (Dem., Nev.), an Administration spokesman, opposed Clark's amendment on ships of belligerents as mandatory legislation whereas, he argued, the country's interests would be better served by permitting the President to fix regulations under which armed merchantmen and submarines could enter United States ports.

Senator Connally (Dem., Tex.) said that to adopt the language of the Clark amendment would be practically to destroy commerce with any belligerent.

Senator McCarran (Dem., Nev.) supported Clark.

A motion by Senator Wheeler (Dem., Mont.) to reconsider an amendment which would have added two Senators and two Representatives to the munitions control board was rejected 50 to 43.

The amendment originally was defeated 45 to 41.

Working swiftly, the chamber adopted an amendment by Senator George (Dem., Ga.) to permit shippers to establish proof that they had transferred title under the cash-and-carry clauses of the bill by obtaining a bill of lading showing that title had passed.

The Senate also approved an amendment by Senator Gillette (Dem., Iowa) relaxing cash-and-carry restrictions to permit American firms to ship goods to their foreign subsidiaries without taking an oath that there was no remaining American interest in title to the goods.

Without a record vote, the Senate approved an amendment by Senator Thomas (Dem., Utah) to require the posting of bond to insure that crews of foreign ships landed in this country would not remain here contrary to immigration laws.

The chamber accepted another amendment by Gillette prohibiting any trading in this country in securities issued prior to the President's neutrality proclamation except for those owned by citizens of the United States.

EMBARGO FIGHT

[By the Associated Press]

Washington, Oct. 27—Weary of its long neutrality debate, the Senate placed a drastic limitation on speech-making today in a drive to act on arms embargo repeal by nightfall.

Although Democratic Leader Alben W. Barkley, of Kentucky, failed to win agreement to take the final vote at 5 P. M. (E.S.T.), opposition chieftains accepted his suggestion that no Senator talk more than twenty minutes on any amendment. Earlier this week a forty-five-minute limit had been adopted.

Predicts 65 Votes

Barkley conferred with Administration lieutenants last night and reported afterward that more than sixty-five of the ninety-six Senators would vote for the neutrality bill.

The foes conceded defeat, but said their fight had not been in vain. They expressed hope that the Senate debate had stiffened opposition forces in the House, which will consider the bill next week.

"I certainly think the fight has slowed up the war fever," said Senator Bennett Champ Clark (Dem., Mo.). "We have won a great moral victory."

"Position Made Clear"

Clark, a leading opponent of repeal, asserted the Senate debate had made it "absolutely clear" that European countries could not expect the United States to participate again in a European conflict.

In this connection, Administration Senators contended that their position had been strengthened by President Roosevelt's declaration last night that the United States is neutral and does not intend to become involved in war.

Speaking from the White House by radio to the New York Herald Tribune Forum, the President said those who contend that his foreign policy would lead this nation into war are guilty of "one of the worst fakes in current history."

Long Session

The Senate was held in session eight hours yesterday in an attempt to clean up a score of amendments, but opponents objected to meeting after the dinner hour.

Although previously confident of their strength, Administration leaders said that their expectations had been borne out by yesterday's test vote on an amendment to prevent repeal of the arms embargo.

The amendment, proposed by Senator Sheridan Downey (Dem., Cal.), would have forbidden arms sales to all foreign nations except states in the American continents at war with non-American countries. The sales which Downey suggested are permitted under the present embargo act.

Test Of Strength

Barkley said that the 55-to-27 vote against the amendment "was a clear-cut test of strength, but we will have even more votes when an effort is made to eliminate the section repealing the embargo."

Administration forces also stopped, 54 to 36, a Republican attempt to forbid the sale of poison gas and chemical warfare materials to foreign countries. They accepted a proposal by Senator Charles W. Tobey (Rep., N. H.) to ban the use of the American flag by foreign vessels.

When the Senate bill goes to the House, both sides expect a close fight, which will last only two or three days. The House voted last summer for a modified arms embargo.

How New Law On Neutrality Would Operate

Inland Transportation by Rail, Air or Water to Canada Is Permitted

WASHINGTON, Oct. 27 (AP).—Here are the salient features of the Roosevelt administration neutrality bill, as approved [illegible] by the Senate and sent to the House:

OPERATION—Directs the President to put the act in effect when he, or Congress, finds that a state of war exists and the President determines that operation of the law is necessary to preserve the peace and security of the United States.

ARMS SALES—Repeals the present embargo and permits arms sales to belligerents for cash. Forbids American ships to carry arms to any belligerent port in any part of the world.

SHIPPING—Bars American vessels from transporting supplies or passengers to belligerent ports, with the following exceptions: Ports in the Atlantic south of the thirty-fifth meridian; New Brunswick and Nova Scotia on the Bay of Fundy; the Pacific and Indian Oceans; the China, Tasman and Arabian Seas, and the Bay of Bengal; permits inland transportation by rail, air or water to Canada.

TITLE TRANSFER—Forbids export of any materials to a belligerent state until shipper has filed a sworn statement with port collectors that title has been transferred to some foreign government, corporation, agency or national. However, shipments to individuals or private companies at ports included within the exempted areas in the shipping section can be made on a normal trade basis, without previous transfer of title.

COMBAT AREAS—Empowers the President to establish danger zones around either belligerent or neutral ports, including the areas exempted in the shipping sections, into which American ships could not go. He could modify or change these zones at will.

FINANCIAL TRANSACTIONS—Prohibits the purchase, sale or exchange in this country of bonds, securities or obligations of belligerents; forbids United States citizens to make loans or extend credit to any belligerent state, or its agency; forbids solicitation of funds for belligerents, except for medical aid, food and clothing to relieve suffering.

AMERICAN PORTS—Authorizes the President to restrict the use of American ports by belligerents' submarines or armed merchant vessels. (He also could require the owners of any vessel to post bond against carrying fuel, arms, men, supplies or information to any belligerent warship and could intern any ship which violated this provision.)

TRAVEL—Forbids Americans to travel on belligerent ships, with minor exceptions.

MERCHANT VESSELS—Makes it unlawful for an American merchant vessel to be armed, except with small arms.

AMERICAN REPUBLICS—The law would not appy to American republics unless they were cooperating with non-American states in a war, as Canada is.

MUNITIONS BOARD—Continues the board and empowers it to control the manufacture and export of arms through licenses.

PENALTIES—Violation of the shipping and title transfer sections would be punishable by a maximum fine of $50,000 and five years imprisonment, violations of other sections by $10,000 fine and two years imprisonment.

Official Britain Waits For Action By House

London, Oct. 27 (AP)—British official circles declined to comment tonight on the United States Senate's vote to repeal the arms embargo act. They suggested that any such action would be premature before the issue had been decided in the House.

Unofficially, it was stated in diplomatic circles, however, that Britain "at least would not be dissatisfied with the Senate's decision."

The Senate's action caused some surprise in official quarters. Many had believed the opponents of repeal would put up a stiffer fight.

The Daily Mail said:

"It cannot now be concealed that the prospect of such a vast war storehouse as America offers comes as a tonic encouragement to the nations fighting the cause of democracy."

Embargo Repeal Causes No Surprise In Berlin

Berlin, Oct. 27 (AP)—The United States Senate's approval of repeal of the arms embargo today caused no surprise in official circles here.

Official comment was lacking, a Foreign Office spokesman saying that the legislation as finally adopted must be studied before any possible effect on the course of the war could be appraised.

DEMOCRACY MAY HAVE NO JUST CAUSE TO BE PROUD OF ITS CONGRESS BUT YOU WELCOME THE SIGHT OF IT TO 22 EXHAUSTED ISOLATIONISTS

—HUMDRUM NEUTRALITY—

[By the Associated Press]

Washington, Oct. 27 — The Senate, after twenty-one days and a mere 953,000 words of deabte, is about to rush pell mell into a vote on repealing the arms embargo.

Even that hasty deliberation presents a strong contrast between the workings of a democracy and the way a dictatorship jumps in and does things.

Two-Thirds Spoke

Ninety six Senators have been free to say what they pleased about the measure. Two-thirds of them spoke. The others didn't care to say any things, or were prevented by illness from attending.

For the Senate, the debate has struck fairly close to the subject. Some Senators have made powerful appeals for removal or retention of the embargo. Others have just talked. The debate has produced drama, humor and redundance. As a spectacle, however, the debate has been a disappointment.

The right to yawn spread to the Senate flor and brought a dramatic protest from Senator Robert M. LaFollette (Prog., Wis.):

"I stod over there when my father rose in his place in the Senate (in 1917) in an effort to secure recognition in the closing hours of the filibuster against the armed ship bill. I felt—I saw—the tenseness of that situation.

Some Were Armed

"I knew the rumors which had been going through the cloak room all night long. I knew that certain Senators on the floor were armed. I saw the rush that started toward my father when he rose in his placein the chamber. "I shudder when I see the casual manner in which this matter has for the most part been debated."

Yet, though the Senators still reserve the right to refuse to listen to a bore, the attendance has been good. The lowest showing by quorum calls has been seventy-seven members. Unlike vaudeville billing, which used to save the best for the last, the Senate started with its big guns, although a few stars were sprinkled through the remainder of the debate.

Once it brought a suggestion from a silver State Senator that silver wedding rings be substituted for gold. Again it produced an inquiry as to whether a debate was under way over the respective merits of California and Florida grapefruit.

Forgot Question, Sat Down

On another occasion a Senator got up to answer a question, but the talk shifted to another subject, and when he was recognized to answer the question the Senator could not remember what it was. No one else seemed to know, either, so he sat down again.

By the time the debate was finished the whole country had time to know the Senate was about to vote. Word ought to have spread to the far recesses of the Blue Ridge, the Ozarks and the Rockies by now. It was not as if one man had made a decision overnight involving the lives and welfare of millions with a controlled press and radio standing between him and the millions to confuse their minds about what he was doing.

SENATE'S VOTE ON NEUTRALITY

Washington, D. C., Oct. 27 (AP).—The vote by which the Senate rejected, 55 to 27, late today a proposal by Senator Downey (Dem., Cal.), which would have had the effect of killing the arms embargo repeal provision of the neutrality bill:

The Horrors Of War

Poison Gas, Flame Throwers, Cornstalks And A Tom Connally Joke

Washington, Oct. 27 (AP) — Senator Tom Connally (Dem., Texas) told the Senate yestrday a story about a Georgia Senator during the pre-Civil War period who boasted that "we can whip the Yankees with cornstalks."

After the war, Connally said, the Georgian again was a candidate when some one in the crowd reminded him:

"You told us before this war that the South could whip the North with cornstalks. What about it?"

"Well, my friend, I did say that," the candidate replied, "but the trouble was the damn Yankees would not fight with cornstalks."

Connally used the story to oppose a neutrality bill amendment intended to prohibit sale by this country of poison gas, flame throwers and similar weapons. The amendment was rejected.

Woodring Says War for U. S. Is Not Inevitable

Assails Those Who Assert America's Entry Into Conflict Is a Certainty

BALTIMORE, Oct. 27 (AP).—Harry H. Woodring, Secretary of War, struck out tonight at those who "pronounce the inevitability of our entrance into this second World War" and declared that to create such a psychology "is to deny that most Americans are convinced that our democratic form of government can be maintained only through continuance of peace."

"There is no man in public life today," he told the National Guard Association in an address broadcast over the Blue network of the National Broadcasting Company, "who is more determined than your Secretary of War that your sons and my sons shall not march forth to war!"

Lieut. Gen. Hugh A. Drum, commander of the 1st Army and 2d Army Corps area, told the Associations convention that "recent maneuvers revealed our forces to be lacking in almost every essential except energy, aggressiveness and intelligence."

"We are not ready for a war," he said. "We are not even ready for defense. We learned in the field at Manassas and elsewhere the startling weaknesses of the National Guard and other reserve units. As to strength, the forces are far too small to face the rigors of a campaign."

Gen. George C. Marshall, Chief of Staff of the United States Army, said this winter's concentration of 75,000 regular Army troops in the South would be a "practical war college." Comparing the Army to a football team that had never played a game, he said: "With the exception of a few soldiers who participated in the World War, we have few seasoned fighters in our Army. Because of a lack of funds we have been forced to throw passes in a chicken-coop."

Those who say war is inevitable "arouse suspicion among our more gullible citizens toward the efforts of the Federal government to assure complete neutrality," Mr. Woodring asserted. "They breed mistrust in the determination of the national administration definitely to assure peace for the Western Hemisphere. Those who preach the inevitability of war are proue to interpret every purely precautionary and defensive measure taken by the government as likely—if not deliberately intended—to lead the American people into war.

"They paint the wholly false picture of American business and industry, in a blind greed for profit, intentionally attempting to involve the United States in the present European conflict. To create . . . such a psychology on the inevitability of our participation in the war now in progress is to deny that most Americans—the vast majority of Americans—are convinced that our democratic form of government can be maintained and our national destiny assured only through continuance of peace."

Mr. Woodring asserted it was the duty of every one "in any way connected with the military establishment to . . . insure there be no misinterpretation by any single citizen . . . of the fact that every item in the current program for the augmentation and modernization of our defensive forces, and every thought behind that program, has but one object in view—the preservation of peace."

He said the best road to peace was a strong defense.

Maintaining National Guard troops equipped with artillery, anti-aircraft guns and tanks "for which the states themselves have no need" is proving too heavy a burden for the states, Brig. Gen. Ellard Walsh, of Minnesota, told the association.

"I'm not criticizing, not complaining," he said, "but merely stating facts. Many states have reached a maximum in the maintenance of military establishments. The burdens of the states for maintaining such organizations are more than they can stand. If there was a question of war involved, there would be no question about maintaining additional troops. But the states, the Federal government and all agencies must recognize a line between local defense and national defense."

—CITY OF FLINT—

Bergen, Norway, Oct. 27 (AP)—James McConnochie, radio operator of the American freighter City of Flint, declared today that the ship's German prize crew took her through ice-strewn waters with explosives planted in the engine room while they flew the Danish flag and painted the new name "Alf" on her sides. McConnochie, a Scot, gave the vessel's German captors the slip when they stopped at Tromsö, Norway, to land survivors of the British ship Stonegate, sunk by the raider that took the Flint captive.

[By the Associated Press]

Moscow, Oct. 27—It was reliably learned today that United States Ambassador Laurence A. Steinhardt had been unsuccessful in repeated attempts to get an appointment at the Foreign Office in his quest for information about the United States-owned steamer City of Flint.

The Ambassador went to the Foreign Office last night, but was unable to see any high official, and his efforts still were unavailing up to 1 P. M. today.

The embassy had no information beyond that appearing in Russian newspapers—that the freighter had been freed at Murmansk, the port to which she had been taken by a German prize crew.

The Embassy spent two days trying to telephone the master of the Flint, or some other officer, at Murmansk. One call got through to Murmansk, but was cut off a minute later before the Embassy had spoken to any of the Americans.

British View Of Silence

There still was no official word that the City of Flint actually had departed, but well-informed quarters said last night that she had, flying the American flag. Today German circles expressed confidence that she would fly the German flag.

Unofficial British quarters expressed belief that Russia was keeping silent to give the German prize crew "a running start" toward a German port.

Further international complications in the case were foreseen if the freighter were unable to get through the British blockade in the North Sea. It semed probable that British warships would be lying in wait for her and just as likely that she would be under the guard of German submarines—assuming she is in German hands and headed for Germany.

Ship's Status Mystery

Whether the City of Flint had left Murmansk as a German prize of war or as a free agent no official in Moscow would say. The Russian announcement last night that she had been ordered out of the port after an inspection of her cargo did not say, either.

Whether she still carried her cargo of tractors, grain and other things consigned to Britain likewise was unknown. (The Danish raido, announcing the ship's release, said the cargo first had been taken off.

Germany has declared that at least part of the cargo was contraband and informed quarters in Berlin insisted that the ship soon would be in a German harbor to await disposition by a prize court.

United States Secretary of State Cordell Hull had demanded that Russia hand over the vessel and cargo to her American crew.

Reports from Tromsö, Norway, where the steamer put in last Friday, already in German hands, indicated that forty-two American seamen were aboard. The ship's radio operator, however, was reported to have slipped ashore with thirty-eight British seamen, survivors of torpedo attacks, whom the City of Flint had picked up before her capture.

Protest To Kremlin By U. S. Envoy Reported

Moscow, Oct. 27 (AP)—Laurence A. Steinhardt, United States Ambassador, was reported tonight to have made representations to the Soviet Russian Government regarding the treatment of the German-seized American freighter City of Flint at Murmansk.

The Ambassador conferred today with the Vice-Commissar of Foreign Affairs, Vladimir P. Potemkin, but failed to obtain further details of the vessel which was held for several days at the Soviet port before being released yesterday under control of a Nazi prize crew.

U. S. Embassy Silent

The United States Embassy remained silent on the unofficial reports that representations had been presented to the Kremlin. The embassy likewise declined to comment on reports that Cordell Hull, Secretary of State, had cabled emphatic instructions to take such action.

Before Steinhardt finally saw Potemkin, he had been unsuccessful in repeated attempts to gain an appointment at the Foreign Office in his quest for information about the City of Flint.

He was said to have learned nothing more than he already had gleaned from the Soviet press—which merely was that the vessel had been freed from Murmansk after an inspection of her cargo.

The embassy spent two days trying to telephone the master of the Flint or some other official at Murmansk. One call got through, but was cut off before there was any conversation.

Route Would Be Costly

Steinhardt nevertheless continued his efforts to pierce the international tangle in which the Flint was involved.

It was expected here the City of Flint would be taken around the entire coast of Scandinavia in neutral waters to avoid the British blockade.

Maritime men said this would be expensive, difficult business because of pilot charges involved. If this route were taken the Germans would have to go from the White Sea into the Arctic Ocean, skirting the shores of Russia and Finland and then coast along Norway into the North Sea, thence through Swedish or Danish waters into the Baltic and on to Germany.

Hull Completely Baffled.

WASHINGTON, Oct. 27 (A. P.).—Secretary Hull said today that he was completely baffled in his efforts to get adequate information from the Russian Government on the City of Flint, which to the State Department has become a veritable mystery ship.

Department officials were unanimous in criticizing the Soviet Government for giving information on the City of Flint through the Soviet news agency some hours before it was delivered to the interested Government, the United States.

Mr. Hull said that Ambassador Laurence A. Steinhardt in Moscow had tried three different methods of getting in touch with the American crew of the City of Flint—telephone, railroad and airplane—and thus far had not been successful in any.

He did not know whether the ship was still at Murmansk, or whether it had left; whether a German or an American flag flew over it, or whether the German prize crew was in command of the ship or whether it had been restored to the American crew.

All he had was a brief Russian agency communique saying that, after the verification of the composition of the cargo of the freighter captured by the Germans, the maritime authorities at Murmansk have issued an order to free the vessel with the obligation to leave the port immediately.

There was a note of bitterness in Mr. Hull's voice as he recounted the efforts of Ambassador Steinhardt.

Mr. Hull seemed to look forward to German prize court proceedings as the only real means of obtaining the whole facts. He said if there is a question of the ownership of the vessel, following its seizure by the Germans, the American Government will be interested in attending the prize court hearings, since the ship belongs to an American Government agency, the Maritime Commission.

Mr. Hull said that the owners of the cargo would undoubtedly be represented likewise at the hearing.

He said this Government has not made any representations in Berlin following the Soviet news agency announcement that the vessel had to leave Murmansk immediately.

President Roosevelt said he lacked sufficient new information for comment on the seizure of the Flint.

Asked why Mr. Steinhardt had been unable to find out when, where and to whom the vessel had been released, the President replied that it was a long way from Moscow to Murmansk.

Envoy's Report From Moscow On City of Flint

Steinhardt Chided Russia for Keeping Him in Dark, Demanded Ship's Release

WASHINGTON, Oct. 27 (AP).—Following is the text of the report on the City of Flint incident, sent to the State Department tonight by Laurence A. Steinhardt, American Ambassador to Russia.

"I have just seen Assistant Commissar of oreign Affairs Potemkin and have vigorously reiterated my indignation at the lack of co-operation by the Soviet government in withholding information from me while issuing communiques with respect to the City of Flint through the medium of the Tass (news) agency.

He replied that Tass was an official agency of the Soviet government and that it was the custom of his government to make announcements through it. I told him that this was no excuse for his failure to keep me informed, particularly in view of my repeated requests for information on behalf of my government, which had been the purpose of my daily visits to him. After a lengthy discussion, I formally demanded that the vessel and cargo be turned over to the American crew and be authorized to depart. He thereupon made the following statement:

"'The City of Flint had come into the port of Murmansk in charge of a German prize crew without any previous knowledge on the part of the Soviet government and through no act on its part. The reason ascribed by the prize crew for the entry was damaged machinery making the ship unseaworthy. When the Soviet authorities at Murmansk judged that the vessel was again fit to put to sea, and being desirous of preserving its neutrality, the Soviet government had ordered the vessel to leave the port of Murmansk immediately under the same conditions as those of her entry, namely, with both the German and American crews on board and her cargo intact.'

"He added that the order would be enforced immediately and that the Soviet government felt that its decision was not only in accordance with the well-recognized principles of international law and consonant with the obligations of a neutral, but it was also the correct position to take as between the conflicting claims of the United States and Germany to possession of the vessel and her cargo, and that by this he meant 'to send her out in the same status as she had entered one of the ports.'

"He said that his government did not consider that it had the right to turn the vessel and her cargo over to the American crew unless the German prize crew refused to take her out, as, in the opinion of his government, to do so would be an unneutral act. In reply to a question, he stated that the decision of the Soviet government to permit the German prize crew to take the vessel to sea was final.

"I then asked him who had verified the alleged damage to the machinery, to which he replied that he had no information on this subject, but assumed this had been done by the authorities at Murmansk.

"I again inquired concerning the welfare of the American crew and he said that it was his understanding that they had been on board the ship all of the time and were well.

"I then referred to my difficulties in making contact with the captain or members of the crew, reciting my repeated attempts to get into communication with them by telegram and telephone, as well as my inability to obtain a plane today. He disclaimed any responsibility for these difficulties, passing over the subject lightly by pointing out that the crew being on board the ship in the roadstead, in conjunction with the average delays in long-distance telephone communication, had probably brought about this 'unfortunate result.'

"I am again endeavoring to complete a telephone connection with the captain of the City of Flint at midnight."

His story to the Bergen newspaper Aftenbladet after his arrival here said that the City of Flint sighted a foreign warship on October 9 which at first was assumed to be British or French, but proved to be the pocket battleship Deutschland. The raider halted the freighter, placed the survivors of the torpedoed British ship aboard, then proceeded to check the cargo, finding "a considerable quantity of oil."

Declaring this was serious, the German commander said that he would not sink the ship, McConnochie related, but placed eighteen Germans on board to take possession. The Scottish radio operator, who had been the first man to pick up the distress signals from the ill-fated British liner Athenia, said that the City of Flint thereupon began a slow, unpleasant trip northward through "terribly cold seas."

En route, he continued, the German crew planted a heavy charge of explosives in the engine room, prepared to blow up the ship if they encountered trouble. Later, they entered an area of floating ice and the Germans painted out the freighter's name, substituting "Alf" for "City of Flint" and painting the Danish flag on the side.

McConnochie said that it was untrue that there was anything wrong either with the engines or navigational facilities of the City of Flint. The ship pursued a dodging course north and east, keeping a sharp lookout for British and French warships, but none was encountered.

McConnochie said that a water shortage developed which forced the freighter to put in at Tromsoe. There, the British survivors were permitted to land. The radio operator said that because of his manner of speech he was able to mix with them and land successfully.

McConnochie said that the American crew members, though worried by their plight, were not treated badly by their German captors and that nothing untoward had happened to any one when he slipped off the ship at Tromsoe.

Scot Who Escaped in Norway Says Nazis Painted Danish Flag on U. S. Ship.

BERGEN, Norway, Oct. 27 (A. P.).—James McConnochie, radio operator of the American freighter City of Flint, declared today that the ships German prize crew took her through ice-strewn waters with explosives planted in the engine room while they flew the Danish flag and repainted the ship's name to "Alf."

McConnochie, a Scot, gave the German captors the slip when they stopped at Tromsoe, Norway, to unload survivors of the British ship Stonegate, sunk by the raider which took the City of Flint captive. Mixing with the British sailors, he managed to get ashore undetected and came to Bergen with them.

Nazis May Free U. S. Crew

[By the Associated Press]

Oslo, Norway, Oct. 27—Unconfirmed reports in Bergen tonight said the German prize crew in charge of the United States freighter City of Flint would land the vessel's American crew there.

The City of Flint, which left Murmansk, Soviet Russian port, yesterday, was reported in Norwegian waters off the country's northernmost shores tonight en route to Germany.

Norwegian Opinion.

OSLO, Oct. 27 (A. P.).—The newspaper Aftenposten today quoted the opinion of Norwegian experts on international law that the American freighter City of Flint, if it appears in Norwegian waters in charge of a German crew, is still to be considered a German prize.

They held it would have the right to navigate territorial waters en route to a German port and that the presence of a navy fighting crew aboard would not subject it to the rules applying to warships.

GERMAN CREW SAILING FLINT TO HAMBURG

Berlin Announces American Craft Is Off Norway at Present Time.

BERLIN, Oct. 27 (A. P.).—Official advices received here tonight said that the American steamship City of Flint was being sailed from Murmansk to Germany under command of a prize crew from the German pocket battleship Deutschland.

The freighter was reported somewhere along the Norwegian coast, heading slowly into the British blockade area.

The vessel, seized as a contraband ship and taken to the Soviet port of Murmansk above the Arctic Circle was released last night by Russia.

Advices reaching Berlin said that the Germans lost no time in lifting anchor for Hamburg, where a prize court was planned to decide on the fate of the ship and her cargo.

[By the Associated Press]

Berlin, Oct. 27—Germany's seizure of the United States steamer City of Flint assumed growing importance today as a possible precedent in future Nazi policies of sea warfare against Britain.

Germans generally regarded that the sea patrol was within the Flint was within its rights, and informed quarters predicted that the vessel and her cargo soon would be in a German harbor as a prize of war.

Fog Should Help Convoy

German submarine commanders said they would have no trouble convoying her from Murmansk down the North Sea and through the British blockade to Hamburg, where a prize court would sit on the complicated questions raised by her capture.

Informed sources said the voyage was considered relatively easy in this season of fog and poor visibility. More ships were arriving at Hamburg these days, they said, than the British suspected.

"Way Up In The Air"

A spokesman of the United States Embassy here said last night that questions involving international law and ultimate disposition of the Flint still were "way up in the air."

Germany had announced no decisions.

The authoritative commentary service, Dienst aus Deutschland, however, disputed an American argument that seizure of the freighter was illegal because less than half of her cargo was contraband. The German view, it said, was that a vessel carrying any contraband at all could be brought in as a prize and that it was up to a prize court to determine what should be done about the non-contraband cargo and the ship herself.

FLINT BOUND FOR HAMBURG, BERLIN SAYS

Nazi Prize Crew Believed Making Perilous Trip Down North Sea

By MELVIN K. WHITELEATHER
Associated Press Correspondent

Berlin, Oct. 27—The American freighter City of Flint which Germany claims as a war prize was reported tonight to be making a precarious voyage down the North Sea toward Hamburg in possession of a German crew.

Official advices received here said the vessel departed from a Russian port of Murmansk where she was taken by a German prize crew put aboard by the pocket battleship Deutschland—promptly after she was released by Soviet authorities.

Adventure Ahead

The possibility that more adventure lay in store for the City of Flint was conceded in naval circles here. The Germans, presumably guarding the ship with submarines and other naval vessels, recognized the dangers of trying to slip through the British blockade, but were counting on bad weather and poor visibility as well as their submarine defense to bring the Flint into a German port.

The official advices said the small freighter was somewhere along the Norwegian coast tonight heading into the British blockade area. She was released by the Russians last night and the Germans were said to have lost no time in lifting anchor for Hamburg.

Up To Prize Court

If she reaches that port a prize court is to decide whether her cargo will be confiscated under the contraband law or returned to its owners.

The prize crew was expected to steer the Flint close to the Norwegian coast to Skagerrak, then down between Copenhagen and Malmo to Kiel Canal and thence to Hamburg, rather than to court trouble with the British by sailing direct through the North Sea to Hamburg.

U-Boats Keeping Watch

Just how the vessel is being convoyed was not disclosed, but it was assumed that submarines and other warships were keeping watch. After the Deutschland's dramatic capture of the vessel and her subsequent wanderings, the Nazis do not want to lose the prize.

Officials said they believed the American crew of forty-one still was aboard the City of Flint, although they lacked definite word of this.

Adolf Hitler has been in Berlin while the City of Flint drama has been unfolding. Today he personally awarded iron crosses to fourteen army officers, eleven generals, one colonel, and two lieutenants for heroism during the Polish campaign.

BRITISH CONCEDE POCKET RAIDERS ARE IN 2 OCEANS

But Place Seizures at Three --Deutschland Was Once Off Newfoundland.

LONDON, Oct. 28 (AP)—British naval authorities said tonight that the German pocket battleships Admiral Scheer and Deutschland were known to have been at sea for a month and to have sunk only three vessels—one a neutral ship.

Fear of British patrols was credited by these authorities with having kept the two raiders from the widely used shipping lanes. It was considered likely that the Admiral Scheer, which had been operating in the South Atlantic, had slipped around Cape Horn into the Pacific Ocean.

The first victim of the Deutschland was said to have been the British ship Stonegate, sunk about 500 miles east of Florida on October 5. When the Deutschland was next heard from she was off Newfoundland on October 12, when a Norwegian ship was stopped, but not sunk.

Two days later the Norwegian ship Lorenz W. Hansen was sunk by the Deutschland near Newfoundland, the naval authorities said. They added that subsequently the Deutschland seized the United States vessel City of Flint and remained with her until she reached Norwegian waters. The crew of the Stonegate was placed aboard the City of Flint.

Meanwhile the British freighter Clement was sunk off the Brazilian coast on September 30 by a surface raider which British forces today identified as the Admiral Scheer, like the Deutschland a 10,000-ton, twenty-six-knot pocket battleship.

Since October 15 there has been no direct word of either of the vessels.

Nazi War Plan Said to Be Ten Air Attacks on England Daily, With Hard Sea Thrusts

LONDON, Oct. 27 (AP)—Two of Germany's three fast, heavily gunned pocket battleships, the Deutschland and the Admiral Scheer, have been ranging the high seas for a month and have sunk at least three ships, British naval authorities said tonight.

It was the first time authorized British spokesmen had accepted previous reports that the Admiral Scheer had been operating in the South Atlantic. Prime Minister Chamberlain told the House of Commons yesterday of the Deutschland's operations.

In the view of the authorities, fear of British sea patrols was keeping the two raiders from the main shipping lanes. There has been no direct word of either raider since Oct. 15, and the Admiral Scheer was believed to have slipped around Cape Horn to the Pacific from the South Atlantic.

The sinking of the British ship Stonegate about 500 miles east of Florida Oct. 5 was said to have been the Deutschland's first victory. The next heard of the Deutschland was that she was off Newfoundland Oct. 12, when a Norwegian ship was stopped but not sunk. Two days later the Norwegian ship Lorentz W. Hansen was sunk by the Deutschland near Newfoundland, the naval authorities said. The Deutschland, they added, subsequently seized the United States vessel City of Flint and remained with her until she reached Norwegian waters. The crew of the Stonegate was placed aboard the City of Flint.

The third victim of the raiders was said to be the British freighter Clement, sunk off the Brazilian Coast Sept. 30 by a surface raider that the British identified as the Admiral Scheer.

Both raiders are 10,000-ton vessels with a cruising range up to 20,000 miles, which could be increased indefinitely with arrangements for refueling.

On the home front, W. S. Morrison, Food Minister, said Britain's food supply against which German raiding is directed was growing. He added that a date for rationing would be fixed soon.

CASTAWAY DECOYS

[By the Associated Press]

Gibraltar, Oct. 27—Five men clinging to the wreckage of a British ship were the unintentional decoys that a German submarine used in sinking her second victim at the same spot, Capt. Norman Rice of the freighter Ledbury declared today.

Rice, with his entire crew of twenty-five and the five earlier castaways, was landed here by the Panamanian freighter Crown City.

Castaways Found

The skipper said that about eighty miles west of Cape Spartel, an African promontory on the Strait of Gibraltar, the Ledbury came upon the five men amid the wreckage Tuesday morning.

Captain Rise said he picked up the men, who proved to be from the Menin Ridge, sunk a little while before by a submarine.

Suddenly the U-boat reappeared and fired at the Ledbury, but missed.

Began Heavy Shelling

"I put the Ledbury's stern toward the submarine," said Captain Rice, and ordered an S O S dispatched.

"Thereupon the submarine commenced shelling the Ledbury heavily. I instantly ordered the crew to abandon ship and I ran to the cabin to secure the ship's papers.

"While I was doing so, a shell burst on the deck underneath, wrecking the cabin. Myself and my whole crew, plus the men from the Menin Ridge, got safely into two lifeboats just as the Ledbury sank, at 10 A. M., stern first.

Sea Propaganda

"The submarine then approached the lifeboats and her commander shouted in good English:

"'It's Winston Churchill (First Lord of the British Admiralty) and the money grabbers of London who want war who are to blame; we don't want war'."

Rise said the Crown City [illegible] three hours later and brought boatloads of men here.

Instructing his radio operator to stand by, he cautiously circled in a calm sea and finally managed to cast a line to one of the men. The others were picked up in a lifeboat. All proved to be seamen from the Menin Ridge, sunk a little while before by a submarine.

U-Boat Reappeared

Suddenly the U-boat reappeared and fired a shot.

"We are all indebted to Captain W. E. Carley of the Crown City and his whole crew for their multiple courtesies," Captain Rice said.

British Remove 50 Bodies From Sunken U-Boat

Divers Kept Busy Off Kent; German Craft Held New, Bigger Than Any Known

DOVER, England, Oct. 27 (AP).—Between fifty and sixty bodies were reported today to have been found by British divers exploring a shattered German submarine [illegible] up yesterday on the Goodwin Sands. The Goodwin Sands are more than five miles out from the Kentish coast, forming a natural breakwater to the Downs roadstead. Heavy firing was heard off the coast there on Wednesday.

One theory was that the submarine was sunk by either depth charges or aerial bombs, and drifted aground. A German submarine was stuck on the sands after becoming entangled in nets in 1917. Half of the crew were saved.

The Goodwin Sands are the storm-tossed wreckage of a once-fertile island. Known as Lomea, it was the home of Earl Godwin, or Godwine, in the eleventh century, when England was a Saxon land. William the Conqueror confiscated the estate and gave it to the Abbey of St. Augustine at Canterbury.

Tradition holds that funds for maintaining seawalls of the island were diverted by the abbey to build the steeple of Tenterden Church, in the Kentish town of that name. As a result, the island was swept away by a storm in 1099. Ever since, the treacherous sands left have been a bane of mariners. An old maxim of the countryside runs: "Tenterden steeple was the cause of Goodwin Sands."

SIZE OF NAZI SCOUT UNITS FOUND BIGGER

Artillery Fire On Both Sides Reported Growing Heavier

Allies Expect Enemy Offensive As Soon As Weather Improves

By H. TAYLOR HENRY
Associated Press Correspondent

Paris, Oct. 27—Clashes of increasing intensity between German and French combat patrols were reported tonight on the Western Front between the Rhine and the Moselle rivers.

Reports from the front said the Germans were strengthening their patrol action, which was said to be passing from a preliminary reconnaissance phase, in which groups of four or five scouts were used, to action involving combat patrols of about fifty men. The fighting was about equally divided between French and German soil and carried on in bitterly cold weather.

Patrols More Active

The night communique told of increasing activity of advance guards in contact along the one-hundred-mile front and added that artillery fire from both sides was increasing.

Some points of no man's land, which varies from about 500 yards to a mile and a half in width, are almost entirely within France, while others are on the German side of the frontier.

The German combat patrols were said to be led by Grenzeschultze troops who are natives of the frontier region and know every forest trail and every hill and valley.

Report Studied

The French studied carefully reports of their intelligence service on German troop dispositions for indications of the Germans' intentions. These reports said the Nazi forces were in six great concentrations running from the Italian frontier to Denmark with one in reserve.

The French reported the disposition of the Germans about as follows: The southernmost group facing the Swiss frontier and spreading northward; the second along France's Rhineland frontier on the southern flank of the front; the third along the northern flank between the Rhine and the Moselle; the fourth along the Belgian and Netherland frontiers; the fifth on the North Sea, and the sixth forming a great reserve in central Germany.

Many On Swiss Border

The French were said to be studying particularly the reported concentrations facing Switzerland and on the northern flank. They reported there were twenty-one divisions of between 12,000 and 15,000 men each, on the Swiss frontier. Four army corps of three divisions each were reported massed between Basel and Lake Constance and three corps of three divisions each stationed from the lake south to Italy.

Because of the cold and flooded conditions in some parts of the front, French observers expressed doubt that a German drive would be immediate, although they said they expected it as soon as the weather improved.

Overalls for "Ladies From Hell"

WITH THE BRITISH EXPEDITIONARY FORCE IN FRANCE, Oct. 27 (AP)—Scottish troops were digging in today along a reserve line under the eyes of Lord Gort, commander in chief of the British expeditionary force.

Scottish units which won fame in the World War took pride in the name said to have been given them then by the Germans, "the ladies from hell." But the "ladies from hell" will not be ladies much longer. Some time in the next two weeks they are to take off their kilts and stick their legs into the overalls of the British Army's new battle dress. They don't like the idea much, although they still will be allowed to wear the kilt for ceremonials and on leave.

Whatever their dress, the troops are a tough and seasoned lot. Their trench, dug in twenty hours, was a marvel of neatness and efficiency. When Gen. Gort jumped down to inspect it he couldn't find anything to ask except "what's the ruling on sandbag seams—in or out?"

"In, sir," a sergeant answered.

Just three out of 100 or more sandbags had the seams out.

DANES REPORT NAVAL BATTLE OFF THE COAST

Ministry of Marine Denies Any Engagement in Seiero Area.

HEAVY GUNFIRE IS RUMORED

Islanders Say Warships Went Behind Smoke Screens and Planes Soared Above.

COPENHAGEN, Oct. 27 (A. P.).—Reports from Seiero Island that inhabitants there saw a naval battle involving planes and warships were received in Copenhagen this afternoon, but the Ministry of Marine denied that there was any such action in the area. The Ministry said that it had telephoned to Coast Guard stations in the vicinity and heard that nothing had been seen except a lone airplane, which had passed during the afternoon.

Advices from Seiero Island had said that the inhabitants reported a naval battle had begun off the coast at about 1 P. M. (7 A. M. Eastern standard time). They said that they heard heavy cannonading and saw a number of warships, mostly hidden behind clouds of smoke, and about a dozen warplanes.

The battle was reported continuing an hour later. Seiero Island is in the Kattegat, the narrow bottleneck between Denmark and Sweden linking the North and the Baltic Seas.

Swedish Telegraph Agency reports ... that activity of the German fleet in Baltic waters had increased in the last few days. They said that three German cruisers accompanied by airplanes had cruised the waters between the Gotland and Oeland islands—in the Baltic Sea on the east coast of Scandinavia—but reported no violations of Scandinavian neutrality.

Gotland is of great strategic importance, lying on the main north-south route of Baltic trade. Its harbor, Visby, is a Swedish naval base and its topography is well adapted for airfields. It is only forty-five minutes by air from the new Russian air and naval bases in Estonia and Latvia.

GERMAN COMMUNIQUE

Berlin, Oct. 27 (AP)—The high command today issued the following communique:

"Between the Moselle River and the Warndt Forest there was livelier artillery activity at several points.

"On the remaining front, only local scouting troop action and isolated annoyance fire."

RUSS GRAIN TO NAZIS

Berlin, Oct. 27 (AP)—German front pages today were devoted primarily to the arrival here of a Russian trade delegation and the conclusion of a deal at Moscow by which Russia agreed to deliver 1,000,000 tons of fodder and grain to Germany within the next two months.

Adolf Hitler's Völkischer Beobachter, after praising what it called quick, systematic Russian-German cooperation, said the agreement would silence those who "doubted the seriousness and willingness of the German and Soviet Governments for productive cooperation."

Millions Of Hogs

The newspaper added that "Russian grain, together with imports from Rumania, permits us to fatten an additional 2,000,000 to 4,000,000 hogs," and would mean more liberal fat and pork rations.

This is a matter of prime importance to Germany, which, in 1915, was compelled to slaughter many head of hogs for lack of fodder, a blow from which she did not recover throughout the World War.

German sources expressed belief theer was no possible source of friction between Berlin and Moscow over the German contraband list.

Germany had offered to let Soviet ships pass unmolested to England in fulfillment of the British-Russian trade agreement, provided such trade was in non-contraband goods only.

BROMBERG, Germany (formerly Bydgoszcz, Poland), Oct. 27 (AP).—Nazi Commissioner Kampe issued a decree today providing that Poles in this conquered area should be treated as inferiors, and in stores, factories and public buildings should be accommodated only after Germans.

German is the official language, and the Poles may not display the Swastika flag.

"Germans (Volksgenossen) who have German identification cards must be given the preference in every way," the announcement said.

The wearing of Polish uniforms and caps is forbidden.

The decree also provided that all foreign exchange must be delivered to German authorities by Oct. 31.

Order To Saturnia By Britain Reported Canceled By Italy

Rome, Oct. 27 (AP)—Reliable reports tonight said the Italian liner Saturnia was en route to Italy from Gibraltar after the British Government had countermanded a British order to her captain to proceed to England with what Gibraltar authorities declared a contrabrand cargo.

One source said the ship had started to England but upon receiving the order from Italy turned back to Gibraltar, unloaded iron and copper which authorities there believed was destined for Czecho-Slovakia, then headed for Naples.

Mrs. William Phillips, wife of the United States Ambassador to Rome, was aboard the Saturnia. Out of New York, the ship was due at Naples Tuesday but had been held up by the lengthy examination of the British authorities at Gibraltar.

Italy Plans To Spend $873,800,000 On Arms

Rome, Oct. 27 (AP)—Fascist Italy celebrated the eve of the seventeenth anniversary of the Black Shirt march on Rome today by tossing about $873,800,000 into the world armament race.

The Government's announcement that it would spend 17,476,000,000 lire on Italy's military might in a new arms program, brought Fascist army, navy and air force expenditures to 133,281,000,000 lire (currently about $6,694,000,000) in seventeen years.

Italy And Britain Sign Pact

At the same time Italy and Britain moved to improve trade relations by signing an agreement establishing a permanent commission to regulate commercial affairs between the two countries.

The new arms expenditure program came as Fascists planned to celebrate the seventeenth anniversary of their climb to power.

The celebration will be marked by three steps toward gaining a greater nation, Fascist leaders announced.

The Ministry of Agriculture will inaugurate the second block of one hundred farms in the Apulia "heel" area of Italy—farms created by cutting up large estates.

French Resume Train Traffic in No-Man's Land

Swiss Gape as First Freight Since Beginning of War Puffs Calmly Into Basel

BASEL, Switzerland, Oct. 27 (AP).—The arrival of a French train, which steamed right through no-mans-land, caused more excitement in this border city today than all the reports of impending big offensives on the western front.

A guard at the deserted French side of the international station saw the train coming up from France and did a Paul Revere dash to the Swiss side to gasp out the news to the authorities.

An amazed crowd gathered to watch the engine roll calmly in with its long line of freight cars. The dusty international station had not heard a single railroad whistle since it was closed at the end of August.

The train had come from Mulhouse through the no-man's-land between the Maginot Line and the big guns of the German forts, which are across the Rhine almost within slingshot distance of the tracks. The civilian population had been moved out of the area long since, and now it is filled with soldiers, barbed wire, anti-tank fields and machine-gun nests.

The engineer swung down from the cab with a nonchalance he soon lost under the excited questioning of railroad officials.

"We had a lot of stuff consigned to Switzerland sitting in the freight station at Mulhouse, so I thought I might as well bring it along," he said.

Swiss President Is Neutral

BASLE, Switzerland, Oct. 27 (AP)—President Philipp Etter guards Swiss neutrality—even when it comes to free cigarettes. Visiting Swiss frontier posts today, he gave cigarettes to his soldiers, passed the packages along the line to French soldiers guarding the pass and then made the same gesture to Germans patrolling their section of the border.

Belgian Newspaper Confiscated

BRUSSELS, Belgium, Oct. 27 (AP)—Belgian police today confiscated copies of the weekly Brussels review, Pourquoi Pas, apparently because of an illustrated article on the German Ambassador to Belgium. The review has acknowledged strong French sympathies, and one of its two editors is stationed permanently in Paris.

The Foreign Minister yesterday told a Senate committee that government action would be taken against papers that failed to observe strict neutrality.

Erkko Exhorts People to Have Confidence and Courage.

HELSINKI, Oct. 27 (A. P.).—The Finnish people have been assured that theirs will be the final decision on any bargain with Russia. Foreign Minister Elias Erkko, addressing a patriotic meeting last night in the State Theater, appealed for confidence and courage, saying, "The people of Finland must decide their own future and choose their own path."

Finland's aged President, Kyoesti Kallio, seated in a box in the balcony, brought the meeting to a close by rising and calling for "Three cheers for Finland."

Seated in the audience was the delegation headed by Dr. Juho Kusti Paasikivi, which returned from its second trip to Moscow and reported yesterday on Russian demands which Finland has found unacceptable. Dr. Paasikivi's group is expected to go to Moscow again on Sunday.

Erkko's speech, the longest exposition of the situation since Russia started the negotiations, referred to countries "wiped off the map of Europe," but mentioned no names. The Foreign Minister said that "relations between Finland and the country which inaugurated these questions are capable of improvement."

"These relations," he declared, "have been normal, but the history of many centuries has undeniably created a basis for suspicion which prevails in the present day on both sides of the frontier. We must utilize to the full any means which would strengthen the security of both countries and we have regarded those in power as different from those of former days—perhaps they will show of their own free will that conditions have altered."

Finland, before declaring her independence in 1918, was a grand duchy of Czarist Russia. Erkko intimated that Russia was using the present European war as an argument in favor of concessions from Finland, saying, "Independent factors have created this situation which makes possible such questions as under normal conditions would be out of the question—of which even the slightest indications would have given rise to tension in international relations."

Finland, he said, has shown the world that she is a peace loving country and that she is not afraid to discuss questions which affect her very closely and that she desires to find a basis by means of which her security may be strengthened. But this does not mean she is prepared to sacrifice what she considers essential for her freedom and existence."

Finns Ponder Demands Of Russia Amid Blackout

Raid Rehearsal Held as Council Prepares Cabinet Report

HELSINGFORS, Oct. 27 (AP).—In the darkness of an air-raid rehearsal, the Cabinet inner council studied tonight Finland's course in her negotiations with Soviet Russia, for a report to the full Cabinet tomorrow. Foreign Minister Eljas Erkko passed the day studying the Russian proposals and preparing material for tomorrow's Cabinet session.

Members of the delegation to Moscow, headed by Dr. Juho Kusti Paasikivi, were not present at the inner council meeting.

The delegation was expected to return to the Soviet capital Sunday for a third series of conferences on the Kremlin's reported demands for certain strategic islands in the Gulf of Finland and in the Gulf of Bothnia.

Vilna Occupied By Lithuanians After 19 Years

Boundary Posts Burned as Province Lost to Poles Is Given Back by Reds

KAUNAS, Lithuania, Oct. 27 (AP).—Boundary posts which for nineteen years had separated Lithuania from her lost province of Vilna (Wilno) were solemnly burned today as Lithuanian troops began entering Vilna territory.

The province, containing the city of the same name which Lithuanians consider their ancient capital, was returned to Lithuania by the recent Russian-Lithuanian mutual aid pact. Seized by Poles from Lithuania in 1920, it was occupied by the Russian Army in the German-Russian partition of Poland.

Gen. Stasys Rastikis, commander in chief of the Lithuanian Army, and members of the Lithuanian Cabinet were present as the frontier posts were burned and troops began marching to the accompaniment of martial music, cheers and rockets.

Gen. Vitkauskas, commander of troops designated to garrison Vilna, ordered the march to the capital, which is to be entered tomorrow.

Simultaneously, the liberty bell in Kaunas, gift of Lithuanians in the United States, rang for the first time to celebrate recovery of the lost province.

CANADA EARMARKS COPPER FOR BRITAIN

Major Producers Agree to Ship 420,000,000 Pounds a Year

OTTAWA, Oct. 27 (Canadian Press).—Major Canadian copper producers are making agreements with the British Ministry of Supply to supply 420,000,000 pounds of electrolytic copper over an approximate period of a year for Great Britain's war-time requirements, the Prime Minister's office said tonight.

This amount represents about 80 per cent of the current output of the contracting producers. Adequate provision has been made for the protection of domestic requirements.

The contracting producers and the amount to be supplied by each follow: International Nickel Company, 237,700,000 pounds; Noranda Mines, Ltd., 69,700,000; Hudson Bay Mining and Smelting Company, 50,700,000; Sherritt Gordon, 23,800,000; Waite-Amulet, 23,800,000; Aldermac, 7,900,000; Normetal, 6,400,000.

The announcement said that the price is close to that prevailing at the outbreak of war.

On Sept. 2 the price of electrolytic copper in North American markets was about 11 cents a pound. [illegible] the first year's order [illegible] British Government worth $46,200,000.

Delivery will be at Canadian ports with costs and risks thereafter assumed by the purchaser. Payments will be made wholly in Canada in Canadian currency.

The agreements are subject to renewal by the British Government for the duration of the war.

Moscow, Oct. 27 (AP).—Tass, the official Soviet news agency, today reported that the new National Assembly for Western Ukraine, part of the former Polish territory occupied by Russia in connection with the German invasion, had elected Joseph Stalin as honorary chairman.

The first meeting of the assembly was held yesterday at Lvov (Lwow).

Turks Believe Nazi Envoy May Not Return.

ANKARA, Turkey, Oct. 27 (A. The Ambassador left just before the pact was signed to report to Adolf Hitler in Berlin.

Turks, meanwhile, said that they believed that what they called his "diplomatic failure" in not detaching Turkey from the Anglo-French front meant his permanent recall.

MOSCOW, Oct. 27 (A. P.).—The Soviet Army newspaper Red Star, today charged that [illegible] of English and French imperialists to convert the war in Western Europe into a world war are meeting with active support on the part of reactionary circles in the United States.

"The American bourgeois press is striving to conceal from the people the imperialist aims of the war.

"Attempts to silence the Communist party of the United States and arrest of its general secretary, Comrade Browder (Earl Browder, under Federal indictment in New York on a charge of using a fake passport) is direct proof of what the policies and intention of American reactionaries are," the army journal said.

NIGHT LEAD POPE (BUDGET)

OCT 28 1939

BY CHARLES H.GUPTILL

CASTEL GANDOLFO,OCT 27-(AP)-POPE PIUS XII, IN THE FIRST ENCYCLICAL OF HIS PONTIFICATE, TODAY ASSAILED GOVERNMENTS IN WHICH CIVIL AUTHORITY "PUTS ITSELF IN THE PLACE OF THE ALMIGHTY AND ELEVATES THE STATE OR GROUP INTO THE LAST END OF LIFE."

"IT IS QUITE TRUE THAT POWER BASED ON SUCH WEAK AND UNSTEADY FOUNDATIONS CAN ATTAIN AT TIMES UNDER CHANCE CIRCUMSTANCES MATERIAL SUCCESSES APT TO AROUSE WONDER IN SUPERFICIAL OBSERVERS," HE ACKNOWLEDGED.

"BUT THE MOMENT COMES," HE WARNED, "WHEN THE INEVITABLE LAW TRIUMPHS, WHICH STRIKES DOWN ALL THAT HAS BEEN CONSTRUCTED UPON A HIDDEN OR OPEN DISPROPORTION BETWEEN THE GREATNESS OF THE MATERIAL AND OUTWARD SUCCESS AND THE WEAKNESS OF THE INWARD VALUE AND OF ITS MORAL FOUNDATION."

THE PONTIFF, WHO SAID HIS FIRST ENCYCLICAL WAS "DIRECTED TO THE WHOLE CHRISTIAN PEOPLE SCATTERED OVER THE WORLD," OFFERED HIS CONSOLATION TO CONQUERED POLAND, CONDEMNED TREATY VIOLATIONS AND RESORTS TO FORCE AND OFFERED HIS SUPPORT FOR PEACE EFFORTS.

HE EXPRESSED THE BELIEF THAT POLAND--"OUR DEAR POLAND," HE CALLED THE DISMEMBERED NATION--WOULD RISE ANEW AS HE CALLED FOR "THE GENEROUS AND BROTHERLY SYMPATHY OF THE WHOLE WORLD" WHILE THE POLES AWAITED "THE HOUR OF A RESURRECTION IN HARMONY WITH THE PRINCIPLES OF JUSTICE AND TRUE PEACE."

OCT 28 1939

HIS HOLINESS OBSERVED THAT "THE DREAD TEMPEST OF WAR IS ALREADY RAGING DESPITE ALL OUR EFFORTS TO AVERT IT" AND GAVE THE PLEDGE:

"WHATEVER WE CAN DO TO HASTEN THE DAY WHEN THE DOVE OF PEACE MAY FIND ON THIS EARTH, SUBMERGED IN A DELUGE OF DISCORD, SOMEWHERE TO ALIGHT, WE SHALL CONTINUE TO DO X X X."

THE PONTIFF CAUTIONED, HOWEVER, AGAINST ATTEMPTS TO IMPOSE SACRIFICES AND SUFFERING ON THE CONQUERED WHICH WOULD LEAD TO NEW WARS.

"SAFETY DOES NOT COME TO PEOPLES FROM EXTERNAL MEANS, FROM THE SWORD, WHICH CAN IMPOSE CONDITIONS OF PEACE BUT DOES NOT CREATE PEACE," HE SAID. "FORCES THAT ARE TO RENEW THE FACE OF THE EARTH SHOULD PROCEED FROM WITHIN, FROM THE SPIRIT."

HE SAID HE RECOGNIZED THAT TIME AND CIRCUMSTANCES MIGHT CREATE A CASE FOR REVISION OF A TREATY TO REMOVE INJUSTICES BUT HE DECLARED ANY SUCH MODIFICATION SHOULD BE DONE BY PEACEFUL DISCUSSION, NOT FORCE.

HE ADDED THAT IN HIS WORK FOR PEACE HE WAS TRUSTING IN THOSE "WHO CALLED NOT FOR JUSTICE ALONE BUT FOR LOVE AND MERCY."

THE ENCYCLICAL WILL BE KNOWN AS THE "SUMMI PONTIFICATUS," THE FIRST TWO WORDS OF THE LATIN TEXT, MEANING "THE SUPREME PONTIFICATE'S."

IT BORE THE DATE OCT.20, 1939, AND CASTEL GANDOLFO, THE POPE'S SUMMER RESIDENCE IN THE ALBAN HILLS, WAS GIVEN AS THE PLACE OF ISSUE. ONLY ONE OTHER ENCYCLICAL BORE CASTEL GANDOLFO AS THE PLACE OF ISSUE, AN ENCYCLICAL ON THE ROSARY TWO YEARS AGO BY THE LATE PIUS XI.

OCT 28 1939

PIUS XII PLANNED TO RETURN TO THE VATICAN TOMORROW FROM HIS SUMMER RESIDENCE FOR THE CONSECRATION OF 12 MISSIONARY BISHOPS ON SUNDAY, THE FEAST OF CHRIST THE KING.

THE FASCIST PRESS TODAY GAVE ONLY A COLUMN SUMMARY OF THE ENCYCLICAL BUT ITALIANS FOUND THE FULL TEXT IN THE VATICAN NEWSPAPER, L'OSSERVATORE ROMANO.

XXX L'OSSERVATORE ROMANO.

HIS HOLINESS SPOKE OF "A WORLD IN ALL TOO DIRE NEED OF HELP AND GUIDANCE," OF A WORLD WHICH, HE SAID, "PREOCCUPIED WITH THE WORSHIP OF THE EPHEMERAL, HAS LOST ITS WAY AND SPENT ITS FORCES IN A VAIN SEARCH AFTER EARTHLY IDEALS."

"IN THE RECOGNITION OF THE ROYAL PREROGATIVES OF CHRIST AND IN THE RETURN OF INDIVIDUALS AND OF SOCIETY TO THE LAW OF HIS TRUTH AND OF HIS LOVE," HE SAID, "LIES THE ONLY WAY TO SALVATION."

HE SAID THAT FOR THE NEW ORDER OF THE WORLD INTERNATIONAL RELATIONS MUST REST "ON THE SOLID ROCK OF NATURAL LAW AND OF DIVINE REVELATION."

TREATIES MAY BE REVISED WHEN CHANGING CIRCUMSTANCES DICTATE, HE SAID, BUT FOR ANYONE "TACITLY TO ASSUME THE AUTHORITY OF RESCINDING THEM UNILATERALLY WHEN THEY ARE NO LONGER TO ONE'S ADVANTAGE WOULD BE TO ABOLISH ALL MUTUAL TRUST AMONG STATES."

AN ECHO OF OLD CONFLICTS BETWEEN THE VATICAN AND ITALY AND GERMANY OVER THE EDUCATION OF YOUTH WAS SOUNDED IN THE ENCYCLICAL.

OCT 28 1939

OCCASIONALLY IN THE PAST FASCIST YOUTH PROGRAMS HAVE DRAWN COMPLAINTS FROM CHURCHMEN THAT THE GROWTH OF SPIRITUAL EDUCATION WAS SUBORDINATED TO POLITICAL CONSIDERATIONS.

IN ONE OF THE MOST OUTSPOKEN PORTIONS OF THE ENCYCLICAL, PIUS XII DECLARED THE INDISPENSABLE PRESUPPOSITION OF PEACEFUL INTERCOURSE AMONG NATIONS WAS A "NATIONAL TRUST."

THIS MEANT, HE SAID, THE "EFFECTIVE CONVICTION EACH PARTY WILL RESPECT ITS PLIGHTED WORD."

THE PONTIFF SAID TWO ERRORS WERE RESPONSIBLE FOR DISTURBING THE PEACEFUL INTERCOURSE OF PEOPLES.

FIRST, HE SAID, WAS "FORGETFULNESS OF THE LAW OF UNIVERSAL CHARITY--OF THAT CHARITY WHICH ALONE CAN CONSOLIDATE PEACE BY EX-TINGUISHING HATRED AND SOFTENING ENVIES AND DISSENSIONS."

THE SECOND HE DESCRIBED AS THAT "CONTAINED IN THOSE IDEAS WHICH DO NOT HESITATE TO DIVORCE CIVIL AUTHORITY FROM EVERY KIND OF DEPENDENCE UPON THE SUPREME BEING."

A63

"ONCE THE AUTHORITY OF GOD AND THE SWAY OF HIS LAW ARE DENIED IN THIS WAY," HE SAID, "THE CIVIL AUTHORITY AS AN INEVITABLE RESULT TENDS TO ATTRIBUTE TO ITSELF THAT ABSOLUTE AUTONOMY WHICH BELONGS EXCLUSIVELY TO THE SUPREME MAKER.

"LEGITIMATE AND WELL-ORDERED LOVE OF OUR NATION AND COUNTRY," THE PONTIFF ADMONISHED, "SHOULD NOT MAKE US CLOSE OUR EYES TO THE ALL EMBRACING NATURE OF CHRISTIAN CHARITY.

ENCYCLICAL (PMS BUDGET)

VATICAN CITY,OCT.27-(AP)-POPE PIUS XII WAS EXPECTED TO APPEAL FOR PEACE IN ISSUING TODAY THE FIRST ENCYCLICAL OF HIS REIGN.

HIS MESSAGE WAS NOT DIVULGED IN ADVANCE OF THE TIME SET FOR PUBLICATION--NOON (6 A.M., EST)--BUT IT WAS UNDERSTOOD TO HAVE BEEN REVISED AT DIFFERENT TIMES IN RECENT WEEKS IN THE FACE OF RAPIDLY CHANGING SITUATIONS IN WAR-RIDDEN EUROPE.

THE POPE, WRITING IN LONGHAND, RECAST IT THREE TIMES BEFORE GIVING IT TO MONSIGNOR ANTONIO BACCI, THE PAPAL SECRETARY OF BRIEFS, FOR TRANSLATION INTO LATIN.

THE POPE'S LAST WORDS ON THE EVE OF THE ENCYCLICAL CONTAINED A PLEA FOR "THAT PEACE WHICH WE WOULD LIKE TO SEE SHINE OVER THE WHOLE FACE OF THE EARTH."

THE PONTIFF TOLD THE POLICE GUARD AT CASTEL GANDOLFO, THE SUMMER PALACE WHERE HE STILL IS SOJOURNING, THAT HIS HEART KNEW NO BOUNDS, NO RANCOR OR HATRED BUT "BEATS FOR ALL."

THE ENCYCLICAL, WHICH VATICAN OFFICIALS ESTIMATED WOULD BE ABOUT 10,000 WORDS LONG, HAS BEEN TRANSLATED INTO HALF A DOZEN OR MORE LANGUAGES BY A CORPS OF PRIESTS.

THE VATICAN RADIO ARRANGED BROADCASTS OF SUMMARIES IN ENGLISH, FRENCH, GERMAN, SPANISH AND POSSIBLY IN POLISH.

THE POPE, ALTHOUGH HINDERED BY RAPID WIRE CHANGES IN WAR TORN EUROPE, PREPARED HIS FIRST ENCYCLICAL SOONER THAN HIS PREDECESSOR, PIUS XI.

THE LATE POPE PIUS PUBLISHED HIS FIRST ANCYCLICAL, "URBI ARCANO," LIKEWISE A PLEA FOR PEACE, ONLY SLIGHTLY LESS THAN TEN MONTHS AFTER HE ASCENDED THE THRONE OF ST.PETER. THE PRESENT PONTIFF HAS BEEN IN OFFICE LESS THAN EIGHT MONTHS.

ALTHOUGH ENCYCLICALS WERE INSTITUTED BY INNOCENT XII AT THE END OF THE 16th CENTURY, IT WAS ONLY DURING THE LAST SIX PONTIFICATES, BEGINNING WITH THE REIGN OF POPE PIUS IX AT THE END OF THE LAST CENTURY, THAT THE MOST IMPORTANT UTTERANCES OF THE HOLY SEE HAVE BEEN ISSUED IN THAT FORM.

OCT 28 1939

A7

AS THE NAME INDICATES, ENCYCLICALS ARE CIRCULAR LETTERS IN WHICH THE POPE COMMUNICATES SOME IDEA TO BISHOPS, ADDRESSING THEM ALWAYS AS "VENERABLE BROTHERS." THUS THEY DIFFER FROM PASTORAL LATTERS

WHICH ARE ADDRESSED BY THE BISHOP TO HIS FLOCK.

ENCYCLICALS GENERALLY CONCERN MATTERS AFFECTING THE WELFARE OF THE CHURCH AT LARGE, CONDEMNING SOME PREVALENT FORM OF ERROR, POINTING OUT DANGERS WHICH THREATEN FAITH OR MORALS, EXHORTING THE FAITHFUL TO CONSTANCY OR PRESCRIBING REMEDIES FOR EVILS.

THOSE OF POPE PIUS XI, FOR INSTANCE, DEALT WITH SUCH SUBJECTS AS WAR, PEACE, MISSIONS, COMMUNISM, MOVIES, MARRIAGE, SOCIAL PROBLEMS, THE HOLY SEE'S RELATIONS WITH FASCIST ITALY AND THE POSITION OF THE CATHOLIC CHURCH IN SPAIN, MEXICO, RUSSIA AND GERMANY.

PAPAL WRITINGS ARE DIVIDED INTO CONSTITUTIONS OR DOCUMENTS DECIDING GENERAL POINTS OF FAITH OR DISCIPLINE; RESCRIPTS, WHICH ARE SIMILAR DOCUMENTS APPLICABLE TO AN INDIVIDUAL CASE; BRIEFS AND BULLS, WHICH ARE LETTERS ADDRESSED TO A SOVEREIGN, SOCIETY OR INDIVIDUAL; AND APOSTOLIC LETTERS. AMONG THE APOSTOLIC LETTERS ARE THE ENCYCLICAL AND MOTU PROPRIO.

OCT 28 1939

THE ENCYCLICAL IS PREPARED WITH THE AID OF THE SECRETARY OF BRIEFS, WHO AT PRESENT IS MONSIGNOR BACCI. IT IS HE WHO PUTS THE DOCUMENT INTO FINAL LATIN FORM. THE MOTU PROPRIO IS MORE PERSONAL IN ITS PREPARATION BY THE POPE. PAPAL BULLS ARE DISTINGUISHED FROM OTHER FORMS OF PONTIFICAL DOCUMENTS BY LEADEN SEALS APPENDED TO THEM ALTHOUGH NOW THESE ARE SOMETIMES REPLACED BY A SIMPLE STAMP IN RED INK TO FACILITATE TRANSMISSION BY MAIL.

THE PRESENT POPE IS THE FOURTH CONSECUTIVE PONTIFF TO OPEN HIS REIGN WITH A PEACE ENCYCLICAL.

POPE PIUS X CAME TO THE PAPAL THRONE IN 1903 WHEN THERE WAS NO WAR BUT GREAT PEACE ACTIVITY, INCLUDING DIPLOMATIC DISCUSSIONS RESULTING IN THE PEACE CONFERENCE PROPOSED BY CZAR NICHOLAS OF RUSSIA AND INSTITUTION OF THE INTERNATIONAL COURT OF ARBITRATION AT THE HAGUE.

THE POPE ADMONISHED THAT ALL THIS TALK WOULD BE IN VAIN IF IT WERE NOT FOUNDED ON THE THOUGHT OF GOD AND JUSTICE.

POPE BENEDICT XV SUCCEEDED TO THE PAPACY WITH THE WORLD WAR ALREADY RAGING. HIS FIRST ENCYCLICAL WAS A PLEA FOR PEACE.

POPE PIUS XI, IMMEDIATE PREDECESSOR OF THE PRESENT PONTIFF, DEDICATED HIS FIRST ENCYCLICAL TO A PROGRAM OF "THE PEACE OF CHRIST IN THE REIGN OF CHRIST," A FAMOUS MOTTO WHICH HE ANNOUNCED IN A CONSISTORY.

ENCYCLICAL SEPARATE

CASTEL GANDOLFO,OCT 27-(AP)-SOME OF THE SIGNIFICANT PASSAGES IN THE FIRST ENCYCLICAL OF POPE PIUS XII, ISSUED TODAY:

FORGETFULNESS OF THE LAW OF UNIVERSAL CHARITY--OF THAT CHARITY WHICH ALONE CAN CONSOLIDATE PEACE BY EXTINGUISHING HATRED AND SOFTENING ENVIES AND DISSENSIONS--IS THE SOURCE OF VERY GRAVE EVILS FOR PEACEFUL RELATIONS BETWEEN NATIONS.

AS WE REVIEW FROM THE STANDPOINT OF ETERNITY THE PAST FORTY YEARS IN THEIR EXTERIOR EVENTS AND INTERIOR DEVELOPMENTS X X X WE SEE EVER MORE CLEARLY THE SACRED SIGNIFICANCE OF THAT CONSECRATION OF MANKIND TO CHRIST THE KING X X X TO A WORLD WHICH, PRECCUPIED WITH THE WORSHIP OF THE EPHEMERAL, HAS LOST ITS WAY AND SPENT ITS FORCES IN A VAIN SEARCH AFTER EARTHLY IDEALS.

THE IDEA WHICH CREDITS THE STATE WITH UNLIMITED AUTHORITY IS NOT SIMPLY AN ERROR HARMFUL TO THE INTERNAL LIFE OF NATIONS X X X BUT LIKEWISE IT INJURES THE RELATIONS BETWEEN PEOPLES X X X ROBS THE LAW OF NATIONS OF ITS FOUNDATION AND VIGOR, LEADS TO VIOLATION OF OTHERS' RIGHTS AND IMPEDES AGREEMENT AND PEACEFUL INTERCOURSE.

WHERE THE DEPENDENCE OF HUMAN RIGHT UPON DIVINE RIGHT IS DENIED, WHERE APPEAL IS MADE ONLY TO SOME INSECURE IDEA OF A MERELY HUMAN AUTHORITY AND AN AUTONOMY IS CLAIMED WHICH RESTS ONLY UPON A UTILITARIAN MORALITY, THERE HUMAN LAW ITSELF JUSTLY FORFEITS IN ITS MORE WEIGHTY APPLICATION THE MORAL FORCE WHICH IS THE ESSENTIAL CONDITION FOR ITS ACKNOWLEDGMENT AND ALSO FOR ITS DEMAND OF SACRIFICES.

TO CONSIDER THE STATE AS SOMETHING ULTIMATE TO WHICH EVERYTHING ELSE SHOULD BE SUBORDINATED AND DIRECTED CANNOT FAIL TO HARM THE TRUE AND LASTING PROSPERITY OF NATIONS.

A155 Adds Castel Gandolfo - Oct. 27 (Offcl. Summary)

IT WOULD BE A CRIME LESE MAJESTY AGAINST THE KING OF KINGS. AND MOST BITTER WOULD BE ITS FRUITS.

IF THIS ERROR--AS THE PONTIFF OBSERVES--BRINGS HARM TO THE INTERNAL LIFE OF NATIONS IT IS EQUALLY HARMFUL TO THE RELATIONS AMONG PEOPLES SINCE IT GOES COUNTER TO THE UNITY OF SUPERNATURAL SOCIETY, CUTS AWAY THE FOUNDATIONS AND VALUES OF INTERNATIONAL LAW, LEADS TO VIOLATING RIGHTS OF OTHERS.

THE HUMAN RACE ALTHOUGH DIVIDED INTO SOCIAL GROUPS, NATIONS OR INDEPENDENT STATES, NEVERTHELESS IS BOUND BY MORAL AND JURIDICAL TIES WHICH ARE ORDAINED FOR THE WELFARE OF ALL. MUTUAL CONFIDENCE, PREVISION AND PERSUASION OF RECIPROCAL FIDELITY TO PLIGHTED WORD, CONVICTION THAT BETTER IS WISDOM THAN WEAPONS OF WAR ARE INDISPENSABLE PRESUPPOSITIONS AND TO ALL PEACEFUL NEIGHBORLINESS AMONG PEOPLES.

OCT 28 1939

2 INTERNATIONAL LAW CANNOT BE TORN AWAY FROM THE ANCHOR OF DIVINE LAW WITHOUT ABANDONING IT TO THE CAPRICE OF PRIVATE INTERESTS OR COLLECTIVE EGOISM THUS OPENING THE DOOR TO THE DOMINATION OF FORCE GIVING LEGAL STANDING TO ACCOMPLISHED FACT WHICH IS INCONSISTENT WITH TREATIES AND DOING AWAY WITH RECIPROCAL CONFIDENCE AMONG NATIONS. THESE ARE CONCEPTIONS WHICH HAVE BROUGHT THE WORLD TO THE PRESENT HORRIBLE ABYSS.

29 TURNING HIS GAZE TOWARD THE FUTURE, THE PONTIFF ASKED WHAT WILL BE THE NEW ORDER OF THINGS WHEN THE TEMPEST OF WAR SHALL HAVE CEASED. WILL THERE BE A REPETITION OF PAST MISTAKES WHICH PUT RIGHT VISITORS ABOVE EVERY SENSE OF JUSTICE?

SALVATION COMES NOT BY THE SWORD. THE NEW ORDER MUST REST

1939

UPON THE ROCK OF NATURAL LAW AND DIVINE RELATIONS. THE HUMAN MUST BE REEDUCATED SPIRITUALLY AND RELIGIOUSLY AND THIS NEED STARTING FROM CHRIST AS AN INDISPENSABLE FOUNDATION MUST PASS ALONG THE WAYS OF JUSTICE AND CHARITY AS THEY ARE ANNOUNCED IN THE GOSPEL WITH A VIEW TO THE KINGDOM OF GOD. FOR THE TRIUMPH OF THIS KINGDOM, ALL FINE UPRIGHT SPIRITS MUST STRIVE FRANKLY AND COURAGEOUSLY EVEN AT THE COST OF GREATEST SACRIFICES.

IT IS COMFORTING--THE HOLY FATHER NOTES--THAT IN ALL QUARTERS OF THE WORLD THERE APPEAR EVIDENT SIGNS OF THIS GENEROUS COURAGEOUS SPIRIT. FROM THE EUCHARISTIC CONGRESS MOVEMENT TO THE ACTIVITY OF CATHOLIC ACTION THERE SPRANG FORTH FOUNTAINS OF GRACE AND RESERVE FORCE. ABOVE ALL THE PONTIFF SENDS HIS PATERNAL GRATITUDE AND HIS THANKS TO THAT FRUITFULL PHALANX OF MEN, WOMEN, YOUTHS AND MAIDENS WHICH IN CLOSE COLLABORATION WITH THE HIERARCHICAL APOSTOLATE OF CHURCH ARE MAKING OF THE LAIETY, SO TO SPEAK, A MINISTRY OF CHRIST.

HE THEN EMPHASIZED THE SPECIAL MISSION OF THE FAMILY, SHAPER OF YOUNG GENERATIONS, PROVIDENTIAL CUSTODIAN AND REFUGE OF FAITH IN TIMES OF PERSECUTION WHEN THE CHURCH IS NOT ACCORDED THAT LIBERTY AND THEREFORE THAT POSSIBILITY OF ACTION TO WHICH IN DIVINE MANDATE IT HAS A SACRED AND UNCONTROVERTIBLE RIGHT.

FROM THAT RIGHT COMES A STREAM OF HAPPINESS AND TRANQUILITY TO NATIONS.

SINCE HUMAN EXPEDIANTS HAD MISERABLY FAILED, FROM CHURCH ALONE CAN COME SALVATION TO A MEDIUM OF UNITY OF RELIGIOUS AND MORAL DOCTRINE TOWARDS WHICH TURNS THE DESIRE OF NUMEROUS MEMBERS OF THE CHURCH AS OF MANY RULERS AND ALSO MANY NOBLE SPIRITS WHO ARE SEPARATED FROM IT.

AGAINST SUSPICIONS IN CERTAIN QUARTERS THE POPE DECLARES THAT THE CHURCH IS ABSOLUTELY FOREIGN TO ANY IDEA IMPAIRING THE FOUNDATIONS OF CIVIL AUTHORITY OR USURPING ITS RIGHTS; IT IS INTERESTED NOT IN DOMINATING BUT SERVING, IT IS READY NOT TAKE THE PLACE OF LEGITIMATE AUTHORITY BUT TO OFFER ITS AID IN THE SPIRIT OF CHRIST, INCULCATING OBEDIENCE AND RESPECT; NOT RETARDING BUT ACCELERATING CIVIL PROGRESS IN THE PEACE WHICH COMES FROM PRACTICE OF THE LOVE OF GOD, OF NEIGHBORLINESS.

APPROACHING HIS CONCLUSION THE POPE RECALLS HIS EFFORTS TO AVERT THE SCOURAGE OF WAR: "HIS WARNINGS RESPECTFULLY LISTENED TO BUT NOT FOLLOWED"

THE CHURCH AND THE FAITHFUL ARE LIVING IN DIFFICULT MOMENTS BUT CHRIST THE KING WAS NEVER SO CLOSE TO US AS IN TIMES OF TRIAL.

THE FIELD OF CHARITY, TOWARD THOSE WHO HAVE THE RIGHT TO PITY OR HELP, OPENS WIDER AND WIDER BEFORE US. AND THE CHURCH AS THE BLESSED VISION OF PEACE STANDS ABOVE THE VORTEX OF ERROR AND PASSION TRUSTING IN ALMIGHTY GOD WHO WILL CALM THE TEMPEST.

THE ENCYCLICAL CONCLUDES WITH AN URGENT INVITATION TO PRAYER DIRECTED TO THE PASTORATE FAITHFUL PARTICULARLY THOSE WHO ARE IN SUFFERING AND SORROW WITH A SPECIAL PATERNAL APPEAL FOR THE LEGIONS OF INNOCENT CHILDREN; ALL ARE ASKED TO PRAY WITHOUT INTERRUPTION NOT FORGETTING TO MAKE THEIR PRAYERS WITH A SPIRIT OF MORTIFICATION AND WITH WORTHY WORKS OF PENANCE SO THAT THE MERCY OF GOD MAY BE CALLED DOWN UPON THEM. ALL ARE EXHORTED TO LIVE IN UNITY, FAITH AND LOVE.

UNDATED WITH ENCYCLICAL

(BY THE ASSOCIATED PRESS)

TWENTY-TWO YEARS AGO, POPE PIUS XII, THEN A PAPAL NUNCIO TO GERMANY, WAS A FIGURE IN THE AMBITIOUS PEACE PLAN OF POPE BENEDICT XV TO HAVE THE WORLD WAR CALLED OFF. AS AN UNDER-SECRETARY OF STATE AT THE VATICAN HE HAD AIDED THE PONTIFF IN DRAFTING THE PLAN.

WHEN THE PLAN WAS FINALLY IN READINESS, THE POPE SUMMONED HIM, CONSECRATED HIM TITULAR ARCHBISHOP OF SARDI, AND SENT HIM TO GERMANY. HE ARRIVED IN MUNICH IN MAY, 1917, AND THE FOLLOWING MONTH MET KAISER WILHELM AND CHANCELLOR VON BETHMANN-HOLLWEG.

AT FIRST, THE 42-YEAR-OLD NUNCIO BELIEVED THE KAISER WAS RECEPTIVE AND HE HELD HIGH HOPES. BUT IT SOON BECAME APPARENT THAT THE WORLD WAR WAS TO CONTINUE TO ITS FINISH. SO HE SAW THE PEACE PLAN COLLAPSE BEFORE HIS EYES.

THE KAISER, HOWEVER, WAS DEEPLY IMPRESSED WITH THE FUTURE PONTIFF. HE WROTE IN HIS MEMOIRS THAT "HE IS A DISTINGUISHED LIKEABLE MAN, OF HIGH INTELLIGENCE AND EXCELLENT MANNERS, THE PERFECT PATTERN OF AN EMINENT PRELATE OF THE CATHOLIC CHURCH."

ARCHBISHOP PACELLI REMAINED AT MUNICH AS NUNCIO THROUGH THE BITTER LAST YEARS OF THE WAR, DEEPLY MOVED BY THE SUFFERING ALL AROUND HIM. HE SAW THE DISINTEGRATION OF THE GERMAN EMPIRE AND THE BIRTH OF THE NEW REPUBLIC.

FROM THE PULPIT HE PREACHED AGAINST THE RED REGIME THAT FOLLOWED THE WAR. ONCE AN ARMED BAND BROKE INTO THE NUNCIATE AT NIGHT. WITHOUT FLINCHING, HE WALKED DOWN THE BROAD STAIRCASE TO MEET HIS CALLERS, DRESSED IN HIS ROBES OF OFFICE.

PISTOLS WERE PRESSED AGAINST HIM. SMILINGLY, HE SAID: "YOU ARE ON EXTRA-TERRITORIAL SOIL. IT IS NEVER WISE TO KILL A DIPLOMAT."

SLOWLY, THE INTRUDERS DEPARTED, CONQUERED BY HIS QUIET CHARM. LATER, HE RECEIVED APOLOGIES FROM THE PARTY LEADERS.

HE WAS ACCREDITED AS ENVOY TO THE NEW GERMAN REPUBLIC IN 1920 AND MOVED THE NUNCIATURE TO BERLIN IN 1924. LATER, HE NEGOTIATED THE CONCORDAT BETWEEN GERMANY AND THE VATICAN, TO REPLACE THE OLD ONE WHICH CONCERNED ONLY BAVARIA. THIS WAS REGARDED AS HIS MAJOR DIPLOMATIC TRIUMPH.

WHEN HE BECAME POPE ON MARCH 2, 1939, HIS FIRST FORMAL UTTERANCE, THE DAY AFTER HIS ELECTION, WAS AN APPEAL FOR PEACE. HE INVOKED THE AID OF GOD FOR THE HEADS OF ALL GOVERNMENTS THAT THEY MIGHT CONDUCT THE AFFAIRS OF STATE IN A MANNER TO AVOID WAR.

IN EVERY PUBLIC DISCOURSE SINCE THEN AND ON EVERY POSSIBLE OCCASION, HE HAS RENEWED HIS PRAYERS FOR PEACE. HE HAS ALREADY BEEN CALLED, IN MANY LANDS, "THE POPE OF PEACE."

BRITISH (PMS BUDGET)

LONDON,OCT.27-(AP)-GREAT BRITAIN, GRIMLY TUNING HER WAR MACHINERY FOR THE WINTER CAMPAIGN AGAINST GERMANY AT SEA AND AT HOME, OPENED HER LISTS TODAY FOR VOLUNTEERS IN THE FIRST GENERAL CALL SINCE THE WAR BEGAN SEPT. 3.

ENLISTMENTS ONLY OF SPECIALIZED CLASSES HAVE BEEN ASKED PREVIOUSLY. AGE LIMITS WERE SET AT 22 TO 35 IN GREAT BRITAIN AND 20 TO 35 IN NORTHERN IRELAND. THOSE ACCEPTED WILL BE ORDERED TO REPORT NOV. 15.

HINTS IN THE NAZI PRESS OF BROADENING AIR ATTACKS, WHICH SO FAR HAVE BEEN CONFINED TO WARSHIPS AT ANCHOR OR ON CONVOY, AND INTENSIFICATION OF SURFACE AND SUBMARINE RAIDS ON ALLIED SHIPPING

WERE REGARDED BY THE BRITISH AS POINTING THE DIRECTION THE WINTER WARFARE WILL TAKE.

IN THE BELIEF THAT WAR IN THE WESTERN FRONT WOULD CONTINUE STALEMATED BY MUD, RAIN AND COLD WEATHER, BRITISH EXPERTS SAID GERMANY NATURALLY WOULD BE EXPECTED TO HAMMER AT BRITAIN BY BOMBING RAIDS AND ACTION AGAINST SHIPPING. (THE FRENCH, HOWEVER, FELT THAT A GERMAN OFFENSIVE MIGHT COME WITH ANY BREAK IN THE WEATHER.)

NAVAL SOURCES SAID IT WAS PROBABLE THAT GERMAN SURFACE CRAFT OTHER THAN THE POCKET BATTLESHIP DEUTSCHLAND AND WHATEVER OTHER RAIDERS ARE ALREADY AT SEA COULD SLIP THROUGH THE NORTH SEA BLOCKADE.

OCT 8 1939

VISIBILITY IN THAT AREA EVEN ON THE CLEAREST WINTER DAY IS ONLY FIVE MILES.

AS AN EXAMPLE THAT BAD WEATHER CUTS BOTH WAYS, THE BRITISH ANNOUNCED DISCOVERY OF A WRECKED GERMAN SUBMARINE ON THE TREACHEROUS SHOALS OF GOODWIN SANDS, SIX MILES OUT THE KENTISH COAST IN THE STRAITS OF DOVER.

GUNFIRE WAS HEARD AT NEARBY DEAL ON WEDNESDAY, BUT NOTHING COULD BE SEEN UNTIL THE EBB TIDE YESTERDAY REVEALED THE WRECK

RAIDERS, THE BRITISH POINTED OUT, CANNOT OPERATE INDEFINITELY WITHOUT REFUELING, AND THEY ARE HOPEFUL THEY CAN DETECT MID-OCEAN RENDEZVOUS OR GET WIRELESS WARNING OF ATTACKS IN TIME TO CATCH THE RAIDERS.

A5

PRIME MINISTER CHAMBERLAIN SAID OCT. 3 THAT RAIDERS WOULD BE DEALT WITH "ACCORDING TO PREARRANGED PLANS." MANY PERSONS FELT THIS MEANT BY MEANS OF STRATEGICALLY-LOCATED PATROLS.

BRITAIN HAS MORE WARSHIPS BUILDING, AND A MASS-PRODUCTION SYSTEM PERMITS COMPLETION OF A 3,000-TON MERCHANT VESSEL IN FOUR MONTHS.

IN THE AIR, MILITARY EXPERTS SAID THE ACCURACY OF ANTI-AIRCRAFT GUNNERS WAS IMPROVING RAPIDLY.

IN SUPPORT OF THIS, THE BRITISH AIR MINISTRY ANNOUNCED IT NOW WAS KNOWN THAT AT LEAST SEVEN OF THE 12 GERMAN PLANES THAT RAIDED A CONVOY SATURDAY HAD FAILED TO RETURN TO THEIR BASES.

"GERMAN LOSSES MAY YET PROVE TO HAVE BEEN EVEN GREATER," THE MINISTRY ADDED.

OCT 28 1939

WHILE BAD WEATHER MAKES IT DIFFICULT TO SPOT SUBMARINES AND AIRPLANES, THE BRITISH SAID IT ALSO HAMPERED THE AIM OF BOMBERS, AND ONE NAVAL MAN REMARKED, "IT IS NO PICNIC TO HANDLE A SUBMARINE OR EASE ONE IN AND OUT OF MINE FIELDS IN STORMY SEAS."

TYPICAL OF BRITAIN'S MOBILIZATION IS THE USE OF DEAF MUTES FOR THE EAR-SHATTERING TASK OF SHOT-POLISHING THE INTERIOR OF SHELLS.

KING GEORGE VI, VISITING TWO AMMUNITION FACTORIES YESTERDAY, SHOWED PARTICULAR INTEREST IN THIS WORK, LOOKING THROUGH A SMALL WINDOW AT THE SILENT, UNHEARING WORKMEN.

HE WAS INFORMED THAT THE MUNITIONS PLANTS WERE PRODUCING AT A RATE MANY TIMES FASTER THAN IN THE LAST WAR.

FROM GIBRALTAR CAME WORD THAT THE AMERICAN FREIGHTER CROWN CITY HAD LANDED THE 31 CREWMEN OF THE BRITISH SHIP LEDBURY, WHICH WAS TORPEDOED TUESDAY 80 MILES OFF GIBRALTAR. THERE WERE NO CASUALTIES.

(SOVIET RUSSIA NOTIFIED BRITAIN ON WEDNESDAY THAT SHE CONSIDERED THE BRITISH CONTRABAND LIST A VIOLATION OF THE PRINCIPLES OF INTERNATIONAL LAW.)

BRITISH ASSERTED THEY SAW NO REASON WHY THE CONTRABAND CONTROL QUESTION SHOULD INTERFERE WITH THE RUSSIAN-BRITISH TRADE NEGOTIATIONS.

THE COMMITTEE DECIDES WHETHER CARGOES OF SHIPS CALLING AT THE BRITISH CONTRABAND CONTROL BASES ARE TO BE DETAINED AS SUSPECTED CONTRABAND OR RELEASED.

BRITISH FRONT

BY BRIAN HEDDLETON

WITH THE BRITISH EXPEDITIONARY FORCE IN FRANCE, OCT.27-(AP)-SCOTTISH TROOPS WERE DIGGING IN TODAY ALONG A RESERVE LINE UNDER THE EYES OF LORD GORT, COMMANDER-IN-CHIEF OF THE BRITISH EXPEDITIONARY FORCE.

SCOTTISH UNITS WHICH WON FAME IN THE WORLD WAR TOOK PRIDE IN THE NAME SAID TO HAVE BEEN GIVEN THEM BY THE GERMANS, "THE LADIES FROM HELL." BUT THE "LADIES FROM HELL" WILL NOT BE LADIES MUCH LONGER. SOMETIME IN THE NEXT TWO WEEKS THEY ARE TO TAKE OFF THEIR KILTS AND STICK THEIR LEGS INTO THE OVERALLS OF THE ARMY'S NEW BATTLE DRESS.

THEY DON'T LIKE THE IDEA MUCH, ALTHOUGH THEY STILL WILL BE ALLOWED TO WEAR THEIR KILTS FOR CEREMONIALS AND ON LEAVE.

WHATEVER THEIR DRESS, THE TROOPS ARE A TOUGH AND SEASONED LOT. THEIR TRENCH, DUG IN 20 HOURS, WAS A MARVEL OF NEATNESS AND EFFICIENCY WHEN GORT JUMPED DOWN TO INSPECT IT HE COULDN'T FIND ANYTHING TO ASK EXCEPT "WHAT'S THE RULING ON SANDBAG SEAMS -- IN OR OUT?"

"IN, SIR," A SERGEANT ANSWERED.

JUST THREE OUT OF 100 OR MORE SANDBAGS HAD THE SEAMS OUT.

ONE SQUAD MARCHING TO DIG WHISTLED A TUNE AS THEY WENT THROUGH A FRENCH VILLAGE--A TUNE FAMILIAR TO EVERY AMERICAN--THE NAVAL ACADEMY'S "ANCHORS AWEIGH." I ASKED A BANDSMAN WHO WAS BEMOANING THE FACT THAT HIS DRUMS HAD NOT COME UP YET WHERE THE REGIMENT HAD 30.24-4319.

30.24-4319

PICKED UP THE SONG, WAS IT BY CHANCE AN OLD SCOTTISH TUNE?

"NO, SIR, IT'S AN AMERICAN TUNE," CAME THE REPLY, "WE JUST WHISTLE AND SING IT BECAUSE IT'S A GRAND THING TO MARCH TO. DO YE KEN THE WORDS?"

WITH THE HELP OF A COUPLE OF OTHER AMERICANS I WROTE THEM OUT. THEY'RE GOING TO TRY THE SONG ON THE PIPES THE NEXT TIME THEY MARCH.

GORT, WHO VISITS DIFFERENT UNITS THREE AND FOUR TIMES A WEEK, DOESN'T MISS A THING. HE DOESN'T MIND MUD WATER OR COLD. HE MADE A THOROUGH EXAMINATION OF BILLETS AND DEFENSES, TOLD THE TROOPS THEY LOOKED WELL AND HEARTY AND CLUMPED OVER THE MUD LIKE A TWO-YEAR-OLD TO SEE THE NEW RESERVE LINE.

THE TRENCHES ARE ABOUT SEVEN FEET DEEP, BUILT WITH FIRE STEPS AND FREQUENT BAYS FOR MACHINE-GUNS.

IN THIS SCOTTISH REGIMENT THE TRADITION HOLDS THAT WHILE THE TROOPS GO WITHOUT OVERCOATS THE OFFICERS CANNOT WEAR THEM EITHER.

SO TODAY THE SOLDIERS SWEATED DIGGING TRENCHES AND THE OFFICERS SHIVERED IN THEIR TUNICS WATCHING THEM.

FRENCH (PHS BUDGET)

BY JOHN H.MARTIN

PARIS, OCT.27-(AP)-THE GERMANS HAVE MOVED TANKS AND RAPID-FIRE ARTILLERY INTO ATTACKING POSITIONS ON THE SIEGFRIED LINE, FRENCH MILITARY OBSERVERS REPORTED TODAY.

FRENCH PATROL REPORTS INDICATED THAT THE GERMANS FACING THE MAGINOT FORTIFICATIONS WERE IN "JUMPOFF" SPOTS ALL ALONG THE NORTHERN FLANK, BUT AN INTENSE COLD SNAP PROVED AN ALLY OF THE FRENCH, WHO SAID THEY WERE ALL SET FOR A GERMAN OFFENSIVE.

THE COLD AND FLOODED REGIONS IN SOME PARTS OF THE FRONT CAUSED FRENCH OBSERVERS TO DOUBT THAT A GERMAN DRIVE WOULD BE IMMEDIATE, BUT THEY SAID THEY EXPECTED IT AS SOON AS A RIFT IN THE WEATHER APPEARED.

RECONNOITERING UNITS SKIRMISHED IN SNOW, SLEET AND ICY RAIN ALONG THE 100-MILE NORTHERN FLANK LAST NIGHT, GETTING SOME ARTILLERY SUPPORT AS THEY WALLOWED IN THE ICE-CRUSTED MUD.

THE FRENCH MORNING COMMUNIQUE SAID THAT DURING THE NIGHT THERE WAS "LOCAL ACTIVITY OF RECONNAISSANCE UNITS."

THE SUDDEN RIGID CONTROL OF GERMAN COMMUNICATIONS WITH BELGIUM AND THE NETHERLANDS ALSO LED THE FRENCH TO SUSPECT THAT A BIG GERMAN PUSH WAS IMMINENT.

OCT 28 1939

(FROM VILLAGES ALONG THE NETHERLANDS-GERMAN BORDER CAME REPORTS OF NOTICEABLE TROOP CONCENTRATIONS AT THAT END OF THE SIEGFRIED LINE.

(ALTHOUGH GERMAN FORTIFICATIONS OPPOSITE THE NETHERLANDS TOWN OF LIMBURG STILL ARE BEING CONSTRUCTED, WITH FORTS AND PILL-BOXES DISGUISED AS PICTURESQUE VILLAGE HUTS, THE NETHERLANDS WITNESSES SAID THEY COULD CLEARLY SEE MANY MARCHING MEN AND TROOPS IN AUTOMOBILES COMING UP TO THE FRONT.)

THE FRENCH HAVE ESTIMATED THAT GERMANY NOW HAS 1,500,000 MEN EITHER IN FRONT-LINE OR SUPPORTING POSITIONS.

FRENCH REPORTS ALSO SAID HUGE NUMBERS OF NAZI BOMBERS AND FIGHTING PLANES WERE BEING BROUGHT UP TO AIRDROMES JUST BEHIND THE SIEGFRIED LINE, BUT THE FRENCH WERE DEPENDING ON THE WEATHER TO KEEP THEM GROUNDED, AT LEAST TEMPORARILY.

PREMIER DALADIER MEANWHILE CALLED THE CABINET TO MEET WITH HIM AND PRESIDENT LEBRUN TODAY TO REVIEW EVENTS ON THE MILITARY AND DIPLOMAT-

IC FRONTS AND TO DISCUSS THE NEW PROVISIONAL BUDGET FOR 1940, WHICH HAS BEEN SET AT 349,000,000,000 FRANCS (ABOUT $8,000,000,000), NEARLY SIX TIMES THAT FOR 1939.

ROOS WAS ARRESTED FEB. 7, ALMOST SEVEN MONTHS BEFORE THE WAR STARTED. WITH SEVEN OTHERS, HE WAS CHARGED BY THE FRENCH WITH HAVING FURNISHED GERMAN AGENTS WITH DETAILS OF THE MOVEMENTS OF FRENCH TROOPS DURING MARCH, 1936, WHEN GERMANY REOCCUPIED THE RHINELAND, AND IN SEPTEMBER, 1938, DURING THE CZECHO-SLOVAKIAN CRISIS.

OCT 28 1939

FOREIGN MINISTER GRIGORE GAFENCU ALSO WAS PRESENT AT THE CONFERENCE.

INFORMED SOURCES SAID THEY BELIEVED STOICA REPORTED ON SOVIET RUSSIA'S ATTITUDE TOWARD RUMANIA AS COMMUNICATED TO TURKISH FOREIGN MINISTER SUKRU SARACOGLU DURING HIS RECENT STAY IN MOSCOW.

IN THESE QUARTERS, IT WAS BELIEVED ANY PRESSURE RUSSIA MIGHT BRING ON RUMANIA WOULD FIRST CONCERN BULGARIA'S CLAIMS ON DOBRUJA RATHER THAN ON BESSARABIA.

(DOBRUJA, AN AREA OF 4,000 SQUARE MILES LYING BETWEEN THE DANUBE RIVER AND THE BLACK SEA, WAS TAKEN FROM BULGARIA IN 1878 AND RUMANIA'S RIGHT TO THE TERRITORY WAS CONFIRMED BY THE TREATY OF NEUILLY IN 1919. POPULATION OF THE FERTILE AGRICULTURAL DISTRICT IN 1931 WAS LISTED AS 387,000.)

THE IMPRESSION PERSISTED, MEANWHILE, THAT THE GERMAN COMMAND CONTEMPLATED AN OFFENSIVE IN THE WEST, THAT IT WOULD BE LAUNCHED SOON AND THAT IT WOULD BE AIMED CHIEFLY AGAINST BRITAIN.

THIS SEEMED TO BE BORNE OUT BY A BAN YESTERDAY ON PRIVATE USE OF TELEPHONES AND TELEGRAPH SERVICES TO FOREIGN COUNTRIES.

OBSERVERS NOTED THAT SIMILAR CONTROLS OF COMMUNICATIONS WERE IMPOSED THE DAY BEFORE THE INVASION OF POLAND AND A SECOND TIME IMMEDIATELY AFTER THE BRITISH AND FRENCH DECLARATIONS OF WAR.

PERSONS IN INFORMED CIRCLES MERELY SHRUGGED THEIR SHOULDERS WHEN ASKED WHETHER IT WAS JUSTIFIABLE TO DRAW A PARALLEL.

POLITICAL CIRCLES SPECULATED WHETHER AN OFFENSIVE MIGHT BE LOOSED ON LAND, AT SEA OR IN THE AIR.

THESE SOURCES INDICATED THAT GERMANY HAD PRECISE KNOWLEDGE OF THE STATIONS OF BRITISH TROOPS IN FRANCE AND THAT GERMAN AIR FORCES WOULD TRY TO STRIKE TERROR IN THE BRITISH EXPEDITIONARY FORCE.

PREPARATIONS APPARENTLY WERE UNDERWAY ALSO FOR COMBINED AIR AND NAVAL ATTACKS ON BRITISH SEAPORTS AND COASTAL AIR BASES. GASOLINE STORAGE PLANTS WERE SAID TO BE ON GERMANY'S LIST AS TARGETS.

IT WAS BELIEVED IN SOME GERMAN QUARTERS THAT RUSSIA SOON MIGHT MAKE ANOTHER POLAND OF TURKEY, PLACING HERSELF IN CONTROL OF THE DARDANELLES AND STRIKING A BLOW AT ONE OF BRITAIN'S MOST VITAL POINTS.

OCT 28

RELATIONS WERE NOW SO CLOSE BETWEEN GERMANY AND THE SOVIET UNION, GERMAN SOURCES SAID, THAT RUSSIA WOULD NOT ATTEMPT TO DELIVER TO GERMANY'S ENEMY ARTICLES THAT THE REICH CONSIDERED CONTRABAND.

THE WHEREABOUTS OF THE AMERICAN CREW OF THE CITY OF FLINT STILL WAS UNCLEAR HERE, BUT GERMAN OFFICIALS SAID THEY "BELIEVED" THE AMERICANS WERE ABOARD THE FREIGHTER.

MOSCOW, OCT.27-(AP)-UNITED STATES AMBASSADOR LAURENCE A.STEINHARDT FINALLY SUCCEEDED LATE TODAY IN GAINING AN INTERVIEW WITH A RUSSIAN FOREIGN OFFICE OFFICIAL IN HIS QUEST FOR INFORMATION ON THE AMERICAN VESSEL CITY OF FLINT, AFTER EARLIER ATTEMPTS TO GET AN APPOINTMENT HAD FAILED.

OCT 28 1939

30.24-4323

THE AMBASSADOR WENT TO SEE VLADIMIR P.POTEMKIN, VICE-COMMISSAR OF FOREIGN AFFAIRS, SHORTLY BEFORE 6 P.M. (10 A.M. EST). THERE WAS NO IMMEDIATE ANNOUNCEMENT OF THE RESULT OF THE INTERVIEW.

ALTHOUGH SOVIET OFFICIALS HAD ASSURED STEINHARDT THEY WOULD GIVE HIM FULL INFORMATION CONCERNING THE VESSEL WHICH WAS TAKEN TO THE RUSSIAN PORT OF MURMANSK UNDER COMMAND OF A GERMAN PRIZE CREW AND LATER RELEASED, HE HAD BEEN UNABLE TO LEARN ANY MORE THAT WHAT WAS IN THE SOVIET PRESS.

THAT WAS SIMPLY A BRIEF REPORT THAT THE CITY OF FLINT HAD BEEN FREED FROM THE REMOTE PORT. (ADVICES REACHING BERLIN SAID THE FREIGHTER, IN CHARGE OF HER GERMAN PRIZE CREW, WAS EN ROUTE TO HAMBURG.)

IN INFORMED QUARTERS HERE IT WAS SAID THAT THE CITY OF FLINT FLEW THE AMERICAN FLAG AS SHE SAILED OUT INTO THE ARCTIC OCEAN--A DENIAL OF GERMAN REPORTS THAT THE NAZI SWASTIKA FLEW FROM HER STAFF.

(THE 4,963-TON STEAMER MIGHT BE FLYING HER OWN COLORS AND STILL BE IN CONTROL OF THE PRIZE CREW PLACED ABOARD WHEN A GERMAN RAIDER CAPTURED HER LAST WEEK.

(FOR EXAMPLE, WORLD WAR INSTRUCTIONS TO THE UNITED STATES NAVY WERE THAT A NEUTRAL SHIP TAKEN AS A CONTRABAND CARRIER SHOULD KEEP ITS OWN COLORS UP UNTIL A COMPETENT COURT HAD ADJUDGED THE VESSEL A LAWFUL PRIZE.)

THERE WERE INDICATIONS THAT THE CITY OF FLINT WOULD BE OR ALREADY HAD BEEN PICKED UP BY A CONVOY OF GERMAN SUBMARINES. BERLIN REPORTS SAID THE SUBMARINE COMMANDERS WOULD BE "ONLY TOO HAPPY" IF BRITISH WARSHIPS ATTEMPTED TO TAKE OVER THE VESSEL ON THE LONG TRIP AROUND

THE REMOTENESS OF THE MURMANSK HINDERED EFFORTS OF LAURENCE A. STEINHARDT, UNITED STATES AMBASSADOR, TO KEEP IN TOUCH WITH DEVELOPMENTS. HE HAD RECEIVED ASSURANCES, HOWEVER, THAT THE AMERICAN CREW WAS SAFE ABOARD THE CITY OF FLINT.

(THE BRITISH SEAMEN, MOST OF THEM SURVIVORS OF THE FREIGHTER STONEGATE, ARRIVED AT BERGEN, NORWAY, YESTERDAY, ENROUTE TO ENGLAND.)

(MAURICE P.DUNLAP, UNITED STATES CONSUL AT BERGEN, ANNOUNCED HE HAD REPORTED TO THE AMERICAN LEGATION AT OSLO ON THE CITY OF FLINT.)

MEANWHILE, TASS, OFFICIAL SOVIET NEWS AGENCY, REPORTED THAT THE NEW NATIONAL ASSEMBLY FOR WESTERN UKRAINE, PART OF THE FORMER POLISH TERRITORY OCCUPIED BY RUSSIA IN CONNECTION WITH THE GERMAN INVASION, HAD ELECTED JOSEPH STALIN AS HONORARY CHAIRMAN.

KING SAID THE GOVERNMENT HAD QUIETLY PREPARED FOR WAR SEVERAL WEEKS BEFORE THE COUNTRY ENTERED THE CONFLICT.

"WITH THAT FORETHOUGHT AND PRECISION EVERY ESSENTIAL DETAIL HAD BEEN ANTICIPATED AND BECAME APPARENT THE MOMENT WAR BROKE OUT IN EUROPE," HE DECLARED.

"GERMANY'S DEFIANCE OF PEACEFUL METHODS OF ADJUSTING INTERNATIONAL DIFFERENCES IS A DEFIANCE AND A THREAT TO ALL PEOPLES AND COUNTRIES WHICH STILL SEEK TO BASE THEIR FREEDOM UPON THE RULE OF LAW, THE SANCTITY OF CONTRACTS AND THE SACREDNESS OF HUMAN PERSONALITY."

WELL AND GOOD, IF THEY LIKE IT THAT WAY, BUT NEITHER OF THESE GENTLEMEN HAS TOLD US WHAT SORT OF FINISH TO EXPECT, AND IT'S MIGHTY OBSCURE.

HOWEVER, IT WOULDN'T BE RASH TO MAKE A SMALL BET THAT THE WAR WON'T DIE WITH ITS BOOTS ON, BUT THAT SOME DAY IT WILL JUST TURN ITS FACE TO THE WALL AND PASS OUT BECAUSE OF LACK OF WILL TO CARRY ON.

ONE CAN'T ESCAPE THE HAUNTING BELIEF THAT THE END WILL COME FROM A CRACK OF PUBLIC MORALE SOMEWHERE--A BREAKDOWN DUE TO WANT OF SUFFICIENT INSPIRATION TO STRUGGLE ON INDEFINITELY UNDER THE BURDEN OF PRIVATION AND DEATH.

THE ALLIES ARE USING ALL THEIR WILES TO BRING THIS TO PASS IN GERMANY. AND FROM THE NAZI FRONT LINES LOUD-SPEAKERS BLARE OUT ACROSS NO-MAN'S LAND:--"FRENCHMEN, LAY DOWN YOUR ARMS AND SHAKE HANDS. THE GERMANS DON'T WANT TO FIGHT!"

THE TROUBLE WITH THIS UNWANTED WAR IS THAT IT LACKS BOTH OOMPH AND SOUL.

IT HAS NEITHER A PARIS BATTLING FOR HIS HELEN OF TROY, NOR YET A SIR GALAHAD RIDING FOR THE HOLY GRAIL.

TO DATE, THIS SCRAP HASN'T EVEN PRODUCED A SLOGAN WITH HALF THE PUNCH OF "WE WANT A TOUCHDOWN" TO JUSTIFY ITS EXISTENCE.

A FELLOW CAN FIGHT FOR A BANNER-LINE LIKE "REMEMBER THE MAINE; TO HELL WITH SPAIN!"

BUT IT'S HARD TO GET REALLY BLOODTHIRSTY OVER INVITATIONS TO GO OUT AND "CRUSH HITLERISM" OR SMASH "BRITISH IMPERIALISM." A MAN'S HEART CAN BURN FOR LONG OVER SUCH ABSTRACTIONS, ESPECIALLY WHEN THEY TOTAL UP TO MEAN THAT THE CONFLICT IS TO SETTLE THE QUESTION OF WHO IS TO BE BIG BOSS OF EUROPE.

I VISITED ALL THE COUNTRIES INVOLVED IN THIS WAR WITHIN THE YEAR. I BELIEVE THAT AS A WHOLE THEIR PEOPLE AT THIS JUNCTURE ARE LOYAL TO THEIR GOVERNMENTS AND ARE DETERMINED TO WIN.

IT HAS SEEMED TO ME, HOWEVER, THAT THE GENERAL PUBLICS ARE IMPELLED BY A SENSE OF DUTY RATHER THAN BY ANY SPIRITUAL OR EMOTIONAL URGE. THAT IS TO SAY, ENTHUSIASM IS LACKING.

NONE OF THE PEOPLES OF EUROPE WANT WAR. THEY HATE IT.

THE AVERAGE MAN OVER THERE--FROM PICCADILLY TO THE WILDS OF THE BALKAN MOUNTAINS, BOTH OF WHICH I KNOW--WANTS TO BE PEACEABLE AND FRIENDLY, EVEN AS YOU AND I.

OCT 28 1939

LEAST OF ALL DOES HE WISH TO GO OUT AND KILL A FELLOW BEING. IT TAKES A LOT TO GIVE A CHAP THE GUTS TO RAM A BAYONET THROUGH THE THROAT OF ONE WHO NEVER DID HIM ANY HARM.

YOU MAY RECALL THAT THE FIRST CHRISTMAS AFTER THE START OF THE WORLD WAR THE GERMAN AND ALLIED SOLDIERS TOOK A RECESS FROM SLAUGHTER AND FRATERNIZED. THEY SHOOK HANDS AND SHARED THEIR BOXES OF FOOD FROM HOME AND EVEN PLAYED FOOTBALL ON THIS BIRTHDAY OF THE GENTLE APOSTLE OF PEACE.

WHEN THE PLUSH-CHAIR OFFICIALS HEARD ABOUT THIS HORRIBLE BREACH OF DISCIPLINE THEY BURNED UP THE WIRES TO THE FRONT. IT WAS MADE CLEAR TO THE BOYS THAT THEY WERE SENT OUT TO KELL AND BE KILLED, AND NOT TO MAKE FRIENDS WITH THE ENEMY.

LATER IN THE WAR I KNEW OF CERTAIN ARMY COMMANDS (NOT TO MENTION NATIONALITY) WHICH RESORTED TO THE OLD EXPEDIENT OF GIVING TROOPS

ENOUGH RUM BEFORE AN ATTACK TO MAKE THEM WILD. KILLING IS A MADMAN'S JOB.

VIEWING THE PRESENT SITUATION AS A WHOLE--THE WIDESPREAD LACK OF ENTHUSIASM FOR WAR, COUPLED WITH THE TREND OF OPERATIONS ON LAND AND WATER IN THE WESTERN THEATRE--IT SEEMS TO ME NOT UNLIKELY THAT WHEN PEACE ARRIVES IT WILL BE A POLITICAL RATHER THAN A MILITARY PRODUCT.

THAT IS, IT MAY EASILY BE THAT IT WON'T COME THROUGH A DECISIVE DEFEAT ON THE BATTLE-FIELD, BUT WHEN THE PEOPLE OF ONE OF THE BELLIGERENT COUNTRIES GET FED-UP ENOUGH TO SERVE NOTICE ON THEIR GOVERNMENT THAT THEY'VE HAD SUFFICIENT.

WE MUST REMEMBER THAT MOST PEOPLE, WHETHER OF HIGH OR LOW DEGREE, THINK A LOT WITH THEIR BELLIES. WHEN A POPULATION IS WELL NOURISHED IT CAN STAND A LOT OF PUNISHMENT. THE SOLDIER MAY ENDURE HARDSHIP AT THE FRONT WITHOUT COMPLAINT. BUT LET HUNGER COME TO HIS WIFE AND CHILDREN, AND HE BECOMES A DIFFERENT MAN.

THAT'S A GOOD THOUGHT TO KEEP PINNED IN OUR HATS AS WE WATCH THE WAR AND TRY TO GUESS THE WINNER.

SOMEWHERE AT SEA, THE AMERICAN GOVERNMENT-OWNED STEAMER CITY OF FLINT IS THRUSTING HER BLUNT NOSE THROUGH THE SURGING WAVES WITH AN IMPISH LIKENESS OF TROUBLE PERCHED ON HER BOW. UNTIL HER FATE AND THAT OF HER CREW IS KNOWN, NONE CAN SAY WHAT NEW CHAPTER OF WORLD DESTINY IS BEING WRITTEN IN THIS VOYAGE.

THE WHEREABOUTS AND EXACT STATUS OF THE FLINT REMAIN A MYSTERY. BUT SHE IS SAILING WITH PORTENTS OF NEW DIPLOMATIC STORMS RIDING THE SEAS WITH HER. UNTIL SHE MAKES PORT SOMEWHERE--OR BECOMES ANOTHER NEUTRAL VICTIM TO THE WAR TRAGEDY IN EUROPE--THE PLACE THAT HER NAME MAY HOLD IN THE HISTORY OF THIS WAR CANNOT BE FORETOLD.

THE FACT THAT NO WORD CAME FROM HER IMMEDIATELY AFTER SHE LEFT MURMANSK SEEMED TO CONFIRM THE BERLIN REPORT THAT SHE SAILED FROM THAT PORT IN THE SAME STATUS AS SHE ARRIVED, AS A GERMAN PRIZE. HAD SHE BEEN RELEASED BY THE RUSSIANS TO HER OWN AMERICAN CREW, IT IS LIKELY THAT HER RADIO WOULD HAVE PROMPTLY ADVISED WASHINGTON.

SUCH A RELEASE WAS DEMANDED BY WASHINGTON IN DIPLOMATIC EXCHANGES INSISTING THAT RUSSIA, AS A "NEUTRAL," COULD NOT ACT AS AN AGENT FOR GERMANY IN KEEPING A NEUTRAL VESSEL IN CUSTODY.

THE RUSSIANS UNDOUBTEDLY RECOGNIZED THAT THEY WERE ON DELICATE DIPLOMATIC GROUND AND MIGHT OFFEND EITHER THE UNITED STATES OR GERMANY IF THEY COMPLIED WITH THE AMERICAN DEMAND OR REFUSED IT DIRECTLY.

OCT 28 1939

IT APPEARS PROBABLE THAT MOSCOW SOUGHT TO FIND A MIDDLE COURSE. IF THE FLINT WAS RESTORED TO CONTROL OF THE GERMAN PRIZE CREW THAT BROUGHT HER IN, AND ORDERED TO LEAVE PORTSMITH, IT WAS A PLAIN INTIMATION THAT THE SOVIET GOVERNMENT WAS TRYING TO WASH ITS HANDS COMPLETELY OF ANY RESPONSIBILITY, EITHER TO WASHINGTON OR TO BERLIN, FOR WHAT MIGHT HAPPEN TO THE SHIP, HER AMERICAN CREW AND HER CARGO.

THERE HAVE BEEN INTIMATIONS IN RUSSIAN DISPATCHES THAT THE FLINT PUT INTO MURMANSK IN "UNSEAWORTHY" CONDITION. THERE HAS BEEN NO DEFINITE EXPLANATION OF THAT, BUT IT DOES AFFORD MOSCOW A POSSIBLE PRETEXT FOR GRANTING THE GERMAN PRIZE CREW CERTAIN REPAIRS OR EQUIPMENT AND ORDERING HER TO SEA AGAIN WITHIN TIME LIMITS SANCTIONED BY INTERNATIONAL LAW.

30.24-4329. 30.24-4329

A201WX

IN EFFECT, THAT WOULD PUT MOSCOW IN THE ATTITUDE OF SAYING THAT IT DECLINED TO PASS JUDGMENT IN ANY WAY ON THE STATUS OF THE FLINT.

YET THERE REMAINS THE FACT THAT NOT ONLY THE ULTIMATE FATE OF THE SHIP AND HER CARGO, BUT OF HER AMERICAN CREW, MUST SHAPE THE COURSE OF NOT ONLY AMERICAN-GERMAN, BUT OF AMERICAN-RUSSIAN RELATIONS ARISING OUT OF THE FLINT CASE.

IN THE EYES OF SOME OBSERVERS, RUSSIA APPEARS TO HAVE WINKED AT A GERMAN EFFORT TO USE THE AMERICAN CREW OF THE FLINT AS HOSTAGES AGAINST ANY BRITISH ATTACK ON THE VESSEL IN ITS EFFORT TO RUN THE BLOCKADE. COMMANDERS OF BRITISH PATROL CRAFT, SEEKING TO LOCATE THE FLINT AND ITS POSSIBLE ESCORTING GERMAN SUBMARINE, ARE ON FULL NOTICE OF THE PRESENCE OF THE AMERICANS ON THE STEAMER. THAT IS BOUND TO RESTRICT THEIR ACTION IF THEY SIGHT HER.

SO THE CITY OF FLINT SAILS ON WITH TROUBLE PERCHED ON HER BOWS--POTENTIAL TROUBLE FOR MOSCOW, FOR BERLIN, FOR WASHINGTON AND FOR LONDON.

ARMS EMBARGO, THE SENATE TONIGHT APPROVED THE ADMINISTRATION NEUTRALITY BILL AND SENT IT ON TO THE HOUSE, WHERE THE PROPONENTS OF THE MEASURE CLAIM A SMALL BUT SAFE MAJORITY.

THE 63 TO 30 VOTE FOR THE MEASURE WAS THE CLIMAX OF FOUR WEEKS DEBATE IN THE SENATE AND A DISCUSSION WHICH HAS RAGED UP AND DOWN THE NATION AS A WHOLE SINCE THE WAR IN EUROPE BEGAN.

THE BILL WOULD PERMIT THE BELLIGERENTS OF EUROPE TO BUY AMERICAN PRODUCTS OF ANY KIND, WITH THE RESTRICTION THAT IN GENERAL THEY MUST PAY CASH, MAY BORROW NO MONEY HERE, AND MUST PROVIDE FOREIGN SHIPS FOR TRANSPORTING THEIR PURCHASES ACROSS THE ATLANTIC.

FURTHER, IT IS INTENDED TO INSULATE THE UNITED STATES FROM THE WAR, BY LAYING DOWN CONDITIONS DESIGNED TO PREVENT "INCIDENTS" LIKELY TO INFLAME PUBLIC OPINION OR TENDING OTHERWISE TO DRAG THIS COUNTRY INTO THE CONFLICT.

FOR THIS PURPOSE IT FORB

WASHN--FIRST ADD 2ND N L NEUTRALITY BY TURNER XXX CONFLICT.

FOR THIS PURPOSE IT FORBIDS AMERICAN SHIPS TO SAIL FOR BELLIGERENT PORTS IN THE DANGER AREAS, OR TO ENTER "COMBAT" ZONES TO BE DEMARCATED BY THE PRESIDENT, AND PROHIBITS AMERICAN CITIZENS TO TRAVEL ON BELLIGERENT SHIPS.

FOUR WEEKS OF DEBATE HAD SO FULLY COVERED THE ISSUE OF THE EMBARGO, THAT WHEN THE SENATE REACHED THE POINT AT WHICH IT WAS CONFRONTED WITH WHAT SENATOR CLARK (D-MO) CALLED THE "NAKED ISSUE OF WHETHER WE SHOULD HAVE AN EMBARGO OR NOT," THE LEGISLATORS FINALLY FOUND THAT THEY HAD NOTHING MORE TO SAY.

THE VOTE ON REPEAL, PRESENTED BY CLARK IN THE FORM OF AN AMEND-

MENT TO INSERT AN EMBARGO INTO THE PRESENT BILL, SHOWED 60 SENATORS FOR REPEAL AND 33 AGAINST IT. HOWEVER, THREE OF THOSE WHO VOTED TO RETAIN THE EMBARGO, ALTHOUGH BEATEN ON THAT ISSUE, FELT OBLIGED TO SUPPORT THE BILL ON FINAL PASSAGE. THEY WERE SENATORS GILLETTE (D-IOWA), REED (R-KAS), AND JOHNSON (D-COLO). THUS, THE VOTE ON FINAL PASSAGE WAS 63 TO 30.

THREE SENATORS WERE ABSENT, BUT THEIR POSITION WAS ANNOUNCED BY COLLEAGUES. OF THEM, GLASS (D-VA) AND ASHURST (D-ARIZ), WERE FOR THE BILL, AND BONE (D-WASH) WAS AGAINST. COUNTING ALL THE SENATE, THEN, THE FINAL VOTE WAS 65 TO 31, WITH THE ADMINISTRATION RECEIVING ALMOST EXACTLY THE NUMBER OF VOTES IT ESTIMATED WOULD GO TO IT WHEN THE SESSION BEGAN FIVE WEEKS AGO.

FOR THE MOST PART THE FINAL DAY OF THE DEBATE WAS A QUIET AND EXPEDITIOUS KILLING OF ONE OPPOSITION AMENDMENT AFTER ANOTHER, MOSTLY BY THE APPROXIMATE TWO-TO-ONE MAJORITIES THAT SHOWED THEMSELVES ON THE FINAL VOTE. THE SENATE WAS OBVIOUSLY IMPATIENT TO BE DONE WITH THE SUBJECT, YET FOR THE POST PART WAS CHEERFUL AND GOOD NATURED. ONE EXCEPTION TO THAT, HOWEVER, WAS A BLUNTLY WORDED PERSONAL EXCHANGE BETWEEN TWO OLD FOES ON THE ISSUE, CHAIRMAN PITTMAN (D-NEV) OF THE FOREIGN REELATIONS COMMITTEE AND SENATOR CLARK (D-MO).

IN THE HOUSE, AS WAS THE CASE IN THE SENATE, THE CENTRAL ISSUE OBVIOUSLY WILL BE REPEALING THE PRESENT EMBARGO ON ARMS, AMMUNITION AND IMPLEMENTS OF WAR TO NATIONS AT WAR. SENATE OPPONENTS OF SUCH ACTION HAVE REPEATEDLY DENOUNCED IT AS A "STEP TOWARD WAR."

HOW THAT ISSUE IS TO BE APPROACHED HAS NOT YET BEEN DEFINITELY DECIDED BY THE HOUSE LEADERSHIP, BUT THEY LEAN TOWARD A PLAN WHICH WOULD AFFORD THE HOUSE A SEPARATE VOTE ON THE EMBARGO QUESTION, POSSIBLY ON A MOTION TO INSTRUCT CONFEREES AS TO HOW THEY SHALL ACT ON THE ISSUE.

NEH

A75WX

THE MEASURE WILL NOT HAVE TO START FROM SCRATCH IN THE HOUSE, SINCE THAT CHAMBER PASSED LAST SESSION A NEUTRALITY BILL CONTAINING A MODIFIED ARMS EMBARGO. THE SENATE MEASURE GOES TO THE HOUSE AS A SUBSTITUTE FOR THAT BILL, AND SO THE HOUSE PROCEDURE COULD BE CONSIDERABLY SHORTENED.

IN ACTUAL OPERATION, AS WAS REPEATEDLY POINTED OUT IN THE SENATE DEBATE, LIFTING THE EMBARGO WOULD GIVE THE FRANCO-BRITISH ALLIES ACCESS TO AMERICAN WAR SUPPLIES TO THE VIRTUAL EXCLUSION OF GERMANY. IT IS ASSUMED THAT THE BRITISH FLEET WOULD KEEP THE SEA LANES OPEN FOR SUCH COMMERCE AND AT THE SAME TIME PREVENT GERMANY FROM MAKING PURCHASES HERE.

MUCH ORATORY AND MUCH VOTING ON AMENDMENTS PRECEDED THE FINAL VOTE TONIGHT. BY A VOTE OF 73 TO 17 THE CHAMBER REJECTED AN EFFORT BY SENATOR LAFOLLETTE (PROG-WIS) TO ATTACH TO THE BILL A RIDER REQUIRING THAT BEFORE CONGRESS COULD VOTE A DECLARATION OF WAR THERE MUST FIRST BE A NATIONAL ADVISORY REFERENDUM ON THE QUESTION.

THE SOVIET PRESS REPORTED THAT THE VESSEL HAD BEEN FREED FROM MURMANSK, RUSSIA, AND ADVICES IN BERLIN SAID SHE WAS SAILING TO HAMBURG IN CHARGE OF THE GERMAN PRIZE CREW WHICH TOOK HER TO RUSSIA SEVERAL DAYS AGO AFTER SHE WAS SEIZED AS A CONTRABAND CARRIER BY A GERMAN RAIDER.

BUT AMERICAN OFFICIALS, WHO HAD DEMANDED THAT THE VESSEL BE TURNED OVER TO THIS COUNTRY, WERE ESPECIALLY IRRITATED OVER THE LACK OF OFFICIAL WORD FROM RUSSIA. SECRETARY HULL, IN STERN TONES, RECOUNTED MANY ATTEMPTS THE AMERICAN EMBASSY IN MOSCOW HAD MADE TO LEARN THE EXACT STATUS OF THE CRAFT.

THE NEAREST THING TO AN OFFICIAL EXPLANATION OF RUSSIA'S ATTITUDE AVAILABLE TO THE STATE DEPARTMENT WAS A BRIEF RUSSIAN NEWS AGENCY DISPATCH SAYING: "AFTER THE VERIFICATION OF THE COMPOSITION OF THE CARGO ON THE STEAMSHIP CITY OF FLINT THE MARITIME AUTHORITIES AT MURMANSK HAVE ISSUED AN ORDER TO FREE THE VESSEL WITH THE OBLIGATION TO LEAVE THE PORT IMMEDIATELY."

STATE DEPARTMENT OFFICIALS POINTEDLY CALLED ATTENTION TO WHAT WAS REGARDED AS A BREACH OF ETIQUETTE ON THE PART OF THE SOVIET GOVERNMENT IN PUTTING OUT SUCH ANNOUNCEMENTS THROUGH A NEWS AGENCY HOURS BEFORE GIVING THE SAME INFORMATION TO THE UNITED STATES GOVERNMENT.

WASHINGTON, OCT. 27-(AP)-AMBASSADOR LAURENCE A. STEINHARDT REPORTED TO THE STATE DEPARTMENT TONIGHT THAT SOVIET OFFICIALS HAD ORDERED THE CITY OF FLINT TO LEAVE MURMANSK UNDER HER GERMAN PRIZE CREW.

(THE PRESS IN RUSSIA HAD ALREADY REPORTED THE DEPARTURE OF THE CAPTURED AMERICAN FREIGHTER FROM THE RUSSIAN ARCTIC PORT, BUT THERE HAD BEEN SOME DOUBT AS TO WHETHER IT WAS IN CHARGE OF THE GERMAN CREW).

STEINHARDT SAID THAT ASSISTANT COMMISAR OF FOREIGN AFFAIRS POTEMKIN HAD ADVISED HIM THAT THE RUSSIAN GOVERNMENT FELT THAT ITS DECISION WAS NOT ONLY IN ACCORDANCE WITH THE WELL-RECOGNIZED PRINCIPLES OF INTERNATIONAL LAW AND CONSONANT WITH THE OBLIGATIONS OF A NEUTRAL BUT THAT IT WAS ALSO THE CORRECT POSITION TO TAKE AS BETWEEN THE CONFLICTING CLAIMS OF THE UNITED STATES AND GERMANY TO POSSESSION OF THE VESSEL AND HER CARGO.

THE SHIP HAD BEEN SEIZED BY A GERMAN RAIDER, AND TAKEN TO RUSSIA. THE UNITED STATES, CONTENDING THE GERMANS HAD NO RIGHT TO TAKE HER TO A NEUTRAL PORT, HAD DEMANDED THAT RUSSIA HAND HER OVER TO THIS COUNTRY.

IT WAS AFTER THE FORMAL DEMAND FOR RETURN OF THE VESSEL AND HER CARGO, STEINHARDT SAID, THAT POTEMKIN TOLD HIM IT HAD BEEN DECIDED "TO SEND HER OUT IN THE SAME STATUS AS SHE HAD ENTERED ONE OF THE PORTS."

THE AMBASSADOR ADDED THAT POTEMKIN TOLD HIM THE DECISION WAS FINAL. STEINHARDT'S DISPATCH DID NOT SAY, HOWEVER, WHETHER THE SHIP HAD YET SAILED, THOUGH HE REPORTED THAT THE SOVIET COMMISSAR TOLD HIM THE ORDER FOR THE GERMAN CREW TO TAKE THE VESSEL OUT OF MURMANSK WAS EFFECTIVE IMMEDIATELY.

STEINHARDT SAID THAT IN RESPONSE TO HIS INQUIRIES AS TO THE WELFARE OF THE AMERICAN CREW, POTEMKIN TOLD HIM IT WAS HIS UNDERSTANDING THAT THEY HAD BEEN ON BOARD THE SHIP ALL THE TIME AND WERE WELL.

THE SOVIET GOVERNMENT'S POSITION WITH REGARD TO THE RETURN OF THE SHIP WAS ASCRIBED TO INTERNATIONAL LAW WHICH PERMITS A PRIZE CREW TO BRING A VESSEL INTO THE HARBOR OF A NEUTRAL IN CASE OF SOME CONDITION MAKING THE SHIP UNSEAWORTHY. POTEMKIN ADVISED THAT THE GERMAN CREW REPORTED THE CITY OF FLINT'S MACHINERY WAS DAMAGED.

LAURENCE A.STEINHARDT, UNITED STATES AMBASSADOR, WHO RELAYED THIS MESSAGE FROM MOSCOW, SAID HE HAD BEEN INFORMED THAT THE VESSEL HAD BEEN ORDERED OUT OF MURMANSK IN THE "SAME STATUS AS SHE ENTERED", THAT IS, WITH THE PRIZE CREW IN CHARGE, THE AMERICAN CREW ON BOARD, AND THE CARGO INTACT.

THE UNITED STATES HAD DEMANDED POSSESSION OF THE AMERICAN VESSEL, WHICH HAD BEEN SEIZED BY A GERMAN RAIDER AS A CONTRABAND CARRIER AND TAKEN TO MURMANSK. SOVIET FREES SHIP

[By the Associated Press]

Moscow, Oct. 28—Tass, Soviet official news agency, reported the American freighter City of Flint had sailed tonight from Murmansk after repairing her engines.

The brief Tass report failed to say whether the freighter was in command of the German prize crew which brought her into the North Russian port last Monday or whether the American crew still was aboard.

Authorities At Berlin Reiterate Ship Sailed

Berlin, Oct. 28 (AP)—German authorities reiterated tonight that the seized American freighter City of Flint was en route to "some German port" from Murmansk, although the United States Embassy said it had been informed earlier the vessel still was at anchor in the Russian harbor.

Alexander Kirk, United States Charge d'Affaires, said he was advised informally by the German Government this morning that the freighter was at Murmansk, where she was carried by a German prize crew early this week.

30.24-4337

30.24-4337

Kirk said, however, he had been given no further details at that time and that he had received no later information since then.

INSIST SHIP SAILED

German officials told foreign correspondents late this afternoon—as they did at two conferences yesterday—that the German prize crew which carried the City of Flint to Murmansk was bringing her to Germany after Russian permission had been granted for her to leave. Further information was declined.

(In a report to the State Department from Moscow yesterday, United States Ambassador Laurence A. Steinhardt quoted Soviet Vice Commissar of Foreign Affairs Vladimir Potemkin as saying that when the Soviet Government judged the vessel fit to put to sea it had ordered her to depart immediately with both the American and German crews aboard.

(Steinhardt said Potemkin added that the order would be enforced immediately. The State Department has had no word from the Ambassador that his was done.)

NO OFFICIALS AVAILABLE

No German officials could be reached tonight to explain the contradictory reports of the whereabouts of the freighter which was seized because she carried a cargo the Germans said was contraband.

One government spokesman said it would be impossible to make a further check tonight.

The German press headed a Soviet communique announcing the German prize crew had been instructed to leave Russian waters with this caption:

"Captured U. S. A. ship City of Flint leaves Murmansk."

Reports from Bergen Norway, said its problematical whether the vessel would call at any Norwegian ports enroute to German waters. There were reports last night that the American crew might be landed at Bergen.)

(Bergen sources estimated it would take a week for the ship to reach Germany, provided she successfully ran the British blockade. Because of a government prohibiting disclosure of the position of ships at sea, it was impossible to ascertain the exact whereabouts of the City of Flint by Norwegian sources.)

BERLIN REPORTS FLINT EN ROUTE TO REICH PORT

Freighter Is Declared to Be Worming Through British Blockade.

ALL WELL ABOARD, SAY NAZIS

U. S. Vessel Said to Be Convoyed by Warships, With Her Own Crew Aboard.

BERLIN, Oct. 28 (A. P.).—News reached Berlin this morning that all was well aboard the United States-owned freighter City of Flint as she wormed her way through the British-blockaded North Sea toward a German port.

The freighter was being convoyed by German warships — presumably both submarines and surface craft. Aboard her, it was believed, were the American crew of forty-one and the prize crew put in command last week when the German pocket battleship Deutschland captured her.

If she gets through to a German harbor, a prize court will pass on the question of whether she was a contraband carrier and decide as to disposition of ship and cargo.

Germans recognize the danger involved in the precarious job of slipping past British warcraft. Bad weather and low visibility, however, were on their side.

The City of Flint sailed under Soviet Russian orders Thursday night to leave the arctic port of Murmansk, where the prize crew had taken her because she was—as the Germans put it—"unseaworthy."

Route Not Disclosed.

Specifically, what progress the freighter was making was not disclosed here. Neither her route nor final destination was disclosed.

Earlier Germans had said she would be taken to Hamburg, but authorized sources were vague on that point today.

Foreign Office spokesmen said that such a question remained a naval secret and it was emphasized the British Navy was undoubtedly most interested in the ship. Her cargo of tractors and other goods originally were consigned to England.

"Obviously they (the British) would try everything and would rather attempt to sink the prize than let it remain in our hands," these sources declared.

Washington Rebukes Moscow

WASHINGTON, Oct. 28 (AP).—The United States made new charges tonight that Soviet Russia has "withheld adequate co-operation" in the dispute over the American freighter City of Flint.

The Tass report from Moscow tonight that the City of Flint had left Murmansk was said at the Department of State to be news here. A Department official said the report would probably be relayed to Washington today by Laurence A. Steinhardt, American Ambassador to Russia.

In a statement reviewing the capture of the vessel by a German raider and her subsequent entry into the Russian port of Murmansk the State Department contended that it was the Soviet government's "clear duty" to turn the craft over to her American crew.

The department, which maintains that the entry was illegal, said the Germans apparently had changed their story as to why it was necessary to take the craft to Murmansk. First the statement said, it was alleged that the German prize crew lacked needed charts.

"Later this ground seems to have been abandoned and a new ground for theory relating to defective machinery was set up," it added.

The statement caustically declared that "each person can decide for himself" how much light is shed on the incident "by the action of the Soviet government in withholding adequate co-operation with the American government with respect to assembling and disclosing to the American Embassy in Moscow the essential facts pertaining to the landing, the whereabouts and welfare of the American crew."

The new charges steered close to open accusations of Soviet bad faith, and laid the groundwork for additional diplomatic action if the reinforced [illegible] protests made yesterday in Moscow by Ambassador Steinhardt.

Ship Still at Murmansk?

The tangled tale of the captive freighter had taken a new turn earlier today when the German Ministry of Marine informed the United States that the vessel was still at Murmansk, and was not sailing the seas in charge of the German prize crew.

This conflicted sharply with word previously circulated in both Berlin and Moscow. On Thursday night the Soviet government announced the release of the vessel, which had been captured by a German raider as a contraband carrier. Also on Thursday night well informed sources in the Soviet capital had passed out the information that she had actually sailed from Murmansk.

Official circles received in Berlin had supported this statement, and officials there said yesterday that the City of Flint was voyaging down the North Sea toward Hamburg in possession of the Nazi prize crew.

WASHINGTON, OCT. 28-(AP)-THE STATE DEPARTMENT ISSUED FRESH CHARGES OF SOVIET NON-COOPERATION IN THE DISPUTE OVER THE CITY OF FLINT TONIGHT WHILE CONFLICTING REPORTS OF THE CAPTURED AMERICAN FREIGHTER'S WHEREABOUTS WERE FINALLY RESOLVED BY WORD THAT SHE HAD SAILED FROM MURMANSK.

OCT 29 1935

A BRIEF DISPATCH FROM TASS, OFFICIAL SOVIET NEWS AGENCY, SAID THE VESSEL LEFT THE RUSSIAN ARCTIC PORT SATURDAY NIGHT, MOSCOW TIME, PRESUMABLY FOR GERMANY, AFTER REPAIRING HER ENGINES. WHETHER THE GERMAN PRIZE CREW WHICH BROUGHT HER THERE STILL HELD COMMAND AND WHETHER THE AMERICAN CREW WAS ABOARD WAS NOT STATED.

A STATE DEPARTMENT OFFICIAL SAID THE TASS REPORT WAS NEWS HERE. THE DISPATCH WAS VIEWED AS EMPHASIZING A DEPARTMENTAL STATEMENT ISSUED EARLIER CHARGING THAT MOSCOW HAD "WITHHELD ADEQUATE COOPERATION." AMBASSADOR LAURENCE A.STEINHARDT HAD COMPLAINED THAT INFORMATION ON THE VESSEL WAS RELEASED TO TASS BEFORE BEING MADE AVAILABLE TO HIM.

THE STATE DEPARTMENT'S LAST WORD ON THE CITY OF FLINT WAS A DIPLOMATIC ADVICE FROM BERLIN THAT THE SHIP STILL WAS IN MURMANSK. A DEPARTMENT OFFICIAL SAID THE TASS REPORT OF THE SAILING PROBABLY WOULD BE FORTHCOMING LATER FROM STEINHARDT.

Today, however, the German Ministry of Marine informed Alexander C. Kirk, American Charge d'Affaires at Berlin, that the Flint was still at Murmansk this afternoon with the American crew of forty-one aboard.

Whether the conflicting reports were a German attempt to confuse the British fleet was not determined. Officials here were making no predictions as to just how the whole incident would come out. The United States, which is demanding the return of the ship, has protested with "indignation" to Soviet Russia on the ground that the latter has displayed marked reluctance to provide prompt information about the vessel.

Kirk, besides communicating with the German Ministry of Marine, got in touch with the German Foreign Office today, and there also he was told that, "according to the latest report," the vessel and crew were at Murmansk. He was informed that "if, following the completion of repairs," the ship should be taken to another port, the American crew presumably would be kept aboard to operate the vessel. Significance was seen in the intimation that repairs were necessary.

Meanwhile, Ambassador Steinhardt reported that another attempt to speak on the telephone with the captain of the City of Flint at midnight last night (4 p. m. Friday, New York time), had been unsuccessful. Steinhardt advised the State Department that he had been given again to understand that the crew was well and that no illness was reported.

In reporting to the State Department yesterday, Steinhardt quoted Vladimar P. Potemkin, Soviet Vice-Commissar of Foreign Affairs, as saying that when the Soviet government judged the vessel fit to put to sea, it had ordered the ship to depart immediately, with both the American and German crews aboard. Steinhardt said Potemkin had added that the order would be enforced immediately. The State Department, however, had received no word from Steinhardt that this had been done.

BERLIN ASSERTS AMERICAN CREW IS ABOARD SHIP

State Department Notified by Charge d'Affaires in Reich Capital.

STEINHARDT STILL BALKED

U. S. Envoy in Moscow Not Able to Reach Captain—Sailing Was Reported.

WASHINGTON, Oct. 28 (A. P.).—The State Department was advised officially from Berlin today that the seized American steamship City of Flint still was at Murmansk.

Alexander C. Kirk, American charge d'affaires at Berlin, reported that he was told at the German Foreign Office late this afternoon that the crew still was aboard.

[Earlier in the day Berlin reported that it had been advised that the City of Flint was wending her way under convoy through the British blockade to a German port, presumably Hamburg, and that all was well aboard the freighter.]

Mr. Kirk said he was told also that if, after completion of repairs, the ship were taken to another port the American crew presumably would be kept on board to operate the vessel.

No News at Hamburg.

The American consul-general at Hamburg reported to Mr. Kirk, the State Department was advised, that the German prize commissioner there had received no news of the vessel.

Meanwhile, Ambassador Laurence A. Steinhardt at Moscow reported that he again was unable to speak on the telephone with the captain of the City of Flint at midnight last night, as he had hoped to do. He advised the State Department that he again had been given to understand that the crew was well and that no illness was reported.

In reporting to the State Department yesterday, Mr. Steinhardt quoted Vladimar Potemkin, Vice-Commissar of Soviet Foreign Affairs, as saying that when the Soviet Government judged the vessel fit to put to sea, it had ordered the ship to depart immediately, with both the American and German crews aboard.

Order to Be Enforced.

Mr. Steinhardt said that Mr. Potemkin had added that the order would be enforced immediately. The State Department, however, had received no word from Mr. Steinhardt that this had been done.

The ship was captured by a German raider while en route to England with a cargo that included some contraband.

State Department Is Angry.

Earlier indignant officials of the State Department had been advised by Mr. Steinhardt that the City of Flint had left Murmansk in the "same status as she entered," which meant that the German crew was in charge, the American crew on board and the cargo intact.

The United States demanded possession of the vessel, contending Germany had no right to take a prize ship in a neutral port. But Mr. Potemkin told Mr. Steinhardt that to accede to the demand would be "an unneutral act."

Officials here were resentful at the fact that Ambassador Steinhardt was not granted an earlier interview with Commissar Potemkin and that Soviet Government released news of the vessel to Tass, official news agency, before giving it to the American envoy.

Text of State Department's Statement on Flint Capture

Washington, Oct. 28 (AP)—Following is the text of the State Department memorandum tonight concerning the City of Flint:

The City of Flint was captured by a German cruiser at an estimated distance of some 1,250 miles from New York, with a mixed cargo destined for British ports. The date of capture is understood to have been Oct. 9.

The City of Flint was taken into the harbor of Tromso on Oct. 21, with a German crew and flying the German flag. After remaining two hours to take water, it was ordered by the Norwegian Government to depart, which it did.

The City of Flint was taken into the harbor of Murmansk on the evening of Oct. 23.

On Oct. 25 the American Charge d'Affaires cabled from Berlin that the Foreign Office, at its press conference, said that the City of Flint was captured by a German vessel and contraband was found on board, destined for England. The Foreign Office then added that it was found, however, that the ship was unseaworthy in that it did not have navigation charts adequate for bringing the ship into a German port.

When the vessel entered the harbor of Murmansk, according to an announcement, presumably from the Soviet Government through the Tass News Agency, "the naval forces at the port of Murmansk have temporarily held the vessel and interned the German crew."

On Oct. 25 the American Charge d'Affaires at Berlin cabled that the German Foreign Office, referring to the seizure of the City of Flint, said that "the German authorities were communicating with the Soviet authorities in the matter."

On the same day (Oct. 25) the Tass agency reported that "the German crew of the cargo steamer City of Flint has been released from interment by the maritime authorities of Murmansk in view of the fact, as has been established, that the vessel was brought into port for repairs of her machinery, the vessel is meanwhile remaining in Murmansk for verification of the exact composition of her cargo."

NO DETAILS ON DAMAGE

On Oct. 26 the American Charge D'Affaires cabled from Berlin, quoting a memorandum received that morning from the Foreign Office relative to the C[illegible] of Flint and its crew which, among other things, stated that "a prize crew placed on board (the City of Flint) has brought the steamer to the Harbor of Murmansk because of sea damage." When transmitting the memorandum an official of the Foreign Office stated informally to the charge that the Foreign Office had no details as to the damage which necessitated taking the ship to Murmansk, but he maintained, in response to an inquiry, that the term "damage" would cover the case of a ship lacking charts with which to navigate the waters through which she had to proceed.

For some reason as yet unexplained the German crew was interned in spite of the fact that, according to the German authorities, they were without charts and had put into Murmansk because they could not proceed to a German port without charts. Later they were released seemingly under a plea that their entry into Murmansk was required for necessary repairs to defective machinery.

PLEA 'IGNORED'

A prize crew may take a captured ship into a neutral port without internment only in case of stress of weather, want of fuel and provisions, or necessity of repairs. In all other cases the neutral is obligated to intern the prize crew and restore the vessel to her former crew.

The conclusion from the foregoing facts and circumstances indicates that when the City of Flint entered the harbor at Murmansk any plea relating to the chart requirements if advanced must have been ignored, since the German crew was interned. A second and entirely different reason for entering Murmansk—namely, defective machinery which called for immediate repairs—was not advanced until later. A subsequent cable from the American Charge D'Affaires at Berlin, also dated Oct. 26, quoted a statement of the Foreign Office at its noon press conference to the effect that the fact that the Russians have freed the German crew indicates that the Soviet authorities have confirmed the [illegible] of the prize crew that the City of Flint was unseaworthy and it was therefore permissible to take the ship into a neutral harbor.

Testimony of the American crew as to the full facts pertaining to the taking of the City of Flint into Murmansk is not yet available.

CITES SOVIET'S 'CLEAR DUTY'

It seems manifest that, even if it is assumed that the German crew was proceeding legally prior to the entry of the City of Flint into the Harbor of Murmansk, the known facts and circumstances support the contention of the American Government that the German crew did not at the time of entry offer any reasonable or justifiable grounds such as are prescribed by international law for taking the vessel into this port, and that therefore it was the clear duty of the Soviet government to turn the City of Flint over to the American crew. This has been the major contention of the American Government.

In view of the foregoing facts and circumstances, each person can judge for himself the question as to how much light is shed on this entire transaction by the action of the Soviet government in withholding adequate co-operation with the American Government with respect to assembling and disclosing to the American Embassy in Moscow the essential facts pertaining to the landing, the whereabouts and welfare of the American crew; by the fact that it was first alleged by the German authorities that the need for charts was the ground for bringing the vessel into port; and by the fact that later this ground seems to have been abandoned and a new ground on theory relating to defective machinery was set up.

Envoy's Report From Moscow On City of Flint

Steinhardt Chided Russia for Keeping Him in Dark, Demanded Ship's Release

WASHINGTON, Oct. 27 (AP).—Following is the text of the report on the City of Flint incident, sent to the State Department Friday night by Laurence A. Steinhardt, American Ambassador to Russia.

"I have just seen Assistant Commissar of Foreign Affairs Potemkin and have vigorously reiterated my indignation at the lack of co-operation by the Soviet government in withholding information from me while issuing communiques with respect to the City of Flint through the medium of the Tass (news) agency.

He replied that Tass was an official agency of the Soviet government and that it was the custom of his government to make announcements through it. I told him that this was no excuse for his failure to keep me informed, particularly in view of my repeated requests for information on behalf of my government, which had been the purpose of my daily visits to him. After a lengthy discussion, I formally demanded that the vessel and cargo be turned over to the American crew and be authorized to depart. He thereupon made the following statement:

"'The City of Flint had come into the port of Murmansk in charge of a German prize crew without any previous knowledge on the part of the Soviet government and through no act on its part. The reason ascribed by the prize crew for the entry was damaged machinery making the ship unseaworthy. When the Soviet authorities at Murmansk judged that the vessel was again fit to put to sea, and being desirous of preserving its neutrality, the Soviet government had ordered the vessel to leave the port of Murmansk immediately under the same conditions as those of her entry, namely, with both the German and American crews on board and her cargo intact.'

"He added that the order would be enforced immediately and that the Soviet government felt that its decision was not only in accordance with the well-recognized principles of international law and consonant with the obligations of a neutral, but it was also the correct position to take as between the conflicting claims of the United States and Germany to possession of the vessel and her cargo, and that by this he meant 'to send her out in the same status as she had entered [illegible] of the ports.'

"He said that his government did not consider that it had the right to turn the vessel and her cargo over to the American crew unless the German prize crew refused to take her out, as, in the opinion of his government, to do so would be an unneutral act. In reply to a question, he stated that the decision of the Soviet government to permit the German prize crew to take the vessel to sea was final.

"I then asked him who had verified the alleged damage to the machinery, to which he replied that he had no information on this subject, but assumed this had been done by the authorities at Murmansk.

"I again inquired concerning the welfare of the American crew and he said that it was his understanding that they had been on board the ship all of the time and were well.

"I then referred to my difficulties in making contact with the captain or members of the crew, reciting my repeated attempts to get into communication with them by telegram and telephone, as well as my inability to obtain a plane today. He disclaimed any responsibility for these difficulties, passing over the subject lightly by pointing out that the crew being on board the ship in the roadstead, in conjunction with the average delays in long-distance telephone communication, had probably brought about this 'unfortunate result.'

Hundreds See R. A. F. Down German Plane

2 Nazi Fliers Killed, 2 Captured In Reconnoissance Hop Over Rosyth

London, Oct. 28 (AP)—A large German reconnaissance plane, apparently seeking information on Britain's great naval base at Rosyth, fell victim today to the Royal Air Force in a spectacular sky battle, witnessed by hundreds of Scots.

Two German airmen were killed and two captured when the German plane was forced down east of Dalkeith, about 6½ miles southeast of Edinburgh.

The invading plane seemingly was headed for the strategic Firth of Forth and the Rosyth base, objective of previous Nazi raids.

In announcing the air battle, the Air Ministry also said British airplanes carried out successful reconnaissance flights over "certain areas in southern Germany" last night, and all returned.

British fighting ships intercepted the German airplane. 'As hundreds of Scots watched from the ground, the planes zigzagged across the sky, with the invader desperately trying to shake off its pursuers.

FLIER TAKEN PRISONER

"Finally the German plane came down on a hillside and struck a stone wall, and even then the pilot would not give up," one witness said. "He tried to get his machine into the air again and ran along the rough ground for about a half mile before he had to stop."

Two of the Germans in the plane were killed dead. Another was wounded and taken prisoner with the uninjured pilot.

Alarm sirens were sounded in the Firth of Forth, followed by an all clear signal in half an hour.

An air raid warning also was sounded in the Orkney Islands which surround the Scapa Flow anchorage, but the invading plane was reported to have been routed.

The only warning to the town's inhabitants was the sound of the firing. Some residents said that this was the second occasion on which raiders had been driven off without the alarm sirens sounding.

One siren was sounded, but there was no general warning to the civilian population. Taxpayers in an east Lothian town protested to the authorities over the failure to sound the sirens. They said that the firing came so quickly that there was not sufficient time to take cover.

A laborer at work on the roof of the police station said that he had picked up three spent bullets.

After failure to sound air raid warnings during the Firth of Forth raid on October 16, Sir Kingsley Wood, Air Minister, announced a new policy under which warnings would be given only when real danger appeared imminent, so as to prevent frequent dislocation of normal activities.

No Bombs Dropped.

Gunfire was heard before the warning and civilians saw what they believed to be an enemy warplane emerging from high clouds.

No bombs were dropped in populated centers, however. Air-raid precaution personnel also was put on the alert for a half hour in Northern Ireland.

Royal Air Force fighter planes took off for defense, but a precautionary warning was sounded without a general alarm having been sent out.

The warning in the Firth of Forth area was the first there since October 23. Trails of smoke from gunfire were seen clearly in the sky.

R. A. F. Wins Edinburgh Fight

German Plane Forced Down on Hillside—British Scout Over Reich.

LONDON, Oct. 28 (A. P.).—Two German airmen were killed, one was wounded and a Nazi pilot was captured today in a drama of the skies witnessed by hundreds of Scots near Edinburgh when British fighter planes engaged and forced down a German war plane.

The Air Ministry also announced that the Royal Air Force had carried out reconnaissance flights over "certain areas in southern Germany" during the night and that all British planes had returned safely.

The Air Ministry declared that "a German aircraft which was attempting reconnaissances was forced down by our fighters this morning each of Dalkeith (about six and one-half miles southeast of Edinburgh)." The invader apparently was headed for the strategic Firth of Forth objective of previous German raids.

Immediately after the Nazi plane was sighted, British ships went aloft with a resulting rare display of aerobatics as the German pilot tried desperately to shake off his attackers.

"Finally the German plane came down on a hillside and struck a stone wall and even then the pilot would not give up," one witness said. "He tried to get his machine into the air again and ran along the rough ground for about a half mile before he had to stop."

Bullets Fall on Town.

An air-raid alarm in the Firth of Forth area lasted half an hour.

Machine-gun bullets fell in the main street of one town and several spent bullets spattered a few yards from the police stattion.

BRITISH COUNT ON U. S. FOR AIR SUPERIORITY

Allies Reported Ready To Order 6,000 American-Made Planes

Both London And Paris Hail Senate Passage Of Neutrality Bill

[By the Associated Press]

London, Oct. 28—Mines, mills and factories of the United States were counted on by Britons today to give the Allies air superiority in their "waiting" war against Germany.

Unconfirmed reports said the Allies were ready to place orders for 6,000 United States airplanes.

The United States Senate's passage of the neutrality bill and expected repeal of the arms embargo was welcomed in the press with such headlines as "Allied Victory."

"Smashing Victory"

"A smashing victory for Roosevelt—a smashing blow against Germany," one said.

Concurrence in the Senate's action by the House was taken for granted in London.

Britain's industries were being geared for increased sale of goods to the United States for dollars with which to buy war supplies.

Talks between Britain and Russia on exchange of trade between them probably will be continued within a few days, one reliable source said.

Declaring Germany must interpret the American neutrality action as "another defeat for her cause," Lord Beaverbrook's Evening Standard said:

"Against the hostility of America, however, the Nazis would like to set the friendship of the U. S. S. R."

The Standard said that surface indications of Russian support for Germany should be taken with reserve, and pictured the Balkans as "growing firmer in their neutrality."

BRITAIN SEEKS TRADE IN U. S.

Dollars Needed for Buying War Supplies Here.

AFTER GERMANY'S MARKETS

England's Industries May Profit From Control of Seas.

LONDON, Oct. 28 (A. P.).—Great Britain was pictured authoritatively today as driving her war-regimented industries to increase sales to the United States and other American countries for dollars with which to buy war materials. The nation also is trying to keep as much money as possible at home through producing domestically what formerly was bought abroad, particularly food, and through strict control of the export of the foreign exchange necessary to buy American goods.

By buying less and selling more abroad officials hope for speedy recovery of Britain's business life from the first shocks of the war. In the first month of the war exports decreased 42 per cent through the sudden dislocation of trade.

German Markets Sought.

Now, British manufacturers plan with governmental help to capture the markets of Germany, whose overseas efforts before the war were toward increased trade with South America. They see one big asset in the shipping situation.

The German merchant marine has been swept from the seas. Britain's huge merchant navy, however, has been mobilized under governmental control.

Shipbuilders, pooling their efforts under governmental direction, plan to turn out 3,000-ton cargo vessels on a mass-production basis to strengthen British maritime superiority. The Board of Trade, a governmental department, is starting talks with groups of industries on the best lines along which to push for Germany's overseas markets.

Board of Trade's Aims.

Oliver Stanley, president of the Board of Trade, and thus a governmental Minister, says of his department's aims:

"What we want to do particularly is to stimulate trade to certain countries whose currencies are valuable to us, such as the United States and Canada, from which we are bound to import large quantities of materials required for the war."

Sir Charles Hipwood, director of the National Union of Manufacturers, hails the Board of Trade's activities as a realization by the Government of "the importance of trade to pay for our supplies."

Criticism of Bureaucracy.

The control of trade and industry within the country has brought sharp criticism of "muddle-headed bureaucracy" from the press and assurances from Ministers that only such control as was absolutely necessary would be imposed.

The rationing and pooling of gasoline is in operation. Under the pooling system, individual brands cease to exist and the Government controls distribution. Gasoline pumps and trucks have pool posters pasted over the refiners' symbols.

Only a few pools are in operation so far. Government-appointed controllers, who administer the pools, have been named, however, for steel, alcohol, timber, wool, jute, flax, hemp, leather, silk, gasoline, fish, railways, coal, meat, bacon, sugar, cocoa, flour, butter and yeast.

Rationing Next Month

Food rationing is scheduled to begin next month.

The war emergency committee of the Motor Agents' Association estimates that unless motorists are given a bigger gasoline ration, six of every ten gasoline-station operators and automobile dealers will have to shut up shop.

In its drive for increased farm production, the Government promises that prices of staples, such as wheat, will be fixed by law to assure a reasonable return.

Higher Farm Wages

The Government also is extending a grant to dandowners for plowing grassland and putting it to crops.

Many golf courses and parks on the great estates of aristocratic rural England are being plowed.

There is a shortage of farm labor, and higher wages are being asked. The Oxfordshire Agricultural Wages Committee granted an increase of about 30 cents a week for the 6,500 farm laborers of that district. This brings their weekly pay to almost $7.50—the highest since the World War.

100,000 POILUS TO BE RETIRED FROM WAR DUTY

Army To Drop Older Men And Those With Four Or More Children

Move Made Despite Indications Of Imminent Nazi Offensive

By H. TAYLOR HENRY
Associated Press Correspondent

Paris, Oct. 28—Despite indications of an imminent German offensive on the Western front the French Government published an order today which was expected to release 100,000 men from war service.

The order provided that many older men and those of any age who have four or more children may return to their homes.

It followed an unofficial report that the French had sunk a German submarine, apparently in the North Sea although the location was not specified. The report was given some support by a semi-official announcement that French vessels and seaplanes had carried out "several direct attacks . . . and it appears one of these at least has been successful."

Six Bodies Found

Military sources said the report was strengthened further by the finding of six bodies off the coast, establishing proof, they said, of destruction of the submarine, which "apparently had been literally torn apart by the explosion of a depth bomb."

The bodies were those of five German sailors and an officer. Four of the bodies were picked up off Dunkerque Well by a fishing vessel; the two others were washed ashore.

They appeared to have been in water only a short time. Military commentators said the French destroyed an enemy submarine Thursday.

Although strong German advance units were described in military dispatches as having concentrated attacks against French positions in four distinct sectors of the Western front, the Government ordered the release from service of all men of the 1910 class (born in 1890), all fathers of four or more children regardless of age, all men aged 43 or over who are fathers of three children, and all aged 45 or over who are fathers of two.

This move was considered a logical one by military observers.

French military authorities consider it was obviously necessary to put surplus manpower to work producing rather than maintain them under arms where they are only consumers.

[Editor's Note—Pre-war estimates were that 1,500,000 men were sufficient to man the Maginot Line, the only land front to date. Experts estimated—also before the start of the war, and no figures have been made public since then—that complete mobilization would put 8,000,000 men under arms.]

Nazis Repulsed

French advices said that during the last forty-eight hours the Germans were driven back by automatic rifle and machine-gun fire as they approached the French lines.

According to French descriptions of the fighting, the Nazi thrusts had not reached the point of sustained attack and, when the French opened fire, the attacking units, usually reinforced companies up to 200 men, retired.

German pressure on French lines by dawn today was estimated by French officers to have reached the intensity of that of two weeks ago. The previous pressure preceded the German attack in force up the Moselle Valley at the extreme northern end of the front on October 16.

Paris Demobilizes Older Men and Fathers.

ALL OVER 49 YEARS OLD TO GO

Meanwhile Nazi Preparations in Saar Are Eyed With Suspicion.

PARIS, Oct. 28 (A. P.).—The Government announced today that many older men serving with the colors and those of any age who have four or more children may now return to their homes.

Despite reports of evidences of an imminent German offensive, an order was published which is expected to release well over 100,000 men. It frees the entire class of 1910, or men 49 years old; all fathers of four or more children regardless of their class; all men 43 years old or over who are fathers of three children, and all 45 years old or over who are fathers of two children.

PARIS, Oct. 28 (A. P.).—Proof of the sinking of a German submarine last Thursday was said in French military quarters to have been established today, coincident with a semi-official announcement that French armed vessels and seaplanes had been particularly active.

"Several direct attacks have been carried out and it appears one of these at least has been successful," the statement said.

The bodies of five German sailors and a German officer were reported found off the coast, establishing proof, the French said, of destruction of the submarine which "apparently had been literally torn apart by the explosion of a depth bomb."

The location of the attack was not disclosed.

(Dispatches from Dover, England, reported yesterday that the bodies of more than fifty German seamen had been recovered from a submarine washed up on the Goodwin Sands, five miles from the Kentish coast.)

Ostentatious Nazis.

Meanwhile today the General Staff watched ostentatious German military preparations in the Saar sector which military experts believed might be designed to distract attention from a surprise move elsewhere along the western front.

The Nazi preparations were so obvious that one well-informed military commentator suggested that the Nazis might be planning an attack between Wissembourg and the Rhine—east of the Saar—with a simultaneous thrust through the Netherlands, on the north.

Such attacks, this commentator said, might give Germany badly needed naval bases in the Netherlands and an entry to France's Alsatian plain. Germany has denied any intention of violating Dutch neutrality.

A Waiting Game.

The French themselves played a waiting game as floods aided their defensive strategy. The Rhine was reported to have risen forty-five inches as a result of recent rains.

There apparently was little fear in French quarters of an attack in the Rhine sector, because of the initial hazard of a river crossing, but rifts in the weather on the northern flank intensified watchfulness there.

A General Staff communique described the night as quiet along the entire front. Military sources told of continued aerial reconnaisance, however, which had disclosed German troop concentrations west of Bremen.

Military sources reported that units as strong as 150 men were used by the Germans in local attacks at various parts of the front yesterday and that all attacks were repulsed. These sources declared that German artillery fire along the 100-mile battle front between the Rhine and the Moselle was growing in intensity.

Tomorrow France quietly will observe the sixth anniversary of the death of Paul Painleve, who inspired the great underground system of the Maginot Line defenses to avert losses such as France suffered in the world war.

Says Subs And Bombers Have Sunk 115 Ships, Totaling 475,321 Tons

By MELVIN K. WHITELEATHER

Berlin, Oct. 28—Germany tonight claimed signal success at small cost in the war on the seas, asserting that her submarine and bomber attacks on merchant shipping had struck telling blows at Britain's food supply by sinking 115 ships totaling 475,321 tons.

This has been achieved, said the high command communique, at the cost of only three submarines, loss of which "must be counted on in view of their long absence."

Nazis said that Britain had lost every round of the first eight weeks of the war, with the exception of the United States Senate action in voting to lift the arms embargo, Germans expect the House of Representatives to vote the same way.

78,000 Tons Of Warships

Authorized sources said that, in addition to merchant shipping, 78,000 tons of warships have been sent to the bottom and 125,000 tons damaged. There was no indication of how many of the 115 merchantmen reported sunk belonged to neutral nations.

[Associated Press Editor's Note—In London the Admiralty gave the total British merchant shipping losses to noon October 28 as fifty-one ships totaling 210,021 tons and neutral losses as twenty-nine ships totaling 72,000 tons. These figures do not include the 22,500-ton aircraft carrier Courageous and the 29,150-ton battleship Royal Oak, loss of which in submarine attacks the British officially admit. France's known losses are 6; Germany's 10, making the total of verified losses 98.]

The Nazis claim they have lost a score or more submarines as the British contend.

Taste Of "Hunger Blockade"

Nazi propaganda surrounding submarine and bomber deeds which filled tonight's press made it clear that Germany believes she is giving Britain a taste of what a "hunger blockade"—the term the Nazis use for Britain's blockade of Germany—is like.

Nazi officials indicated they would delay a decision on the possible effects of the lifting of the United States arms embargo if the House follows Senate action.

There was some belief that a cash-and-carry plan for arms might not work out so well for the Allies—especially with German submarines and surface raiders roaming the seas.

In some Government quarters it was previously believed a lifting of the embargo would involve the United States within a short time in war against Germany. This view, however, appears no longer to be strongly held.

Allied Victory Admitted

It nevertheless was admitted that the Senate vote and the trend toward adoption of the bill is a victory for the Allies.

In summarizing the war thus far—the Nazis call it war with Britain, not mentioning France — the British-French-Turkish pact is set down as a failure because "it did not drive a wedge between Russia and Germany."

Moreover Germans assert they are ahead in the economic aspects of the war because Russia and Southeastern Europe are continuing to hand the Reich food through the back door which Britain has been unable to close.

The Nazis assert that with grain reserves sufficient for two years, much food canned and uninterrupted imports, the British blockade is a boomerang.

Loss of U-boats Admitted.

BERLIN, Oct. 28 (A. P.).—The High Command indicated today the loss of three submarines, but said that Germany's mercantile warfare "continued to be successful."

In a communique claiming the destruction of at least 115 merchant ships of an aggregate of 475,321 tons since the beginning of the war, the command declared "our own losses are only slight." German naval circles also said they believed that, in addition to great commercial tonnage, some 200,000 tons of allied warcraft had been either sunk or disabled.

"The loss hitherto of three submarines must be counted on in view of their long absence," it was added.

"Mercantile warfare in the Baltic and North Seas, as well as in the Atlantic, continued to be successful. Between October 12 and 25, there were sunk, according to reports confirmed by our own fighting units:

"Twenty-two ships with 109,370 register tons; according to reports in the foreign press, an additional three ships with 12,606 register tons, thus totaling twenty-five ships with 121,976 register tons.

"Thus, total losses since the beginning of the war are raised to 115 ships of 475,321 tons. Inasmuch as unconfirmed reports are not included in this compilation, it must be assumed that the actual figures regarding sinkings are considerably higher.

Artillery Activity

BERLIN, Oct. 28 (AP).—A German high command communique said today:

"In the west, somewhat livelier artillery activity between the Moselle River and the Palatinate Forest was observable than on previous days. A local advance of smaller enemy forces in the border region west of Warndt was repelled."

"Mercantile warfare in the Baltic and North Seas, as well as in the Atlantic, continued to be successful. Between October 12 and 25, there were sunk, according to reports confirmed by our own fighting units:

"Twenty-two ships with 109,370 register tons; according to reports in the foreign press, an additional three ships with 12,606 register tons, thus totaling twenty-five ships with 121,976 register tons.

"Thus, total losses since the beginning of the war are raised to 115 ships of 475,321 tons. Inasmuch as unconfirmed reports are not included in this compilation, it must be assumed that the actual figures regarding sinkings are considerably higher.

"Despite these successes of our fighting sea units in the commercial war, our own losses are only slight. The loss hitherto of three submarines must be counted on in view of their long absence."

Britain's Total Is Lower.

LONDON, Oct. 28 (A. P.).—The Admiralty gave total British merchant shipping losses to noon today as fifty-one ships totaling 210,021 tons and neutral losses as twenty-nine ships totaling 72,000 tons.

These figures did not include the British aircraft carrier Courageous and battleship Royal Oak.

It also was stated there had been a few French merchantman losses of undetermined tonnage.

Statements by Winston Churchill, First Lord of the Admiralty, on October 17, and by Prime Minister Chamberlain last Thursday indicated that German merchant losses were placed at 62,000 tons. In addition, Britain seized 386,000 tons of contraband.

CONTRABAND POLICY

Britain Unlikely to Change Present System.

LONDON, Oct. 28 (A. P.).—Authoritative British circles said today it was unlikely that Great Britain would change her present contraband control system as a result of Soviet Russia's objections.

These sources said the British felt their contraband control program was well grounded on international law. It was asserted that Britain was expected to continue her examination of shipping for contraband as at present.

Russia objected to inclusion of such materials as food and cloth-ing in the contraband list. These are under the heading of conditional contraband or goods that conceivably could be converted to enemy use.

Authoritative quarters said meanwhile that "exploratory" contacts between Oliver Stanley, president of the British Board of Trade, and Russian Ambassador Ivan Maisky regarding extension of trade between the two countries probably would be continued in a few days.

FOUR DEATHS REPORTED IN PRAGUE FIGHTS

Patriots And Nazis Battle For Hours On Czech's Independence Day

[By the Associated Press]

Prague, Oct. 28—An undetermined number of Czechs and Germans were reported wounded tonight in violent clashes resulting from demonstrations in observance of the twenty-first anniversary of the Czecho-Slovak Republic.

Reports persisted, but without confirmation, that four persons had been killed.

Shots were heard in various parts of Prague. The demonstrations increased in violence until midnight when the crowds began to disperse gradually.

Center Of City Isolated

Once the disorders subsided police began to relax some of the security measures to enforce the Nazi ban on public observance of the national holiday.

Streets blocked off earlier in the day were reopened, but heavily armed police continued to patrol the main thoroughfares.

A cordon of police was thrown around the center of the city, isolating that section.

Although German police and storm troops had clashed with patriotic Czechs during the day, first reports of shooting came tonight. The wounded were said to have been taken to two hospitals.

Authoritative figures were lacking on the number of persons arrested during the day but unconfirmable reports said the total ran into the thousands.

3024-4341

With the heart of Prague sealed by the police, demonstrations shifted tonight to the more outlying squares and streets.

German authorities and Czech state police, including many mounted officers, cooperated in an attempt to control the crowds.

The majority of the demonstrators wore national colors and the earlier clashes took place on main and side streets leading to Wencesclas Square in the heart of the city.

Three clashes occurred at Wenceslas Square, which was an especial mecca for the Czechs from early morning because a statue of the city's patron saint, Wenceslas, is located there. It had been roped off early in the morning as part of the ban on public demonstrations.

A group of youths, wearing so-called Masaryk caps (named after Thomas G. Masaryk, cofounder of the republic) to indicate their sympathies, attempted to enter the blocked-off square at about noon but were driven back.

As the incident developed, Communists began shouting "Long live Stalin," but their shouts soon were drowned out by cries of "Long live the republic."

Czechs Fight Brown Shirts

In midafternoon crowds again broke through the police cordon. Before Hotel Sroubek, located on Wenceslas Square, German SA men (Brown Shirts) attempted to rip off patriotic insignia worn by the demonstrators.

The Czechs fought back and the German police were reinforced by Czech state police. One Czech policeman was among those arrested.

A third fight developed late in the afternoon and more arrests were made by German authorities assisted by policing patrols of the National Aryan Front and by mounted police.

In the square at suburban Weinbergen, Czechs called out "We want liberty" and "Long live the Czecho-Slovakian Republic, away with the Germans."

Quiet observances of the day were held in other cities of the Bohemia-Moravian protectorate, despite the German ban.

Prague Clashes Blamed On Nazi Terrorism

Oklahoma City, Okla., Oct. 28 (AP)—Votja Bedes, former national director of public schools in Czecho-Slovakia, attributed today's clashes between German police and Czechs in Prague to a wave of Nazi terrorism.

"The Germans have banned all gatherings in Czecho-Slovakia, and by oppression are trying to stop a Czech uprising," said the brother of Eduard Benes, former President of Czecho-Slovakia.

"But the whole nation is united in strength against Germany," he said. "The moral unity of our people is wonderful.

"The cruelty of the German Government to our people is so severe that it has ended in despair, and these outbreaks are born of that despair.

"The are afraid of a Czech outbreak because the Czechs have hidden arms."

Czech Flag Flies In Washington

Washington, Oct. 28 (AP)—Czecho-Slovakia's flag flew high over the legation here today in celebration of the twenty-first birthday of the nation, which Nazi Germany now dominates.

It was a holiday for the legation staff.

"By the time the Fourth of July comes around again," said Otaker Kabelac, First Secretary, "we are convinced we will be free again. The German occupation is only temporary."

Czechs Parade in Paris

PARIS, Oct. 28 (AP).—The Czecho-Slovak army being formed in France for service on the western front paraded today in its first formal review before its commander in chief, Gen. Ingr, on the twenty-first anniversary of the founding of the Czecho-Slovak republic.

PRAGUE CROWD CLASHES WITH GERMAN POLICE

BREAK WAY THROUGH CORDON

People Flock to St. Wenceslas's Statue on 21st Anniversary of Their Republic.

PRAGUE, Oct. 28 (A. P.).—The German police and Czech citizens clashed here this afternoon while Czechs were celebrating the twenty-first anniversary of the foundation of the Czecho-Slovak Republic.

There were numerous arrests. One estimate was given that 800 persons were taken to German police headquarters as the result of this incident and others in other parts of the city.

The clash occurred in mid-afternoon when Czech crowds broke through a police cordon roping off Wenceslas Square, before the City Hall, to prevent demonstrations before the statue of St. Wenceslas, patron saint of the Czechs.

An argument between German SA men (Brown Shirts) and Czech civilians developed with especial violence before the Hotel Sroubek.

Prague Germans tried to tear off the Czech insignia worn by demonstrators, witnesses said, and the Czechs fought back.

The German police were summoned and they, with the aid of the Czech State Police, dispersed the crowd.

Long Live the Republic.

The German had placed a ban on public demonstrations and Wenceslas Square, in the heart of Prague, was barred off early in the morning.

A group of youths attempted to enter the square, but were turned back. A smaller group, said to have been communists, took advantage of this incident to shout: "Long live Stalin!" But they were drowned out with cries of "Long live the republic!"

In other cities of the Bohemia-Moravian protectorate there were quiet observances of the day despite the German ban.

CAROL FEARS SOFIA-MOSCOW AGGRESSION

Rumanian King Confers With His Foreign Minister And Envoys

Italy Reported To Have Advised Bulgaria Against Domination By Russia

[By the Associated Press]

Budapest, Oct. 28—As the shadow of Soviet Russia deepened over the capitals of southeastern Europe, King Carol of Rumania met in secret conference today with his Foreign Minister and his envoys to Turkey, Bulgaria, Greece and Yugoslavia.

Fears that Russia may be backing Bulgaria's campaign to regain Dobruja from Rumania were said in authoritative quarters to have prompted Carol to call his Ministers back to Bucharest for urgent talks.

Nervous Over Soviet Session

There was intensive diplomatic activity throughout the Balkans.

Diplomats saw hurried conferences as last-minute moves before the special session of the Supreme Soviet called for next Tuesday when Premier-Foreign Commissar Vyacheslaff Molotoff was expected to clarify Russia's objectives in southeastern Europe.

Premier Constantine Argetolanu of Rumania and Premier Dragisha Cvetkovich of Yugoslavia conferred for four hours in the tiny village of Vrsac on the Yugoslav-Rumanian border.

Diplomats in Belgrade said that Yugoslavia had hoped to warn Bulgaria that dissatisfaction with Russia might result in disastrous consequences for the whole Balkan area.

Italo-Bulgarian Parley

At Sofia, the Italian Minister was closeted for several hours with the Bulgarian Premier, George Kosseivanoff. He was reported to have expressed the Fascist Government's advice against allowing Bulgaria to come under exclusive Soviet influence.

Greece, allied with Turkey, watched all moves with interest and some concern, mindful of Bulgaria's territorial claims on Grecian soil.

Hungary, close to Italy, took a keen interest in the diplomatic maneuvering.

Balkans Expect Bid From Rome

Most southeastern capitals expected an invitation from Italy to a conference at Rome would follow possible action by Russia to make known her position in relation to the Balkans.

A projected close cooperation among Hungary, Rumania and Yugoslavia under Italian leaders has been discussed in political circles as well as what they described as increasing friendship for Soviet Russia among the masses of Bulgaria.

There were reports in Balkan capitals that a pro-Russian movement continued to grow in Bulgaria, which is historically close to the Russian people by language and sentiment.

Soviet's Black Sea Edict

other cause of nervousness in the Balkans was a Russian notice that navigators of foreign ships were forbidden to enter Russian Black Sea ports without special authorization and a Russian pilot "because of newly-laid mine fields."

Diplomatic quarters said the gradual improvement of relations betwen Italy and Turkey, the latter allied with France and Britain, continued.

It was announced in Istanbul that Italy had lifted the long-standing ban against Turkish ships calling at the Island of Rhodes.

Soviet Sends 'Sharp Hint' To Rumania On Dobruja

Bucharest, Oct. 28 (AP)—Soviet Russia has expressed the hope that Rumania would reach "a means of understanding" with Bulgaria over the latter's claims on Dobruja, informed sources said tonight.

These sources said the Soviet message was given to the Turkish Foreign Minister, Sukru Saracoglu, during his recent Moscow talks and was transmitted by him to Vasile Stoica, Rumanian Ambassador to Ankara, who brought it to Bucharest.

Bulgaria has never renounced her claims on Dobruja, territory which she lost to Rumania in the post World War settlements.

Viewed As "Sharp Hint"

Diplomatic quarters said they interpreted the Soviet expression as a "sharp hint" to Rumania.

The reported move came at a time when there was increased tension in Rumania, despite official Soviet assurances that Russia did not intend to make any demands against her. As in the case of Dobruja, Rumania established her rule over Bessarabia, formerly a part of the Russian empire, after the World War.

That the matter was getting serious attention was evident, diplomatic observers said, from long conferences by King Carol and Grigore Gafencu, Rumanian Foreign Minister, with Stoica, who, informed sources said, will be asked to stop off at Sofia on his return to Ankara to sound out Bulgarian sentiments on settlement possibilities. Stoica once was Minister to Bulgaria and has many contacts.

Some quarters said Rumania would be willing to make a "symbolic" cession of a small part of Dobruja to Bulgaria and, in return, would expect a declaration from Russia that she had no designs on Bessarabia and adherents to the Balkan neutral bloc which now is taking shape.

Premiers Weigh Balkan Crisis

Rumania and Yugoslavia Discuss Bulgar Demands on Bucharest.

BUDAPEST, Oct. 28 (A. P.).—Premier Constantine Argetolanu of Rumania and Premier Dragisha Cvetkovich of Yugoslavia were said by diplomats to have conferred for four hours on Bulgarian territorial claims on Rumania, which they feared might plunge the Balkans into war.

Fears that Russian backing for Bulgarian claims on Rumania might provide a spark that would lead southeastern Europe to war brought intense diplomatic activity. Diplomats said Yugoslavia had agreed to warn Bulgaria that flirtation with Russia might bring disastrous consequences to the whole Balkan area.

Meet in Border Village.

The two Premiers met in the tiny village of Vrsac on the Yugoslav-Rumanian border.

At Sofia, it was reported that the Italian Minister was closeted for several hours with the Bulgarian Premier, George Kiosseivanoff, and expressed the Fascist government's advice against allowing Bulgaria to come under exclusive Soviet influence.

The seriousness with which the Russo-Bulgarian situation was regarded was reflected in King Carol of Rumania calling his Ministers to Turkey, Bulgaria, Greece and Yugoslavia for urgent talks. Immediately after their arrival the King and his Foreign Minister went into conference with the Ministers.

Concern also was expressed in official Yugoslav circles over reports that Russia might sponsor Bulgarian designs on the Dobruja, a fertile agricultural area of 4,000 square miles to which Rumania's rights were confirmed by the Treaty of Neuilly in 1919.

Bucharest advices said that Basile Stocia, Rumanian Ambassador to Turkey, conferred at length yesterday with King Carol and Foreign Minister Grigore Gafencu. Informed sources said that they believed that he reported on Russia's attitude toward Rumania as it was told to Turkish Foreign Minister Sukru Saracoglu during his recent visit to Moscow.

Envoys Called Home.

It was believed in these quarters that any Russian pressure on Rumania first would concern the once-Bulgarian Dobruja, rather than former Russian Bessarabia, which joined Rumania after the world war. Rumania's envoys to Turkey, Greece, Bulgaria and Yugoslavia, all of whom have been summoned home for consultations, were expected to meet Gafencu today.

For the second time in two weeks, Sigmond Perenyi, Governor of Ruthenia, came here from the Hungarian province, which has a common border with Russia since the partition of Poland. Perenyi went into immediate conference with governmental leaders.

In an interview at Ankara, meanwhile, Saracoglu denied that one Russian demand on Turkey during the recent Moscow negotiations was that Turkey get Bessarabia for Russia or Dobruja for Bulgaria. The Turkish Foreign Minister left unanswered a question whether the U. S. S. R. had demanded that the Dardanelles be closed to British and French warships in the event of war between the allies and Russia.

Saracoglu emphasized that the Moscow conversations were friendly. He ascribed their breakdown to "indecision created by the present political atmosphere" and hinted that they might be resumed eventually.

FINNS DRAFT FINAL ANSWER TO SOVIET

Nation Still Determined to Guard Independence.

HELSINKI, Oct. 28 (A. P.).—The Finnish cabinet was preparing today what well informed political circles recorded as Finland's final answer to Soviet Russia's demands in her diplomatic campaign for extended power in the Baltic.

The Finns said there would be no yielding on points which Finland regarded as endangering her independence and neutrality.

Helsinki workmen dug new trenches in the parks today as the cabinet worked over new instructions for the delegation, headed by Dr. Juho Passikivi, who planned to leave tomorrow or Monday for Moscow. Frontier districts largely have been deserted by civilians and occupied by thousands of regular army troops and reservists.

Observers said they saw another indication that the negotiations had reached a crucial stage in the fact that the Government would discuss the new instructions with various party groups in Parliament before the delegation left for Moscow.

The Government maintained the strictest secrecy about the Russian proposals but unofficial quarters reported a belief Russia was asking for some kind of military or mutual assistance pact and territorial concessions, probably islands in the Gulf of Finland, for establishment of naval and air bases.

The Government took over the supervision of coffee sales. No coffee was sold today and, beginning tomorrow, Finns will be able to buy only half a pound a month.

Finnish Party Leaders Consulted On Russ Reply

Cabinet Pledges Chairmen Of Groups To Secrecy In Talks On Negotiations

Helsinki, Oct. 28 (AP)—The Finnish cabinet took the unusual step tonight of consulting chairmen of various party groups in the Diet of what informed political circles expected would be Finland's final answer to Russian demands.

The cabinet first met with members of the delegation to Moscow, headed by Dr. Juho Paasikivi. The foreign office said the delegation would leave Helsinki at the latest on Tuesday night for the third session with Russian leaders.

All party chairmen were pledged to secrecy concerning the conversations. Helsinki unofficial quarters reported a belief that Russia was demanding not only territorial concessions for naval bases in Baltic waters but also some form of mutual assistance pact.

Workmen dug trenches in Helsinki's parks as the cabinet worked on the new instructions.

LITHUANIANS REGAIN THEIR OLD CAPITAL

Cheering Crowds Greet Troops In Wilno, "Gift" From The Kremlin

OCT 29 1939

[By the Associated Press]

Wilno, Oct. 28—Ancient Wilno (Vilna) today came back into the possession of its Lithuanian founders—the gift of Soviet Russia, which took the 616-year-old city from Poland.

Cheering crowds, with here and there old men and women weeping and kneeling in prayer, greeted the Lithuanian troops who marched down rain-spattered streets to effect the occupation made possible by Lithuania's military concessions to Russia.

Lithuanian flags, horizontal bars of yellow, red and green, were waved lustily by the welcomers. Some of the flags were fashioned crudely from paper.

Troops Pelted With Flowers

Those who still had flowers—winter is setting in here—tossed them down on the marching troops. The troops entered at 11 A. M.

Repossession of the old capital founded in 1323 has been the officially indorsed dream of the Lithuanians through the centuries. A section of the Lithuanian Constitution states specifically that Wilno is considered a part of the nation.

But for 120 years after 1795 the city was under Russian rule along with the rest of the country. For three years during the World War, from 1915 to 1918, the German army controlled it.

Got In Back For Two Years

Lithuania got it back for two years, along with their declaration of independence, when the Russian Czarist regime crashed.

But on October 9, 1920, the Poles occupied the city. They held it for nineteen years until the present European war crushed the Polish armies in defeat. Then the Germans moved across Poland from the west and the Russians from the east, the latter taking Wilno, which they controlled for the past month.

The Soviet Russians handed the capital over to Lithuania in return for permission to establish Russian military bases in Lithuanian territory.

Crying and Cheering Crowds Throw Flowers to Troops.

OCT 29 1939

WILNO, Oct. 28 (AP)—Lithuanian troops today marched into Wilno, their historic capital, to the cheers of the inhabitants who threw flowers in their path.

Boundary posts which for nineteen years had separated Lithuania from her lost province of Wilno were solemnly burned yesterday as the Lithuanian troops began entering Wilno territory.

Wilno was seized by the Poles in 1920 and added to their country. In last month's partitioning of Poland by Germany and Russia the area went to Russia which turned it over to Lithuania under a provision of the mutual assistance pact signed by the two nations.

Lithuanian flags were on display everywhere today.

Many of the peasants who lined the roadways had come from long distances. Some of them alternately wept and cheered as the troops occupied the city.

Fascism's Sole Aim Is Progress, Says Duce

MASSOCK

Rome, Oct. 28 (AP)—Italy celebrated her outstanding national holiday today—the eighteenth anniversary of the Fascist march on Rome—asking in the words of Premier Benito Mussolini only the privilege of making progress.

Fascist leaders emphasized that Italy was working quietly while three major European powers were at war.

"Today, as during the harsh bloody eve of revolution, Fascism demands for itself only the single privilege, that of building and going forward always and in all circumstances with the people and for the people," said il Duce, speaking from the balcony of his office to a throng in the Piazza Venezia.

Stresses Peaceful Pursuits

"The anniversary of the ever more glorious Blackshirts revolution finds us as compact and strong as ever from the Alps to the Indian Ocean," he declared.

Mussolini said Italy was armed heavily and ready for any eventuality, but he stressed the public works and industrial program of the country.

Although Erwin Ettel, chief of the Nazi party in Italy, paid a holiday call on Lieut. Gen. Achille Starace, secretary of the Fascist party, the day passed without mention of Italy's military alliance with Germany.

Axis Ignored By Press

In newspaper summaries of the past year's diplomacy, which gave rise to the pact, the Rome-Berlin Axis was ignored.

Instead, Giovanni Ansaldo, close friend of Count Galeazzo Ciano, devoted two columns in the Foreign Minister's Leghorn newspaper Il Telegrafo to a declaration that Italy was following an independent foreign policy without permitting any "diplomacy to impose any decisions on her and without letting any foreign ideology suggest any intervention."

Migration To Libya

Eight thousand colonists who will settle in Libya, Italian North Africa, embarked from Venice, one a woman who gave birth to a boy on the train from her home village.

The scheduled launching of the 32,000-ton battleship Impero at Genoa was postponed indefinitely.

The day was devoted largely to dedications of public works and memorial ceremonies for dead Fascist heroes.

ROME, Oct. 28 (A. P.).—Premier Mussolini, speaking on the seventeenth anniversary of the Fascist march on Rome, told a holiday crowd today that Fascism asked only the privilege of "building and going forward."

"The anniversary of the ever more glorious Black Shirts revolution finds us as compact and strong as ever from the Alps to the Indian Ocean," said Il Duce, speaking from the balcony of his office.

The most warlike event of the day's program was to have been the launching at Genoa of the 35,000-ton battleship Impero, scheduled for completion in 1942, but the launching was postponed indefinitely.

day's program was the launching at Genoa of the 35,000-ton battleship Impero, scheduled for completion in 1942.

A traditional incident was the handing of Fascist party identification card number one to Premier Mussolini.

At Bolzano, a new Fascist youth school for military specialists was opened.

About 8,000 more colonists gathered at Venice to sail for Libya to join a previous contingent of 20,000.

Tomorrow will see the inauguration of Pomezia, second of the new towns built on the reclaimed Pontine marshes.

Among many public works ordered opened ceremonially were two strips of newly electrified railway and a block of workmen's homes in a mining town near Rome. Agriculture Ministry also announced a second group of 100 farms created in the Apulia area by cutting up large estates.

Boundary Defined.

MOSCOW, Oct. 28 (A. P.).—Tass (official news agency) announced today that a supplementary protocol between Soviet Russia and Lithuania, describing the boundary lines, had been signed yesterday.

The protocol was in pursuance of the mutual assistance pact signed on October 10.

Assembly of Former Polish Regions Asks Union.

MOSCOW, Oct. 28 (A. P.).—The newly elected Peoples Assembly in the former Polish regions of White Russia adopted today a resolution asking incorporation into the U. S. S. R.

The resolution was similar to one adopted yesterday in the western Ukraine. Both territories will be welcomed into the Soviet Union when the presidium of the Supreme Soviet meets on October 31.

Speculation Over Possibility Of Russian Demands On Sweden Aroused

Stockholm, Oct. 28 (AP)—Return of the Russian Minister to Sweden, Mme. Alexandra Kollontai, from Moscow today aroused speculation in Scandinavian capitals on the possibility that Russian demands on Sweden were in the making.

Official quarters in Stockholm, however, denied there were any indications of such demands. It was suggested that Mme. Kollontai, who went to Moscow recently, did so report on the conference among the Kings of Norway, Sweden and Denmark and the President of Finland.

—LENS OFFENSIVE—

Associated Press Staff Correspondent

With the R. A. F. In France, Oct. 27 (Relayed-Passed By Field Censor)—The Royal Air Force is spending most of its time in France on the workaday job of photographing enemy defenses and communication lines.

I visited today a huge air field where, aided by every modern invention to overcome mud and weather, a squadron of the R. A. F. is preparing a photographic study with the Germans as "sitters."

Some Sent To French

The unit does everything connected with the job. It takes the pictures, develops them and sends them to general headquarters or to French artillery units which use the photographs as a basis for shelling enemy objectives.

The planes at this field were being used strictly for reconnaissance. Others like them participated in the famous "pamphlet raids."

It was one of these planes which performed one of the war's most daring feats—a flight 600 feet above the Siegfried Line with a camera snapping, while the Germans, who apparently thought it was one of their planes, waved gaily at the pilot and crew. I asked an officer what the pilot had done.

Pilot Waved Back

"Oh, he waved back at them," the officer said.

When a plane returns from one of these photographic missions, the films go directly to self-contained mobile development units which look like old-fashioned crossroads diners.

Photographs taken so far have mapped almost the entire Siegfried Line. In addition, the airmen have picked up singularly clear views of railroads, highways and ammunition bases.

The number of men used on the ground to put one man in the air ranges between nine and ten. The planes must be camouflaged and overhauled, and fuel and food has to be brought up to feed men and ships.

The R. A. F. is supplied by bases scattered the length and breadth of France. From them, a squadron can get anything from an engine or a wing to a spare pair of rubber boots.

44 Seized in Rumania In Plot to Kill Marinescu

Former Iron Guard Members Rounded Up in Oil Fields

BUCHAREST, Oct. 29 (Sunday) (AP).—The Rumanian authorities announced early today the arrest of forty-four former members of the pro-Nazi Iron Guard on a charge of plotting to assassinate Gen. Gabriel Marinescu, the Minister of Public Order.

The arrests were made at Ploesti, in the center of the Rumanian oil fields.

Marinescu has been charged by members of the outlawed Iron Guard with responsibility for the execution of several hundred members of the organization since the asssassination of Premier Armand Calinescu last Sept. 21.

FRENCH EXECUTE ALSATIAN AS SPY

Autonomist Leader Is Shot by Firing Squad

OCT 29 1939

PARIS, Oct. 28 (A. P.).—Dr. Karl Roos, sixty-year-old Alsatian autonomist leader, and a soldier named Lobstein were reported to have been executed at dawn today at Nancy, condemne dfor treason and espionage in behalf of Germany. They were convicted on Thursday bya military court. Their executionwas by a firing squad.

French newspapers published pictures of Dr. Roose in a Nazi uniform. The picture was reported to have been found in his room by authorities before his trial.

Dr. Roos was arrested on February 7, almost seven months before the war started. With seven others he was charged by the French with having furnished

30.24-4343

German agents with details of the movements of French troops during March, 1936, when Germany reoccupied the Rhineland, and in September, 1938, during the Czech crisis.

In announcing the conviction Freench authorities asserted that it had nothing to do with his autonomy activities, for which he was arrested in 1928 and charged with participating in a separatist plot against the State. Six other defendants convicted with Roos and Lobstein were sentenced to prison for terms ranging from three years to life.

FARM BOY A HERO

Alsatian Lad Wins French Croix de Guerre.

PARIS, Oct. 28 (A. P.).—Ritter Philippe, seventeen-year-old Alsatian farm boy, is the first civilian to receive the Croix de Guerre in this war.

French dispatches said that the boy was working in a field when a German pilot landed his warplane nearby, strode to Ritter with drawn revolver and demanded, "Where am I?"

"In France," Ritter blurted.

Ignoring the revolver, he fled to his bicycle and pedaled away to notify a French patrol, which arrested the pilot before he could set fire to the plane.

Oslo Paper Lists Total Tonnage Lost

OSLO, Oct. 28 (A. P.).—The sea commerce journal, Handels og Soefartstidende, today listed the total sea tonnage lost by all nations between September 5 and October 21 as follows:

Newsprint Price Advanced by Britain

LONDON, Oct. 28 (A. P.).—The controlled price of newsprint in the United Kingdom advanced to £17 (about $68) a ton today, an increase of 46.6 per cent since the European war started.

The principal reason for the increase, the Paper Comptroller said, is the difficulty in obtaining pulp from Norway, Sweden and Finland.

Italian Arms Program Due to Cover 4 Years

Amplification Seen of Plan Announced Last Year

ROME, Oct. 28 (AP).—Italy's new armament program, announced yesterday, probably will cover a four-year period, authoritative sources said today, adding that most of the expenditures would be for equipment and materials.

Military observers construed the announcement of the 17,476,000,000 lire ($873,800,000) program as an amplification of a plan announced last December providing 10,000,000,000 life ($500,000,000) for the army, navy and air corps within four years.

5 Parties Represented In Switzerland Election

Half of Voters for Parliament Are in the Army

BERNE, Switzerland, Oct. 28 (AP).—Switzerland held a parliamentary election today—without a major issue and with only a few minor ones. Candidates for the lower House represented six main political parties, ranging from the Catholic party, on the right, to the Socialists, on the left.

More than half the voters were in the Swiss citizen army. Some of the soldiers got their ballots this morning and will cast them tonight. The rest will vote Sunday.

Party newspapers and party programs have been circulated freely amon gthe troops, except Communist election propaganda, which was confiscated, at the request of army authorities, for alleged false statements.

The national council subject to today's voting has 187 members who have to stand for re-election every four years. It is comparable to the United States House of Representatives.

POPE PIUS MOTORS TO VATICAN CITY

Leaves Summer Palace for Modernized Suite.

CASTEL GANDOLFO, Oct. 28 (A. P.).—Pope Pius XII, pledged by his first encyclical to use all his power to support efforts to restore European peace, made final preparations to end his three-month residence at his summer palace here.

The Pope was expected to start the half-hour automobile trip to Vatican City at 6 P. M. (noon, Eastern standard time), and go immediately on his arrival there to his chambers on the third floor of the palace of Sixtus IV.

His first official act after his return will be to consecrate twelve missionary bishops tomorrow, the feast of Christ the King. With the exacting task of issuing the first encyclical of his pontificate completed yesterday the Pope is free further to pursue the policies he promulgated in it, among them his determination to work to end conflicts among nations on the slogan, "peace with justice."

Workmen have put in the three months of the Pontiff's sojourn here modernizing his apartment of twenty-two rooms in the Vatican, beautifying them and bringing them up to present standards of hygiene and comfort. It was the first time in half a century that workmen had been admitted to the chambers.

Pope Pius, who had lived previously in the apartment he occupied when he was Papal Secretary of State, will break with tradition by sleeping in his predecessor's bedroom. Two of its windows look out on the columns of St. Peter's basilica and another overlooks St. Peter's Square.

Ceilings and walls of the apartment have been replastered and painted, with the Pontiff's coat-of-arms worked in. Aged wooden rafters have been replaced by metal supports. Pleasantly designed metal floors have been laid throughout, but, informed Vatican sources said, the Pope's strict order that expense be kept down has been fulfilled.

After blessing inhabitants of Castel Gandolfo, he arrived at the Vatican to be greeted by students at religious college. He bestowed his blessing.

His first official act will be to consecrate 12 missionary bishops tomorrow, the Feast of Christ the King.

MEXICO IRKED BY ACTION OF U. S. GUNBOAT

Resents Trailing Of Nazi Freighter Into Manzanillo Harbor

[By the Associated Press]

Mexico City, Oct. 28—The presence of the United States gunboat Erie in Manzanillo harbor near the German freighter Havelland brought pointed comment from the War Department today that it was fully capable of patrolling Mexico's coasts.

Senator Mauro Angulo was quoted as saying he would propose that the Foreign Relations Office make a formal report as to whether the Erie previously had obtained permission to put in at a Mexican port.

Followed From Costa Rica

An authoritative report said the Erie followed the Havelland when the German vessel quietly left Costa Rica October 8, presumably for the Panama Canal, where she failed to appear.

War Office officials were quoted in today's newspapers as saying, however, that Mexican naval authorities had not permitted and would not permit foreign ships to patrol Mexican coasts. Reports that the Erie was keeping the Havelland under surveillance were said to be incorrect.

These officials said Mexican navy patrol boats themselves had taken cognizance of the presence of the Havelland and had watched the vessel until she dropped anchor in Manzanillo harbor.

German Freighter Takes Aid to Liner Columbus

VERA CRUZ, Mexico, Oct. 28 (A. P.).—The German freighter Hameln, which took refuge in Mexican waters at the outbreak of the European war, was en route today to Point Anton Lizardo with water for the crew of the anchored German liner Columbus.

Rough seas had prevented ships from carrying supplies to the Columbus for several days.

Saturnia Averts British Search

By the Associated Press.

ROME, Oct. 28—Reliable reports today said the Italian liner Saturnia was bound for Italy from Gibraltar after the Italian government had countermanded a British order to her captain to proceed to England with what Gibraltar authorities declared a contraband cargo.

One source said the ship had started to England, but upon receiving the order from Italy turned back to Gibraltar, unloaded iron and copper that authorities there believed were destined for the German protectorate of Bohemia-Moravia, and then headed for Naples.

Mrs. William Phillips, wife of the United States Ambassador to Rome, was aboard the Saturnia.

British Ship Sent Down By Error in New Zealand

Survivor Says Shell From Fort Ricocheted Into Vessel

HONOLULU, T. H., Oct. 28 (AP).—"The Honolulu Star-Bulletin" published today the first report of a war-time loss to British shipping in the Pacific. The newspaper quoted a letter from William William saying he was a survivor of the coastal ship Dolphin, sunk by mistake by British fort guns as she entered Lyttleton Harbor, in South Island, New Zealand.

The story said the Dolphin was entering the harbor, in daylight, when a fort gun was fired to warn the ship to identify herself. The ship did not answer, and the fort fired a warning shot, which apparently ricocheted and struck the ship, sinking it.

"The Star-Bulletin" reported the incident caused a storm of protest in New Zealand.

U-Boats Off Canaries.

Disease Called Greatest War Peril

WASHINGTON, Oct. 28 (A. P.).—Disease may defeat warring nations more quickly than bullets or bombardments.

Dr. Leslie T. Webster of the Rockefeller Institute for Medical Research said today in an article in the Journal of Heredity that lack of food, particularly the essential body [illegible] are principal factors in the spread of epidemics. Blockades which stop the importation of such foods as meat, butter, lard and sugar might thus prove more effective than bombs.

American Says Nazis Took $10,000 From Him In Poland

Aviation Student Describes Robbery By Soldiers After He Sold Family Property in East Prussia

[By the Associated Press]

Jersey City, N. J., Oct. 28—A 23-year-old American aviation student told today how he was robbed by German soldiers of $10,000 during a twenty-five-day nightmare of bombs and bullets in beleaguered Poland.

He is Edward Monkiewicz, of Mishawaka, Ind., one of 122 American citizens aboard the American liner President Harrison which arrived today.

Sold Family Farm

The money he carried—52,000 zlotys—was derived from the sale of 150 acres of his family's estate in East Prussia, Monkiewicz said.

Four German soldiers halted him at a Polish farmhouse, Monkiewicz related: "They seemed to think I was a spy. They searched me and took the 52,000 zlotys I had from the sale of my father's land. After robbing me and making me stand at attention for nearly four hours, they freed me."

He planned to use part of the money to continue his aviation studies at an East St. Louis (Ill.) aeronautical school.

Tramping 150 miles from Turon to Warsaw, Monkiewicz said that for almost twenty-five days he was under constant fire from planes, tanks and marching troops.

Others Aboard Liner

"For fifteen days I lived on black bread, hot soup now and then, and apples from orchards," he said.

Also aboard the President Harrison were Thomas Brown, of Philadelphia, an American student of German literature, and Eaton Cromwell, brother-in-law of Doris Duke.

New Dealers Plan to Use Rare Strategy

Sure of Enough Strength to Push Measure Through

Washington, Oct. 28 (AP)—Seldom-used parliamentary strategy was put in readiness tonight to slide the Administration's neutrality bill through the House without change next week, but militant foes of arms embargo repeal served notice that they would not serve as a "rubber stamp."

Administration leaders expressed confidence that they had the strength to steer the measure safely through, some placing the margin of victory as high as 50 votes. However, Rrepresentative Fish (R., N. Y.), leading the fight for retention of the embargo, hotly contested such claims. He asserted there was a good chance to reverse the verdict of the Senate, which passed the bill containing the repealer last night.

Whatever the outcome, a floor fight of major proportions appears assured when the House leadership tries to start its carefully geared machinery to prevent any amendment of the Senate bill.

LEADERS MAP STRATEGY

Speaker Bankhead announced that the leadership would move to send the bill to a joint Senate-House conference committee to compose the wide differences between the measure approved by the Senate and that which passed the House last Summer. The chief difference is that the House bill provides for a modified embargo. It would prohibit the shipment to belligerents of arms and munitions, but not such "implements of war" as airplanes.

Under the procedure outlined by Bankhead, it appeared the only chance the House would have to change the Senate bill would be through the device of instructing the House conferees as to what should be written into the final draft. However, the Speaker made it plain the leadership was confident it could prevent such action, although, he asserted, he would let the opposition try it.

Representative Fish told reporters he would make that attempt, but declared he had other tricks in his bag he would try first.

Although instruction of conferees is not unusual in the House, leaders conceded that the device seldom was resorted to in advance of appointment of the conferees, as is planned. Normally, such instructions are given after the conferees of either the Senate or the House reach a deadlock.

Fish, just back from a speaking tour in three Western States, said the first skirmish in the House battle would come Monday afternoon in the House Rules Committee.

At that time, Democratic leaders said, they would ask the committee for a "special rule" to send the bill to the conference committee. Normally, this is done by unanimous consent from the House floor, but majority leader Rayburn (D., Tex.) conceded that it would be impossible to get such consent in this instance.

Fish asserted he would seek to have the Rules Committee phrase the rule in such a way that the bill would be open for amendment. Failing that, he said, he would try to accomplish the same thing on the floor of the House, and if defeated he then would try to instruct the conferees.

"We ought to have the right to amend this bill as well as the Senate," Fish declared, echoing the contention of many House members who point out that war has come to Europe since they last acted on the legislation.

Asserting that it wasn't for the "power politics and propaganda" of the administration the opposition would win by 100 votes, Fish warned that a lot of House members would be "going to their own political slaughter" if they voted for repeal.

He said his recent trip convinced him "the plain people" were overwhelmingly in favor of retention of the embargo.

ARMS BILL DUE TO PASS HOUSE WITHIN A WEEK

Bankhead Expects Approval of Measure Without Major Change.

JOINT CONFERENCE PLANNED

Neutrality Issue Is Expected to Come Up in Lower Chamber Next Tuesday.

WASHINGTON, Oct. 28 (A. P.).—Speaker Bankhead predicted today that the neutrality bill approved by the Senate last night would pass the House next week without major change.

The Speaker told his press conference that the House leadership would move first to send the bill to a joint Senate-House conference committee to work out a compromise between the measure as it came from the Senate and the form in which it passed the House last summer.

The chief difference was that the House approved a modified arms embargo, while the Senate, ending twenty-one days of debate, voted 63 to 30 to repeal the existing arms embargo completely and set up a cash and carry system of commerce with belligerents.

Although he declined to discuss specific figures Mr. Bankhead said he was "confident that we have a majority of the House to sustain the major features of the Senate bill."

Under the procedure outlined by the leadership, it was apparent the House would not be permitted to amend the Senate bill directly. However, Mr. Bankhead said he was prepared to accord recognition to any member of the minority for the purpose of making a motion to instruct the House conferees as to what was wanted in the final draft of the legislation. He made it plain, nevertheless, that he felt sure the administration forces would vote down such motions.

Two Days of Debate.

Majority Leader Rayburn, Democrat, of Texas, who attended the conference, said two days of House debate had been the time discussed informally with the minority leadership. The bill is scheduled to come up in the House on Tuesday.

The House Rules Committee is scheduled to meet on Monday to clear the way for the leadership's procedure.

One member of the House leadership said he hoped the bill indicated that repeal of the arms embargo—key provision which many legislators on both sides of the controversy agreed would benefit Great Britain and France—would be approved by a majority of at least thirty votes.

Congressional insiders generally agreed that an administration-inclined conference committee would make short shrift of its work and would write a compromise measure embodying virtually all of the Senate bill. The committee's action would then have to be ratified by both branches of the Legislature.

Besides carrying out President Roosevelt's recommendation that the arms embargo be eliminated, the Senate measure would impose restrictions on American credits, shipping and travel to belligerent countries.

The White House said today that following last night's vote a number of Democratic Senators who led the fight for repeal called the President by telephone to report final passage.

Stephen Early, press secretary, said the President "talked to practically all of them and thanked them and the President was now waiting for House action."

The final Senate vote, taken before galleries packed to the walls, was followed by an unexpected and bitter outbreak over the usually insignificant point of how the preamble should read. The bill was offered to the Senate without a preamble.

Senator Connally, Democrat, of Texas, a supporter of the legislation, waited until after the measure was passed and then proposed one stating that this country desired to preserve its neutrality and that in imposing restrictions on its shipping and its citizens it was surrendering none of its rights under international law.

Protest by Wheeler.

Senator Wheeler, Democrat, of Montana, an opponent of embargo repeal, rose from his seat and began thumping papers on his desk.

"Mr. President," he declared finally, "I cannot agree to a preamble which is a stump political speech in behalf of this bill.

"The bill should stand or fall on its own merits. If you don't want to inject politics into this issue why should it be necessary to inject—at the last minute—a political speech?"

Senator Connally pulled his spectacles down on his nose, raised his arm and replied:

"The Senator from Montana says this is a stump speech. He ought to know—he's just made one."

The galleries tittered, and Senator Connally, seated directly behind Senator Wheeler, leaned over and asked whether the Montanan agreed that this country desired to maintain its neutrality.

"I think we should maintain our neutrality," Senator Wheeler replied, "but I don't think we can maintain it through repeal of the arms embargo."

"The same old stuff," Senator Connally snapped, his arms waving. "When you're licked, you can't take it."

"Will the Senator yield?" asked Mr. Wheeler.

"No," Mr. Connally said with emphasis.

"Then don't ask me any more questions," Mr. Wheeler snapped.

"I will ask you another question," Mr. Connally retorted angrily.

Senator Clark, Democrat, of Missouri, interposed to demand enforcement of a Senate rule requiring that Senators be addressed only in the third person. Senator Connally asked another question and Senator Wheeler fired back: "You're asking me?"

"No, I'm not," Senator Connally shouted. "I know your answer. It would be just the same old flub dub."

The debate had been alternately bitter, sarcastic and amusing in the last hours before passage of the bill, but Senator Minton, Democrat, of Indiana, presiding, found it almost impossible to keep order when the Wheeler-Connally dispute flared.

Often a half dozen Senators were on their feet at once and Senator Minton was banging his gavel almost constantly. Senators Wheeler and Clark threatened to talk indefinitely to prevent approval of the preamble. Mr. Connally withdrew it finally but pointed out that the joint Senate-House conference committee could write any sort of a preamble it chose.

Opponents Are Unreconciled.

Passage of the measure drew a statement from Senator Walsh, Democrat, of Massachusetts, an opponent, that "its motive and undisguised purpose is to aid and abet one group of belligerents in the European war." He added, however, that the long debate had watered down any feeling that the United States could not escape involvement in the conflict.

Another opponent, Senator Donahey, Democrat, of Ohio, had this to say:

"No good can come to a distressed world from America's bootleg neutrality law passed this week by the Senate. No unbiased person can call this sneak-in and sneak-out auction sale of implements of hate, a neutrality act for America."

Administration leaders contented themselves with a reiteration of their view that the bill would serve effectively to keep this country out of war.

Senator Barkley of Kentucky, the Democratic leader, predicted that the measure would be passed by the House and returned to the Senate by Thursday. Another Senate vote of approval then would send it to the White House for Mr. Roosevelt's assured signature.

Both Mr. Barkley and Minority Leader McNary, Republican, of Oregon, predicted adjournment of the special session by next week end. Mr. Barkley served notice that the leadership would demand adjournment even though there has been some sentiment for keeping Congress in session for the duration of the European war.

In yesterday's ten-hour session the Senate leadership beat down one opposition amendment after another. Senator La Follette, Progressive, of Wisconsin, provoked the most debate with a proposal that the people be allowed to vote in an advisory election before Congress could declare an overseas war. His proposition lost by a vote of 73 to 17.

Neutrality Bill Provides Easy Title Transfer

Process to Consist of Filing Oath That No American Has Interest in Supplies

WASHINGTON, Oct. 28 (AP).—Administration leaders predicted today that exporters would find it relatively easy to comply with requirements for transfer of title on goods shipped to belligerents as set forth in neutrality legislation approved by the Senate yesterday.

The bill, which awaits House action, would make it unlawful, once the neutrality law was invoked, "to export or transport, or attempt to export or transport, or cause to be exported or transported, from the United States to any (belligerent) state . . . any articles or materials until all right, title and interest therein shall have been transferred to some foreign government, agency, institution, association, partnership, corporation or national."

The bill specifically set forth that this required transfer of title could be shown conclusively by the filing with the collector of the port from which the materials were exported a declaration under oath that no United States citizen retained any interest in the shipment to be shipped.

Transfer of title in this manner is required on all shipments of arms, ammunition and implements of war consigned to a belligerent nation. Other sections of the bill provide that arms sales must be for cash and must be made only to governments.

There are exceptions, however, to the title transfer requirement on the shipment of non-military goods.

For instance, Senator Walter F. George, Democrat, of Georgia, explained to the Senate that there was no requirement that materials shipped to individuals within a belligerent state must be paid for in cash. He said that the declaration of transfer of title, made at the port, would not prevent the extension of ordinary commercial credits on such shipments. While title thus would be transferred, the American shipper might accept a note or some other commercial paper in payment.

Goods shipped to belligerent points in the south Atlantic, New Brunswick and Nova Scotia on the Bay of Fundy, the Pacific and Indian Oceans, the China, Tasman and Arabian seas and the Bay of Bengal would be specifically exempted from the title transfer requirements. No arms, however, could be shipped to such belligerent ports in American vessels.

Senator Tom Connally, Democrat, of Texas, in obtaining Senate approval of this relaxation of requirements, said he thought there was no necessity for requiring title transfer inasmuch as American vessels could carry cargoes to these ports. The title requirement originally was designed to prevent American losses at sea that might involve the United States in war.

The Senate also amended the title section to permit an American firm to ship goods to its branches in Canada without divesting itself of all title. The chamber made another provision that the port decla ration of title transfer should be accepted as final proof that no interest remained in American hands.

The title section of the bill also provided that no loss incurred by any citizen in connection with the sale or transfer of his interest in any articles sold to a belligerent should be made the basis of a claim put forward by the United States government.

OCT 29 1939

Some members of Congress said today that belligerent governments were virtually assured of being able to buy American airplanes, even though the House had yet to act on the Senate bill repealing the arms embargo.

Parliamentarians observed that, unless the House took unusual action, the Senate vote approving the neutrality revision bill meant that belligerents could at least buy "implements of war," including airplanes, in the United States.

In passing its own neutrality bill last session—for which the Senate measure is a substitute—the House voted to lift the embargo on implements of war but to retain the ban on arms and ammunition sales. Since both houses agreed that the ban on shipments of implements of war should be lifted, it was considered highly unlikely that this part of the bill would fail of enactment.

In approving an embargo covering only arms and ammunition, the House drew a distinction between actual lethal weapons and such implements of war as planes, oil, copper and other products which play an important part in modern warfare.

BILL REOPENS WORLD MARKET

OCT 29 1939

Conditions Are Laid Down for American Trade.

E. C. DANIEL

WASHINGTON, Oct. 28 (A. P.).—It simmers down to this: The American business man would be permitted by the Senate's neutrality bill to sell anything to anybody anywhere, war or no war, but under certain conditions.

Supporters of the measure contend that most of the war's risks to him, his goods, his ships and to the nation's neutrality would be avoided or eliminated by the bill's drastic trade regulations.

Senators who opposed the bill take just the opposite view, arguing that the restrictions provided are full of loopholes and the section permitting arms sales a step toward war.

It is only the business of the United States ship owner that would be positively, rather than potentially, curtailed by the measure. Even so, the new bill would keep in operation possibly fifty-four ships that might have been tied up or shifted to service in other parts of the world by the statute which administration Senate leaders originally proposed.

300 Planes Ready.

Some 300 military planes, ordered before the existing arms embargo went into effect, stand ready for delivery to England and France. About 300 more are being built. Under the Senate bill American manufacturers could not deliver those planes to any belligerent port in American ships, or without receiving cash in advance. They could sell them for cash and for delivery in foreign vessels.

Here's the difference between the pen and the sword:

A manufacturer of pens in Newark, N. J.,—the same city where sixty bombers await delivery—could not make shipments in United States vessels to England, France, Germany or, generally, the East Coast of Canada.

Unlike the plane manufacturer, however, he could sell on credit to private purchasers—but still not to Governments—in those areas. He also could make shipments in United States vessels to Bermuda, New Brunswick, Nova Scotia on the Bay of Fundy, and to belligerent ports in the Pacific and Indian oceans, the China, Tasman and Arabian seas and the Bay of Bengal. He could serve Canada by air, rail or inland waterway.

British Ports Opened.

That would open such British ports as those in Australia, New Zealand, India and South Africa to American ships carrying products of the pen manufacturer and other makers of non-military supplies. But the American arms merchant could get his wares into these outlying ports only on non-American vessels.

Even these ports might be closed to American shipping generally if the President, because of danger from belligerent warships, proclaimed a combat zone around them.

Obviously, American shipping would be damaged by the bill, although some Senators contend it might recover business lost in European waters by expanded operations elsewhere.

Comparison with the original Senate bill indicates that at least forty-four vessels in the Australasian, Indian, Persian Gulf, Red Sea, African and Caribbean trade would be free under the new bill to continue operations. Perhaps ten more would be freed unless combat zones were closed around the Mediterranean and Black Sea and the Baltic and Scandinavian areas.

Travel Also Restricted.

Still, according to the Maritime Commission estimates, seventy-six ships would be put out of commission by the new bill.

Not only shipping but travel would be restricted. Gen. Pershing, for instance, would not be permitted to go to France on an American ship for his customary pilgrimage to American battlefields. He could make the trip on a neutral or belligerent vessel if the State Department decided that the voyage was necessary.

Already, the State Department has refused to permit Americans to visit belligerent countries except for extraordinary reasons.

That means vacations in Bermuda, Canada, Mexico, South America, Tahiti or Hawaii instead of the south of France this year.

Other provisions of the bill are that credits to warring governments are prohibited, foreign ships not fly the American flag, and that American merchant ships not armed except with small arms

UNDATED SEA WARFARE (WITH BUDGET)

BY JOHN A.MOROSO, 3RD.

ASSOCIATED PRESS STAFF WRITER

THE STRUGGLE BEING WAGED BY SUBMARINES, WARSHIPS, PLANES AND ARMED MERCHANTMEN FOR CONTROL OF THE HIGH SEA TRADE ROUTES HAS STRUCK AT ALMOST EVERY NATION IN THE WORLD, A SURVEY AT THE CLOSE OF THE EIGHTH WEEK OF THE EUROPEAN WAR SHOWED YESTERDAY (SATURDAY).

THE UNITED STATES, WHOSE S.S. CITY OF FLINT AROUSED THE GREAT COMMOTION DURING THE PAST WEEK, HAS NOT YET HAD A SHIP DESTROYED BUT THE WAR, NEVERTHELESS, HAS LEFT ITS IMPRINT ON ITS SHIPPING.

30.24-4347

FURTHER EFFECTS WILL COME LATER, FOR UNDER THE REVISED NEUTRALITY ACT PASSED BY THE SENATE AND NOW BEFORE THE HOUSE, U.S. SHIPS WILL BE BARRED FROM BELLIGERENT WATERS--A RULE WHICH SHIPPERS SAY WILL FORCE THE TIE-UP OF MANY VESSELS WHICH HAVE OPERATED FOR YEARS IN THE RICH EUROPEAN TRADE.

ENGLAND ADMITTED THAT IN THE FIRST MONTH OF THE WAR HER EXPORT TRADE HAD DROPPED 42 PERCENT. SHE EMBARKED ON A CAMPAIGN OF MASS PRODUCTION OF SMALL FREIGHTERS IN AN ATTEMPT TO RETRIEVE THE LOSS.

GERMANY'S SHIPS WERE PRACTICALLY WIPED OFF THE SEAS BY THE SUPERIOR BRITISH NAVY. ENGLAND AND THE UNITED STATES BOTH SAW A CHANCE TO TAKE OVER HER RICH SOUTH AMERICAN TRADE.

MEDITERRANEAN TRADE SUFFERED A SEVERE BLOW WHEN GERMANY BEGAN ATTACKING SHIPS AS THEY ENTERED OR LEFT THE STRAITS OF GIBRALTAR.

THE SCANDINAVIAN COUNTRIES HAVE LOST 20 SHIPS TO GERMAN U-BOATS AND MINES. SCORES HAVE BEEN SEIZED BY THE BRITISH, FRENCH, GERMANS AND RUSSIANS.

OCT 29 1939

THE KNOWN LOSS OF ALL NATIONS WAS 98 SHIPS WITH A GROSS TONNAGE OF MORE THAN 399,319. (THE TONNAGE ON SEVERAL UNIDENTIFIED SHIPS WAS NOT KNOWN.)

THE DEATH TOLL ROSE TO AT LEAST 1,845 WITH THE REPORTED FINDING OF 56 GERMAN BODIES IN U-BOAT WRECKS OFF ENGLAND AND FRANCE AND THE REPORTED LOSS OF 15 LIVES ON AN UNIDENTIFIED BRITISH FREIGHTER.

BRITAIN HAS SUFFERED 53 KNOWN LOSSES, GERMANY 10 AND FRANCE SIX. THE 29 KNOWN NEUTRAL LOSSES WERE DIVIDED AS FOLLOWS: NORWAY 8, SWEDEN 7, FINLAND 4, NETHERLANDS 3, GREECE 3, DENMARK 1, RUSSIA 1, BELGIUM 1, RUMANIA 1.

THE PAST WEEK PRODUCED NINE KNOWN LOSSES AS COMPARED TO 20 FOR THE FIRST WEEK OF WAR. OTHER WEEKS: SECOND 17, THIRD 11, FOURTH 9, FIFTH 6, SIXTH 11 AND SEVENTH 9.

REPORTED BRITISH LOSSES DURING THE EIGHTH WEEK TOTALED SEVEN--THE WHITEMANTLE, SEA VENTURE, STONEGATE, LEDBURY, MENIN RIDGE, TAFNA AND CLAN CHISHOLM.

THE LAST FOUR WERE LOST NEAR GIBRALTAR UNDER CONDITIONS THAT INDICATED GERMAN U-BOATS HAD ATTACKED A CONVOY.

THE GREEK FREIGHTER KONSTANTINOS HADJIPATERAS AND THE SWEDISH FREIGHTER ALBANIA WERE TORPEDOED DURING THE WEEK. THE GREEK VESSEL WAS CARRYING SCRAP IRON FROM BOSTON TO ENGLAND.

GERMAN CLAIMS OF VICTORY AT SEA DIFFERED SHARPLY FROM THE RESULTS REPORTED. THEY ASSERTED THAT 115 MERCHANT SHIPS AGGREGATING 475,321 TONS HAD BEEN DESTROYED.

OCT 29 1939

GERMANY ADMITTED YESTERDAY THAT SHE HAD LOST THREE SUBMARINES, BASING THE STATEMENT ON "THEIR LONG ABSENCE," WHICH ALSO DIFFERED FROM BRITISH CLAIMS.

WINSTON CHURCHILL, FIRST LORD OF THE ENGLISH ADMIRALTY, SAID OCT. 17 THAT ABOUT ONE-THIRD OF GERMANY'S 60 U-BOATS HAD BEEN DESTROYED. SINCE THEN THE ENGLISH HAVE CLAIMED THREE ADDITIONAL [illegible] AND HAVE FOUND ONE WASHED ASHORE.

BRITAIN ADMITTED YESTERDAY SHE HAD LOST 51 SHIPS TOTALLING 210,021 TONS, EXCLUSIVE OF THE ROYAL OAK AND COURAGEOUS, ALTHOUGH HER PREVIOUSLY ANNOUNCED SHIP-BY-SHIP LOSSES HAD TOTALED BUT 46.

THE BRITISH CASH LOSS IN WARSHIPS FOR THE FIRST 58 DAYS OF THE WAR EXCEEDED THEIR LOSS FOR A SIMILAR PERIOD IN THE WORLD WAR, THOUGH THE NUMBER OF SHIPS WAS SMALLER.

THE VALUE OF THE COURAGEOUS AND THE ROYAL OAK WAS PLACED AT $35,000,000. IN THE WORLD WAR ENGLAND HAD LOST EIGHT SMALLER SHIPS VALUED AT $32,985,000.

THE HIGHLIGHTS OF THE WEEK WERE THE GERMAN CAPTURE OF THE CITY OF FLINT AND THE APPEARANCE OF THE GERMAN "POCKET BATTLESHIPS" ADMIRAL SCHEER AND DEUTSCHLAND ON THE HIGH SEAS.

THE STATE DEPARTMENT'S ANNOUNCEMENT THAT 21 AMERICAN VESSELS, INCLUDING THE CITY OF FLINT, HAD BEEN DETAINED BY BELLIGERENTS ILLUSTRATED THE HANDICAP UNDER WHICH SHIPS WERE SAILING.

OTHER DEVELOPMENTS YESTERDAY WERE THE LANDING BY AN UNNAMED VESSEL OF 31 SURVIVORS OF THE BRITISH FREIGHTER TAFNA AT GIBRALTAR; AND THE LANDING OF 80 GERMAN SAILORS AT A SCOTTISH PORT BY A BRITISH ARMED MERCHANT CRUISER. NO DETAILS WERE GIVEN OF THE LATTER CAPTURE.

OCT 29 1939

PRIME MINISTER NEVILLE CHAMBERLAIN HAS SAID THE GERMANS HAD INDICATED THAT THEY WOULD SINK SHIPS WITHOUT WARNING.

FIRST LEAD UPDATED EMBARGO REACTION

BY THE ASSOCIATED PRESS OCT 29 1939

FRANCE PRAISED TODAY THE UNITED STATES SENATE'S VOTE TO REPEAL THE ARMS EMBARGO WHILE A GERMAN SOURCE SAID THE SENATE ACTION WOULD BE CONSIDERED A MOVE AGAINST GERMANY.

BRITAIN INDICATED IT WAS "NOT DISSATISFIED" WITH THE VOTE

IN RESPONSE TO EDITORIALS IN THE ALLIED PRESS PRAISING THE SENATE REPEAL, A GERMAN SOURCE OFFICIAL SAID:

" OFTEN,HOWEVER, EVENTS AROUND WHICH A GREAT HALO IS PLACED AFTERWARDS PROVE NOT TO DESERVE THAT HALO."

A CAUTIOUS SEMI-OFFICIAL FRENCH STATEMENT SAID FRANCE HOPED TO RESUME DEALINGS WITH AMERICAN WAR MATERIAL MANUFACTURERS THE SAME AS SHE DID BEFORE THE EUROPEAN WAR STARTED.

AND THE PRO-GERMAN PARIS PRESS WAS MORE OUTSPOKEN.

ONE NEWSPAPER REFERRED TO THE DEVELOPMENT AS "A VICTORY FOR PRESIDENT ROOSEVELT,WHO IS SUPPORTED BY THE MAJORITY OF THE AMERICAN PUBLIC."

OCT 29 1939

IN BRITAIN,THE SENATE VOTE CAUSED SOME SURPRISE IN OFFICIAL QUARTERS,WHICH APPARENTLY HAD EXPECTED THE OPPOSITION TO PUT UP A STIFFER FIGHT. THEY SUGGESTED THAT ANY COMMENT BEFORE THE ISSUE HAS BEEN DECIDED IN THE HOUSE WOULD BE PREMATURE.

30.24-4349

DIPLOMATIC CIRCLES SAID UNOFFICIALLY, HOWEVER, THAT BRITAIN "AT LEAST WOULD NOT BE DISSATISFIED WITH THE SENATE'S DECISION."

OCT 29 1939

THE BRITISH PRESS WAS MORE OUTSPOKEN, SEEING THE DEVELOPMENT AS REASON FOR ENCOURAGEMENT. THE DAILY MAIL COMMENTED:

"IT CANNOT NOW BE CONCEALED THAT THE PROSPECT OF SUCH A VAST WAR STOREHOUSE AS AMERICA OFFERS COMES AS A TONIC ENCOURAGEMENT TO THE NATIONS FIGHTING THE CAUSE OF DEMOCRACY."

THE DAILY SKETCH REMARKED THAT "THE NEWS FROM WASHINGTON WILL MAKE POOR READING FOR HITLER, BUT IT MAY HURRY HIM INTO DOING SOMETHING ON THE WESTERN FRONT."

[redacted] HEADLINES IN THE HERALD SAID "GOOD NEWS: BRITAIN WILL GET ARMS FROM U.S.A."

WHILE OFFICIAL COMMENT WAS LACKING IN BERLIN, THE NEWS APPARENTLY WAS NOT ENTIRELY UNEXPECTED THERE. A FOREIGN OFFICE SPOKESMAN SAID NO STATEMENT COULD BE ISSUED UNTIL after careful study THE SENATE MEASURE HAD BEEN CAREFULLY STUDIED.

30.24-4349

[redacted] BERLIN'S MORNING NEWSPAPERS MADE NO REFERENCE TO THE MATTER, LEAVING THE GERMAN PUBLIC UNINFORMED ON DEVELOPMENTS IN WASHINGTON.

OCT 29 1939

FRANCE'S BLOCKADE MINISTER, GEORGES PERNOT, IN A STATEMENT [redacted] BEFORE NEWS OF THE SENATE'S ACTION WAS RECEIVED IN PARIS, URGED NEUTRAL COUNTRIES NOT TO FURNISH GERMANY WITH "EXCEPTIONAL" [redacted] SUPPLIES.

"HOWEVER MUCH WE MAY CARE TO FACILITATE PROVISIONING OF NEUTRAL POPULATIONS AND MAINTENANCE OF THEIR INDUSTRIAL ACTIVITY," PERNOT SAID, "IT IS REASONABLE TO EXPECT THAT GUARANTEES BE GIVEN US THAT THIS COOPERATION WILL NOT FURTHER EVEN PARTLY THE CAUSE OF THE IMPLACABLE [redacted] ADVERSARY WHO HAS IMPOSED THIS WAR ON US."

EMBARGO

PARIS, OCT. 28-(AP)-A CAUTIOUS SEMI-OFFICIAL STATEMENT TODAY SAID FRANCE HOPED TO RESUME DEALINGS WITH AMERICAN WAR MATERIAL MANUFACTURERS, THE SAME AS SHE CARRIED ON BEFORE THE EUROPEAN WAR STARTED.

OCT 29 1939

BERLIN, OCT 28-(AP)-AUTHORIZED SOURCES SAID TODAY THE UNITED STATES SENATE'S REPEAL OF THE ARMS EMBARGO WOULD BE CONSIDERED IN GERMANY'S EYES AS AN ACT IN FAVOR OF THE WESTERN ALLIES, BUT MINIMIZED ITS IMPORTANCE.

OCT 29 1939

REFERRING TO EDITORIALS IN THE ALLIED PRESS PRAISING THE REPEAL OF THE EMBARGO, A SPOKESMAN SAID:

"OFTEN, HOWEVER, EVENTS AROUND WHICH A GREAT HALO IS PLACED AFTERWARDS PROVE NOT TO DESERVE THAT HALO."

"THE PLAY'S THE THING. NOT ANY INDIVIDUAL ACT." ONE SOURCE SAID METAPHORICALLY, POINTING OUT THE EMBARGO REPEAL MUST BE APPROVED BY THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES.

MEMBERS OF ITALY'S TRADE DELEGATION TO THE BALKANS WERE FETED TONIGHT AT AN OFFICIAL DINNER IN THE BULGARIAN CAPITAL AND THERE WERE FURTHER REPORTS OF A MORE DETERMINED EFFORT BY FASCIST DIPLOMACY TO FORESTALL COMPLETE RUSSIAN INFLUENCE IN BULGARIA.

THE FACT THAT IVAN PRASSOLOV, SOVIET CHARGE D'AFFAIRES, CONFERRED OFTEN THIS WEEK WITH KIOSSEIVANOFF GAVE RENEWED EMPHASIS, ON THE OTHER HAND, TO RUSSIA'S NEW INTEREST IN THIS COUNTRY.

OCT 29 1939

IT WAS REPORTED FURTHER THAT PRASSOLOV HAD MADE AN UNANNOUNCED VISIT TO KIOSSEIVANOFF'S OFFICE LATE TODAY.

SIMULTANEOUSLY IT WAS ANNOUNCED THAT FRENCH, GERMAN, TURKISH AND GREEK ENVOYS HAD CONFERRED WITH THE BULGARIAN PREMIER AS THE POSSIBILITY FOR REALLY OPEN COMPETITION FOR INFLUENCE IN STRATEGICALLY-PLACED BULGARIA BECAME MORE LIKELY.

ONE DIPLOMATIC VIEW WAS THAT SOVIET PRESSURE TO GET RUMANIA TO YIELD SOUTHERN DOBRUJA TO BULGARIA WAS BEING MATCHED BY ITALIAN PRESSURE TO THE SAME END THROUGH YUGOSLAVIA.

DIPLOMATS SAID THAT APPARENTLY BOTH ITALY AND RUSSIA REALIZE THE ONLY WAY TO WIN BULGARIA'S LASTING FRIENDSHIP IS TO GET HER TERRITORIAL CLAIMS FOR HER AND BOTH WANT CREDIT FOR ENGINEERING IT.

ITALIAN INFLUENCE IN ANOTHER QUARTER WAS SEEN BY DIPLOMATS AS REPORTS CAME OF IMPENDING IMPROVEMENT IN THE RELATIONS BETWEEN BULGARIA AND GREECE.

OCT 29 1939

STRANGELY ENOUGH, THE INFLUENCE OF GERMANY, WHICH WAS VERY HEAVY IN BULGARIA BEFORE THE EUROPEAN WAR WAS STARTED, WAS REPORTED ALMOST COMPLETELY ABSENT, WITH THE MAIN GERMAN DIPLOMATIC EFFORTS BEING DEVOTED TO ATTEMPTS TO GET MORE OF HER AGRICULTURAL PRODUCTS.

AS THE WAR REACHED THE END OF THE EIGHTH WEEK THE FRENCH APPARENTLY CONSIDERED THEMSELVES ON THE EVE OF A GERMAN OFFENSIVE. THE ONLY QUESTION SEEMINGLY IN FRENCH MINDS WAS WHETHER THE GERMANS WOULD WAIT FOR SLUSHY WEATHER TO CLEAR, THUS USING SEVERAL MORE DAYS FOR THE TESTING OF FRENCH POSITIONS.

NOVEMBER IN LORRAINE USUALLY IS COLD BUT DRY, WITH BRIGHT, CLEAR NIGHTS COMPENSATING FOR THE SHORT DAYLIGHT HOURS.

R302PES

IN CONNECTION WITH THE REDUCTION OF FRENCH TROOPS, EXPERTS ADVANCED TWO REASONS WHY LESS MANPOWER WAS NEEDED THAN IN THE LAST WAR.

THEY SAID MECHANIZED WARFARE'S MOBILITY OF DIVISIONS AND NEW RAPID-FIRE GUNS INCREASED THE FIRE POWER OF THE PRESENT FRENCH DIVISION OF 12,000-15,000 MEN TO MORE THAN THAT OF THE OLD DIVISION OF 20,000 MEN.

IN ADDITION, THE EXPERTS DECLARED, THE PRESENT FORTRESS WARFARE WAS DOUBLING OR TRIPLING THE FIGHTING POWER OF EACH MAN. THEY SAID THERE HAD BEEN SCARCELY MORE LOSSES IN THE LAST EIGHT WEEKS THAN IN THE FIRST WEEK ALONE OF THE LAST WAR.

ALSO, THE EXPERTS SAID, FRANCE'S BRITISH ALLIES HAD MANY TIMES MORE MEN TO SEND TO FRANCE THAN IN 1914.

NO FIGURES WERE KNOWN, BUT INFORMED BRITISH SOURCES MADE NO SECRET THAT THEIR FORCE GREATLY EXCEEDED THE FEW DIVISIONS OF "OLD CONTEMPTIBLES" WHO WON THEIR SPURS IN THE LAST WAR IN THE RETREAT FROM MONS.

BERLIN-SECOND ADD CITY OF FLINT XXX SOURCES DECLINED.

THE INFORMATION THAT ALL WAS WELL ABOARD THE CITY OF FLINT WAS SAID BY FOREIGN OFFICE CIRCLES TO HAVE BEEN COMMUNICATED TO WASHINGTON.

THERE WAS MUCH SPECULATION ON THE DATE OF THE CITY OF FLINT'S ARRIVAL IN GERMANY. AT PRESENT, HOWEVER, NOTHING WAS KNOWN EXCEPT THAT IT WAS POSSIBLE SOMETIME NEXT WEEK.

OFFICIAL ADVICES LAST NIGHT PLACED THE FREIGHTER SOMEWHERE ALONG THE NORWEGIAN COAST. THE PRIZE CREW WAS EXPECTED TO STEER THE CITY OF FLINT CLOSE TO THE NORWEGIAN COAST AS FAR AS THE SKAGERRAK, ARM OF THE NORTH SEA, THENCE TO THE POINT OF DESTINATION BY A ROUTE IMPOSSIBLE TO PREDICT.

(REPORTS FROM NORWAY INDICATED THE CITY OF FLINT WAS BEING SAILED IN NORWEGIAN WATERS TO MINIMIZE THE POSSIBILITY OF RUNNING AFOUL OF THE BRITISH NAVY. UNCONFIRMED REPORTS AT BERGEN WERE THAT THE AMERICAN CREW MIGHT BE LANDED THERE.

(RELEASE OF THE CITY OF FLINT FROM MURMANSK WAS FOLLOWED UP AT MOSCOW BY UNITED STATES AMBASSADOR LAURENCE A.STEINHARDT WITH AN EXPRESSION OF HIS "INDIGNATION AT THE LACK OF COOPERATION BY THE SOVIET GOVERNMENT IN WITHHOLDING INFORMATION" ON THE CITYOF FLINT.

(THE STATE DEPARTMENT PUBLISHED LAST NIGHT STEINHARDT'S REPORT ON AN INTERVIEW WITH SOVIET RUSSIA'S VICE COMMISSAR OF FOREIGN AFFAIRS VLADIMIR POTEMKIN.

(STEINHARDT REPORTED HIS REPRESENTATIONS AND SAID POTEMKIN TOLD HIM THAT RUSSIA HAD DECIDED TO SEND THE FREIGHTER OUT "IN THE SAME STATUS AS SHE HAD ENTERED"----WITH BOTH AMERICAN AND GERMAN CREWS ABOARD AND THE CARGO STILL IN THE HOLDS.

(THE UNITED STATES HAD DEMANDED THAT THE FREIGHTER BE RELEASED TO HER AMERICAN CREW.)

PS72AAES

(STEINHARDT QUOTED POTEMKIN AS SAYING THE GERMAN PRIZE CREW REPORTED THAT DAMAGED MACHINERY MADE THE CITY OF FLINT UNSEAWORTHY, NECESSITATING HER PUTTING IN AT MURMANSK. POTEMKIN, STEINHARDT SAID, "ASSUMED" THIS POINT HAD BEEN VERIFIED BY MURMANSK AUTHORITIES.

(THE AMBASSADOR FURTHER QUOTED POTEMKIN AS ARGUING THAT IN THE OPINION OF HIS GOVERNMENT TURNING THE VESSEL OVER TO THE AMERICAN CREW WOULD HAVE BEEN AN UNNEUTRAL ACT UNLESS WE THE PRIZE CREW REFUSED TO TAKE THE FREIGHTER AWAY.)

THE GERMAN HIGH COMMAND, MEANWHILE, ACKNOWLEDGED, THAT THE LOSS OF "THREE "GERMAN SUBMARINES MUST BE COUNTED ON IN VIEW OF THEIR LONG ABSENCE."

THE HIGH COMMAND ALSO REPORTED THAT SINCE THE BEGINNING OF THE WAR AT LEAST 115 MERCHANT SHIPS WITH AN AGGREGATE TONNAGE OF 473,321 HAD BEEN SENT TO THE BOTTOM BY GERMANY.

"INASMUCH AS UNCONFIRMED REPORTS ARE NOT INCLUDED IN THIS COMPILATION," A COMMUNIQUE SAID, "IT MUST BE ASSUMED THAT THE ACTUAL FIGURES ARE CONSIDERABLY HIGHER."

AS TO THE WAR ON THE WESTERN FRONT, IT REPORTED "SOMEWHAT LIVELIER ARTILLERY ACTIVITY" AND BETWEEN THE MOSELLE RIVER AND THE PALATINATE FOREST AND SAID A SMALL ENEMY ADVANCE WEST OF WARNDT HAD BEEN REPULSED.

THE SHIFTING SPOTLIGHT:

MUSSOLINI, STALIN, HITLER (1,300)

BY JOHN LEAR

ASSOCIATED PRESS STAFF WRITER

(NY)-(UNDATED ADVANCE)-THREE BOYS WHO WERE SO POOR THEY OFTEN DID NOT KNOW WHERE THEIR NEXT MEAL WAS COMING FROM ARE TODAY THE RULERS OF MOST OF THE RICHES OF EUROPE.

THEIR NAMES ARE ADOLF, BENITO AND JOSEPH.

HITLER---MUSSOLINI---STALIN.

EACH IS SUPREME IN HIS OWN LAND. TOGETHER THEY CONTROL, DIRECTLY OR INDIRECTLY, THE GREATER PART OF EUROPE AND A VAST SLICE OF ASIA. IF THEY COULD UNITE ON A COURSE OF ACTION, THEY COULD DICTATE THE AFFAIRS OF ONE, AND PERHAPS OF TWO, CONTINENTS. BUT THEY CANNOT FORGET THEIR OWN INDIVIDUAL AMBITIONS. THEY ALWAYS, SOMEHOW, ARE IN EACH OTHER'S WAY.

BENITO AND JOSEPH GOT TOGETHER ONCE; ADOLF HELD ALOOF. THEN ADOLF AND BENITO WERE PALS; JOSEPH DIDN'T LIKE IT. NOW ADOLF AND JOSEPH ARE CLASPING HANDS; BENITO IS OFF IN A CORNER.

THE SPOTLIGHT OF HISTORY HAS FLICKERED FROM ONE TO THE OTHER OF THEM LIKE A WILL-O-THE-WISP. FIRST IT SHONE ON MUSSOLINI, THEN ON STALIN. BACK IT JUMPED TO MUSSOLINI. HITLER CAME ALONG AND IT LIGHTED ON HIM. NOW IT'S STALIN'S TURN AGAIN.

ALL THREE BEGAN GROPING FOR THE ELUSIVE PATCH OF LIGHT IN THE SAME YEAR: 1922.

MUSSOLINI REACHED IT FIRST, WITH HIS MARCH ON ROME.

THE WORLD STOOD BY, MOUTH AGAPE, AS THIS FORCEFUL FIGURE TOOK OVER THE ITALIAN GOVERNMENT, PEACEFULLY, AT THE HEAD OF A HOST OF BLACKSHIRTED YOUNG MEN, "THE FASCISTI."

THE OTHER COUNTRIES HELD THEIR BREATH AS HE DISSOLVED THE CHAMBER OF DEPUTIES, ITALY'S ELECTED PARLIAMENT WHERE HE ONCE SAT AS A SOCIALIST, AND DREW MORE AND MORE POWER INTO HIS OWN HANDS. HIS CRITICS ACCUSED HIM OF BORROWING BOLSHEVIK RUSSIA'S METHODS. HIS FRIENDS PRAISED HIM FOR WELDING A PEOPLE INTO NATIONAL UNITY. ALL STOOD IN AWE OF HIS SPEED AND EFFICIENCY.

OCT 29 1939

AT HOME, HE FOUGHT COMMUNISM. ABROAD, HE WARNED OF THE DANGER OF AN ALLIANCE BETWEEN RUSSIA AND GERMANY. FOR 1922 WAS THE YEAR OF THE RUSSO-GERMAN TREATY OF RAPALLO. GERMANY WAS A DEMOCRACY THEN. HE SCORNED DEMOCRACIES, AND AS ONE OF THE WORLD WAR ALLIES HE INSISTED THAT GERMANY "CAN AND MUST PAY" THE COSTS OF THAT CONFLICT.

BY 1926, HE WAS A PERSONALITY UNIQUE. NO WHERE ELSE DID A SINGLE PERSON OPENLY WIELD SO MUCH AUTHORITY AS HE. HE ALLOWED ONLY ONE POLITICAL PARTY: MUSSOLINI'S PARTY: THE FASCIST PARTY. FREE SPEECH AND FREE PRESS WERE SILENCED; THEY WERE DIRECTED NOW "FOR THE GOOD OF THE STATE."

THIS WAS BENITO, WHO ONCE WAS SO POOR HE BEGGED BREAD IN THE STREETS. THIS WAS BENITO, THE EDITOR WHO HAD GONE TO JAIL FOR HIS LIBERAL WRITINGS. THIS WAS BENITO, THE ONETIME SOCIALIST, CONVERTED TO THE PROPOSITION THAT MAN LIVES ONLY FOR HIS COUNTRY.

NATIONS RECOGNIZED BENITO AS A LEADING STATESMAN, A FORCE TO BE RECKONED WITH IN INTERNATIONAL AFFAIRS. AMERICAN NEWSPAPER HEADLINES CALLED HIM "A MODERN CAESAR."

YET, IN 1928, THE SPOTLIGHT FLICKERED AWAY FROM HIM, AND BOUNCED INTO THE EASTERN SKY. THERE IT FELL ON JOSEPH STALIN, SUCCESSOR TO NIKOLAI LENIN AS LEADER OF RUSSIA'S MILLIONS.

STALIN'S LIGHT WAS A BRIGHT LIGHT, FOR HE BURST UPON THE WORLD AS THE ENGINEER OF "THE FIVE YEAR PLAN," A SWEEPING DESIGN TO REVOLUTIONIZE RUSSIA FROM A BACKWARD LAND OF ILLITERATE PEASANTS TO A MODERN ENLIGHTENED INDUSTRIAL POWER.

LIKE MUSSOLINI, STALIN WAS AN UNKNOWN POOR BOY. HE WAS A COBBLER'S SON, BORN IN THE CAUCASAS MOUNTAINS ON THE SHORE OF THE BLACK SEA. UNLIKE MUSSOLINI, STALIN HAD PLAYED NO INTELLECTUAL ROLE IN POLITICS. HIS PART IN THE RUSSIAN REVOLUTION HAD BEEN THAT OF AGITATOR, BOMB THROWER, MAKER OF VIOLENT PLOTS. HIS NAME APPEARED ONLY ON THE POLICE BLOTTERS. EVEN HIS COMRADES KNEW HIM UNDER THE ALIAS "SOSSO." HE WAS STILL ANONYMOUS TO MOST COMMUNISTS WHEN HE QUIETLY ASSUMED HIS PRESENT PIVOT OF POWER IN 1922--THE SECRETARYSHIP OF THE COMMUNIST PARTY. ONLY TODAY IS HIS BACKGROUND BECOMING KNOWN, THROUGH BORIS SOUVARINE'S BIOGRAPHY, "STALIN." BUT HIS NAME WAS FAMOUS IMMEDIATELY AS IT WAS LINKED WITH "THE FIVE YEAR PLAN."

OCT 29 1939

THE IMMENSE SCOPE BF THE PLAN STAGGERED POPULAR IMAGINATION. NEWSPAPERS ALL OVER THE GLOBE PRINTED REAMS OF DESCRIPTION OF IT. OVERNIGHT, STALIN WAS THE "KEY MAN" OF THE TIMES.

BUT ONLY OVERNIGHT.

30.24-4359

MUSSOLINI HAD THE SPOTLIGHT BACK IN 1929, WITH HIS ACCORD WITH THE VATICAN, GIVING THE POPES THEIR FIRST TEMPORAL FREEDOM [redacted] SINCE THE UNI[redacted]FICATION OF ITALY IN [redacted] 1870.

WHILE STALIN RDMAINED BUSY AT HOME ON HIS "FIVE YEAR PLAN," ITALY'S DUCE KEPT HIMSELF THE CENTER OF ATTENTION ABROAD. HE DEMANDED AIR AND SEA PARITY WITH FRANCE IN 1929. HE ENCOURAGED THE NAZI MOVEMENT OF ADOLF HITLER IN 1932, PLEASED THAT ANOTHER SHOULD FOLLOW THE MUSSOLINI MODEL. HE ROSE TO THE EMINENCE OF A MENTOR WHEN HITLER SUCCEEDED TO POWER IN 1933. AND, THE SAME YEAR, HE ACHIEVED HIS DREAM OF YEARS BY DRAWING GERMANY, ENGLAND AND FRANCE INTO A FOUR-POWER PACT.

IT WAS A SHORT LIVED TRIUMPH FOR THE ITALIAN LEADER. BEFORE 1933 WAS GONE, HITLER'S CLAIMS FOR A GREATER GERMANY WERE A CAUSE OF UNEASINESS. SO WAS NAZI AGITATION IN AUSTRIA, ITALY'S LONGTIME FRIEND.

THAT WAS THE YEAR STALIN AND MUSSOLINI SIGNED A TRADE AGREEMENT AND BACKED IT UP BY A NON-AGGRESSION PACT. HITLER REFUSED A SIMILAR PROFFER OF FRIENDSHIP FROM STALIN, INCREASING HIS ATTACKS ON COMMUNISM IN GERMANY TO EMPHASIZE HIS REJECTION.

THE SPOTLIGHT WAS STARTING TO WAVER. IT FLIPPED OVER TO HITLER WHEN HE QUIT THE LEAGUE OF NATIONS AND THE WORLD DISARMAMENT CONFERENCE IN 1934. IT FLIPPED AGAIN WHEN HIS NAZI FOLLOWERS IN VIENNA ASSASSINATED ENGLEBERT DOLLFUSS, THE AUSTRIAN CHANCELLOR, THE SAME YEAR.

MUSSOLINI, HOWEVER, WAS STILL THE DOMINANT PERSONALITY OF EUROPE.

TRUE, HITLER HAD DEIGNED TO INFORM HIM IN ADVANCE ON THE LEAGUE OF NATIONS AND DISARMAMENT CONFERENCE ACTION, AND HAD OPENLY

30.24-4359

ANTAGONIZED HIM IN THE DOLLFUSS AFFAIR. BUT ITALIAN TROOPS, ON THE ALPINE PASSES, HELD UP A THREATENED GERMAN ADVANCE INTO AUSTRIA, AND HEADLINES IN AMERICAN NEWSPAPERS SCREAMED IN BIG TYPE "MUSSOLINI MAY INSIST HITLER DISBAND STORM TROOPERS." ONLY IN MUCH SMALLER TYPE, OVER A MUCH SMALLER STORY, WAS IT NOTED "EUROPE FEARFUL OF HITLER'S RULE."

THE EMPHASIS IN THE HEADLINES WAS GRADUALLY REVERSED DURING THE NEXT TWO YEARS.

THE MUSSOLINI WHO SPOKE OUT AGAINST HITLER IN 1935 BY SIDING WITH ENGLAND AND FRANCE IN PROTESTING GERMAN REARMAMENT WAS SILENT AND SUBMISSIVE WHEN THE GERMANS REMILITARIZED THE RHINELAND IN 1936.

THE ETHIOPIAN WAR WAS THE KEY TO THE CHANGE. GERMANY WAS THE ONLY NATION TO SUPPORT THE ITALIAN CONQUEST IN AFRICA. MUSSOLINI WAS THEREFORE IN DEBT TO HITLER.

FROM THEN ON, THE MAN OF THE HOUR WAS HITLER. THE SPOTLIGHT BELONGED TO HIM.

AUSTRIA WAS TAKEN BY HIS SOLDIERS IN 1938. MUSSOLINI HAD BEEN PROMISED, FOUR YEARS PRIOR, THAT THIS WOULD NOT HAPPEN. BUT HE WAS PART OF THE BERLIN-ROME AXIS NOW. AND HE DID NOTHING.

WHEN CZECHO-SLOVAKIA WAS CARVED AT MUNICH, HITLER--NOT MUSSOLINI-DICTATED THE TERMS.

HITLER, WHO IN HIS YOUTH PAINTED HOUSES AND PAPERED WALLS TO EARN A SCANTY LIVING. HITLER, WHO FOUGHT IN THE WORLD WAR AND HATED THE TREATY OF VERSAILLES. HITLER, WHO DETESTED JEWS. HITLER, WHO STARTED TO MARCH ON BERLIN THE SAME YEAR MUSSOLINI MARCHED ON ROME--BUT WAS STOPPED BY SOLDIERS' BULLETS AND LATER JAILED. HITLER, WHO NEVER WAS ELECTED TO PUBLIC OFFICE IN HIS LIFE BEFORE VON HINDENBURG APPOINTED HIM CHANCELLOR OF THE REICH IN 1933, BUT WHOSE VOICE HAS BECOME THE VOICE OF GERMANY SINCE.

FOR FOUR YEARS HITLER HELD THE STAGE. HE WAS BIGGER THAN MUSSOLINI BECAUSE HE HAD MANY MORE FOLLOWERS. HE WAS POINTED OUT UNIVERSALLY AS THE ONE MAN WHO COULD DECIDE THE DESTINY OF EUROPE.

ONLY ONCE DID THE LIGHT FADE FROM HIM, AND THEN BUT FOR THE BRIEF MOMENT MUSSOLINI GRABBED IT BY GRABBING ALBANIA LAST APRIL.

THEN CAME AUGUST, 1939, AND STALIN.

STALIN HAD BEEN ON THE FRINGES OF THE SPOTLIGHT FROM TIME TO TIME SINCE 1928, CHIEFLY BECAUSE OF HIS BLOODY "PURGES" OF HIS ENEMIES AT HOME. HE EDGED INTO A BRIGHTER SEGMENT DURING HITLER'S MANEUVERINGS OVER POLAND, WHEN ENGLAND AND FRANCE TRIED TO BRING HIM INTO THE "STOP HITLER FRONT." HE STEPPED FULL INTO THE CENTER OF IT WITH HIS SWIFT ABOUT-FACE INTO THE RUSSO-GERMAN PACT OF FRIENDSHIP.

BY A SCRATCH OF THE PEN, HE BECAME THE ENIGMA OF THE NEW WAR. WOULD HE GIVE HITLER SUPPLIES FOR THE FIGHTING ON THE WESTERN FRONT? WOULD HE GIVE HITLER MILITARY AID?

THOSE QUESTIONS ARE STILL UNANSWERED, BUT THERE IS NO LONGER ANY DOUBT THAT STALIN IS NOW IN HITLER'S PLACE AS EUROPE'S MAN OF THE MOMENT. WITH ONE GESTURE, HE HAS HIS SHARE OF POLAND WITHOUT FIGHTING FOR IT--A FOOTHOLD IN EUROPE PROPER FOR COMMUNISM; HE HAS YEAR-ROUND PORTS ON THE BALTIC SEA THROUGH MILITARY PACTS WITH ESTONIA, LATVIA AND LITHUANIA; HE HAS DRAWN THE RICH WHEAT AND OIL FIELDS OF RUMANIA CLOSER TO HIMSELF AND AWAY FROM HITLER; HE HAS GOT RID OF GERMAN MINORITIES--A FREQUENT HITLER REASON FOR GERMAN EXPANSION--IN RUSSIA'S "SPHERE OF INFLUENCE;" HE HAS WEAKENED RUSSIA'S ANCIENT ENEMY, JAPAN, BY BREAKING GERMANY AWAY FROM THE ANTI-COMINTERN FRONT; BY THE SAME TOKEN, HE HAS WEAKENED THE BERLIN-ROME AXIS.

MORE THAN ANY OF THESE THINGS, HE HAS CONFRONTED ALL EUROPE WITH THE QUESTION:

IS THE EAST, HAVING BEEN "MODERNIZED" BY THE WEST, NOW ABOUT TO REVERSE THE TREND OF POLITICAL INFLUENCE?

FOR STALIN BELONGS TO ASIA. HIS BIRTHPLACE, IN GEORGIA, IS ETHNOLOGICALLY, GEOLOGICALLY AND GEOGRAPHICALLY A PART OF THE ASIATIC CONTINENT. AND STALIN, BIGGER THAN EITHER MUSSOLINI OR HITLER BECAUSE HE HAS MANY MORE MILLIONS OF MEN BEHIND HIM, IS PUSHING RUSSIA WESTWARD TOWARD THAT WILL-O-THE-WISP, WORLD POWER.

WAR OF MACHINES, NOT OF MEN, BROUGHT DEFEAT, POLISH
OFFICERS BELIEVE

GERMANY'S MECHANIZED UNITS OPERATED ALMOST PERFECTLY (650)

BY ELMER W.PETERSON

(ADVANCE) BUDAPEST (CORRESPONDENCE OF THE ASSOCIATED PRESS) MILITARY HISTORIANS EVENTUALLY WILL RECORD THE EXACT MANNER IN WHICH THREE SEPARATE GERMAN OFFENSIVES, SMASHING IN WITH ALL THE MODERN DEVICES OF MODERN WARFARE, MANAGED TO ACHIEVE WHAT MANY THOUGHT IMPOSSIBLE--A "LIGHTNING" WAR IN WHICH EVENTS MOVED WITH FAIRLY INCREDIBLE RAPIDITY TO SMASH THE POLISH ARMY.

BUT IT IS APPARENT NOW THAT POLAND UNDER-ESTIMATED THE GERMAN ARMY. IT IS APPARENT THAT POLAND'S ARMY OF 2,000,000 WAS NOT EQUIPPED TO FIGHT OFF AN ATTACK SUCH AS GERMANY PRODUCED.

30.24-4361

IT IS APPARENT, ALSO, THAT GERMANY SENT INTO THE FIELD A FIGHTING MACHINE OF UNDOUBTED EXCELLENCE AND HIGH TECHNICAL EFFICIENCY. THE GERMANS WERE OVERWHELMINGLY SUPERIOR IN THE AIR AND IN THEIR MECHANIZED EQUIPMENT, BUT THIS DOES NOT DETRACT FROM THE FACT THAT GERMAN MECHANICAL EQUIPMENT OPERATED, AS FAR AS COULD BE SEEN, WITHOUT FAULT. GERMAN TANKS DID NOT BREAK DOWN, AND GERMAN "RUBBER" TIRES DID NOT WEAR OUT, AS HAD BEEN PREDICTED WOULD BE THE CASE.

THE EXPLANATION OF POLISH OFFICERS, AS THEY RETREATED ACROSS NEUTRAL FRONTIERS, CARRIED ONE GENERAL THEME: THAT THIS WAS A WAR OF MACHINES AND NOT A WAR OF MEN IN THE OLD SENSE. THESE OFFICERS PICTURED TANKS AND ARMORED CARS AND AIRPLANES, NOT IN GROUPS OF HUNDREDS, BUT IN THOUSANDS.

AGAINST THIS FLOOD OF MECHANIZED EQUIPMENT, THESE ENDLESSLY APPEARING AIRPLANES AND ENDLESSLY ROLLING TANKS, THERE WAS, ACCORDING TO THESE OFFICERS, NO POSSIBLE DEFENSE BY THE POLISH ARMY.

THERE WAS INVOLVED AN OFFENSIVE TECHNIQUE AGAINST WHICH THE POLES WERE HOPELESSLY OUTCLASSED AND AGAINST WHICH THEY LOST ORGANIZATION AND UNITY.

JUL 29 1939

TO WHAT EXTENT THE GERMANS CREATED DISORGANIZATION THROUGH THEIR OFFENSIVE, AND TO WHAT EXTENT THE POLISH ARMY WAS LACKING IN ORGANIZATION THROUGH ITS HIGH COMMANDS, ARE QUESTIONS FOR THE FUTURE.

THERE WAS NO DENYING THE COURAGE OF THE INDIVIDUAL POLISH SOLDIER AND UNDER-OFFICER. THERE ARE PLENTY OF STORIES OF INDIVIDUAL AND GROUP HEROISM. POLISH SOLDIERS CONTINUED TO FIGHT IN DEFENSE OF WARSAW LONG AFTER THE POLISH HIGH COMMAND HAD LEFT THE COUNTRY.

BUT THIS WAS, IN MANY WAYS, A WAR IN WHICH THE FACTOR OF PERSONAL COURAGE WAS MINIMIZED. IT WAS TOO SWIFT, HARD-DRIVING, AND MECHANICAL. IT LEFT VERY LITTLE OPPORTUNITY FOR HAND-TO-HAND ENCOUNTERS, FOR THE TEST OF MAN AGAINST MAN, AND THIS WAS A PART OF THE GERMAN TECHNIQUE.

IT WAS, RELATIVELY SPEAKING, A BLOODLESS WAR, ESPECIALLY AS COMPARED WITH SOME OF THE GREAT OFFENSIVES OF THE WORLD WAR.

GERMANY'S PLAN, AS SUCCESSFULLY CARRIED OUT, INCLUDED:

(1) TREMENDOUSLY POWERFUL THRUSTS, WITH MECHANIZED EQUIPMENT MOVING UNDER THE PROTECTION OF AERIAL BARRAGE, WHICH PIERCED THE POLISH FRONT AT SEVERAL PLACES AND FORCED THE ENTIRE POLISH ARMY TO FALL BACK;

OCT 29 1939

(2) EFFECTIVE USE OF WARPLANES, OPERATING IN GREAT NUMBERS, TO PREVENT REFORMING OF DEFENSE LINES, TO DESTROY CONTACT BETWEEN THE VARIOUS POLISH ARMIES, AND TO CREATE A CIVILIAN PANIC THROUGHOUT THE COUNTRY WHICH INTERFERED WITH TROOP MOVEMENTS;

(3) EXTENSIVE USE OF MECHANIZED EQUIPMENT TO ACHIEVE A HIGH DEGREE OF MOBILITY AGAINST WHICH HORSE-DRAWN POLISH ARTILLERY WAS RENDERED USELESS IN MOST CASES. USE OF THIS SAME EQUIPMENT TO AVOID FRONTAL ATTACKS WHEREVER POSSIBLE IN PREFERENCE TO HARD STRIKING FLANK ATTACKS;

(4) ATTAINMENT OF ALMOST IMMEDIATE SUPERIORITY IN THE AIR TO DENY THE POLISH ARMY THE ENORMOUS BENEFITS OF AERIAL OBSERVATION OF TROOP MOVEMENTS WHILE THE GERMAN COMMAND HAD ALMOST INSTANTANEOUS INFORMATION REGARDING DISPOSITION AND MOVEMENT OF THE POLISH ARMY.

(5) USE OF TANKS AND MANY-WHEELED ARMORED CARS IN A "ROAMING" MANNER HITHERTO UNPRECEDENTED, AND MADE POSSIBLE THROUGH LACK OF FORMAL POLISH DEFENSE WORKS AND FORTIFICATIONS. THESE TANKS

AND CARS DEPLOYED OVER WIDE AREAS, CONTROLLED BY WIRELESS, TO CONTINUE THE "BREAK-UP" OF THE POLISH ARMY INITIATED BY THE DIRECT OFFENSIVES.

SPEED AND INTENSITY OF ATTACK WERE THE GUIDING RULES OF THIS OFFENSIVE. IT WAS A MATTER OF HITTING HARD AND THEN HITTING AGAIN BEFORE YOUR OPPONENT COULD RECOVER HIMSELF. IT WAS A PRECISION ATTACK, FAVORED BY SUN-LIT DAYS AND MOON-LIT NIGHTS, AND TIMED TO THE MINUTE. IT WAS, FROM THE MOMENT THE FIRST TANK NOSED ACROSS THE POLISH FRONTIER, AND THE FIRST GERMAN WARPLANE BEGAN ITS WORK, A WAR OF MACHINES.

FLINT'S ROUTE HELD A MILITARY SECRET BY NAZI OFFICIALS

Berlin Admits Only That the Ship, Flying the Swastika, Is En Route to Reich Port

DRIFTING MINES A PERIL

Soviet Announces Sailing of Freighter but Is Silent on Fate of Crew of 41

By The Associated Press.

BERLIN, Oct. 29—Military secrecy has been imposed on the whereabouts of the United States freighter City of Flint, seized by Germany as a contraband carrier.

So far as could be learned from official sources, the ship was flying the swastika flag somewhere en route from Murmansk, the northern Russian port she reached last Monday, presumably for Hamburg.

Beyond the word that the City of Flint was en route from Murmansk, authorities were tight-lipped.

They asserted "anything involving the ship now falls within the sphere of military secrecy, hence nothing will be said until the vessel is safely in port."

Conflicting information emanating from official sources yesterday as to whether the City of Flint had left Murmansk may have been caused, it was believed, by a desire not to reveal her movements.

[Tass, Russian official news agency, reported the freighter sailed Saturday night from Murmansk after her engines were repaired.]

German Action Held Legal

Nazis took the view that giving precise information when the ship left Murmansk would be tantamount to inviting a British attempt to capture her. Authorities have said the City of Flint would be convoyed by submarines and warships. From available information, observers believed the freighter should be heading down the Norwegian coast toward the Skagerrak, between Norway and Denmark.

The Frankfurter Zeitung asserted in an editorial today that Germany seized the ship legally and that Russia released her legally to Germany after the prize crew put into Murmansk harbor, "because the ship was unseaworthy."

The owners were lucky, in the newspaper's view, that the pocket battleship Deutschland did not sink the freighter when she was seized in the Atlantic.

Germany would have been justified in sinking her, the newspaper said, if the City of Flint's condition "hampered the warship's operation or presented any danger."

British Assail 'Controlitis' of War-Time Rule

Parliament to Hear Answer to Chorus of Complaints by Business and Public

LONDON, Oct. 29 (AP).—A swelling chorus of complaint against wartime bureaucrats and government "controlitis" opened today Great Britain's ninth week of war. Parliament's program listed so many criticisms for answer by Prime Minister Neville Chamberlain's administration that the British Press Association called it "grievance week."

The United States Senate vote to repeal the arms embargo was generally acclaimed as a victory for the Allies, but "The Sunday Express' said: "The vote is only a gesture. It does not help us very far on our way. We are unlikely to do very big business with America this time, certainly nothing like the scale of the last war . . . because we have no dollars today for cash on the barrel head."

Members of Parliament reported a barrage of indignant criticism from business on the ground that unnecessary postal and cable censorship delays imperiled a heavy volume of export business. The press took up the cry of "control the controls."

"Ministers can hardly afford to delay longer a critical overhaul of the mistakes which during the past two months the bureaucracy has committed," observed "The Sunday Times." "The resulting mischiefs are in not a few instances enormous and in many others serious and indefensible."

Correspondence columns of most British newspapers have become complaint forums, with virtually every letter writer airing some criticism of wartime governmental authority.

"The Sunday Graphic" printed letters today complaining among other things of Nazi radio propaganda, darkening of British railroad stations and [illegible] ordinary trucks as ambulances.

Improvement in the postal service from England to the Coninent is expected with inauguration tomorrow of air mail service to Paris, Amsterdam, Brussels, Stockholm, Oslo and Helsingfors.

Grievances to be aired before Parliament hears Prime Minister Chamberlain's war report on Thursday include civil defense, old age pensions and various emergency regulations—particularly the one giving the government power to impose a curfew.

Indians Arrive to Bolster British Mid[illegible]ern Army

London Says No Native Units Have Suffered Losses

LONDON, Oct. 29 (AP).—The British Colonial Office announced today that all troops leaving India "have arrived safely at their destination and no Indian units have so far suffered losses."

These were native troops, it was stated, drafted to points in the Middle East, presumably to bolster British defenses.

It was disclosed that some Indian naval officers were serving with the British Navy. Numbers were not given.

Norwegian Ship Is Sunk In North Sea; 30 Saved

U. S. Freighter Collides With Italian Vessel Off Kent

LONDON, Oct. 30 (AP).—A Norwegian steamship was sunk in the North Sea today, but the name of the vessel was not given in dispatches passed for publication. The crew of thirty, including three injured, were landed at an undisclosed port.

Members of the crew reported they did not know the ship was sunk.

The 6,096-ton United States freighter Cranford was damaged on Saturday night in a collision with the 3,955-ton Italian freighter Manzoni off Deal, Kent, where it was believed the two ships were awaiting examination by Great Britain's contraband control.

A press association report said the American ship crashed into the Manzoni, which was anchored three miles from shore. The Italian ship's bow was damaged severely but it was not known whether the Cranford was damaged.

(Home port of the Cranford, owned by the Lykes Brothers Steamship Company, is Lake Charles, La.)

ALLIES BURY 6 U-BOAT MEN

Bodies Found at Sea Are Placed in Grave in France

DUNKERQUE, France, Oct. 29 (AP)—Six German Navy men whose bodies were found floating in the sea near here were buried in a single grave today with full honors of the French and British Navies.

The French said discovery of the bodies established proof of the destruction Thursday of a German submarine.

The French and British Navies placed wreaths on the coffins, which were draped with the German colors and ornamented with Iron Crosses.

A French firing squad paid final tribute to the enemy dead as the bodies were lowered into the grave after services by a Protestant pastor and Catholic priest.

The bodies of a German officer and three sailors were picked up at sea by a fishing trawler. Two other bodies were washed ashore here.

Nazi Vessel's Sailing Denied At Mexico City

Freighter Havelland Declared To Be Anchored Still in Pacific Port Of Manzanillo

Mexico City, Oct. 29 (AP)—The steamship agency in charge of the German freighter Havelland said tonight the vessel still was anchored in the Pacific port of Manzanillo, despite conflicting reports that she had sailed for Mazatlan, Mexico.

The agency declared the Havelland "would not sail without orders given here, and no such orders have been given."

Shortly after the Havelland put in at Manzanillo last week the United States gunboat Erie arrived at that port. It was reported the Erie had kept the Havelland under surveillance for several days.

France Bans 3 Parties Of Alsatian Separatists

Decree Follows Execution of Dr. Roos, Autonomist Spy

PARIS, Oct. 29 (AP).—Premier Edouard Daladier banned today three Alsace-Lorraine parties which were controlled by Dr. Karl Roos, autonomist leader who was executed last Friday as a German spy after more than eight months of imprisonment.

The parties were described by French as key units of agitation for separation from France of the two provinces she took back from Germany at the end of the World War.

The organizations were the Landespartei, the Workers and Peasants party, and the Heimatfront, or Fatherland Front, party, which grouped together the first two as well as a few smaller autonomist bodies. Dr. Roos was a founder of the Heimatfront, and he also was one of the founders of the Landespartei in 1927 and its president at the time of his arrest Feb. 7 on charges of furnishing Germans with specific information on French troop movements.

The Landespartei worked closely with the Workers and Peasants party formed by a group of dissident Communists. The Workers and Peasants newspaper "Welt" was merged with Dr. Roos's "Elsass Lothringen Zeitung," organ of the Landespartei, shortly before it was suppressed April 26.

The orders not only dissolved the organizations but forbade under penalty of five years in prison and a heavy fine the circulation of anything which might perpetuate the parties' beliefs.

"Old Soldiers" Go Home

PARIS, Oct. 29 (AP).—Many of France's "old soldiers" marched out of their barracks today back to civilian life.

While icy rain, snow, mud and rising rivers helped enforce calm along the western front, France released from military duty the first batch of troops from among the hundreds of thousands mobilized before war started.

The partial demobilization, believed to include about 100,000 men, affected those of the class of 1910 (men aged 49) and the fathers of large families who were called up eight weeks ago.

Officers and specialists of these categories were kept in the ranks, however, and the troops demobilized were ordered to hold themselves ready for recall at a moment's notice.

The start of demobilization seemed to indicate that the high command was confident it could carry on the present quiet warfare by using machines more than men and with the Maginot fortress troops ready to take the shock of any German offensive.

Both Sides Admit The War Is Quiet

BERLIN, Oct. 29 (AP).—The German high command's communique today said only this: "No special happenings."

Paris Reports No Action

PARIS, Oct. 29 (AP).—The French War Ministry's communique tonight said: "All quiet generally during the day."

The morning communique was: "Very reduced activity during the night."

Finns Sing American Anthem In Helsingfors Tribute to U. S.

Crowd Serenades Minister in Thanks for Support Against Soviet Demands as Baltic Nation Enters Critical Week of Negotiations at Moscow

By The Associated Press

HELSINGFORS, Oct. 29.—Finns paid tribute today to the United States' "support and sympathy" as the nation entered a critical week of negotiations with Russia.

Almost three hundred Finns stood outside the hotel of American Minister H. F. Arthur Schoenfeld and sang "The Star-Spangled Banner." Later they serenaded the Swedish, Danish and Norwegian Ministers to Finland.

It was believed the instructions to be taken to Moscow Tuesday night by Dr. Juho Kusti Paasikivi and Finance Minister Vaino Tanner were nearing completion. The Cabinet met for four hours today.

"The time is difficult again," Urho Toivola, chief of the press department of the Foreign Affairs Ministry, said to Mr. Schoenfeld after the demonstration.

"We feel our freedom and independence are threatened. Again today we are conscious of the fact America and its leading men are giving their support to us," Toivola stated. He recalled that "America stretched a helping hand" to Finland when she obtained her independence from Russia twenty years ago.

"A small nation grows in strength when receiving moral support from leading civilized powers, knowing common goals unite them to great ones," he said.

Mr. Schoenfeld replied: "The interest you have shown corresponds to the interest and friendship for Finland which exists in the United States. You are a free people. We are a free people. So there is a bond of sympathy between us."

MOSCOW, Oct. 29 (AP).—Three important Russian newspapers attacked today the United States Senate vote for repeal of the arms embargo.

Commenting on the Administration's neutrality legislation, the government newspaper "Izvestia" said "war in Europe was met by Wall Street with poorly disguised rejoicing in expectation of profits on war orders. A boom already has begun but it is expected to grow. . . . Any possibility of peace is contemplated with fear. This is the background of reconsideration of the embargo by the Senate."

The government organ declared that only the bourgeoisie were interested in lifting the embargo and that "the masses, ever more insistently, are demanding that the United States stick to neutrality."

Says U. S. Seeks Part of Booty

"Red Star," the organ of the Soviet Army, took the same line as did "Pravda," the Communist party paper. "Red Star" asserted the United States wanted to aid Great Britain and France because later, "at the appropriate moment, they will demand their share of the booty—not only in money, which they are getting for orders filled, but also in territory, since they have imperialistic aims."

"Pravda" interpreted the Senate vote as a "victory of those who wish further to unloosen the forces of war."

"The root of the problem is whether the United States will help Britain and France against Germany," said Pravda," adding that the Senate's decision "clearly demonstrates what the bourgeoisie understands under neutrality."

Sees Vote Prolonging War

BOLOGNA, Italy, Oct. 29 (AP).—The newspaper "Resto del Carlino" said today the proposed lifting of the United States arms embargo would prolong the European war.

"American supplies for the Anglo-French forces will have the same effect on the European war as the Anglo-French supplies in the Spanish war: they will result in prolonging it, making it more bitter, more bloody, without, however, changing the outcome," the newspaper said.

"Here, Roosevelt, the pacifist, intervenes as always to complicate matters, making peace more problematical than ever, virtually enlarging the sphere of belligerents," the paper commented. "Although the American people have a sincere desire to remain distant from the war, it is not impossible future events as a result of the new law may end in involving the United States in the conflict as well."

Turkey Marks 16th Birthday Of the Republic

100,000 Cheer at Preview of Armed Forces Ready to Defend Dardanelles

ANKARA, Oct. 29 (AP).—The modern Turkish republic turned today from diplomatic negotiations, in which it is playing a vital role to preserve peace in the Balkans, to celebrate its sixteenth anniversary as the successor to the old Ottoman empire.

More than 100,000 spectators cheered a military show which gave them a view of the artillery, tanks and marching men Turkey would be able to throw into the European war if forced to assert her guardianship of the strategic Dardanelles. President Ismet Inonu attended the review.

The sixteenth anniversary of the revolution that ended the Islamic reign of Sultan Mehmet VI was considered by the Turks the most important milestone of the republic's brief history because of the general expectation that the recently concluded mutual assistance pact with Great Britain and France would bring great prosperity and safety to modern Turkey.

One of the diplomats who was not present to cheer President Inonu was Franz von Papen, German Ambassador, who returned to Berlin to report to Fuehrer Adolf Hitler when the Turkish-British-French treaty was concluded.

Seventy-five New Schools Open

Huge crowds participated noisily in the anniversary fete, which ends on Tuesday. Peasants in picturesque costumes from the far-flung Asiatic and European districts of the republic marched in seemingly endless processions. All week they had been piling wreath of flowers on the gigantic statue of Kamal Ataturk. It was Kamal Ataturk who led the revolution and ruled the republic until his death last November.

Today seventy-five new rural schools were inaugurated as evidence of the government's campaign to abolish illiteracy, which already has decreased 60 per cent in eleven years.

The National Assembly will meet on Nov. 1, with ratification of the treaty with France and Britain as a major item on the agenda.

Italians Seek to Block Reds

BUDAPEST, Oct. 29 (AP).—Several diplomats of southeastern Europe, engaged in intense activity over the week end, said tonight they believed "important steps" would be forthcoming this week to organize an Italian-led bloc to oppose any Soviet Russian expansion in the Balkans.

Italian diplomacy was at work in the Balkan capitals, it was said, to arrange a settlement of Bulgaria's claim for return of southern Dobruja—now Rumanian—in order to win Bulgarian co-operation in the Italian-led bloc. Should Bulgaria's claim be settled, the diplomats predicted, Italy then would seek to settle Hungary's claim on Rumania for Transylvania. Transylvania formed part of the kingdom of Hungary until 1918, when it became a part of Rumania.

With the demands of Hungary and Bulgaria satisfied, it was said, those two nations probably would be willing to reach an accord with Rumania for the formation of a southeastern bloc to resist any Soviet Russian attempt to expand beyond the Carpathian Mountain range.

The Hungarian publicist, Sandor Petho, writing in the Budapest newspaper "Magyar Nemzet," gave expression to the hopes some of the small nations of southeastern Europe were pinning on Italy to help defend them in case of emergency.

"Italy does not end at the Alps or on the Balkan mountains," he wrote. "She goes to the Carpathians, which now are threatened by barbarian forces.

"Rome is building and fortifying the bombproof shelter of European civilization. Rome's eyes are centered on small peoples on whose life the shadow of social revolution and pan-Slavism lengthens."

Czech Patriots Again Battle Prague Police

Further Clashes in Suburb Follow Radio Pleas to Doff Republic's Colors

PRAGUE, Oct. 29 (AP).—Radio appeals to Czechs to cease wearing Czech Republican colors and caps brought further scuffles with police in a suburb of Prague today.

The Republican badges were donned yesterday in celebration of the twenty-first anniversary of Czech independence and in defiance of a ban by officials of the German protectorate against any celebrations.

The center of Prague was quiet today, after demonstrations yesterday which resulted in several hundred arrests, but new outbreaks occurred in the suburb of Siskov.

The Czech authorities broadcast an appeal to citizens to cease demonstrating, in "their own interest and the interest and security of their families." Prague streetcar service was halted to prevent Czechs from moving into the center of the capital. Cafes, restaurants and other such establishments were closed.

Students Demonstrate For Russia in Belgrade

Police Quell Pro-Red Rally in Streets, Call It Unimportant

BELGRADE, Oct. 29 (AP).—A student demonstration in the capital's streets in favor of the Soviet Union and against Great Britain and France was halted quickly by police this morning.

A group of about 300 students from Belgrade University staged a similar demonstration two days ago.

Police minimized the incident, declaring the students were "victims of pan-Slav propaganda."

Belgian Neutrality Urged By Cardinal

Van Roey Advocates Peace "At All Price" At Special Brussels Services

Brussels, Oct. 29 (AP)—Joseph Ernest Cardinal Van Roey today urged Belgium to maintain peace "at all price" in a special peace service attended by the royal family and civil and military officials.

Speaking in the old Gothic Church of Saints Michel et Gudule, the Cardinal said, "We hope peace is not far away and will return. Above all, we hope it will be founded on justice and loyalty so it will be strong and final."

He said Belgium's neutrality policy had been justified amply and that Belgium's entry into the war would "bring devastation and carnage to make our soil again the battleground of Europe."

Germans Beat Rationing With Death Certificates

Borrow Papers to Stock Up on Black for 'Mourning'

BERLIN, Oct. 29 (AP).—Germans must stop circumventing the Reich's rationing system by using death certificates to acquire large quantities of clothing, the authorities decreed today.

Under the system, it is difficult to buy clothing or anything else made of fabrics—but hitherto, members of families, in which death occurred, merely had to show death certificates to buy mourning attire.

Made suspicious by heavy sales of black stockings, the authorities discovered that many Germans were borrowing certificates from acquaintances and buying extra clothing black 'at clothing stores.'

To end the practice, merchants now will be required to stamp certificates when a reasonable amount of mourning clothes has been bought.

Pacifist Cites Duty To Support This War

President Of Hebrew University Pictures Hitler As Satan On German Throne

Jerusalem, Oct. 29 (AP)—Dr. Judah L. Magnes, president of the Hebrew University and a pacifist speaker in the United States during the World War, said today he and other pacifists "regard it as their duty to support this war."

Speaking at the opening session of the university, Dr. Magnes pictured Adolf Hitler as a "satan abroad . . . the incarnation of the devil on the German throne."

He declared pacifists "could not say to the German satan, 'Keep on conquering—come in, we shall not oppose you.'"

Should freedom and democracy result from this war, Dr. Magnes said, it would "not be because of the war but in spite of it."

GLASS SEES HITLER SOLE U. S. WAR PERIL

Senator, Ill in Bed, Says Congress Only Has Power to Take Us Into Conflict

By The Associated Press.

WASHINGTON, Oct. 29—Senator Carter Glass said today that only one person could get the United States into the war—"this wretched creature," Adolf Hitler.

The elderly Virginia Democrat declared it was "the sheerest drivel" to say that the President could involve this country in a foreign conflict. Saying that only Congress has the power to declare war, he added:

"The only person who may drag this nation into war is Hitler. His pledged word is not worth a thrip. He is a fervent believer in the immoral Machiavellian doctrine of the end justifying the means, however vile the end may be.

"He has repeatedly lied as to his purposes since the deplorable Munich conference, and it may confidently be expected that under his wretched domination Germany still regards written treaties as mere scraps of paper."

Principle His Sons Fought For

Senator Glass granted an interview in his sickroom at a Washington hotel. Attired in blue-trimmed white pajamas, he propped himself on a pillow and asserted that he still believed in the principles he enunciated in 1916 when he spoke against a bill which would have had Congress warn Americans that they traveled in belligerent vessels at their own risk.

At that time Senator Glass, speaking of his two sons, said that he "would rather be pursued through time and eternity by the pitiful apparition of their shattered forms than to see my country dishonored and its flag hauled down in disgrace."

The Senator glanced across the room at pictures of General John J. Pershing, his children and his grandchildren.

"One of my sons was gassed, and the other was a combatant soldier," he remarked.

"But a nation without spirit or an elevated soul is as bad as a derelict on the seas, and must be devoid of self-respect and unworthy of the respect of other nations.

"This country should not be content simply to eat and sleep and go to the movies. That would be a sorry contribution to modern civilization."

Calls Embargo Abominable

Senator Glass, who has been ill for a month, said he was "distinctly distressed" at his inability to cast his Senate vote for repeal "of the abominable embargo act."

He expressed sharp disapproval, however, of provisions in the bill which would prohibit American ships from trading with belligerent nations as "expedients to contravene immemorial requirements of international law through positive fear of a Central European assassin."

"The only person on earth who may drag this nation into war is Hitler, and the action of the Senate in passing the 'cash-and-carry' feature of the Embargo Bill, as it seems to me, distinctly in anticipation of Hitler doing this very thing, is brutal disregard of international law," he said.

Not Britain, or France or Italy, "or even Russia", was expected to sink American ships without warning, he said.

"It is only Hitler who is expected to do it," he added.

"We are spending approximately a billion dollars to create an effective merchant marine, and are now deliberately proposing to paralyze the industry by preventing it from going to sea except in restricted areas."

The Senator said he would have voted against the so-called cash and carry provisions of the Neutrality Bill and, while conceding that the action was "expedient," added that "even with the harsh and unprecedented restrictions upon our merchant shipping, there is no assurance that Hitler's submarines and bombers will not disregard all requirements of international law."

"This country went into the World War to vindicate its rights on the high seas, and now to relinquish these rights through fear of Hitler is to dishonor our dead," he said. "The proposition is utterly destitute of courage and moral sense."

STATEMENT BY SENATOR

Senator Glass's statement of his views on neutrality was as follows:

Although distinctly distressed at my inability, due to severe illness, to be in the Senate and personally cast my vote for repeal of the abominable Embargo Act, I derive measured satisfaction from the overwhelming vote in favor of repeal. I was paired in favor of repeal, and to that extent my vote counted as much as had it been cast personally.

I do not take much satisfaction in the inclusion in the embargo repeal bill of the so-called "cash and carry" feature. I think no other nation on earth has thus voluntarily abandoned its undoubted rights in international law on the subject of neutrality.

Not in my eighty-odd years of life have I known or heard of a more humiliating spectacle than that presented by the legislative body of a great, rich and powerful nation spending months in devising expedients to contravene immemorial requirements of international law through positive fear of a Central European assassin.

In my view, the talk about the President or any other personage in this nation "dragging the country into war" is the sheerest drivel. The Congress has the sole constitutional right to declare war; the President is not granted the power to either approve or veto the decision of Congress in this respect. So that if we are to be dragged into the war or to stay out, as we undoubtedly should do, it must be by action of the Congress.

Hitler the Only War-Maker

The only person on earth who may drag this nation into war is Hitler, and the action of the Senate in passing the "cash and carry" feature of the Embargo Bill was, as it seems to me, distinctly in anticipation of Hitler doing this very thing in brutal disregard of international law.

No sane person conceives that either Great Britain or France is going to sink any of our merchant vessels, or ruthlessly drown any of our nationals without warning and in shameless violation of international law. Nobody has ventured to suggest that Italy or even Russia is capable of doing anything of this kind.

It is only Hitler who is expected to do it, and it is in fear of this wretched creature, dripping with the blood of women and children and noncombatants, boasting of his ravages of open towns in one of his conquered nations, that we have the shocking spectacle of this great nation relinquishing its rights on the high seas and excessively penalizing its own shipping industry for carrying on its legitimate business.

We are spending approximately $1,000,000,000 to create an effective merchant marine, and are now deliberately proposing to paralyze the industry by preventing it from going to sea except in restricted areas.

America's Rights on Seas

Should our ships be permitted to assert their rights on the high seas, they would, of course, be subject to the requirements of international law and alone responsible for any hazard taken contrary to the requirements of international law. "Search and Seizure" are sanctioned by all civilized nations, and our merchant marine fully understands this.

This whole subject of American rights on the seas was exhaustively and intelligently discussed by the Congress just prior to our entrance in the World War. Over and over again Lansing, Acting Secretary of State, vehemently asserted the rights of American shipping and warned Germany that we would not tolerate any attempt to violate them or any breach on Germany's part of the prohibitions or sanctions of international law.

To enforce his contention, Lansing reasserted the doctrine proclaimed by Chief Justice Marshall in the Nercide case of 1815, reaffirmed time and again by the Supreme Court of the United States in all judicial determinations by the court up to this time.

Hence, had I been able to attend the Senate sessions, I would, upon full consideration, have dissented from the "Cash and Carry" feature of the embargo bill. However, I imagine the circumstances were such, unhappily, to make the action taken expedient, if not desirable.

Nevertheless, persons actuated by reason and not by considerations of pseudo-humanitarianism could well wish that the United States would not be taken to the verge of poltroonism, as was so cogently expressed in 1916 by Senator Sutherland, since a notable member of the Supreme Court of the United States.

Moral Sense of Nation

Even with the harsh and unprecedented restrictions upon our merchant shipping, there is no assurance that Hitler's submarines and bombers will not disregard all requirements of law. His pledged word is not worth a thrip.

He is a fervent believer in the immoral Machiavellian doctrine of the end justifying the means, however vile the end may be. He has repeatedly lied as to his purposes since the deplorable Munich conference, and it may confidently be expected that under his wretched domination Germany still regards written treaties as mere scraps of paper.

This country went into the World War to indicate its rights on the high seas, and now to relinquish these rights through fear of Hitlerism is to dishonor our dead. The proposition is utterly destitute of courage and moral sense. A nation without spirit or an elevated soul is as bad as a derelict on the seas, and must be devoid of self-respect and unworthy of the respect of other nations.

This country should not be content simply to eat and sleep and go to the movies. That would be a sorry contribution to modern civilization.

The talk about the munitions industry dragging this country into war, either past or present, is incredible fiction. As a matter of fact, in the World War our munitions industry was utterly incapable of supplying our own demands, and American troops at the front had to be supplied with rifles by France.

U. S. Is Banker For All Allies in Reich Prisons

State Department Transfers Money From Relatives to Interned in Germany

WASHINGTON, Oct. 28 (AP).—The American government has become an international banker for citizens of Great Britain, France, Canada, Australia and New Zealand who are being held in Germany.

As the result of an agreement reached by the United States with the belligerents, a Londoner wishing to send money to a relative interned in Germany now follows this procedure:

He goes to the British Foreign Office with a check or cash in pounds sterling and satisfies the office of the legitimacy of his request.

The Foreign Office transfers the money to the British Embassy in Washington. The Embassy converts it into dollars and turns over the request to the State Department with the money.

The State Department thereupon cables Alexander C. Kirk, American Charge d'Affaires in Berlin, authorizing him to turn over that amount of dollars in marks to the person in the prison or concentration camp.

Mr. Kirk draws a draft on the State Department for the amount of dollars involved and automatically converts them into marks. These he transfers to the American Consul nearest the Britisher's relative with instructions to turn them over to him.

Expenses of the transaction must be borne by the British citizen sending the money. As a matter of courtesy, however, the State Department and the American Foreign Service officers make no charge for their work.

German Crew Sails the Flint Out of Tromsoe; Ship Already 500 Miles on Way to Hamburg

Captured American Vessel in Grim Game With British—Three More English Ships Are Sunk.

STOCKHOLM, Oct. 30 (A. P.).—Reports from Norway today said that the American freighter City of Flint, released from a Soviet Russian port to her German captors, left Tromsoe, Norway, late this afternoon.

These reports provided the first clew to the whereabouts of the vessel, which was taken to Murmansk, Russia, by a German prize crew following her capture while carry a miscellaneous cargo to England.

The City of Flint was said to have sailed at 4 P. M. (10 A. M. New York time) from Tromsoe, the north Norwegian port at which the captured ship halted briefly on her northward journey to Russia more than a week ago.

Sailed 500 Miles.

Tromsoe is about 500 miles from Murmansk and more than 800 miles from Hamburg, mentioned as the probable destination of the German prize crew.

Tromsoe newspaper sources in response to an inquiry about the City of Flint said they were forbidden by the authorities to give any information.

The Norwegian Government has prohibited the disclosure of the position of ships at sea during war time.

Hide-and-Seek.

BERLIN, Oct. 30 (A. P.).—The American freighter City of Flint was apparently the quarry today in a grim game of hide-and-seek somewhere on the North Atlantic, according to the best available information here, but German officialdom was silent.

Unofficial informants said that the United States Government owned vessel was still in the hands of a German prize crew and was attempting to dodge the British blockade on a run from Murmansk, Russia, to a German port. But official circles said that until the City of Flint docks "there will be no information about this ship."

The American crew, who were taken to the Russian arctic port after the capture of the City of Flint, were said to be probably still aboard, but as "passengers," without any responsibility for navigating her.

Beyond the assertion that the ship had left Murmansk the authorities regarded all information concerning her as a military secret, and took the view that precise information on when she had left or her present whereabouts might invite a British attempt to capture her.

[British naval experts declared at London today that the British Navy would be handicapped by nature in attempting to intercept the City of Flint in her trip to a German port. In the authorized British view, the German prize crew could readily sail her down the coast of Norway to Germany, thus taking advantage of territorial waters to prevent the British from stepping in.]

Submarine Drive.

In informed quarters, meanwhile, hints were dropped of an intensified German submarine campaign against British sea commerce.

"Give England a taste of what a blockade means," was a phrase uttered in naval circles and appearing in the press.

Enthusiasm over the successes so far in the eight weeks of submarine warfare has led many Germans to the conclusion that the Nazi underea raiders have discovered the weakest spot in Great Britain's defense—and that this is the spot to hit hardest.

Adolf Hitler's newspaper, the Voelkischer Beobachter, encouraged this view and supported intensification of the submarine warfare by describing the treatment allegedly accorded the captains of German vessels seized by the British. The newspaper disclosed that the captain and crew of the Poseidon, a German merchantman stopped by a British warship, were threatened with shooting, if they abandoned their vessel.

Building Submarines Fast.

The reason for the threat, it said, was that some German captains prefer to set time bombs and flee with their crews in lifeboats, rather than permit their ships to fall into enemy hands.

"If England persists in throwing overboard, one after another, all conceptions of international rules, then it must reckon with inevitable intensification of war against its commerce," the Beobachter declared.

The last report of Weyer's Naval Almanac indicated that at the beginning of this year forty-three German submarines were at sea and twenty-eight others were planned or under construction. Informed persons considered it certain that construction had been stepped up and noted that at the height of her output during the world war, Germany was building more than twenty-five submarines a month.

Four More Ships.

LONDON, Oct. 30 (A. P.).—Seventy survivors of the British steamship Malabar, sunk yesterday with a loss of five lives, landed today in western England. Some survivors attributed the sinking to German submarine action.

The Malabar, a 7,976-ton freighter, was operated by the Cunard White Star Line to the United States, Calcutta and London. On her last voyage she loaded general cargo at Norfolk, Philadelphia, New York, Boston and Halifax.

The sinking of three more ships, two of them British, was also reported today sending the known loss to all nations to 102 vessels with a gross tonnage of more than 408,110.

England's known [illegible] rose to fifty-six ships with the Malabar sinking and destruction of the fishing trawlers Saint Nidan and Lynx II.

The crew of ten on the 250-ton fishing trawler Lynx II were rescued as were the crew of fifteen on the trawler Saint Nidan, 565 tons, both destroyed in the North Sea.

Dispatches from Stavanger, Norway, stated that the Stavanger Aftenblad today reported the 3,618-ton Norwegian steamship Varangmalm struck a mine in the North Sea en route from the North Cape to Antwerp with a cargo of iron ore. The Norwegians said that the crew of thirty had been rescued and were being taken to Grimsby, England.

France Disputes U-Boat Figures.

PARIS, Oct. 30 [illegible] P.).—A French Admiralty communique today denied the official German contention that only three German submarines have been sunk by the allies and asserted that the French probably have sunk more than that themselves.

Semi-official sources asserted the British and French together have sunk at least twenty German submarines since the war's start.

Nazi Ship in Mexican Port.

MEXICO CITY, Oct. 30 (A. P.).—An official of the steamship agency operating the German freighter Havelland declared today that the ship is still in the Pacific port of Manzanillo, and denied a report attributed to the Mexican navy that she had sailed for Mazatlan.

United States embassy sources said that the U. S. gunboat Erie remains at Manzanillo, and that latest advices to the embassy also place the Havelland there.

Embassy spokesmen have said that the presence of the Erie in the Mexican port with the German ship was a "coincidence," but in reliable quarters it was stated that the gunboat had been keeping a precautionary watch on the Havelland, which left Punta Arenas, Costa Rica on October 8.

NAZIS TAKING CREW OF FLINT TO REICH

American Seamen Are Aboard As Ship Steams Down Norwegian Coast

Germans Utilize Darkness In Attempting To Reach Home Port

[By the Associated Press]

Stockholm, Oct. 30 — The captive American freighter City of Flint, which the Germans are trying to slip through the British blockade, proceeded on her dangerous southward way tonight after being escorted from Norwegian waters by a Norwegian warship.

Aboard were both her German prize crew and her American crew.

Reports from Tromsoe, in northwestern Norway, that the freighter had called at that port today, were confirmed by the German consul there.

He said he had gone aboard, but declined to give further information.

Position Kept Secret

Other details of the captive freighter's dangerous voyage through wartime waters were difficult to obtain because of Norwegian Government regulations against disclosing the positions of ships at sea during war time.

However, it was learned she had put in at the port at 1 P. M. and departed three hours later, escorted outside Norway's territorial waters by a Norwegian warship.

The early approach of nightfall in this northern latitude at this season favored the German prize crew in its efforts to take the American vessel into a German port for disposition of its cargo, alleged to contain contraband.

It was already dark when she sailed and she had many hours of darkness ahead.

Provides First Clue

The reports from Tromsoe provided the first clue to the vessel's progress since Saturday night, when official Russian sources said she had sailed from Murmansk, the Russian port in the Arctic.

[Associated Press Editor's Note—Determined not to endanger the southward progress of their prize, German officials in Berlin maintained silence on the City of Flint and her attempt to dodge the British blockade. Until the ship docks, Berlin officials declared, "there will be no information about this ship."]

500 Miles From Murmansk

Tromsoe, in northern Norway, is about 500 miles from Murmansk, which is above the Actic Circle and more than 800 miles from Hamburg.

The Norwegian Government's regulation against disclosing positions of ships at sea during [illegible] precluded definite information from Norway on the vessel's progress.

The reported call at Tromsoe was the second time in ten days that she has visited that port.

Landed Seamen There

It was on October 20 that the City of Flint, under her German prize crew of eighteen, put aboard by the German pocket battleship Deutschland, arrived at Tromsoe to land thirty-eight seamen from two sunken freighters.

The forty-two American sailors comprising her crew still were aboard when she sailed northward from Tromsoe the next day. She left at order of Norwegian officials, arrived at Murmansk the next night and remained there until, it was reported, Saturday night.

Don't Know Where, Say Nazis

Washington, Oct. 30 (AP)—Alexander C. Kirk, American charge d'affaires at Berlin, cabled the State Department today that the German Foreign Office had informed him orally that it still was without definite information concerning the whereabouts of the City of Flint.

From no other of its sources could the State Department obtain any word of the vessel.

Don't Worry, Says Officer

Norfolk, Va., Oct. 30 (AP)—Mrs. Mary Roberson, of Norfolk, said today she had received a message reading "All well, don't worry" from her husband, J. V. Roberson, third assistant engineer aboard the American steamer City of Flint.

The message was relayed through the Department of State from Tromsö, Norway, where it was sent October 21.

Carried Winchargers

Chicago, Oct. 30 (AP)—E. F. McDonald, Jr., president of the Wincharger Corporation, reported today that the cargo of the City of Flint included a "large consignment" of Winchargers—electric generators equipped with wind propellers and used to generate electricity from the wind.

He said the winchargers were destined for Eire, a neutral country, where they were to be installed in air-raid shelters.

Admiralty Says Destroyers Escaped Damage Off Dogger Bank.

FALSE WARNING IN LONDON

Alarm Sounded by Mistake in Capital After Planes Are Sighted Near Coast.

LONDON, Oct. 30 (A. P.).—The Admiralty announced tonight that British destroyers and German planes had met in battle today off the Dogger Bank in the North Sea.

30.24-4367

30.24-4367

An Admiralty communique said:

"This morning off the Dogger Bank a flotilla of our destroyers came into action with two German bombers. There were no casualties in or damage to our destroyers and it is not known whether the enemy suffered damage."

British fighter planes went up to investigate the presence of unidentified aircraft off the Essex coast today and a German plane also was seen over the northeast coast, the Air Ministry announced. Air raid signals were rounded in London by mistake.

The Ministry issued two communiques, the first saying:

"An air raid warning which was given in the East Kent area this morning was due to the presence of unidentified aircraft off the Essex coast proceeding south."

"British fighter aircraft went up to investigate.

"The all-clear signal was sounded ten minutes later."

The second communique said:

"An enemy aircraft was observed off the northeast coast of England this morning. British fighter aircraft went up to investigate, whereupon the enemy aircraft made off in an easterly direction before contact could be made."

The sounding of air raid warnings in London at the height of the morning rush to work sent thousands scurrying to shelter.

First Time Since September 6.

Today's warning was the fourth for London, others having been sounded on September 3, 4 and 6.

Some office workers grumbled about the false alarm and speculated on whether German strategy might be to provoke premature precautions with "finger" flights, then capitalize later on the sense of false security created.

Warnings were sounded first in the northeast this morning and continued on a zig-zag line to Kent, on the southeastern coast.

The communiques did not immediately fill in a terse report, passed for publication, of a northeast coast incident in which civilians were said to have seen bursts of machine-gun fire as an airplane with German markings and a British craft flew close together at a low altitude.

The scene was later identified as the East Lothian area where a German warplane was forced down on Saturday.

An air raid warning in the Firth of Forth area lasted half an hour.

There was a brief alarm at the Ministry of Information Building, surprising the 400 or more members of the headquarters staff, who heard twenty-five wardens throughout the building blow their whistles for the first time in nearly six weeks.

With gas masks slung over their shoulders, officials, typists and messengers followed a trail of blue arrows to the basement.

Some newspaper men continued at work in the building.

Alarms in Zigzag Course.

Today's warnings were sounded first in the northeast part of England and continued through Kent, tracing a zigzag pattern.

Shortly before the alarms had been heard along the Kentish coast, at the southeasternmost tip of Britain, two unidentified planes were seen passing over a town in northeastern England, and machine-gun fire was heard there.

At several points in Kent, the alarms lasted for ten or twelve minutes. At one spot, 3,000 children quit their schools in orderly fashion in less than four minutes.

The gunfire was reported to have been heard from the direction of the English Channel. British fighter planes were known to have taken the air.

About seven out of every ten persons were seen carrying gas masks today, compared with about nine out of ten immediately after the war started on September 3.

BRITISH NAVAL UNIT BATTLES NAZI BOMBERS

Destroyers Come Out Unscathed After Duel In North Sea

Plane Raids England, Driven Off—Five More Ships Sunk

[By the Associated Press]

London, Oct. 30—A battle between two German bombers and a flotilla of British destroyers off the Dogger Bank in the North Sea today was reported by the Admiralty.

The announcement said there were no casualties on any of the British warships and that none of the vessels was damaged in the exchange of fire. It was not known whether the Germans suffered any casualties.

Scouts Nazi Air Fields

For its part, the British Royal Air Force made extensive scouting flights over German aviation fields in northern Germany, the Air Ministry announced.

Up to midnight one of the planes had not returned.

"In spite of opposition," the announcement said, "much valuable information was gained and many photographs were taken."

The North Sea engagement came shortly after the first German air raider over England since the war's start was sighted on the northeast coast. Aerial fighters went aloft but it escaped, the Air Ministry said, before contact could be made. No bombs were dropped.

No Inland Raids Previously

Previous German flights were directed at the Firth of Forth in Scotland and the Scapa Flow naval base in the Orkney Islands, rather than at England.

Air-raid warnings sounded in London today for the first time since the first week of the war, but it developed they were sounded by mistake.

The Ministry of Home Security stated tonight "an official inquiry has been made into the sounding of air-raid sirens in central London this morning. It appears that at one police barracks a message was wrongly interpreted and sirens were sounded accordingly."

Nazi Planes Sighted

German planes were sighted near England three days after war was declared, but the Ministry of Information announced at the time that no bombs were dropped and that the invaders apparently did not "penetrate our defenses at any point."

British fighter planes also went up today to investigate the presence of an unidentified aircraft off the Essex coast. Alarms were sounded in the east Kent area and the all-clear signal was given about ten minutes later.

A new development in air-raid precautions was the offering of backyard shelters to the public on the installment purchase plan. The shelters can be bought outright or on a monthly payment plan at costs ranging from about $27 to $40, depending on the size.

Five Ships Sunk

In the war at sea, announcement was made today that three British ships, the Lynx, St. Nidan and the Malabar, the Finnish steamer Juno and the Norwegian vessel Varangnaam were sunk over the week end "by enemy action."

Fishermen of the trawler St. Nidan reported they were shipwrecked twice in one night by a submarine whose commander said: "It's not you fellows we want, it's Chamberlain."

They would have been shipwrecked a third time but the submarine apparently mistook another trawler for a warship. Hardly had the trawler Lynx picked them up after the St. Nidan went down when it, too, was sunk. Then the trawler Lady Hogarth appeared and the submarine fled.

Survivors Landed

Nineteen of the twenty-three persons aboard the 1,241-ton Juno were landed in England tonight by the Norwegian ship Minona. Five of the rescued were women. The Juno was sunk today.

Meanwhile, the Government tonight indicated in a White Paper there was not "the slightest prospect of reaching any settlement" with Nazi Germany.

The position was given in a long statement dealing with German concentration camps which presented a collection of affidavits, mostly from British consular officials in Germany, which the Government contended showed Nazi "savagery" in "the treatment of German nationals in Germany, 1938-1939."

Disclosure Held Up

"These documents were not written for publication," the White Paper said, "and, indeed, as long as there was the slightest prospect of reaching any settlement with the German Government it would have been wrong to do anything to embitter relations between the two countries.

"Even after the outbreak of war his Majesty's Government felt reluctant to take action which might have the effect of inspiring hatred.

"But the attitude of the German Government and the unscrupulous propaganda which they are spreading compels his Majesty's Government to publish these documents so that public opinion, both at home and abroad, may be able to judge for itself."

The publication said that "flogging and torture were the order of the day (in concentration camps) and it was common knowledge in Germany that the National Socialistic movement was taking terrible vengeance on those who had the temerity to oppose it."

5 Of 24 Merchantmen In Convoy Sunk By Subs

Oslo, Oct. 30 (AP)—At least three German submarines were reported to have attacked a convoy of twenty-four merchantmen which left Gibraltar October 14, sinking five of them, the crew of the Swedish vessel Bardaland said on arrival here today.

The Bardaland in two rescues took aboard sixty-one members of the crew of the Glasgow steamer Clan Chisholm, which gave a report of the attack. The Chisholm crew men, who were landed at Kirkwall, said they were unable to give the names of the other ships sunk or how many were lost.

London Sees No Hope of Peace

Issues White Paper Accusing Nazis of Savagery to Their Own People.

LONDON Oct. 30 (A. P.).—In a statement dealing with German concentration camps, the British Government tonight indicated that there was not "the slightest prospect of reaching any settlement" with Nazi Germany.

The statement contained a collection of affidavits that showed, Britain said, Nazi "savagery" in the treatment of German nationals in Germany, 1938-1939. An introduction to the statement declared:

"These documents were not written for publication and, indeed, as long as there was the slightest prospect of reaching any settlement with the German Government it would have been wrong to do anything to embitter relations between the two countries.

"Even after the outbreak of war his Majesty's Government felt reluctant to take action which might have the effect of inspiring hatred.

"But the attitude of the German Government, and the unscrupulous propaganda which they are spreading, compels his Majesty's Government to publish these documents so that public opinion, both at home and abroad, may be able to judge for itself."

The Government asserted in its 30,000-word "white paper" that Germany had circulated "shameless propaganda which is wholly devoid of any foundation" accusing "Great Britain of atrocities in South Africa forty years ago" during the Boer war.

It said that most of the papers in the publication came from British Consular officials in Germany. Many dealt with concentration camps.

"Flogging and torture were the order of the day," the publication said, "and it was common knowledge in Germany that the National Socialist movement was taking terrible vengeance on those who had the temerity to oppose it."

FIGHTING FLARES ALONG WHOLE OF WESTERN FRONT

French Report Intense Air Activity as Clear, Dry Weather Sets In.

PARIS, Oct. 30 (A. P.).—A renewal of patrol raids along the entire western front accompanied by "intensely active" operations of both fighting and scouting planes was reported tonight by the French High Command.

The return of relatively good weather to the front after more than a week of rains, wind and snow also revived artillery action in local bombardments.

The General Staff announced officially that France had lost merchant ships totaling 41,000 tons to German undersea and surface raiders during the first two months of the war.

During the same period, the communique added, "we captured four ships, one of which, the German freighter Halle was sunk by her crew. Three others of a total of 19,000 tons are being made use of by us. Since hostilities began our merchant fleet has therefore been reduced 22,000 tons or about 1 per cent of the total seagoing tonnage."

The skies cleared during the night and a dry cold set in at the start of the ninth week of the war which may prove, some military experts believe, to be a turning point.

The French morning communique said that several German raids had been repulsed. A German unit detected throwing up earthworks east of the industrial city of Saarbruecken was reported dispersed by French mortars.

Military dispatches said that the Germans were maintaining heavy troop concentrations all along the front. Military men said that several days of dry weather would still be necessary, however, to harden the soaked ground and permit of large scale operations.

Dispatches from Luxemburg indicated increased artillery activity along the Moselle and Saar rivers. Luxemburg border guards who are unarmed, were ordered to wear white helmets to distinguish them from French and German soldiers.

Daladier Confers on Aviation.

Meanwhile today Premier Daladier conferred with Air Minister Guy La Chambre on the state of the allied defenses against a possible German aerial offensive, and a French Deputy warned France against depending too heavily on the United States for war supplies, urging that home industries be organized first on an increased production basis.

Henri de Kerillis, a member of the Chamber of Deputies, said in his newspaper, L'Epoque, that France should not get the idea that "from the moment she can count on American aid she can dispense with fabricating for herself immense quantities of materials for prosecuting the war."

In listing three reasons for not leaning too heavily on the United States, even if the American arms embargo should be lifted, he declared that French gold reserves would be drained by purchases abroad, that there would be delays in setting up in the United States the production of French inventions already in manufacture here, and that the United States might be rushed in order to supply Great Britain's and other customers' needs.

Charles Morice, writing in Le Petit Parisien, declared: "Let France and Britain carry potential production to maximum, and victory will follow."

Alsatian Parties Outlawed.

Premier Daladier yesterday promulgated a decree which outlawed three Alsace-Lorraine political parties which had been controlled by Dr. Karl Roos, the autonomy leader put to death last Friday for espionage.

The decree abolished the Landespartei, the Workers and Peasants' party and the Fatherland Front. All these parties were described by the French as key units of agitation for the separation from France of the two provinces she won back from Germany at the end of the world war.

The decree also forbade, under penalty of five years' imprisonment and a heavy fine, the circulation of anything which might perpetuate the parties' beliefs.

BERLIN ASSAILS U. S. FOR STAND ON FLINT

Criticizes Washington For "Twofold Yardstick" Policy In War

Intimates That When British Search Ships The Matter Is Overlooked

[By the Associated Press]

Berlin, Oct. 30—Criticism of the United States for a "twofold yardstick" policy in connection with the European war was voiced today by the German Foreign Office mouthpiece, Deutsche Diplomatisch-Politische Korrespondenz.

The semi-official commentary cited as "symptoms" the case of the City of Flint, American freighter now held by a German prize crew, and the "differentiating treatment" of armed commercial ships and U-boats by President Roosevelt, with its "dangerous obliteration of the character of war and trade ships."

[Associated Press Editor's Note—President Roosevelt at a press conference on October 20, when asked about the possibility of extending to surface vessels of belligerent European nations the restrictions he imposed by proclamation on the use of American ports and territorial waters by their submarines, said he did not think the two were analogous.]

Letting Case Be Pressed

The Foreign Office commentary said the manner of the "snatching up" of the City of Flint affair "points to the fact that responsible officials in America are permitting the case to be pressed more and more into a fixed direction.

"It hardly corresponds," the mouthpiece continued, "to the spirit of impartiality if on the one hand 'a case' is to be constructed for a definite actual purpose at the expense of all possible propaganda methods out of a prize affair which was carried out orderly with strict consideration for the men and goods and which is to be objectively settled before a German prize court.

Hints At Discrimination

"When, however, on the other hand, numerous American ships are brought in and subjected to criminal search, such disturbances do not appear worth mentioning because it is English action."

Korrespondenz pointed to recent speeches by President Roosevelt and Secretary of War Woodring in which they said the United States was determined to keep out of war, and to the United States Senate's action in approving repeal of the Embargo Act.

From the joy which prevailed in England and France it must be assumed, the commentary added, "that at least in the eyes of the western powers those assurances of the President and his War Minister were not to be taken so seriously after all."

"Only The First Stage"

"The lifting of the arms embargo," the commentary said, "alone could hardly justify such enthusiasm if it was not imputed at the same time that this was only the first stage.

"Even if the attack on the Athenia did not immediately lead to the desired goal, there remained—especially since all American doors stand open for English propaganda — always enough other possibilities to induce the desired second step and, if still necessary, the third step.

"Symptoms" such as the City of Flint "did not exactly discourage such seriously nursed hopes in the west."

Roosevelt's Words Recalled

Korrespondenz recalled President Roosevelt's statement at Chautauqua, N. Y., on August, 14, 1936, that it was a "tragic series of small decisions" which led to the United States' entry into the World War.

It concluded that the desire of the American people without doubt is to remain neutral but that "according to another sentence of Roosevelt's Chautauqua speech, the effective maintenance of America's neutrality depends today as in the past on the wisdom and determination of those who at a given moment 'occupy the office of President and Secretary of State.'"

Brevity Of Bulletins Cited

As the commentary's views were made public, Germans were discussing the brevity of the high command's war bulletins and a lull in Nazi diplomatic action.

Today's morning communique, covering Sunday's developments and typical of recent bulletins, merely said:

"At the Western front the situation remained unchanged."

Hints were dropped in informed quarters of an impending intensified submarine campaign against Britain. The phrase "Give England a taste of what a blockade means" was heard often.

Warning Voiced

The Voelkischer Beobachter, Hitler's newspaper, declared that if England persists in throwing overboard, one after another, all conceptions of international rules, then it must reckon with inevitable intensification of war against its commerce."

Germany continued to withdraw Germans from the Baltic area, which Hitler has conceded to be in Russia's sphere of influence. More than 2,000 Germans have arrived at Danzig from Estonia and Latvia during the last three days.

The number of Germans repatriated for settlement of the western sections of former Poland was placed at about 5,000.

PARLIAMENT'S FIFTH SPECIAL SESSION CALLED

Molotoff To Tell Of New Pacts And To Describe Foreign Policy

Russians, Busy, May Put Off Return Of Finnish Delegation

By WITT HANCOCK

Associated Press Correspondent

Moscow, Oct. 30—Soviet Russia, with great fanfare, will set the stage tomorrow for welcoming "liberated" sections of Polish White Russia and the western Ukraine into the Soviet Union and "under the sun of Stalin."

The fifth extraordinary session of the Soviet Supreme Council, or Parliament, called to take over the two provinces returned to Russia by the German-Russian partition of Poland, is expected to last a week.

Well-informed circles were of the opinion that Vyacheslaff Molotoff, Premier-Foreign Commissar, would address the council on his foreign policy. It was believed he would report on the recently concluded mutual assistance pacts with Latvia, Lithuania and Estonia as well as the treaty of friendship and new frontiers with Germany.

May Discuss War

30.24-4369

30.24-4369

Taking their cue from recent opinions expressed in the controlled Russian press, some diplomatic observers held it likely that Molotoff would make a statement on Russia's attitude on the war in Europe. The press repeatedly has blamed France and England for carrying on an "imperialistic" war. Soviet newspapers also are beginning to criticize the United States, especially the pending legislation to repeal the arms embargo.

The time of convening the Supreme Council was not announced. Foreign correspondents usually are asked to the sessions, but tonight they had received no invitation.

Foreign observers thought it likely that the return of a Finnish delegation for a third series of talks at the Kremlin might be delayed indefinitely.

To Have Busy Week

Next week will be a crowded one for Soviet officials, who will be busy with the Parliament session and who also will observe the official holidays beginning November 7 on the twenty-second anniversary of the Red Revolution.

As to another field of Russian diplomatic activity, the Balkans, foreign quarters heard reports abroad concerning possible Russian aims there, but no information on the subject was forthcoming from Russian sources.

Diplomatic observers here were of the opinion that Russia seemed most concerned with lining up her northern flank with pacts concerning the Baltic and Scandinavian states before turning her attentions to the southeast.

These sources said Russia's failure to negotiate a pact with Turkey might stay her diplomatic hand in the Balkans.

Finnish Evacuees Urged To Stay Away From Cities

Helsinki, Oct. 30 (AP)—Thousands of Finns who have left cities for safer areas were urged tonight to remain in the evacuation centers while the Government prepared what political quarters indicated would be a firm "no" to Soviet Russian demands.

The Ministry of Interior said some Finns who left their homes at the first indication of possible trouble were returning and that others were planning a similar move.

Government officials said the critical situation which caused the original exodus was not changed, and asked the Finns to remain "calmly" at the evacuation centers.

Reply Is Prepared

Meanwhile, translators in the Foreign Office worked on Finland's reply to Russia, which will be presented to Joseph Stalin and Vyacheslaff Molotoff by a delegation expected to leave Helsinki tomorrow night for Moscow.

It will be the third trip to Moscow for Dr. Juho Husti Paasikivi, head of the delegation, and Finance Minister Vaino Tanner.

Informed political quarters intimated that Finland's reply was based on the conviction that Russia needed no naval or air bases on Finnish soil to protect her position on the Baltic and Gulf of Finland.

Asks 50-Mile Strip, Report

While the actual subject of the negotiations remained an official secret, reports circulating through the capital said Russia had asked for a fifty-mile strip of the coast and four Finnish islands in the Gulf of Finland, a military pact and the right to participate in the fortification of the strategic Aaland Islands.

The Foreign Office declined to comment on the reports.

A spokesman said the work of translating into Russian the Cabinet's instructions to the Finnish delegation delayed the delegates' return to Moscow until tomorrow.

Finns meanwhile dug air-raid protection trenches and made other defense preparations.

FINNS REFUSING TO YIELD BASES

MOLOTOV SPEECH AWAITED

May Reveal Moscow's Intentions in War—Balkans Watch Russia Anxiously.

HELSINKI, Oct. 30 (A. P.).—Authoritative political quarters intimated today that the Finnish government, in a "final answer" to Russian demands, had taken the attitude that Russia needed no naval or air bases on Finnish soil to protect her position on the Baltic and Gulf of Finland.

The Finnish delegation to the Moscow conversations planned to leave tomorrow night for the third session at the Kremlin.

The actual subject of the negotiations remained the secret of the Kremlin and Finnish leaders.

A Foreign Office spokesman said only that the Cabinet and leaders of various party groups in the Diet (Parliament) had reached complete agreement on the Finnish course. Never before, he said, had the Government been so united as in the present emergency. The Cabinet discussed future steps with party leaders for more than four hours yesterday.

A campaign for a defense fund of 500,000,000 markka (about $9,400,000) was in full swing. A group of insurance firms has announced that it was taking one-fifth of the total issue of bonds. Voluntary contributions to the fund were said to be close to $1,000,000.

Soviet Supreme Council Gathering.

MOSCOW, Oct. 30 (A. P.).—The fifth extraordinary session of the Soviet Supreme Council, summoned for tomorrow, is expected to be a triumphal celebration of the reunion of White Russia and the Western Ukraine with Soviet Russia. These two provinces, which went to Poland after the world war, have been returned to Russia by the Russian-German partition of Poland.

Premier-Foreign Commissar Vyacheslav Molotov probably will make a report to the Council, or parliament. In view of opinion expressed in the controlled press, some foreign observers believe Molotov may outline the Russian attitude toward the war in Europe.

The press has repeatedly urged a cessation of hostilities in Europe, and has called it an "imperialistic war." Soviet newspapers have blamed Britain and France for the war's continuance, and argued in essence that "it should be stopped before it becomes a second world war."

Stalin to Receive Newcomers.

A delegation of sixty-six members of the newly elected National Assembly of the Western Ukraine left Lwow yesterday for Moscow and a similar delegation was expected to leave Belostok, White Russia, today to report to the Supreme Soviet. They will ask the Council to admit them to the Union of Soviet Socialist Republics. There was no doubt that the requests would be granted.

The delegations were expected to be singled out for the honor of being received by Joseph Stalin.

The Council session is likely to last five or six days, probably closing a day or two before the celebrations beginning November 7 of the twenty-second anniversary of the revolution.

It was considered likely that Molotov would ask the Council to confirm ratification by the Presidium of the Supreme Council of the recently concluded pacts with Latvia, Lithuania and Estonia as well as the pact of friendship and frontiers with Germany.

Soviet Russia and Italy for influence in the Balkans sharpened southeast Europe's watch today for a clew to Moscow's intentions. The Foreign Offices of the Balkan countries hope for a definite statement on Russia's aims when the Supreme Soviet meets tomorrow.

The crux of the tense situation demonstration in Belgrade, the Yugoslav capital, ended with the arrest of several students and workers.

Indications of close co-operation between Hungary and Italy were reflected in a Government-censored front-page editorial of the Magyar Newzet, Budapest newspaper, which declared: "Neither political nor spiritual Rome is willing to make

TROUBLE SPOT IS BULGARIA

Italian Influence Waxing Strong in Other States.

BUDAPEST, Oct. 30 (A. P.).—Anxiety over the rivalry between Soviet Russia and Italy for influence in the Balkans sharpened southeast Europe's watch today for a clew to Moscow's intentions. The Foreign Offices of the Balkan countries hope for a definite statement on Russia's aims when the Supreme Soviet meets tomorrow.

The crux of the tense situation was reported to be Russian support for Bulgaria's territorial claims on Rumanian Dobruja.

What course Turkey would follow in case Russia supported Bulgaria against Rumania was not forthcoming from Ankara, where ceremonies celebrating the Turkish Republic's sixteenth birthday are being held. Turkey and Rumania are in the Balkan Entente.

The jailing of forty-four pro-Nazi Iron Guard members accused of plotting to assassinate Gen. Gabriel Marinescu, the Rumanian Minister of War, only momentarily diverted Rumanian attention from the international situation.

Italy Gaining Influence.

In diplomatic circles it was said that Italy was combatting Russian moves with promises of continued neutrality and increased trade. Hungary and Yugoslavia were reported favoring Italy. A pro-Soviet demonstration in Belgrade, the Yugoslav capital, ended with the arrest of several students and workers.

Indications of close co-operation between Hungary and Italy were reflected in a Government-censored front-page editorial of the Magyar Newzet, Budapest newspaper, which declared: "Neither political nor spiritual Rome is willing to make fruitless, cheap compromises with those Powers which are laying siege to European and Christian civilization."

The editorial recalled the empire of Marcus Aurelius's time when "German Slavic tribes in a terrifying barbaric flood swept over Roman military outposts in Pannonia (modern Hungary)."

Diplomatic informants said that Italy's Balkan influence has grown steadily since the start of the war, while Germany's has ebbed.

Ankara Confident.

ANKARA, Oct. 30 (A. P.).—Turkey's political leaders expressed confidence today that the recently concluded mutual assistance pact with France and Great Britain would bring prosperity and safety for Turkey.

Latvia and Germany Sign Repatriation Pact

RIGA, Latvia, Oct. 30 (A. P.).—Latvia and Germany signed a treaty today completing arrangements for the repatriation of an estimated 55,000 German Latvians to the Reich.

The treaty was negotiated by a German commission. The transfer of the Germans has already started.

Dec. 15 Is Deadline

RIGA, Latvia, Oct. 30 (AP)—All members of the German minority in Latvia who desire to migrate to Germany must leave before Dec. 15, the German-Latvian repatriation treaty, signed today, provided.

They were severely restricted in the matter of taking possessions with them. Household goods may be taken but not foreign currency, precious metals, bonds, automobiles, agricultural or industrial machinery, stocks in trade, objects of historical or cultural value purchased after Oct. 6.

Immovable property remaining unsold before departure will be under the administration of trustees who must sell it before the end of 1941 if urban property, or by Jan. 31, 1940, if rural.

Otherwise it will be taken over by the Latvian Government. Proceeds from the sales will be accumulated in a special account of the Bank of Latvia.

RUMANIA STANDS FIRM ON BULGARIAN CLAIM

No Soil Will Be Ceded, Oficials Say—Soviet Fears Abate

BUCHAREST, Rumania, Oct. 30 (AP)—Rumanian officials reiterated tonight that they would refuse flatly to cede an inch of soil to Bulgaria, which is reported to have Soviet Russian support for return of the Dobruja territory.

At the same time it was learned authoritatively that should Russia decide to occupy the Rumanian province of Bessarabia, she probably would meet little opposition because of the strategic disposition of Rumanian forces.

Although it was admitted here that a "symbolic" territorial concession to Bulgaria in Dobruja could be made with little material loss, the concern is that such a step might be taken by Rumania's neighbors as a sign that the country was crumbling.

Bessarabia Poorly Defended

BUCHAREST, Oct. 30 (AP).—It was learned authoritatively today that should Russia decide to occupy her former province of Bessarabia, now Rumanian, she probably would meet little opposition because of the strategic disposition of the Rumanian Army.

Bessarabia is now devoid of Rumanian armed forces except for cavalry and small motorized units which, it was expected, would fall back quickly in the event of invasion. Rumania's first line of defense has been set up along the River Plut, which divides Bessarabia from the province of Moldavia, some sixty miles from the Russian frontier. The second line of defense is in the foothills of the Carpathian Mountains, another sixty miles back.

Confidence was increasing in government circles that Russia would not move precipitately into Bessarabia. For the moment Rumania has two allies in Bessarabia—mud and typhoid. An invading army not only would have to wallow through mires, but would be faced with widespread typhoid which always breaks out in Bessarabia in the wet days of early winter.

Refuse to Cede Any Soil

Meanwhile, Rumanian officials reiterated that they would refuse flatly to cede an inch of soil to Bulgaria, reported to have Russian support for return of the Dobrudja territory, a 9,000-square mile area which was attached to Rumania after the World War.

Rumania's ace diplomat, Vasile Stoica, Ambassador to Turkey, has been conferring with King Carol II and Foreign Minister Grigore Gafencu for several days. He was scheduled to leave for Sofia tomorrow on a special mission, and was expected to strive there for a "psychological settlement" by stressing that it would be in the interests of both countries to avoid war. It was understood that he would express Rumania's willingness to make concessions to the Bulgarian minority in the Dobrudja.

Rumania is anxious for the formation of a strong neutral block in the Balkans. Italy has been discussed in foreign circles as the leader of such a block if it could be formed.

Swiss Dancer Tried as Spy

Woman and Three Men Face Geneva Court —Also Accused of Treason.

GENEVA, Oct. 30 (A. P.).—A dark-eyed dancer of Italian birth, accused of leading a spy ring working for several foreign governments, went on trial today with three men—Virginia Capt Rota, thirty-five-year-old performer from the night clubs of Rome, Paris and Madrid, who has been in jail here since December 19 last.

Swiss counter-espionage operatives charged that they caught her and Roger Joel, 35 years old, a draftsman once employed in a Swiss arms factory, as they tried to cross into France carrying plans for a new anti-aircraft gun and other military information from Switzerland and other countries.

The authorities said that the dancer twice went on hunger strikes and once tried to commit suicide by slashing her wrists with broken glass. Finally she was placed in a prison hospital under a twenty-four hour guard.

A magistrate's report on the case said that Paul Rochat, another of the four defendants and former operator of a private detective agency in Geneva, delivered information concerning Switzerland's national defense to the Consul-General of Italy.

Seized on Tip From French.

Rochat, whose arrest was due partly to tips received from French counter-espionage agents who trailed him through Tunisia and Algeria in January, was said to be the ring's contact man with the representatives of foreign governments.

The trial, the first big case to come before the court since the European war began, was held behind locked doors before five Geneva Federal judges. The prosecution said that the maximum penalty would be asked, since Switzerland was in the midst of an anti-espionage drive.

At the time the four were arrested, the maximum was five years' imprisonment, but all are further charged with treason. All are Swiss citizens.

Called Master Mind.

Although the dancer is of Italian parentage, she became a naturalized Swiss citizen after marrying a Swiss from whom she was later on divorced.

The Federal police said at the time of her arrest that they believed she was the master mind of an international ring of spies.

From the beginning of 1939 to the start of the war, the police have arrested about 300 persons on charges of espionage. Since then scores have been jailed and many more ordered out of the country, no official statistics have been issued.

The Federal Government has authorized the army to help in spy-chasing, giving it extraordinary powers of search, telephone-tapping and letter-opening for this purpose. Another section of the new law makes every Swiss citizen a counter-espionage agent as a patriotic duty.

Swiss Question Dancer as Spy In Secret Trial

'Nina,' NightClub Favorite, Accused With 3 in Plot to Steal Arms Designs

GENEVA, Oct. 30 (AP).—An attractive dancer known in Continental night clubs as "Nina" was called to a secret session of Federal Court today to defend herself against charges of treason and espionage, and it was reported she had refused to answer questions. The thirty-five-year-old dancer, whose name is Virginia Capt Rota, is on trial with two men and another woman in Switzerland's first major spy trial since the European war began.

Only meager details of the trial seeped through the locked doors of the courtroom where the accused, guarded by police, faced five Swiss Federal judges. It was stated officially, however, that her handsome Swiss friend, Roger Joel, one-time draftsman in an arms factory, was accused by the prosecution of making models of secret Swiss anti-aircraft-gun designs and other arms for the dancer.

"Nina," modishly dressed in black and wearing a leopard coat, sat unmoved and silent while being questioned, it was reported. It was said the dancer displayed no emotion when Joel was being questioned.

Miss Rota and Joel face possible sentences of from three to twenty years in prison on the double count of espionage and treason.

The other defendants, Paul Rochat and his wife, were charged with organizing an information service for an Italian Consul General in Switzerland under the dancer's orders. Rochat is a former operator of a private detective agency.

"Nina" and Joel were arrested Swiss secret police said, as they attempted to cross into France with plans for the anti-aircraft gun and other military data.

The dancer, who once appeared in night clubs of Rome, Paris and Madrid, is of Italian parentage but became a naturalized Swiss citizen. Christened Virginia Rota, she took the name Capt Rota after her divorce from a Swiss named Capt.

Belgian Weekly Banned For Neutrality Breach

BRUSSELS, Oct. 30 (A. P.).—The police confiscated the weekly paper Le Rire today for transgressing press neutrality regulations.

Le Rire's issue was forbidden because of a caricature whose subject was not announced. The police took similar action last week against the Belgian Pourquoi Pas? and the French Marianne on charges of carrying anti-German material.

BRITONS RESENT EARLY CLOSING

Storekeepers Plan to Defy Wartime Regulation.

FLOOD OF COMPLAINTS HEARD

'Grievance Week' Begins for the House of Commons.

LONDON, Oct. 30 (A. P.).—Shopkeepers all over Great Britain, holding out for "business as usual" in this war of waiting, have decided to defy an early closing order which went into force today.

The order says that stores must close at 6 P. M. on week days and 7 P. M. on Saturdays, but London has taken advantage of a provision which permits local authorities to extend the limits by one hour.

Merchants from other parts of the country met at Birmingham yesterday and voted to ignore the regulation, designed to clear the streets early.

The action opened what some members of Parliament called "grievance week" for the House of Commons. When the House meets tomorrow, the Opposition has expressed its intention of focusing attention on the Government's wartime powers to restrict freedom of speech and the press.

Other complaints concern postal delays, the darkness of trains and widespread dislocation of business, attributed to control committees and the pooling of supplies.

The London Daily Mail summed up the complaints as follows:

"The muddlers, the meddlers, the purveyors of red tape, are strangling British trade and industry, forcing up prices, creating unemployment and gravely hampering our war effort."

American neutrality legislation was still getting prominent attention, the Times stating:

"The first duty of watchers on this side of the Atlantic is to appreciate that this legislation, though its fate may be of urgent importance to themselves, is not being passed for their benefit, but solely in the interests of the American people. . . . It is simply to keep America out of war."

The inauguration of air mail service today to Amsterdam, Brussels, Paris, Stockholm, Oslo and Helsinki was expected to improve postal speed to the Continent.

troops which repulsed a German attack on October 16, said by the French to have been the largest action of the war to date.

A. R. P. on Installment Plan

LONDON, Oct. 30 (AP).—A new development in air-raid precautions was the offering of back-yard shelters to the public today on an installment purchase plan. The shelters can be bought outright or on a monthly payment [illegible] at costs ranging from about $5 to $40, depending on the size.

Goering Hiring Huntsmen To Help Fill Nazi Larder

Gunners Also Offered Traveling Expenses for Bagging Game in Poland

BERLIN, Oct. 30 (AP).—Germany mobilized her huntsmen today in an effort to increase the domestic food supply.

Colonel General Goering, the Reich's hunting master, called on gunners to shoot small game in provinces wrested from Poland and in the vast Tucheler forest of West Prussia, where wild life is reported plentiful.

Volunteer hunters are offered traveling expenses and $2.80 a day, plus two cartridges for every animal or bird they bag for Germany's food reserves. For hunters with dogs, $3.20 a day is offered. Employment is promised until January 14.

The campaign was described as a minor detail, but one that Germans could not overlook in keeping the larder full.

Duke Comments on Empty Strasbourg Streets.

PARIS, Oct. 30 (A. P.).—While traveling through Strasbourg to inspect French troops, the Duke of Windsor expressed "great sadness," Le Journal says today, at the sight of empty streets caused by the removal of the population under the menace of German cannon.

The paper quoted the Duke as having said that he was impressed by the spirit of the troops and rear-line work of the soldiers. He told the paper:

"There are already many French soldiers who have received or will receive useful packages from the Duchess of Windsor.

ESCAPED TORPEDOING

British Reaching Boston Say Missile Crossed Bow.

BOSTON, Oct. 30 (A. P.).—A narrow escape from a torpedo, which crossed her bow, was reported today by members of the crew of the British freighter Barrhwin upon arrival at Boston to load scrap metal. The Barrhwin was sixteen days on a passage from Southampton, during the first three days of which she and seven other steamships were convoyed by British warships.

The escape from the torpedo occurred, seamen said, while the Barrhwin still was in the British Channel. No submarine was sighted.

SPECIAL RULE REPORTED FOR NEUTRAL BILL

House Committee Approves Sending Measure to Conference.

VICIOUS GAG, FISH CHARGES

Demands Chamber Have Right to Vote on Important Changes Made by Senate.

WASHINGTON, Oct. 30 (A. P.).—The Rules Committee outlined today for House consideration of the administration neutrality bill a course of parliamentary procedure condemned as gag rule by Representatives opposing repeal of the arms embargo.

If the House itself approves the procedure voted by the committee, the bill over which the Senate struggled for a month will soon be on its way to a joint committee of the House and Senate.

This committee would be charged with adjusting differences between the bill passed by the Senate last week, substituting a cash-and-carry plan for the arms embargo, and a House bill approved last June providing for a limited arms embargo.

The Rules Committee's course of action would permit a single type of motion on the House floor—to give the representatives for the House on the conference committee specific instructions on what should be retained in the final draft of the neutrality bill. It was explained that motions to instruct could be offered by as many members as Speaker Bankhead recognized.

Most Vicious Gag, Says Fish.

Such motions are expected to be debated two or three days. Democratic leaders said they would try to reach an agreement as to an exact time for ending debate. That failing, they planned to operate under the general rules of the House which would permit each member recognition for an hour.

Representative Fish, Republican, of New York, a leader of the fight to keep the arms embargo in the bill and a member of the Rules Committee, termed the procedure "a gag—the most vicious we've ever had in this Congress."

Chairman Sabath, Democrat, of Illinois, announced there was no record vote in the Rules Committee. He disputed Mr. Fish's "gag" charge, asserting he was "getting fed up on this political buncombe."

Mr. Fish countered that unless the procedure were liberalized he thought the House itself would "beat the rule" and open up the Senate-approved neutrality measure to House amendments.

The New Yorker listed what he described as the three most important Senate changes on which he thought the House should have a right to vote.

POLES SEND HULL NOTE OF PROTEST

State Non-recognition Stand on Nazi Seizures.

WASHINGTON, Oct. 30 (A. P.).—The Polish Government told the United States Government today that it considered Germany's annexation of part of Poland an illegal act and therefore null and void. In a note to Secretary Hull through Polish Ambassador Count Potocki, the Polish Government said that Germany's creation of two new provinces called West Prussia and Posen and enlargement of the existing provinces of German Silesia and East Prussia "constitutes a new violation by the Reich of the elementary principles of international law relating to the conduct of an enemy in occupied territory."

Mr. Hull said in reply that he had taken note of the Polish Government's declaration.

The Polish note read:

"The Ambassador of Poland presents his compliments to the Secretary of State and upon instructions of his Government has the honor to inform him that the Polish Government have learned that the German Reich decreed the annexation from November 1, 1939, of part of the territory of the Polish Republic, creating two new provinces called West Prussia and Posen and enlarging the existing provinces of German-Silesia and East Prussia.

"The Polish Government declare that this administrative organization constitutes a new violation by the Reich of the elementary principles of international law relating to the conduct of an enemy in occupied territory. Hence, the Polish Government consider this illegal act as null and void."

Secretary Hull has refused to recognize the conquest of Poland. Anthony J. Drexel Biddle, Ambassador to Poland, is accredited to the new Polish Government with provisional headquarters in Paris.

Swiss Vote Conservative; Communists Defeated

Government's Neutral Policy Wins Landslide Support

BERNE, Switzerland, Oct. 30 (AP)—Incomplete returns from the week end's nation-wide Parliamentary election showed today that the Swiss gave overwhelming support to their conservative neutral government.

The election was almost a landslide against the Communists in Basel—the city which elected one of the two Communists already on the old National Council.

Switzerland's only politically active Nazi party tossed in the sponge before the elections. The Nazis had one Deputy in the National Council, but presented no candidate.

The Socialists lost heavily to the Centrists.

LONDON, OCT. 30-AP-A merchant sailor from the sunken British steamer Stonegate was quoted by the News Chroncle today as saying the German battleship Deutschland gave the American ship City of Flint the choice of being sunk or taken to Germany.

The sailor, one of 37 of Stonegate's crew who arrived at a northeastern English port today, was quoted thus:

"On the fifth day (Oct.9) just before we were due to go for exercise, we saw through the porthole, a ship which x proved to be the City of Flint.

"The American captain was asked whether he would prefer to have his vessel sunk or taken to Germany. He replied that he would rather have the vessel taken to Germany". ******

WILNO, OCT. 30-AP-THE Gedymin regiment raised the Lithuanian flag Sunday over the ruined castle of Gedymin, Lithuanian ruler who in the fourteenth century made Wilno (Vilna) the nation's capital.

Thus symbolically Lithuania completed repossession of the ancient city which had been Polish since 1920 and which Russia restored to the Lithuanians after the recent partition of Poland.

Crowds sang the Lithuanian national anthem and kissed each other in street celebrations.

Religious services were held in Ostrobrama chapel, a Lithuanian holy spot, where a group of artists, authors and students laid a wreath at the tomb of Jonas Basanavicius, "patriarch of the Lithuanian renaissance," who died in 1927.

A military parade ended the day's celebration. *****

WASHINGTON, OCT 30-(AP)-ALEXANDER C. KIRK, AMERICAN CHARGE D'AFFAIRES AT BERLIN, CABLED THE STATE DEPARTMENT TODAY THAT THE GERMAN FOREIGN OFFICE HAD INFORMED HIM ORALLY THAT IT STILL WAS WITHOUT DEFINITE INFORMATION CONCERNING THE WHEREABOUTS OF THE CITY OF FLINT.

FROM NO OTHER OF ITS SOURCES COULD THE STATE DEPARTMENT OBTAIN ANY WORD OF THE VESSEL.

(ADVANCE) WASHINGTON, OCT. 30-(AP)-THE BRITISH GOVERNMENT FORMALLY DENIED TODAY THAT THE LINER ATHENIA CARRIED GUNS, WAS DESIGNED TO BE A RAIDER, OR WAS SUNK BY THE BRITISH.

A NOTE PRESENTED AT THE STATE DEPARTMENT BY LORD LOTHIAN, THE BRITISH AMBASSADOR, ALSO SAID THAT THE SHIP CARRIED NEITHER BULLION, NOR SECURITIES, AND REITERATED THAT "ACCORDING TO THE EVIDENCE IN THE POSSESSION OF HIS MAJESTY'S GOVERNMENT, SHE WAS SUNK BY A SUBMARINE."

PAUL GOEBBELS, THE GERMAN PROPAGANDA MINISTER, HAD CHARGED THAT THE ATHENIA CARRIED GUNS FOR CANADIAN COAST DEFENSE AND FOR EQUIPPING THE SHIP WAS A RAIDER. WASHINGTON, OCT. 30-(AP)-CONSTANTINE A.OUMANSKY, SOVIET AMBASSADOR TO THE UNITED STATES, IS CUSTOMARILY A VERY CHEERFUL SOUL, BUT HIS OPTIMISM MAY BE STRETCHED TO THE LIMIT BY THE EFFORT REQUIRED TO BRING SOVIET-AMERICAN RELATIONS INTO THE REALM OF CORDIAL FRIENDSHIP.

SINCE OUMANSKY, NOW ORDERED BACK TO THE UNITED STATES. WENT TO RUSSIA SEVERAL MONTHS AGO ON LEAVE, MANY EVENTS HAVE OCCURRED THAT RAISE A QUESTION AS TO THE PRESENT STATE OF RELATIONS BETWEEN THE TWO COUNTRIES. THE LACK OF COOPERATION CHARGED AGAINST THE SOVIETS BY SECRETARY HULL IN THE CASE OF "THE CITY OF FLINT" IS ONLY THE CULMINATION OF THE SERIES.

FEELING IN ADMINISTRATION QUARTERS HERE TURNED SHARPLY AGAINST RUSSIA SHORTLY AFTER HER NON-AGGRESSION PACT WITH GERMANY. WHEN THE WAR BEGAN, SOME OFFICIALS HELD RUSSIA INDIRECTLY RESPONSIBLE FOR IT, SINCE THEY BELIEVED HITLER MIGHT NOT HAVE MARCHED INTO POLAND IF IT HAD NOT BEEN FOR THE RUSSIAN AGREEMENT.

SENTIMENT HERE CRYSTALLIZED WHEN RUSSIAN TROOPS INVADED POLAND. RUSSIA'S STATEMENT OF NEUTRALITY WAS RECEIVED BY THE AMERICAN GOVERNMENT WITH MUCH SKEPTICISM. IT WAS DECIDED, HOWEVER, NOT TO TAKE ANY ACTION SUCH AS DENOMINATING RUSSIA A BELLIGERENT AND INCLUDING HER WITHIN THE NEUTRALITY ACT PROCLAMATION, BECAUSE IT WAS FELT IT WAS UP TO BRITAIN AND FRANCE TO DECIDE AS TO RUSSIA'S POSITION AND THAT ANY ABRUPT MOVE MIGHT FORCE RUSSIA STILL FURTHER INTO GERMANY'S ARMS.

OCT 31 1939

THEN CAME RUSSIA'S RAPID MOVES INTO THE BALTIC--INTO ESTHONIA, LATVIA AND LITHUANIA. THE AMERICAN GOVERNMENT, TRADITIONALLY FRIENDLY TO SMALL NATIONS, COULD NOT VIEW THIS WITH EQUANIMITY. WHEN THE TURN OF FINLAND SEEMED NEXT, PRESIDENT ROOSEVELT APPEALED TO PRESIDENT KALININ OF RUSSIA NOT TO DISTURB THE PEACE IN THE BALTIC.

OCT 31 1939

IT WAS SIGNIFICANT THAT THE APPEAL WAS MADE ONLY TO RUSSIA, NOT TO [illegible] AND RUSSIA, THUS INDICATING CLEARLY THAT THE PRES-IDENT THOUGHT THAT IF THERE WAS TO BE A BREACH OF PEACE IT WOULD COME FROM RUSSIA AND NOT FROM FINLAND. THE REPLY FROM SOVIET PRESIDENT KALININ DID NOT AT ALL SATISFY OFFICIALS HERE. THEY WERE FAR FROM REASSURED AT THE SOVIET STATEMENT THAT SHE WANTED ONLY THE MUTUAL SECURITY OF HERSELF AND FINLAND.

ON THE HEELS OF THIS, CAME THE CITY OF FLINT INCIDENT, MARKED BY WHAT OFFICIALS HERE CONSIDERED DISCOURTEOUS TREATMENT OF THE AMERICAN AMBASSADOR, LAURENCE A.STEINHARDT, BY THE FOREIGN OFFICE. NOR WAS IT THE FIRST TIME IN THIS CRISIS THAT AN AMERICAN DIPLOMAT HAD BEEN TREATED WITH LESS THAN COURTESY. THE SOVIETS ARRESTED VICE-CONSUL WILLIAM MORTON, OF THE STAFF OF THE WARSAW CONSULATE, WHEN HE WAS SUPERVISING THE EVACUATION OF AMERICANS FROM RUSSIAN-OCCUPIED POLAND.

AND ON THIS SIDE WE HAVE HAD THE INDICTMENT OF EARL BROWDER, LEADER OF THE COMMUNIST PARTY HERE, ON THE CHARGE OF USING FALSE AMERICAN PASSPORTS IN TRAVELING TO SOVIETLAND.

THESE INCIDENTS DO NOT NECESSARILY MEAN A BREAK IN DIPLOMATIC RELATIONS BETWEEN WASHINGTON AND MOSCOW. BUT THEY MAKE IT ALL BUT IMPOSSIBLE FOR ANY SERIOUS COLLABORATION TO EXIST BETWEEN THE TWO GOVERNMENTS.

OUMANSKY HAS INDEED A REAL TASK BEFORE HIM.

THE WAR TODAY

BY DEWITT MACKENZIE

HOPE DIES HARD THAT SOMEWAY PEACE MAY COME IN THE EUROPEAN WAR WITHOUT THE CONFLICT RUNNING A BLOODY COURSE TO A DECISIVE FINISH.

LEADING FIGURES IN MANY NEUTRAL STATES ARE CONTINUING TO PUSH AS HARD AS THE VERY DELICATE CIRCUMSTANCES PERMIT IN AN EFFORT TO FIND AN OPENING FOR INAUGURATION OF FORMAL PEACE DISCUSSIONS.

HERE IN OUR OWN COUNTRY INFLUENTIAL PEOPLE ARE WORKING QUIETLY BUT DILIGENTLY TO THIS END. IT IS A BATTLE AGAINST TIME, FOR IF SUCCESS DOESN'T COME BEFORE THE FIRST GREAT OFFENSIVE HAS UNDAMMED FRESH FLOODS OF BITTERNESS, IT MAY BE TOO LATE.

MEDIATION UNDOUBTEDLY WOULD HAVE BEEN OFFERED LONG AGO BY SOME NEUTRAL COUNTRY OR INDIVIDUAL HAD IT NOT BEEN FOR THE FEAR THAT PREMATURE ACTION MIGHT BE WORSE THAN NO ACTION AT ALL.

HERR HITLER HAS MADE IT CLEAR BY WORD AND BY DEED THAT HE HAS BEEN DELAYING ANY MAJOR OPERATIONS ON LAND AND IN AIR IN THE WESTERN THEATRE IN HOPE THAT HE MIGHT GET PEACE.

30.24 -4377

30.24-4377

. "THE FACT THAT THE NAZI CHIEFTAIN INSISTS ON HIS OWN TERMS DOESN'T ALTER THE FACT THAT HE DEFINITELY DOESN'T WANT WAR, ALTHOUGH THE GERMANS NOW APPEAR TO BE PREPARING FOR A POSSIBLE OFFENSIVE.

THE ALLIES, ON THEIR PART, FOUGHT UNTIL THE LAST DOG WAS DEAD TO AVERT WAR.

ONE GREAT DIFFICULTY IN THE WAY OF PEACE NEGOTIATIONS IS THAT BOTH SIDES HAVE TAKEN UP CATEGORICAL POSITIONS FROM WHICH IT IS HARD TO RECEDE.

HITLER INSISTS ON RETAINING THE FRUITS OF HIS CONQUESTS, AND THE ANGLO-FRENCH BROTHERHOOD HAS DECLARED ITS DETERMINATION TO "CRUSH HITLERISM."

TO PUT THE THING IN MORE DIRECT TERMS, EACH SIDE CLAIMS THAT THE OTHER IS OUT TO RULE EUROPE FOR ITS OWN SELFISH ENDS.

IT WOULD BE ABSURD TO SUGGEST THAT A PROBLEM OF THIS MAGNITUDE IS SUSCEPTIBLE OF EASY SETTLEMENT.

BUT ONE THING WE DO KNOW--WAR ISN'T A PANACEA. IT WON'T CURE EVERY ILL KNOWN TO MAN.

THE BLOODIEST WAR IN HISTORY WAS THE WORLD WAR, AND THAT DIDN'T SETTLE ANYTHING.

THE FEELING IS GROWING IN MANY QUARTERS THAT WE MIGHT PREVENT THE HOLOCAUST WHICH RAPIDLY IS BLANKETING UNHAPPY EUROPE, IF GERMANY AND THE ANGLO-FRENCH ALLIES EITHER WERE WISE ENOUGH OR STUPID ENOUGH TO SAY:

"LET'S CALL A TRUCE AND POOL ALL OUR ARGUMENTS AND PROBLEMS TO SEE IF WE CAN'T IRON OUT THIS BUSINESS PEACEFULLY. LET'S MAKE IT A ROUND-TABLE CONFERENCE. INVITE EVERYBODY WHO COULD POSSIBLY BE INTERESTED, AND CONSIDER EVERY INTERNATIONAL DIFFICULTY, BOTH POLITICAL AND ECONOMIC."

OF COURSE, TREMENDOUS CONCESSIONS WOULD HAVE TO BE MADE BY BOTH SIDES. WRONGS WOULD HAVE TO BE RECTIFIED.

BUT MAYBE AFTER ALL THE LAST WORD HASN'T BEEN SAID IN THE MATTER OF CONCESSIONS. CERTAINLY THAT WORD WON'T BE HEARD AMIDST THE ROAR OF ARTILLERY AND CRASHING BOMBS.

OPPONENTS OF THE IDEA OF A TRUCE TO INVESTIGATE PEACE POSSIBILITIES ARGUE THAT THE ISSUES AT STAKE WILL HAVE TO BE IRONED OUT ON THE BATTLE-FIELD SOONER OR LATER, AND NOW IS THE APPOINTED HOUR. BUT THAT ISN'T NECESSARILY TRUE.

THERE MIGHT EASILY BE MANY FAVORABLE DEVELOPMENTS DURING A TRUCE.

IN ANY EVENT, A CESSATION OF HOSTILITIES TO CONSIDER WAYS AND MEANS WOULD GIVE MILLIONS OF YOUTHS A LITTLE REPRIEVE FROM DEATH. THAT'S SOMETHING.

AND IF THE PARLEY DIDN'T SUCCEED IN SECURING REPARATIONS AND GUARANTEES FOR FUTURE SECURITY, WHY ALL PARTIES WOULD STILL BE PACKING GUNS AND COULD PROCEED TO SHOOT IT OUT.

MAYBE THE WAR HAS GONE TOO FAR FOR NEGOTIATIONS AT THIS TIME, BUT IT WOULD REQUIRE ONLY TWO DEVELOPMENTS TO GIVE US A CHANCE TO FIND OUT:

1. THE APPEARANCE OF SOME NEUTRAL OF THE HIGHEST POSSIBLE STANDING WHO WOULD BE WILLING TO RISK REBUFF IN ASKING THE COMBATTANTS TO CALL AN INTERMISSION FOR AT LEAST A PRELIMINARY CHAT.

OCT 31 1939

2. A LIMBERING-UP OF STIFF NECKS AMONG STATESMEN ON BOTH SIDES OF THE CONTROVERSY, SO THAT THEY COULD SHELVE THEIR "IRREDUCIBLE DEMANDS" FOR A BIT--AT LEAST LONG ENOUGH TO DETERMINE WHETHER THERE MIGHT NOT BE ACCEPTABLE SUBSTITUTES POSSIBLE IN SOME CASES.

HELSINGFORS—Associated Press said Finnish government announced Molotov's publication of Russian demands on Finland "created new situation" and caused delay in negotiations; Finnish officials were "shocked." United Press reported Finnish Foreign Minister Erkko said "major danger" had been created by Molotov's allegedly premature disclosure of Russian demands and that Finnish Cabinet informed general staff situation suddenly had become "most serious."

Molotov Chides Roosevelt

By The Associated Press

NOV 1 1939

MOSCOW, Oct. 31—Premier-Foreign Commissar Vyacheslav M. Molotov chided President Roosevelt today for lending Finland the "moral support" of the United States, in effect warned the Finns to come to terms and notified the world that Russia was drawing closer to Germany and Japan, once partners in the anti-Comintern pact.

In an exhaustive report on Russia's new foreign policy the Premier and Foreign Commissar told more than 1,100 Deputies attending the extraordinary joint session of the Supreme Soviet (parliament) that the United States' move to repeal its arms embargo would "intensify, aggravate and protract" the European war.

Molotov's Chief Points

Salient points in Molotov's eighty-five-minute speech were:

He berated President Roosevelt for "intervening" in Russia's negotiations with Finland "in contradiction of the United States' policy of neutrality."

He declared Russia was unable to understand Finland's refusal of a mutual assistance pact similar to those by which the Baltic states of Estonia, Latvia and Lithuania granted military, naval and air bases to the Soviet Union.

He denounced Great Britain and France for carrying on the war with Germany for the purpose, he said, of safeguarding their colonial possessions.

He said that "there can be no question of restoring the old Poland" and that it was "absurd to continue the present war" for such a cause.

He asserted that German and Russian relations were being placed on an increasingly solid and friendly basis.

He announced trade negotiations would be started with Japan, and opened the door for a move by Tokio toward stronger co-operation—possibly a non-aggression pact.

He gave no hint of any possible Soviet aims in the Balkans, but said Turkey, which refused a pact with Russia and signed one with Britain and France, must take note of the offer of co-operation to Japan. By her pact with Britain and France, he said, Turkey had moved into the "orbit of war," and he would not hazard a guess whether Turkey would come to regret it.

Turkey "In Orbit Of War"

By her pact with Britain and France, he said, Turkey had moved into the "orbit of war" and he would not hazard a guess whether Turkey would come to regret it.

Russia's dictator, Joseph Stalin, was given a tremendous ovation when he seated himself along with other Soviet leaders in front of the chairman's rostrum of the modern hall built behind the Kremlin.

After referring to the September 18 truce which ended the "sometimes very sanguinary" war on the border between Sovietized Outer Mongolia and Japanese-dominated Manchoukuo, Molotoff said the "possibility" had been established for starting Japanese-Soviet trade negotiations.

Pleased With Overtures

"For our part I must say that we look with favor on Japanese overtures" for improvement of relations, he said, but added "it is difficult as yet to judge how far we may reckon on the rapid development of this tendency."

Finds U. S. Action Unneutral

Touching on President Roosevelt's plea on Oct. 11 for Finland, Molotov said near the end of his address:

"One finds it hard to reconcile that with the American policy of neutrality. In a message to Comrade Kalinin, Chairman of the Presidium of the Supreme Soviet, Mr. Roosevelt expressed the hope that friendly and peaceful relations between the U. S. S. R. and Finland would be preserved and developed.

"One might think that matters are in better shape between the United States and, let us say, the Philippines or Cuba, who have long been demanding freedom and independence from the United States and cannot get them, than between the Soviet Union and Finland, who has long ago obtained both freedom and political independence from the Soviet Union."

Of the negotiations with Finland, he said the Soviet Union had urged Finland to agree to a pact similar to those recently concluded with Estonia, Latvia and Lithuania, which gave Russia extensive rights to station troops, warships and planes on the soil of her Baltic neighbors.

Would Protect Leningrad

Molotov said Russia "did not insist" on her position when Finland objected. He disclosed that Finnish-Soviet negotiations had turned now to matters concerning the protection of Leningrad, Russia's western metropolis.

After Finland's rejection of the proposed mutual assistance pact, Molotov said, negotiations were proceeding on Finnish cession of "several dozen kilometers" of soil on the Isthmus of Karelia, north of Leningrad, the lease of a small section of Finnish territory near the entrance to the Gulf of Finland for a Russian naval base, and the exchange of some islands in the Gulf of Finland.

He declared Russia had no designs on the strategic Aland Islands in the Gulf of Bothnia, between Finland and Sweden, and said Russia was not preparing demands on any other northern nations.

[The United Press said Molotov promised that if the "main" Russian proposals were accepted by Finland the Russians would be prepared to drop their objections to the fortification of the Aland Islands—which the Finnish and Swedish governments long have sought to accomplish—providing that the fortification was done by Finland's own national forces without participation of any other country.]

Dr. Juho Kusti Paasikivi, head of Finland's delegation to Russia, is expected here tomorrow for his third visit since Russia and Finland began negotiations. An indication of what Russia expected was given when Molotov said:

"It should be clear that, granted good will, the Finnish government will meet our proposals, which are minimal ones and which—far from militating against the national and state interests of Finland—will enhance her security and form a broad basis for further extensive development of the political and economic relations between our countries."

Referring to the war between Germany "and the Anglo-French bloc," he said that the ruling circles of Britain and France had been "lately attempting to depict themselves as champions of the democratic rights of nations against Hitlerism," and that the British government had announced that its aim in the war with Germany was nothing more nor less than "the destruction of Hitlerism."

"One may accept or reject the ideology of Hitlerism as well as any other ideological system," Molotov said. "But everybody would understand that ideology cannot be destroyed by force, that it cannot be eliminated by war. It is therefore not only senseless but criminal to wage such a fight . . . camouflaged as a fight for 'democracy'."

Molotov revealed for the first time the extent of Russian casualties in the Soviet occupation of eastern Poland. He said the Red army lost 737 men slain and 1,862 wounded. He added that 900 guns, 10,000 machine guns, 300,000 rifles, 300 planes and 1,000,000 rounds of ammunition were seized.

Turning to recent unsuccessful negotiations with Turkey, Molotov said that nation had "entered the orbit of developing European war" by concluding a pact of mutual assistance with Great Britain and France.

"This is highly pleasing to both Great Britain and France," he said. "Whether Turkey will not come to regret it we shall not try to guess."

Molotov disclosed that the subject at issue during the protracted negotiations with Turkey in Moscow was a pact for mutual assistance limited to the regions of the Black Sea and the Straits.

"The U. S. S. R.," he said, "considered, firstly, that the conclusion of such a pact could not induce it to actions which might draw it into armed conflict with Germany; secondly, that the U. S. S. R. should have a guaranty that, in view of the war danger, Turkey would not allow warships of the non-Black Sea powers through the Bosporus to the Black Sea. Turkey rejected both these stipulations of the U. S. S. R., and thereby made conclusion of the pact impossible."

The Premier-Foreign Commissar said Russia was confident the policy of peace which she had been "consistently pursuing holds out the best prospects for the future . . . and this policy we will pursue in the region of the Black Sea, too."

Molotov next turned to Japan and said the agreement concluded in Moscow on Sept. 15 "liquidated" the Russian-Japanese conflict on the Mongolia-Manchukuo border and was the first step toward improvement of relations between the two nations. He said the next step would be formation of a joint frontier commission to examine disputed portions of the border.

"In addition, the possibility has been established of starting Soviet-Japanese trade negotiations," he said.

Molotov's report was approved unanimously by the delegates.

Russia's Main Proposals

MOSCOW, Oct. 31 (AP).—Here are the main proposals made by Soviet Russia to Finland as outlined today by Premier - Foreign Commissar Molotov:

NOV 1 1939

1. A mutual assistance pact which Finland rejected as contradictory to her neutral position and which Russia did not press.

2. To redraw the Soviet-Finnish border on the Isthmus of Karelia "several down kilometers" further to the north of Leningrad.

3. For Finland to lease to the Soviet government "for a definite term" a small section of Finnish territory near the entrance to the Gulf of Finland for the purpose of establishing a Russian naval base.

4. The exchange of "certain islands" in the Gulf of Finland.

In return, Russia offered Finland:

1. A part of Soviet Karelia twice the size of the Finnish territory ceded to Russia under the border change.

2. Withdrawal of Soviet objections to refortification of the Aland Islands, provided Finland alone did so without help of any other power.

3. Demilitarization of fortified sections along the Finnish-Soviet frontier.

HELSINKI'S REJECTION DISCLOSED BY RUSSIAN

NOV 1 1939

Soviet Premier Charges That the Allies Are Balking Efforts to Bring About Peace — Says Poland Will Never Rise Again.

MOSCOW, Oct. 31 (A. P.).—Premier-Foreign Commissar Vyacheslav Molotov today accused President Roosevelt of mixing in Soviet Russia's negotiations with Finland "in contradiction of the United States' policy of neutrality."

Molotov, in a sweeping review of Russia's foreign policy, made his accusation before an extraordinary session of the Russian Parliament while disclosing that the Soviet Union had asked and Finland had rejected a pact similar to those recently concluded with Estonia, Latvia and Lithuania, which gave Russia extensive rights to station troops, warships and planes on the soil of her Baltic neighbors.

"We did not insist," when the Finnish Government said such a pact would "contradict its neutrality," Molotov said, adding that the Finnish-Soviet negotiations since had turned to considerations for "safeguarding the security" of Russia.

Takes Fling at U. S.

In a brief reference to American affairs he said that lifting of the arms embargo "may prolong and sharpen the war."

Concerning the Finnish-Soviet negotiations he said:

"Even the President of the United States," he said, "has found it possible to mix in this question, which is in contradiction of the United States policy of neutrality.

"As if things were better there!

"The Philippines have not gotten independence while in 1917 we gave the Finns independence and sovereignty."

[On October 11 President Roosevelt sent a note to Moscow expressing "hope that the Soviet Union will make no demands on Finland which are inconsistent with maintenance and development of amicable and peaceful relations between the two countries, and the independence of each." President Kalinin replied that negotiations between Finland and Russia were solely for "consolidation of the reciprocal relations" between the two Powers.]

Molotov reported that Russia was ready for "vital improvement" of relations with Japan and said that the initiative was up to Japan. He disclosed, however, that "trade talks between the two nations are imminent."

Russia's aims were outlined by Molotov as:

"1. A free hand.

"2. Continued neutrality.

"3. Not to help spread war, but to help stop it."

Speaks for 85 Minutes.

"We hope we will be able to do it," he said in an eighty-five-minute speech that stressed friendly Soviet relations with Germany and accused Great Britain and France of pursuing the war to protect their colonial possessions.

Laurence A. Steinhardt, the United States ambassador, was absent, but the British envoy, Sir William Seeds, heard the bitter criticism of the allies' war aims.

Touching on negotiations with Turkey, which recently ended without agreement, Molotov said:

"Turkey has made pacts with Britain and France, who are at war. We must take notice. It is not the same policy which the Soviet Union follows."

In connection with negotiations with Finland, Molotov disclosed that Russia had offered the Finns an exchange of territory, designed to give Leningrad more protection, but that Finland had rejected the offer.

"We are especially interested in the Gulf of Finland," he said, pointing out that Leningrad lies less than thirty miles from the Finnish frontier.

He denied that Russia was interested in the Aaland Islands, which lie strategically between Finland and Sweden, at the mouth of the Gulf of Bothnia.

"Our proposals do not contradict an independent Finland," he asserted.

No Restoration of Poland.

Rumors that Soviet demands on other northern States were being prepared were dismissed by Molotov as unworthy even of denial.

"We want a mutual aid pact approximately along the lines of those with other Baltic States," he said.

Molotov declared that "there can be no question of restoring Poland" and that it was "absurd to continue the present war" for such a cause.

He declared that "although the governments of Britain and France understand this, they do not want the war stopped and peace restored."

He accused the allies of "seeking new excuses for continuing war with Germany" and scoffed at the British and French ruling classes which he said "have lately been attempting to depict themselves as champions of the democratic rights of nations against Hitlerism."

The Premier for the first time disclosed the officially admitted Russian casualties incurred in occupying the eastern half of Poland —737 dead and 1,862 wounded. Two-thirds of the casualties occurred in taking over the Western Ukraine, he said, adding that 300 planes were among the large quantities of war supplies captured.

Surveying the international situation, Molotov said that Great Britain and France had declared "something in the nature of an ideological war on Germany, reminiscent of the religious wars of olden times."

"Is it back to the middle ages, to the days of religious wars, superstition and cultural deterioration that the ruling classes of Britain and France want to drag us?" he asked.

"There is absolutely no justification for a war of this kind."

Scores War on Hitlerism.

He said that the war which has started is "fraught with even greater danger for the peoples of Europe and the whole world.

"One may accept or reject the ideology of Hitlerism as well as any other ideological system. That is a matter of political views. But everybody should understand that ideology cannot be destroyed by force, that it cannot be eliminated by war.

"It is therefore not only senseless, but criminal to wage such a war as a war for 'the destruction of Hitlerism' camouflaged as a fight for 'democracy.'

"And indeed you cannot give the name of a fight for democracy to such action as the banning of the Communist party in France, arrests of communist deputies of the French Parliament, or the curtailing of political liberties in England or the unremitting national oppression in India."

Developments of the European scene have given new connotations to old terms, he said, and outdated old political formulas.

Molotov said that now "Germany is in the position of a state which is striving for the earliest termination of the war and for peace, while Britain and France, which but yesterday were declaiming against aggression, are in favor of continuing the war."

Molotov asserted the war "is not a fight for democracy, but something else of which these gentlemen do not speak openly, . . . their profoundly material interests as mighty colonial Powers.

Sees Battle for Colonies.

"It is the fear of Germany's claim to these colonial possessions that is at the bottom of the present war of England and France with a Germany who has grown substantially stronger lately as a result of the collapse of the Versailles treaty.

"It is the fear of losing world supremacy that dictates to the ruling classes of Great Britain and France the policy of fomenting war with Germany.

"Thus the imperialist character of this war is obvious to anyone who wants to face the realities.

"One can see from all this who is interested in this war. . . . Certainly not the working class. This war promises nothing to the working class but bloody sacrifice and hardships."

Turning to Russia's own position in the changing international picture, Molotov said that "thanks to our consistently pursued peaceful foreign policy, we have succeeded in considerably strengthening our position and the international weight of the Soviet Union."

Russia's neutrality stand was "in no wise contradicted" by the entry of Soviet troops into Poland to participate in partition of that State, he said.

Defends March Into Poland.

"Our troops entered the territory of Poland only after the Polish State had collapsed and actually ceased to exist. Naturally we could not remain neutral toward these facts, since as the result of these event we were confronted with urgent problems concerning the security of our State."

The Supreme Soviet was given a survey of important changes in the international situation during the last two months by Molotov, who said these changes applied "above all to Europe but also to countries far beyond the confines of Europe."

He dwelt first on the "changes that have taken place in the relations of the Soviet Union and Germany since conclusion of the Soviet-German non-aggression pact"—which came a few days before the outbreak of the European war.

In Attack on Poland.

"Instead of enmity, which was fostered in every way by certain European Powers, we now have a rapprochement and establishment of friendly relations between the U. S. S. R. and Germany," he said.

Molotov declared "this radical change in relations between the Soviet Union and Germany, the two biggest States in Europe, was bound to have an effect on the entire international situation."

He said his previous estimate of the importance of the Soviet-German non-aggression treaty had been confirmed by subsequent events and paid particular attention to "the collapse of Poland."

"One swift blow to Poland, first by the German Army and then by the Red army, and nothing was left of this ugly offspring of the Versailles Treaty which had existed by oppressing non-Polish nationalities," he said.

He added that Poland's policy of "unprincipled maneuvering between Germany and the U. S. S. R. and playing one off against the other" had proved unsound.

Meanwhile Russia oiled its legislative machinery today to annex the Polish Ukraine and White Russian areas.

The fifth extraordinary session of the Supreme Soviet was expected to give quick approval to taking over the two provinces returned to Russia by the German-Russian partition of Poland.

London Delays Comment.

LONDON, Oct. 31 (A. P.).—British officials tonight refused to comment on Russian Premier Molotov's speech until they had had time to study it in detail.

An early impression in diplomatic circles, however, was that the speech did not greatly alter the position of the warring nations and was "mainly for internal consumption."

Text of Premier-Foreign Commissar Molotoff's Report on Foreign Affairs to the Supreme Soviet

By The Associated Press.

MOSCOW, Oct. 31—Following is the text as made public by Tass, official Soviet news agency, of the report of Vyacheslaff M. Molotoff, chairman of the Council of Peoples Commissars of the Soviet Union and Peoples Commissar for Foreign Affairs, at the extraordinary fifth session of the Supreme Soviet:

Comrade Deputies:

There have been important changes in the international situation during the past two months. This applies above all to Europe, but also to countries far beyond the confines of Europe. In this connection mention must be made of three principal circumstances which are of decisive importance.

First, mention should be made of the changes that have taken place in the relations between the Soviet Union and Germany. Since the conclusion of the Soviet-German non-aggression pact on Aug. 23, an end has been put to the abnormal relations that have existed between the Soviet Union and Germany for a number of years.

Instead of the enmity that was fostered in every way by certain European powers, we now have a rapprochement and the establishment of friendly relations between the U.S.S.R. and Germany. Further improvement of these new relations, good relations, found its reflection in the German-Soviet treaty on amity and frontier signed in Moscow Sept. 28.

This radical change in relations between the Soviet Union and Germany, the two biggest States in Europe, was bound to have its affect on the entire international situation. Furthermore, events have entirely confirmed the estimate of the political significance of the Soviet-German rapprochement given at the last session of the Supreme Soviet.

View of Poland's Collapse

Second, mention must be made of such a fact as the defeat of Poland in war and the collapse of the Polish State. The ruling circles of Poland boasted quite a lot about the "stability" of their State and the "might" of their army. However, one swift blow to Poland, first by the German Army and then by the Red Army, and nothing was left of this ugly offspring of the Versailles treaty which had existed by oppressing non-Polish nationalities.

The "traditional policy" of unprincipled manoeuvring between Germany and the U.S.S.R., and the playing of one against the other has proved unsound and has suffered complete bankruptcy.

Third, it must be admitted that the big war that has flared up in Europe has caused radical changes in the entire international situation. It is a war begun as a war between Germany and Poland and turned into a war between Germany on the one hand and Britain and France on the other.

The war between Germany and Poland ended quickly owing to the utter bankruptcy of the Polish leaders. As we know, neither the British nor the French guarantees were of help to Poland. To this day, in fact, nobody knows what these "guarantees" were.

The war between Germany and the Anglo-French bloc is only in its first stage and has not yet been really developed. It is nevertheless clear that a war like this was bound to cause radical changes in the situation in Europe and not only in Europe. In connection with these important changes in the international situation, certain old formulas, which we employed but recently and to which many people are so accustomed, are now obviously out of date and unapplicable.

We must be quite clear on this point so as to avoid making gross errors in judging the new political situation that has developed in Europe.

Sees the Positions Reversed

We know, for example, that in the past few months such concepts as "aggression" and "aggressor" have acquired a new concrete connotation, a new meaning. It is not hard to understand that we can no longer employ these concepts in the sense we did, say, three or four months ago.

Today, as far as the European great powers are concerned, Germany is in the position of a State that is striving for the earliest termination of the war and for peace, while Britain and France, which but yesterday were declaiming against aggression, are in favor of continuing the war and are opposed to the conclusion of peace. The roles, as you see, are changing.

Efforts of the British and French Governments to justify their new position on the grounds of their undertakings to Poland are, of course, obviously unsound. Everybody realizes that there can be no question of restoring the old Poland.

It is, therefore, absurd to continue the present war under the flag of the restoration of the former Polish State. Although the governments of Britain and France understand this they do not want the war stopped and peace restored but are seeking new excuses for continuing the war with Germany.

The ruling circles of Britain and France have been lately attempting to depict themselves as champions of the democratic rights of nations against Hitlerism and the British Government has announced that its aim in the war with Germany is nothing more nor less than "the destruction of Hitlerism." It amounts to this, that the British, and with them the French supporters of the war, have declared something in the nature of an "ideological" war on Germany, reminiscent of the religious wars of olden times.

In fact, religious wars against heretics and religious dissenters were once the fashion. As we know, they led to direst results for the masses, to economic ruin and the cultural deterioration of nations.

These wars could have no other outcome. But they were wars of the Middle Ages. Is it back to the Middle Ages, to the days of religious wars, superstition and cultural deterioration that the ruling classes of Britain and France want to drag us?

In any case under an "ideological" flag has now been started a war of even greater dimensions and fraught with even greater danger for the peoples of Europe and the whole world. But there is absolutely no justification for a war of this kind. One may accept or reject the ideology of Hitlerism as well as any other ideological system; that is a matter of political views.

But everybody would understand that an ideology cannot be destroyed by force, that it cannot be eliminated by war. It is, therefore, not only senseless but criminal to wage such a war as the war for "the destruction of Hitlerism," camouflaged as a fight for "democracy." And, indeed, you cannot give the name of a fight for democracy to such action as the banning of the Communist party in France, arrests of the Communist Deputies in the French Parliament, or the curtailing of political liberties in England or the unremitting national oppression in India, etc.

Is it not clear that the aim of the present war in Europe is not what it is proclaimed to be in the official statements intended for the public in France and England. That is, it is not a fight for democracy but something else of which these gentlemen do not speak openly.

"Real Cause" of the War

The real cause of the Anglo-French war with Germany was not that Britain and France had vowed to restore old Poland and not, of course, that they decided to undertake a fight for democracy. The ruling circles of Britain and France have, of course, other and more actual motives for going to war with Germany. These motives do not lie in any ideology but in their profoundly material interests as mighty colonial powers.

Great Britain, with a population of 47,000,000, possesses colonies with a population of 480,000,000. The colonial empire of France, whose population does not exceed 42,000,000, embraces a population of 72,000,000 in the French colonies. The possession of these colonies, which makes possible the exploitation of hundreds of millions of people, is the foundation of the world supremacy of Great Britain and France. It is the fear of Germany's claim to these colonial possessions that is at the bottom of the present war of England and France with Germany, who has grown substantially stronger lately as the result of the collapse of the Versailles treaty.

It is fear of losing world supremacy that dictates to the ruling circles of Great Britain and France the policy of fomenting war with Germany. Thus the imperialist character of this war is obvious to any one who wants to face realities and does not close his eyes to facts.

Only Sacrifices by Workers

One can see from all this who is interested in this war which is being waged for world supremacy. Certainly not the working class. This war promises nothing to the working class but bloody sacrifice and hardships.

Well, now, judge for yourselves whether the meaning of such concepts as "aggression" and "aggressor" has changed recently or not. It is not difficult to see that the use of these words in their old meaning, that is, the meaning attached to them before the recent decisive turn in the political relations between the Soviet Union and Germany and before the outbreak of the great imperialist war in Europe, can only create confusion in the people's minds and must inevitably lead to erroneous conclusions.

To avoid this we must not allow an uncritical attitude toward the old concepts, which are no longer applicable in the new international situation. That has been the course of international affairs in the recent period.

I shall now pass the changes that have taken place in the international position of the Soviet Union itself. Here the changes have been no mean ones; but, if we confine ourselves to essentials, the following must be admitted, namely, that thanks to our consistently pursued peaceful foreign policy we have succeeded in considerably strengthening our position and the international weight of the Soviet Union.

As I have said, our relations with Germany have radically improved. Here development has proceeded along the line of strengthening our friendly relations, extending our practical cooperation and rendering Germany political support in her efforts for peace.

Stresses Neutrality in War

The non-aggression pact concluded between the Soviet Union and Germany bound us to maintain neutrality in case of Germany's participating in war. We have consistently pursued this course, which was in no wise contradicted by the entry of our troops into territory of the former Poland, which began Sept. 17.

It will be sufficient to recall the fact that on that same day, Sept. 17, the Soviet Government sent a special note to all the States with which it maintains diplomatic relations, declaring that the U.S.S.R. will continue its policy of neutrality in its relations with them.

It is known that our troops entered the territory of Poland only after the Polish State had collapsed and actually ceased to exist. Naturally, we could not remain neutral toward these facts, since as a result of these events we were confronted with urgent problems concerning the security of our State.

Furthermore, the Soviet Government could not but reckon with the exceptional situation created for our brothers in Western Ukraine and Western White Russia, who had been abandoned to their fate as a result of the collapse of Poland.

Subsequent events fully confirmed that the new Soviet-German relations are based on the firm foundation of mutual interests. After Red Army units entered the territory of the former Polish State serious questions arose relating to the delimitation of the State interests of the U.S.S.R. and Germany. These questions were promptly settled by mutual agreement.

The German-Soviet treaty on amity and frontier between the U.S.S.R. and Germany, concluded at the end of September, has consolidated our relations with the German State. Relations between Germany and the other West European bourgeois States have in the past two decades been determined primarily by Germany's efforts to break the fetters of the Versailles treaty, whose authors were Great Britain and France with the active participation of the United States. This, in the long run, led to the present war in Europe.

Basis of Relations With Reich

The relations between the Soviet Union and Germany have been based on a different foundation which had no interest whatever in perpetuating the post-war Versailles system. We have always held that a strong Germany is an indispensable condition for a durable peace in Europe.

It would be ridiculous to think that Germany could be "simply put out of commission" and struck off the books. The powers that cherish this foolish and dangerous dream ignore the deplorable experience of Versailles, do not realize Germany's increased might, and fail to see that any attempt at repetition of Versailles in the present state of international affairs, which radically differ from that of 1914, may end in disaster for them.

We have consistently striven to improve our relations with Germany and have wholeheartedly welcomed similar strivings in Germany. Today our relations with the German State are based on our friendly relations, on our readiness to support Germany's efforts for peace and at the same time on a desire to contribute in every way to the development of Soviet-German economic relations to the mutual benefit of both States.

Special mention should be made of the fact that the change that has taken place in Soviet-German political relations has created favorable conditions for the development of Soviet-German economic relations. Recent economic negotiations carried on by the German delegation in Moscow and the present negotiations carried on by the Soviet economic delegation in Germany are preparing a broad basis for the development of trade between the Soviet Union and Germany.

Permit me, now, to dwell on events directly connected with the entry of our troops into the territory of the former Polish State. There is no need for me to describe the course of these events. They have been reported in detail in our press and you, Comrade Deputies, are well acquainted with the facts.

I shall only dwell on what is most essential. There is no need to prove that at the moment when the Polish State was in a state of complete collapse our government was obliged to extend a helping hand to our brother Ukrainians and White Russians inhabiting the territory of Western Ukraine and Western White Russia.

Greeted as "Liberators"

That is what it did. When the Red Army marched into these regions it was greeted with the general sympathy of the Ukranian and White Russian population who welcomed our troops as liberators from the yoke of the gentry, from the yoke of the Polish landlords and capitalists.

As the Red Army advanced through these districts there were serious encounters in some places between our troops and Polish troops and consequently there were casualties. These casualties were as follows:

On the White Russian front, counting both commanders and rank and file of the Red Army, there were 246 killed and 503 wounded, or a total of 749.

On the Ukrainian front there were 491 commanders and rank and file killed and 1,359 wounded or a total of 1,850.

Thus the total casualties of the Red Army on the territory of western White Russia and western Ukraine were 737 killed and 1,862 wounded, or a total of 1,599.

As for our trophies in Poland, they consisted of more than 900 guns, more than 10,000 machine-guns, more than 300,000 rifles, more than 150,000,000 rifle cartridges, more than 1,000,000 artillery shells, about 300 airplanes, etc.

The territory that has passed to the U. S. S. R. is equal in area to a large European State. Thus the area of Western White Russia is 108,000 square kilometers and its population is 4,800,000. The area of Western Ukraine is 88,000 square kilometers and its population 8,000,000. Hence together the territory of Western Ukraine and Western White Russia that has passed to us has an area of 196,000 square kilometers and a population of about 13,000,000 of whom more than 7,000,000 are Ukrainians, and more than 3,000,000 White Russians, more than 1,000,000 Poles and more than 1,000,000 Jews.

The political significance of these events can scarcely be overrated. All the reports from Western Ukraine and Western White Russia show the population greeted their liberation from the yoke of the gentry with indescribable enthusiasm and rapturously hailed this great new victory of the Soviet system.

The recent elections to the National Assemblies of Western Ukraine and Western White Russia, conducted for the first time in the history of those territories on a basis of universal direct equal suffrage and secret ballot, have shown that at least nine-tenths of the population of these regions have long been ready to rejoin the Soviet Union. The decisions of the National Assemblies in Lwow and Byelostok, with which we are all now familiar, testify to the complete unanimity of the people's representatives on political questions.

I shall now pass on to our relations with the Baltic countries. As you know, important changes have taken place in this sphere as well.

NOV 1 1939

The relations of the Soviet Union with Estonia, Latvia and Lithuania are based on peace treaties concluded with the respective countries in 1920. By these treaties Estonia, Latvia and Lithuania became independent States, and ever since then the Soviet Union has invariably pursued a friendly policy toward these newly created small States.

This was the reflection of a radical difference between the policy of the Soviet Government and the policy of Czarist Russia, which brutally oppressed the small nations, denied them every opportunity of independent national and political development and left them with the most painful memories of it.

It must be admitted that the experience of the past two decades of the development of Soviet-Estonian, Soviet-Latvian and Soviet-Lithuanian friendly relations created favorable conditions for the further consolidation of political and all other relations between thhe U.S.S.R. and its Baltic neighbors. This has been revealed, too, in the recent diplomatic negotiations with representatives of Latvia, Estonia and Lithuania and in treaties that were signed in Moscow as a result of these negotiations.

As you know, the Soviet Union has concluded pacts of mutual assistance with Estonia, Latvia and Lithuania that are of major political significance. The principles underlying all these pacts are identical. They are based on mutual assistance between the Soviet Union, on the one hand, and Estonia, Latvia and Lithuania on the other, and they include military assistance in case any of these countries is attacked.

Defense Bases Are Obtained

In view of the special geographic position of these countries, which are, in a way, approaches to the U.S.S.R., particularly from the Baltic, these pacts allow the Soviet Union to maintain naval bases and airfields in specified parts of Estonia and Latvia, and, in the case of Lithuania, the pact provides for defense of Lithuanian borders jointly with the Soviet Union.

The creation of these Soviet naval bases and airfields on territory of Estonia, Latvia and Lithuania, and the stationing of a certain number of Red Army units to protect these bases and airfields, insure reliable defense bases not only for the Soviet Union but also for the Baltic States themselves and thereby contribute to the preservation of peace, which is to the interest of our peoples.

Our recent diplomatic negotiations with Estonia, Latvia and Lithuania have shown that we have sufficient confidence in each other and the proper understanding of the necessity of adopting these measures of military defense in the interests both of the Soviet Union and of these States themselves. The negotiations have fully revealed the anxiety of the parties concerned to preserve peace and safeguard the security of our peoples, who are engaged in peaceful labor.

It was all this that insured a successful completion of the negotiations and the conclusion of the pacts of mutual assistance which are of great historical importance.

The special character of these mutual assistance pacts in no way implies any interference by the Soviet Union in the affairs of Estonia, Latvia or Lithuania, as some foreign newspapers are trying to make out. On the contrary, all these pacts of mutual assistance strictly stipulate the inviolability of the sovereignty of the signatory States and the principle of non-interference in each other's affairs.

These pacts are based on mutual respect for the political, social and economic structure of the contracting parties, and are designed to strengthen the basis for peaceful, neighborly cooperation between our peoples. We stand for the scrupulous and punctilious observance of pacts on a basis of complete reciprocity, and we declare that all nonsense about sovietizing the Baltic countries is only to the interest of our common enemies and of all anti-Soviet provocateurs. In view of the improvement in our political relations with Estonia, Latvia and Lithuania, the Soviet Union has gone a long way to meet the economic needs of these States and has concluded trade agreements with them.

Thanks to these economic agreements, trade with the Baltic countries will increase several fold, and there are favorable prospects for its further growth. At a time when all European countries, including neutral States, are experiencing tremendous trade difficulties, these economic agreements between the U. S. S. R. and Estonia, Latvia and Lithuania are of great and positive importance to them.

Thus the rapprochement between the U. S. S. R. on the one hand and Estonia, Latvia and Lithuania on the other will contribute to more rapid progress of agriculture, industry and transport and in general to the national well-being of our Baltic neighbors.

NOV 1 1939

The principles of Soviet policy toward small countries have been demonstrated with particular force by the treaty providing for the transfer of the city of Vilna and the Vilna region to the Lithuanian Republic. Thereby the Lithuanian State, with its population of 2,500,000, considerably extends its territory, increases its population by 550,000 and receives the city of Vilna, whose population is almost double that of the present Lithuanian capital.

Vilna Transfer Explained

The Soviet Union agreed to transfer the city of Vilna to the Lithuanian Republic not because Vilna has a predominantly Lithuanian population. No, the majority of the inhabitants of Vilna are non-Lithuanian. But the Soviet Government took into consideration the fact that the city of Vilna, which was forcibly wrested from Lithuania by Poland, ought to belong to Lithuania as a city with which are associated on the one hand the historical past of the Lithuanian State and on the other hand the national aspirations of the Lithuanian people.

It has been pointed out in the foreign press that there has never been a case in world history of a big country's handing over such a big city to a small State of its own free will. All the more strikingly, therefore, does this act of the Soviet State demonstrate its good-will.

Our relations with Finland are of a special character. This is to be explained chiefly by the fact that in Finland there is a greater amount of outside influence on the part of third powers. An impartial person must admit, however, that the same problems concerning the security of the Soviet Union and particularly of Leningrad which figured in the negotiations with Estonia also figure in the negotiations with Finland. In a certain sense it may be said that in this case the problem of the Soviet Union's security is even more acute inasmuch as Leningrad, which after Moscow is the most important city of the Soviet State, is situated at a distance of only thirty-two kilometers from the Finnish border. This means that the distance of Leningrad from the border of a foreign State is less than that required for modern long-range guns to shell it. On the other hand, the approaches to Leningrad from the sea also depend to a large extent on whether Finland, which owns the entire northern shore of the Gulf of Finland and all the islands along the central part of the Gulf of Finland, is hostile or friendly toward the Soviet Union. In view of this, as well as in view of the present situation in Europe, it may be expected that Finland will display necessary understanding.

Basis of Finnish Relations

What has been the basis of the relations between the Soviet Union and Finland during all these years? As you know, the basis of these relations has been the peace treaty of 1920, which was on the pattern of our treaties with our other Baltic neighbors. Of its own free will the Soviet Union insured the separated and independent existence of Finland.

There can be no doubt that only the Soviet Government, which recognizes the principle of the free development of nationalities, could make such a step. It must be said that none but the Soviet Government in Russia could tolerate the existence of an independent Finland at the very gates of Leningrad.

This is eloquently testified by Finland's experience with the "democratic" government of Kerensky and Tsereteli, not to mention the government of Prince Lvov and Milyukoff, let alone the Czarist government. Doubtless this important circumstance might serve as a sound premise for the improvement in Soviet-Finnish relations, in which, as may be seen, Finland is no less interested than the Soviet Union.

Soviet-Finnish negotiations were begun recently on our initiative. What is the subject of these negotiations? It is not difficult to see that in the present state of international affairs, when in the center of Europe war is developing between some of the biggest States, a war fraught with great surprises and dangers for all European States, the Soviet Union is not only entitled but obliged to adopt serious measures to increase its security.

It is natural for the Soviet Government to display particular concern with regard to the Gulf of Finland, which is the approach to Leningrad from the sea, and also with regard to the land border which hangs over Leningrad some thirty kilometers away.

I must remind you that the population of Leningrad has grown to 3,500,000, which almost equals the entire population of Finland, amounting to 3,650,000.

Reported Demands Denied

There is scarcely any need to dwell on the tales spread by the foreign press about the Soviet Union's proposals in the negotiations with Finland. Some assert the U.S.S.R. "demands" the city of Vyborg and the northern part of Lake Ladoga. Let us say for our part that this is a sheer fabrication and lie.

Others assert that the U.S.S.R. demands the cession of the Aland Islands. This is also a fabrication and lie.

There is also nonsensical talk about some allegedly existing claims of the Soviet Union against Sweden and Norway. But these irresponsible lies are not even worth refuting.

Actually our proposals in the negotiations with Finland are extremely modest and are confined to that minimum without which it is impossible to safeguard the security of the U.S.S.R. and to put on a firm footing the friendly relations with Finland.

We have begun negotiations with Finnish representatives. [Juho] Paasikivi and [V. A.] Tanner were sent for this purpose by the Finnish Government to Moscow, proposing the conclusion of a Soviet-Finnish pact of mutual assistance approximately on the lines of our pacts of mutual assistance with other Baltic States, but inasmuch as the Finnish Government declared that the conclusion of such a pact would contradict its position of absolute neutrality we did not insist on our proposal.

We then proposed that we proceed to discuss concrete questions in which we are interested from the standpoint of safeguarding the security of the U.S.S.R. and especially of Leningrad, both from the sea—in the Gulf of Finland—and from the land in view of the extreme proximity of the border to Leningrad.

We have proposed that an agreement be reached to shift the Soviet-Finnish border on the Isthmus of Karelia several dozen kilometers further to the north of Leningrad. In exchange for this we have proposed to transfer to Finland part of Soviet Karelia double the size of the territory which Finland is to transfer to the Soviet Union.

Proposal for Naval Base

We have further proposed that an agreement be reached for Finland to lease to us for a definite term a small section of her territory near the entrance to the Gulf of Finland where we might establish a naval base. With a Soviet naval base at the southern entrance to the Gulf of Finland, namely at Baltic Port, as provided for by the Soviet-Estonian pact of mutual assistance, the establishment of a naval base at the northern entrance to the Gulf of Finland would fully safeguard the Gulf of Finland against hostile attempts on the part of other states.

We have no doubt that the establishment of such a base would not only be in the interests of the Soviet Union but also of the security of Finland herself.

Our other proposals, in particular our proposal as regards the exchange of certain islands in the Gulf of Finland as well as parts of the Rybachi and Sredni peninsulas for territory twice as large in Soviet Karelia evidently do not meet with any objections on the part of the Finnish Government. Differences with regard to certain of our proposals have not yet been overcome, and concessions made by Finland in this respect, as for instance the cession of part of the territory of the Isthmus of Karelia obviously do not meet the purpose.

We have further made a number of new steps to meet Finland half way. We declared that if our main proposals are accepted we shall be prepared to drop our objections to the fortification of the Aland Islands, on which the Finnish Government has been insisting for a long time. We only made one stipulation. We said that we would drop our objection to fortification of the Aland Islands on condition that the fortification is done by Finland's own national forces without the participation of any third country, inasmuch as the U.S.S.R. will take no part in it.

We have also proposed to Finland to disarm the fortified zones along the entire Soviet-Finnish border on the Isthmus of Karelia, which should fully accord with the interests of Finland. We have further expressed our desire to reinforce the Soviet-Finnish pact of non-aggression with additional mutual guarantees.

Lastly, consolidation of Soviet-Finnish political relations would undoubtedly form a splendid basis for the rapid development of economic relations between the two countries. Thus we are ready to meet Finland in matters in which she is particularly interested.

Doubts Finland Will Balk

In view of all this we do not think that Finland will seek a pretext to frustrate the proposed agreement. This would not be in line with the policy of friendly Soviet-Finnish relations and would, of course, work to the serious detriment of Finland. We are certain that Finnish leading circles will properly understand the importance of consolidating friendly Soviet-Finnish relations and that Finnish public men will not yield to anti-Soviet influence or instigation from any quarter.

I must, however, inform you that even the President of the United States of America considered it proper to intervene in these matters, which one finds it hard to reconcile with the American policy of neutrality. In a message to Comrade Kalinin, chairman of the Presidium of the Supreme Soviet, dated Oct. 12, Mr. Roosevelt expressed the hope that the friendly and peaceful relations between the U.S.S.R. and Finland would be preserved and developed.

One might think that matters are in better shape between the United States and, let us say the Philippines or Cuba, who have long been demanding freedom and independence from the United States and cannot get them, than between the Soviet Union and Finland, who has long ago obtained both freedom and political independence from the Soviet Union.

Comrade Kalinin replied to Mr. Roosevelt's message as follows: "I consider it proper to remind you, Mr. President, that the political independence of the Republic of Finland was recognized, by free will of the Soviet Government, on Dec. 31, 1917, and that the sovereignty of Finland was secured to her by the treaty of peace between the R.S.F.S.R. and Finland of Oct. 14, 1920. These acts of the Soviet Government defined the fundamental principles governing the relations between the Soviet Union and Finland. It is in conformity with these principles that the present negotiations between the Soviet Government and the Government of Finland are being conducted. Contrary to the tendentious version, spread by circles who are evidently not interested in European peace, the sole object of these negotiations is to consolidate relations between the Soviet Union and Finland and to strengthen the peaceful cooperation of the two countries in the matter of safeguarding the security of the Soviet Union and Finland."

After this plain reply by the chairman of the presidium of the Supreme Soviet of the U. S. S. R. it should be quite clear that, granted good will, the Finnish Government will meet our proposals, which are minimal ones and which—far from militating against the national and State interests of Finland—will enhance her security and form a broad basis for further extensive development of the political and economic relations between our countries.

Negotiations With Turkey

A few words about our negotiations with Turkey. All kinds of tales are being spread abroad regarding the substance of these negotiations. Some allege that the U. S. S. R. demanded cession of the district of Ardagan and Kars. Let us say for our part that this is a sheer fabrication and lie.

Others allege that the U. S. S. R. has demanded changes in the international convention concluded at Montreux and a privileged position as regards the Straits. That is also a fabrication and lie.

As a matter of fact the subject at issue was the conclusion of a bilateral pact of mutual assistance limited to the regions of the Black Sea and the Straits. The U. S. S. R. considered: First, that the conclusion of such a pact could not induce it to actions which might draw it into armed conflict with Germany; second, that the U. S. S. R. should have a guarantee that in view of a war danger Turkey would not allow warships of non-Black Sea powers through the Bosporus to the Black Sea.

Turkey rejected both these stipulations of the U. S. S. R. and thereby made the conclusion of a pact impossible.

The Soviet-Turkish negotiations did not lead to the conclusion of a pact but they did help to clear up or at least to explore a number of political questions that interest us. In the present international situation it is particularly important to know the true face and policy of States, relations with whom are of serious importance.

Many things pertaining to the policy of Turkey have now become much clearer to us, both as a result of the Moscow negotiations and as a result of recent acts of the Turkish Government in the sphere of foreign policy. As you know, the government of Turkey has preferred to tie up its destinies with a definite group of European powers, belligerents in the present war. It has concluded a pact of mutual assistance with Great Britain and France, who for the past two months have been waging war on Germany.

Turkey has thereby definitely discarded her cautious policy of neutrality and has entered the orbit of the developing European war. This is highly pleasing to both Great Britain and France, who are bent on drawing as many neutral countries as possible into their sphere of war.

Whether Turkey will not come to regret it we shall not try to guess. It is only incumbent on us to take note of these new factors in the foreign policy of our neighbor and to keep a watchful eye on the developments of events.

If Turkey has now to some extent tied her hands and has taken the hazardous line of supporting one group of belligerents, the Turkish Government evidently realizes the responsibility it has thereby assumed. But that is not the foreign policy the Soviet Union is pursuing, thanks to which it has secured not a few successes in the sphere of foreign policy.

The Soviet Union prefers to keep its hands free in the future as well, to go on consistently pursuing its policy of neutrality and not only not to help the spread of war but to help strengthen whatever strivings there are for the restoration of peace.

We are confident that the policy of peace the U.S.S.R. has been consistently pursuing holds out the best prospects for the future as well. And this policy we will pursue in the region of the Black Sea, too, confident that we shall fully insure its proper application as the interests of the Soviet Union and of the States friendly to the Soviet Union demand.

Relations With Japan

Now, as regards our relations with Japan. There has recently been certain improvement in Soviet-Japanese relations. The symptoms of this improvement have been observable since the recent conclusion of the Moscow agreement, as the result of which the well-known conflict on the Mongolian-Manchurian border was liquidated.

For several months, or, to be more precise, in May, June, July and August and up to the middle of September, hostilities took place in the Nomanhan district in the vicinity of the Mongolian-Manchurian border between Japanese-Manchurian and Soviet-Mongolian troops.

During this period all arms, including airplanes and heavy artillery, were engaged in action and the battles were sometimes of a very sanguinary character. This absolutely unnecessary conflict exacted rather heavy casualties on our side and casualties several times heavier on the Japanese-Manchurian side. Finally, Japan made proposals to terminate the conflict and we willingly met the Japanese Government's wishes.

As you know, the conflict arose owing to Japan's endeavor to appropriate part of the territory of the Mongolian People's Republic and thus forcibly change the Mongolian-Manchurian border in her own favor. Such a unilateral method of action has to meet a resolute rebuff and it has once again demonstrated its utter unsoundness when applied to the Soviet Union or its allies.

While the example of luckless Poland has recently demonstrated how little pacts of mutual assistance signed by some of the European great powers are sometimes worth, what happened on the Mongolian - Manchurian border has demonstrated something quite different. It has demonstrated the value of pacts of mutual assistance to which is appended the signature of the Soviet Union.

As for the conflict in question, it was liquidated by the Soviet-Japanese agreement concluded in Moscow on Sept. 15 and peace has been fully restored on the Mongolian - Manchurian border. Thus the first step was made toward improvement of Soviet-Japanese relations.

The next step is the formation of a joint frontier commission, consisting of representatives of the Soviet-Mongolian and Japanese-Manchurian sides. This commission will have to examine certain disputed frontier questions. There is no doubt that if good will is displayed, not only on our part, the method of businesslike examination of frontier questions will yield good results.

In addition, the possibility has been established of starting Soviet-Japanese trade negotiations. It must be admitted that the development of Soviet-Japanese trade is in the interests of both countries.

NOV 1 1939

Thus we have reason to speak of the beginnings of improvement in our relations with Japan. It is difficult as yet to judge how far we may reckon on rapid development of this tendency. We have not yet been able to ascertain how far the ground for it has been prepared in Japanese circles. For our part I must say that we look with favor on Japanese overtures of this kind and we approach them from the viewpoint of our fundamental political position and our concern for the interests of peace.

War Contraband Issue

Finally, a few words about war contraband and the export of arms from neutral countries to belligerent countries. The other day the Soviet Government's note in reply to Great Britain's notes of Sept. 6 and 11 was published. Our note explains the views of the U.S.S.R. on the subject of war contraband and states that the Soviet Government cannot regard as war contraband foodstuffs and fuel for the noncombatant population, and clothing, and that to prohibit the import of articles of mass consumption is to condemn children, women, old people and the sick to suffering and starvation.

The Soviet Government declares in this note that such questions cannot be settled by unilateral decision, as Great Britain has done, but must be settled by common consent of the powers.

We expect that neutral countries, as well as public opinion in Great Britain and France, will recognize the justice of our position and will take measures to prevent the war between the armies of the belligerent countries from being turned into a war against children, women, old people and the sick.

In any event our country, as a neutral country that is not interested in the spread of war, will take every measure to render the war less devastating, to weaken it and to hasten its termination in the interests of peace. From this standpoint the decision of the American Government to lift the embargo on the export of arms to belligerent countries raises justified misgivings. It can scarcely be doubted that the effect of this decision will not be to weaken war and hasten its termination, but on the contrary to intensify, aggravate and protract it. Of course, this decision may insure big profits for American war industries. But one asks, can this serve as any justification for lifting the embargo on the export of arms from America? Clearly it cannot.

Such is the international situation at the present moment. Such are the principles of the foreign policy of the Soviet Union.

Points in Molotoff Speech

NOV 1 1939

By The Associated Press.

MOSCOW, Oct. 31—Following are points made by Premier-Foreign Commissar Molotoff on various subjects in his speech today:

Germany

Today, as far as the European great powers are concerned, Germany is in the position of a State that is striving for the earliest termination of war and for peace, while Great Britain and France, which but yesterday were declaiming against aggression, are in favor of continuing the war and are opposed to the conclusion of peace.

We have always held that a strong Germany is an indispensable condition for durable peace in Europe.

War Aims

Under the "ideological" flag has now been started a war of even greater dimensions and fraught with even greater danger for the peoples of Europe and the whole world. But there is absolutely no justification for a war of this kind.

One may accept or reject the ideology of Hitlerism as well as any other ideological system—that is a matter of political views. But everybody would understand that an ideology cannot be destroyed by force, that it cannot be eliminated by war. It is, therefore, not only senseless but criminal to wage such a war as a war for the "destruction of Hitlerism" camouflaged as a fight for "democracy."

Poland

It is known that our troops entered the territory of Poland only after the Polish State had collapsed and actually ceased to exist.

The Soviet Union could not but reckon with the exceptional situation created, for our brothers in the Western Ukraine and Western White Russia who had been abandoned to their fate as a result of the collapse of Poland.

Baltic States

We stand for the scrupulous and punctilious observance of the pacts [with the Baltic States] on a basis of complete reciprocity, and we declare that all nonsense about Sovietizing Baltic countries is only to the interest of our common enemies and of all anti-Soviet provocateurs.

Finland

We have begun negotiations with Finnish representatives, proposing the conclusion of a mutual assistance pact approximately on the lines of our pacts with the other Baltic States. Inasmuch as the Finnish Government declared that conclusion of such a pact would contradict its position of absolute neutrality, we did not insist on our proposal.

We are ready to meet Finland in matters in which she is particularly interested. In view of all this we do not think that Finland will seek a pretext to frustrate the proposed agreement. This would not be in line with the policy of friendly Soviet-Finnish relations and would, of course, work to the serious detriment of Finland.

United States

I must, however, inform you that even the President of the United States of America considered it proper to intervene in these matters [the Finnish negotiations], which one finds it hard to reconcile with the American policy of neutrality. One might think that matters are in better shape between the United States and, let us say, the Philippines or Cuba, which have long been demanding freedom and independence from the United States and cannot get them, than between the Soviet Union and Finland, which has long ago obtained both freedom and political independence from the Soviet Union.

The decision of the American Government to lift the embargo on the export of arms to belligerent countries raises justified misgivings. It can scarcely be doubted that the effect of this decision will not be to weaken war and hasten its termination, but, on the contrary, to intensify, aggravate and protract it.

Japan

For our part I must say that we look with favor on Japanese overtures of this kind [for trade negotiations], and we approach them from the viewpoint of our fundamental political position and our concern for the interests of peace.

IRKED FINNS DELAY TALKS WITH SOVIET

Hold Molotoff Disclosure of Terms Alters Situation—Plan Firm Refusal

NOV 1 1939

By The Associated Press.

HELSINKI, Finland, Wednesday, Nov. 1—The Finnish Government announced early today that publication of Soviet Russia's demands on the republic has "created a new situation" and caused a delay in the negotiations.

The exact effect of the unexpected disclosures by Soviet Premier-Foreign Commissar Vyacheslaff Molotoff in his speech to the Russian Parliament yesterday was not clear, but it was certain that he had profoundly shocked Finnish officials.

It was probable that a Cabinet meeting would be held today to consider the new situation.

The communiqué did not say whether Finland's delegation to Moscow, which left Helsinki last night, would continue its journey or return here for new instructions. The delegation was scheduled to arrive in Leningrad today. The Finnish Government had kept the negotiations a matter of close secrecy.

TEXT OF THE COMMUNIQUE

The communiqué said:

The Soviet Union has stated they desire to discuss with Finland the questions mentioned by Foreign Commissar Molotoff. By making public the point of view of the Soviet Union at a moment when Finland's plenipotentiaries have just left Helsinki

LONDON, OCT. 31—(AP)—BRITISH OFFICIALS TONIGHT REFUSED TO COMMENT ON RUSSIAN PREMIER MOLOTOFF'S SPEECH UNTIL THEY HAD HAD TIME TO STUDY IT IN DETAIL. to hand the Soviet Government the answer of the Finnish Government, Foreign Commissar Molotoff has created a new situation.

NOV 1 1939

Hitherto the discussions have been confidential and Finland has independently, without pressure from any foreign power whatever and free from prejudice, sought to find a solution of the questions presented her in spite of their difficulty due to the policy of neutrality which Finland has adopted.

In doing this it has also been desired by Finland to respect the efforts of the Soviet Union to insure the security of Leningrad without, however, endangering her own safety.

It is too early to say anything about the extent to which the statements of Commissar Molotoff will affect the standpoint of the Finnish Government. In any case, his speech has naturally caused delay in continued negotiations.

Commissar Molotoff stated in his speech that the Soviet Union has the right and obligation to take effective measures for protecting its security on the Gulf of Finland and the frontier nearest Leningrad.

For this reason the Foreign Office of Finland states that the Soviet Union in the non-aggression pact entered into with Finland in 1932 undertook to respect the frontiers fixed between Finland and the Soviet Union by the Peace Treaty of Dorpat, and to arrange all differences of opinion between their countries by peaceful means.

Finland relies on the Soviet Union respecting this agreement, the validity of which was extended to the end of the year 1945 by agreement between Finland and the Soviet Union in the year 1934.

The storm that Mr. Molotoff's speech created here was apparent in the almost unprecedented issuance of the communiqué at 4:30 A. M.

Firm Rejection Planned

The first reaction in political circles was a belief that Finland would not yield to the demands, which, as outlined by Mr. Molotoff, involved an exchange of territory and the granting to Russia of the right to establish a naval base on Finnish territory near the entrance to the Gulf of Finland.

The Finnish negotiators, who entrained for Moscow last night with their "final answer," had been expected to leave the next step up to the Russians after registering their rejection of the Soviet demands. It was generally expected that the Finnish Government, for one thing, would now place its case before the world with a complete exposition of the hitherto secret negotiations.

A crowd of some 4,000 Finns bade farewell to the delegation, showing by its silence that the fateful possibilities of the journey were appreciated.

Hope for Agreement Ebbs

Informed political circles were of the opinion that the answer being taken to Moscow was a firm refusal to yield to the Russian territorial demands. The Foreign Office said counter-proposals were being submitted. The Russian demands were believed to be so firm and inflexible, however, that little hope for agreement was held in informed circles.

The attitude expressed was that Finland could not meet present Russian demands and still maintain independence and neutrality. However, the government had been proceeding on the theory that agreement was possible.

As determined as they have been from the day Moscow's invitation to negotiate was received, Oct. 5, the Finns went busily ahead with preparations to defend the republic from any attack.

Frontier districts were crowded with troops. Almost all territorial waters along the southern coast have been mined.

the delegation departs at 9:35 P. M.

One of the Diet's bills would give the Goernment broader powers to execute work decrees and handle private property for military purposes.

$1,000,000 Given for Defense.

Gifts to a new defense fund reached the equivalent of $1,000,000. The Government announced it would offer about 2,000,000 pounds of coffee for sale outside rationing restrictions at increased prices. This measure is expected to raise $800,000 in Finnish markka.

The negotiating committee, headed by Dr. Juho Kusti Paasikivi, is expected to reach Moscow on Thursday morning.

The Ministry of the Interior, in asking border residents not to return to their homes, said that the situation which had caused their original removal had not changed.

The air of having made a definite decision pervaded Government circles.

War Preparations Go On.

The task of digging air shelter trenches and other defense preparations went ahead steadily.

The Government decreed a 20 per cent increase in tobacco prices, half the advance going to the National Treasury for defense expenses.

The Foreign Office declined comment on reports circulating here that Russia had asked for a fifty-mile coastal strip and four islands in the Gulf of Finland for military purposes, the right to participate in the fortification of the Aaland Islands in the Gulf of Bothnia, and a Russo-Finnish military pact. The exact nature of the Russian demands remained secret, but the Government was taking the position that Russia needed no bases on Finnish soil in view of the concessions already obtained from Estonia, Latvia and Lithuania.

Finnish Diet Hurries War Bills

Parliament's Action Strengthens Report Finland Won't Budge on Soviet Demands.

HELSINKI, Oct. 31 (A. P.).—On the eve of the departure of a Finnish delegation to Moscow with Finland's "final answer" to Russian demands, the Diet today hurried bills to passage which will give the Government a clear hand in case of war. The Diet's action appeared to bear out predictions heard in diplomatic circles that Finland's answer to Russia granted few, if any, concessions.

A Foreign Office spokesman said that Finland was proceeding on the assumption that an agreement could be reached, but the general feeling in political quarters was that a stalemate would result from the current trip to Moscow.

Finland's reply to the Soviets will be submitted to President Kyoesti Kallio for final approval just before

IL DUCE REVAMPS CABINET AND TRANSFERS ARMY MEN

Gen. Pariani, Who Held Staff Talks With Germans, Loses Post to Gen. Graziani.

STARACE AND ALFIERI MOVED

British Forecast Italo-Greek Pact—Berlin's Envoy Speeds Home for Conference.

ROME, Oct. 31 (A. P.).—Premier Mussolini reorganized the entire leadership of the Fascist regime today in a shake-up of Cabinet, party and top military posts unprecedented in its sweeping scope.

NOV 1 1939

Seven Cabinet members, the Secretary of the Fascist party, the Chiefs of Staff of the Army, Air Force and Fascist Militia and four Under-Secretaries of State were replaced in the drastic reshuffling. In addition, Mussolini himself yielded the portfolio of Minister for Italian Africa to Gen. Attilio Teruzzi.

Il Duce removed his army Chief of Staff, Gen. Alberto Pariani, who a few months ago carried out military consultations with German Army officers under the Italian-German military alliance signed last May but now no longer mentioned in Italy. Gen. Pariani, for whom no new post was announced, was replaced by Marshal Rudolfo Graziani as head of the Army Staff and by Gen. Soddu as Under-Secretary of War.

Also among those shifted were two Fascist notables widely credited with pro-German tendencies, Lieut.-Gen. Achille Starace, relieved of the secretaryship of the Fascist party "at his own request," and Dino Alfieri, Minister of Popular Culture (Propaganda).

Gen. Starace was made Chief of the General Staff of the Fascist Militia; Signor Alfieri was appointed an Ambassador awaiting assignment.

German Influence.

Although some observers saw in the shake-up evidences of a lessening of German influence in Rome, foreign diplomatic circles here generally attributed it to conditions within the Fascist party and Government and considered it without bearing on foreign policy.

However, it was noted that it came shortly after the German Ambassador, Hans-Georg Viktor von Mackensen, had left Rome for Berlin. He went home on Sunday, his embassy said, "for an extraordinary reason."

The arrival in Rome on September 15 of a German described as a former admiral, and a personal friend of the Ambassador, was responsible for reports in foreign circles that Germany was endeavoring to counter the allied efforts to keep Italy neutral. The visitor was never identified, however, and nothing further was disclosed concerning his visit.

Herr von Mackensen ten days ago completed with Italy the arrangements for removing to Germany about 200,000 German-speaking residents of the Italian Tyrol by 1942. Diplomats said that this was designed to eliminate any German claim on the South Tyrol area which once belonged to Austria.

Britain and Albania.

Also today Italy received a request of the British Government for authorization to establish a Consulate-General in Tirana, capital of Italian-occupied Albania. Great Britain, like most other nations, has been without a consular representative at Tirana since the Italian armies marched into the city on April 9.

Reports from southeast Europe, meanwhile, have indicated that Rome was bending her efforts toward forging a bloc of neutral States that would make Italian influence paramount over Russian and German in the Balkans.

[Authoritative British informants said at London today that Great Britain expects Italy and Greece to reach a non-aggression agreement soon and that such a step is welcomed there as a "stabilizing" influence in the Balkans; that Great Britain was fully informed of the negotiations between Greece and Italy; and that it was understood that such an agreement, broadly speaking, would be a reaffirmation of a similar agreement arrived at between those countries in 1928.]

[At Berlin officials said they were unable to comment at present on the Italian Cabinet shake-up. They indicated that Herr von Mackensen's visit to Berlin was a routine one and not connected with the Cabinet events.

[In Paris French diplomats welcomed the Rome shakeup, asserting that Il Duce's purpose was to create a "Government of neutrality." The shifting of Gen. Starace and Signor Alfieri was cited as evidence of a partial lessening of Nazi influence in Rome.]

Gen. Starace had been secretary of the Fascist party since December 12, 1931, and was one of Il Duce's generals in the Ethiopian campaign. His successor as party secretary will be Ettore Muti, Consul-General of the Militia.

Russo Under-Secretary of State.

As Chief of Staff of the Militia, Gen. Starace succeeds Lieut.-Gen. Luigi Russo, who had held that position since February 1, 1936, and who now receives the position of Under-Secretary of State in the office of Premier Mussolini.

Gen. Francesco Pricolo, commander of the Second Territorial Air Zone, replaced Squadron Gen. Giuseppe Valle as Chief of the Italian Air Forces.

Other important new appointments were:

Minister of Corporations—Renato Ricci, former Under-Secretary of Youth Education, succeeding Ferruccio Lantini; Minister of Popular Culture: Alessandro Pavolini, former president of the Confederation of Artists and Professional People, succeeding Alfieri; Minister of Foreign Trade: Raffaldo Riccardi, president of the new airline, Lapi, succeeding Felice Guarnieri; Minister of Agriculture: Giuseppe Tassinari, former Under-Secretary, succeeding Edmundo Rossoni; Minister of Communications: Host Venturi, former Under-Secretary, succeeding Commendatore Antonio Stefani Benni; Minister of Public Works: Adelchi Serena, vice-secretary of the Fascist party, succeeding Giuseppe Cobolli-Gigli.

Under-Secretaries Shifted.

Under-Secretary of War — Gen. Soddu, succeeding Pariani; Under-Secretary of Air Forces—Gen. Francesco Pricolo, succeeding Gen. Giuseppe Valle; Under-Secretary of Reclamation—Sergio Nannini, former Commissioner of International Migration, and Under-Secretary of State in the Premier's office—Lieut. Gen. Luigi Russo, former Chief of Staff of the Militia, succeeding Medici del Vascello.

Tassinari's promotion made way for appointment of Nannini as Under-Secretary of Reclamation in order to carry out the extension of Italy's tillable land in the campaign for agricultural self-sufficiency. Nannini was succeeded as Commissioner of International Migration by Giuseppe Lombrassa.

Muti, who has been active in the Fascist party since the march on Rome eighteen years ago and now becomes the party secretary, is a world war veteran, although only 37 years old—thirteen years younger than Starace. He was one of D'Annunzio's legionnaires in the seizure of Fiume.

One of the first members of the party, having joined in 1919, he was often wounded while fighting with its strong-arm squads. He fought as a volunteer aviator in the Ethiopian war and was among the first group of Italian aviators to go to Spain as volunteers in the Spanish civil war. Going there July 18, 1936, he remained throughout the war, which ended last spring.

Captured Tirana.

Muti also commanded the advance column of Italian troops which occupied Tirana on last Good Friday's invasion of Albania. He is one of the few living holders of the gold medal for valor. Last August he was named inspector of Fascists abroad and a member of the new Chamber of Fasces and Guilds.

Starace and Alfieri had been Fascist kingpins more than three years, since the last previous shakeup.

Starace served in the Ethiopian war and was commander of a column which cut itself loose from the main forces and marched on Gondar. A few days ago he was awarded the silver medal for gallantry in that action.

As party secretary he was credited with sponsoring some of Fascism's direct movements, including anti-Jewish laws, the campaign to purge the country of all lingering anti-Fascist elements, and the attempted elimination of the third-person form of address.

Fostered Hoop Jumping.

It was Starace who fathered the idea of having Fascist officials jump through hoops of fire to demonstrate their virility.

Signor Alfieri had been Minister of Propaganda since June 9, 1936, and as long ago as 1929 was Under Secretary of the Ministry of Corporations in the Mussolini Cabinet. Last year, he forbade the publication of foreign comic strips with the exception of Walt Disney's productions, and on August 11 of this year concluded with the German Propaganda Ministry a pact for intensive collaboration in journalism, propaganda, the radio, screen and stage.

For a time in July he was mentioned for appointment to be Italy's Ambassador to London. In the end, however, that post fell to Giuseppe Bastianini.

Dino Alfieri, Italian Minister of Propaganda, was named for an ambassadorial post, but it was not announced at what capital. He had been mentioned for possible assignment to London in July, but that post was filled by Giuseppe Bastianini.

Marshal Rodolfo Graziani was made Chief of the Army General Staff in place of Alberto Pariani, while Gen. Francesco Pricolo, commander of the Second Territorial Air Zone, replaced Squadron Gen. Giuseppe Valle as Chief of the Italian Air Forces.

Alessandro Pavolini, president of the Confederation of Artists and Professional People, becomes Minister of Popular Culture in the reorganization.

Ferruccio Lantini was appointed president of the National Institute of Social Insurance; Giuseppe Cobolli-Gigli, president of the Italian General Petroleum Agency; and Cornelio Di Marzio, president of the Confederation succeeding Signor Pavolini.

Ettore Muti, who succeeds to the secretaryship of the Fascist party, is a thirty-seven-year-old party hero, thirteen years younger than Gen. Starace, and thus meets Premier Mussolini's requirement of young men in high posts of the organization.

The Cabinet shakeup, the first in three years, places in new jobs two Fascist notables widely credited with pro-German tendencies—Gen. Starace and Signor Alfieri.

Duce Ousts Pro-Germans In Fascist Party Shakeup

NOV 1 1939

By CHARLES H. GUPTILL.

Rome, Oct. 31 (AP).—Premier Mussolini in a sweeping overhauling of the Fascist leadership today removed three military chiefs who had conducted staff talks with German officers and two Cabinet members popularly regarded as pro-German.

The shuffling of military chiefs, Army leaders, and ministers, however, was regarded in foreign circles as primarily designed to reinforce the Fascist regime at home, with the international aspect incidental to domestic factors.

Whether there was any deliberate thought of shelving those in the Government who had been looked on as pro-German could not be ascertained.

Pleasing to People.

But all three of the replaced Chiefs of Staff—Gen. Alberto Pariani of the Army, Gen. Giuseppe Valle of the Air Force and Lieut.-Gen. Luigi Russo, of the Blackshirt Militia—had conferred with their German counterparts after signing the Italian-German military alliance last May—an alliance no longer mentioned in Italy.

The two Cabinet members considered as having pro-German sympathies and affected by the shakeup were Lieut.-Gen. Achille Starace, Secretary of the Fascist Party, and Dino Alfieri, Minister of Popular Culture (propaganda). Transfer to other posts removed them from the Cabinet.

The shakeup was expected to please the Italian people. There have been widespread reports of popular dissatisfaction with the pro-German tendencies of some of the lesser Fascist leaders.

Diplomatic quarters in Paris hailed the shifting of Starace and Alfieri as evidence of a lessening of Nazi influence in Rome. These quarters asserted Mussolini's purpose was a "government of neutrality."

Official comment was not forthcoming in Berlin, but authoritative sources denied that the summoning home Sunday of the Reich's Ambassador to Rome, Hans-Georg Viktor von Mackensen, was in any way connected to the cabinet shift. The Nazi Embassy in Rome had announced, however, that the envoy had departed for "an extraordinary reason."

Mussolini himself stepped out as Minister for Italian Africa, appointing Gen. Attilio Teruzzi. Il Duce retained the four other ministries he held besides the premiership.

Better British Relations.

The shakeup came at a time when Italian relations with Britain, as a result of both the war and Mussolini's own non-belligerent stand, were better than some months ago.

Britain today in effect recognized Italy's conquest of Albania by arranging to establish a consulate at Tirana.

The shakeup involved replacement of eight ministers and four undersecretaries, as well as the staff chiefs. With the changes, some foreign observers considered Mussolini had established a middle-of-the-road Cabinet. His son-in-law, Foreign Minister Count Galeazzo Ciano, and Minister of Justice Count Dino Grandi remained as perhaps the outstanding figures next to Il Duce.

Pariano Superseded.

At the end of this game of bureaucratic musical chairs, several incumbents were left without new posts. Conspicuous among them was Gen. Pariani, who was succeeded by Marshal Rodolfo Graziani as Chief of Staff and by Gen. Ubaldo Soddu as Undersecretary of War.

Also left without a post was Gen. Valle, who was Undersecretary of Aeronautics as well as Aviation Chief of Staff. He was replaced by Gen. Francesco Pricolo, considered one of Italy's best air officers.

The third Army chief affected by the shakeup, Lieut.-Gen. Russo, was made Undersecretary of State in Mussolini's office, succeeding Medici del Vascello.

Starace, "at his own request," was relieved of the secretaryship of the Fascist Party and was succeeded by Ettore Muti, 37-year-old World War veteran.

two eventualities were most feared by officials:

First, that the German prize crew might blow up the vessel if British warships attempted to capture her.

Second, that the British might sink the ship.

The second possibility was held by most officials to be less likely, as it was believed the British would prefer to take the vessel which was carrying a cargo to England when the Germans seized her two weeks ago.

Hopes to Get Ship Back.

Asked whether he considered Russia had acted in a neutral manner in the City of Flint case, Mr. Roosevelt said he could not answer.

He had no comment, either, on the address in which Premier and Foreign Commissar Vyacheslav Molotov of Russia accused him of mixing in Soviet-Finnish negotiatio in contradiction of this country's neutrality policy.

U. S. ASKS BOTH SIDES TO GUARD CREW OF FLINT

NOV 1 1939

WASHINGTON, Oct. 31 (A. P.).—The United States asked both Great Britain and Germany today to avoid any action which would imperil unnecessarily the captive American crew aboard the freighter City of Flint, now somewhere in the blockaded North Sea bound for Germany.

While the American request did not ask precautions against any specific action, it was learned that

At the same time President Roosevelt said he still hoped the United States would get back the City of Flint.

Mr. Roosevelt said last week that he hoped for the return of the vessel, which was then in the Russian port of Murmansk. He was asked today whether he retained that hope. He said that he did.

He added that he had no more information on the ship than what newspaper men were getting. He is receiving various reports through the State Department, he said.

Hull Seeks To Protect American Crew Of Flint

Washington, Oct. 31 (AP)—Cordell Hull, Secretary of State, took steps to protect the American crew of the City of Flint today by instructing the American embassies in Germany a England to request those governments to avoid exposing the crew to unnecessary danger.

NOV 1 1939

The City of Flint's position was dif-

known to the State Department tonight, but it was supposed she was making her way slowly southward along the Norwegian coast. Aboard her were Captain Gainard, forty American crew members and the German prize crew of seventeen.

President Roosevelt said he had no new information on the City of Flint, but he still hoped for her return.

Still Seeking Information

Secretary Hull disclosed he still was pressing Soviet Russia for full information on what had happened to the ship at Murmansk. He further disclosed that the Department of Justice would prepare the Government's case when the City of Flint seizure is taken up by the German prize court at Hamburg.

NOV 1 1939

The instructions he sent to Berlin and London expressed this Government's concern for the safety of the American crew and its expectation that both belligerents would take precautions to avoid exposing the crew members to unnecessary danger.

The text of the instructions was not released at the State Department pending official word that they had been presented to the respective governments. It was reliably learned that Hull did not base his request on any international law, but indications were that he would hold Germany responsible. He hinted at a possibility that the American crew might be put ashore at some neutral port, but said he had not requested this.

Kirk Delivers Message.

BERLIN, Oct. 31 (A. P.).—Alexander C. Kirk, United States charge d'affaires, "informally" called the attention of the German Government today to the responsibility devolving upon it for the safety of the American crew of the freighter City of Flint.

NOV 1 1939

On instructions from Washington, Mr. Kirk called at the Foreign Office to deliver his message.

Meanwhile the City of Flint, American steamship seized by the German Navy as a prize of war, was heading down the Norwegian coast for a German port under command of a Nazi prize crew.

It was authoritatively said today that no further information will be divulged on the German side regarding the ship.

"We now come dangerously close to provisions of the law regarding treason," these sources said.

Since it was believed the City of Flint was headed for Hamburg, it was expected that the United States consulate at that city would handle details of prize-court proceedings when and if the City of Flint arrives at that port.

Shipping men gave the prize crew an even chance of escaping detection on the blockade-dodging voyage of the American vessel along the rugged coast of Norway.

Thousands of islands and numerous fiords offered places for experienced navigators to hide temporarily from British warships, especially if the City of Flint traveled mostly by night. Moreover, fog and low visibility ware on the side of her captors.

British Comment on Request.

LONDON, Oct. 31 (A. P.).—An Admiralty spokesman, commenting on the American request to Great Britain to avoid unnecessary danger to the American crew of the German-captured City of Flint, said that "naturally we won't expose the crew to 'unnecessary danger.'"

"We don't sink ships on sight," he said. "This is an American ship carrying a British cargo. We don't sink American or any other neutral ships."

Meanwhile, lengthy delays of American ships by the British contraband control were criticized in the House of Lords today by Lord Stragolgi, a Laborite, who asserted that "it annoys neutrals to have their ships treated like this."

Long Delays Criticized.

He said that in one case it had taken twenty-four days to clear an American ship and that inquiries were made by the American Consul-General.

NOV 1 1939

He added that "there was a delay of nine days between permission being given by the Minister of Economic Warfare for the ship to clear and the information reaching the customs officials at the ship's side."

"Such a delay made it very expensive for the unfortunate owners and this particular ship had to pay war risk insurance all the time she was idle," he added.

Authoritative sources said that complaints over shipping delays caused by the contraband control were numerous.

Shipping circles said that in the best circumstances it took at least three days, because of red tape, to clear a ship after permission had been granted for it to sail.

Destroyer Dogging Flint.

BERGEN, Norway, Oct. 31 (A. P.).—The United States freighter City of Flint, under command of a German prize crew, felt her way southward along the northern Norwegian coast today with a Norwegian naval watch-dog close on her heels.

NOV 1 1939

The City of Flint was sighted off Lodingen Light at 11 A. M., while steaming close behind was a Norwegian ship, believed to be the 1,170-ton destroyer Sleipner, which escorted the captured American vessel out of Tromsoe waters yesterday.

The appearance of the City of Flint off Lodingen on the inland route down one of the world's most broken coasts was taken as an indication that the German prize crew had requested and obtained permission to move in Norwegian territorial waters.

Must Obey Regulations.

Persons in a position to know indicated that the Norwegian man-o' war was not permitted under any circumstances to assist in the navigation of the City of Flint. The Norwegian ship was required to follow at as much distance as was consistent with her watch.

One of the duties of the escort ship was to make certain the freighter passed through no naval port or naval district at night and that she otherwise obey all rules laid down for her passage in Norwegian waters.

In the event the vessel does not comply, it was said authoritatively that she was to be halted and both ship and crew interned.

Flint Takes Stores Aboard.

COPENHAGEN, Oct. 31 (A. P.).—The United States freighter City of Flint, under control of a German prize crew, was reported in advices reaching here today to have taken on large supplies of fresh meat and water yesterday outside the Norwegian port of Tromsoe.

NOV 1 1939

The vessel was said to be flying the German flag. As a prize ship, the City of Flint was unable to enter the harbor anchorage, but reports here said this difficulty was solved by moving the vessel at slow speed in Tromsoe sound, while a motorship came alongside and made a transfer of supplies.

The City of Flint was said to have lingered for three hours in Tromsoe waters, although the transfer of supplies took only about an hour.

During this time, Norwegian officials were said to have made certain there was no contact between the vessel and the shore, other than those authorized officially. Officials at Tromsoe declined to make any comment on the vessel.

Tromsoe residents who saw the vessel said they were unable to determine whether the forty-one members of the American crew were on board.

It was considered unlikely that the Americans had been landed.

After tarrying at Tromsoe for three hours, the City of Flint was reported to have been escorted back to international waters by a Norwegian warship, by way of Malangen Sound. She was said to have proceeded on a course which should have brought her off Lofotens by mid-day today.

Tromsoe residents were said to believe the City of Flint was being convoyed southward by two armed German cargo boats. One such boat, without visible marks of identification, was said to have passed the entrance of the sound two hours before the City of Flint arrived and another, also unidentified, about an hour after the Flint departed.

freighter passed through no naval port or naval district at night, and that she otherwise obeyed all rules laid down for her passage in Norwegian waters. In the event the vessel did not comply, it was said authoritatively, she was to be halted and both ship and crew interned.

Flint Creeps Down Norse Coast, Trailed by Norwegian Warship

American Freighter Is Sailed by Nazi Prize Crew Past Jagged Shoals at Rate That Would Take Another Week to Pass British Blockade

NOV 1 1939

By The Associated Press

BERGEN, Norway, Oct. 31.—The American freighter City of Flint, in command of a German prize crew, was feeling her way southward along the north Norwegian coast tonight, followed by a Norwegian warship.

The prize ship, on her way from the Soviet port of Murmansk to a haven in Germany, was sighted off Lodingen Light this morning flying a German flag.

Shipping circles gave the German prize crew an even chance to escape British detection on her blockade-dodging voyage along the rugged Norwegian coast.

Appearance of the City of Flint off Lodingen, on the inland route down one of the world's most broken coasts, was taken as an indication the German prize crew had requested and obtained permission to move in Norwegian territorial waters.

The Norwegian naval watchdog was believed to be the 550-ton destroyer Sleipner, which followed the captured American vessel out of Tromsoe waters yesterday. The Norwegian boat was said to be near by, not as an escort vessel, but to guard and protect Norwegian interests.

Persons in a position to know indicated that the Norwegian warship was not permitted under any circumstances to assist in the navigation of the City of Flint. The Norwegian ship was required to follow at as much distance as consistent with her watch.

One of the duties of the escort ship was to make certain the Monday and took on fresh meat and water from a motor launch which cruised slowly alongside. The City of Flint, as a prize ship, did not enter the harbor. Some Tromsoe residents believed armed German cargo boats were convoying her, since one preceded the City of Flint and another followed, by short intervals.)

Observers believed the City of Flint would follow the Scandinavian coast until she reached the Baltic, where an adequate German escort might see her into port, with Hamburg considered a likely objective.

SOS Reports Submarine in West Atlantic

British Freighter Fails to Respond After Appeal; U. S. Ship Races to Aid

By The Associated Press

BOSTON, Nov. 1 (Wednesday).—Coast Guard Division Headquarters said today it had identified a vessel which sent an SOS in the north Atlantic as the 3,670-ton British vessel Coulmore, owned by the Dornach Shipping Company, Ltd.

The Coast Guard said it made the identification by means of the call letters sent out in the vessel's distress call, which included the phrase "SSSS submarine," taken to be a reference to a submarine attack.

The letters G Y X C given in the message are registered as those of the Coulmore, the Coast Guard said. She was built in 1936 and is 352 feet long.

Tropical Radio, at Hingham, Mass., said it had learned from a Canadian radio station at Campderdown, N. S., that the U. S. Coast Guard cutter Campbell, 200 miles from the Coulmore, was proceeding to her side and expected to reach the scene about 8:30 a. m.

Tropical added that the Canadian station's messages said the Coulmore had sighted a submarine. There was nothing in the Canadian messages to indicate the vessel's plight.

The Boston Coast Guard said that according to its record the Coulmore touched Baltimore Oct. 15.

400 Miles From Bermuda

Mackay Radio reported in New York today receipt of an SOS from an unidentified vessel followed by the phrase "SSSS submarine," which Mackay said probably meant "submarine attack," according to the Associated Press.

The position of the ship was given as approximately 400 miles northeast of Bermuda.

Mackay reported the Canadian coastal stations were sending auto-alarm signals every few minutes and sending submarine distress signals lat. 40.20 North, 62.31 West. The call was directed to the British steamship Coulmore.

Mackay added that there was no response from the Coulmore.

Distress Call Heard Here

The New York Herald Tribune wireless picked up the Coulmore calling QRT—or cease transmission all ships and stations—and then the word "distress." This was on long-wave 600-meter ship band, the usual calling and distress wavelength. Forty minutes later station VCS, Campderdown, Nova Scotia, radio station, relayed the signal SSSS, meaning submarine sighted.

British and Norwegian Vessels Go Down.

LONDON, Oct. 31 (A. P.).—The sinking of the British steamship Cairn Mona, 4,666 tons, by an "explosion," was disclosed today when forty-one survivors were put ashore. Three were missing. A survivor said that the blast came without warning.

The sinking of the Finnish steamship Juno, a vessel of 1,241 tons, in the North Sea following an explosion, was also revealed here. Nineteen of the twenty-three aboard, including five women, were landed in England last night by the Norwegian ship Minona.

BOULOGNE, France, Oct. 31 (A. P.).—The French authorities expressed the belief today that the bodies of two German sailors, discovered on the beach at Sangatte yesterday, were from the submarine found last Thursday on the Goodwin Sands, off the English coast.

One body was that of an officer.

BRITISH EXPECT NORTH SEA FIGHT ON VAST SCALE

NOV 1 1939

Ships and Planes Are Kept Ready in Case Gigantic Battle Develops There.

GRIEVANCES UP IN COMMONS

Emergency Governing Powers Draw Some Criticism Even From Conservatives.

LONDON, Oct. 31 (A. P.).—Heavy naval and warplane concentrations along the east coast of Great Britain indicate that the British are prepared, military observers said today, for a gigantic North Sea battle.

"It's such a ruddy queer war," one tactical expert said, "that predictions aren't much good, but you can be sure of one thing, and that is that Great Britain wouldn't be caught napping if Adolf Hitler sent along his planes and submarines in a bunch for one terrific North Sea battle."

Much of the British feeling that the North Sea will be one of the big battlegrounds of the war comes from such German pronouncements as that which appeared in Hitler's newspaper, the Voelkischer Beobachter, over the week end. This paper asserted that if "England persists in throwing overboard, one after the other, all conceptions of international rules, then it must reckon with inevitable intensification of the war against its commerce."

The British foresee England as the principal target of German air and sea attacks, just as she has been so far the principal target of German verbal attacks.

British tactical authorities regard the periodic raids and reconnaissance flights thus far over the Scapa Flow and Firth of Forth naval areas, and the attack on one British convoy, as "experimental" actions to feel out the resistance and test the ground for bigger things.

British tacticians expect the "serious" bombing raids to be conducted in waves of probably six planes each.

Aerial experts hinted that Britain is prepared for such attacks as follows: 1. The raiders would be met over the North Sea by fast fighting planes; 2. They would encounter Britain's balloon barrage and anti-aircraft batteries; and 3. Heavy fighters, strongly armed, would meet the raiders near their objective.

Grievances Aired.

A long list of grievances against Britain's economic set-up and restrictions imposed as war measures was aired today in the House of Commons.

Prime Minister Chamberlain disposed of one question as having "too large a variety of complaints" to deal with in a single answer.

He assured the House, however, that grievances would be removed "where this can be done consistently with the paramount objective of winning the war."

Col. J. Baldwin-Webb, conservative, had demanded that the Government consider the "growing adverse feeling" in the country over "bureaucracy" and mentioned specific instances of "interference with daily life."

His complaint mentioned "excessive" standardization of food and what he described as the interference with the daily life of the trading community such as the suggested earlier closing of shops.

Sir John Wardlaw-Milne, Conservative, spoke of widespread and increasing complaints over Government control of marketing and distribution of a number of commodities.

Laborite Albert Alexander declared that complaints are being made all over the country in regard to the shortage of butter and bacon and asked when rationing would start.

Food Minister W. S. Morrison said he hoped to be able to make a statement on rationing tomorrow.

SCOUTS CROSS FRENCH LINE, GERMANS CLAIM

NOV 1 1939

News Agency Carries Report, But Army High Command Says Nothing

Experts Believe Penetration May Have Taken Place Some Time Ago

By LOUIS P. LOCHNER
Associated Press Correspondent

Berlin, Oct. 31—DNB, official German news agency, late today published a report describing how German scouting troops invaded two hastily evacuated French villages lying before the Maginot Line and returned with war booty.

However, military experts authorized to give information said the report did not come from the high command.

The experts would not even admit that the report was the first evidence of Germans crossing into French territory, saying that at the French-German frontier it often was difficult to know exactly where the boundary line runs, with the result that inquisitive scouting units often get on the other nation's ground.

[Associated Press Editor's Note—A French high command communique, October 16, said German troops had penetrated momentarily to the French frontier post of Apach.]

"Some Time Ago"

Soon after inquiries by correspondents began to pour in, DNB advised that the report concerned "an event which occurred some time ago at the Western front."

However, a report of the same occurrence, dated October 31, was carried on the front page by early editions of tomorrow's Voelkischer Beobachter, central organ of the Nazi party.

NOV 1 1939

The story, contradicting DNB's assertion that the event was several days old, bore the three-column headline "With The Reconnoitering Unit In The Forefield Of The Maginot Line."

Foreign observers noted that the word "offensive" is in increasing use among many Germans, and wondered whether DNB had not revealed prematurely the sort of reconnoitering activity which precedes major military activity.

Found Unfinished Trench

DNB said scouts penetrated into French territory where they soon discovered an unfinished trench and almost a mile farther on reached the first of two villages.

The military experts also soft-pedaled DNB's report that army equipment, such as munitions, helmets and remnants of crashed airplanes, were alleged to have been found.

When the French decided to retreat behind their line at these points, these experts said, poilus probably threw away some equipment that either was shopworn or defective, knowing they would get replacements in their next encampment.

All Still Quiet On Front

Summing up, one spokesman said nothing was changed by the DNB report and that generally speaking all still was quiet on the Western front.

This authorized explanation was at variance with the Voelkischer Beobachter's account by its special correspondent, Paul Dierichs, who asserted the "French must have left their positions in great haste. Had they seen ghosts? Much machine gun and grenade thrower munitions, steel helmets, army caps, pockets for instruments in the field, flasks, rocket pistols and other articles of equipment were left behind.

NOV 1 1939

"We packed everything and dragged it back home as booty in sacks, canvases and baskets."

Dierichs, who obviously visited the same two villages as DNB's reporter, spoke disparagingly of the French defense lines.

Barbed Wire Not Strong

"The wire entanglements aren't particularly strong," he said. "The dugouts are not like ours. Water stands knee-high in the holes."

As if to fill in the gap between reports of Polish victories and daring submarine exploits and the present lull on the Western front, Col. Gen. Walter von Brauchitsch, commander in chief of the German army, answered a series of questions put by the Labor Front's organ, Joy and Work.

Asked where Germany's military position differed today from 1914, the commander said "we are considerably stronger militarily than twenty-five years ago. That's true both as regards weapons and equipment as well especially as concerns the utilization of the entire fighting strength of the nation. . . . The West Wall is the strongest series of fortifications in the world."

German Scouts Enter France

Detachments Find Two Villages Deserted —Town Behind Line Is Shelled.

BERLIN, Oct. 31 (A. P.).—An official announcement said today that German scouting troops had crossed the German-French border to explore territory in front of the Maginot Line. This was the first German announcement of the crossing of German troops into France.

The announcement did not say where the crossing occurred.

German troops were said to have found a deserted French second defense line close behind the boundary posts and, about a mile from the first French village, an unfinished trench system.

In the first village, unidentified by the German announcement, houses were carefully entered, but no soldiers or villagers were found.

Second Village Also Deserted.

The announcement said that the Germans, undisturbed by enemy gunfire, searched the village and then marched on to a second community, which also was deserted. En route they were said to have found machine-gun nests, army equipment and various "signs of precipitate evacuation."

The scouts were said to have penetrated no deeper than this second village and to have returned to German soil by another route.

On the edge of a forest were the ruins of a French plane which apparently had been shot down.

The Germans returned "with as much war material as they could carry" without drawing any French fire, the announcement concluded.

NOV 1 1939

Notes of Skirmishes.

PARIS, Oct. 31 (A. P.).—French and German land forces fought a series of skirmishes today in the Lorraine sector between the Moselle and Saar rivers, the General Staff reported, bringing "marked activity" to the western front.

A communique said that both sides engaged in raids and ambushes during the second day of renewed action in the Lorraine front, extending from the Luxemburg border to Sarreguimines.

The communique added:

"In the course of many flights made October 30, a German reconnaissance bimotor was brought down in our lines. Two enemy observation planes fell out of control in German lines on the Saar front. All French planes returned to their bases."

French Town Shelled.

Military dispatches reported a French town about six miles inside the border had been shelled heavily as German artillery action came suddenly to life along the western front. The town was not otherwise identified.

These informants said that seven flights of French planes had flown over enemy territory, returning safely with valuable information. Concentration of German troops opposite the Dutch border in northwestern Germany was said to have been relaxed.

[At Berlin today the German Supreme Army Command issued the following communique: "In the west, between the Moselle River and the Palatinate Forest, minor artillery fire and activity by reconnoitering troops. No special actions on the remainder of the front. Four enemy planes were shot down."]

[At London the British Air Ministry reported: "Extensive reconnaissances of aerodromes in northern Germany today. In spite of the opposition, much valuable information was gained and many photographs were taken." It was added that one of the British planes did not return.]

Some French military commentators expressed the opinion that Germany was not likely to launch a big-scale offensive.

NOV 1 1939

Press War of Nerves.

BASLE, Switzerland, Oct. 31 (A. P.).—New German troops concentrations were reported today in the Black Forest, but many observers expressed the belief that this might be only another maneuver in Germany's "war of nerves."

They believed that Germany had nine army corps of nearly 2,000,000 men on the western front from Switzerland to the Netherlands.

Since the French withdrew from German soil there have been at least six elaborately-planned concentrations by the Germans, these observers said. One was near the Belgian and Dutch borders, another in the Haardt Forest north of Wissembourg, then around Baden, then in the Saar area, then back to the Belgian border sector, and now in the Black Forest.

By keeping the initiative and maintaining the threat of attack through these swift concentrations, the Germans are forcing France and Great Britain into counter-concentrations, these onlookers said, and thus any arrangements for an Allied offensive are made extremely difficult.

German-Swiss border restrictions were tightened recently, although three passenger trains still run daily and peasants of both countries are permitted to cross to work in fields over the boundary.

The Germans recently erected a high wall on the frontier road, hiding part of the defense system once readily visible from the Swiss side.

Apparently little effort was made to keep secret the Black Forest concentrations, supporting in the minds of Basel observers the belief that the movement was mere "camouflage."

Paris, Oct. 31—The French reported "marked activity" on the Western front today with a series of land skirmishes between French and German forces and brisk artillery duels in which the Germans were said to have used long-range heavy artillery for the first time in the war.

A general staff communique said both sides engaged in raids and ambushes in the Lorraine sector, between the Moselle and Saar rivers on a section extending from the Luxembourg border to Sarreguzemines.

The high command also reported that "in the course of many flights" yesterday one bi-motored Nazi reconnaissance plane was downed in French territory and two fell out of control in German lines on the Saar front. The report said all French planes returned safely.

Village 6 Miles Back Shelled

Military commentators said that during the second day of renewed activity at least on eFrench village, six miles behind an unidentified area of the front, was battered by German long-range guns.

These sources said French gunners, who previously had shelled the Siegfried positions with their 155's, replied to the enemy.

The day's activities, however, were said to appear to be no more than localized or preliminary attempts to test each other's strength.

Front Line Unchanged

The front line, military observers said, remained unchanged, following almost exactly the French frontier. Exceptions were said to be several strategic outposts inside Germany in the Warndt Forest. These positions have been attacked sporadically by increasingly larger German patrols, which the French claim have been repulsed on each assault.

In the air, French observers said, French planes made seven flights over enemy territory and acquired valuable information.

French anti-aircraft batteries were said to have brought down at least one German plane and perhaps several others one hundred miles within French territory.

Daladier Calls Cabinet

On the home front, Premier Edouard Daladier called a Cabinet meeting for tomorrow morning.

Police, continuing their inquiry into Communist activities, arrested four women and two men for publishing and circulating secret pamphlets.

Twenty-nine former Communist deputies, imprisoned October 8 by military authorities after their party was banned, were notified that their request for release on bail had been denied.

WITH THE BRITISH AIR FORCE, SOMEWHERE IN FRANCE, Oct. 31 (A. P.).—Death kept the secret of the location of one of the Royal Air Force airdromes from German observers today, when a British fighter sent an enemy reconnaissance machine hurtling to the earth behind the Maginot Line.

NOV 1 1939

Hit by hundreds of British bullets, the plane crashed to the ground with its engine still roaring at full throttle.

The crew of three were plunged into a crater in the earth, nine feet deep, and the plane's fuel tanks exploded with a deafening report.

The first contingent of 2,000 men between the ages of 18 and 50 left Vienna on Oct. 18. They were followed last Friday by 2,000 more, mostly men, but also many women and children more than 16. The first contingent of an undisclosed number left Maehrisch-Ostrau early last week and a second contingent, all women, on Oct. 25.

Fear was expressed among Jews in Berlin, Frankfort-on-the-Main, Breslau and other cities that they might be the next to be ordered to leave for the reservation.

The Vienna Jews had to abandon their homes and turn the keys over to the Jewish Community. They were permitted to take 110 pounds of luggage and 300 marks worth of tools and machinery "if not too bulky and in so far as there was room for them."

The deportees were advised further to take non-perishable food and, as far as possible, a stipulated list of warm wearing apparel and household necessities.

Instructions to the Jews of Maehrisch-Ostrau were much like those to the Viennese. Instructions for the second contingent directed all single women between 17 and 55 to get ready for transport, likewise all women whose husbands left in the first contingent some days previously. Children were left behind in charge of the Jewish community charged with erecting children's homes.

The homes as well as business houses will either be administered or sold by the Jewish community and the proceeds "devoted to social purposes."

In other words, whatever the deported Jews could not take with them apparently was confiscated. At least there was no intimation that the Jewish owners themselves would receive any proceeds or benefits.

BUCHAREST, Oct. 31 (A. P.).—Reliable informants reported today that King Carol is prepared to offer Bulgaria a 'psychological settlement" of her territorial dispute with Rumania over Dobruja.

Vasile Stoica, Rumanian Ambassador to Turkey, was said to be on his way to Sofia, the Bulgarian capital, with the offer.

In diplomatic circles it was said that the proposal assures new privileges for the Bulgarian-speaking inhabitants of Dobruja, but the view prevailed that any actual cession of territory at this time will peril Rumania's existence as a nation.

Rumanian possession of Dobruja was confirmed by the world war settlement. Recent reports have indicated that Soviet Russia is prepared to back up Bulgaria's claim to the territory.

Despite the precarious diplomatic situation, Rumania has been experiencing a war boom by selling food and supplies to neutrals and belligerents.

NOV 1 1939

Agents were clamoring today for sea going freighters to take 100,000 tons of grain to Italy and another 100,000 tons to England. River boats and railroad cars for the shipment of 300,000 tons of grain contracted for by Germany were at a premium.

Although market reports were sketchy, authoritative persons said that one grain deal with Germany was completed at almost twice the world market quotation.

Italy, Turkey and Greece were reported contesting with Germany for a share of Rumania's oil.

The Government took steps to prevent internal prices from skyrocketing. Industrialists were ordered to report their raw material needs for a year in advance so that there would be no excuse for a price boost on claims of shortages.

ments of war materials from Germany into Rumania prompted divergent interpretations tonight as big assignments of airplanes, artillery, ammunition, trucks and other motorized equipment arrived by rail and Danube barge.

Military authorities said it was to meet Rumania's demand for payment under barter arrangements and thus to assure Germany a supply of oil and wheat from Rumania.

Many foreign observers, however, regarded the arms influx as a German move to fortify Rumania against the possibility of a Russian thrust into the Balkans.

Opposed To Red Advance

It was widely believed that Germany was firmly opposed to any Russian advance into this area, which the Nazis regard as part of their economic domain.

Rumania, seeking a strong Balkan neutrality bloc, redoubled efforts for an understanding with Bulgaria.

The shakeup of Italian leadership today was regarded in Balkan diplomatic quarters as a favorable omen because it was believed that Italy now would become more active in aiding development of the bloc. These same quarters believed the move was unfavorable to Germany.

King Carol was reported ready to offer Bulgaria a "psychological settlement" in the dispute over Dobruja. Bulgarian demands for this territory were reportedly backed by Russia.

Vasile Stoica, one of Rumania's ace diplomats, was said to be on his way to Sofia with Carol's offer. It was believed to assure new privileges for the Bulgarian minority in Dobruja, but to hold that any actual cession of territory would imperil Rumania's existence as a nation.

400 Plotters Seized

Meanwhile, 400 Hungarian residents of Rumania were reported under arrest in the Cluj region for planning a revolt against the Government.

Local authorities, who started the roundup of the suspected plotters ten days ago, said they had been collecting arms and a war fund for an alleged revolutionary uprising in the event of a Hungarian attempt to regain Transylvania from Rumania.

The arrests of the Hungarians followed the week-end disclosure of the seizure of forty-four members of the outlawed Nazi-inclined Iron Guard who were accused of plotting to assassinate Gen. Gabriel Marinescu.

Quaker Official Asserts U. S. Relief Won't Be Hampered by Nazis

BERLIN, Oct. 31 (AP).—William C. McDonald of San Francisco, who recently visited Warsaw in behalf of the Quaker Commission for Polish Relief, said reliable estimates placed the number of dead in the Warsaw siege at 50,000.

Speaking before the American Chamber of Commerce of Germany, McDonald said he was "sure the German Government has the intention of taking a constructive view toward American relief work in Poland."

"The American people will not donate for any cause involving prejudice of any sort," he said. "The German Government realizes this."

McDonald, a contractor who lived in Warsaw for several years and who remained there until September 21, when all other foreigners had left, said one of the greatest needs was window panes.

"The German Commissioner for Warsaw told me that 2,000,000 square meters of glass had been broken during the siege and shelling of Warsaw," he said.

Glass in Germany costs about four marks (about $1.60) per square meter, which means the broken glass bill alone amounts to 8,000,000 marks (about $3,200,000.)

Bridges Little Hurt

McDonald said two Vistula River bridges had been bombed time and again, but that almost no damage had been done to them. McDonald said, however, that shrapnel was disconcerting.

"We used to watch the bombing interestedly," he related, "but when artillery firing began we took to the cellars."

DANCER SCORNFUL AT SWISS SPY TRIAL

Co-defendant Confesses He Stole Arms Designs.

GENEVA, Oct. 31 (A. P.).—Thirty-three prosecution witnesses, including workers in arms factories and counter-espionage agents, were reported to have testified today at the trial of a pretty, dark-eyed dancer charged with espionage and treason.

NOV 1 1939

Reports leaking from the closed court room said the dancer, known in Continental night clubs as "Nina," but whose name is Virginia Capt Rota, smiled scornfully as a friend, Roger Joel, testified on charges that she had had models and copying designs stolen from a Swiss arms factory for her.

Miss Rota, who is 35 years old, and Joel face terms of from three to twenty years' imprisonment each for espionage and treason. They were arrested, the police said, when they attempted to cross into France with plans for an anti-aircraft gun and other military data.

On trial with them are Paul Rochat and his wife, charged with organizing an information service for an Italian Consul-General under the dancer's orders.

The dancer was reported to have remained coldly silent, while Mme. Rochat became so voluble that she had to be cut short by the court. She denied all connection with the case, although admitting that she knew Miss Rota.

Rochat was said to have denied receiving any money from the dancer.

Miss Rota is an Italian-born Swiss. She took the name of Capt Rota after her divorce from a Swiss named Capt.

FRENCH FINANCES CALLED IN ORDER

Stronger Than When War Began, Says Reynaud.

NOV 1 1939

PARIS, Oct. 31 (A. P.).—France's Foreign Exchange reserves, Finance Minister Paul Reynaud asserted today, are stronger today than they when war was declared despite "gigantic expenses incurred abroad in two months."

Addressing a national committee charged with co-ordinating moral and economic rearmament with military, he said that "the return of captal, begun a year ago, continues."

He called this war "psychological perhaps more than military," in stressing the need for "moral resistance" of the nation.

"I do not know if future historians will say that German financial collapse has been the underlying cause of the war, but I know that you can tell this country her finances are in order," he said.

He appealed for the French to buy armament bonds to "make the war shorter and victory certain."

PUTS NEUTRAL COST TO U. S. AT $275,000,000

President Estimates Sum Needed For First Ten Months Of War

NOV 1 1939

Sum May Boost 1941 Defense Appropriation To $2,000,000,000

[By the Associated Press]

Washington, Oct. 31 — President Roosevelt estimated today it would cost $275,000,000 to safeguard and enforce American neutrality during the first ten months of the European war.

He said this sum would be asked of Congress as a deficiency appropriation in January. This strengthened the belief of some officials that the total national defense appropriation for the next session would exceed $2,000,000,000.

The extra $275,000,000, Mr. Roosevelt told his press conference, is needed chiefly to pay for increases in the armed forces ordered September 8 when he proclaimed a limited national emergency. The expense covers maintenance of the Atlantic Coast neutrality patrol and the mass training of troops ordered by the War Department.

Predicts Expanding Army

A short time before the President spoke, Chairman Sheppard (Dem., Texas), of the Senate Military Affairs Committee, predicted the expanding army would require $1,000,000,000 next year, and Chairman Scrugham (Dem., Nev.) said the House Naval Appropriations subcommittee expected the navy budget would approach this sum.

In another defense development the War Department announced the first new aerial fighting unit to be formed since Congress approved a $300,000,000 Air Corps expansion in April would be sent to Puerto Rico in November to reinforce defenses of that Caribbean outpost. It is the Twenty-seventh Reconnaissance Squadron of 28 officers, 228 enlisted men and 9 planes.

The squadron will be commanded by Major Delmar H. Dunton. The planes will be flown and the surplus officers and men will travel by ship. A unit has been in training for the last month at Langley Field, Virginia.

WAR IS BRINGING NEW TRADE HERE

Brazil Buys Bicycles and England Fire Hose.

WASHINGTON, Oct. 31 (A. P.).—Bicycles for Brazil and fire hose for England are samples of the new foreign business coming to the United States as a result of the war.

NOV 1 1939

Sorting out some of the orders, James W. Young, director of the Bureau of Foreign and Domestic Commerce, said today:

"The disrupted state of European trade has left many foreign markets open for American trade which, because of contracts, barter agreements and other factors, was impossible of attainment in the past."

Mr. Young emphasized that it was not possible to segregate clearly orders resulting from the war from those which might have been placed in this country anyway, but the type of new business reported indicated a sizable representation of actual war-born business.

These include a $16,000,000 order for various machinery from a Latin-American country.

The fire hose that England bought was distinctly a war order, in connection with air raid precautions. The hose order totaled $2,000,000 and included enough hose to stretch from Washington, D. C., to Portland, Me. It was so large that it had to be made through an association of rubber manufacturers, which allotted it among its members.

Recent railroad orders include: Brazil, $6,500,000; Argentina, $1,500,000 worth of tank cars and $300,000 worth of air brakes; Colombia, $100,000 for two locomotives. In addition, arrangements are near completion for the sale of 156 freight locomotives, twenty-two switch engines and 1,866 freight cars from Iran, and $5,000,000 of locomotives and other equipment for Portugal.

Il Duce Squelches Rival And Bolsters Neutrality

Shakeup Demotes Too Ambitious Starace and Clips Wings of Pro-Nazis

NOV 1 1939

By DEWITT MACKENZIE
Associated Press Staff Writer

The explanation of Mussolini's sensational shake-up of the Fascist leadership lies to my mind in two reasons which, if this view is correct, must rank among the major developments of the European crisis. They are:

(1) Il Duce has done a vigorous piece of house-cleaning to get rid of some ambitions which probably were becoming embarrassing, and he has eliminated the strongest elements advocating war for Germany.

(2) He has at the same time apparently consolidated his position of neutrality in the present war—a position which was endangered by pro-Nazi tendencies among some of his important lieutenants.

This realignment of forces, which assumes the nature of a purge, isn't the result of a new situation being suddenly created.

It has been boiling up for a considerable period.

Lieutenant General Achille Starace, who now has been relieved of his powerful post as secretary of the Fascist Party "at his own request," is credited with nursing personal ambitions.

It has been common talk in Italian political circles that Starace had strong hopes of stepping into Mussolini's shoes when the big chief stepped out of them, and was consolidating a position calculated to lead ultimately to elevation.

The position of chief of general staff of the Fascist militia to which Starace has been shifted isn't regarded as comparing in importance to the secretaryship of the party.

Two top-men who are credited with being pro-Nazi and to have been pressing for Italian intervention in the war on the side of Germany have been assigned to new jobs. These are Starace and Dino Alfieri, Minister of Propaganda, who has been assigned to an unnamed ambassadorial post.

Il Duce thus has achieved two ends with one operation. He has

THE WAR TODAY

BY DEWITT MACKENZIE

MOBILIZATION OF GERMANY'S HUNTSMEN TO INCREASE THE FOOD SUPPLY OF THE COUNTRY GIVES AN ALMOST WHIMSICAL VIEW OF THE POTENTIAL DISASTER IN THE ENGLISH BLOCKADE.

NOV 1 1939

IT ISN'T MEANT TO BE FANCIFUL, OF COURSE, AND IT'S A SMART MOVE IN VIEW OF THE ABUNDANCE OF DEER AND SMALL GAME IN WEST PRUSSIA AND THE NEWLY ANNEXED POLISH TERRITORY.

IT'S NOT HARD TO GUESS THE AUTHOR OF THIS NOVEL SCHEME. SURELY IT CAN BE NONE OTHER THAN HERR HITLER'S SECOND IN COMMAND--FIELD MARSHAL HERMANN GOERING, OFFICIAL CHIEF HUNTSMAN BY VIRTUE OF BEING NAZIDOM'S MOST FAMOUS SPORTSMAN.

GOERING IS AN EAGER HUNTER AND FISHERMAN. I HAD A BIRD'S EYE VIEW

A YEAR AGO OF HIS MAGNIFICENT PRESERVE AT BERCHTESGADEN, IN THE BAVARIAN ALPS, WHERE HE HAS A LORDLY HOME NEAR THE MOUNTAIN RETREAT OF THE FUEHRER. UNDOUBTEDLY GOERING WILL TAKE A HAND IN KEEPING THE WOLF FROM GERMANY'S DOOR WITH HIS SPORTS GUN.

NOV 1 1939

BUT GOERING, AS ECONOMIC DICTATOR OF THE REICH, WOULD BE THE LAST TO TREAT LIGHTLY THE SEA-TRAP THAT CAUGHT GERMANY TWO DECADES AGO. HE MUST RECOGNIZE IT AS THE MOST POTENT WEAPON THAT THE ALLIES CAN TURN AGAINST THE FATHERLAND.

THERE IS A GRIM FASCINATION IN WATCHING THE TEST OF BRUTE STRENGTH BETWEEN ENGLAND AND GERMANY AS THE BRITONS TRY TO TIGHTEN THEIR BLOCKADE INTO A COMPLETE STRANGLE-HOLD ABOUT THE FIERCELY RESISTING REICH.

IT ISN'T SPECTACULAR, THIS CONFLICT WHICH IS BEING WAGED BENEATH THE CLOAK OF THE FALL FOGS THAT BLANKET THE ENGLISH CHANNEL AND THE NORTH SEA. BUT IT IS THE MOST VITAL WAR OPERATION GOING FORWARD AT THIS MOMENT, FOR UPON SUCCESS OR FAILURE OF THE BLOCKADE MAY DEPEND THE OUTCOME OF THE EUROPEAN UPHEAVAL.

BOTH SIDES ARE CLAIMING THE ADVANTAGE THUS FAR AND NAZI OFFICIALDOM DECLARES THAT THE BLOCKADE CAN'T BREAK GERMANY THIS TIME AS IT DID IN THE WORLD WAR. THE NAZIS ARE EXPECTING TO REMEDY ANY SHORTAGE IN SUPPLIES THROUGH THEIR NEW-FOUND BROTHERHOOD WITH RUSSIA--AN EXPECTATION WHICH TIME ALONE CAN JUSTIFY OR REFUTE.

UNFORTUNATELY, IF A BLOCKADE IS SUCCESSFUL IT MEANS HUNGER FOR CIVILIANS. THE APPROACH OF STARVATION WAS THE IMMEDIATE CAUSE OF GERMANY'S COLLAPSE IN THE LAST WAR--A FACT I SHALL NEVER FORGET.

I WAS WITH THE BRITISH ARMY OF OCCUPATION IN GERMANY AFTER THE ARMISTICE AND SAW THE RESULTS.

IT TOOK THE ENGLISH NARY TWO YEARS TO SQUEEZE GERMANY BADLY. BY THE WINTER OF 1916, HOWEVER, THE FATHERLAND AND AUSTRIA WERE SUFFERING TERRIBLE DISTRESS, AND IT WAS ONLY THE GERMAN VICTORY OVER RUMANIA AND THE OCCUPATION OF THE UKRAINE WHICH SAVED THE SITUATION TEMPORARILY. VAST STORES OF GRAIN THEN BECAME AVAILABLE TO THE HUNGRY TEUTONS, AND THEY HUNG ON FOR ANOTHER TWO YEARS.

WHEN WE GOT INTO GERMANY JUST AFTER THE CEASE-FIRE THERE WAS A SHOCKING SHORTAGE OF BOTH FOOD AND CLOTHING--A LACK OF MOST EVERYTHING, FOR THAT MATTER. FATS WERE ALMOST UNHEARD OF, AND BECAUSE OF THIS THERE WERE MANY PEOPLE WHO HADN'T SEEN SOAP FOR YEARS. A CAKE OF SOAP WAS LITERALLY WORTH MORE THAN A HANDFUL OF MONEY, AND WAS SOMETIMES USED FOR BARTER TRADE.

APROPOS OF THIS SITUATION WAS AN EXPERIENCE I HAD IN COLOGNE. DURING A CONFERENCE WITH WAR CORRESPONDENTS, THE BURGOMASTER, A HAUGHTY PERSON, DEMANDED WHY THE ALLIES WEREN'T RUSHING FOOD AND CLOTHING TO GERMANY.

NOV 1 1939

ACTING AS SPOKESMAN, I TOLD HIM THE ALLIES WERE TOO BUSY FEEDING THE STARVING AMONG THEIR OWN PEOPLE WHO HAD BEEN RENDERED HOMELESS BY GERMAN DEVASTATION.

"THAT ISN'T TRUE," HE FLARED.

"I'M TELLING YOU, MR. BURGOMASTER," I REPLIED WITH ASPERITY, "THAT I'VE RECENTLY COME FROM THE ZONE WHERE LONG LINES OF REFUGEES WERE TRAMPING ALONG THE ROADS, AND MANY OF THEM WERE DYING BY THE WAYSIDE."

MY COLLEAGUES BURST INTO APPLAUSE. THE BURGOMASTER FLUSHED CRIMSON AND STARTED TO RETORT, BUT HIS SECRETARY WHISPERED IN HIS EAR AND HE HELD HIS PEACE.

NOV 1 1939

LATER WHEN I VISITED REVOLUTIONARY HEADQUARTERS (BOTH THE REBEL AND THE OLD REGIMES WERE FUNCTIONING BY AGREEMENT, BECAUSE OF THE BRITISH OCCUPATION) I WAS ASKED THE SAME QUESTION. WHEN I MADE THE SAME ANSWER, I WAS TOLD THAT GERMANY HADN'T KNOWN THERE WAS SUCH DEVASTATION.

THE REVOLUTIONARY COMMITTEE TOLD ME THE HIGH COMMAND HAD INFORMED THE PEOPLE DIFFERENTLY. THE COMMITTEE DECLARED THE ALLIES WERE QUITE RIGHT TO TAKE CARE OF THEIR OWN FOLK FIRST.

AUSTRIA FELT THE BLOCKADE EVEN MORE THAN GERMANY. BY THE END OF THE WAR VIENNA WAS IN PITIFUL STATE. I WAS THERE SOME TIME LATER AND THERE WAS STILL STARVATION IN THIS BEAUTIFUL AND ONCE GAY CITY. ARISTOCRACY AND LOWLY FOLK ALIKE WOULD KISS YOUR HAND FOR A BIT OF BREAD.

coast districts, and in the regions which would be inundated if the country should be invaded.

The area placed under martial law included the entire Province of Utrecht, except for the provincial capital of the same name. The province is in the Central Netherlands and is vital to the inundation scheme. A small section of Utrecht has been flooded already in testing out the water defense line which Netherlanders rely upon to protect the most populous part of their country against invasion.

Strategic Island Included

The strategic island of Ameland, off the north coast, also was named in the proclamation.

Martial law was invoked in the World War, but the present decree covers a larger area. Authoritative quarters said that the decree was not directed against the liberty of the press, and that no action was contemplated to suppress any publications. Premier Jan de Geer threatened yesterday that martial law might be used to prevent circulation of organs of the Netherands Socialist party.

Under the decree, the military is empowered to suspend all civil functions, but officials said military measures would be taken only in case of emergency. Military authorities could forbid entrance to the martial law areas, expel undesirable persons, close cafes and theaters, forbid public meetings and ration food. It was pointed out that while martial law was put into force in the first days of the World War in 1914, the military never exercised the right to supersede civil authority.

THE HAGUE, Nov. 1.—A royal decree tonight established martial law in key defense communities of the Netherlands, including 500 of the nation's 1,200 smaller towns and villages, to assist in military plans and curb espionage.

Informed circles said the decree, which covered parts of eight of the Netherlands' eleven provinces, was precautionary and not occasioned by any external threats of violation of the country's neutrality.

The towns and villages included are scattered over the entire country, but most of them are situated along the German-Netherlands frontier, in northern and western sea-

No large cities were affected by the proclamation, which placed many towns and villages as well as other strategic areas under martial law.

The decree listed 500 of the approximately 1,200 small towns and villages in the Netherlands and covered part of eight of the country's eleven provinces.

Recall of Ambassador to Russia Demanded by McCormack in House; He Attacks Reich and Soviet as Anti-God.

NOV 2 1939

WASHINGTON, Nov. 1 (A. P.).—A demand that the United States recall its Ambassador to Russia because of Premier Molotov's criticism of President Roosevelt was injected into the House neutrality debate today by Representative McCormack, Democrat, of Massachusetts.

Describing both Russia and Germany as "the anti-God forces of the world today," Mr. McCormack said he had read newspaper accounts of Molotov's address to the Supreme Soviet yesterday in which President Roosevelt was criticized for "interventing" in Russia's negotiations with Finland and it was stated that this country's moves to repeal its arms embargo would "intensify, aggravate and protract" the European war.

"For that statement made by the official representative of Soviet Russia," Mr. McCormack shouted, "the United States ought to recall its Ambassador. That should be the answer of the United States to this attempt to influence American public opinion—this grave breach of international law."

(Laurence A. Steinhardt is United States Ambassador to Russia.)

Representative McCormack's comment on Molotov's speech came within two hours after Stephen Early, presidential press secretary, had questioned in a conference with reporters whether it was
